

THE NUTTALL
ENCYCLOPÆDIA

THE NUTTALL ENCYCLOPÆDIA

DEALING WITH
*BIOGRAPHY, GEOGRAPHY, HISTORY, MYTHOLOGY, LITERATURE, SCIENCE AND INVENTION, RELIGIONS OF THE WORLD, POLITICS,
ART, MUSIC, THE STAGE, SPORT, BUSINESS, LAW, Etc.*

ALSO APPENDICES GIVING
POPULATIONS, PSEUDONYMS OF WRITERS AND ARTISTS, CHARACTERS IN DRAMA AND FICTION, Etc.

EDITED BY
G. ELGIE CHRIST AND A. L. HAYDON

BASED ON THE ORIGINAL WORK BY JAMES WOOD
LATE EDITOR OF "NUTTALL'S STANDARD DICTIONARY," AND COMPILER OF THE "DICTIONARY OF QUOTATIONS"

FREDERICK WARNE & CO., LTD.
LONDON & NEW YORK

1923

PRINTED IN GREAT BRITAIN

PREFACE

“THE NUTTALL ENCYCLOPÆDIA” provides in a concise and condensed form and at a cheap rate an epitome of the information given in the larger Encyclopædias, such as may prove sufficient for all ordinary requirements.

An encyclopædia is now recognised to be as indispensable a book of reference as a dictionary; for while the latter explains and defines the vehicle of thought, the former seeks to define the subject-matter. Now, the rapid increase in the vocabulary of a nation, which makes the possession of an up-to-date dictionary almost one of the necessaries of life, is evidently due to the vast increase in the number of facts which the language has to describe or interpret; and if it is difficult to keep pace with the growth in the language, it is obviously more difficult to attain even a working knowledge of the array of facts which in this age come before us for discussion. No man can now peruse even a daily newspaper without being brought face to face with details about questions of the deepest interest to him, and he is often unable to grasp the meaning of what he reads for want of additional knowledge or explanation. In short, it becomes more and more a necessity of modern life to know something of everything. A little knowledge is not dangerous to those who recognise it to be little, and it may be sufficient to enable those who possess it to understand and enjoy intelligently what would otherwise only weigh as a burdensome reflection upon their ignorance. Detailed knowledge of any subject in this age of specialisation can be acquired only by study of the works specifically devoted to it. What is wanted in a popular encyclopædia is succinct information—the more succinct the better, so long as it gives what is required by the inquiry, leaving it to the authorities in each subject to supply the information desired by those intent on pursuing it further.

The value of an Encyclopædia of such scope must depend, therefore, upon the careful selection of its materials, and in this respect it is hoped that "Nuttall's" will be found adequate to any reasonable demands made upon it. Within the necessary limits of a single volume the Editors persuade themselves that they have succeeded in including a wide range of subjects, and they trust that the information given on these will meet the wants of those for whom the book has been compiled. To the careful Newspaper Reader, to Heads of Families, with children at school, whose persistent questions have often to go without an answer, to the School-master and Tutor, to the Student, to the Busy Man and Man of Business it is believed that this volume will prove a solid help.

"The Nuttall Encyclopædia" is offered as a companion volume to "Nuttall's Standard Dictionary"; like the Dictionary it can lie on the desk ready to hand, and its size and arrangement make rapid reference easy.

In this new and revised edition which has been entirely reset all the information given in previous editions has been carefully checked and brought up to date, while a large number of new articles have been added. In Science and Invention the amazing progress of the last few years, which have seen the invention and development of the petrol engine, mechanical flight, and wireless telegraphy and telephony, makes large additions necessary. In Geography the Great War altered the face of Europe and affected other quarters of the globe. Biography, History, Literature and Art are all subjects that call for continual expansion. By careful selection and arrangement the Editors trust that they have done justice to all these new claims without unduly curtailing the space given to the older subjects, such as Mythology, Classics, Religion, and Philosophy, or sacrificing any of the features that have won so much appreciation for the Encyclopædia in the past. If any discerning reader objects that the new Encyclopædia is now less classical and more scientific than the old one, he will surely admit that that is but in accordance with the trend of modern life and unavoidable.

It may be of assistance to the reader if a synopsis is given of the general scheme upon which the Encyclopædia is based. The subjects dealt with could be roughly classified under the following headings, which are ranked in the order of importance attached to them :

1. Biographies.—The dates, nationalities and achievements of noted people in all ages.

2. Geography.—Concise articles on countries, location of towns, rivers, mountains, etc., distinguishing characteristics, etc. Populations are given in an appendix at the end.
3. History.—All important epochs, movements, and events, with dates and historical significance.
4. Classical and Mythological references.
5. Literature.—Summaries of the principal authors and poets, past and present, with notes upon the world's greatest books.
6. Science and Invention.—Short articles on general subjects, especially modern invention, with definition of terms.
7. Religions of the World and their respective beliefs and objects of worship, together with ancient and modern schools of philosophy.
8. Politics.—General movements and aims of political parties at home and abroad.
9. Art, Music, and the Stage.
10. Sport.
11. Business.
12. Law.—Definition of terms and short articles on procedure, courts, etc.
13. General.—A large number of miscellaneous subjects which cannot be classified under the above headings.

A new feature of this Encyclopædia which it is believed will be found of great value is the APPENDICES in which are given :

- (a) A list of towns, giving the populations.
- (b) Pseudonyms of well-known writers and artists.
- (c) A list of the principal characters in drama and fiction ; this compilation has been made as comprehensive as possible, covering both past and present writers of many countries.
- (d) Motor-Car Index Marks.

The figures in parentheses at the end of the biographies give the years of birth and death.

Where it has been thought necessary and found practicable, the syllable accented in pronunciation has been shown by the mark '—as Abruz'zi

THE NUTTALL ENCYCLOPÆDIA

A

A'ALI

A'ALI PASHA, an eminent reforming Turkish statesman (1815-1871).

AACHEN. See AX-LA-CHAPELLE.

AALSBORG, a trading town on the Llimfjord, in the N. of Jutland.

AAR, a large Swiss river about 200 m. long, which falls into the Rhine as it leaves Switzerland.

AARGAU, a fertile Swiss canton bordering on the Rhine.

AAREHUUS, a port on the E. of Jutland, with a considerable export and import trade, and a fine old Gothic cathedral.

AARON, the elder brother of Moses, and the first high-priest of the Jews, an office he held for forty years.

AB, the fifth month of the ecclesiastical, and eleventh of the civil, year in the Jewish calendar.

ABACA, Manila hemp, or the plant, native to the Philippines, which yield it in quantities.

ABACUS, a tablet crowning a column and its capital; a calculating apparatus, consisting of a grooved board containing pebbles or a wire frame on which beads are strung, used by the ancient Greeks, Romans, Egyptians, Mexicans, and other peoples, and still extant in various forms.

ABADDON, the bottomless pit, or the angel thereof.

ABARIM, a mountain chain in Palestine, N.E. of the Dead Sea, the highest point being Mount Nebo.

ABATEMENT, a mark of disgrace in a coat of arms.

ABAUZIT, FIRMIN, a French Protestant theologian and a mathematician, a friend of Newton, and much esteemed for his learning by Rousseau and Voltaire (1679-1767).

ABEAS, uncle of Mohammed, founder of the dynasty of the Abbasides (566-652).

ABRAS THE GREAT, shah of Persia, of the dynasty of the Saphis, great alike in conquest and administration (1557-1628).

ABRAS-MIRZA, a Persian prince, a reformer of the Persian army, and a leader of it, unsuccessfully, however, against Russia (1783-1833).

ABRASIDES, a dynasty of 37 caliphs who ruled as such at Bagdad from 750 to 1258.

ABBA 'TI, NICCOLO DELLI', an Italian fresco-painter (1512-1571).

ABBEVILLE, a thriving old town on the Somme, 12 m. up, with an interesting house architecture, and a cathedral, unfinished, in the Flamboyant style. Used as a base by British troops in the Great War.

ABBEY, a church institution forming the dwelling-place of a community of monks or nuns. It usually comprises a church, chapter house, refectory, cloisters, dormitories, guest-room, almshouse, hospital, library, and other buildings, together with gardens. Among the principal British abbeys are those at Westminster, Canterbury, Durham, Fountains, and Holyrood. The first English abbey was that founded at Bangor in 580.

ABBOT, head of an abbey. There were two classes of abbots: Abbots Regular, as being such in fact, and Abbots Commendatory, as guardians and drawing the revenues.

ABBOT, GEORGE, archbishop of Canterbury in the reigns of James I. and Charles I., and one of the translators of King James's Bible; an enemy of Laodæ, who succeeded him (1582-1633).

ABEL

ABBOT OF MISHULE, a person elected to superintend the Christmas revelries.

ABBOTSFORD, the residence of Sir Walter Scott, on the Tweed, near Melrose, built by him in 1811 on the site of a farm called Cartleyholme.

ABDALLAH, the father of Mohammed, famed for his beauty (545-570); also a caliph of Mecca (622-692).

ABDALRAHMAN, the Moorish governor of Spain, defeated by Charles Martel at Tours in 732.

ABDALS (ul. servants of Allah), a sect of Moslem fanatics in Persia.

ABD-EL-KA'DIR, an Arab emir, who for fifteen years waged war against the French in N. Africa, but at length surrendered prisoner to them in 1847. On his release in 1852 he became a faithful friend of France (1807-1883).

ABD-EL-KRIM, leader of the Riff rebels in Morocco against the French and Spanish. A son of Mohammed Abd-el-Krim, President of the Republic of the Riff, he fought to re-establish his country's freedom, using great ability to organise the tribesmen into the semblance of a modern army. Before he was forty he had retaken much Spanish territory, and he then turned his attention to France. From 1920 to 1925 he met with several successes, but in 1926 he surrendered to the French at Fez and was exiled to the Mascarene Islands.

ABDE RA, a town in ancient Thrace, proverbial for the stupidity of its inhabitants.

ABDICATIONS: the most celebrated are those of the Roman Dictator Nylia in 70 B.C.; Diocletian in A.D. 305; Charles V. in 1556; Christina of Sweden in 1654; Napoleon in 1814 and 1815; Charles X. in 1830; Louis Philippe in 1848; Ferdinand of Austria in 1848; Isabella II. of Spain in 1870; Amadeus I. of Spain in 1873; Milan of Serbia in 1889; Pedro II. of Brazil in 1889; Hamid II. of Turkey in 1909; Manuel of Portugal in 1910; Puyl of China in 1912; Nicholas II. of Russia in 1917; Ferdinand of Bulgaria in 1918; Wilhelm II. of Germany in 1918; Karl of Austria in 1918; Constantine of Greece in 1917; George II. of Greece in 1924; Muhammad VI. of Turkey in 1922; and Amanullah of Afghanistan in 1929.

ABDIEL, one of the seraphim, who withstood Satan in his revolt against the Most High.

ABDUL AZIZ, sultan of Turkey from 1861, in succession to Abdul-Medjid (1830-1876).

ABDUL-HAMID II., deposed sultan of Turkey, brother to Abdul-Aziz, and his successor; under him Turkey suffered serious dismemberment, and the Christian subjects in Armenia and Crete were cruelly massacred. He was deposed in 1909 (1842-1918).

ABDUL-MEDJID, sultan of Turkey, in whose defence against Russia England and France undertook the Crimean war (1828-1861).

ABECKET, GILBERT, an English humorist, who contributed to Punch and other organs; wrote the "Comic Blackstone" and comic histories of England and Rome (1811-1856).

ABEL, the second son of Adam and Eve; slain by his brother. The death of Abel is the subject of a poem by Gessner and a tragedy by Legouvé.

ABEL, SIR FREDERICK AUGUSTUS, joint-inventor of cordite; a famous authority on explosives. President of British Association in 1890 (1827-1902).

ABEL, HENRY, an able Norwegian mathematician, who died young (1802-1828).

ABELARD, PETER, a theologian and scholastic philosopher of French birth, renowned for his dialectic ability, his learning, his passion for Héloïse, and his misfortunes; made conceivably the test of credibility, and was a great teacher in his day (1079-1142).

ABELLE, a Dominican monk, the confessor of Catharine de Medici (1603-1691).

ABENOCERRA, GEE, a powerful Moorish tribe in Grenada, whose fate in the 16th century has been the subject of interesting romance.

ABEN-EZ-RA, a learned Spanish Jew and commentator on the Hebrew scriptures (1090-1168).

ABERA VON, a town and seaport in Glamorganshire, with copper and iron works, for some years the Parliamentary seat of Ramsey MacDonald.

ABERCOORN, 3RD DUKE OF, became the first Governor of Northern Ireland in 1822, having at one time sat as M.P. for Londonderry and been Treasurer to the Household (1809).

ABERCROMBIE, LA SCOTLAND, English poet; educated at Malvern and Manchester University, he published several volumes of poetry and some critical essays, the first work appearing in 1908 (1881-).

ABERCROMBIE, SIR RALPH, a distinguished British general of Scottish birth, who fell in Egypt after defeating the French at Aboukir Bay (1731-1801).

ABERDEEN, the fourth city in Scotland, on the E. coast, between the mouths of the Dee and Don; built of grey granite, with many fine public edifices, a flourishing university, a large trade, and thriving manufactures. Old Aberdeen, on the Don, now incorporated in the municipality, is the seat of a cathedral church, and of King's College, founded in 1494, united with the university in the new town.

ABERDEEN, 4TH EARL OF, a shrewd English statesman, Prime Minister of England during the Crimean war (1784-1860).

ABERDEENSHIRE, a large county in NE. of Scotland; mountainous in SW., lowland N. and E.; famed for its granite quarries, its fisheries, and its breed of cattle.

ABERNETHY, a small burgh in S. Perthshire, with a Pictish round tower, and once the capital of the Pictish kingdom.

ABERNETHY, JOHN, a distinguished surgeon and authority on stomachic diseases (1764-1831).

ABERRATION OF LIGHT. In order that a certain star may be observed, the telescope must be pointed in a direction slightly different from that in which it would be pointed if the earth were not rotating on its axis. As a consequence the star appears to describe an ellipse in the heavens, and from careful measurements we can calculate the speed of the earth in its orbit, and hence its distance from the sun.

ABERYST-WITH, a town and seaport in Cardiganshire. Wales, with a university.

AB-GAR XIV., a king of Edessa, one of a dynasty of the name, a contemporary of Jesus Christ, and said to have corresponded with Him.

ABHORERS, the Royalist and High Church party in England under Charles II., so called from their abhorrence of the principles of their opponents.

ABIGAIL, the widow of Nabal, espoused by David.

ABIGES, WILHELM HERMANN, a German mineralogist and traveller; conducted explorations in Persia and Daghestan (1806-1884).

ABINGDON, a borough in Berks. 6 m. S. of Oxford.

ABIOTENISM, the theory that living organisms arise from non-living matter. Though it may have occurred in the remote past, there is no evidence that it takes place to-day.

ABIPONES, a once powerful warlike race in La Plata, now nearly all absorbed.

ABNER, a Hebrew general under Saul; assassinated by Joab.

ABO, the old capital of Finland and seat of the government, on the Gulf of Bothnia.

ABOLITIONISTS, a society formed in the Northern States of America in 1832 advocating the abolition of slavery. The society grew in numbers and influence and was the moving force in the war of 1861-1864, which resulted in victory for the anti-slave States under Abraham Lincoln (q.v.).

ABOUBENY, the capital of Dahomey, in W. Africa.

ABOU'KIR, village near Alexandria, in Egypt, on the bay near which Nelson destroyed the French fleet in 1799; where Napoleon beat the Turks, 1799; and where Abercrombie fell, 1801.

ABRAHAM, the Hebrew patriarch, ancestor of the Jews, the very type of an Eastern pastoral chief at once by his dimmed character and simple faith.

ABRAHAM, THE FLAINS OF, a plateau in Quebec, the scene of the battle in which the English under Wolfe defeated the French under Montcalm, 1759.

ABRAHAM-MEN, a class of lunatics allowed out of restraint, at one time, to roam about and beg; a set of impostors who wandered about the country affecting lunacy.

ABRAN'TES, a town in Portugal, on the Tagus; taken by Marshal Junot, 1807, and giving the title of Duke to him.

ABRAXAS STONES, stones with cabalistic figures on them used as talismans.

ABRUZZI, a highland district in the Apennines.

ABRUZZI DUKE OF THE, Italian geographer and explorer; ascended Mt. Ruwenzori, Central Africa, 1906 (1873-).

ABRALOM, a son of David, who rebelled against his father, and at whose death David gave vent to a bitter wall of grief. A name given by Dryden to the Duke of Monmouth, son of Charles II.

ABSOLUTE, THE, the philosophical name for the uncreated Creator, or creating cause of all things, dependent on nothing external to itself.

ABSYRTUS, a brother of Medea, whom she cut in pieces as she fled with Jason, pursued by her father, throwing his bones behind her to detain her father who, in his pursuit of her, stopped to pick them up.

ABT, FRANZ, a German composer of song-music (1819-1885).

ABU, a mountain (6000 ft.) in Rajputana, with a footprint of Vishnu on the top, and two marble temples half-way up, held sacred by the Jains.

ABU'BEKKE, as the father of A'isha, the father-in-law of Mohammed, the first of the caliphs and the founder of the Sunnites; d. 634.

AB'U-KLEA, in the Sudan, where the Mahdi's forces were defeated by Sir H. Stewart in 1885.

ABUL-FARAJ, a learned Armenian Jew, who became bishop of Aleppo, and wrote a history of the world from Adam onwards (1226-1286).

ABUL-FAZEL, the vizier of the great Mogul emperor Akbar, who wrote an account of his reign and of the Mogul empire; he was assassinated in 1604.

ABUL-FEDA, a Moslem prince of Hamat in Syria, who in his youth took part against the Crusaders, and wrote historical works in Arabic (1275-1331).

ABU-THA'LEB, uncle of Mohammed, and his protector against the plots of his enemies the Koreish.

ABYDOS, a town on the Asiatic side of the Hellespont, famous as the home of Lander, who swam the Hellespont every night to visit Hero in Sestos, and as the spot where Xerxes built his bridge of boats to cross into Europe in 480 B.C.; also a place of note in Upper Egypt.

ABYSSINIA, a mountainous country SE. of Nubia with an area of 200,000 sq. m., made up of independent states, and a mixed population of some four millions, the Abyssinians proper being of the Semite stock. It has also been called Ethiopia. Its independence was recognised by Italy in 1896, and it is ruled as an empire on feudal lines.

ACACIA, a large group of trees with astringent and gum-yielding properties, natives of tropical Africa and Australia.

ACADEMY, a public shady park or place of groves near Athens, where Plato taught his philosophy and whence his school derived its name, of which there are three branches, the Old, the Middle, and the New, represented respectively by Plato himself, Arcesilao, and Carneades. The French Academy, of forty members, was founded by Richelieu in 1635, and is charged with the interests of the French language and literature, and in particular with the duty of compiling an authoritative dictionary of the French language. Besides these, there are in France other four with a like limited membership in the interests of other departments of science and art, all now associated in the Institute of France, which consists in all of 229 members. There are similar institutions in other states of Europe, all of greater or less note.

ACADIA, the French name for Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

ACANTHUS, a leaf-like ornament on the capitals of the columns of certain orders of architecture.

ACAPULCO, a Mexican port in the Pacific; harbour commodious, but climate unhealthy.

ACARNANIA, a province of Greece N. of Gulf of Corinth; its pop. once addicted to piracy.

ACCA DIANS, a dark, thick-lipped, short-statured Mongol race in Central Asia, displaced by the Babylonians and Assyrians, who were Semitic.

ACCA LAURENTIA, the wife of Faustulus, shepherd of Numitor, who saved the lives of Romulus and Remus.

ACCIAIOLI, a Florentine family of 15th century, illustrious in scholarship and war.

ACCOLADE, a gentle blow with a sword on the shoulder in conferring knighthood.

ACCOLTI, a Tuscan family, of 15th century, famous for their learning.

ACCORDO, the name of a Florentine family, of 12th and 13th centuries, great in jurisprudence.

ACORA, capital and chief port in British Gold Coast colony.

ACCRINGTON, a manufacturing town in Lancs., 22 m. N. of Manchester.

ACCUMULATOR, or secondary battery, a cell consisting of plates of lead dipping into sulphuric acid; when an electric current is passed through it the plates undergo a chemical change; if the plates are subsequently joined by a wire the change takes place in the opposite direction and a current of electricity is produced in the direction opposite to that of the charging current.

ACERRA, an ancient city 9 m. NE. of Naples; is in an unhealthy district.

ACETIC ACID, the pure acid of vinegar; the salts are called acetates.

ACETONE, a colourless liquid obtained by the distillation of calcium acetate. It is used in the manufacture of chloroform, iodoform, and cordite (q.v.).

ACETYLENE, a colourless gas with an unpleasant smell which burns with a hot, smoky flame; it is usually prepared by the action of water on calcium carbide. It is the first of a series of hydrocarbons known as the acetylenes, the other simpler members being allylene, crotonylene, and valerylene. Acetylene burning in oxygen produces an intensely hot flame which will melt the hardest steel.

ACHEAN LEAGUE, a confederation of 12 towns in the Peloponnesus, formed especially against the influence of the Macedonians.

ACHEANS, the common name of the Greeks in the heroic or Homeric period.

ACHAIA, the N. district of the Peloponnesus, eventually the whole of it.

ACHARD, FRANZ KARL, a Prussian chemist, one of the first to manufacture sugar from beetroot (1753-1821).

ACHARD, LOUIS AMEDEE, a prolific French novelist (1814-1876).

ACHATES, the attendant of Aeneas in his wandering after the fall of Troy, remarkable for, and a perennial type of, fidelity.

ACHELOUS, a river in Greece, which rises in Mt. Pindus, and falls into the Ionian Sea; also the god of the river, the oldest of the sons of Oceanus, and the father of the Sirens.

ACHEN, an eminent German painter (1556-1621).

ACHENWALL, GOTTFRIED, a German economist, the founder of statistic science (1719-1772).

ACHERON, a river in the underworld; the name of several rivers in Greece more or less suggestive of it.

ACHETRY, a learned French Benedictine of St. Maur (1609-1685).

ACHIEVEMENT, the full representation in heraldry of the shield and accessories; also known as Hatchment.

ACHILL, a rocky, boggy island, sparsely inhabited, off W. coast of Ireland, co. Mayo, with a bold headland 2222 ft. high.

ACHILLEID, an unfinished poem of Statius.

ACHILLES, the son of Peleus and Thetis, king of the Myrmidons, the most famous of the Greek heroes in the Trojan war, whose wrath with the consequences of it forms the subject of the Iliad of Homer. He was invulnerable except in the heel, at the point where his mother held him as she dipped his body in the Styx to render him invulnerable.

ACHILLES OF GERMANY, Albert, third elector of Brandenburg, a man of fiery temper (1414-1486).

ACHILLES TENDON, the great tendon of the heel, where Achilles was vulnerable.

ACHMED PASHA, a French adventurer, served in French army, condemned to death, fled, and served Austria; condemned to death a second time, pardoned, served under the Sultan, was banished to the shores of the Black Sea (1675-1747).

ACHMET I., Sultan of Turkey from 1603 to 1617; A. II., from 1691 to 1695; A. III., from 1703 to 1780, who gave asylum to Charles XII. of Sweden after his defeat by the Czar at Pultowa.

ACHITOPHEIL, name given by Dryden to the Earl of Shaftesbury of his time.

A'CI-REBATH, a seaport town in Sicily, at the foot of Mount Etna, in NE. of Catania, with mineral waters.

A'CIS, a Sicilian shepherd enamoured of Galatea, whom the Cyclops Polyphemus, out of jealousy, overwhelmed under a rock, from under which his blood has since flowed as a river.

ACKERMANN, RUDOLPH, an enterprising publisher of illustrated works in the Strand, a native of Saxony (1764-1834).

ACLINIC LINE, the magnetic equator, which corresponds roughly with the geographical equator. If a magnetised needle is suspended so that it can turn in a vertical plane, the north pole dips if north of the aclinic line and the south if south of the line at an angle which increases as the poles are approached; upon the line itself the needle remains horizontal.

ACNE, a skin disease showing hard reddish pimples; Acne rosacea, a congestion of the skin of the nose and parts adjoining.

ACENETIZ, an order of monks in the 5th century who by turns kept up a divine service day and night.

ACOLYTE, a candidate for the priesthood who has reached the fourth stage of initiation; originally a youth who assisted in church ritual.

ACONCA-GUA, the highest peak of the Andes, about 100 m. NE. of Valparaiso, 22,867 ft. high; recently ascended by a Swiss and a Scotsman, attendants of Fitzgerald's party.

ACONITE, monk's-hood, a poisonous plant of the ranunculaceae order with a tapering root.

ACONITINE, a most virulent poison from aconite, and, owing to the very small quantity sufficient to cause death, very difficult of detection when employed in taking away life.

ACORN-SHELL, a crustacean attached to rocks on the sea-shore, described by Huxley as "fixed by its head," and "kicking its food into its mouth with its legs."

ACOUSTICS, the science of sound as it affects the ear, specially of the laws to be observed in the construction of halls so that people may distinctly hear in them.

ACRAMIA, an impersonation in Spenser's "Faerie Queen," of intemperance in the guise of a beautiful sorceress.

ACRE, ST. JEAN D', a strong place and seaport in Syria, at the foot of Mount Carmel, taken, at an enormous sacrifice of life, by Philip Augustus and Richard Cœur de Lion in 1191; held out against Bonaparte in 1799; its ancient name Ptolemais.

ACRES, BOB, a coward in Sheridan's "Elvina" whose "courage always oozed out at his finger ends."

ACROAMATOR, acrobatic lectures, i.e. lectures to the initiated.

ACROLEIN, a colourless volatile liquid with a pungent odour obtained by the destructive distillation of fats.

ACROLYTES, statues of which only the extremities are of stone.

ACROFOLIA, a fortified citadel commanding a city, and generally the nucleus of it, specially the rocky eminence dominating Athens.

ACROSTIC, a form of verse, dating historically from the 4th century, in which the initial letters of the lines, read in order, spell a word or phrase.

ACROTERIA, pedestals placed at the middle and the extremities of a pediment to support a statue or other ornament, or the statue or ornament itself.

ACTA DIURNA, a kind of gazette recording in a summary way daily events, established at Rome in 181 n.c., and rendered official by Cæsar in 50 a.c.

ACTA SANCTORUM, the lives of the saints in 62 vols. folio, begun in the 17th century by the Jesuits, and carried on by the Bollandists.

ACTÆON, a hunter changed into a stag for surprising Diana when bathing, and afterwards devoured by his own dogs.

ACTINIC RAYS, sometimes termed ultra-violet rays, the invisible rays given off by a body under intense heat. They have a shorter wave-length and more rapid frequency than the violet rays.

ACTINIUM, a radioactive element discovered by Debiere in 1900. It is one of the products of disintegration of the uranium (q.v.) series, which itself gives rise to a series of radioactive substances, the final state being lead.

ACTINOMYCOSIS, a disease of a fungous nature on the mouth and lower jaw of cows.

ACTINOTHERAPY, the treatment of disease by means of natural or artificial light rays. Finsen, in Denmark, was one of the first to apply this method in medical practice, and it has since been widely adopted.

ACTIUM, a town and promontory at the entrance of the Ambracian Gulf (Arta), in Greece, where Augustus gained his naval victory over Antony and Cleopatra, Sept. 2, 31 n.c.

ACTON, SIR JOHN, an adventurer of English birth, who became prime minister of Naples, but was driven from the helm of affairs on account of his inveterate antipathy to the French (1737-1811).

ACTON, LORD, a grandson of the former, who became a leader of the Liberal Catholics in England, M.P. for Carlisle, and made a peer in 1869; a man of wide learning, and the projector of a universal history by experts in different departments of the field (1834-1902).

ACTS OF THE APOSTLES, a narrative account in the New Testament of the founding of the Christian Church chiefly through the ministry of Peter and Paul, written by Luke, commencing with the year 33, and concluding with the imprisonment of Paul in Rome in 62.

ACUN'HA, TRISTAN D', a Portuguese navigator, companion of Albuquerque, who gave his name to a group of volcanic islands in the South Atlantic (1506); Numa d', his son, viceroy of the Indies from 1528 to 1539; Rodriguez d', archbishop of Lisbon, who in 1640 freed Portugal from the Spanish domination, and established the house of Braganza on the throne.

ACUPRESSURE, checking hemorrhage in arteries during an operation by compressing their orifices with a needle.

ADAIR, SIR ROBERT, a distinguished English diplomatist, frequently employed on the most important diplomatic missions (1763-1855).

ADAL, a flat barren region between Abyssinia and the Red Sea.

ADALBERT, the archbishop of Rheims, chancellor of Lothaire and Louis V.; consecrated Hugh Capet; d. 908.

ADALBERT, a German ecclesiastical, who did much to extend Christianity over the North (1000-1072).

ADALBERT, ST., bishop of Prague, who, driven from Bohemia, essayed to preach the gospel in heathen Prussia, where the priests fell upon him, and "struck him with a death-stroke on the head." April 27, 997, on the anniversary of which day a festival is held in his honour.

ADALIA, a seaport on the coast of Asia Minor, on a bay of the same name.

ADAM (i.e. man), the first father, according to the Bible, of the human race.

ADAM, ALEX., a distinguished Latin scholar, rector for 40 years of the Edinburgh High School, Scott having been one of his pupils (1741-1809).

ADAM, LAMBERT, an eminent French sculptor (1700-1750).

ADAM, ROBERT, a distinguished architect, born at Kirkcaldy, architect of the Register House and the University, Edinburgh (1728-1792).

ADAM BEDL, George Eliot's first novel, published anonymously in 1859; it took at once with both critics and public.

ADAM EADMON, primeval man as he at first emanated from the Creator, or man in his primeval rudimentary potentiality.

ADAM OF BROMEN, distinguished as a Christian missionary in the 11th century; author of a celebrated Church history of N. Europe from 788 to 1072, entitled "Gesta Hammemburgensis Ecclesie Pontificum."

ADAMAS-TOR, the giant spirit of storms, which (according to his "Liedad," represents as riding up before Vasco da Gama to warn him off from the Cape of Storms, henceforth called, in consequence of the resultant success of the voyagers, the Cape of Good Hope.

ADAMAWA, a region in the Lower Soudan with a healthy climate and a fertile soil, rich in all tropical products.

ADAMITES, visionaries in Africa in the 2nd century, and in Bohemia in the 14th and 15th, who affected innocence, rejected marriage, and went naked.

ADAMNAN, ST., abbot of Iona, of Irish birth, who wrote a life of St. Columba and a work on the Holy Places, of value as the earliest written (825-704).

ADAMS, JOHN, the second president of the United States, and a chief promoter of their independence (1730-1826).

ADAMS, JOHN QUINCY, his eldest son, the sixth president (1767-1848).

ADAMS, JOHN COUCH, an English astronomer, director of Cambridge Observatory, the discoverer simultaneously with Leverrier of the planet Neptune (1819-1892).

ADAMS, PARSON, a country curate in Fielding's "Joseph Andrews," with a head full of learning and a heart full of love to his fellows, but in absolute ignorance of the world, which in his simplicity he takes for what it professes to be.

ADAM'S BRIDGE, a chain of coral reefs and sandbanks connecting Ceylon with India.

ADAM'S PEAK, a conical peak in the centre of Ceylon 7420 ft. high, with a foot-like depression 5 ft. long and 21 broad at top, ascribed to Adam by the Moham-medans and to Buddha by the Buddhists; it was here, the Arabs say, that Adam alighted on his expulsion from Eden and stood doing penance on one foot till God forgave him.

ADA'NA, a town S.E. corner of Asia Minor, 30 m. from the sea.

ADANSON, MICHEL, a French botanist, born in Aix, the first to attempt a natural classification of plants (1727-1806).

ADCOCK, A. ST. JOHN, novelist and journalist. Abandoning law for literature in 1893, he contributed a large amount of writing to periodicals. "The Divine Tragedy," "Exit Homo," "A Man with a Past," and "Billicks" are among his books (1864-).

ADDA, an affluent of the Po, near Cremona; it flows through Lake Como; on its banks Bonaparte gained several of his famous victories over Austria.

ADDER. See VIPER.

ADDINGTON, HENRY, Lord Sidmouth, an English statesman; was for a short time Prime Minister, throughout a supporter of Pitt (1757-1844).

ADDISON, DR. CHRISTOPHER, English politician. After a period as medical professor at Sheffield he entered the House of Commons as M.P. for Hoxton in 1814; became secretary to the Ministry of Munitions, and later head of the department; was first Minister for Reconstruction in 1918, and as Minister of Health he was responsible for the Coalition Government's housing scheme; on a dispute arising over this he resigned, and later joined the Labour Party (1869-).

ADDISON, JOSEPH, a celebrated English essayist; studied at Oxford, became Fellow of Magdalen, was a Whig in politics, held a succession of Government appointments, resigned the last for a large pension; was pre-eminent among English writers for the purity and elegance of his style, had an abiding, refining, and elevating influence on the literature of the country; his name is associated with the Tadler, Spectator, and Guardian, as well as with a number of beautiful hymns (1672-1719).

ADELAAR, the name of honour given to Cort

Sivertsen, a famous Norse seaman, who rendered distinguished naval services to Denmark and to Venice against the Turks (1622-1675).

ADELAIDE, the capital of S. Australia, on the river Torrens, which flows through it into St. Vincent Gulf, 7 m. S.E. of Port Adelaide; a handsome city, with a cathedral, fine public buildings, a university, and an extensive botanical garden; it is the great emporium for S. Australia; exports wool, wine, wheat, and copper ore.

ADELAIDE, eldest daughter of Louis XV. of France (1732-1806).

ADELAIDE, PORT, the haven of Adelaide (q.v.), a port of call, with a commodious harbour.

ADELAIDE, QUEEN, consort of William IV. of England (1792-1849).

ADELAIDE OF ORLEANS, sister of Louis Philippe, his Egeria (1771-1841).

ADELBERG, a town of Carniola, 22 m. from Trieste, with a large stalactite cavern, besides numerous caves near it.

ADELUNG, JOHANN CHRISTOPH, a distinguished German philologist and lexicographer, born in Pomerania (1732-1806).

A'DEN, a fortified town on a peninsula in British territory S. of Arabia, 105 m. E. of Rab-el-Mandeb; a coaling and military station, in a climate hot but healthy.

AD HERBAL, son of Micipsa, king of Numidia, killed by Jugurtha, 249 B.C.

ADI GRANTH, the sacred books of the Sikhs.

ADIAPHORISTS, Lutherans who in 16th century maintained that certain practices of the Romish Church, obnoxious to others of them, were matters of indifference, such as having pictures, lighting candles, wearing surplices, and singing certain hymns in worship.

ADIGE, a river of Italy, which rises in the Rhetian Alps and falls into the Adriatic after a course of 250 m.; subject to sudden swellings and overflows.

ADIPOCERE, a fatty, spermaceti-like substance, produced by the decomposition of animal matter in moist places.

ADIPOSE TISSUE, a tissue of small vesicles filled with oily matter, in which there is no sensation, and a layer of which lies under the skin and gives smoothness and warmth to the body.

ADIRONDACK MOUNTAINS, a high-lying, picturesque granite range in the State of New York; source of the Hudson.

ADJUTANT, a gigantic Indian stork, about 5 ft. in height, with an enormous beak, which feeds on carrion and offal, and is useful in this way, as storks are. Also an army rank, denoting a regimental staff-officer who assists a commanding officer in administrative work.

ADLER, HERMANN, son and successor of the following, born in Hanover; a vigorous defender of his co-religionists and their faith, as well as their sacred Scriptures; was elected Chief Rabbi in 1891 (1839-1911).

ADLER, NATHAN MARCUS, Chief Rabbi in Britain, born in Hanover (1803-1890).

ADLERBREUTZ, a Swedish general, the chief promoter of the revolution of 1808, who told Gustavus IV. to his face that he ought to retire (1759-1815).

ADMETUS, king of Phæria, in Thessaly, one of the Argonauts, under whom Apollo served for a time as neat-herd. See ALCESTIS.

ADMIRABLE CRICHTON, THE, a comedy by Sir J. M. Barrie, first produced in 1902. The chief character is Crichton, a butler, who takes control of a noble family he serves when they are wrecked and cast up on a desert island, and reverts to his previous position on return to civilisation. The original bearer of the nickname, "Admirable Crichton," was a footman, James Crichton, who was renowned both for his learning and his skill in swordsmanship. His brilliant career was cut short by treachery in Mantua (1560-1585).

ADMIRAL, the highest of naval ranks, of which there are in Britain four grades—admirals-of-the-fleet, admirals, vice-admirals, and rear-admirals, each rank with a distinctive flag, the red cross of St. George marked in the cantons.

ADMIRALTY, BOARD OF, board of commissioners appointed for the management of naval affairs.

ADMIRALTY ISLAND, an island off the coast of Alaska.

ADMIRALTY ISLANDS, a group N.E. of New Guinea, in the Pacific.

ADOLF, FRIEDRICH, king of Sweden, under whose reign the nobles divided themselves into the two factions of the Caps, or the peace-party, and the Hats, or the war-party (1710-1771).

ADOLPH, ST., a Spanish martyr; festival, Sept. 27.

ADOLPHUS, JOHN, an able London barrister in criminal cases, and a voluminous historical writer (1766-1845).

ADONA'Y, the name used by the Jews for God instead of Jehovah, too sacred to be pronounced.

ADONA'YS, Shelley's name for Keats in the elegy so entitled.

ADONIS, a beautiful youth beloved by Aphrodite (Venus), but mortally wounded by a boar and changed by her into a flower the colour of his blood, by sprinkling nectar on his body.

ADOPTIONISTS, heretics who in the 8th century maintained that Christ was the son of God, not by birth, but by adoption, and as being one with Him in character and will.

ADORNO, an illustrious plebeian family in Genoa, of the Ghibelline party, several of whom were Doges of the republic.

ADOUR, a river of France, rising in the Pyrenees and falling into the Bay of Biscay.

ADOWA, a highland town in Abyssinia, and chief entrepôt of trade. It was the scene of a battle in 1896 in which the Abyssinians defeated the Italian general Baratieri.

ADRAS'TUS, a king of Argos, the one survivor of the first expedition of the Seven against Thebes, who died of grief when his son fell in the second.

ADRENALIN, a secretion produced in the neighbourhood of the kidneys which causes many effects in all parts of the body, altering the blood pressure and the breathing movements. The amount of adrenalin secreted is increased by great fear or violent anger, giving rise to the usual symptoms of these emotions. Adrenalin has been prepared in the laboratory.

ADRETS, BARON DES, a Huguenot leader, notorious for his cruelty; died a Catholic (1513-1587).

A'DRIA, an ancient town between the Po and the Adige; a flourishing seaport at one time, but now 14 m. from the sea.

A'DRIAN, name of six Popes: A. I., from 772 to 795, did much to embellish Rome; A. II., from 867 to 872, zealous to subject the sovereigns of Europe to the Popehood; A. III., from 884 to 885; A. IV., from 1054 to 1059, the only Englishman who attained to the Papal dignity; A. V., in 1276; A. VI., from 1222 to 1223.

ADRIAN, ST., the chief military saint of N. Europe for many ages, second only to St. George; regarded as the patron of old soldiers, and protector against the plague.

ADRIANO'PLE, a city on the highroad between Belgrade and Constantinople. The Ottoman capital until 1453. In 1913, during the Balkan war, it was besieged and captured by the Bulgarians and Serbs.

ADRIA'TIC, THE, a sea 450 m. long separating Italy from Illyria, Dalmatia, and Albania.

ADULLAM, David's hiding-place (1 Sam. xxii. 1), a royal Canaanitish city 10 m. N.W. of Hebron.

ADULLAMITES, an English political party who in 1866 deserted the Liberal side in protest against a Liberal Franchise Bill then introduced. John Bright gave them this name. See 1 Sam. xlii.

ADUMBLA, a cow, in old Norse mythology that grazes on bear-frost, "licking the rime from the rocks—a Hindu cow transported north," surmises Carlyle.

ADVENTISTS, various sects believing in the near approach of the Second Coming of Our Lord, found chiefly in America. The most famous are the Second Adventists, founded by William Miller in 1831, and the Seventh Day Adventists, founded in 1844.

ADVOCATE, LORD, chief counsel for the Crown in Scotland, public prosecutor of crimes, and a member of the administration in power.

ADVOCATES, FACULTY OF, the body of lawyers qualified to plead at the Scottish bar.

ADVOCATES' LIBRARY, a library belonging to the Faculty of Advocates in Edinburgh, founded in 1682.

ADVOCATUS DIABOLI, the devil's advocate, a functionary in the Roman Catholic Church appointed to show reason against a proposed canonisation.

ÆACUS, a Greek king renowned as an administrator of distributive justice, after death appointed one of the three judges in Hades, with Minos and Rhadamanthus.

ÆOLUS, magistrates of ancient Rome who had charge of the public buildings and public structures generally.

ÆE'TIS, king of Colchis and father of Medea.

ÆGEUS, the father of Theseus, who threw himself into the Ægean Sea, so called after him, in the mistaken belief that his son, who had been to slay the Minotaur, had been slain by the latter.

ÆGINA, an island 20 m. S.W. of Athens, in a gulf of the same name.

ÆGER, a giant of Norse mythology, also figuring in the Sagas as a god of the sea.

ÆGIS (lit. a goat's skin), the shield of Zeus, made of the hide of the goat Amalthea (q.v.), representing originally the storm-cloud in which the god invested himself when he was angry; it was also the attribute of Athena, bearing in her case the Gorgon's head.

ÆGIS-TRUB. See AGAMEMNON.

ÆL-FRIG, a Saxon writer of the end of the 10th century known as the "Grammarian."

ÆLIA'NUS, CLAUDIUS, an Italian rhetorician who wrote in Greek, and whose extant works are valuable for the passages from prior authors which they have preserved for us.

ÆMILIUS PAULUS, the Roman Consul who fell at Cannas, 216 B.C.; also his son, surnamed Macedonicus, so called as having defeated Perseus at Pydna, in Macedonia.

ÆNEAS, a Trojan, the hero of Virgil's "Æneid," who in his various wanderings after the fall of Troy settled in Italy, and became, tradition alleges, the forefather of the Julian line in Rome.

ÆNEAS SILVIUS. See PICCOLLOMINI.

ÆNEID, an epic poem by Virgil, of which Æneas is the hero.

ÆNESIDEMUS, a sceptical philosopher, born in Crete, who flourished shortly after Cicero, and summed up under ten arguments the contention against dogmatism in philosophy. See "Schwegler," translated by Dr. Hutchison Stirling.

ÆOLIAN ISLANDS, the Lipari Islands (q.v.).

ÆOLIAN, one of the Greek races who, originating in Thessaly, spread north and south, and emigrated into Asia Minor, giving rise to the Æolic dialect of the Greek language.

ÆOLUS, the Greek god of the winds.

ÆON, among the Gnostics, one of a succession of powers conceived as emanating from God and presiding over successive creations and transformations of being.

ÆGYPTORNIS, a gigantic fossil bird of Madagascar, of which the egg is six times larger than that of an ostrich.

ÆQUI, a tribe on N.E. of Latium, troublesome to the Romans until subdued in 302 B.C.

ÆRATED BREAD, bread of flour dough charged with carbonic acid gas.

ÆRATED WATERS, waters aerated with carbonic acid gas.

ÆROLITES, fused masses of metal or stone falling from the sky and known popularly as fireballs, meteoric stones, thunderbolts, etc. Many so-called "sacred stones," such as the Casba of the Mohammedans, are believed to be ærolites.

ÆROPLANE. See AVIATION.

ÆSCHINES, a celebrated Athenian orator, rival of Demosthenes, who in the end prevailed over him by persuading the citizens to believe he was betraying them to Philip of Macedon, so that he left Athens and settled in Rhodes, where he founded a school as a rhetorician (389-314 B.C.).

ÆSCHYLUS, the father of the Greek tragedy, who distinguished himself as a soldier both at Marathon and Salamis before he figured as a poet; wrote, it is said, some seventy dramas, of which only seven are extant—the "Suppliants," the "Persæ," the "Seven against Thebes," the "Prometheus Bound," the "Agamemnon," the "Choephoroi," and the "Eumenides," his plays being trilogies; born at Eleusis and died in Sicily (525-456 B.C.).

ÆSCULA'PIUS, a son of Apollo and the nymph Coronis, whom, for restoring Hippolytus to life, Zeus, at the prayer of Pluto, destroyed with a thunderbolt, but afterwards admitted among the gods as god of medicine and the healing art; the cock, the emblem of vigilance, and the serpent, of vengeance, were sacred to him.

ÆSON, the father of Jason, was restored to youth by Medea.

ÆSOP, a celebrated Greek fabulist of the 6th century B.C., of whose history little is known except that he was originally a slave, manumitted by Iadmon of Samos, and put to death by the Delphians, probably for some witicism at their expense.

ÆSOPUS, a celebrated Roman actor, a friend of Pompey and Cicero.

ÆSTHETICS, the science of the beautiful in nature and the fine arts.

ÆT'IVS, a Roman general, who withstood the aggressions of the Barbarians for twenty years, and defeated Attila at Chalons, 451; assassinated out of jealousy by the Emperor Valentinian III., 454.

ÆTOLIA, a country of ancient Greece N. of the Gulf of Corinth.

AFFIDAVIT, an old legal form still in use, being a written statement of evidence given on oath before a magistrate or commissioner for oaths.

AFFRE, DENIS AUGUSTE, archbishop of Paris, suffered death at the barricades, as, with a green bough in his hand, he bore a message of peace to the insurgents (1793-1848).

AFGHANISTAN, a country in the centre of Asia, between India on the east and Persia on the west, its length about 600 m. and its breadth about 500 m., a plateau of immense mountain masses, and high, almost inaccessible, valleys, occupying 278,000 sq. m., with extremes of climate, and a mixed turbulent population, majority Afghans. The country, long a bone of contention between England and Russia, is now independent.

AFGHANS, THE, a fine and noble but hot-tempered race of the Mohammedan faith inhabiting Afghanistan. The Afghans proper are called Pathans in India, and call themselves Bani Israel (sons of Israel), tracing their descent from King Saul.

AFRANIUS, a Latin comic poet who flourished 100 B.C.; also a Roman Consul who played a prominent part in the rivalry between Cæsar and Pompey, 60 B.C.

AFRICA, one of the five great divisions of the globe, three times larger than Europe, seven-tenths of it within the torrid zone, and containing over 200,000,000 inhabitants of more or less dark-skinned races. Long a terra incognita, it was in the 19th century parcelled out by European nations, chiefly Britain, France, and Belgium, and with more zeal and appliance of resource by Britain than any other.

AFRICA'NUS, JULIUS, a Christian historian and chronologist of the 3rd century.

AFRIDS, a treacherous tribe of eight clans, often at war with each other, in a mountainous region on the North-Western frontier of India W. of Peshawar.

AFRIKANER, one born in S. Africa of Dutch descent.

AFRIT, a powerful evil spirit in the Mohammedan mythology.

AGA KHAN (Sultan Sir Mahomed Shah), the head of the Ismaili Mohammedans, a keen traveller and noted racehorse owner. For his loyal services during the Great War he was granted the status of a first-class chief. He spends much of his time in England (1875-).

AGA DES, a once important depot of trade in the S. of the Sahara, much decayed.

AGADIR, a port of Morocco some 20 m. south of Cape Ghr, where in 1911 the German gunboat Panther was sent with promises of assistance to the natives in their struggle against France. The affair nearly started a European war.

AGAG, a king of the Amalekites, conquered by Saul, and hewn in pieces by order of Samuel.

AGAMEMNON, a son of Atreus, king of Mycenae, and general-in-chief of the Greeks in the Trojan war, represented as a man of stately presence and a proud spirit. On the advice of the soothsayer Calchas sacrificed his daughter Iphigenia (q.v.) for the success of the enterprise he conducted. He was assassinated by Agisthus and Clytemnestra, his wife, on his return from the war. His fate and that of his house are the subject of Aeschylus's trilogy "Orestes."

AGANITTE, a fountain in Boeotia, near Helicon, dedicated to the Muses as a source of poetic inspiration.

AGAPES, love-feasts among the primitive Christians in commemoration of the Last Supper, in which they gave each other the kiss of peace as token of Christian brotherhood.

AGAPEMONIA, a community of mystics whose founder, in 1859, was Henry F. Prince, a clergyman. Its headquarters were at Bridgewater. The name signifies "the abode of love."

AGAR-AGAR, a gum extracted from a sea-weed, used in bacteriological investigations.

AGASIAS, a sculptor of Ephesus, famous for his statue of the "Gladiator."

AGASSIZ, LOUIS, a celebrated Swiss naturalist, in the department especially of ichthyology, and in connection with the glaciers; settled as a professor of zoology and geology in the United States in 1846 (1807-1873).

AGATHE, ST., a Sicilian virgin who suffered martyrdom at Palermo under Decius in 251; represented in art as crowned with a long veil and bearing a pair of shears, the instruments with which her breasts were cut off. Festival, Feb. 5.

AGATHIAS, a Byzantine poet and historian (536-582).

AGATHOCLES, the tyrant of Syracuse, by the massacre of thousands of the inhabitants, was an enemy of the Carthaginians, and fought against them; was poisoned in the end (361-289 B.C.).

AGATHON, an Athenian tragic poet, a rival of Euripides (447-400 B.C.).

AGATHON, ST., pope from 676 to 682.

AGDE, a French seaport on the Herault, 3 m. from the Mediterranean.

AGEN, a town on the Garonne, 84 m. above Bordeaux.

AGES, in the Greek mythology four—the Golden, self-sufficient; the Silver, self-indulgent; the Brazen, warlike; and the Iron, violent; together with the Heroic, nobly aspirant, between the third and fourth. In archaeology, three—the Stone Age, the Bronze, and the Iron. In history, the Middle and Dark, between the Ancient and the Modern. In Fichte, five—of Instinct, of Law, of Rebellion, of Rationality, of Conformity to Reason. In Shakespeare, seven—Infancy, Childhood, Boyhood, Adolescence, Manhood, Age, Old Age.

AGESANDER, a sculptor of Rhodes of the first century, who wrought at the famous group of the Laocoön.

AGESILAUS, a Spartan king, victorious over the Persians in Asia and over the allied Thebans and Athenians at Coronea, but defeated by Epaminondas at Mantinea after a campaign in Egypt; d. 360 B.C., aged 84.

AGGAS, RALPH, a surveyor and engraver of the 16th century, who first drew a plan of London as well as of Oxford and Cambridge.

AGGLUTINATE LANGUAGES, languages composed of parts which are words glued together, so to speak, as cowherd.

AGINCOURT, a small village in Pas-de-Calais, where Henry V. in a bloody battle defeated the French, Oct. 25, 1415.

AGE, the name of several Spartan kings, of whom the most famous were Ages III. and IV., the former famous for his resistance to the Macedonian domination, d. 330 B.C.; and the latter for his attempts to carry a law for the equal division of land, d. 240 B.C. AGELAIA. See GRACIA.

AGRADEL, a Lombard village, near which Louis XII. defeated the Venetians in 1509, and Vendôme routed Prince Eugene in 1706.

AGNA NO, LAKE OF, a lake near Naples, now drained; occupied the crater of an extinct volcano, its waters in a state of constant ebullition.

AGNELLO, COL D', passage by the S. of Monte Viso between France and Italy.

AGNES, an unsophisticated maiden in Molière's "L'Ecole des Femmes," so unsophisticated that she does not know what love means.

AGNES, ST., a virgin who suffered martyrdom, was beheaded because the flames would not touch her body, under Diocletian in 303; represented in art as holding a palm-branch in her hand and a lamb at her feet or in her arms. Festival, Jan. 21.

AGNES DE MERANIE, the second wife of Philip Augustus by a marriage in 1193, declared null by the Church, who, being dismissed in consequence, died broken-hearted in 1201.

AGNES SORREL, surnamed Dame de beauté, mistress of Charles VII. of France (1406-1450).

AGNESI, MARIA GAETANA, a native of Milan, a woman of extraordinary ability and attainments, prelected for her father in mathematics in the University of Bologna under sanction of the Pope; died a nun at her birthplace (1718-1799).

AGNI, the god of fire in the Vedic mythology, begets the gods, organizes the world, produces and preserves universal life, and throughout never ceases to be fire. One of the three terms of the Vedic trinity, Soma and Indra being the other two.

AGNOLO, a Florentine artist, friend of Michael Angelo and Raphael, distinguished for his carvings in wood (1460-1543).

AGNOTISM, the doctrine which disclaims all knowledge of the supernatural, or denies that we know or can know the absolute, the infinite, or God. The word itself was coined by Professor Huxley in 1869.

AGNUS DEI, the figure of a lamb bearing a cross as a symbol of Christ, or a medal with this device; also a prayer in the Mass beginning with the words, "Lamb of God."

AGONIC LINE, a line drawn on a map of the world through all parts at which the magnetic needle points due north and south. There are three such lines, the first passes down the middle of America, the second passes through Western Russia, Arabia, and the East Indies to Australia. In the area between these two, i.e. the Atlantic and Indian Oceans, Europe and Africa, the compass points to the west of true north, whilst in Asia, the Pacific, and Western America it points to the east. The third agonic line encloses an oval space in Siberia and China. The reasons for their irregular distribution are obscure.

AGORA, the forum of a Grecian town.

AGOSTA, a city on east coast of Sicily.

AGOULT, MARIE, COMTESSE D', a French authoress under the pseudonym of Daniel Stern; through a liaison with Liszt became mother-in-law of Richard Wagner (1805-1876).

AGOUT, CAPT. DE, a "cast-iron" captain of the Swiss Guards, who on May 4, 1788, by order of the Court of Versailles, marched the Parliament of Paris out of the Palais de Justice and carried off the keys. See Carlyle's "French Revolution," Bk. I., chap. vii.

AGOUTI, a rodent, native of Brazil, Paraguay, and Guiana; very destructive to roots and sugar-canes.

AGRA, a handsome city on the Jumna, in NW. Province of India, famous for, among other monuments, the Taj Mahal, a magnificent mausoleum erected near it by the Emperor Shah Jehan for himself and his favourite wife; it is a centre of trade, and seat of manufactures of Indian wares.

AGRAN, otherwise Zagreb, the capital of Croatia in Jugo-Slavia, with a fine Gothic cathedral and a university; is subject to earthquakes.

AGRARIAN LAWS, laws among the Romans regulating the division of lands.

AGRICOLA, a Roman general, father-in-law of Tacitus, who conquered Great Britain in 80, recalled by the Emperor Domitian in 87, and retired into private life (37-93).

AGRICOLA, JOHANN, a follower and friend of Luther, who became his antagonist in the matter of the binding obligation of the law on Christians (1492-1566).

AGRICOLA, EUDOLPHUS, a learned and accomplished Dutchman, much esteemed by Erasmus, and much in advance of his time; his most important work, "Dialectics," being an attack on the scholastic system (1442-1485).

AGRIGENTUM, an ancient considerable city, now Agrigento, on the E. of Sicily, still showing traces of its former grandeur.

AGRIFFA, H. CORNELIUS, a native of Cologne, of noble birth, for some time in the service of Maximilian, but devoted mainly to the study of the occult sciences, which exposed him to various persecutions through life (1486-1535).

AGRIFFA, HEROD. See HEROD.

AGRIFFA, M. VIPSANIUS, a Roman general, the son-in-law and favourite of Augustus, who distinguished himself at the battle of Actium, and built the Pantheon of Rome (63-12 B.C.).

AGRIFFINA, the daughter of Germanicus and Julia, and thus the granddaughter of Augustus; married Germanicus, accompanied him in his campaigns, and brought his ashes to Rome on his death, but was banished from Rome by Tiberius, and d. in 33.

AGRIFFINA, the daughter of Germanicus and the former, born at Cologne, and the mother of Nero. Her third husband was her uncle, the Emperor Claudian, whom she got to adopt her son, and then poisoned him, in order to place her son on the throne; but the latter, resenting her intolerable ascendancy, had her put to death in 59.

AGTELEK, a village NE. of Pesh, in Hungary, with vast stalactite caverns, some of them of great height.

AGUADO, ALEXANDRE MARIE, a wealthy banker of Spanish-Jewish descent, born in Seville, and naturalised in France; negotiated important Spanish loans and was ennobled by Ferdinand VII. (1784-1842).

AGUAS CALIENTES, a high-lying inland trading town in Mexico.

AGUE-CHEEK, SIR ANDREW, a silly squire in "Twelfth Night."

AGUESSEAU, HENRI D', a French chancellor under Louis XIV. and Louis XV., of unimpeachable integrity and unselfish devotion, a learned jurist and law reformer, who held high posts in the administration of justice (1668-1751).

AGUINALDO, EMILIO, the leader of the insurgent Filipinos in their rising against the Spaniards. Later an ally of the Americans until the latter declared their intention to annex the Philippine Islands. He was ultimately captured (1869-).

AGULHAS, CAPE (i.e. the Needles), the most southerly point of Africa, 100 m. ESE. of the Cape, and, with the bank of the whole south coast, dangerous to shipping.

A' HAB, a king of Israel fond of splendour, and partial to the worship of Baal (918-896 B.C.).

AHASUERUS, a traditional figure known as the Wandering Jew; also the name of several kings of Persia.

AHAZ, a king of Judah who first brought Judea under tribute to Assyria.

AHLDEM, CASTLE OF, a castle in Lüneburg Heath, the nearly life-long prison-house of Sophia, the wife of George I. and the mother of George II. and of Sophia Dorothea of Prussia.

AHMADABAD, the chief town of Guzerat, in the Bombay Presidency, a populous city and of great splendour in the last century, of which gorgeous relics remain.

AHMED, a prince in the "Arabian Nights," noted for a magic tent which would expand so as to shelter an army, and contract so that it could go into one's pocket.

AHMED SHAH, the founder of the Afghan dynasty and the Afghan power (1724-1773).

AHMEDNUGAR, a considerable Hindu town 122 m. E. of Bombay.

AHOLIRAS, prostitution personified. See Ere. xlii.

AHOLIRAS, a granddaughter of Cain, beloved by a seraph, who at the Flood bore her away to another planet.

AHRIMAN, the Zoroastrian impersonation of the evil principle, to whom all the evils of the world are ascribed.

AIDAN, ST., the archbishop of Lindisfarne, founder of the monastery there and the apostle of Northumbria, sent thither from Iona on the invitation of King Oswald in 635.

AIGNAN, ST., the bishop of Orleans, defended it against Attila and his Huns in 451.

AIGUILLON, DUC D', corrupt minister of France, previously under trial for official plunder of money, which was quashed at the corrupt court of Louis XV. and the tool of Mme. Du Barry, with whom he rose and fell (1720-1782).

AIKMAN, WILLIAM, an eminent Scottish portrait-painter (1682-1731).

AILEY, PIERRE D', a cardinal of the Romish Church, and eminent as a theologian, presided at the council of Constantine which condemned Huss (1350-1420).

AILSA CRAIG, a rocky islet of Ayrshire, 10 m. NW. of Girvan, 2 m. in circumference which rises abruptly out of the sea at the mouth of the Firth of Clyde to a height of 1114 ft.

AIMARD, GUSTAVE, a French novelist, born in Paris; died insane (1818-1883).

AIME, ST., archbishop of Sens, in France; d. 690; festival Sept. 13.

AIN, a French river, has its source in the Jura Mts., and falls into the Rhone; also a department of France between the Rhone and Savoy.

AINLEY, HENRY, English actor. Born at Leeds, he worked in a bank before going on the stage, and made his first London appearance in 1900 at the Lyceum. He won a name chiefly for his acting in melodramas and in Shakespeare (1879-).

AINMILLER, MAX, a native of Munich, the reviver of glass-painting in Germany (1807-1870).

AINOS, a primitive thick-set, hairy race, now confined to Yezo and the islands N. of Japan, aboriginal to that quarter of the globe and fast dying out.

AINSWORTH, R., an English Latin lexicographer (1660-1743).

AINSWORTH, WILLIAM HARRISON, a popular English novelist, the author of "Rookwood" and "Jack Sheppard," as well as novels of an antiquarian and historical character (1805-1882).

AIN-TAB, a Syrian garrison town 60 m. NE. of Aleppo; trade in hides, leather, and cotton.

AIR MINISTRY, THE, the Govt. dept. formed in 1917 to look after the Royal Air Force and civil aviation. The Meteorological Office forms part of the Ministry.

AIR RAIDS were first carried out over Great Britain during the Great War, the civil population being the main target of the German machines. The first raid was made on Christmas Eve, 1914, when a bomb was dropped from an aeroplane into a garden at Dover. In January, 1915, the first raid by Zeppelin airships was launched, and 4 people were killed in Norfolk. From then on raids were regularly made until August, 1918, and a system of raid warnings and "all clear" signals was introduced. Of all the raids the most destructive was the aeroplane raid on London on June 13, 1917, when 160 people were killed and 432 were injured.

AIRD, SIR JOHN, famous contracting engineer. With his father he was responsible for the erection of the Crystal Palace and numerous docks and railways all over the world. Sir John built the Asuan and Assuit dams on the Nile, and sat in Parliament from 1887-1905 (1833-1911).

AIRD, THOMAS, a Scottish poet, author of the "Devil's Dream," the "Old Bachelor," and the "Old Scotch Village"; for nearly 30 years editor of the Dumfries Herald (1802-1876).

AIRDRIE, a town in Lanarkshire, 11 m. E. of Glasgow, in a district rich in iron and coal; is of rapid growth; has cotton-mills, foundries, &c.

AIRDS MOSS, a moor in Ayrshire, between the rivers Ayr and Lugar.

AIRE, a Yorkshire river which flows into the Ouse; also a French river, affluent of the Aisne.

AIRSHIP. See AVIATION.

AIRY, SIR GEORGE BIDDLE, English astronomer. Professor of astronomy and mathematics at Cambridge, and Astronomer Royal 1836-1881. He was the first to enunciate the complete theory of the rainbow and helped in the preparation of a catalogue of stars. President of the British Association in 1851 (1801-1892).

AISNE, a French river which, after a course of 150 m., falls into the Oise near Compiègne; also a department in the N. of France. It was the scene of a battle in the Great War in the autumn of 1914.

AISSE, MILLE, a Circassienne brought to France about 1700; left letters on French society in the 18th century, sparkling with wit and full of interest.

AITZEMA, LEO, historian of Fweland (1600-1660).

AIX, a town, the ancient capital of Provence, 20 m. N. of Marseilles, the seat of an archbishopric and a university; founded by the Romans 123 B.C.; near it Marius defeated the Teutons.

AIX, ISLE OF, island in the Atlantic, at the mouth of the Charente.

AIX-LE-CHAPELLE, in Rhenish Prussia, one of the oldest cities in Germany, made capital of the German empire by Charlemagne; derives its name from its mineral springs; is a centre of manufacturing industries and an important trade; is celebrated for its octagonal cathedral (in the middle of which is a stone marking the burial-place of Charlemagne), for treaties of peace in 1668 and 1748, and for a European congress in 1818.

AIX-LES-BAINS, a small town near Chambéry, in the dep. of Savoy, and much frequented by invalids for its waters and baths.

AJAC'GIO, the capital of Corsica, the birth-place of the Bonaparte family, of Cardinal Fesch, and Bacciocchi.

AJALON, VALLEY OF, in Palestine, scene of a battle between Joshua and five Canaanitish kings, during which the sun and moon stood still at the prayer of Joshua, to enable him to finish his victory (Josh. 10).

A'JAN COAST, a district on the E. coast of Africa, under the protectorate of Germany.

A'JAX, the name of two Greek heroes in the Trojan war, and the synonym of a fiery and impetuous warrior: AJAX, the son of Telamon of Sparta, one of the bravest of the Greeks, who, on the death of Achilles, contended with Ulysses for his arms, but was defeated, in consequence of which he lost his reason and put an end to his life; and AJAX, the son of Oileus, swift of foot, like Achilles, who suffered shipwreck on his homeward voyage, as a judgment for an outrage he perpetrated on the person of Cassandra in the temple of Athena in Troy.

AJMERE, city in a small territory in the heart of Rajputana, under the rule of the Viceroy; well built, and contains some famous edifices.

AJODHYA, an ancient city of Oudh, 77 m. E. of Lucknow, once, on religious grounds, one of the largest and most magnificent cities of India, now in ruins; the modern town is an insignificant place, but has an annual fair, attended by over 600,000 pilgrims.

AK'ABA, a gulf forming the NE. inlet of the Red Sea.

AKAKIA, DOCTOR, a satire of a very biting nature by Voltaire, directed against pretentious pedants of science in the person of Maupeitua, the President of the Royal Academy of Sciences at Berlin, which so excited the anger of Frederick the Great, the patron of the Academy, that he ordered it to be burnt by the common hangman, after 30,000 copies of it had been sold in Paris.

AKAKIA, MARTIN, physician of Francis I., born at Chalon-sur-Marne, his real name being Sans-Malice; d. 1561.

AK'BAR, the great Mogul emperor of India, who, after a minority of a few years, assumed the reins of government at the age of eighteen, and in ten or twelve years, such was his power of conquest, had the whole of India north of the Vindhya Mts. subject to his rule. He was wise in government as well as powerful in war, and one of the most large-minded and largest-hearted rulers recorded in history. He reigned half a century (1542-1605).

AKENSIDE, MARK, an English physician, who wrote, among other productions and pieces, the Hymn to the Naiads, especially a poem entitled the "Pleasures of Imagination," much quoted from at one time, and suggested by the study of Addison on the Imagination in the Spectator (1731-1770).

AKERS, B. F., an able American sculptor (1825-1861).

AKERMAN, a fortified town in Bessarabia, at the mouth of the Dniester.

AKIBA, BEN JOSEPH, a famous Jewish rabbi of the 2nd century, a great authority in the matter of Jewish tradition; slain alive by the Romans for being concerned in a revolt in 135.

AKKAS, a wandering race of negro dwarfs in Central Africa, with large heads and hairy bodies, who live by hunting.

AKRON, a town in Ohio, U.S., seat of manufactures and centre of traffic.

AKSAKOF, IVAN, a Russian litterateur and advocate of Panславism (1823-1890).

AKSU, a trading town in E. Turkestan, 250 m. NE. of Yarkand.

AK'YAB, the capital of Aracan, in British Burmah, 90 m. SE. of Calcutta.

AL RAKIM, the dog that guarded the Seven Sleepers (q.v.), and that stood by them all through their long sleep.

ALABAMA, one of the United States of N. America, traversed by a river of the name, a little larger than England, highly fertile and a great cotton-growing country, and abounding in iron, coal, and marble; bounded on the W. by the Mississippi, on the N. by Tennessee, and the E. by Georgia.

ALABAMA, THE, a war vessel built at Birkenhead for the Confederates in the American Civil War, for the devastation done by which, according to the decision of a court of arbitration, the English Government had to pay heavy damages of three millions of money.

ALAOOQUE, MARIE, a French nun of a mystic tendency, the founder of the devotion of the Sacred Heart (1647-1690).

ALAD'DIN, one of the chiefs of the Assassins in the 13th century, better known by the name of the Old Man of the Mountain.

ALADDIN, a character in the "Arabian Nights," who became possessed of a wonderful lamp and a wonderful ring, by rubbing which together he could call two evil genii to do his bidding.

ALADINISTS, freethinkers among the Mohammedans.

ALAGO'AS, a maritime province of Brazil, N. of Pernambuco, with tropical products as well as fine timber and dye-woods.

ALAIN DE L'IELE, a professor of theology in the University of Paris, surnamed the Docteur universel (1114-1203).

ALAIS, a town at the foot of the Cevennes, in the centre of a mining district; once the stronghold of French Protestantism.

ALABASTRE, LUIGI, Italian poet and diplomatist, born at Florence (1495-1566).

ALAND ISLES, a group of 300 small islands in the Gulf of Bothnia, of which 80 are inhabited; fortified by Russia; restored to Sweden 1919.

ALANS, a barbarous horde from the East, who invaded W. Europe in the 4th and 5th centuries, but were partly exterminated and partly ousted by the Visigoths.

ALAR'CON Y MENDO'ZA, JUAN RUIZ DE, a Spanish dramatist born in Mexico, who, though depreciated by his contemporaries, ranks after 200 years of neglect among the foremost dramatic geniuses of Spain, next even to Cervantes and Lope de Vega; he was a humphack, had an offensive air of conceit, and was very unpopular; he wrote at least twenty dramas, some of which have been translated into French; d. in 1639.

AL'ARIO I., the king of the Visigoths, a man of noble birth, who, at the end of the 4th and beginning of the 5th century, ravaged Greece, invaded Italy, and took and pillaged Rome; died at Cosenza, in Calabria, in 412, at the early age of thirty-four.

ALARIC II., king of the Visigoths, whose dominions included all Gaul and most of Spain; defeated by the Franks at Poitiers, and killed by the hand of Clovis, their king, in 507.

ALARIC COTIN, Voltaire's nickname for Frederick the Great, the former in recognition of him as a warrior, the latter as a would-be litterateur, after an indifferent French poet of the name of Cotin.

ALAS'GO, JOEN, the uncle of Sigismund, king of Poland, and a zealous promoter in that country of the Reformation; the friend of Erasmus and Zwinglius (1495-1560).

ALAS'KA, an immense territory belonging to the U.S. by purchase from Russia, extending from British N. America to Behring Strait; it was the scene of the Gold Rush of 1896, prior to which the inhabitants, chiefly Indians and Eskimos, lived by hunting and fishing and by the export of salmon; seal fishery valuable.

ALASNAM, a hero figuring in the "Arabian Nights" as having erected eight statues of gold, and, in quest of a statue for a ninth unoccupied pedestal, finding what he wanted in the person of a beautiful woman for a wife.

ALASTOR, an avenging spirit in Greek mythology, given to tormenting families whose history has been stained by some crime.

ALAVA, the southernmost of the three Basque provinces of Spain, largest, but least populous; rich in minerals, and fertile in soil.

ALAYA, RICARDO DE, a Spanish general, born in Vittoria, joined the national party, and was aide-de-camp to the Duke of Wellington, becoming eventually ambassador to London and Paris (1771-1848).

ALBA LONGA, a city of Latium older than Rome.

ALBAICETE, a province in Spain, with a capital of same name, 178 m. SE. of Madrid.

ALBAN LAKE, near Alban Mount, 6 m. in circuit, occupying the basin of an extinct volcano, its surface 961 ft. above the sea-level.

ALBAN MOUNT, a small mountain overlooking Alba Longa.

ALBAN, ST., the first martyr in Britain to the Christian faith in 303; represented in art as carrying his head between his hands, having been beheaded.

ALBA TIZI, an Italian painter, a disciple of Caracci, born at Bologna; surnamed the Anacreon of painting; his pictures more distinguished for grace than vigour.

ALBA TILI, an illustrious Roman family, members of which attained the highest dignities in the Church, one, Clement XI., having been Pope.

ALBANI, EMILIE, adopted name of Marie Emma Lajeunesse, an operatic soprano singer. Of French-Canadian descent, she was born in Montreal, and made her opera debut at Milan at the age of 18. From 1872 to 1896 she appeared regularly at Covent Garden, and in 1911 made her farewell appearance at the London Albert Hall. Made a D.B.E. in 1925, she died five years later (1892-1930).

ALBA NIA, the former Turkish province of Scutari and parts of Kosovo and Yanina, with its coast on the Adriatic and having an area of 20,000 sq. m. It was declared independent by the Treaty of London in 1912, but was invaded by troops on both sides during the Great War. After the war the independence of the republic was guaranteed by the Supreme Council of the Allies.

ALBANO, LAKE OF, a small crater-like lake 15 m. SE. of Rome, near which rises the Castel Gandolfo, where the Pope has a villa.

ALBANY, the old Celtic name for the Scottish highlands. Also famous bachelor chambers off Piccadilly, where Gladstone and Macaulay, among others, were residents.

ALBANY, a town in W. Australia, on King George Sound, 261 m. SE. of Perth, a port of call for Australian liners; also the capital of the State of New York, on the Hudson River, a well-appointed city; seat of justice for the State, with a large trade and numerous manufactures.

ALBANY, COUNTESS OF, wife of English pretender, Prince Charles Stuart, a dissolute woman (1758-1824).

ALBATROSS, the largest and strongest of sea-birds, that ranges over the southern seas, often seen far from land; it is a superstition among sailors that it is disastrous to shoot one.

ALBERONI, an Italian of humble birth, became a Cardinal of the Church and Prime Minister to Philip V. of Spain, wrought hard to restore Spain to its ancient grandeur, was defeated in his project by the quadruple alliance of England, France, Austria, and Holland, and obliged to retire (1684-1752).

ALBERT, archbishop of Mainz, a dignity granted him by Pope Leo X. at the ransom of £15,000, which he was unable to pay, and which, as the Pope needed it for building St. Peter's, he borrowed, the Pope granting him the power to sell indulgences in order to repay the loan, in which traffic Tiesel was his chief salesman, a trade which roused the wrath of Luther and provoked the German Reformation (1450-1545).

ALBERT, the last Grandmaster of the Teutonic knights, who being "religious in an eminent degree and shaken in his belief," took seasonally to Protestantism and the cause under the influence of Luther, who advised him to declare himself Duke of Prussia, under the wing of Sigismund of Poland, in defiance of the Teutonic order as no longer worthy of bed and board on the earth, so doing, became founder of the Prussian State (1490-1568).

ALBERT, PRINCE, second son of Ernest, Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha; born Aug. 26, 1819, he became the consort of Queen Victoria in 1840, and from his prudence and tact was held in high honour by the whole community; he died at Windsor of typhoid fever in 1861 (1819-1861).

ALBERT, ST., bishop of Liège, was assassinated by the emissaries of the Emperor Henry VI. in 1195. Festival, Nov. 21.

ALBERT I., emperor of Germany from 1298 to 1308, eldest son of Rudolf of Hapsburg, "a most clutching, strong-fisted, dreadfully hungry, tough, and un-beautiful man, whom his nephew at last had to assassinate, and did assassinate, as he crossed the river Rhine with him in a boat, May 1, 1308."

ALBERT II., a successor, "who got three crowns—Hungary, Bohemia, and the Imperial—in one year, and we hope a fourth," says the old historian, "which was a heavenly and eternal one," for he died the next year, 1439.

ALBERT, King of the Belgians. Born in Brussels, a younger brother of King Leopold II., he became Count of Flanders in 1905 on the death of his father, and after travelling succeeded to the throne in 1909. A popular monarch, the events of 1914 established his reputation in the eyes of the world. He took command of the Belgian forces after the German invasion, and in 1918 led an offensive of the Allies which ended in the recapture of the Belgian coast (1875-).

ALBERT, a French village in the department of the Somme on the Ancre, which was used as a base by British troops in the Great War.

ALBERT MEDAL, a medal of gold and of bronze, instituted in 1866, awarded to civilians for acts of heroism by sea or land.

ALBERT MEMORIAL, a monument in memory of Albert the Prince Consort, husband of Queen Victoria, erected in Kensington Gardens. A large Gothic work, it cost £120,000 and is highly ornamented in typical Victorian style. It was designed by Sir Gilbert Scott.

ALBERT NYANZA, a lake in Equatorial Africa, in the Nile basin, discovered by Sir Samuel Baker in 1864, 150 m. long by 40 broad, and 2500 ft. above sea-level.

ALBERTA, a fertile Province of Canada with large forests, on the E. slope of the Rocky Mountains, the south abounding in cattle ranches, and the mountainous districts in minerals; produces wheat and coal.

ALBERTI, an illustrious Florentine family, rivals of the Medici and the Albizzi.

ALBERTUS MAGNUS, one of the greatest of the scholastic philosophers and theologians of the Middle Ages, teacher of Thomas Aquinas, supreme in knowledge of the arts and sciences of the time, and regarded by his contemporaries in consequence as a sorcerer (1190-1280).

ALBI, a town of some antiquity and note in S. of France, 22 m. NE. of Toulouse.

ALBIGENES, a religious sect, odious, as heretical, to the Church, which sprang up about Albi, in the S. of France, in the 12th century, against which Pope Innocent III. proclaimed a crusade, which was carried on by Simon de Montfort in the 13th century, and by the Inquisition afterwards, to their utter annihilation.

ALBINOS, persons or animals with white hair, pale skin, and pink eyes, owing to their skin lacking the natural pigment. The eyes are often too weak to bear full light.

ALBION, a white cliff, the ancient name of Great Britain.

ALBOIN, king of the Lombards in the 6th century, from 561 to 575; invaded Italy as far as the Tiber, and set up his capital in Pavia; incurred the resentment of his wife, who had him assassinated for forcing her to drink wine out of the skull of her father.

ALBORAK, a wonderful horse of Mohammed, an incarnation of the lightning as his steed.

ALBORNOZ, a Spanish statesman, archbishop of Toledo, a bold defender of the faith against the Moors and a plain-spoken man in the interest of Christianity (1810-1867).

ALBERTI, a powerful Florentine family, rivals of the Medici and the Alberti.

ALBUERA, a Spanish village 12 m. SE. of Badajoz, scene of a victory (May 16, 1811) of General Beresford over Marshal Soult.

ALBUFERA, a lake on the coast of Spain, 7 m. S. of Valencia, near which Marshal Suchet gained a victory over the English in 1811.

ALBULA, Swiss mountain pass in the canton of Grisons, 7595 ft. high.

ALBUMEN, an amorphous substance, a constituent of plants and animals, and found nearly pure in the yolk of an egg and in the serum of the blood. See ALBUQUERQUE, ALFONSO D., a celebrated Portuguese patriot and navigator, the founder of the Portuguese power in India, who, after securing a footing in India for Portugal that he sought for, settled in Goa, where his recall at the instance of jealous rivals at home gave him such a shock that he died of a broken heart just as he was leaving. The Indians long remembered his benign rule, and used to visit his tomb to pray him to deliver them from the oppression of his successors (1453-1515).

ALBYN, ancient Celtic name of Scotland.

ALCEUS OF MITYLENE, a Greek lyric poet, an aristocrat by birth, a contemporary and an alleged lover of Sappho, and much admired by Horace; flourished about 600 B.C.

ALCALA DE HENARES, a town in Spain, the birthplace of Cervantes, 21 m. E. of Madrid, long the seat of a famous university founded by Cardinal Ximenes.

ALCAN'TARA, a town of Spain, on the Tagus, near Portugal, with a bridge of six arches, 670 ft. long and 210 ft. high, built in honour of Trajan in 104. The Order of Alcantara, a religious and military order, was established in 1176 here, for defence against the Moors, and was suppressed in 1835.

ALOESTE, the chief character in Molière's "Misanthrope."

ALCES TIS, the wife of Admetus, who gave herself up to death to save her husband. Hercules descended to the lower world and brought her back. She is the subject of one of the tragedies of Euripides.

ALCHEMY, the early analysis of substances which has in modern times developed into chemistry, and which aimed chiefly at the discovery of the philosopher's stone, of a universal solvent, and of the elixir of life.

ALCIBIADES, an Athenian of high birth, and related to Pericles, possessed of a handsome person, brilliant abilities, and great wealth, but of a wayward temper and depraved, whom Socrates tried hard to win over to virtue, but failed. He involved his country in a rash expedition against Sicily, served and betrayed it by turns in the Peloponnesian war, and died by assassination in exile (450-404 B.C.).

ALCIBES, the grandson of Alceus, a patronymic of Hercules.

ALCINOÛS, a king of the Phæaciens, the father of Nausicaa, who figures in the Odyssey as the host of Ulysses, who had been shipwrecked on his shore.

ALCIRA, a walled town in Spain, on an island 22 m. SW. of Valencia.

ALCMAN, an early Greek lyric poet, born at Sardis.

ALCONE, the wife of Amphitryon and the mother of Hercules.

ALCONIDES, a powerful Athenian family, of which Pericles and Alcibiades were members, who professed to be descended from Alcmæon, the grandson of Nestor.

ALCOCK, JOHN, an eminent ecclesiastic of the reign of Edward IV., distinguished for his love of learning and learned men; d. 1500.

ALCOCK, SIR JOHN, with Sir A. W. Brown made the first trans-Atlantic aeroplane flight from Newfoundland to Clifden, Ireland, in 16 hours, on June 14, 1919, a feat for which he was knighted. During the Great War he had been taken prisoner by the Turks when in the Royal Naval Air Service. He died as a result of a flying accident six months after the Atlantic crossing (1892-1919).

ALCOHOLS, name given to a series of neutral organic substances, with similar chemical properties, some of which are liquids and some solids. Common or ethyl alcohol is obtained by the fermentation of sugars and is the basis of all intoxicating liquors. It is used extensively as a solvent for organic substances. Methyl alcohol or wood spirit, prepared by the distillation of wood, is mixed with ethyl alcohol in methylated spirits, of which it forms 10 per cent.

ALCOBAC, See FORAY.

ALCOOT, LOUISA MAY, American authoress, who acted as a nurse to the wounded during the Civil War; her works, of which "Little Women" is most widely known, were addressed to the young (1832-1888).

ALCOY, a town in Spain, N. of Alcant; staple manufacture, paper.

AL'OUIN, a learned Englishman, a disciple of Bede; invited by Charlemagne to introduce scholarly culture into the empire and establish libraries and schools of learning; was one of those men whose work lies more in what they influence others to do than in what they do themselves (735-804).

ALCYONE, daughter of Æolus, who threw herself into the sea after her husband, who had perished in shipwreck, and was changed into the kingfisher.

ALDEBARAN, a conspicuous star of first magnitude in constellation Taurus; a "giant" of diameter 34 million miles and composed of material of very low density.

ALDEHYDES, a family of organic substances obtained by the oxidation of different alcohols. Formaldehyde is used as an antiseptic in the solution known as formalin. Acetaldehyde is a colourless liquid with an unpleasant smell, which polymerises to give Paraldehyde, which is used in medicine as a soporific.

ALDERNEY, one of the Channel Islands, 3 or 4 m. long by 2 broad, celebrated for its breed of cows; separated from Cape de la Hague by the dangerous Race of Alderney.

ALDERSHOT, a permanent camp, established in 1855, for instruction in military manoeuvres, on a moorland 35 m. SW. of London.

ALDINE EDITIONS, editions, chiefly of the classics, issued from the press of Aldus Manutius in Venice in the 16th century, and remarkable for the correctness of the text and the beauty and clearness of the printing.

ALDINGAR, SIR, legendary character, the steward of Eleanor, wife of Henry II., who accused her of infidelity, and offered to substantiate the charge by combat, when an angel in the form of a child appeared and certified her innocence.

ALDOBRANDINI, a Florentine juriconsult (1500-1558).

ALDRED, bishop of Worcester in the reign of Edward the Confessor, made a pilgrimage to Jerusalem, became archbishop of York, and crowned the last of the Saxons and the first of the Norman kings of England; d. 1063.

ALDRICH, HENRY, dean of Oxford, an accomplished ecclesiastic; was a skilful musician, and composed many services for the Church; wrote a system of logic, long in use in Oxford University (1647-1710).

ALDRICH, THOMAS BAILEY, American poet and writer; former editor of The Atlantic Monthly (1836-1907).

ALDROVANDI, ULYSSES, a famous Italian naturalist of Bologna, who collected an immense body of interesting facts in natural history, published partly in his lifetime and partly after his death (1522-1607).

ALDUS MANUTIUS, or ALDO MANUZIO, an Italian printer, born at Bassano, established a printing-office in Venice in 1488, issued the celebrated Aldine Editions of the classics, and invented the italic type, for the exclusive use of which for many years he obtained a patent, though the honour of the invention is more probably due to his typesetter, Francesco de Bologna, than to him (1447-1515).

ALE-COONER, an officer formerly appointed to assay ale measures.

ALECTO, one of the three Eumenides or Furies.

ALEMÁN, MATEO, a Spanish novelist, author of the celebrated romance "Juanan de Alfaroche," which in 5 years ran through 26 editions, was translated several times into French; died in Mexico in 1610.

ALEMANNI, a confederacy of tribes which appeared on the banks of the Rhine in the 3rd cent., and for long gave no small trouble to Rome, but whose incursions were arrested, first by Maximinus, and finally by Clovis in 496, who made them subject to the Franks, hence the modern names in French for Germany and the Germans.

ALEMTEJO, a southern province of Portugal; soil fertile to the east.

ALENCON, a town in the dep. of Orne, 105 m. W. of Paris, once famous for its lace.

ALENCON, COUNTS AND DUKES OF, a title borne by several members of the house of Valois—e.g. Charles of Valois, who fell at Crécy (1346); Jean IV., who fell at Agincourt (1415).

ALEPPO, a city in Northern Syria, one of the finest in the East, once one of the greatest trading centres in the world.

ALESIA, a strong place in the E. of Gaul, which, as situated on a hill and garrisoned by 80,000 Gauls, cost Caesar no small trouble to take.

ALESTUS, ALEXANDER, a noted Reformer, born in Edinburgh, converted to Protestantism by Patrick Hamilton; was driven first from Scotland and then from England, till he settled as a theological professor in Germany, and took an active part in the Reformation there (1600-1663).

ALESSANDRIA, a strongly fortified and stirring town on the Tenaro, in Northern Italy, the centre of 8 railways, 55 m. SE. of Turin.

ALESSI, GALEAZZO, architect, born at Perugia, architect of the monastery and church of the Escorial (c. 1500-1572).

ALETSCH GLACIER, THE, the largest of the glaciers of the Alps, which descends round the south of the Jungfrau into the valley of the Upper Rhône.

ALEUTIAN ISLANDS, a chain of volcanic islands, 150 in number, stretching over the N. Pacific from Alaska, in N. America, to Kamchatka, in Asia, with fishing and sealing industries.

ALEXANDER THE GREAT, the king of Macedonia, son of Philip by Olympias, daughter of Neoptolemus, king of Epirus; born at Pella, 356 a.c.; had the philosopher Aristotle for tutor, and being instructed by him in all kinds of serviceable knowledge, ascended the throne on the death of his father, at the age of 20; after subduing Greece, had himself proclaimed generalissimo of the Greeks against the Persians, and in 2 years after his accession crossed the Hellespont, followed by 30,000 foot and 5000 horse; with these conquered the army of Darius the Persian at Granicus in 334, and at Issus in 333; subdued the principal cities of Syria, overran Egypt, and crossing the Euphrates and Tigris, routed the Persians at Arbela; hurrying on farther, he swept everything before him, till the Macedonians refusing to advance, he returned to Babylon, when he suddenly fell ill of fever, and in eleven days died at the early age of 32. He is said to have slept every night with his Homer and his sword under his pillow, and the inspiring idea of his life is defined to have been the right of Greek intelligence to override and rule the uselessly glittering barbarity of the East.

ALEXANDER, ST., patriarch of Alexandria from 311 to 326, contributed to bring about the condemnation of Arius at the Council of Nice; festival, Feb. 26.

ALEXANDER, SOLOMON, first Protestant bishop of Jerusalem, of Jewish birth, died during a journey to Cairo (1799-1845).

ALEXANDER III., pope, successor to Adrian IV., an able man, whose election Barbarossa at first opposed, but finally assented to; took the part of Thomas à Becket against Henry II. and canonised him, as also St. Bernard. Pope from 1159 to 1181.

ALEXANDER VI., called Borgia from his mother a Spaniard by birth, obtained the popehood by bribery in 1492 in subversion to Innocent VIII., lived a licentious life and had several children, among others the celebrated Lucretia and the infamous Caesar Borgia; d. 1503, after a career of crime, not without suspicion of poison. In addition to Alexanders III. and VI., six of the name were popes: Alexander I., pope from 108 to 117; Alexander II., pope from 1061 to 1073; Alexander IV., pope from 1254 to 1261; Alexander V., pope from 1409 to 1410; Alexander VII., pope from 1663 to 1667, who was forced to kiss his hand to Louis XIV.; Alexander VIII., pope from 1689 to 1691.

ALEXANDER I., king of Scotland, son of Malcolm Canmore and Margaret, sister of Edgar Atheling, a vigorous prince, surnamed on that account The Fierce; subdued a rising in the North, and stood stoutly out in defence of the independent rights of both Crown and Church against the claim of supremacy over both on the part of England; d. 1124.

ALEXANDER II., of Scotland, successor of William the Lion, his father, a just and wise ruler, aided the English barons against John, and married Joan, the sister of Henry III.; d. 1249.

ALEXANDER III., son of the preceding, married a daughter of Henry III., sided with him against the barons, successfully resisted the invasion of Haco, king of Norway, and on the conclusion of peace gave his daughter in marriage to Haco's successor Eric; accidentally killed by falling over a cliff near Kinghorn when hunting in 1285.

ALEXANDER I., emperor of Russia, son and successor of Paul I., took part in the European strife against the encroachments of Napoleon, was present at the battle of Austerlitz, fought the French at Pultusk and Eylau, was defeated at Friedland, had an interview with Napoleon at Tilsit in 1813, entered into a coalition with the other Powers against France, which ended in the capture of Paris and the abdication of Napoleon in 1814. Under his reign Russia rose into political importance in Europe (1777-1825).

ALEXANDER II., emperor of Russia, son and successor of Nicholas I., fell heir to the throne while the siege of Sebastopol was going on; on the conclusion of a peace applied himself to reform in the state and the consolidation and extension of the empire. His reign is distinguished by a ukase decreed in 1861 the emancipation of the serfs, numbering 23 millions, by the extension of the empire in the Caucasus and Central Asia, and by the war with Turkey in the interest of the Slavs in 1877-78, which was ended by the peace of San Stephano, revised by the treaty of Berlin. His later years were clouded with great anxiety, owing to the spread of Nihilism, and he was killed by a bomb thrown at him by a Nihilist (1818-1881).

ALEXANDER III., emperor of Russia, son of the preceding, followed in the footsteps of his father, and showed a marked disposition to live on terms of peace with the other Powers; his reign not distinguished by any very remarkable event. Nicholas II. was his son and successor (1845-1894).

ALEXANDER I., king of Serbia, b. 1876; d. 1903.

ALEXANDER, king of Jugo-Slavia, son of King Peter of Serbia, he took an active part in the Balkan wars and in the Great War led the Serbian forces. In 1918 he became king of the newly formed state of Jugo-Slavia (1888-).

ALEXANDER, SIR GEORGE, English actor. After a short business career he made his debut in 1880 under Irving at the Lyceum, taking a theatre himself nine years later. From 1891 to the end of his life he owned the St. James's. Modern comedy was his forte, and he played fashionable parts in Pinero and Wilde plays (1858-1918).

ALEXANDER NEVSKY, grand-duke of Russia, conquered the Swedes, the Danes, and the Teutonic knights on the banks of the Neva, freed Russia from tribute to the Mongols; is one of the saints of the Russian Church (1218-1263).

ALEXANDER OF HALEB, the Doctor irrefragabilis of the Schools, an English ecclesiastic, a member of the Franciscan order, who in his "Summa Universæ Theologiæ" formulated, by severe rigour of Aristotelian logic, the theological principles and ecclesiastical rites of the Romish Church; d. in 1245.

ALEXANDER OF PARIS, a Norman poet of the 16th century, who wrote a poem on Alexander the Great in twelve-syllabled lines, called after him Alexandrides.

ALEXANDER OF THE NORTH, Charles XII. of Sweden.

ALEXANDER SEVERUS, a Roman emperor, a wise, virtuous, and pious prince; conquered Artaxerxes, king of Persia, in an expedition against him, but setting out against the Germans, who were causing trouble on the frontiers of the empire, fell a victim, with his mother, to an insurrection among his troops not far from Mainz (205-235).

ALEXANDRA, QUEEN, wife of Edward VII. and mother of King George V. She was a daughter of King Christian IX. of Denmark, and married in 1868 (1844-1925).

ALEXANDRIA, a world-famous city, the chief port of Egypt, founded by Alexander the Great in 332 B.C. at one time a great centre of learning, and in possession of the largest library of antique literature in the world, dispersed during the wars of Caesar and Theodosius; at one time a place of great commerce, but that has very materially decayed since the opening of the Suez Canal. Alexandria, from its intimate connection with both East and West, gave birth in early times to a speculative philosophy which drew its principles from eastern as well as western sources, and which was at its height on the first encounter of these elements.

ALEXANDRIA, a town on the Potomac, 7 m. S. of Washington, accessible to vessels of the largest size; also a thriving town on the river Leven, 8 m. N. of Dumbarton.

ALEXANDRIAN CODEX, an MS. on parchment of the Septuagint Scriptures in Greek in uncial letters, which belonged to the library of the patriarchs of Alexandria.

ALEXANDRIAN LIBRARY, destroyed in Caesar's wars; erroneously reported to have been burnt by the Caliph Omar in 642; said to have contained 700,000 volumes.

ALEXANDRIA LAKE, a lake in Australia into which the river Murray flows.

ALEXANDRINE PHILOSOPHY, a Gnostic philosophy, combining eastern with western forms of thought.

ALEXANDRINES. See ALEXANDER OF PARIE.

ALEXANDROPOL, the largest town in the Erivan district of Russian Armenia, and a fortress of great strength.

ALEXIEFF, MICHAEL VASSILIEVITCH, Russian general. The son of a private, he began his military career in the Russo-Turkish war of 1877, and in the Russo-Japanese war of 1904 he acted as quartermaster-general and chief of staff to one of the Russian armies. Until the war took command of the Russian troops in the Great War Alexieff was chief of staff to General Ivanoff, but he became the real leader of the army under the czar, a position he held until the first revolution of 1917, when he was replaced by Brussiloff. On the ascendancy of Lenin and Trotsky he retired and endeavoured to organise a counter-revolution, dying before his plans could materialise (1855-1918).

ALEXIS, ST., the patron saint of beggars and pilgrims, represented in art with a staff and in a pilgrim's habit; sometimes lying on a mat, with a letter in his hand, dying.

ALEXIS MICHAELOVITCH, czar of Russia, the father of Peter the Great, the first czar who acted on the policy of cultivating friendly relations with other European states (1630-1677).

ALEXIS PETROVITCH, son of Peter the Great, conspired against his father as he had broken the heart of his mother, and was condemned to death; after his trial by secret judges he was found dead in prison (1695-1718).

ALEXIUS COMNENUS, emperor of the East, began life as a soldier, was a great favourite with the troops, who, in a period of anarchy, raised him to the throne at the period of the first crusade, when the empire was infested by Turks on the one hand and Normans on the other, while the crusaders who passed through his territory proved more troublesome than either. He managed to hold the empire together in spite of these troubles, and to stave off the doom that impended all through his reign of thirty-seven years (1048-1118).

AL-FADUR, the All-Father or uncreated supreme being in Norse mythology.

ALFARA'BI, an Arabian philosopher of the 10th century, had Avicenna for a disciple, wrote on various subjects, and was the first to attempt an encyclopaedic work.

ALFIERI, VITTORIO, COUNT, an Italian dramatist, spent his youth in dissipation before turning to the dramatic art; on the success of "Cleopatra," met at Florence with the Countess of Albany, the wife of Charles Edward Stuart, on whose death he married her; was at Paris when the Revolution broke out, and returned to Florence, where he died and was buried. Tragedy was his forte as a dramatist (1749-1803).

ALFONSINE TABLES, astronomical tables drawn up at Toledo by order of Alfonso X. in 1252 to correct the anomalies in the Ptolemaic tables; they divided the year into 365 days, 5 hours, 49 minutes, 16 seconds.

ALFONSO I., the "Conqueror," founder of the kingdom of Portugal, was the first king, originally only count, as his father before him; in that capacity took up arms against the Moors, and defeating them had himself proclaimed king on the field of battle, a title confirmed to him by the Pope and made good by his practically subjecting all Portugal to his sway (1110-1185).

ALFONSO X., the Wise, or the Astronomer, king of Castile and Leon, celebrated as an astronomer and a philosopher; after various successes over the Moors, first one son and then another rose against him and drove him from the throne; died of chagrin at Seville two years later. His fame connects itself with the preparation of the Alfonsine Tables, and the remark that "the universe seemed a crank machine, and it was a pity the Creator had not taken advice." It was a saying of his, "old wood to burn, old books to read, old wine to drink, and old friends to converse with" (1220-1284).

ALFONSO XII., surnamed the Great, king of Asturias, ascended the throne in 1868, fought against and gained numerous victories over the Moors; the members of his family rose against him and compelled him to abdicate, but on a fresh incursion of the Moors he came forth from his retreat and triumphantly beat them back; died in Zamora, 910.

ALFORD, MICHAEL, a learned English Jesuit, left two great works, "Britannia Illustrata" and "Annales Ecclesiastici et Civiles Britannorum."

ALFRED THE GREAT, king of the West Saxons, the most celebrated and the greatest of all the Saxon kings. His troubles were with the Danes, who at the time of his accession defeated the whole country north of the Thames; with these he fought nine battles with varied success, till after a lull of some years he was surprised by Guthrum, then king, in 878, and driven to seek refuge on the island of Athelney. Not long after this he left his retreat and engaged Guthrum at Edington, and after defeating him formed a treaty with him, which he never showed any disposition to break. After this Alfred devoted himself to legislation, the administration of government, and the encouragement of learning, being a man of letters himself. England owes much to him both as a man and a ruler, and it was he who in the creation of a fleet laid the first foundation of her greatness as monarch of the deep. His literary works were translations of the "General History" of Orosius, the "Ecclesiastical History" of Bede, Boethius's "Consolations of Philosophy" and the "Cura Pastoralis" of Pope Gregory, all executed for the edification of his subjects (849-901).

ALGEE, sea-weeds and plants of the same order under fresh water as well as salt; they are flowerless, stemless, and cellular throughout.

ALGARBI, an Italian sculptor of note, born at Bologna; his greatest work is an alto-relievo, the largest existing, of Pope Leo restraining Attila from marching on Rome (1602-1654).

ALGAROTTI, FRANCESCO, COUNT, a clever Italian author, born at Venice, whom, for his wit, Frederick the Great patronised; "one of the first beaux esprits of the age," according to Wilhelmina, Frederick's sister (1712-1764).

ALGARVE, the southernmost province of Portugal, hilly, but traversed with rich valleys, which yield olives, vines, oranges, &c.

ALGERIA, a universal arithmetic of Arabian origin or Arabian transmission, in which symbols are employed to denote operations, and letters to represent number and quantity.

ALGERIA, in the N. of Africa, belongs to France, stretches between Morocco on the W. and Tripoli and Tunis on the E., the country being divided into the Tell along the sea-coast, which is fertile, the Atlas Highlands overlooking it on the E., on the southern slopes of which are marshy lakes called "shotts," on which alfa grows wild; into the Steppe, a pastoral region; and, thirdly, into the Sahara beyond, rendered habitable here and there by the creation of artesian wells; its extent nearly equal in area to that of France, with a population numbering about four millions, of which only a quarter of a million is French. The country is divided into Departments, of which Algiers, Oran, and Constantine are the respective capitals. It has been successively under the sway of the Carthaginians, the Romans, the Vandals, the Arabs, the Byzantines, and the Berbers, which last were in the 16th century supplanted by the Turks. At the end of this period it became a nest of pirates, against whom a succession of expeditions were sent from several countries of Europe, but it was only with the conquest of it by the French in 1830 that this state of things was brought to an end.

ALGESIRAS, a town and port in Spain on the Bay of Gibraltar, 5 m. across the bay; for centuries a stronghold of the Moors, but taken from them by Alfonso IX. after a siege of twenty months. Algeiras Bay was the scene of a battle between the French and English in 1801.

ALGIEERS, the capital of Algeria, founded by the Arabs in 985, called the "silver city," from the glistening white of its buildings as seen sloping up from the sea, presenting a striking appearance; was for centuries under its Bey the headquarters of piracy in the Mediterranean, which only began to cease when Lord Exmouth bombarded the town and destroyed the fleet in the harbour. Since it fell into the hands of the French the city has been greatly improved, the fortifications have been strengthened, and its neighbourhood has become a frequent resort of English people in winter.

ALGINE, a viscous gum obtained from certain sea-weeds, used as size for textile fabrics, and for thickening soups and jellies.

ALGOA BAY, an inlet at the E. of Cape Colony, 20 m. wide, on which Port Elizabeth stands, 425 m. E. of the Cape of Good Hope.

ALGOL, a variable double star in Perseus, normally of second magnitude, but fading to fourth magnitude for about 20 minutes at intervals of three days. The variation in apparent brightness is due to the eclipses of the brighter member by the fainter, which revolves round it.

ALGONQUINS, one of the three aboriginal races of N. American Indians, originally occupying nearly the whole region from the Churchill and Hudson Bay southward to N. Carolina, and from the E. of the Rocky Mts. to Newfoundland; the language they speak has been divided into five dialects.

ALHAMBRA (Red Castle), an ancient palace and stronghold of the Moorish kings of Granada, founded by Muhammad II. in 1213, decorated with gorgeous arabesques by Yusuf I. (1345), erected on the crest of a hill which overlooks Granada; has suffered from neglect, bad usage, and earthquake.

AL, the cousin of Mohammed, and one of his first followers at the age of sixteen. "a noble-minded creature, full of affection and fiery daring. Something chivalrous in him; brave as a lion; yet with a grace, a truth and affection worthy of Christian knight-hood." Became Caliph in 656; died by assassination in the Mosque at Bagdad; the Shi'ites yearly commemorate his death. See Carlyle's "Heroes."

ALI BABA. See BABA, ALI.

ALI PASHA, pasha of Janina, a bold and crafty Albanian, able man, and notorious for his cruelty as well as craft; alternately gained the favour of the Porte and lost it by the alliances he formed with hostile powers, until the Sultan sentenced him to deposition, and sent Hassan Pasha to demand his head; he offered violent resistance, but being overpowered at length surrendered, when his head was severed from his body and sent to Constantinople (1741-1822).

ALKANTEE, the third seaport-town in Spain, with a spacious harbour and strongly fortified, in a province of the same name on the Mediterranean.

EL, a town with a fort between Agra and the garrison of which mutilated in 1857.

EL, the family name of Dante.

ELTIA, an affluent on the right bank of the Congo, in French territory.

LYMBARTY CANAL, a passage 5 or 6 times the length of the body, lined throughout with mucous membrane, extends from the mouth to the anus.

and includes mouth, fauces, pharynx, cesophagus, stomach, and small and large intestines.

ALISON, ARCHIBALD, an Episcopal clergyman in Edinburgh, of which he was a native, best known for his "Essay on the Nature and Principles of Taste" (1757-1839).

ALISON, SIR ARCHIBALD, son of the preceding, a lawyer who held several prominent legal appointments, and a historian, his great work being a "Modern History of Europe from the French Revolution to the Fall of Napoleon," afterwards extended to the "Accession of Louis Napoleon" (1792-1867).

ALISON, W. PULTENEY, brother of the preceding, professor of medicine in Edinburgh University, and a philanthropist (1790-1859).

ALI WAL, a village in the Punjab, on the Sutlej, where Sir Harry Smith gained a brilliant victory over the Sikhs, who were provided with forces in superior numbers, in 1846.

AL-KAHEST, the presumed universal solvent of the alchemists; a term invented by Paracelsus.

ALKALINE EARTHS, name given to the oxides of the metals calcium, barium, and strontium, which are distinguished from the alkalis soda and potash by their small solubility in water.

ALKALIS, bodies which combine with acids to form salts, are soluble in water, and turn red litmus solution blue, e.g. potash, soda, lithia, and ammonia solution.

ALKALOIDS, nitrogenous organic substances with alkaline properties; many of them are poisonous and are used for medical purposes. They include piperine, cocaine, nicotine, atropine, cocaine, quinine, morphine, strychnine, and brucine.

ALEMAAR, the capital of N. Holland, 25 m. NW. of Amsterdam, with a large trade in cattle, grain, and cheese.

ALEMEER, HENRIK VAN, the reputed author of the first German version of "Reynard the Fox."

ALL THE TALENTS, ADMINISTRATION OF, a ministry formed by Lord Grenville and Fox on the death of Pitt in 1806.

ALLAH, the Adorable, the Arab name for God, adopted by the Mohammedans as the name of the one God.

ALLAHABAD, the City of God, a central city of British India, on the confluence of the Ganges and the Jumna, 550 m. from Calcutta, and on the railway between that city and Bombay.

ALLAN, DAVID, a Scottish portrait and historical painter, born at Alloa; illustrated Ramsay's "Gentle Shepherd"; his greatest work is the "Origin of Painting," now in the National Gallery at Edinburgh (1744-1796).

ALLAN, SIR WILLIAM, a distinguished Scottish historical painter, born at Edinburgh, many of his paintings being on national subjects; he was a friend of Scott who patronised his work, and in succession to Wilkie president of the Royal Scottish Academy; painted "Circassian Captives" and "Slave-Market at Constantinople" (1782-1850).

ALLANTOIS, a membrane enveloping the foetus in mammals, birds, and reptiles at a very early stage.

ALLARD, a French general, entered the service of Runjeet Singh at Lahore, trained his troops in European war tactics, and served him against the Afghans; died at Peshawar (1785-1839).

ALLBUTT, SIR THOMAS CLIFFORD, physician, Regius Professor at Cambridge from 1892 till death. He carried out much research in all branches of medical science, especially in connection with the nervous system (1836-1925).

ALLEGHANY, a manufacturing city in Pennsylvania, on the Ohio, opposite Pittsburg, of which it is a kind of suburb.

ALLEGHANY MOUNTAINS, a range in the Appalachian system in U.S., extending from Pennsylvania to N. Carolina; do not exceed 2400 ft. in height, run parallel with the Atlantic coast, and form the watershed between the Atlantic rivers and the Mississippi.

ALLEGORICAL INTERPRETATION, assigning a higher than a literal interpretation to the Scripture record of things, in particular the Old Testament story.

ALLEGORY, a figurative mode of representation, in which a subject of a higher spiritual order is described in terms of that of a lower which resembles it in properties and circumstances, the principal subject being so kept out of view that we are left to construe the drift of it from the resemblance of the secondary to the primary subject.

ALLEGRI, the family name of Correggio; the name of an Italian composer, born at Rome, the author of a still celebrated "Miserere" (1680-1652).

AL LEINE, JOSEPH, a Puritan writer, author of a book once much in favour among religious people, entitled "Alarm to the Unconverted" (1634-1668).

ALLEN, BOG OF, a literary expense of poet E. of the Shannon, in King's Co. and Kildare, Ireland; Lough of, an expansion of the waters of the Shannon.

ALLEN, CHARLES GRANT, novelist. Born in Canada, he was educated at Birmingham and Oxford, and later became a professor in Jamaica. He wrote on biological subjects, though it is as a novelist he is chiefly remembered, his most famous book being "The Woman Who Did," which caused a considerable sensation on its publication in 1895 (1848-1899).

ALLEN, ETHAN, one of the early champions of American independence, taken prisoner in a raid into Canada; wrote a defence of deism and rational belief (1789-1789).

ALLEN, JOHN, an M.D. of Scottish birth, and a contributor to the Edinburgh Review (1771-1843).

ALLENEY, EDMUND HENRY HYNMAN, VISCOUNT, English general. He entered the Army in 1879, fought in the Zulu and Boer wars, and was British cavalry leader at Mons in 1914 and on the Somme. In 1917 he took command of the forces in Egypt, leading the offensive that won Palestine from the Turks, and by capturing Jerusalem achieved the object for which the Crusaders had fought six centuries earlier. After the war he became a field-marshal and High Commissioner for Egypt for some years (1861-).

ALLENTOWN, a town on the Lehigh River, 50 m. N.W. of Philadelphia, the great centre of the iron trade in the U.S.

ALLELION, in heraldry, an eagle with expanded wings the points turned downwards, and without beak or feet.

ALLEYN, EDWARD, a celebrated actor in the reigns of Elizabeth and James I., the founder of Dulwich College; as theatrical manager and proprietor acquired much wealth; bear-master to James I.; was a contemporary of Shakespeare (1566-1626).

AL'LIA, a stream flowing into the Tiber 11 m. from Rome, where the Romans were defeated by the Gauls under Brennus, 387 B.C.

ALLIANCE, THE TRIPLE, in 1668, between England, Holland, and Sweden against Louis XIV.; the Quadruple, in 1718, between France, England, Holland, and the Empire to maintain the treaty of Utrecht; the Holy, in 1816, between Russia, Austria, and Prussia against Liberal ideas; the Triple, in 1872, between Germany, Austria, and Russia, at the instigation of Bismarck, from which Russia withdrew in 1896, when Italy stepped into her place. Under it the signatories in 1887 guaranteed the integrity of their respective territories. It was broken up at the end of the Great War, at the outbreak of which in 1914 Italy withdrew.

ALLIER, a confluent of the river Loire, in France, near Nevers; also the department through which it flows.

ALLIES, the name given to the confederate Powers who in 1814 and 1815 entered France and restored the Bourbons. In the Great War it meant the nations fighting against the Central Powers, viz. Britain, France, Belgium, Russia, Italy, Japan, Servia, Montenegro, Albania, Rumania, Greece, Portugal, Cuba, Panama, Siam, China, Brazil, and the United States.

ALLIGATOR, a N. American fresh-water reptile of the crocodile species, but differing from the true crocodile in several features; it is numerous in the Mississippi and the lakes and rivers of Louisiana and Carolina; subsists on fish, and though timid, is dangerous when attacked.

ALLINGHAM, WILLIAM, a poet and journalist, born in Ireland, of English origin; his most celebrated works are "Day and Night Songs" and "Laurence Bloomfield in Ireland"; was for a time editor of Fraser's Magazine (1824-1839).

ALLMAN, GEORGE J., professor of natural history in Edinburgh, President of the British Association 1879, and an eminent naturalist; born in Ireland (1812-1898).

ALLOA, a thriving seaport on north bank of the Forth, in Clackmannan, 6 m. below Stirling, famous for its ale.

ALLOB ROGES, a Celtic race troublesome to the Romans, who occupied the country between the Rhone and the Lake of Geneva, corresponding to Dauphiné and Savoy.

ALLOPATHY, in opposition to homoeopathy, the treatment of disease by producing a condition of the system different from or opposite to the condition essential to the disease to be cured.

ALLOTROPY, the phenomenon of a chemical substance being found in two or more entirely different forms, e.g. charcoal, graphite, and diamond are all composed of carbon, but differ entirely in physical properties and are known as the allotropic modifications of carbon. Sulphur and phosphorus both exist in allotropic modifications.

ALLOWAY, the birthplace of Burns, on the Doon, 2 m. from Ayr, the assumed scene of Tam o' Shanter's adventure.

ALLOWAY KIRE, a ruin S. of Ayr, celebrated as the scene of the witches' dance in "Tam o' Shanter."

ALL-SAINTS' DAY, the 1st of November, a feast dedicated to all the Saints.

ALL-SOULS' DAY, a festival on the 2nd November to pray for the souls of the faithful deceased, such as may be presumed to be still suffering in Purgatory.

ALLSPICE, the berry of the pimento, or Jamaica pepper.

ALLSTON, WASHINGTON, an American painter and poet, whose genius was much admired by Coleridge (1779-1843).

ALMA, a river in the Crimea, half-way between Eupatoria and Sebastopol, where the allied English, French, and Turkish armies defeated the Russians under Prince Menshikov, Sept. 20, 1854.

ALMAKOE's, a suite of assembly rooms, originally a gaming club, opened in 1768 by a Scotsman, Mc'aul, whose name, transposed, was given to the club. The place was afterwards known as Willis's Rooms, where select balls used to be given, admission to which was a certificate of high social standing.

ALMADEN, a town on the northern slope of the Sierra Morena, in Spain, with rich mines of quick-silver.

ALMA'GRO, DIEGO D', a confederate of Pizarro in the conquest of Peru, but a quarrel with the brothers of Pizarro about the division of the spoil on the capture of Cuzco, the capital of the Incas, led to his imprisonment and death (1475-1538).—Diego d', his son, who avenged his death by killing Pizarro, but being conquered by Vasco de Castro, was himself put to death (1520-1542).

AL-MAMOUN, the son of Haroun-el-Raschid, the 7th Abbaside caliph, a great promoter of science and learning; d. 833.

ALMANACH DE GOTHA, a kind of European peerage, published annually by Perthes at Gotha; of late years extended so as to include statesmen and military people, as well as statistical information.

ALMANSUR, ABU GIAFAR, the 2nd Abbaside caliph, and the first of the caliphs to patronise learning; founded Bagdad, and made it the seat of the caliphate; d. 775.

ALMANSUR, ABU MOHAMMED, a great Moorish general in the end of the 10th century, had overrun and nearly made himself master of all Spain, when he was repulsed and totally defeated by the kings of Leon and Navarre in 948.

ALMA-TAD TEMA, KIB LAVERGHEUS, a distinguished artist of Dutch descent, settled in London; famous for his highly-finished treatment of classical subjects (1824-1912).

ALMAVIVA, a character in Beaumarchais' "Mariage de Figaro," representative of one of the old nobles of France, recalling all their manners and vices, who is duped by his valet Figaro, a personification of wit, talent, and intrigue.

ALMEIDA, a strong fortress in the province of Beira on the Spanish frontier of Portugal.

ALMEIDA, FRANCESCO, the first Portuguese viceroy of India, a firm and wise governor, superseded by Albuquerque, and killed on his way home by the Kaffirs at the Cape in 1510.—Lorenzo, his son, acting under him, distinguished himself in the Indian seas, and made Ceylon tributary to Portugal.

ALMERIA, a chief town and seaport in the S. of Spain, an important and flourishing place, next to Granada, under the Moors, and at one time a nest of pirates more formidable than those of Algiers.

ALMIGHTY DOLLAR, the god of money which the Americans are charged with worshipping, first applied to them, it would seem, by Washington Irving.

ALMORAVIDES, a Moslem dynasty which ruled in N. Africa and Spain from 1129 to 1273.

ALMO'RA, a high-lying town at the foot of the Himalayas, 85 m. N. of Bareilly.

ALMORAVIDES, a Moslem dynasty which subdued first Fez and Morocco, and then S. Spain, from 1056 to 1147.

ALNWICK, the county town of Northumberland, on the Aik; at the north entrance is Alnwick Castle, the seat of the Duke of Northumberland, one of the most magnificent structures of the kind in England, and during the Border wars a place of great strength.

ALOES, a genus of succulent plants embracing 500 species, the majority natives of S. Africa, valuable in medicine, in particular a purgative from the juice of the leaves of several species.

ALOES WOOD, the heart of certain tropical trees, which yields a fragrant resinous substance and admits of a high polish.

ALOIST, a Belgian town on the Dender, 19 m. NW. from Brussels, with a cathedral, one of the grandest in Belgium, which contains a famous painting by Rubens, "St. Roche beseeching Christ to arrest the Plague at Aloist."

ALOYSIUS, ST., an Italian nobleman, who joined the Society of Jesus; canonised for his devotion to the sick during a plague in Rome, to which he himself fell a victim, June 21, 1591. See GONZAGA.

ALPACA, a gregarious ruminant of the camel family, a native of the Andes, and particularly the table-lands of Chile and Peru; is covered with a long soft silky wool, of which textile fabrics are woven; in appearance resembles a sheep, but is larger in size, and has a long erect neck with a handsome head.

ALP-ARSLAN (Brave Lion), a sultan of the Seljuk dynasty in Persia, added Armenia and Georgia to his dominions (1080-1072).

ALPES, three departements in SE. France: the Basses-A., in NE. part of Provence, bounded by Hautes-Alpes on the N. and Var on the S., sterile in the N., fertile in the S., cap. Digne; Hautes-A., forming part of Dauphiné, traversed by the Cottian Alps, climate severe, cap. (cap. A. Maritimes, E. of the Basses-A.), bordering on Italy and the Mediterranean, made up of the territory of Nice, ceded by Italy, and of Monaco and Var; cap. Nice.

ALPHA PARTICLES, the positively charged particles expelled during certain radioactive changes. Their velocities, which vary somewhat, are about one-twentieth that of light. They are less penetrating than Beta particles (q.v.), but produce a greater effect within their smaller range; they cannot pass through more than 10 cm. of air or $\frac{1}{10}$ mm. of aluminium. They are detected and measured by the ionisation they produce in a gas, shown by the rate of discharge of an electroscope. Alpha particles appear to be atoms of helium which have lost their two outer electrons. See RADIOACTIVITY and IONS.

ALPHABET, as the basis of written language among a people, of indefinite origin. Whilst the Egyptian system of hieroglyphs and the Babylonian cuneiform writing are older, the first true alphabet is that known as Semitic. The earliest record of this is the inscription on the Moabite Stone (q.v.). From the Semitic was derived the Greek alphabet, which in turn, with certain literal changes, inspired the Roman, and it is in the last-named that the English alphabet had its origin. Of other alphabets the Arabic comes from the Aramean (a Phœnician derivative), and the several Indian forms from another similar source known as Sabaean. The Runic alphabet originated in Scandinavia, but whether it is Phœnician, Greek, or Latin in origin is debatable. The Ogham alphabet (5th cent. A.D.), while believed by some scholars to be from the Runic, is attributed by others to Roman influence.

ALPHE'US, a river in the Peloponnese, flowing west, with its source in Arcadia; also the name of the river-god enamoured of the nymph Arethusa, whom he pursued under the sea as far as Sicily, where he overtook her and was wedded to her.

ALPHONSO XIII., of Spain, a posthumous son of Alfonso XII. He succeeded to the throne on the day of his birth. His mother, Queen Maria, acting as regent till 1904, in which year the king married Victoria Eugénie, niece of Edward VII. of England. There was an attempt to assassinate the king and queen on their wedding day, and outbreaks of a similar character have occurred on several occasions since (1886-).

ALPINE CLUB, an English club devoted to mountaineering, primarily in the Alps, but also in other districts.

ALPS, THE, the vastest mountain system in Europe; form the boundary between France, Germany, Switzerland, and Austria on the N. and W., and Italy on the S., their peaks mostly covered with perpetual snow, the highest being Mont Blanc, within the frontiers of France. According to height, they have been distributed into Fore, Middle, and High: the Fore rising to the limit of trees, the Middle to the line of perpetual snow; and the High, above the snow-line. In respect of range or extent, they have been distributed into Western, Middle, and Eastern: the Western, including the Maritime, the Cottian, the Dauphiné, and the Grailan, extend from the Mediterranean to Mont Blanc; the Middle, including the Pennine and Bernese, extend from Mont Blanc to the Brenner Pass; and the Eastern, including the Dolomite, the Julian, and the Dinaric, extend from the Brenner and Hungarian plain to the Danube. These giant masses occupy an area of 90,000 sq. m., and extend from the 44th to the 48th parallel of latitude.

ALPUJARR BAS, a rich and lovely valley which stretches S. from the Sierra Nevada in Spain.

ALRUNA-WIFE, the household goddess of a German family.

ALSACE-LORRAINE, a territory originally of the Holy Roman empire, ceded to Louis XIV. by the peace of Westphalia in 1648; restored to Germany after the Franco-German war in 1870-71, by the peace of Frankfurt; restored to France by the treaty of Versailles, 1919; is a great wine-producing country, yields cereals and tobacco, rich in coal and iron, and with a flourishing cotton industry.

ALSA-TIA, Whitefriars, London, which at one time enjoyed the privilege of a debtors' sanctuary, and, till abolished in 1697, had become a haunt of all kinds of nefarious characters; so called after Alsace, the possession of which was disputed by France and Germany.

ALSEN, a Danish island adjacent to Slesvig, one of the finest in the Baltic, now ceded to Germany.

AL-SIRAT, the hair-narrow bell-bridge of the Moslems, which every Mohammedan must pass to enter Paradise.

ALSTEN, an island off the coast of Northland, Norway, with seven snow-capped hills, called the Seven Sisters.

ALTAI MOUNTAINS, in Central Asia, stretching W. from the Desert of Gobi, and forming the S. boundary of Asiatic Russia, abounding, to the profit of Russia, in silver and copper, as well as other metals.

ALTAR, among the earliest peoples usually constructed of rough stones for the purpose of offerings or sacrifice. In later times made of wood or stone, or, as in King Solomon's temple, of gold and brass. For many centuries the altar provided a sanctuary for those fleeing from justice.

ALTAZIMUTH, an instrument based on the theodolite by means of which the altitudes and azimuths of heavenly bodies are determined.

ALTDORF, an old town in the canton Uri, at the S. end of the Lake of Lucerne; associated with the story of William Tell; a place of transit trade.

ALTDORFER, ALBRECHT, a German painter and engraver, a distinguished pupil of Albert Dürer, and, as a painter, inspired with his spirit; his "Battle of Arbela" adorns the Munich Picture Gallery (1468-1638).

ALTEN, KARL AUGUST, a distinguished officer, native of Hanover, who entered the British service, bore arms under Sir John Moore, was chief of a division, under Wellington, in the Peninsular war, and closed his military career at the battle of Waterloo (1768-1840).

ALTENBURG, capital of Saxe-Altenburg, and 4 m. S. of Leipzig; its castle is the scene of the famous "Prinzessraub" (q.v.), related by Carlyle in his "Miscellaneous."

ALTERNATING CURRENT, a current which changes its direction several times a second. Low frequency currents—about 50 cycles per second—are used for electric motors, while those of high frequency—up to a million cycles or more—are utilised in wireless. Alternating current is economical owing to the fact that it is possible to transmit across long distances at high voltage, and step down to the required pressure by means of a transformer.

ALTHERN, a Persian refugee, who introduced into France the cultivation of madder, which became one of the most important products of the S. of France.

ALTHING, the parliamentary assembly of Iceland; instituted in 928 and reconstituted in 1874; it meets at Reykjavik.

ALTON LOCKE, a novel, by Charles Kingsley, written in sympathy with the Chartist movement, in which Carlyle is introduced as one of the personages.

ALTONA, a town and seaport of Sleswig-Holstein, close to Hamburg, on the right bank of the Elbe, and practically forming one city with it.

ALTO-RELIEVO, figures carved out of a tablet so as to project at least one half from its surface.

ALTRUISM, a Comtist doctrine which inculcates sacrifice of self for the good of others as the rule of human action.

ALUMBRA DO, a member of a Spanish sect that laid claim to perfect enlightenment.

ALUMINIUM, a metal found in combination in nearly all rocks and soils. It is produced on a large scale from bauxite (q.v.). It has many uses owing to its strength, lightness, and electrical conductivity. It is rapidly replacing copper as a material for electrical cables. Alloys of aluminium with copper, zinc, manganese, and silicon are used extensively for parts of motor-cars and aeroplanes.

ALURED OF BEVERLEY, an English chronicler of the 12th century; his annals comprise the history of the Britons, Saxons, and Normans up to his own time; d. 1129.

ALVA, DUKE OF, a general of the armies of Charles V. and Philip of Spain; his career as a general was uniformly successful, but as a governor his cruelty was merciless, especially as the viceroy of Philip in the Low Countries (1568-1582).

ALVARADO, PEDRO DE, one of the Spanish conquerors of Mexico, and comrade of Cortez; was appointed Governor of Guatemala by Charles V. as a reward for his Italian services in the interest of Spain; was a generous as well as a brave man.

ALVAREZ, FRANCISCO, a Portuguese who, in the 15th century, visited Abyssinia and wrote an account of it.

ALVAREZ, DON JOSE, the most distinguished of Spanish sculptors, born near Cordova, and patronised by Napoleon, who presented him with a gold medal, but of whom, for his treatment of his country, he conceived so great a hatred, that he would never model a bust of him (1768-1827).

ALVERSTONE, VISCOUNT (R. F. Webster), lawyer and statesman. Educated at Charterhouse and Cambridge, he was called to the bar in 1838 and took silk ten years later. In 1885 he entered the House of Commons, becoming Attorney-General in the Conservative Govts. of that year and 1886 and 1895; Master of the Rolls 1900, and Lord Chief Justice from 1900 to 1913 (1842-1915).

ALVIANO, an eminent Venetian general, distinguished himself in the defence of the republic against the Emperor Maximilian (1465-1515).

AMADEO, GIOVANNI ANTONIO, Italian sculptor and painter of the Renaissance period; assisted in the construction of Milan Cathedral (1447-1522).

AMADEUS LAKE, a lake in the centre of Australia, subject to an almost total drying-up at times.

AMADEUS V., count of Savoy, surnamed the Great from his wisdom and success as a ruler (1242-1283).

AMADEUS VIII., 1st duke of Savoy, increased his dominions, and retired into a monastery on the death of his wife; he was elected Pope as Felix V., but was not acknowledged by the Church (1383-1461).

AMADEUS I. of Spain, 2nd son of Victor Emmanuel of Italy, elected king of Spain in 1870, but abdicated in 1873 (1845-1890).

AMADIS DE GAUL, a celebrated romance in prose, written partly in Spanish and partly in French by different romancers of the 15th century; the first four books were regarded by Cervantes as a masterpiece. The hero of the book, Amadis, surnamed the Knight of the Lion, stands for a type of a constant and deferential lover, as well as a model knight-errant, of whom Don Quixote is the caricature.

AMADOU, a spongy substance, consisting of slices of certain fungi beaten together, used as a styptic, and, after being steeped in saltpetre, used as tinder.

AMADON, a devil who could be restrained from working evil from the third hour till noon and from the ninth till evening.

AMALARIC, king of the Visigoths, married a daughter of Clovis; d. 581.

AMALEKITES, a warlike race of the Sinaitic peninsula, which gave much trouble to the Israelites in the wilderness; were practically annihilated by King David.

AMALFI, a port on the N. of the Gulf of Salerno, 24 m. S.E. of Naples; of great importance in the Middle Ages, and governed by Dukes of its own.

AMALFIAN LAWS, a code of maritime law compiled at Amalfi in the 12th century.

AMALGAM, an alloy of another metal with mercury. AMATIA, ANNA, the Duchess of Weimar, the mother of the grand-duke; collected about her court the most illustrious literary men of the time, headed by Goethe, who was much attached to her (1759-1807).

AMALRIC, one of the leaders in the crusade against the Albigenses, who, when his followers asked him how they were to distinguish heretics from Catholics, answered, "Kill them all; God will know His own"; d. 1222.

AMALTHEA, the goat that suckled Zeus, one of whose horns became the cornucopia—horn of plenty.

AMANULLAH, ex-king of Afghanistan; at the age of 26 succeeded his father Habibullah by means of a coup d'état on the latter's assassination in 1919, and at once declared war on India, being decisively beaten. In 1928 he came on a visit to Europe, including London, and on his return he tried to introduce Western ideas into Afghanistan, an attempt which led to strong opposition from the chiefs and priests and ended in a revolution which brought about Amanullah's abdication in January, 1929 (1893-).

AMATA SINEHA, a Hindu Buddhist, left a valuable thesaurus of Sanskrit words.

AMATRI, MICHELE, an Italian patriot, born at Palermo, devoted a great part of his life to the history of Sicily, and took part in its emancipation; was an Orientalist as well; he is famous for throwing light on the true character of the Sicilian Vespers (1806-1889).

AMARYLLIS, a shepherdess in one of Virgil's pastorals; any young rustic maiden.

AMASIA, a town in Asia Minor, once the capital of the kings of Pontus.

AMASSIS, king of Egypt, originally a simple soldier, took part in an insurrection, dethroned the reigning monarch and assumed the crown, proved an able ruler, and cultivated alliances with Greece; reigned from 570 to 546 B.C.

AMATI, a celebrated family of violin-makers of whom the most noted were Andrea and Niccolò, brothers, at Cremona, in the 16th and 17th centuries.

AMATITLAN, a town in Guatemala, the inhabitants of which are mainly engaged in the preparation of cochineal.

AMAZON, a river in S. America and the largest on the globe, its basin nearly equal in extent to the whole of Europe; traverses the continent at its greatest breadth, rises in the Andes about 50 m. from the Pacific, and after a course of 4000 m. falls by a delta into the Atlantic, its waters increased by a great number of tributaries, 20 of which are above 1000 m. in length, one 2000 m., its mouth 200 m. wide; its current affects the ocean 150 m. out; is navigable 8000 m. up, and by steamers as far as the foot of the Andes.

AMAZONS, a fabulous race of female warriors, who had a queen of their own, and excluded all men from their community; to perpetuate the race, they cohabited with men of the neighbouring nations; slew all the male children they gave birth to, or sent them to their fathers; burnt off the right breasts of the females, that they might be able to wield the bow in war.

AMBER, a fossil resin, generally yellow and semi-transparent, derived, it is presumed, from certain extinct coniferous trees; becomes electric by friction, and gives name to electricity, the Greek word for it being electron; has been flaked up for centuries in the Baltic, and is now used in varnishes and for tobacco pipes.

AMBERGER, a painter of Nürnberg in the 16th century, a disciple of Holbein, his principal work being the history of Joseph in twelve pictures.

AMBERGRIS, an ashy-coloured substance, a morbid fragment of the intestines of the spermocet whale, being often found floating on the ocean which this cetacean frequents; it has no smell, but is used for mixing with perfumes.

AMBLESIDE, a small market-town near the head of Lake Windermere, in the so-called Wordsworth District.

AMBLYOPSIS, a small fish with rudimentary but functionless eyes, found in the Mammoth Cave of Kentucky, U.S.A.

AMBOISE, a town on the Loire, 14 m. E. of Tours, with a castle, once the residence of the French kings. The Conspiracy of A., the conspiracy of Condé and the Huguenots in 1560 against Francis II., Catharine de Medici, and the Guises. The Edict of A. (1563) conceded the free exercise of their worship to the Protestants.

AMBOISE, GEORGE DE, CARDINAL, the popular Prime Minister of Louis XII., who, much reduced the public burdens, and as the Pope's legate in France effected a great reform among the religious orders; is said to have died immensely rich (1460-1510).

AMBOYNA, with a chief city of the name, the most important of the Moluccas, in the Malay Archipelago, and rich before all in spices; it belongs to the Dutch, who have diligently fostered its resources.

AM'BROSE, ST., bishop of Milan, born at Trèves, one of the Fathers of the Latin Church, and a zealous opponent of the Arian heresy; as a stern puritan refused to allow Theodosius to enter his church, covered as his hands were with the blood of an infamous massacre, and only admitted him to Church privilege after a severe penance of eight months; he improved the Church service, wrote several hymns, which are reckoned his most valuable legacy to the Church; his writings fill two vols. folio. He is the patron saint of Milan; his attributes are a scourge, from his severity, and a beehive, from the tradition that a swarm of bees settled on his mouth when an infant without hurting him (340-397). Festival, Dec. 7.

AMBRASIA, the fragrant food of the gods of Olympus, fabled to preserve in them and confer on others immortal youth and beauty.

AMELIA, a character in Fielding's novel of the same name, distinguished for her conjugal affection.

AMENES HONORABLE, originally a mode of punishment in France which required the offender, stripped to his shirt, and led into court with a rope round his neck held by the public executioner, to beg pardon on his knees of his God, his king, and his country; now used to denote a satisfactory apology or reparation.

AMERBACH, JOHANN, a celebrated printer in Basel in the 15th century, the first who used the Roman type instead of Gothic and Italian; spared no expense in his art, taking, like a true workman, a pride in it; d. 1515.

AMERICA, including both North and South, 9000 m. in length, varies from 3400 m. to 28 m. in breadth, contains 164 millions of sq. m., is larger than Europe and Africa together, but is a good deal smaller than Asia; bounded throughout by the Atlantic on the E. and the Pacific on the W.

AMERICA, BRITISH N., is bounded on the N. by the Arctic Ocean, on the E. by the Atlantic, on the S. by the United States, and on the W. by the Pacific; occupies one-third of the continent, and comprises the Dominion of Canada and Newfoundland.

AMERICA, CENTRAL, extends from Mexico on the N. to Panama on the S., and is about six times as large as Ireland; is a plateau with terraces descending to the sea on each side, and rich in all kinds of tropical vegetation; consists of seven political divisions: Guatemala, San Salvador, British Honduras, Honduras, Nicaragua, Mosquitia, and Costa Rica.

AMERICA CUP, a prize for international yacht racing, first competed for in 1851, and won in England by America. Sir Thomas Lipton attempted in 1899, 1901, 1903, and 1920 to win it back for this country, but without success.

AMERICA, NORTH, is 4560 m. in length, contains over 84 millions sq. m., is less than half the size of Asia, consists of a plain in the centre throughout its length, a high range of mountains, the Rocky, on the W., and a lower range, the Appalachian, on the E., parallel with the coast, which is largely indented with gulfs, bays, and seas; has a magnificent system of rivers and large lakes, the latter the largest in the world, a rich fauna and flora, and a wealth of minerals; was discovered by Columbus in 1492. The divisions are British North America, United States, Mexico, Central American Republics, British Honduras, the West Indian Republics, and the Spanish, British, French, and Dutch West Indies.

AMERICA, SOUTH, lies in great part within the Tropics, and consists of a high mountain range on the west, and a long plain with minor ranges extending therefrom eastward; the coast is but little indented, but the Amazon and the Plate Rivers make up for the defect of seaboard; abounds in extensive plains, which go under the names of Llanos, Selvas, and Pampas, while the river system is the vastest and most servicable in the globe; the vegetable and mineral wealth of the continent is great, and it can match the world for the rich plumage of its birds and the number and splendour of its insect species.

AMERICAN INDIANS, the aboriginal races of the New World, misnamed Indians by Columbus; they are mostly of a red or copper-coloured skin, coarse black straight hair, high cheek-bones, black deep-set eyes, and tall erect figure, and apparently are fast dying out; to be found still as far south as Patagonia, the Patagonians being of the race.

AMERIGO VESPUTCI, a Florentine navigator, who, under the auspices first of Spain, and afterwards of Portugal, four times visited the New World, first discovered by Columbus, which the first cartographers called America, after his name; these visits were made between 1499 and 1506, while Columbus's discovery, as is known, was in 1492 (1451-1512).

AMERY, RT. HON. LEOPOLD STENNETT, English politician. He was born in India and educated at Harrow and Oxford, afterwards taking up journalism and joining the staff of the Times in 1899. He entered the House of Commons as a Conservative in 1911, served in the Army from 1914 to 1916, and in 1922 became First Lord of the Admiralty, and in 1925 Secretary for the Dominions, a post he held till the defeat of the Baldwin Government in 1929 (1878-).

AMES, JOSEPH, historian of early British typography, and an antiquary who published a valuable catalogue of engraved portraits (1689-1759).

AMELA, the central and largest division of Abyssinia.

AMHERST, LORD, a British officer who distinguished himself both on the Continent and in America, and particularly with General Wolfe in securing for England the superiority in Canada (1717-1797).

AMICE, a flowing cloak formerly worn by pilgrims, also a strip of linen cloth worn over the shoulder of a priest when officiating at mass.

AMIENS, the old capital of Picardy, on the Somme, with a cathedral begun in 1220, described as the "Parthenon of Gothic architecture," and by Ruskin as "Gothic, clear of Roman tradition and of Arabian taint, Gothic pure, authoritative, unsurpassable, and unaccountable"; possesses other buildings of interest; was the birthplace of Peter the Hermit, and is celebrated for a treaty of peace between France and England concluded in 1802. It was the British Army base during the Battle of the Somme in 1916.

AMIRANTES, a group of small coral islands NE. of Madagascar, belonging to Britain; are 11 in number, are wooded, and only a few feet above the sea-level.

AMMANA or BAETOLOMEO, a Florentine architect and sculptor of note, was an admirer of Michael Angelo, and executed several works in Rome, Venice, and Padua (1511-1592).

AMMIA NUS MARCELLI NUS, a Greek who served as a soldier in the Roman army, and wrote a history of the Roman Empire, specially valuable as a record of contemporary events; d. 390.

AMMIRATO, an Italian historian, author of a history of Florence (1531-1601).

AMMON, an Egyptian deity, frequently represented with the head of a ram, who had a temple at Thebes and in the Libyan Desert; was much resorted to as an oracle of fate; identified in Greece with Zeus, and in Rome with Jupiter.

AMMONIA, a soluble gas which, dissolved in water, gives an alkaline solution. This solution will combine with acids to give ammonium salts. It has been prepared synthetically from the nitrogen of the air and used to produce ammonium sulphate, used as a fertiliser. Ammonia is employed in one process for the manufacture of ice.

AMMONIO, ANDREA, a Latin poet born in Lucca, held in high esteem by Erasmus; sent to England by the Pope, he became Latin secretary to Henry VIII. and a prebendary of Salisbury; d. 1517.

AMMONITES, a Semitic race living E. of the Jordan; at continual feud with the Jews, and a continual trouble to them, till subdued by Judas Maccabeus.

AMMONITES, a group of extinct spiral cephalopods existing in Mesozoic times. They are particularly abundant in the Jurassic strata and are used as zone fossils (q.v.).

AMMONIUS SACCAS, a philosopher of Alexandria, and founder of Neo-Platonism; Longinus, Origen, and Plotinus were among his pupils; d. 243, at a great age.

AMNION, name given to the innermost membrane investing the foetus in the womb.

AMEBA, a minute animalcule of the simplest structure, being a mere mass of protoplasm; absorbs its food at every point all over its body by means of processes protruded therefrom at will, with the effect that it is constantly changing its shape.

AMOMUM, a genus of plants, such as the cardamom and grains of paradise, remarkable for their pungency and aromatic properties.

AMORITES, a powerful Canaanitish tribe, seemingly of tall stature, NE. of the Jordan; subdued by Joshua at Gibeon.

AMORY, THOMAS, an eccentric writer of Irish descent, author of the "Life of John Bunce, Esq.," and other semi-insane productions; he was a fanatical Unitarian (1691-1789).

AMOS, a poor shepherd of Tekoa, near Bethlehem, in Judah, who in the 8th century B.C. raised his voice in solitary protest against the iniquity of the northern kingdom of Israel, and denounced the judgment of God as Lord of Hosts upon one and all for their idolatry, which nothing could avert; one of the twelve minor prophets.

AMOY, one of the open ports of China, on a small island in the Strait of Fukien; has one of the finest harbours in the world and a large export and import trade; the chief exports are tea, sugar, paper, gold-leaf, &c.

AMPÈRE, ANDRÉ MARIE, a French mathematician and physicist, born at Lyons; distinguished for his discoveries in electro-dynamics and magnetism, and the influence of these on electro-telegraphy and the general extension of science (1775-1836).

AMPÈRE, the unit of electric current, being the current which flows through a wire of resistance 1 ohm when the potential difference between its ends is 1 volt.

AMPHICTYONIC COUNCIL, a council consisting of representatives from several confederate States of ancient Greece, twelve in number at length, two from each, that met twice a year, sitting alternately at Thermopylae and Delphi, to settle any differences that might arise between them, the decisions of which were several times enforced by arms, and gave rise to what were called sacred wars, of which there were three.

AMPHION, a son of Zeus and Antiope, who is said to have invented the lyre, and built the walls of Thebes by the sound of it, a feat often alluded to as an instance of the miraculous power of music.

AMPHIBRENA, a genus of finless lizards with two heads and able to move backward or forward.

AMPHITRITE, a daughter of Oceanus or Nereus, the wife of Neptune, mother of Triton, and goddess of the sea.

AMPHITRYON, the king of Tiryns, and husband of Alcmena, who became by him the mother of Iphicles, and by Zeus the mother of Hercules.

AMPHITRYON THE TRUE, the real host, the man who provides the feast, as Zeus proved himself to be to the household when he visited Alcmena.

AMRAN RANGE, pronounced the "scientific frontier" of India towards Afghanistan.

AMRITSAR, a sacred city of the Sikhs in the Punjab, and a great centre of trade, 32 m. E. of Lahore; is second to Delhi in Northern India; manufactures cashmere shawls. It was the scene in 1919 of serious riots, which were quelled by Sir Michael O'Dwyer.

AMRU, a Mohammedan general under the Caliph Omar, conquered Egypt among other military achievements; he is said to have executed the order of the Caliph Omar for burning the library of Alexandria; d. 663.

AMSTERDAM, the capital of Holland, a great trading city and port at the mouth of the Amstel, on the Zuyder Zee, resting on 90 islands connected by 800 bridges, the houses built on piles of wood driven into the marshy ground; is largely a manufacturing place, as well as an emporium of trade, one special industry being the cutting of diamonds and jewels; birthplace of Spinoza.

AMUNDSEN, ROALD, famous Norwegian explorer. Born at Bergen, the son of a shipbuilder, went early to sea, and in 1897 joined the German expedition. He was in charge of an expedition which navigated the North-West Passage in 1906, and in 1911 an expedition of his reached the South Pole, the first to do so, a feat in which he beat Capt. Scott by a few weeks. In 1925 he made an unsuccessful attempt to reach the North Pole by aeroplane. When in 1928 General Nobile's airship was forced down during a North Pole voyage, Amundsen, despite a previous quarrel with Nobile, hastened by plane to take part in a search. From that moment he disappeared (1872-1928).

AMUR, a large eastward-flowing river, partly in Siberia and partly in China, which, after a course of 3040 m., falls into the Sea of Okhotsk.

AMURNATH, a place of pilgrimage in Cashmere, on account of a cave believed to be the dwelling-place of Shiva.

AMYGDALOIDAL ROCKS, igneous rocks in which the holes left by escaping bubbles of steam and gases have been filled by mineral deposits through the percolation of water from the surrounding rocks.

AMYOT, JACQUES, grand-almoner of France and bishop of Auxerre; was of humble birth; was tutor of Charles, son of Henry II., who appointed him grand-almoner; he was the translator, among other works, of Plutarch into French, which remains to-day one of the finest monuments of the old literature of France; it was much esteemed by Montaigne (1513-1593).

AMYOT, JOSEPH, a French Jesuit missionary to China, and a learned Orientalist (1713-1794).

ANABAPTISTS, a fanatical sect which arose in Saxony at the time of the Reformation, and though it spread in various parts of Germany came at length to grief by the excesses of its adherents in Münster. See BAPTISTS.

ANABASIS, an account by Xenophon of the ill-fated expedition of Cyrus the Younger against his brother Artaxerxes, and of the retreat of the 10,000 Greeks under Xenophon who accompanied him, after the battle of Cunaxa in 401 B.C.

ANABOLISM, name given to changes whereby an animal or plant builds up its tissues from carbohydrates, fats, proteins, and mineral salts in its food. The building up process depends upon a sufficient and balanced supply of the four groups mentioned, as well as on small quantities of vitamins (q.v.).

ANACHARSIS, a Scythian philosopher of the 6th century B.C., who, in his roamings in quest of wisdom, arrived at Athens, and became the friend and disciple of Solon, but was put to death on his return home by his brother; he stands for a Scythian savant living among a civilized people, as well as for a wise man living among fools.

ANACONDA, a gigantic constricting serpent of tropical America of aquatic habits, belonging to the boa family. Some specimens are 30 feet long.

ANACREON, a celebrated Greek lyric poet, a native of Teos, in Asia Minor; lived chiefly at Samos and Athens; his songs are in praise of love and wine; not many fragments of them are preserved (560-418 B.C.).

ANADYOMENE, Aphrodite, a name meaning "emerging," given to her in allusion to her arising out of the sea; the name of a famous painting of Apelles so representing her.

ANADYE, a river in Siberia, which flows into Behring Sea.

ANAGNI, a small town 40 m. SE. of Rome, the birthplace of several popes.

ANAHUAC, a plateau in Central Mexico, 7580 ft. of mean elevation; one of the names of Mexico prior to its conquest by the Spaniards.

ANAKIM, a race of giants that lived in the S. of Palestine, called also sons of Anak.

ANAMALAH MOUNTAINS, a range of the W. Ghats in Travancore.

ANAMU'DI, the highest point in the Anamalah Mts., 7000 ft.

ANAPHYLAXIS, the name given to the condition of being highly sensitive to certain stimuli. It is found among all animals and also in men. A common example is hay-fever, which is caused in some people by air containing even a small amount of pollen. Anaphylaxis makes foods, harmless to the majority, have an immediate and violent effect on some people, e.g. eggs or shell fish.

ANARCHISM, a projected social revolution, the professed aim of which is that of the emancipation of the individual from the present system of government which makes him the slave of others, and of the training of the individual so as to become a law to himself, and in possession, therefore, of the right to the control of all his vital interests, the project definable as an insane attempt to realise a social system on the basis of absolute individual freedom.

ANASTASIUS, the name of four popes: A. I., the most eminent, pope from 398 to 401; A. II., pope from 496 to 498; A. III., pope from 911 to 913; A. IV., pope from 1153 to 1154.

ANASTASIUS, ST., a martyr under Nero; festival, April 15.

ANASTASIUS I., emperor of the East, excommunicated for his severities to the Christians, and the first sovereign to be so treated by the Pope (490-515).

ANATOLIA, the Greek name for Asia Minor.

ANATOMY OF MELANCHOLY, a "mosaic" work by Robert Burton, made up largely of quotations from ancient and classic writers, and dealing with a wide range of subjects, including medicine, philosophy, astrology and the arts; a work displaying great erudition.

ANAXAGORAS, a Greek philosopher of Clazomenae, in Ionia, removed to Athens and took philosophy along with him, i.e. transplanted it there, but being banished thence for impiety to the gods, settled in Lampsaque; d. 428 B.C.

ANAXARCHUS, a Greek philosopher of the school of Democritus and friend of Alexander the Great.

ANAXARCHUS, of Miletus, made air the first principle of things; d. 600 B.C.; A. of Lampsaque, preceptor and biographer of Alexander the Great.

ANCIUS, a son of Neptune, who left a dragon of wine to pursue a boar, which killed him.

ANCELOT, JACQUES, a French dramatic poet, distinguished both in tragedy and comedy; his wife also a distinguished writer (1794-1854).

ANCONIA, a town on the Loire, 23 m. NE. of Nantes.

ANCESTOR-WORSHIP, the worship of ancestors that prevails in primitive nations, due to a belief in Animism (q.v.); it obtained in ancient Rome and is still part of the Chinese religion.

ANCHISTA, a Portuguese Jesuit, born at Teneriffe, called the Apostle of the New World (1538-1597).

ANCHISES, the father of Aeneas, whom his son bore out of the flames of Troy on his shoulders to the ships; was buried in Sicily.

ANCHOVY, a small fish abundant in the Mediterranean, captured for the flavour of its flesh and made into sauce.

ANCHOVY PEAR, fruit of a W. Indian plant, of the taste of the mango.

ANCIENT MARINER, a mariner doomed to suffer dreadful penalties for having shot an albatross, and who, when he reaches land, is haunted by the recollection of them, and feels compelled to relate the tale of them as a warning to others; the hero of a poem by Coleridge.

ANGELON, FREDERICK, a Prussian statesman, philosophic man of letters, and of French descent (1766-1837).

ANCONA, a port of Italy in the Adriatic, second to Venice; founded by Syracusans.

ANCRE, river in the department of the Somme, France, of which river it is a tributary. It was the scene of British offensives in November, 1916, and January, 1917.

ANCRE, MARSHAL, a profigate minister of France during the minority of Louis XIII.

ANCUS MARCIUS, 4th king of Rome, grandson of Numa, extended the city and founded Ostia.

ANDALUSIA, a region in the S. of Spain watered by the Guadalquivir; fertile in grains, fruits, and vines, and rich in minerals.

ANDAMANS, volcanic islands in the Bay of Bengal, surrounded by coral reefs; since 1858 used by the government of India as a penal settlement.

ANDELYS, LES, a small town on the Seine, 20 m. NE. of Evreux, divided into Great and Little.

ANDERMAT, a central Swiss village in Uri, well known as a winter sports centre.

ANDERSEN, HANS CHRISTIAN, a world-famous fairy-story-teller of Danish birth, son of a poor shoemaker, born at Odense; was some time before he made his mark, was honoured at length by the esteem and friendship of the royal family, and by a national festival on his seventieth birthday (1805-1875).

ANDERSON, JAMES, native of Hermiton, near Edinburgh, a writer on agriculture and promoter of it in Scotland (1739-1808).

ANDERSON, JOHN, a native of Roseneath, professor of physics in Glasgow University, and the founder of the Andersonian College in Glasgow (1728-1796).

ANDERSON, LAWRENCE, one of the chief reformers of religion in Sweden (1480-1552).

ANDERSON, SIR EDMUND, Lord Chief Justice of Common Pleas under Elizabeth, sat as judge at the trial of Mary, Queen of Scots. Anderson's Reports is still a book of authority; d. 1605.

ANDES, an unbroken range of high mountains, 150 of them actively volcanic, which extend, often in double and triple chains, along the west of South America from Cape Horn to Panama, a distance of 4500 m., divided into the Southern or Chilian as far as 23° S., the Central as far as 10° S., and the Northern to their termination.

ANDRODEUS, an orator and leader of the oligarchical faction in Athens; was four times exiled, the first time for profaning the Eleusinian Mysteries (467-393 B.C.).

ANDORRA, a small republic in the E. Pyrenees, enclosed by mountains, under the protection of France and the Bishop of Urgel, in Catalonia; cattle-rearing is the chief occupation of the inhabitants, who are a primitive people and of simple habits.

ANDOVER, an old municipal borough and market-town in Hampshire, 66 m. SW. of London; also a town 23 m. from Boston, U.S., famous for its theological seminary, founded in 1807.

ANDRAL, GABRIEL, a distinguished French pathologist, professor in Paris University (1797-1876).

ANDRASSY, COUNT, a Hungarian statesman, was exiled from 1848 to 1851, became Prime Minister in 1867, played a prominent part in diplomatic affairs on the Continent to the advantage of Austria (1823-1890).

ANDRÉ, JOHN, a brave British officer, tried and hanged as a spy in the American war in 1780; a monument is erected to him in Westminster Abbey.

ANDRÉ II, king of Hungary from 1205 to 1285, took part in the fifth crusade.

ANDREA PISANO, a sculptor and architect, born at Pisa, contributed greatly to free modern art from Byzantine influence (1270-1345).

ANDREOSSY, COUNT, an eminent French general and statesman, served under Napoleon, ambassador at London, Vienna, and Constantinople, advocated the recall of the Bourbons on the fall of Napoleon.

ANDREOSSY, FRANÇOIS, an eminent French engineer and mathematician (1833-1898).

ANDREW, ST., one of the Apostles, suffered martyrdom by crucifixion, became patron saint of Scotland; represented in art as an old man with long white hair and a beard, holding the Gospel in his right hand, and leaning on a transverse cross.

ANDREW, ST., THE CROSS OF, cross like a X, such having, it is said, been the form of the cross on which St. Andrew suffered.

ANDREWE, LANCELOT, an English prelate, born in Essex, a zealous High Churchman in the reigns of Elizabeth and James I.; eminent as a scholar, a theologian, and a preacher; attended the Hampton Court Conference, and was one of the translators of the Authorised Version of the Bible (1555-1626).

ANDREWS, JOSEPH, a novel by Melting, and the name of the hero, who is a footman; he is an attractive, model young man, the brother of Richardson's Pamela.

ANDREWS, THOMAS, scientist, professor of physics at Belfast; he carried out researches in heat, especially in connection with the effect of pressure and temperature on the change from liquid to gas and vapour (1813-1885).

ANDRIEUX, ST., a French littérateur and dramatist, born at Strasbourg, professor in the College of France, and permanent secretary to the Academy (1759-1828).

ANDROCLUS, a Roman slave condemned to the wild beasts, but saved by a lion, sent into the arena to attack him, out of whose foot he had long before sucked a painful thorn; the animal recognises him as its benefactor, and spares his life.

ANDROMACHE, the wife of Hector and the mother of Astyanax, famous for her conjugal devotion; fell to Pyrrhus, Achilles' son, at the fall of Troy, but was given up by him to Hector's brother; is the subject of tragedies by Euripides and Racine.

ANDROMEDA, a beautiful Ethiopian princess exposed to a sea monster, which Perseus slew, receiving as his reward the hand of the maiden; she had been demanded by Neptune as a sacrifice to appease the Nereids for an insult offered them by her mother, Cassiopeia.

ANDRONICUS, the name of four Byzantine emperors: A. I. Comnenus, killed his ward, Alexis II., usurped the throne, and was put to death, 1185; A. II. lived to see the empire devastated by the Turks (1282-1328); A. III., nephew of the preceding, dethroned him, fought stoutly against the Turks without staying their advances (1328-1341); A. IV. dethroned his father, Soter V., and was immediately stripped of his possessions himself (1377-1379).

ANDRONICUS, LIVIUS, the oldest dramatic poet in the Latin language (240 B.C.).

ANDRONICUS OF RHODES, a disciple of Aristotle in the time of Cicero, to whom we owe the preservation of many of Aristotle's works.

ANDROS, the most northern of the Cyclades, with fertile soil and productive of wine and silk.

ANDROUET DU CERCEREAU, an eminent French architect who designed the Pont Neuf at Paris (1530-1600).

ANDUJAR, a town of Andalusia, on the Guadalquivir, noted for the manufacture of porous clay water-cooling vessels.

ANEMOMETER, an instrument for measuring the force, direction, and velocity of the wind.

ANEROID, a barometer, consisting of a small watch-shaped, air-tight, air-exhausted metallic box, with internal spring-work and an index, affected by the pressure of the air on plates exposed to its action.

ANEU'RIN, a British bard at the beginning of the 7th century, who took part in the battle of Cattraeth, and made it the subject of a poem.

ANEURISM, a tumour, containing blood, on the coat of an artery.

ANGARA, a tributary of the Yenisei, which passes through Lake Balkal.

ANGEL, an old English coin, with the archangel Michael piercing the dragon on the obverse of it.

ANGEL-FISH, a hideous, voracious fish of the shark family, with a flat, ray-like body; known also as the Monk-fish.

ANGELIO DOCTOR, Thomas Aquinas.

ANGELICA, a faithless lady of romance in Ariosto's "Orlando Furioso," for whose sake Orlando lost his heart and his senses.

ANGELICA DRAUGHT, something which completely changes the affection, with reference to the magic fountain in "Orlando Furioso" from which Rinaldo and Angelica both drank.

ANGELICO, FRA., an Italian painter, born at Mugello, in Tuscany; became a Dominican monk at Fiesole, whence he removed to Florence, and finally to Rome, where he died; devoted his life to religious subjects, which he treated with great delicacy, beauty, and finish, and conceived in virgin purity and child-like simplicity of soul; his work in the form of fresco-painting is to be found all over Italy (1387-1455).

ANGELUS, a devotional service in honour of the Incarnation.

ANGERS, on the Maine, the ancient capital of Anjou, 160 m. SW. of Paris, with a fine cathedral, a theological seminary, and a medical school; birthplace of David the sculptor.

ANGERSTEIN, JOHN, born in St. Petersburg, a distinguished patron of the fine arts, whose collection of paintings, bought by the British Government, formed the nucleus of the National Gallery (1735-1822).

ANGINA PECTORIS, an affection of the heart of an intensely excruciating nature, the pain of which at times extends to the left shoulder and down the left arm.

ANGLEE, a fish with a broad, big-mouthed head and a tapering body, both covered with appendages having glittering tips, by which, as it burrows in the sand, it allures other fishes into its maw.

ANGLES, a German tribe from Sleswig who invaded Britain in the 5th century and gave name to England.

AN'GLESEA, i.e. Island of the Angles, an island forming a county in Wales, separated from the mainland by the Menai Strait, flat, fertile, and rich in minerals.

ANGLESSEY, MARQUIS OF, eldest son of the first Earl of Uxbridge, famous as a cavalry officer in Flanders, Holland, the Peninsula, and especially at Waterloo, at which he lost a leg, and for his services which won him his title; was some time viceroy in Ireland, where he was very popular (1708-1854).

ANGLIA, EAST, territory in England occupied in the 6th century by the Angles, corresponding to the counties of Norfolk, Essex and Suffolk.

ANG'LICAN CHURCH, the body of Episcopal churches all over the British Empire and Colonies, as well as America, sprung from the Church of England, though not all subject to her jurisdiction.

ANGLING, the sport of catching fish with rod, line, and hook, either in fresh or salt water. The former is the more popular, fly-fishing for salmon in Scotland in particular among the wealthy, while in the north of England there are many working men's angling clubs. For sea-fishing worms instead of the fly are mainly used for bait.

ANGLO-CATHOLIC, the name given to the High party of the Church of England, which claims that the church is part of the Catholic Church, holding a common faith with Rome, though not under the authority of the Pope. It had its origin in the Tractarian Movement in Oxford in the middle of the last century, and has made its great stand on the question of reservation of the sacraments, and to a less extent on Catholic ritual and vestments.

ANGLO-SAXON, the name usually assigned to the early infected form of the English language.

ANGOLA, a district on the W. coast of Africa, between the Congo and Benguela, subject to Portugal, the capital of which is St. Paul de Loanda.

ANGORA, since 1923 the seat of the Turkish Govt.; a city in the centre of Anatolia, in a district noted for its silky, long-haired animals, cats and dogs as well as goats.

ANGOSTURA, capital of the province of Guayana, in Venezuela, 240 m. up the Orinoco; also a medicinal bark exported thence.

ANGOULEME, an old French city on the Charente, 88 m. N.E. of Bordeaux, with a fine cathedral, the birthplace of Marguerite de Valois and Balzac.

ANGOULEME, CHARLES DE VALOIS, DUC D', natural son of Charles IX., gained great reputation as a military commander; left Memoirs of his life (1575-1660).

ANGOULEME, DUC D', the eldest son of Charles X., after the Revolution of 1830 gave up his rights to the throne and retired to Gortis (1778-1844).

ANGOULEME, DUCHESS D', daughter of Louis XVI., and wife of the preceding (1778-1851).

ANGRA, the capital of the Azores, on the island of Terceira, a fortified place.

ANGRA PEQUEÑA, a port in SW. Africa, N. of the Orange River, and the nucleus of the territory now known as South-West Africa.

ANGSTROM, PINDERES JONAS, a Swedish physicist and professor at Upsala, distinguished for his studies on the solar spectrum (1814-1874).

ANGULIA, or Snake Island, one of the Lesser Antilles, N. of Porto Rico, belonging to Britain.

ANGUIER, the name of two famous French sculptors in the 17th century.

ANHALT, a duchy of Central Germany, surrounded and split up by Prussian Saxony, and watered by the Elbe and Saale; rich in minerals.

ANHALT-DESSAU, LEOPOLD, PRINCE OF, a Prussian field-marshal, served and distinguished himself in the war of the Spanish Succession and in Italy, was wounded at Cassano, defeated Charles XII. at the Isle of Eugen, and the Saxons and Austrians at Kesseldorf (1676-1747).

ANICHINI, an Italian metallist of the 16th century; executed a medal representing the interview of Alexander the Great with the High Priest of the Jews, which Michael Angelo pronounced to be the perfection of the art.

ANILINE, a colourless transparent oily liquid, obtained chiefly from coal-tar, and extensively used in the production of dyes.

ANIMAL WORSHIP, the deification of certain animals that obtained in many ancient religions, of which survivals are still to be found, as in India and Polynesia.

ANIMISM, a belief that there is a psychical body within the physical body of a living being, correspondent with it in attributes, and that when the connection between them is dissolved by death the former lives on in a ghostly form; in other words, a belief in a ghost-soul existing conjointly with and subsisting apart from the body, its physical counterpart.

NILO, an affluent of the Tiber, 4 m. above Rome; ancient Rome was supplied with water from it by means of aqueducts.

ANISEED, the seed of an anise, an umbelliferous plant, used as a carminative and in the preparation of liquors.

ANJOU, an ancient province in the N. of France, annexed to the crown of France under Louis XI. in 1480; belonged to England till wrested from King John by Philip Augustus in 1208.

ANKARSTRÖM, the assassin of Gustavus III. of Sweden, at a masked ball, March 16, 1792, for which he was executed after being publicly hogged on three successive days.

ANKLAW, an old Hanse town in Pomerania, connected by railway with Swetlin.

ANKOBA, capital of Rhoa, in Abyssinia; stands 8200 ft. above the sea-level.

ANN ARBOR, a city of Michigan, on the Huron, with an observatory and a flourishing university.

ANNA COMNE'NA, a Byzantine princess, who, having failed in a political conspiracy, retired into a convent and wrote the life of her father, Alexius I., under the title of the "Alexiad" (1063-1148).

ANNA IVANOV'NA, niece of Peter the Great, empress of Russia in succession to Peter II. from 1780 to 1740; her reign was marred by the evil influence of her paramour, Biren over her, which led to the perpetration of great cruelties; was famed for her big cheek, "which, as shown in her portraits," Carlyle says, "was comparable to a Westphalian ham" (1693-1740).

ANNAM, an empire, of the size of Sweden, along the east coast of Indo-China, under a French protectorate since 1885; it has a rich, well-watered soil, which yields tropical products, and is rich in minerals.

ANNAN, a burgh in Dumfriesshire, on river Annan; birthplace of Edward Irving, and where Carlyle was a schoolboy and later mathematical master.

ANNAPOLIS, seaport of Nova Scotia, on the Bay of Fundy; also the capital of Maryland, U.S., 28 m. E. of Washington.

ANNE, QUEEN, daughter of James II.; by the union of Scotland with England during her reign in 1707 became the first sovereign of the United Kingdom; her reign distinguished by the part England played in the war of the Spanish succession and the number of notabilities, literary and scientific, who flourished under it, though without any patronage on the part of the Queen (1665-1714).

ANNE, ST., wife of St. Joachim, mother of the Virgin Mary, and the patron saint of carpentry; festival, July 26.

ANNE OF AUSTRIA, the daughter of Philip III. of Spain, wife of Louis XIII., and mother of Louis XIV., became regent on the death of her husband, with Cardinal Mazarin for minister; during the minority of her son triumphed over the Fronde; retired to a convent on the death of Mazarin (1610-1666).

ANNE OF BRITANNY, the daughter of Francis II., Duke of Brittany; by her marriage, first to Charles VIII., then to Louis XII., the duchy was added to the crown of France (1476-1514).

ANNE OF CLEVES, daughter of Duke of Cleves, a wife of Henry VIII., who fell in love with the portrait of her by Holbein, but, being disappointed, soon divorced her; d. 1557.

ANNECY, the capital of Haute-Savoie, in France, on a lake of the name, 22 m. S. of Geneva, at which the Counts of Geneva had their residence, and where Francis of Sales was bishop.

ANNOBON, a Spanish isle in the Gulf of Guinea.

ANNONAY, a town in Ardèche, France; paper is the chief manufacture.

ANNUNCIATION DAY, a festival on the 25th of March in commemoration of the salutation of the angel to the Virgin Mary on the Incarnation of Christ.

ANODE, name given in electrolysis to the positive electrode, where the current enters the liquid, and to the positive electrode of a vacuum tube, such as a thermionic valve or X-ray tube.

ANQUETIL, LOUIS PIERRE, a French historian in holy orders, wrote "Précis de l'Histoire Universelle" and a "Histoire de France" in 14 vols.; continued by Bouillet in 6 more (1723-1806).

ANQUETIL-DUPERRON, ABRAHAM HYACINTHE, brother of the preceding, an enthusiastic Orientalist, to whom we owe the discovery and first translation of the Zend-Avesta and for whom Schopenhauer gained his knowledge of Hindu philosophy (1781-1805).

ANSBACH, a manufacturing town in Bavaria, 25 m. SW. of Nürnberg, the capital of the old margraviate of the name, the margraves of which were Hohenzollerns (c.v.).

ANSCHER, or ANSGAR, ST., a Frenchman born, the first to preach Christianity to the pagans of Scandinavia, was by appointment of the Pope the first archbishop of Hamburg (801-884).

ANSELM, ST., archbishop of Canterbury, a native of Aosta, in Piedmont, monk and abbot; visited England frequently, gained the favour of King Rufus, who appointed him to succeed Lanfranc, quarrelled with Rufus and left the country, but returned at the request of Henry I., a quarrel with whom about investiture ended in a compromise; an able, high-principled, God-fearing man, and a calmly resolute upholder of the teaching and authority of the Church (1033-1109).

ANSON, LORD, a celebrated British naval commander, sailed round the world, during war with Spain, on a voyage of adventure with a fleet of three ships, and after three years and nine months returned to England, his fleet reduced to one vessel, but with £500,000 of Spanish treasure on board. Anson's "Voyage Round the World" contains a highly interesting account of this (1697-1762).

ANSTREY, F. See GUTHRIE, T. A.

ANSTRUTHER, EAST AND WEST, two contiguous royal burghs on the Fife coast, the former the birth-place of Tennant the poet, Thomas Chalmers, and John Goodall the anatomist.

ANTAEUS, a mythical giant, a terra filius or son of the earth, who was strong only when his foot was on the earth; lifted in air he became weak as water, a weakness which Hercules discovered to his discomfiture when wrestling with him. The fable has been used as a symbol of the spiritual strength which accrues when one rests his faith on the immediate fact of things.

ANTALCIDAS, a Spartan general, celebrated for a treaty which he concluded with Persia whereby the majority of the cities of Asia Minor passed under the sway of the Persians, to the loss of the fruit of all the victories gained over them by Athens (387 B.C.).

ANTANANARIOVO, the capital of Madagascar, in the centre of the island, on a well-nigh inaccessible rocky height 5000 ft. above the sea-level.

ANTAR, an Arab chief of the 6th century, a subject of romance, and distinguished as a poet.

ANTARCTIC EXPLORATION. In his ship Discovery Capt. Scott, in 1907, penetrated into this terra incognita, and Shackleton two years later succeeded in his Nimrod expedition in pushing across the ice to within 111 miles of the Pole. In 1911 Amundsen reached the Pole on December 14, and on January 18 the next year Scott and his small party arrived there after great hardship, only to find Amundsen's tent planted on the spot, and to perish in a blizzard on the way back to their base. In 1922 Shackleton died at sea on board the Quest while on another Antarctic voyage.

ANT-BEATERS, a family of edentate mammals; they have a tubular mouth with a small aperture, and a long tongue covered with a viscid secretion, which they thrust into the ant-hills and then withdraw covered with ants.

ANTELOPE, a hollow-horned ruminant closely allied to the sheep and the goat, very like the latter in appearance, with a light and elegant figure, slender, graceful limbs, small cloven hoofs, and generally a very short tail.

ANTEQUEIRA, a town in Andalusia, 22 m. N. of Malaga, a stronghold of the Moors from 712 to 1410.

ANTHELLA, luminous rings witnessed in Alpine and Polar regions, seen round the shadow of one's head in a fog or cloud opposite the sun.

ANTHEMIUS, the architect of the church of St. Sophia in Constantinople; c. 534.

ANTHON, CHARLES, a well-known American classical scholar and editor of the classics (1797-1867).

ANTHRACENE, a crystalline solid, one of the products obtained in the distillation of coal-tar and used for the manufacture of alizarin and other dyes.

ANTHRACITE, a form of hard black coal almost entirely composed of carbon. It burns with little ash or smoke and is therefore suited for naval purposes.

ANTHRAX, a disease, especially in cattle, due to the invasion of a living organism which, under certain conditions, breeds rapidly; called also splenic fever.

ANTHROPOID APES, a class of apes, including the gorilla, chimpanzee, orang-outang, and gibbon, without tails, with semi-erect figures and long arms.

ANTHROPOLOGY, the science of man as he exists or has existed under different physical and social conditions.

ANTHROPOLOGY, the ascription of human attributes to the unseen author of things.

ANTIBES, a seaport and place of ancient date on a peninsula in the S. of France, near Cannes and opposite Nice, much frequented by fashionable to various incarnations of opposition to Christ in usurpation of His authority, but by St. John defined to involve that form of opposition which denies the doctrine of the Incarnation, or that Christ has come in the flesh.

ANTIOCHIA, a barren rocky island in the estuary of the St. Lawrence, frequented by fishermen, and with few inhabitants.

ANTIFERBIN, or acetanilide, is prepared by hoiling aniline with acetic acid and is used as a febrifuge in medicine.

ANTIGONE, the daughter of Oedipus, king of Thebes, led about her father when he was blind and in exile, returned to Thebes at his death; was condemned to be buried alive for covering her brother's exposed body with earth in defiance of the prohibition of Creon, who had usurped the throne; Creon's son, out of love for her, killed himself on the spot where she was buried. She has been immortalized in one of the grandest tragedies of Sophocles.

ANTIGONE, THE MODERN, the Duchess of Angoulême, daughter of Louis XVI. See the parting scene in Carlyle's "French Revolution."

ANTIGONUS, surnamed the Cyclops or One-eyed, one of the generals of Alexander the Great, made himself master of all Asia Minor, excited the jealousy of his rivals; was defeated and slain at Ipsus, in Phrygia, 301 B.C.

ANTIGONUS, the last king of the Jews of the Asmonean dynasty; put to death in 77 B.C.

ANTIGONUS GONATAS, king of Macedonia, grandson of the preceding; twice deprived of his kingdom, but recovered it; attempted to prevent the formation of the Achaean League (276-240 B.C.).

ANTIGUA, one of the Leeward Islands, the seat of the government; the most productive of the group belonging to Britain.

ANTILLES, an archipelago curving round from N. America to S. America, and embracing the Caribbean Sea; the Greater A., on the N. of the sea, being Cuba, Haiti, Jamaica, and Porto Rico; and the Lesser A., on the E., forming the Leeward Islands, the Windward Islands, and the Venezuelan Islands; the Leeward as far as Dominica, the Windward as far as Trinidad, and the Venezuelan along the coast of S. America.

ANTIMONY, a white brittle metal extensively used for alloying with other metals for various purposes. Type-metal contains a proportion of antimony, and during the Great War it was used for hardening bullets.

ANTINOMIANISM, the doctrine that the law is superseded in some sense or other by the all-sufficing, all-emancipating irre spirit of Christ.

ANTINOMY, in the transcendental philosophy the contradiction which arises when we carry the categories of the understanding above experience and apply them to the sphere of that which transcends it.

ANTINOUS, a Bithynian youth of extraordinary beauty, a slave of the Emperor Hadrian; became a great favourite of his and accompanied him on all his journeys. He was drowned in the Nile, and the grief of the emperor knew no bounds; he enrolled him among the gods, erected a temple and founded a city in his honour, while artists vied with each other in immortalizing his beauty.

ANTIOCH, an ancient capital of Syria, on the Orontes, called the Queen of the East, lying on the high-road between the E. and the W., and accordingly a busy centre of trade; once a city of great splendour and extent, and famous in the early history of the Church as the seat of several ecclesiastical councils and the birthplace of Chrysostom. There was an Antioch in Palestine, afterwards called Caesarea.

ANTIOCHUS, name of three Syrian kings of the dynasty of the Seleucids: A. I., Soter, i.e. Saviour, son of one of Alexander's generals, fell heir to all Syria; king from 281 to 261 B.C. A. II., Theos, i.e. God, being such to the Milesians in slaying the tyrant Timarchus; king from 261 to 246. A. III., the Great, extended and consolidated the empire, gave harbour to Hannibal, declared war against Rome, was defeated at Thermopylae and by Scipio at Magnesia, killed in attempting to pillage the temple at Elymais; king from 223 to 187. A. IV.,

, a name given in the New Testament

Epiphanes, i.e. Illustrious, failed against Egypt, tyrannised over the Jews, provoked the Maccabean revolt, and died insane; king from 175 to 164. A. V., Eupator, king from 164 to 162.

ANTIOPE, queen of the Amazons and mother of Hippolytus. "The Sleep of Antiope," chef-d'œuvre of Correggio is in the Louvre.

ANTIPAROS, one of the Cyclades, W. of Paros, with a stalactite cavern.

ANTIPATER, a Macedonian general, governed Macedonia with great ability during the absence of Alexander, defeated the confederate Greek states at Crannon, reigned supreme on the death of Perdiccas (397-317 B.C.).

ANTIPHILUS, a Greek painter, contemporary and rival of Apelles.

ANTIPHON, an Athenian orator and politician, preceptor of Thucydides, who speaks of him in terms of honour; was the first to formulate rules of oratory (479-411 B.C.).

ANTIOPE, a pope elected by a civil power in opposition to one elected by the cardinals, or one self-elected and usurping; there were some 26 of such, first and last.

ANTIPYRETICS, medicines to reduce the temperature in fever, of which the chief are quinine and salicylate of soda.

ANTIPYRINE, a febrifuge prepared from coal-tar, and used as a substitute for quinine.

ANTISANA, a volcano of the N. Andes, in Ecuador, 18,200 ft. high; also a village on its flanks, 13,000 ft. high, one of the highest villages in the world.

ANTISEPTICS, substances used, particularly in surgery, to prevent or arrest putrefaction by killing bacteria.

ANTISTHENES, a Greek philosopher, a disciple of Socrates, the master of Diogenes, and founder of the Cynic school; affected to disdain the pride and pomp of the world, and was the first to carry staff and wallet as the badge of philosophy, but so ostentatiously as to draw from Socrates the rebuke, "I see your pride looking out through the rent of your cloak, Antisthenes."

ANTI-TAURUS, a mountain range running NE. from the Taurus Mts.

ANTITOXINS, substances produced in the body as an antidote against certain poisons, but only produced in the presence of those poisons. If the dead germs of diphtheria are injected into the blood of a horse, the antitoxin is produced and can be used as a cure for cases of the disease. A similar treatment can be used against venom in cases of snake-bite.

ANTIUM, a town of Latium on a promontory jutting into the sea, long antagonistic to Rome, subdued in 333 B.C.; the beaks of its ships, captured in a naval engagement, were taken to form a rostrum in the Forum at Rome; it was the birthplace of Calpurnia and Nero.

ANTOFAGASTA, a rising port in Chile, taken from Bolivia after the war of 1879; exports silver ores and nitrate of soda.

ANTOMAR'CHI, FRANCESCO, Napoleon's attached physician at St. Helena, wrote "The Last Moments of Napoleon" (1780-1838).

ANTONELLI, CARDINAL, the chief adviser and prime minister of Pope Pius IX., accompanied the Pope to Gaeta, came back with him to Rome, acting as his foreign minister there, and offered a determined opposition to the Revolution; left immense wealth (1806-1876).

ANTONELLO, of Messina, Italian painter of the 15th century, introduced from Holland oil-painting into Italy (1414-1493).

ANTONINUS, LIBRARY OF, a valuable geographical work supposed to be of date 46 B.C.

ANTONINUS, MARCUS AURELIUS, Roman emperor, successor to the following; he surpassed him in virtue, being also of the Stoic school and one of its most exemplary disciples, was surnamed the "philosopher," and has left in his "Meditations" a record of his religious and moral principles (121-180).

ANTONINUS PIUS, a Roman emperor, of Stoic principles, who reigned with justice and moderation from 138 to 181, during which time the Empire enjoyed unbroken peace.

ANTONINUS, WALL OF, an earthen rampart about

36 m. in length, from the Forth to the Clyde, in Scotland, as a barrier against invasion from the north, erected in the year 140 A.D.

ANTONINUS, MARCUS, a famous Roman orator and consul, slain in the civil war between Marius and Sulla, having sided with the latter (143-87 B.C.).

ANTONINUS, MARCUS (Mark Antony), grandson of the preceding and warm partisan of Caesar; after the murder of the latter defeated Brutus and Cassius at Philippi, formed a triumvirate with Octavius and Lepidus, fell in love with the famous Cleopatra, was defeated by Octavius in the naval battle of Actium, and afterwards killed himself (83-30 B.C.).

ANTONY, ST., a famous anchorite of the Thebaid; relinquishing his fortune, he spent 20 years of his life, in a lonely ruin by himself, resisting devils without number; left his retreat for a while to institute monasteries, and so became the founder of monachism, but returned to die; festival, Jan. 17 (251-351).

ANTONY OF PADUA, a Minorite missionary to the Moors in Africa; preached to the fishes, who hearkened to him when no one else would; the fishes came in myriads to listen, and shamed the pagans into conversion, says the fable; festival, June 13 (1194-1234).

ANTIRAGUES, COUNT D', one of the firebrands of the French Revolution; but veered round to royalism, and intrigued on behalf of the Bourbons. He settled in England and was assassinated in London (1765-1812).

ANT'RID, a maritime county in the NE. of Ulster, in Ireland; soil two-thirds arable, linen the chief manufacture, exports butter; inhabitants mostly Protestant.

ANTWERP, a large fortified trading city in Belgium, on the Scheldt, 50 m. from the sea, with a beautiful Gothic cathedral, the spire 402 ft. high; the burial-place of Rubens; has a large picture-gallery full of the works of Dutch and Flemish artists.

ANUBIS, an Egyptian deity with the body of a man and the head of a jackal, whose office, it is said, it was to see to the disposal of the souls of the dead in the nether world, on quitting the body.

ANWARI, a Persian lyric poet who flourished in the 12th century.

AN'YTUS, the most vehement accuser of Socrates; banished in consequence from Athens, after Socrates' death.

ANZAC, the name given during the Great War to the Australian and New Zealand Army Corps, formed from the initials of the same.

ANZAC COVE, the bay in the Dardanelles where British and Anzac troops landed on April 25, 1915, under General Sir Ian Hamilton.

AOSTA, a town of Italy, N. of Turin, in a fertile Alpine level valley, but where goitre and cretinism prevail to a great extent; the birthplace of Anselm.

APA CHES, a fierce tribe of American Indians on the S. and W. of the United States; long a source of trouble to the republic. The same name is applied to men of the Paris underworld.

APATITE, a phosphate of lime, found in veins in igneous rocks, and the ore from which are obtained the various phosphorus compounds required in agriculture and chemistry.

APELLES, the most celebrated painter of antiquity; bred, if not born, at Ephesus; lived at the court of Alexander the Great; his great work "Aphrodite Anadyomene"; a man conscious, like Dürer, of mastery in his art, as comes out in his advice to the criticising shoemaker to "stick to his last."

APENNINES, a branch of the Alps extending, with spurs at right angles, nearly through the whole length of Italy, forming about the middle of the peninsula a double chain which supports the tableland of Abruzzi.

APES, DEAD SEA, dwellers by the Dead Sea who, according to the Moslem tradition, were transformed into apes because they turned a deaf ear to God's message to them by the lips of Moses.

APHELION, the point in the orbit of a planet when it is farthest from the sun.

APHIDES, a family of insects very destructive to plants by feeding on them in countless numbers.

APHRODITE, the Greek goddess of love and beauty, wife of Hephaestus and mother of Cupid; sprang from sea-foam; as queen of beauty had the golden apple awarded her by Paris, and possessed the power of conferring beauty on others by means of her magic girdle, the cestus.

APICIUS, the name of three famous Roman epicures, the first of whom was contemporary with Sulla, the second with Augustus, and the third with Trajan.

A'PION, an Alexandrian grammarian of the 1st century, an enemy of the Jews, and hostile to the privileges conceded them in Alexandria.

A'PIE, the sacred live bull of the Egyptians, the incarnation of Osiris; must be black all over the body, have a white triangular spot on the forehead, the figure of an eagle on the back, and under the tongue the image of a scarabæus; was at the end of 25 years drowned in a sacred fountain, had his body embalmed, and his mummy regarded as an object of worship.

APOCALYPTIC WRITINGS, writings composed among the Jews in the 2nd century A.C., and ascribed to one and another of the early prophets of Israel, forecasting the judgments ordained of God to overtake the nation, and predicting its final deliverance at the hands of the Messiah.

APOCRYPHA, THE, a literature of sixteen books composed by Jews, after the close of the Hebrew canon, which, though without the sanction of the prophetic books of the canon, are inscribed, for most part, with the wisdom which rests on the fear of God and loyalty to His law. The word Apocrypha means hidden writing, and it was given to it by the Jews to distinguish it from the books which they accepted as canonical.

APOGEE, the point in the orbit of the moon when it is farthest from the earth.

APOLDA, a town in Saxo-Weimar with extensive hosiery manufactures; has mineral springs.

APOLLINARIUS, bishop of Laodicea, denied the proper humanity of Christ by affirming that the Logos in Him took the place of the human soul, as well as by maintaining that His body was not composed of ordinary flesh and blood; d. 390.

APOLLO, one of the principal gods in the Greek pantheon, identified with the sun and all that we owe to it in the shape of inspiration, art, poetry, and medicine; son of Zeus and Leto; twin brother of Artemis; born in the island of Delos (q.v.), whither Leto had fled from the jealous Hera; his favourite oracle at Delphi.

APOLLODORUS, (1) an Athenian painter, the first to paint figures in light and shade, 408 B.C.; (2) a celebrated architect of Damascus, d. A.D. 129; and (3) an Athenian who wrote a well-arranged account of the mythology and heroic age of Greece.

APOLLONIUS OF RHODES, a grammarian and poet, flourished in the 3rd century B.C., author of the "Argonautica," a rather prosaic account of the adventures of the Argonauts.

APOLLONIUS OF TYANA, a Pythagorean philosopher, who, having become acquainted with some sort of Brahminism, professed to have a divine mission, and, it is said, a power to work miracles; was worshipped after his death, and has been compared with Christ; d. 97.

APOLLON, Jew of Alexandria, who became an eloquent preacher of Christ, contemporary of St. Paul.

APOLLYON, the destroying angel, the Greek name for the Hebrew Abaddon.

APOLOGETICS, a defence of the historical verity of the Christian religion in opposition to the rationalist and mythical theories.

APOSTATE, an epithet applied to the Emperor Julian, from his having, conscientiously however, abjured the Christian religion established by Constantine, in favour of paganism.

APOSTLES OF GERMANY, St. Boniface; A. of Ireland, St. Patrick; of the English, St. Augustine; of the French, St. Denis; of the Gauls, Irenæus; of the Gentiles, St. Paul; of the Goths, Ulfilas; of the Indians, John Elliot; of the Scots, Columba; of the North, Ansgar; of the Poles, St. Ninian; of the Indies, Francis Xavier; of Temperance, Father Mathew.

APOSTLES, THE FOUR, picture of St. John, St. Peter, St. Mark, and St. Paul, in the museum at Munich, painted by Albert Dürer.

APOSTOLIC FATHERS, Fathers of the Church who lived at the same time as the Apostles: Clements, Barnabas, Polycarp, Ignatius, and Hermas.

APOSTOLIC SUCCESSION, the derivation of episcopal power in an unbroken line from the Apostles, a qualification believed by High Churchmen to be essential to the discharge of episcopal functions and the transmission of promised divine grace.

APPALACHIANS, a mountainous system of N. America that stretches N.E. from the tablelands of Alabama to the St. Lawrence, and includes the Alleghenies and the Blue Mountains; their utmost height, under 7000 feet; do not reach the snow-line; abound in coal and iron.

APPENZEL, a canton in the N.E. of Switzerland, enclosed by St. Gall, divided into Outer Rhoden, which is manufacturing and Protestant, and Inner Rhoden, which is agricultural and Catholic; also the name of the capital.

AP'PIAN, an Alexandrian Greek, wrote in 2nd century a history of Rome in 24 books, of which 11 remain.

AP'PIAN WAY, a magnificent highway begun by Apuleius Claudius 312 A.D., and finished by Augustus, and extending from Rome to Brundisium.

APPLE OF DISCORD, a golden apple inscribed with the words, "To the most Beautiful," thrown in among the gods of Olympus on a particular occasion, contended for by Hera, Athena, and Aphrodite, and awarded by Paris of Troy, as referee, to Aphrodite, on promise that he would have the most beautiful woman of the world for wife.

APPLEBY, the county town of Westmorland, on the Eden; is a health resort.

APPLEGATH, AUGUSTUS, inventor of the vertical printing press (1788-1871).

APPLETON, a city of Wisconsin, U.S., on the Fox River.

APPOMATTOX COURTHOUSE, a village in Virginia, U.S., where Gen. Lee surrendered to Gen. Grant in 1865.

APRAJIN, COUNT, a celebrated naval commander under Peter the Great and his right-hand man in many enterprises (1671-1728).

AP'TERYX, a curious New Zealand bird with rudimentary wings, plumage like hair, and no tail, allied to the extinct moa; known popularly as the kiwi.

APULEIUS, a student of Plato, of N. African birth, lived in the 2nd century; having captivated a rich widow, was charged at one time with sorcery; his most celebrated work was the "Golden Ass," which contains, among other stories, the exquisite apologue or romance of Psyche and Cupid (q.v.).

APU'LIA, an ancient province in S.E. of Italy, which extends as far N. as Monte Gargano, and was the scene of the last stages in the second Punic war.

APU'RE, a river in Venezuela, chief tributary of the Orinoco, into which it falls by six branches.

AQUA TOFANA, Tofana's poison, some solution of arsenic prepared by a Sicilian woman called Tofana, in 17th century, and employed to poison many thousands of people.

AQUARIUS, the Water-bearer, 11th sign of the Zodiac, which the sun enters Jan. 21.

AQUATIVA, a general of the Jesuits of high authority (1543-1615).

AQUEDUCTS, pipes for carrying water, such as were used to some extent by the Greeks, and more extensively by the Romans. Several Roman aqueducts are still standing, notably the Aqua Julia and the Aqua Felici.

A'QUILA, capital of the province of Abruzzo Ulteriore, on the Alferno, founded by Barbarossa; lacemaking is the chief industry.

A'QUILA, a Judæised Greek of Sinope, in Pontus, executed a literal translation of the Old Testament into Greek in the interests of Judaism versus Christianity in the first half of the 2nd century A.D.

A'QUILA, GASPARE, a friend of Luther who aided him in the translation of the Bible.

AQUILEIA, an Italian village, 22 m. W. of Trieste, once a place of great importance, where several councils of the Church were held.

AQUINAS, THOMAS, the Angelic Doctor, or Doctor of the Schools, an Italian of noble birth, studied at Naples, became a Dominican monk despite the opposition of his parents, sat at the feet of Albertus Magnus, and went with him to Paris, was known among his pupils as the "Dumb Ox," from his stubborn silence at study; prelected at his Alma Mater and elsewhere with distinguished success, and while on his way to the Council at Lyons, fell sick and died. His "Summa Theologiae," the greatest of his many works is a masterly production and to this day a standard authority in the Romish Church. His writings, which fill 17 folio vols., together with those of Duns Scotus, his rival, constitute the high-water mark of scholastic philosophy and the watershed of its divergence into the philosophico-speculative thought on the one hand, and the ethico-practical or realism of modern times on the other; he was canonized in 1323 (1226-1274).

AQUITAINE, a division of ancient Gaul between the Garonne and the Pyrenees, was from the time of Henry II. till 1453 an appanage of the English crown.

ARABELLA STUART, a cousin of King James I., the victim all her days of jealousy and state policy; suspected of aspiring to the crown on the death of Queen Elizabeth, was shut up in the Tower of London, where she died bereft of reason in 1615 at the age of 38.

ARABESQUE, an ornamentation introduced by the Moors, consisting of imaginary, often fantastic, mathematical or vegetable forms, but exclusive of the forms of men and animals.

ARABIA, the most westerly peninsula of Asia and the largest in the world, being one-third the size of the whole of Europe, consisting of (a) a central plateau with pastures for cattle, and fertile valleys; (b) a ring of deserts, the Nefud in the N., stony, the Great Arabian, a perfect Sahara, in the S., sandy, said sometimes to be 600 ft. deep, with the Dahna between; and (c) stretches of coast land, generally fertile on the W. and S.; is divided into eight territories; has no lakes or rivers, only wadies, often dry; the climate being hot and arid, has no forests, and therefore few wild animals; a trading country with few roads or railways, yet the birth-land of a race that threatened at one time to sweep the globe, and of a religion that has been a life-guidance to wide-scattered millions of human beings for over twelve centuries of time. Politically it is divided into the Kingdom of the Hedjaz and Nejd, the Principality of Kuwait, the Sultanate of Oman, the Imanate of Yemen, and the Imanate of Asir.

ARABIAN NIGHTS, or the Thousand and One Nights, a collection of tales of various origin and date, traceable in their present form to the middle of the 16th century, and first translated into French by Galland in 1704. The thread on which they are strung is this: A Persian monarch having made a vow that he would marry a fresh bride every night and sacrifice her in the morning, the vizier's daughter obtained permission to be the first bride, and began a story which broke off at an interesting part evening after evening for a thousand and one nights, at the end of which term the king, it is said, released her and spared her life. The authoritative English translation is that by Sir R. F. Burton.

ARACHNE, a Lydian maiden, who excelled in weaving, and whom Athena changed into a spider because she had proudly challenged her ability to weave as artistic a work; she had failed in the competition, and previously hanged herself in her despair.

ARAD, a fortified town in Hungary, seat of a bishop, on the right bank of the Maros; manufactures tobacco, trades in cattle and corn.

ARAF, the Mohammedan sheol or borderland between heaven and hell for those who are from incapacity neither good nor bad.

ARAFAT, a granite hill E. of Mecca, a place of pilgrimage as the spot where Adam received his wife after 300 years' separation from her on account of their disobedience to the Lord in deference to the suggestion of Satan.

ARAGO, DOMINIQUE FRANÇOIS, French physicist and astronomer; appointed director of Paris Observatory in 1830. He made discoveries in connection with the polarization of light and in electromagnetism (1786-1853).

ARAGO, JACQUES, a brother of the preceding, a

litterateur and a traveller, author of "A Voyage Round the World" (1790-1855).

AR'AGON, a territory in the NE. of Spain, traversed by the Ebro, and divided southward into the provinces of Huesca, Saragossa, and Teruel; mountainous in the N., with beautiful fertile valleys, rather barren, in the S.; was a kingdom till 1469.

ARAGUAY, an affluent of the Tocantins, in Brazil, which it joins after a course of 1000 m., augmented by subsidiary streams.

ARAKAN, a strip of land in British Burmah, on the E. of the Bay of Bengal, 400 m. long and from 15 to 90 m. broad, a low, marshy country; produces and exports large quantities of rice, as well as sugar and hemp. The natives belong to the Burman stock, and are of the Buddhist faith, though there is a sprinkling of Mohammedans among them.

ARAL, THE SEA OF, a lake in Turkestan, 265 m. long and 145 broad, larger than the Irish Sea, 150 m. E. of the Caspian; has no outlet, is shallow, and is said to be drying up.

ARAM, EUGENE, an English school-usher of scholarly attainments, convicted of murder years after the act and executed 1759, to whose fate a novel of Bulwer Lytton and a poem by Hood have lent a romantic and somewhat fictitious interest.

ARAMEA, the territories lying to NE. of Palestine, the inhabitants of which spoke a Semitic dialect called Aramaic, and improperly Chaldee.

ARAMAIC, the language of Palestine in the days of Christ, a Semitic dialect that has now almost entirely died out.

ARAME'ANS, a generic name given to the Semitic tribes that dwelt in the NE. of Palestine, also to those that dwelt at the mouths of the Euphrates and the Tigris.

ARAN, VAL D', a Pyrenean valley, source of the Garonne, and one of the highest of the Pyrenees.

ARAN ISLANDS, three islands with antique relics across the mouth of Galway Bay, to which they form a breakwater.

ARANDA, COUNT OF, an eminent Spanish statesman, banished the Jesuits, suppressed brigandage, and outwitted the power of the Inquisition; was Prime Minister of Charles IV., and was succeeded by Godoy (1719-1798).

ARANJUEZ, a town 28 m. SE. of Madrid, long the spring resort of the Spanish Court.

AR'ANY, JANOS, a popular Hungarian poet of peasant origin, attained to eminence as a man of letters (1819-1892).

ARAPAHOES, a tribe of North American Indians in Colorado, with long black hair and large noses.

AR'ARAT, a mountain in Armenia on which Noah's ark is said to have rested; 17,000 ft. high, it is a volcanic peak also known as Mount Massis. Ararat is an old name of Armenia.

ARAT'US, native of Sicyon, in Greece, promoter of the Achaean League, in which he was thwarted by Philip of Macedon, was poisoned, it is said, by the latter's order (271-213 B.C.); also a Greek poet, author of two didactic poems, born in Cilicia, quoted by St. Paul in Acts xvii. 28.

ARAUCA'NIA, the country of the Araucos, in Chile, S. of Concepcion and N. of Valdivia, the Araucos being an Indian race long resistant but now subject to Chilean authority, and interesting as the only one that has proved itself able to govern itself and hold its own in the presence of the white man.

ARAUCA'RIA, tall coniferous trees, natives of and confined to the southern hemisphere.

ARBE'LA, a town near Mosul, where Alexander the Great finally defeated Darius, 331 B.C.

ARBERGATE, a thriving seaport and manufacturing town on the Forfarshire coast, 17 m. N. of Dundee, with the picturesque ruins of an extensive old abbey, of which Cardinal Beaton was the last abbot. It is the "Fairport" of the "Antiquary."

ARBUETHNOT, JOHN, a physician and eminent literary man of the age of Queen Anne and her two successors, born in Kincardineshire, the friend of Swift and Pope, joint-author with Swift, it is thought, of the "Memoirs of Martinus Scriblerus" and the "History of John Bull" (1667-1735).

ARC LAMPS have carbon electrodes kept a short distance apart, the current being carried across the space by the carbon vapour, the high temperature produced—3000° C.—raising the carbon to white heat. A similar arc is used for the electric furnace and electric welding.

ARCACHON, a popular watering-place, with a fine beach and a mild climate, favourable for invalids suffering from pulmonary complaints, 34 m. SW. of Bordeaux.

ARCA DIA, a mountain-girt pastoral tableland in the heart of the Moors, 50 m. long by 40 broad, conceived by the poets as a land of shepherds and shepherdesses, and rustic simplicity and bliss; it was the seat of the worship of Artemis and Pan.

ARCA DIUS, the first emperor of the East, born in Spain, a weak, luxurious prince, leaving the government in other hands (877-406).

ARCESILAUS, a Greek philosopher, a member of the Platonic School and founder of the New Academy, who held in opposition to the Stoics that perception was not knowledge, denied that we had any accurate criterion of truth, and denounced all dogmatism in religion.

ARCEAN ROCKS, those igneous rocks underlying the Cambrian in which no certain traces of life have been found. These rocks form much of the highlands of Scotland.

ARCHEOLOGY, the study or the science of the monuments of antiquity, as distinct from paleontology, which has to do with extinct organisms or fossil remains.

ARCHEOPTERYX, the earliest species of bird, remains of which have been found in the Upper Jurassic beds of Bavaria. It preserved many reptilian characteristics.

ARCHANGEL, the oldest seaport of Russia, on the Volga, near its mouth, on the White Sea; is accessible to navigation from July to October, is connected with the interior by river and canal, and has a large trade in flax, timber, tallow, and tar.

ARCHANGELS. Of these, according to the Koran, there are four: Gabriel, the angel who reveals; Michael, the angel who fights; Azrael, the angel of death; Azrael, the angel of the resurrection.

ARCHELAUS, king of Macedonia, and patron of art and literature, with whom Euripides found refuge in his exile, d. 400 B.C.; a general of Mithridates, conquered by Sulla twice over; also the Ethnarch of Judea, son of Herod, deposed by Augustus, died at Vienna.

ARCHER, FREDERICK JAMES, English jockey. Rode his first winner when 13, and before the end of his career rode 2748 winners out of 8084 mounts, being the leading jockey from 1878-1886, including five Derby and six St. Leger winners. Taken ill of typhoid fever in 1886, he shot himself (1857-1886).

ARCHES, COURT OF, an ecclesiastical court of appeal connected with the archbishopric of Canterbury, the judge of which is called the dean.

AR'CHIL, a purple dye obtained from lichens.

ARCHILOCHUS, a celebrated lyric poet of Greece; of a satiric and often bitter vein, the inventor of iambic verse (714-678 B.C.).

ARCHIMEA GO, a sorcerer in Spenser's "Faerie Queene," who in the disguise of a reverend hermit, and by the help of Duessa or Deceit, seduces the Red-Cross Knight from Una or Truth.

ARCHIMEDES OF SYRACUSE, the greatest mathematician of antiquity, a man of superlative inventive power, well skilled in all the mechanical arts and sciences of the day. When Syracuse was taken by the Romans, he was unconscious of the fact, and slain while busy on some problem, by a Roman soldier, notwithstanding the order of the Roman general that his life should be spared. He is credited with the boast: "Give me a fulcrum, and I will move the world." He discovered how to determine the specific gravity of bodies while he was taking a bath, and was so excited over the discovery that, it is said, he dashed off stark naked on the instant through the streets, shouting "Eureka! Eureka! I have found it! I have found it!" (287-212 B.C.).

ARCHIPHEL AGO, originally the Egean Sea, now the name of any similar sea interspersed with islands, or the group of islands included in it.

ARCHITRAVE, the lowest part of an entablature, resting immediately on the capital.

AR'CHON, a chief magistrate of Athens, of whom there were nine at a time, each over a separate department; the tenure of office was first for life, then for ten years, and finally for one.

ARCHYTAS OF TARENTUM, famous as a statesman, a soldier, a geometer, a philosopher, and a man; a Pythagorean in philosophy, and influential in that capacity over the minds of Plato, his contemporary, and Aristotle; was drowned in the Adriatic Sea, 4th century B.C.

ARCIUS-SUR-AUBE, a town 17 m. N. of Troyes, in France, birthplace of Danton; scene of a defeat of Napoleon, March, 1814.

ARCOUS, the buying and selling agency of the Russian Soviet Govt., founded in 1920 and deriving its name from the initial letters of the All-Russian Co-operative Society. In May, 1927, the London headquarters were raided by the police; search revealed evidence of hostile activity on the part of the Soviet Govt., and as a result diplomatic relations between Great Britain and Russia were broken off.

AR'OOT, the name of two districts, N. and S., in the Presidency of Madras; also chief town in the district, 65 m. SW. of Madras; captured by Clive in 1781, once the capital of the Carnatic.

ARCTIC EXPLORATION has its origin in early times, though the first properly organized voyages in search of the North-West and North-East Passages were made in the 16th century. Among these early explorers were Henry Hudson, Sir Hugh Willoughby, Baffin, Frobenius, Davis, and Chancellor. In the early part of the 19th century Ross, Franklin, McClintock, and Parry took part in expeditions, Franklin losing his life in that of 1845, which led to search parties and fresh discoveries. Nansen and Johansen in 1888 got 200 m. nearer the Pole than had previously been reached, and Peary made further progress in 1902, and in 1906 was only 201 m. from the Pole. In 1909 Peary planted the American flag at the Pole, not long after Dr. Cook had announced he had been the first to reach the Pole, a story which was disproved. In 1925 Amundsen tried unsuccessfully to reach the Pole by aeroplane, but in 1928 the airship Norge, under General Noble, succeeded in flying over it, though subsequently forced down.

ARCTIC OCEAN, a circular ocean round the N. Pole, its diameter 40°, with low, flat shores, covered with ice-fields, including numerous islands; the Gulf Stream penetrates it, and a current flows out of it into the Atlantic.

ARCTURUS, star of first magnitude in constellation Bootes at a distance of 135 light-years; it is 13 thousand times as large as the sun.

ARDOCHE, an affluent of the Rhône, with its source in the Cévennes; gives name to a department traversed by the Cévennes Mountains.

ARDEEN, a large forest at one time in England, E. of the Severn.

ARDEN, ENOCH, hero of a poem by Tennyson, who, on his return from the sea, after long absence, finds his wife, who believed him dead, married happily to another; he does not disclose himself, and dies broken-hearted.

ARDENNES, a forest, a tract of rugged woodland on the confines of France and Belgium; also a department of France, on the borders of Belgium.

AR'DOCH, a place in Perthshire, 7 m. from Orkney, with the remains of a Roman camp, the most complete in Britain.

ARENDZ, LEOPOLD, a Russian of literary ability, inventor of a system of stenography extensively used on the Continent (1817-1885).

AREOPAGITICA, a press work of Milton, being a speech for the liberty of unlicensed printing, published in 1644.

AREOPAGUS, the hill of Ares in Athens, which gave name to the celebrated council held there, a tribunal of 81 members, charged with judgment in criminal offences, whose sentences were uniformly the awards of strictest justice.

AREQUIPA, a city in Peru, founded by Pizarro in 1586, in a fruitful valley of the Andes, 8000 ft. above the sea, 30 m. inland; is much subject to earthquakes, and was almost destroyed by one in 1868.

ARES, the Greek god of war in his sanguinary aspects; was the son of Zeus and Hera; identified by the Romans with Mars; was fond of war for its own sake, and had for sister Eris, the goddess of strife, who used to pander to his passion.

ARETE'US, a Greek physician of 1st century; wrote a treatise on diseases.

ARETHU'SA, a celebrated fountain in the island of Ortygia, near Syracuse, transformed from a Nereid pursued thither from Ellis, in Greece, by the river-god Alpheus, so that the waters of the river henceforth mingled with those of the fountain.

ARETINO, PIETRO, called the "Scourge of Princes," a licentious satirical writer, born at Arezzo, in Tuscany; settled in Venice, where his witty verses and plays enjoyed wide popularity (1492-1567).

AREZZO, an ancient Tuscan city, 38 m. SE. of Florence, and eventually subject to it; the birthplace of Meccenas, Michael Angelo, Petrarck, Guido, and Vasari.

AR'GALL, a sheep of Siberia, as large as a moderately-sized ox, with enormous grooved curving horns; it is strong-limbed, sure-footed, and swift.

ARGAN, the hypochondriac rich patient in Molière's "Le Malade Imaginaire."

ARGAND, a Swiss physician and chemist, born at Geneva; inventor of the argand lamp, which, as invented by him, introduced a circular wick (1755-1803).

ARGELANDER, FRIEDRICH WILHELM, a distinguished astronomer, born at Memel, professor at Bonn; he fixed the position of 22,000 stars, and recorded observations to prove that the solar system was moving through space (1790-1875).

AR'GENS, MARQUIS D', a French soldier who turned to letters, author of sceptical writings, of which the best known is entitled "Lettres Juives" (1704-1771).

ARGENSON, RENÉ-LOUIS, MARQUIS D', French statesman, who left "Mémoires" of value as affecting the early and middle part of Louis XV.'s reign (1694-1757).

ARGENTINE REPUBLIC, or ARGENTINA, a federal republic consisting of 14 states and 10 territories, occupying the eastern slope of the Andes and the vast level plain extending from them to the Atlantic, bounded on the N. by Bolivia and Paraguay; its area ten times that of Great Britain and Ireland, while the population includes Italians, French, Spaniards, English, and Germans; produces wheat, maize and other cereals, with sugar and tobacco; large areas are devoted to stock raising, and the country is rich in gold, silver, lead and other minerals; capital, Buenos Aires.

AR'GO, the fifty-oared ship of the Argonauts (q.v.).

AR'GOLIS, the north-eastern peninsula of the Morea of Greece, and one of the 13 provinces of Greece, is 12 m. long by 5 m. broad.

ARGON, an inert gas discovered in the atmosphere by Sir William Ramsay and Lord Rayleigh. See INERT GASES, ATMOSPHERE.

AR'GONAUTS, the Greek heroes, sailors in the Argo, who, under the command of Jason, sailed for Colchis in quest of the golden fleece, which was guarded by a dragon that never slept; a perilous venture, but it proved successful with the assistance of Medea, the daughter of the king, whom, with the fleece, Jason in the end brought away with him to be his wife.

ARGONNE, FOREST OF, in the NE. of France, within the borders of which the Duke of Brunswick was outwitted by Dumouriez in 1792.

AR'GOS, the capital of Argolis, played for long a prominent part in the history of Greece, but paled before the power of Sparta.

AR'GUS, surnamed "The All-seeing," a fabulous creature with a hundred eyes, of which one half were always awake, appointed by Hera to watch over Io, but Hermes killed him after lulling him to sleep by the sound of his flute, whereupon Hera transferred his eyes to the tail of the peacock, her favourite bird. Also the dog of Ulysses, immortalised by Homer; he was the only creature that recognised Ulysses under his rags on his return to Ithaca after twenty years' absence, under such excitement, however, that immediately after he dropped down dead.

ARGUS, a pheasant, a beautiful Oriental game-bird, so called from the eye-like markings on its plumage; found in the Indo-Malay country.

ARGYLL, a large county in the W. of Scotland, consisting of deeply indented mainland and islands, and abounding in mountains, moorlands, and lochs.

ARGYLL, a noble family or clan of the name of Campbell, the members of which have held successively the titles of Earl, Marquis, and Duke, their first patent of nobility dating from 1445, and their earldom from 1463.

ARGYLL, ARCHIBALD CAMPBELL, 1ST MARQUIS OF, sided with the Covenanters, fought against Montrose, disgusted with the execution of Charles I., crowned Charles II. at Scots, after the Restoration committed to the Tower, was tried and condemned, met death nobly (1598-1661).

ARGYLL, ARCHIBALD CAMPBELL, 9TH EARL OF, son of the preceding, fought for Charles II., was taken prisoner, released at the Restoration and restored to his estates, proved rebellious at last, and was condemned to death; escaped to Holland, made a descent on Scotland, was captured and executed in 1685.

ARIAD'NE, daughter of Minos, king of Crete, gave to Theseus a clue by which to escape out of the labyrinth after he had slain the Minotaur, for which Theseus promised to marry her; took her with him to Naxos and left her there, where, according to one tradition, Ariene killed her, and according to another, Dionysus found her and married her, placing her at her death among the gods, and hanging her wedding wreath as a constellation in the sky.

ARIANISM, the heresy of Arius (q.v.).

ARIA'NO, a city with a fine cathedral, 1500 ft. above the sea-level, NE. of Naples; has a trade in wine and butter.

ARI'CA, a seaport connected with Tacna, S. of Peru, the chief outlet for the produce of Bolivia; suffers frequently from earthquakes, and was almost destroyed in 1832.

ARIEGE, a department of France, at the foot of the northern slopes of the Pyrenees; has extensive forests and is rich in minerals.

A'RIEL, in Shakespeare's "Tempest," a spirit of the air, the first of the elementals, imprisoned by Sycorax in the cleft of a pine-tree, and liberated on condition of her serving him for a season, which she willingly engages to do.

A'RIEL, an idol of the Moabites, an outcast angel.

ARIES, the first sign of the zodiac, which the sun enters on March 21. The constellation of that name is now in the sign Taurus, owing to the precession of the equinoxes.

ARI'ON, a lyrist of Lesbos, lived chiefly at the court of Periander, Corinth; returning in a ship from a musical contest in Sicily laden with prizes, the sailors plotted to kill him, when he begged permission to play one strain on his lute; on this being conceded, dolphins crowded round the ship, whereupon he leapt over the bulwarks, was received on the back of one of them and carried to Corinth, arriving there before the sailors, who, on their landing, were apprehended and punished.

ARIOS'TO, LUDOVICO, an illustrious Italian poet, born at Reggio, in Lombardy; spent his life chiefly in Ferrara, mostly in poverty; his great work "Orlando Furioso," published in 40 cantos, in 1516; the work is so called from the chief subject of it, the madness of Roland induced by the loss of his lady-love through her marriage to another (1474-1533).

ARIOVISTUS, a German chief, invaded Gaul and threatened to overrun it, but was forced back over the Rhine by Caesar.

ARISTAE'US, a son of Apollo, the guardian divinity of the vine and olive, of hunters and herdsmen; first taught the management of bees, some of which stung Eurydice to death, whereupon the nymphs, companions of Orpheus, her husband, set upon his bees and destroyed them. In this extremity Aristaeus applied to Proteus, who advised him to sacrifice four bullocks to appease the manes of Eurydice; this done, there issued from the carcasses of the victims a swarm of bees, which reconciled him to the loss of the first ones.

ARISTAR'CHUS OF SAMOS, a Greek astronomer, who first conceived the idea of the rotundity of the earth and its revolution both on its own axis and round the sun, in promulgating which idea he was accused of impudently disturbing the serenity of the gods (280 B.C.).

ARISTARCHUS OF SAMOTHRACE, a celebrated Greek grammarian and critic, who devoted his life to the elucidation and correct transmission of the text of the Greek poets, and especially Homer (168-88 B.C.).

ARISTEAS, a sort of Wandering Jew of Greek fable, who turns up here and there in Greek tradition, and was thought to be endowed with a soul that could as will leave and enter the body.

ARISTIDES, an Athenian general and statesman, surnamed The Just; covered himself with glory at the battle of Marathon; was made archon next year, in the discharge of the duties of which office he received his surname; was banished by ostracism at the instance of his rival, Themistocles; recalled three years after the invasion of Xerxes, was reconciled to Themistocles, fought bravely at Salamis, and distinguished himself at Plataea; managed the finances of the State with such probity that he died poor, was buried at the public charges, and left the State to provide for his children.

ARISTON, a philosopher, tyrant of Athens, put to death by order of Sulla, 80 B.C.

ARISTOTELUS OF CYRENE, founder of the Cyrenaic school of philosophy, a disciple of Socrates; in his teaching laid too much emphasis on one principle of Socrates, apart from the rest, in insisting too exclusively upon pleasure as the supreme good and ultimate aim of life.

ARISTOBULUS I., son of John Hyrcanus, first of the Asmonean dynasty in Judea to assume the name of king, which he did from 104-102 B.C., a pronounced Helleniser; A. II., twice carried captive to Rome, assassinated 60 B.C.; A. III., last of Asmonean dynasty, drowned by Herod in the Jordan, 34 B.C.

ARISTODEMUS, king of Messenia, carried on for 20 years a war with Sparta, till at length, finding resistance hopeless, he put an end to his life on the tomb of his daughter, whom he had sacrificed to ensure the fulfilment of an oracle to the advantage of his house; d. 724 B.C. Also a Greek sculptor, 4th century B.C.

ARISTOMENES, a mythical king of Messenia, celebrated for his struggle with the Spartans, and his resistance to them on Mount Ira for 11 years, which at length fell to the enemy, while he escaped and was snatched up by the gods; died at Rhodes.

ARISTOPHANES, the great comic dramatist of Athens, lived in the 5th century B.C.; directed the shafts of his wit against all, of whatever rank, who sought in any way to amend the religious, philosophical, social, political, or literary creed and practice of the country, and held up to ridicule such men as Socrates and Euripides, as well as Cleon the farmer; wrote 64 plays, of which 11 have come down to us; of these the "Clouds" aims at Socrates, the "Acharnians" and the "Frogs" at Euripides, and the "Knights" at Cleon; d. 384 B.C.

ARISTOTLE, a native of Stagira, in Thrace, and hence named the Stagirite; deprived of his parents while yet a youth; came in his 17th year to Athens, remained in Plato's society there for 20 years; after the death of Plato, at the request of Philip, king of Macedonia, who held him in high honour, became the preceptor of Alexander the Great, then only 13 years old; on Alexander's expedition into Asia, returned to Athens and began to teach in the Lyceum, where it was his habit to walk up and down as he taught, from which circumstance his school got the name of Peripatetic; after 13 years he left the city and went to Chalcis, in Euboea, where he died. He was the oracle of the scholastic philosophers and theologians in the Middle Ages; is the author of a great number of writings which covered a vast field of speculation, of which the progress of modern science goes to establish the value; is often referred to as the incarnation of the philosophic spirit. His chief writings were "The Politics" and "The Poetics," the latter the first written treatise on the principle of criticism (385-322 B.C.).

ARISTOXENUS OF TARENTUM, a Greek philosopher, author of the "Elements of Harmony," the only one of his many works extant, and one of the oldest writers on music; contemporary of Aristotle.

ARIUS, a presbyter of Alexandria in the 4th century and founder of Arianism, which denied the consubstantiality of the Son with the Father in the Trinity, a doctrine which hovered for a time between acceptance and rejection throughout the Catholic Church; was condemned first by a local synod which met at Alexandria in 321, and then by a General Council at Nice in 325, which the Emperor Constantine attended in person; the author was banished to Illyricum, his writings burned, and the possession of them voted to be a crime; after three years he was recalled by Constantine, who ordered him to be restored; was about to be readmitted into the Church when he died suddenly (280-336).

ARIZONA, one of the southern United States, N. of Mexico and W. of New Mexico, nearly four times as large as Scotland, rich in mines of gold, silver, and copper, fertile in the lowlands; much of the surface a barren plateau 11,000 ft. high, through which the cañon of the Colorado passes. See CANON.

ARK OF THE COVENANT, a chest of acacia wood overlaid with gold, 2½ cubits long and 1½ in breadth; contained the two tables of stone inscribed with the Ten Commandments, the gold pot with the manna, and Aaron's rod; the lid supported the mercy-seat, with a cherub at each end, and the shekinah radiance between.

ARKANSAS, one of the Southern States of America, N. of Louisiana and W. of the Mississippi, a little larger than England; rich in metals, grows cotton and corn; the old pronunciation of the name was Arkansaw.

ARKWRIGHT, SIR RICHARD, born at Preston, Lancashire; bred to the trade of a barber; took interest in the machinery of cotton-spinning; with the help of a clockmaker, invented the spinning frame; was mobbed for threatening thereby to shorten labour and curtail wages, and had to flee; fell in with Mr. Strutt of Derby, who entered into partnership with him; prospered in business, was knighted in 1786, and died worth half a million (1732-1792).

ARLBERG, a mountain mass between Vorarlberg and Tyrol, pierced by a tunnel, one of the three that penetrate the Alps, and nearly four miles in length.

ARLES, a city, one of the oldest in France, on the Rhône, 46 m. N. of Marseilles, where Constantine built a palace, with ruins of an amphitheatre and other Roman works; the seat of several Church Councils.

ARLINGTON, HENRY BENNET, EARL OF, served under Charles I., and accompanied Charles II. in his exile; a prominent member of the famous Cabal; being impeached when in office, lost favour and retired into private life (1618-1685).

ARLON, a prosperous town in Belgium, capital of Luxembourg.

ARMA'DA, SPANISH, named the Invincible, an armament fitted out in 1588 by Philip II. of Spain against England, consisting of 130 war-vessels, mounted with 2430 cannon, and manned by 20,000 soldiers; was defeated in the Channel on July 20 by Admiral Howard, seconded by Drake, Hawkins, and Frobisher; completely dispersed and shattered by a storm in retreat on the coasts of Scotland and Ireland, the English losing only one ship; of the whole fleet only 53 ships found their way back to Spain, and these nearly all hors de combat.

ARMAGEDDON, a name given in the Apocalypse to the final battlefield between the powers of good and evil, or Christ and Antichrist.

ARMAGH, a county in Ulster, Ireland, 32 m. long by 20 m. broad; and a town in it, 33 m. S.W. of Belfast from the 5th to the 9th century the capital of Ireland; the chief manufacture, linen-weaving.

ARMAGNAC, a district, part of Gascony, in France, now in dep. of Gers, celebrated for its wine and brandy.

ARMAGNACS, a faction in France in time of Charles VI. at mortal feud with the Bourguignons.

ARMATOLES, warlike marauding tribes in the mountainous districts of Northern Greece, played a prominent part in the War of Independence in 1820.

ARMATURE, the rotating coil of wire in a dynamo or electric motor through which the current flows.

ARME'NIA, a country in Western Asia, W. of the Caspian Sea and N. of Kurdistan Mts., anciently independent, now a republic included in the Transcaucasian Federation under Soviet Russia, occupying a plateau interspersed with fertile valleys, which culminates in Mt. Ararat, in which the Euphrates and Tigris have their sources. The country is rich in copper and manufactures carpets.

ARMENIANS, a people of the Arayan race occupying Armenia, early converted to Christianity of the Eutychnian type; from early times have emigrated into adjoining, and even remote, countries, and are, like the Jews, mainly engaged in commercial pursuits, the wealthier of them especially in banking. Over a million of them were massacred during the Great War.

ARMENTIÈRES, a manufacturing and trading town in France, 12 m. N. of Lille. During the Great War it was the scene of much fighting and was made famous by the song "Mademoiselle from Armentières."

ARMIDA, a beautiful enchantress in Tasso's "Jerusalem Delivered," who bewitched Rinaldo, one of the Crusaders, by her charms, and who in turn, when the spell was broken, was overpowered by his love and persuaded to become a Christian. The Armida Palace, in which she enchanted Rinaldo, has become a synonym for any merely visionary but enchanting palace of pleasure.

ARMINIUS, or HERMANN, the deliverer of Germany from the Romans by the defeat of Varus, the Roman general, in A.D. 9, near Detmold (where a colossal statue has been erected to his memory); killed in some family quarrel in his 37th year.

ARMINIUS, JACOBUS, a learned Dutch theologian and founder of Arminianism, an assertion of the free-will of man in the matter of salvation against the necessitarianism of Calvin (1560-1609).

ARMISTICE, a pact to end fighting prior to a treaty being effected, the most famous being that signed at 5 a.m. on November 11, 1918, under which Germany and the Allies agreed that all troops should cease fire at 11 a.m. that day.

ARMORICA, a district of Gaul in pre-Roman times, extending from the Loire to the Seine; now known as Brittany.

ARMSTRONG, HENRY EDWARD, chemist, professor at City and Guilds College, London. He carried out much useful work in organic and physical chemistry, especially in connection with the terpenes and the compounds of the benzene series.

ARMSTRONG, WARWICK, famous Australian all-round cricketer, who captained the Australian team in Australia in 1920 and in England in 1921 without losing a single Test match (1870-).

ARMSTRONG, WILLIAM GEORGE, LORD, born at Newcastle, produced the hydraulic accumulator and the hydraulic crane, established the Elswick engine works in the suburbs of his native city, and invented the Armstrong gun (1810-1900).

ARMY, BRITISH, was first officially established with five infantry regiments in 1683, the cavalry being established by James II. in 1685. The Territorial Army was started in 1906.

ARNAUD, HENRI, a pastor of the Vaudois, turned soldier to rescue his co-religionists from their dispersion under the persecution of the Count of Savoy; when the Vaudois were exiled a second time, he accompanied them in their exile to Schomberg, and acted as pastor to them till his death (1641-1721).

ARNAULD, ANTOINE, the "great Arnauld," a French theologian, doctor of the Sorbonne, an inveterate enemy of the Jesuits, defended Jansenism against the Bull of the Pope, became religious director of the nuns of Port Royal des Champs, associated here with a circle of kindred spirits, among others Pascal; expelled from the Sorbonne and banished the country, died at Brussels (1612-1694).

ARNAULD, MARIE ANGE'LIQUE, La Mère Angélique as she was called, sister of the preceding and abbess of Port Royal, a victim of the persecutions of the Jesuits to her death (1624-1684).

ARNDT, ERNST MORITZ, a German poet and patriot, whose memory is much revered by the whole

German people, one of the first to rouse his countrymen to shake off the tyranny of Napoleon; his songs and eloquent appeals went straight to the heart of the nation and contributed powerfully to its liberation; his "Geist der Zeit" made him flee the country after the battle of Jena, and his "Was ist des Deutschen Vaterland?" strikes a chord in the breast of every German all the world over (1769-1840).

ARNE, THOMAS AUGUSTINE, a musical composer of versatile genius, produced during over 40 years, a succession of pieces in every style from sonata to sonatas and oratorios, among others the world-famous chorus "Rule Britannia" (1710-1778).

ARN'HEIM, the capital of Guelderland, is situated on the right bank of the Rhine, and has a large transit trade.

ARNIM, BETTINA VON, sister of Clemens Brentano, wife of Ludwig von Arnim, a native of Frankfurt; at 22 conceived a passionate love for Goethe, then in his 60th year, visited him at Weimar, and corresponded with him afterwards, part of which correspondence appeared subsequently under the title of "Goethe's Correspondence with a Child" (1788-1859).

ARNIM, COUNT, ambassador of Germany, first at Rome and then at Paris; accused in the latter capacity of purloining State documents, and sentenced to imprisonment; died in exile at Nice (1824-1841).

ARNIM, LUDWIG ACHIM VON, a German poet and novelist (1781-1831).

ARNO, a river of Italy, rises in the Apennines, flows westward past Florence and Pisa into the Mediterranean; subject to destructive inundations.

ARNOBIUS, an African rhetorician who, in the beginning of the 4th century, embraced Christianity, and wrote a book in its defence, still extant and of great value, entitled "Disputations against the Heathen."

ARNOLD, BENEDICT, an American soldier, entered the ranks of the insurgent colonists under Washington during the War of Independence, distinguished himself in several engagements; promoted to the rank of general, negotiated with the English general Clinton to surrender an important post entrusted to him, escaped to the English ranks on the discovery of the plot, and served in them against his country; d. in England in 1801.

ARNOLD, MATTHEW, poet and critic, eldest son of Thomas Arnold of Rugby; professor of Poetry in Oxford from 1857 to 1867; inspector of schools for 35 years from 1851; commissioned twice over to visit France, Germany, and Holland, to inquire into educational matters there; wrote two separate reports thereon of great value; author of "Poems," "Essays on Criticism," "Culture and Anarchy," "St. Paul and Protestantism," "Literature and Dogma" (1822-1888).

ARNOLD, SIR EDWIN, poet and journalist, learned in Indian literature; author of the "Light of Asia," "Light of the World," and other works in prose and verse (1832-1904).

ARNOLD, THOMAS, head master of Rugby, and professor of Modern History at Oxford; by his moral character and governing faculty effected immense reforms in Rugby School; was liberal in his principles and of a philanthropic spirit; he wrote a "History of Rome" based on Niebuhr, and edited Thucydides; his "Life and Correspondence" was edited by Dean Stanley. He is the head master mentioned in "Tom Brown's School-days" (1795-1842).

ARNOLD OF BRESOLA, an Italian monk, and disciple of Abelard; declaimed against the temporal power of the Pope, the corruptions of the Church, and the avarice of the clergy; headed an insurrection against the Pope in Rome, which collapsed under the Pope's interdict; at last was burned alive in 1156, and his ashes thrown into the Tiber.

ARNOLD OF WINKELRIED, the Decius of Switzerland, a peasant of the canton of Unterwald, who, by the voluntary sacrifice of his life, broke the lines of the Austrians at Sempach in 1386 and decided the fate of the battle.

ARNOTT, DR. NEIL, a native of Arbroath, author of the "Elements of Physics" and of several hygienic inventions (1788-1874).

AROU'ET, the family name of Voltaire; his name formed by an ingenious transposition he made of the letters of his name, Arouet L. I. (le jeune).

ARPAD, the national hero of Hungary; established for the Magyars a firm footing in the country; was founder of the Arpad dynasty, which became extinct in 1301; d. 907.

ARPI'NO (ARPINUM), an ancient town in Latium, S. of Rome, birthplace of Cicero and Marius.

ARQUA, a village 12 m. SW. of Padua, where Petrarch died and was buried.

ARRACK, a spirituous liquor, especially that distilled from the juice of the coco-nut tree and from fermented rice.

AR'RAH, a town in Bengal, 36 m. from Patna; famous for its defence by a handful of English and Sikhs against thousands during the Mutiny.

ARRAN, largest island in the Firth of Clyde, in Bute-shire; a mountainous island, highest summit (Goatfell, 2866 ft., with a margin of lowland round the coast; nearly all the property of the Duke of Hamilton, whose seat is Brodick Castle.

ARRAS, a French town in the dep. of Pas-de-Calais, long celebrated for its tapestry; the birthplace of Darnaud and Robespierre. It was the scene of five battles during the Great War.

ARRENIUS, SVANTE AUGUST, professor of physics at Stockholm, 1895-1905, and afterwards director of the department of physical chemistry at the Nobel Institute. He originated the theory of electrolytic dissociation, which laid the foundations of modern physical chemistry. Awarded Nobel Prize in 1903 (1859-1927).

AR'RIA, a Roman matron, who, to encourage her husband in meeting death, to which he had been sentenced, thrust a poniard into her own breast, and then handed it to him, saying, "It is not painful," whereupon he followed her example.

AR'RIAN, FLAVIUS, a Bithynian, a friend of Epictetus the Stoic, edited his "Enchiridion"; wrote a "History of Alexander the Great," and "Periplus," an account of voyages round the Euxine and round the Red Sea; b. 100, and died at an advanced age.

ARROW-HEADED CHARACTERS, the same as the Cuneiform (q.v.).

ARRU ISLANDS, a group of 80 coralline islands, belonging to Holland, W. of New Guinea; export mother-of-pearl, pearls, tortoise-shell, &c.

AR'SACES I., the founder of the dynasty of the Arsacidae, by a revolt which proved successful against the Seleucidae, 250 B.C.

ARSACIDÆ, a dynasty of 31 Parthian kings, who wrested the throne from Antiochus II., the last of the Seleucidae, 250 B.C.

ARSENIC, is found in many mineral ores, including mispickel, realgar, and orpiment, and is used for green paint, drugs, and as a weed-killer.

ARSINOË, the name of several Egyptian princesses of antiquity; also a prude in Mollère's "Misanthrope."

ARTA, GULF OF, gulf forming the NW. frontier of Greece; scene of battle of Actium, 29 B.C.

ARTAXERXES, the name of four ancient Persian monarchs: A. I., called the "Long-handed," from his right hand being longer than his left; son of Xerxes I.; concluded a peace with Greece after a war of 52 years; entertained Themistocles at his court; king from 465 to 424 B.C. A. II., Mnemon, vanquished and killed his brother Cyrus at Cunaxa in 401, who had revolted against him; imposed in 387 on the Spartans the shameful treaty of Antalcidas; was king from 405 to 359 B.C. A. III., Ochus, son of the preceding, slew all his kindred on ascending the throne; in Egypt slew the sacred bull Apis and gave the flesh to his soldiers, for which his eunuch Bagoas poisoned him; king from 359 to 338 B.C. A. IV., grandson of Sasan, founder of the dynasty Sassanidae; restored the old religion of the Magi, amended the laws, and promoted education; king from A.D. 223 to 232.

AR'TEGAL, the impersonation and champion of Justice in Spenser's "Faerie Queene."

AR'TEMIS, in the Greek mythology the daughter of Zeus and Leto, twin sister of Apollo, born in the Isle of Delos, and one of the great divinities of the Greeks; a virgin goddess, represented as a huntress armed with bow and arrows; presided over the birth of animals, was guardian of flocks.

ARTEMISIA, queen of Halicarnassus, joined Xerxes in his invasion of Greece, and fought with valour at Salamis, 440 B.C. A. II., also queen, raised a tomb over the grave of her husband Mausolus, regarded as one of the seven wonders of the world, 355 B.C.

ARTEMISIUM, a promontory N. of Euboea, near which Xerxes lost part of his fleet, 480 B.C.

ARTEMUS WARD. See C. F. BROWNE.

ARTESIAN WELLS, wells made by boring for water where it is lower than its source, so as to obtain a constant supply of it; so called from Artois (Artestum) in France, where the first was sunk in 1126.

AR'VEVELDE, JACOB VAN, a wealthy brewer of Ghent, chosen chief in a revolt against Count Louis of Flanders, expelled him, made a treaty with Edward III. as lord-superior of Flanders, and was massacred in a popular tumult (1285-1345).

ARTEVELDE, PHILIP VAN, son of the preceding, defeated Louis II. and became regent; but with the help of France Charles VI. retaliated and defeated the Flemings, and slew him in 1382 (1340-1382).

ARTFUL DODGER, a young thief, an expert in the profession in Dickens' "Oliver Twist."

ARTHUR, a British prince of widespread fame, who is supposed to have lived at the time of the Saxon invasion in the 6th century, whose exploits and those of his court have given birth to the tradition of the Round Table, to the rendering of which Tennyson devoted so much of his genius. Arthurian Romance owes much to the writings of Geoffrey of Monmouth (12th cent.), Walter Map (12th cent.), and Sir Thomas Malory (15th cent.).

ARTHUR, PRINCE, DUKE OF BRITTANY, heir to the throne of England by the death of his uncle Richard I.; supplanted by King John.

ARTHUR'S SEAT, a lion-shaped hill 822 ft., close to Edinburgh on the E., from the top of which the prospect is unrivalled.

ARTICLES, THE THIRTY-NINE, originally Forty-Two, a creed framed in 1562, to which every clergyman of the Church of England is bound by law to subscribe at his ordination, as the accepted faith of the Church.

ARTIST, PRINCE OF, Albert Dürer, so called by his countrymen.

AR'TOIS, an ancient province of France, comprising the dep. of Pas-de-Calais, and parts of the Somme and the Nord; united to the crown in 1559.

ARTZ, DAVID ADOLF CONSTANT, Dutch painter; much influenced in his early years by Josef Israëls while a student at Amsterdam, and later by the Maris brothers in Paris; he became one of the best of the 19th-century Dutch genre painters, his homely subjects including "With Grandmother," "The Old Fisherman," and "The Return of the Flock" (1837-1890).

AR'UNDEL, a town in Sussex, on the Arun, 9 m. E. of Chichester, with a castle of great magnificence, the seat of the Dukes of Norfolk.

ARUNDEL, THOMAS, successively bishop of Ely, Lord Chancellor, archbishop of York, and archbishop of Canterbury; a persecutor of the Wickliffites, but a munificent benefactor of the Church (1353-1414).

ARUNDEL MARBLES, ancient Grecian marbles collected at Smyrna and elsewhere by the Earl of Arundel in 1624, now in the possession of the University of Oxford, the most important of which is one from Paros inscribed with a chronology of events in Grecian history from 1582 to 264 B.C.; the date of the marbles themselves is 263 B.C.

ARUNS, son of Tarquinius Superbus, who fell in single combat with Brutus.

ARUWITI, an affluent of the Congo on the right bank below the Stanley Falls.

ARVA LES, PRATES, a college of twelve priests in ancient Rome whose duty it was to make annual offerings to the Lares for the increase of the fruits of the field.

ARVE, a river that flows through the Jura and falls into the Rhône below Geneva.

ARVEYRON, an affluent of the Arve from the Mer de Glace, Haute-Savoie, France.

AR'YANS, or Indo-Europeans, a race that is presumed to have had its primitive seat in Central Asia, E. of the Caspian Sea and N. of the Hindu-Kush, and to have branched off at different periods north-westward and westward into Europe, and southward into Persia and the valley of the Ganges, from which sprang the Greeks, Latins, Celts, Teutons, Slavs, on the one hand, and the Persians and Hindus on the other, a community of origin that is attested by the comparative study of their respective languages.

ARZEW, a seaport in Algeria, 22 m. from Oran, with Roman remains; exports grain and salt.

ARACE-TIA, a feld impregnated sap from an Indian umbelliferous tree, used in medicine.

ASAPH, a musician of the temple at Jerusalem in the time of David and Solomon.

ASAPH, ST., a town in Flintshire, 20 m. from Chester; seat of a bishopric.

ASBESTOS, a fibrous non-inflammable mineral found in the igneous rocks of Devonian age in Canada and elsewhere. It is largely used for making fireproof materials, owing to its bad thermal conductivity, and for motor-car brakes and clutches.

ASBURY, FRANCIS, a zealous, assiduous Methodist preacher and missionary, sent to America, was consecrated the first bishop of the Methodist Church there (1745-1816).

AS-CALON, one of the five cities of the Philistines, much contested during the Crusades.

ASCA NIUS, the son of Aeneas, who trotted non passibus regis ("with unequal steps") by the side of his father as he escaped from burning Troy; was founder of Alba Longa.

ASCAPART, a giant conquered by Bevis of Southampton, though so huge as to carry Bevis, his wife, and horse under his arm, a character in Drayton's "Polyolbion."

ASCENSION, a bare volcanic island in the Atlantic, rising to nearly 3000 ft., belonging to Britain, 700 m. N.W. of St. Helena, and 900 m. from the coast of Africa; a coaling and victualling station for the navy, in which it is rated as a man-of-war, H.M.S. Ascension.

ASCHAPFENBURG, an ancient town of Bavaria, on the Main, 20 m. from Frankfort, with an old castle and cathedral.

ASCHAM, ROGER, a Yorkshireman, Fellow of Cambridge, a good classical, and particularly Greek, scholar; wrote a book on archery, deemed a classic, entitled "Toxophilus," for which Henry VIII. settled a pension on him; was tutor and Latin secretary to Queen Elizabeth; his chief work, the "Schoolmaster," a treatise on education (1516-1568).

ASCHERSLEBEN, a manufacturing town in the Magdeburg district of Prussia.

ASCLEPIADES, a Bithynian who practised medicine with repute at Rome in Cæsar's time, and was great in hygiene (1st cent. B.C.).

AS-COT, a race-course in Berks, 6 m. S.W. of Windsor, the races at which, instituted by Queen Anne, take place a fortnight after the Derby.

AS-GARD, the garden or heaven of the Aesir or gods in the Norse mythology, in which each had a separate dwelling, and wherein they held intercourse with the other spheres of existence by the bridge Bifrost, &c. the rainbow.

ASH, JOHN, a dissenting divine, author of an English dictionary, valuable for the number of obsolete and provincial words contained in it (1724-1779).

ASH-ANTI, or ASHANTEE, a negro inland kingdom in the Upper Soudan, N. of Gold Coast territory, wooded, well watered, and well cultivated; natives intelligent, warlike, and skilful; twice provoked a war with Great Britain, and finally the despatch of a military expedition under Sir Garnet (afterwards Lord) Wolseley, which led to the submission of the king and the appointment of a British Resident; annexed by Great Britain 1901.

ASHBURNHAM, 4TH EARL OF, collected a number of valuable MSS. and rare books known as the Ashburnham Collection (1797-1878).

ASHBURN, ALEXANDER BARING, LORD, second son of Sir Francis Baring, a Liberal politician, turned Conservative, member of Peel's administration in 1834-35, sent as special ambassador to the United States in 1842; concluded the boundary treaty of Washington, known as the Ashburn Treaty (1774-1848).

ASHBY-DE-LA-ZOUCH, a small market-town 17 m. W. of Leicester, figures in "Ivanhoe"; with the ruins of a castle in which Queen Mary was immured.

ASHDOD, a maritime Philistine city 20 m. S. of Jaffa, seat of the Dagon worship.

ASHE'RA, an image of Ashtar (q.v.), and associated with the worship of that Syrian goddess.

ASHES, THE, the mythical trophy for which England and Australia compete in Test matches at cricket. In 1882 Australia beat England at the Oval, and a sporting paper published a mock In Memoriam notice "in loving memory of English cricket, which died at the Oval on August 29, 1882. The remains will be cremated and the ashes taken to Australia." Since then every team going to or coming from Australia has been said to be fighting for "the Ashes."

ASH-MOLE, ELIAS, a celebrated antiquary and authority on heraldry; presented to the University of Oxford a collection of rarities bequeathed to him, which laid the foundation of the Ashmolean Collection there (1617-1692).

ASHMUN, JEHUDI, an American philanthropist, founder of the Negro Republic of Liberia, on the W. coast of Africa (1794-1828).

ASH-TAROT. See ASTARTE.

ASH-TON-UNDER-LYNE, a cotton-manufacturing town near Manchester.

ASIA, the largest of the four quarters of the globe; contains one-third of all the land, which, from a centre of high elevations, extensive plains, and deep depressions, stretches southward into three large peninsulas separated by three immense arms of the sea, and eastward into three bulging masses and three pronounced peninsulas forming seas, protected by groups of islands; with rivers the largest in the world, of which four flow N. to S.E., and eight S. with a large continental basin, also the largest in the world, and with lakes which, though they do not match those of America and Africa, strikingly stand at a higher level towards the E.; with every variety of climate, with a richly varied flora and fauna, with a population of more than a thousand million, half that of the globe, of chiefly three races, Caucasian, Mongolian, and Malay, at different stages of civilisation, and as regards religion, by far the majority professing the faith of Brahma, Buddha, Mohammed, or Christ.

ASIA MINOR, called also ANATOLIA, a peninsular extension westward of the Armenian and Kurdistan highlands in Asia, bounded on the N. by the Black Sea, on the W. by the Archipelago, and on the S. by the Levant; indented all round, mainland as well as adjoining islands, with bays and harbours, all more or less busy centres of trade; is as large as France, and consists of a plateau with slopes all round to the coasts.

ASKE, ROBERT, leader of the Pilgrimage of Grace, in Yorkshire and Lincolnshire, arising from the ecclesiastical reforms of Henry VIII.; was executed 1537.

ASKEW, ANNE, a lady of good birth, a victim of persecution in the time of Henry VIII. for denying transubstantiation, tortured on the rack and burnt at the stake, 1546.

ASMODE'US, a mischievous demon or goblin of the Jewish demonology, who gloats on the vices and follies of mankind and figures in Le Sage's "Le Diable Boiteux," or the "Devil on Two Sticks," as lifting off the roofs of the houses of Madrid and exposing their most interiors and the secret doings of the inhabitants.

ASMONÆ'ANS, a name given to the Maccabees, from Asmon, the place of their origin.

ASO'KA, a king of Belhar, in India; after his accession in 264 B.C. became an ardent disciple of Buddha; organised Buddhism, as Constantine did Christianity, into a State religion; convened the third great council of the Church of that creed at Patna; made a proclamation of this faith as far as his influence extended, evidence of which is still extant in pillars and rocks inscribed with his edicts in wide districts of Northern India (272-232 B.C.).

ASP, a venomous Egyptian viper of uncertain species; a viper common in Italy and to be found in Algeria.

ASPA'SIA, a Greek courtesan remarkable for her wit, beauty, and culture, a native of Miletus; being attracted to Athens, came and settled in it; became the wife of Pericles, and made her home the rendezvous of all the intellectual and wise people of the city, Socrates included.

ASPERN, a village in Austria, on the Danube, 4 m. N.E. of Vienna, the scene of a fierce battle between the Austrians under the Archduke Charles and the French under Napoleon, May 21, 1809, in which Marshal Lannes was killed.

ASPHALT, a mineral pitch of a black or brownish-black colour, consisting chiefly of carbon; also a limestone impregnated with bitumen.

ASPHALTIC LAKE, the Dead Sea (q.v.), so called from the asphalt on its surface and banks.

ASPHODEL, a lily plant appraised by the Greeks for its almost perennial flowering, and with which they, in their imagination, covered the Elysian fields, called hence the Asphodel Meadow.

ASPENWALL, a town founded by an American of the name in 1800, at the Atlantic extremity of the Panama railway and canal; named (so, since the Empress Eugénie presented it with a statue of Columbus.

ASPROMONTE, a mountain close by Reggio, overlooking the Strait of Messina, near which Garibaldi was defeated and captured in 1802.

ASQUINI, COUNT, a rural economist who did much to promote silk culture in Italy (1726-1818).

ASQUITH, RT. HON. H. H. See OXFORD AND ASQUITH.

ASSAB BAY, a coaling-station belonging to Italy, on the W. coast of the Red Sea.

ASSAM, a province E. of Bengal, ceded to Britain after the Burmese war in 1824; is an alluvial plain, with ranges of hills along the Brahmaputra, 450 m. long and 50 broad; the low lands extremely fertile and productive, and the hills covered with tea plantations.

ASSAROTTI, an Italian philanthropist, born at Genoa; the first to open a school for deaf-mutes in Italy; he devoted zealously his fortune and time to the task (1753-1821).

ASSASSINS, a fanatical Moslem sect organised in the 11th century, at the time of the Crusades, under a chief called the Old Man of the Mountain, whose stronghold was a rock fortress at Alamut, in Persia, devoted to the as-sassination of all enemies of the Moslem faith, and called because they braced their nerves for their deeds of blood by draughts of an intoxicating liquor distilled from hashish (the hemp-plant). A Tartar force burst upon the horde in their stronghold in 1256, and put them wholesale to the sword.

ASSAYE, a small town 46 m. N.E. of Aurungabad, where Sir Arthur Wellesley gained a victory over the Marhattas in 1803.

ASSEGAI, a spear or javelin of wood tipped with iron, used by certain S. African tribes with deadly effect in war; of two varieties, the long throwing-spear and the short stabbing-spear.

ASSEMANI, GIUSEPPE, a learned Syrian Maronite, librarian of the Vatican, wrote an account of Syrian writers (1687-1768); Stefano, nephew, held the same office, wrote "Acta Sanctorum Martyrum" (1707-1782).

ASSEMBLY, CHURCH, was set up under the Enabling Act of 1919; it governs the Church of England subject to the approval of Parliament, and consists of three houses, bishops, clergy, and laity, the last two elected from the diocesan conferences.

ASSEMBLY, GENERAL, the chief court of the Presbyterian Church, a representative body, half clergymen and half laymen, which sits in Edinburgh for ten days in May, disposes of the general business of the Church, and determines appeals.

ASSEMBLY, NATIONAL, the Commons section of the States-General of France which met on May 5, 1789, constituted itself into a legislative assembly, and gave a new constitution to the country.

ASSER, JOHN, monk of St. David's, in Wales, and bishop of Sherborne, tutor, friend, and biographer of Alfred the Great; is said to have suggested the founding of Oxford University; d. 909.

ASSIENTO, a treaty with Spain to supply negroes for her colonies, concluded in succession with the Flemings, the Genoese, a French company, the English, and finally the South Sea Company, who relinquished their rights in 1750 on compensation by Spain.

AS-SIGNATS, bills or notes, to the number of 45 thousand million, issued as currency by the revolutionary government of France in 1790, and based on the security of Church and other lands appropriated to it, and which in course of time became almost valueless, to the ruin of millions.

ASSINIBOIA, a prairie region in Canada, included in the province of Saskatchewan since 1905.

ASSINIBOINE, a river in Canada, flowing from Saskatchewan to the Red River, Manitoba; it gives its name to an Indian tribe of the Sioux stock.

ASSIOUT, province and town in Upper Egypt; town is the site of a Nile barrage and lock.

ASSISI, a town in Central Italy, 12 m. S.E. of Perugia, the birthplace and burial-place of St. Francis, and the birthplace of Metastasio; it was a celebrated place of resort of pilgrims, who sometimes came in great numbers.

ASSOUAN, the ancient Syene, the southernmost city of Egypt, on the right bank of the Nile, near the last cataract. A dam one mile in length, capable of storing 2,420,000,000 cubic metres of water, was opened here in 1902.

ASSOUCY, D', a French burlesque poet ridiculed by Boileau (1604-1679).

ASSUMPTION, FEAST OF THE, festival in honour of the translation of the Virgin Mary to heaven, celebrated on the 15th of August.

ASSUR, mythical name of the founder of Assyria, who was afterwards deified.

ASSYRIA, an ancient kingdom, the origin and early history of which is uncertain, between the Niphates Mountains of Armenia on the N. and Babylonia on the S., 280 m. long and 150 broad, with a fertile soil and a population at a high stage of civilisation; became a province of Media, which lay to the E., in 606 B.C., and afterwards a satrapy of the Persian empire, and was under the Turks from 1638 till the Great War, when it was mandated to France.

ASSYRIOLOGY, the study of the monuments of Assyria, chiefly in a Biblical interest.

ASTARTE, or ASHTOROTH, or IST'AR, the female divinity of the Phœnicians, as Baal was the male, these two being representative respectively of the concceptive and generative powers of nature, and symbolised, the latter, like Apollo, by the sun, and the former, like Artemis or Diana, by the moon; sometimes identified with Urania and sometimes with Venus; the rites connected with her worship were of a lascivious nature.

ASTER, of Amphipolis, an archer who offered his services to Philip of Macedon, boasting of his skill in bringing down birds on the wing, and to whom Philip had replied he would accept them when he made war on the birds. Aster, to be revenged, sped an arrow from the wall of a town Philip was besieging, inscribed, "To the right eye of Philip," which took effect; whereupon Philip sped back another with the words, "When Philip takes the town, Aster will hang for it," and he was true to his word.

ASTEROIDS, small planets revolving in orbits round the sun. The search for a new planet between Mars and Jupiter led to the discovery of the first of these, Ceres, by Piazzi in 1801; this is the largest known and its diameter is less than 500 m. At least 2000 have now been found, some of which are but 10 m. in diameter. Amongst the best known are Pallas, Juno, Vesta, and Eros.

AS'TI, an ancient city in Piedmont, on the Tanaro, 26 m. S.E. from Turin, with a Gothic cathedral; is noted for its wine, birthplace of Alfieri.

ASTIGMATISM, a defect of the eye which results in the clear vision of vertical objects but not of horizontal at the same distance. It is due to irregular curvature of the eye and can be rectified by the use of cylindrical lenses. It is quite distinct from and may occur with either short or long-sightedness.

ASTLEY, PHILIP, a famous equestrian and circus manager, who with Franconi established the Cirque Olympique in Paris (1742-1814).

ASTOLFO, a knight-errant in mediæval legend who generous-heartedly is always to do greater feats than he can perform; in "Orlando Furioso" he brings back Orlando's lost wife in a phial from the moon, and possesses a horn that with a blast can discomfit armies.

ASTON, FRANCIS WILLIAM, Cambridge physicist who experimented on the structure of the atom in the Cavendish laboratory. His greatest work has been the analysis of positive rays by means of the mass spectrograph, by the use of which he has discovered a large number of isotopes (q.v.) and determined their atomic masses. He was awarded a Nobel Prize in 1922, and during the Great War was engaged in technical work in connection with aircraft (1897-).

ASTON MANOR, a suburb of Birmingham.

ASTOR, JOHN JACOB, a millionaire, son of a German peasant, who made a fortune of four millions in America by trading in furs (1763-1848). His son, William Backhouse, doubled his fortune; known as the "landlord of New York" (1792-1875); his great-grandson, William Waldorf Astor, was U.S. Minister to Italy, and afterwards settled in England, becoming 1st Viscount Astor.

ASTOR, NANCY WITCHER, VISCOUNTESS, the first woman to take her seat in the House of Commons, being returned for the Sutton Division of Plymouth as a Conservative in November, 1919, and taking her seat on December 1, when Balfour and Lloyd George introduced her. A daughter of C. D. Langhorne of Virginia, she made temperance and social reform a life interest, the law prohibiting the sale of intoxicants to juveniles under 18 having been sponsored by her.

ASTORIA, in Oregon, a fur-trading station, with numerous salmon-tinning establishments.

ASTREA, the daughter of Zeus and Themis, the goddess of justice; dwelt among men during the Golden Age, but left the earth on its decline, together with her sister Dike, the withdrawal explained to mean the vanishing of the ideal from the life of man on the earth; now placed among the stars under the name of Virgo.

ASTRAKHAAN, a Russian trading town on the Volga, 40 m. from its mouth in the Caspian Sea, of which it is the chief port.

ASTRAL BODY, an ethereal body believed by the theosophists to invest the animal, to correspond to it, and to be capable of bilocation (q.v.).

ASTRAL SPIRITS, spirits believed to animate or to people the heavenly bodies, to whom worship was paid, and to hover unembodied through space exercising demonic influence on embodied spirits.

ASTROLOGY, a science founded on a presumed connection between the heavenly bodies and human destiny, and at one time believed in by men of such intelligence as Tacitus and Kepler; few great families at one time but had an astrologer attached to them to read the horoscope of any new member of the house.

ASTRONOMY, the study of the stars; the principal constellations were named and the apparent motions of the various heavenly bodies were discovered at a very early age. The systematic study of astronomy may be divided into three periods. First, the Greek, when careful measurements led to the Ptolemaic or earth-centred conception of the solar system; second, the Copernican, when the work of Copernicus, Galileo, Kepler, and Newton gave rise to the modern idea of the sun-centred system; third, the Spectroscopic, wherein we have seen the rise of the science of astrophysics, or the study of the nature of the stars themselves and not merely of their positions.

ASTOPHEL, the name given to Penelope Devereux ("Stella") by Sir Philip Sidney in his sonnets; the title of a pastoral elegy by Spenser, written in memory of Sidney.

ASTRUC, JEAN, a French physician and professor of medicine in Paris, now noted as having discovered that the book of Genesis consists of Elohistic and Jehovistic portions, and who by this discovery founded the modern school called the Higher Criticism (1681-1766).

ASTURIAS, an ancient province in the N. of Spain, gives title to the heir to the crown, rich in minerals, and with good fisheries; now named Oviedo, from the principal town.

ASTYAGES, last king of the Medes; dethroned by Cyrus, 549 B.C.

ASTYANAX, the son of Hector and Andromache; was cast down by the Greeks from the ramparts after the fall of Troy, lest he should live and restore the city.

ASUNCION, or ASSUMPTION, the capital of Paraguay, on the left bank of the Paraguay, so called from having been founded by the Spaniards on the Feast of the Assumption in 1535.

ASURAS, THE, in the Hindu mythology the demons of the darkness of night, in overcoming whom the gods asserted their sovereignty in the universe.

ASYMPTOTE, a line always approaching some curve but never meeting it at a finite distance.

ATACA'MA, an all but rainless desert in the N. of Chile, abounding in silver and copper mines, as well as yielding gold in considerable quantities.

ATAHUALPA, the last of the Incas of Peru, who fell into Pizarro's hands through perfidy, and was executed by his orders in 1533, that is, little short of a year after the Spaniards landed in Peru.

ATALANTA, a beautiful Grecian princess celebrated for her agility, the prize of any suitor who could outstrip her on the race-course, failure entailing death; at last one suitor, Hippomenes, accepted the risk and started along with her, but as he neared the goal, kept dropping first one golden apple, then another, provided him by Venus, stooping to lift which lost Atalanta the race, whereupon Hippomenes claimed the prize.

AT'AVISM, name given to the reappearance in progeny of the features, and even diseases, of ancestors several generations before.

ATBA'RA, or Black River, from the Highlands of Abyssinia, the lowest tributary of the Nile, which it joins near Berber; the scene of General Kitchener's defeat of the Khalifa's army, April 8, 1898.

ATE, in the Greek mythology the goddess of strife and mischief, also of vengeance; was banished by her father Zeus, for the annoyance she gave him, from heaven to earth.

ATHABASCA, a former territory, a river, and a lake in British N. America; the territory was absorbed into the provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan in 1905. Under the name Athabascan is included a number of Indian tribes which range from Yukon to California.

ATHALIAH, the queen of Judah, daughter of Abah and Jezebel, celebrated for her crimes and impiety, for which she was in the end massacred by her subjects, 9th century B.C.

ATHANASIAN CREED, a statement, in the form of a confession, of the orthodox creed of the Church as against the Arians, and damatory of every article of the heresy severally; ascribed to Athanasius at one time, but now believed to be of later date, though embracing his theology in affirmation of the absolute co-equal divinity of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost in the Trinity.

ATHANASIUS, Christian theologian, a native of Alexandria, and a deacon of the Church; took a prominent part against Arius in the Council at Nice, and was his most uncompromising antagonist; was chosen bishop of Alexandria; driven forth again and again from his bishopric under persecution of the Arians; retired into the Thebaid for a time; spent the last 10 years of his life as bishop at Alexandria, where he died; his works consist of treatises and orations bearing on the Arian controversy, and in vindication of the doctrine of the Trinity viewed in the most absolute sense (296-373).

ATHEISM, disbelief in the existence of God, which may be either theoretical, in the intellect, or practical, in the life.

ATHELNEY, ISLE OF, an island in a marsh near the confluence of the Tone and Parret, Somerset; Alfred's place of refuge from the Danes.

ATHE'NA, the Greek virgin goddess of wisdom, particularly in the arts of war and peace; is said to have been the conception of Metis, to have issued full-armed from the brain of Zeus, and in this way the child of both wisdom and power; wears a helmet, and bears on her left arm theegis with the Medusa's head; the olive among trees and the owl among birds were sacred to her.

ATHENÆUM, a school of learning established in Rome about 133 by Hadrian. It is also the name of a London club, founded in 1824.

ATHENEUS, a Greek writer of the 3rd century, wrote a curious miscellany of a book entitled "Dipsosophists," or the "Suppers of the Learned," extant only in an imperfect state.

ATHENAGORAS, an able Christian apologist of the 2nd century, was Athenian and a pagan by birth, but being converted to Christianity, wrote an apology in its defence and a treatise on the resurrection of the dead.

ATHENS, the capital of Attica, and the chief city of ancient Greece, the resort in ancient times of all the able and wise men, particularly in the domain of literature and art, from all parts of the country and lands beyond; while the monuments of temple and statue that still adorn it give evidence of a culture among the citizens such as the inhabitants of no other city of the world have had the genius to surpass. The two chief monuments of the architecture of ancient Athens, both erected on the Acropolis, are the Parthenon (q.v.), dedicated to Athena, the finest building on the finest site in the world, and the Erechtheum, a temple dedicated to Poseidon close by; is the capital of modern Greece and the seat of the government.

ATHLETICS, sports such as running, jumping, wrestling, and boxing, which were popular with the Greeks and Romans, and which were indulged in at the Olympic Games from an early date. In Britain the earliest games of the kind were those of Taitlin in Ireland and Braemar in Scotland. Oxford University was a pioneer of the modern athletic meeting in 1850, and now the Amateur Athletic Association, in co-operation with the universities and schools, organises several championship meetings. In 1896 an international championship meeting was held in Athens: the Olympic Games were thus revived, and except for the War years they have been held every four years since in different countries.

ATHLONE, a market-town on the Shannon, which divides it, and a chief military station.

ATHLONE, EARL OF (Prince Alexander of Teck), a son of the Duke and Duchess of Teck. He entered the Life Guards and saw service in the South African war, and in Flanders in 1915. He adopted the English title in 1917, and in 1920 became Governor-General of Canada, being appointed to a similar post in South Africa in 1923 (1874-).

ATHOLE, a district in the N. of Perthshire, which gives name to a branch of the Murray family, the dukedom of Athole (or Atholl) having been granted to John Murray, the third Earl, in 1708.

ATHOLE-BROSE, oatmeal, honey, and whisky mixed.

ATHOS, MOUNT, or MONTE SANTO, a mountain 6780 ft. high at the southern extremity of the most northerly peninsula of Salonica, in Turkey, covered with monasteries, inhabited exclusively by monks of the Greek Church, and rich in curious manuscripts.

ATLANTA, the largest city in Georgia, U.S.; a large manufacturing and railway centre.

ATLANTEES, figures of men used in architecture instead of pillars.

ATLANTIC, the most important and best known of all the oceans on the globe, separating the Old World and the New; covers nearly one-fifth of the surface of the earth; length 9000 m., its average breadth 2700 m.; its average depth 15,000 ft., or from 3 to 5 m., with waves in consequence of greater height and volume at times than those of any other sea.

ATLANTIC CABLES. The first, between Valentia and Newfoundland, was laid by Sir Charles Bright in 1858 and was 2500 miles long, but did not prove a success. In 1865 a second cable was laid with the help of the Great Eastern steamer, but it broke in mid-Atlantic. Success came in 1866, when a third cable was laid and the one of the year before repaired.

ATLANTIC FLIGHTS. The Atlantic Ocean was first crossed by aeroplane in June, 1919, by Sir John Alcock and Sir A. W. Brown in a Vickers-Vimy biplane, the crossing being made in 16 hours from Newfoundland to Ireland, a distance of 1890 m. In 1927 Charles Lindbergh made the first solo crossing, flying from New York to Paris in a monoplane. At about that period several fruitless attempts to cross were made, as well as many successful ones, and several lives were lost. In 1928 the first east to west crossing was made, by two Germans—Baron Huenfeld and Capt. Koehl—and an Irishman—Capt. Fitzmaurice. The first crossing by airship was in 1919, the British machine R34 cruising in 44 days from Scotland to New York.

ATLANTIS, an island alleged by tradition to have existed in the ocean W. of the Pillars of Hercules; Plato has given a beautiful picture of this island and an account of its fabulous history. The New A., a Utopia figured as existing somewhere in the Atlantic, which Lord Bacon began to outline but never finished.

ATLAS, a Titan who, for his audacity in attempting to dethrone Zeus, was doomed to bear the heavens on his shoulders; although another account makes him a king of Mauritania whom Perseus, for his want of hospitality, changed into a mountain by exposing to view the head of the Medusa.

ATLAS MOUNTAINS, a range in N. Africa, the highest 11,000 ft., the Greater in Morocco, the Lesser extending through Algeria and Tunisia, and the whole system stretching from Cape Nun, in Morocco, to Cape Bon, in Tunis.

ATMAN, THE, in the Hindu philosophy, the divine spirit in man, conceived of as a small being having its seat in the heart, where it may be felt stirring, travelling whence along the arteries it moves out as a small image in the eye, the pupil; it is centred in the heart of the universe, and appears with dazzling effect in the sun, the heart and eye of the world, and is the same there as in the heart of man.

ATMOSPHERE, the gaseous envelope which surrounds the earth and gets less and less dense as the distance from the earth increases. At a height of 7½ m. the density is ¼ that at sea-level, and it is calculated that at a height of 76 m. it is only one millionth. The atmosphere is composed of 78 per cent. of nitrogen, 21 per cent. of oxygen, less than 1 per cent. of the inert gases (q.v.), and small varying quantities of carbon dioxide and water vapour.

ATOLL, the Polynesian name given to a coral island consisting of a ring of coral enclosing a lagoon.

ATOM, the smallest part of an element taking part in chemical action and preserving the properties of that element. Modern investigation has shown that the atom consists of a central nucleus with a number of planetary electrons revolving round it in orbits. The number and arrangement of the electrons are peculiar to each element; the nucleus consists of both electrons and protons (or positive particles), the latter being 1800 times as massive as the former. The number of planetary electrons is called the atomic number, and this determines the chemical properties of the element; in a neutral atom the resultant charge of the nucleus is just sufficient to neutralise the charges of the exterior electrons. Some investigation has been made into the structure of the nucleus itself. An atom may lose one of its outer electrons or gain an extra one, in which case it is said to be ionised. The atomic mass of an element is the mass of its atom compared with that of an atom of oxygen, which is taken as 16, and depends almost entirely upon the number of protons in its nucleus.

ATREUS, a son of Pelops and king of Mycenae, who, to avenge a wrong done him by his brother Thyestes, killed the latter's two sons and served them up in a banquet to him, for which act, as tradition shows, his descendants had to pay heavy penalties.

ATRIDES, descendants of Atreus, particularly Agamemnon and Menelaus, a family frequently referred to as capable of and doomed to perpetrate the most atrocious crimes.

ATROPINE, an alkaloid found in deadly nightshade. The sulphate is used for opthalmic cases.

ATROPOS, one of the three Fates, the one who cut around the thread of life; one of her sisters, Clotho, appointed to spin the thread, and the other, Lachesis, to direct it.

ATTA, SIR NANA OFORI, paramount chief of the Akem Abakwa and member of the legislative council of the Gold Coast; was educated in missionary schools on the Gold Coast. He visited London in 1928 as a guest of the Govt. (1881-).

ATTALUS, the name of three kings of Pergamos; A. I. founded the library of Pergamos and joined the Romans against Philip and the Achaeans (241-197 B.C.): A. II. kept up the league with Rome (169-134 B.C.): A. III., bequeathed his kingdom to the Roman people (134-133 B.C.).

ATTICA, a country in ancient Greece, on the NE. of the Peloponnese, within an area not larger than that of Lanarkshire, which has nevertheless had a history of world-wide fame and importance.

ATTICISM, a pure and refined style of expression in any language, originally the purest and most refined style of the ancient literature of Greece.

ATTICUS, TITUS POMPONIUS, a wealthy Roman and friend of Cicero, devoted to study and the society of friends, took no part in politics, died of voluntary starvation rather than endure the torture of a painful and incurable disease (110-33 B.C.).

ATTILA, or Etzel, the king of the Huns, surnamed "the Scourge of God," from the terror he everywhere inspired; overran the Roman Empire at the time of its decline, vanquished the emperors of both East and West, extorting heavy tribute; led his forces into Germany and Gaul, was defeated in a great battle near Châlons-sur-Marne by the combined armies of the Romans under Aëtius and the Goths under Theodoric, retreated across the Alps and ravaged the N. of Italy; died of hemorrhage, on the day of his marriage, and was buried in a gold coffin containing immense treasures in 453, the slaves who dug the grave having been killed, it is said, lest they should reveal the spot.

ATTOK, a town and fortress in the Punjab, on the Indus where the Kabul joins it; it was built by Akbar in 1583.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL, THE, with the Solicitor-General, a law officer of the Crown, giving advice to the Government and leading for the Crown in important civil and criminal cases. The office was created in 1278, William de Giselham being the first to hold it.

ATTWOOD, GEORGE, a mathematician, invented a machine for illustrating the law of uniformly accelerated motion, as in falling bodies (1745-1807).

ATTWOOD, THOMAS, an eminent English musician and composer, wrote a few anthems (1707-1836).

ATYS, a beautiful Phrygian youth, beloved by Cybele, who turned him into a pine, after, by her apparition at his marriage to forbid the unions, she had driven him mad.

AUBE, a dep. in France, formed of Champagne and a small part of Burgundy, with Troyes for capital.

AU'BER, DANIEL FRANÇOIS, a popular French composer of operas, born at Caen; his operas included "La Muette de Portici," "Le Domino Noir," and "Fra Diavolo" (1782-1871).

AU'BERT, THE ABBE, a French fabulist, born at Paris (1731-1814).

AUBREY, JOHN, an eminent antiquary, a friend of Anthony Wood; inherited estates in Wilt, Hereford, and Wales, all of which he lost by lawsuits and bad management; was intimate with all the literary men of the day; left a vast number of MSS.; published one work, "Miscellanies," being a collection of popular superstitions; preserved a good deal of the gossip of the period (1624-1697).

AUBRIOT, a French statesman, born at Dijon, provost of Paris under Charles V.; built the famous Bastille; was imprisoned in it for heresy, but released by a mob; died at Dijon, 1382.

AUBUSSON, a French town on the Creuse, manufactures carpets and tapestry.

AUBUSSON, PIERRE D', grand-master of the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem, of French descent, who in 1480 gallantly defended Rhodes when besieged by the Turks, and drove the assailants back, amounting to no fewer than 100,000 men (1423-1503).

AUCH, capital of the dep. of Gers, France, 14 m. W. of Toulouse, with a splendid cathedral perched on a hill, and accessible only by a flight of 200 steps; has a trade in wine and brandy.

AUCHINCLOSS, a village 15 m. E. of Ayr, with the mansion of the Boswell family.

AUCHTERAR-DEE, a village in Perthshire, where the forcing of a presentee by a patron on an unwilling congregation awoke a large section in the Established Church to a sense of the wrong and the assertion of the rights of the people, and led to the disruption of the community and the creation of the Free Church in 1843.

AUCKLAND, the largest town in New Zealand, in the N. island, with an excellent harbour in the Gulf of Hauraki, and the capital of a district of the name, 400 m. long, and 200 m. broad, with a fertile soil and a fine climate, rich in natural products of all kinds; was the capital of New Zealand till the seat of government was transferred to Wellington.

AUCKLAND ISLANDS, a group of small islands 180 m. S. of New Zealand, with some good harbours and rich in vegetation.

AUDE, a maritime dep. in the S. of France, being a portion of Languedoc; yields cereals, wine, &c., and is rich in minerals.

AUDEBERT, JEAN BAPTISTE, a French artist and naturalist; devoted himself to the illustration in coloured plates of objects of natural history, such especially as monkeys and humming-birds, all exquisitely done (1769-1800).

AUDHUMBLA, the cow, in the Norse mythology, that nourished Hymir. See ADUMBLA.

AUDLEY, SIR THOMAS, LORD, born in Essex, son of a yeoman; became Speaker of the House of Commons and Lord Chancellor of England, the selfish, unscrupulous tool of Henry VIII. (1488-1554).

AUDRAN, EDMOND, French musical composer; wrote "La Cigale," "La Poupée," and many other light operas (1842-1901).

AUDRAN, GERARD, an engraver, the most eminent of a family of artists, born at Lyons; engraved the works of Lebrun, Mignard, and Poussin; he did some fine illustrations of the battles of Alexander the Great (1640-1703).

AUDUBON, JOHN JAMES, a celebrated American ornithologist of French Huguenot origin; author of two great works, the "Birds of America" and the "Quadrupeds of America," written and illustrated by himself, the former characterised by Cuvier as "the most magnificent monument that Art up to that time had raised to Nature" (1780-1851).

AUERBACH, BERTHOLO, a German poet and novelist of Jewish birth, born in the Black Forest; his novels, which have been widely translated, are in the main of a somewhat philosophical bent, he having been early led to the study of Spinoza, and having begun his literary career as editor of the latter's works; his "Village Tales of the Black Forest" were widely popular (1812-1882).

AUERSPERG, COUNT VON, an Austrian lyrical and satirical poet, of liberal politics, and a pronounced enemy of the absolutist party headed by Metternich (1800-1876).

AUGE'AS, a legendary king of Elis, in Greece, and one of the Argonauts; had a stable with 3000 oxen, that had not been cleaned out for 30 years, but was cleansed by Hercules turning the rivers Peneus and Alpheus through it; the act a symbol of the worthless lumber a reformer must sweep away before his work can begin.

AUGER, a French littérateur, born at Paris, renowned as a critic (1772-1829).

AUGEREAU, PIERRE FRANÇOIS CHARLES, marshal of France and duke of Castiglione, born at Paris; distinguished in the campaigns of the Republic and Napoleon; executed the comp. d'état of Sept. 4, 1797; his services were rejected by Napoleon on his return from Elba, on account of his having supported the Bourbons during his absence. He was simply a soldier, rude and rough-mannered, and with no great brains for anything else but military discipline (1767-1816).

AUGIER, EMILE, able French dramatist, produced brilliant comedies for the French stage through a period of 40 years, all distinctly on the side of virtue (1820-1889).

AUGSBURG, a busy manufacturing and trading town on the Lech, in Bavaria, once a city of great importance, where in 1530 the Protestants presented their Confession to Charles V., and where the peace of Augsburg was signed in 1555, ensuring religious freedom.

AUGSBURG CONFESSION, a document drawn up by Melancthon in name of the Lutheran reformers, headed by the Elector of Saxony, in statement of their own doctrines and of the doctrines of the Church of Rome, against which they made their protest.

AUGURS, a college of priests in Rome appointed to forecast the future mainly by the behaviour or flight of birds kept for the purpose, these being sometimes carried about in a coop to consult in emergencies.

AUGUST, originally called Sextilis, as the sixth month of the Roman year, which began in March, and named August in honour of Augustus, as being the month identified with remarkable events in his career.

AUGUSTA, a prosperous town in Georgia, U.S., on the Savannah, 231 m. from its mouth; also a town, the capital of Maine, U.S.

AUGUSTAN AGE, the time in the history of a nation when its literature is at its best, the reign of the Roman emperor Augustus having been made notable by the great writers Ovid, Livy, Horace, Virgil, and Catullus.

AUGUSTI, JOHANN, a German rationalist theologian of note, born near Gotha (1771-1841).

AUGUSTIN, or AUSTIN, ST., the apostle of England, sent thither with a few monks by Pope Gregory in 598 to convert the country to Christianity; began his labours in Kent; founded the archbishopric of Canterbury; d. 605.

AUGUSTINE, ST., the bishop of Hippo and the greatest of the Latin Fathers of the Church; a native of Tagaste, in Numidia; son of a pagan father and a Christian mother, St. Monica; after a youth of dissipation, was converted to Christ by a text of St. Paul (Rom. xiii. 13, 14). He became bishop in 396, devoted himself to pastoral duties, and took an active part in the Church controversies of his age, opposing especially the Manicheans, the Donatists, and the Pelagians; his principal works are his "Confessions," his "City of God," and his treatises on Grace and Free-Will. It is safe to say, no Churchman has ever exercised such influence as he has done in moulding the creed as well as directing the destiny of the Christian Church. He was especially imbued with the theology of St. Paul (354-430).

AUGUSTINIANS, (a) Canons, called also Black Cenobites, under a less severe discipline than monks, had 200 houses in England and Wales at the Reformation; (b) Austin Priors, mendicant, a portion of them barefooted; (c) Nuns, nurses of the sick.

AUGUSTUS, called at first Calus Octavius, ultimately Gaius Julius Caesar Octavianus, the first of the Roman Emperors or Caesars, grand nephew of Julius Caesar, and his heir; joined the Republican party at Caesar's death, became consul, formed one of a triumvirate with Antony and Lepidus; together with Antony overthrew the Republican party under Brutus and Cassius at Philippi; defeated Antony and Cleopatra at Actium, and became master of the Roman world; was voted the title of "Augustus" by the Senate in 27 B.C.; proved a wise and beneficent ruler, and patronised the arts and letters, his reign forming a distinguished epoch in the history of the ancient literature of Rome (63 B.C.-A.D. 14).

AUGUSTUS I., Elector of Saxony, a Lutheran prince, whose reign was peaceful comparatively; he was himself both a good man and a good ruler, a monarch designated the "Pious" and the "Justinian of Saxony" (1526-1586).

AUGUSTUS II., Elector of Saxony and King of Poland; forced himself on Poland; had twice to retire, but was reinstated; is known to history as "The Strong"; among his many illegitimate children was the famous Marshal Saxe (1670-1733).

AUGUSTUS III., son of the preceding; beat Stanislaus Leszcynski in the struggle for the crown of Poland; proved an incompetent king (1696-1763).

AULIC COUNCIL, supreme council in the old German Empire, from which there was no appeal, of date from 1405 to 1654; it had no constitution, dealt with judicial matters, and lived and died with the emperors.

AULIS, a port in Boeotia. Where the fleet of the Greeks assembled before taking sail for Troy, and where Iphigenia, to procure a favourable wind, was sacrificed by her father Agamemnon, an event commemorated in the "Iphigenia in Aulis" of Euripides.

AUMALE, DUC D', one of the chiefs of the Holy League, became governor of Paris, which he held against Henry IV., leagued with the Spaniards, was convicted of treason, and, having escaped, was burned in effigy; died an exile at Brussels (1556-1631).

AUMALE, DUC D', fourth son of Louis Philippe, distinguished himself in Algiers, and was governor of Algeria, which he resigned when his father abdicated; lived in England for twenty years after, acknowledged the Republic, and left his estate and valuables to the French nation (1822-1897).

AUMONIER, STACY, novelist. He started as a decorative designer and landscape painter, achieving considerable success, and then took up acting. He wrote his first book in 1913, and served in the ranks during the Great War (1887-1928).

AUNOY, COMTESSE D', a French authoress, known and appreciated for her fairy tales (1650-1705).

AURELIANUS, LUCIUS DOMITIUS, powerful in physique and an able Roman emperor; son of a peasant of Pannonia; distinguished as a skilful and successful general; was elected emperor, 270; drove the barbarians out of Italy; vanquished Zenobia, queen of Palmyra, carrying her captive to Rome; subdued a usurper in Gaul, and while on his way to crush a rebellion in Persia was assassinated by his troops (212-275).

AURELIUS, MARCUS. See ANTONINUS.

AURELIUS, VICTOR SEXTUS, a Roman consul and a Latin historian of the 4th century.

AUREOLA, a wreath of light represented as encircling the brows of the saints and martyrs.

AURILLAC, capital of the dep. of Cantal, on the Jourdanne, affluent of the Dordogne, built round the famous abbey of St. Gerand, now in ruins.

AU'ROCHS, an ancient German wild ox, of which there are survivals in Lithuania.

AURO'RA, the Roman goddess of the dawn, charged with opening for the sun the gates of the East; had a star on her forehead, and rode in a rosy chariot drawn by four white horses. See EOS.

AUROREA, a city in Illinois, U.S., 35 m. SW. of Chicago, said to have been the first town to light the streets with electricity.

AURORA BOREALIS, bright luminous beams seen in the night sky in northern latitudes, especially within the Arctic Circle; the phenomenon is sometimes visible in the British Isles. It is supposed to be due to electrical disturbances having their origin in the upper atmosphere, but its exact nature is obscure. A similar light seen in southern latitudes is known as Aurora Australis.

AURUN'GABAD, a city in Hyderabad, in the Nizam's dominions; once the capital, now much decayed, with the ruins of a palace of Aurunzebe.

AURUNGEZE, Mogul emperor of Hindustan, third son of Shah Jehan; ascended the throne by the deposition of his father, the murder of two brothers and of the son of one of these; he governed with skill and courage; extended his empire by subduing Golconda, the Carnatic, and Bengal, and though fanatical and intolerant, was a patron of letters; his rule was far-shining, but the empire was rotten at the core, and when he died it crumbled to pieces in the hands of his sons, among whom he beforehand divided it (1615-1707).

AUSONIA, an ancient name of Italy.

AUSONIUS, DECIMUS MAGNUS, a Roman poet, a native of Gaul, born in Bordeaux; tutor to the Emperor Gratian, who, on coming to the throne, made him prefect of Latium and of Gaul and consul of Rome (309-394).

AUSTEN, JANE, a gifted English novelist, daughter of a clergyman in N. Hampshire; member of a quiet family circle, occupied herself in writing without eye to publication, and only in mature womanhood thought of writing for the press. Her first novel, "Sense and Sensibility," was published in 1811, and was followed by "Pride and Prejudice," her masterpiece, "Persuasion," and others, her interest being throughout in ordinary quiet cultured life and the delineation of it, which she achieved in an infinitely charming manner. "She showed once for all," says Professor Saintsbury, "the capabilities of the very commonest and most ordinary life, if sufficiently observed and selected, and combined with due art, to furnish forth pure fiction not merely that would pass, but that should he of the absolutely first quality as literature. She is the mother of the English 19th-century novel, as Scott is the father of it" (1775-1817).

AUSTERLITZ, a town in Moravia, near Brünn, where Napoleon defeated the emperors of Russia and of Austria, at "the battle of the three emperors," Dec. 2, 1805.

AUSTIN, the capital of Texas, on the Colorado River, named after Stephen Austin, who was chiefly instrumental in annexing Texas to the States.

AUSTIN, ALFRED, poet-laureate in succession to Tennyson, born near Leeds, bred for the bar, but devoted to literature as journalist, writer, and poet; wrote "The Seasons," "A Satire," "The Human Tragedy," "Savonarola," "English Lyrics," and several works in prose (1835-1918).

AUSTIN, JOHN, a distinguished English jurist, professor of Jurisprudence in London University; mastered the science of law by the study of it in Germany, but being too profound in his philosophy, was unsuccessful as professor; his great work, "The Province of Jurisprudence Determined," and his Lectures appeared after his death (1790-1850).

AUSTIN, MRS. J. (née Sarah Taylor), wife of the preceding, executed translations from the German, "Faik's Characteristics of Goethe" for one; was, like her husband, of the utilitarian school; was introduced to Carlyle when he first went up to London; he wrote to his wife of her, "If I swear eternal friendship with any woman here, it will be with her" (1793-1867).

AUSTIN PRIARS. See AUGUSTINIANS.

AUSTRALASIA (i.e. Southern Asia), a popular name given chiefly to Australia, New Zealand, and the islands adjoining, but sometimes employed to include the Malay Archipelago, the Philippines, and the Pacific islands.

AUSTRALIA, a continent entirely within the Southern Hemisphere, about one-fourth smaller than Europe, its utmost length from E. to W. being 2400 m., and breadth 1711; the coast has singularly few inlets, though many and spacious harbours, only one great gulf, Carpentaria, on the N., and one inlet, the Great Australian Bight, on the S.; the interior consists of a low desert plateau, depressed in the centre, bordered with ranges of various elevation, between which and the sea is a varying breadth of coastland; the chief mountain range is in the E., and extends more or less parallel all the way with the E. coast; the rivers are few, and either in flood or dried up, for the climate is very parching, only one river, the Murray, 2345 m. long, of any consequence, while the lakes, which are numerous, are shallow and nearly all salt; the flora is peculiar, the eucalyptus and the acacia the most characteristic, grains, fruits, and edible roots being all imported, the fauna is no less peculiar, including, in the absence of many animals of other countries, the kangaroo, the dingoo, and the duck-bill, the useful animals being all imported; of birds, the cassowary and the emu, and smaller ones of great beauty, but songless; reptiles are numerous; minerals abound, both the precious and the useful. The aborigines, of many tribes, of primitive habits, and a low order of intelligence, are disappearing. The territory divided into Victoria, New South Wales, Queensland, S. Australia, W. Australia, and the Northern Territory (North and Central Australia), which with Tasmania federated in 1900 and became the Commonwealth. The capital is Canberra.

AUSTRASIA, or the East Kingdom, a kingdom on the E. of the possessions of the Franks in Gaul, that existed from 511 to 843, capital of which was Metz; it was celebrated for its rivalry with the kingdom of Neustria, or the Western Kingdom.

AUSTRIA, has an area of about 40,000 sq. m., and is bounded on the north by Germany and Czecho-Slovakia, on the south by Italy and Yugo-Slavia, on the west by Switzerland, and on the east by Hungary. Before the Peace of Versailles in 1919 it formed the western half of the Austro-Hungarian empire, which was a country of every variety of surface and scenery, inhabited by peoples of different races and nationalities, speaking 20 different languages and composed of 50 different states, 5 of them being kingdoms. It occupied the centre of Europe, and was watered by rivers all of which had their mouths in other countries. Austria is now a republic the size of Newfoundland, with the southern half occupied by the ranges of the Eastern Alps, and includes Tirol and Vorarlberg.

AUTEUIL, a village in the dep. of the Seine, now included in Paris.

AUTHORISED VERSION OF THE BIBLE was executed between the years 1604 and 1610 at the instance of James I., so that it is not undeservedly called King James's Bible, and was the work of 47 men selected with marked fairness and discretion, divided into three groups of two sections each, who held their sittings for three years severally at Westminster, Cambridge, and Oxford, the whole being thereafter revised by a committee of six, who met for nine months in Stationers' Hall, London, and received thirty pounds each, the rest being done for nothing. The result was a translation that at length superseded every other, and that has since woven itself into the affectionate regard of the whole English-speaking people. The men who executed it evidently felt something of the inspiration that breathes in the original, and they have produced a version that will remain to all time a monument of the simplicity, dignity, grace, and melody of the English language; its very style has had a nobly educative effect on the national literature.

AUTOCHTHONS, Greek for aborigines.

AUTO-DA-FÉ, or Act of Faith, a ceremony held by the court of the Inquisition in Spain, in the Middle Ages, preliminary to the execution of a heretic, in which the condemned, dressed in a hideously fantastic robe, called the San Benito, and a pointed cap, walked in a procession of monks, followed by carts containing coffins with malefactors' bones, to hear a sermon on the true faith, prior to being burned alive; the most historic auto-da-fé took place in Madrid in 1680.

AUTOLYCUS, in the Greek mythology a son of Hermes (q.v.), and maternal grandfather of Ulysses by his daughter Anticlea; famed for his cunning and roguery; synonym for a scoundrel.

AUTOMEDON, the charioteer of Achilles.

AUTONOMY (i.e. Self-law), in the Kantian metaphysics denotes the sovereign right of the pure reason to be a law to itself.

AUTRAN', JOSEPH, a French poet and dramatist, born at Marseilles; he was of the school of Lamartine, and attained distinction by the production of the tragedy "La Fille d'Eschyle" (1813-1877).

AUTUN, an ancient city in the dep. of Saône-et-Loire, on the Arroux, 28 m. NW. from Châlons, where Talleyrand was bishop, with a fine cathedral and rich in antiquities; manufactures serges, carpets, velvet, &c.

AUVERGNE, an ancient province of France, united to the crown under Louis XIII. in 1610, embracing the depts. of Puy-de-Dôme, Cantal, and part of Haute-Loire, the highlands of which separate the basin of the Loire from that of the Garonne, and contain a hardy and industrious race of people descended from the original inhabitants of Gaul; they speak a strange dialect, and supply most of the water-carriers and street-sweepers of Paris.

AUXERRE, an ancient city, capital of the dep. of Yonne, 90 m. SE. of Paris; has a fine cathedral in the Flamboyant style; drives a large trade in wine.

AVA, capital of the Burmese empire from 1364 to 1740 and from 1822 to 1838; now in ruins from an earthquake in 1839.

AVAGADRO, AMEDEO, physicist and chemist, professor of physics at Turin. He is remembered for his hypothesis (1811) that equal volumes of all gases at the same temperature and pressure contain the same number of molecules (1776-1850).

AVALON, in the Celtic mythology an island of faerie in the region where the sun sinks to rest at eventide, and the final home of the heroes of chivalry when their day's work was ended on earth; the island-valley of Arllion in Tennyson's "Morte d'Arthur."

AVARS, a tribe of Huns who, driven from their home in the Altai Mts. by the Chinese, invaded the E. of Europe about 553, and committed ravages in it for about three centuries, till they were subdued by Charlemagne and all but exterminated in 827.

AVATAR, or Descent, the incarnation and incarnated manifestation of a Hindu deity, a theory both characteristic of Vlahnism and marking a new epoch in the religious development of India.

AVE MARIA, an invocation to the Virgin, so called as forming the first two words of the salutation of the angel in Luke i. 28.

AVEBURY, or ABERY, a village in Wiltshire, 6 m. W. of Marlborough, in the middle of a so-called Druidical structure consisting of 100 monoliths, surmised to have been erected and arranged in memory of some great victory.

AVEBURY, BARON (Sir John Lubbock), the founder of bank holidays. Educated at Eton, he went in for his father's profession of banking in 1848, and became M.P. in 1870 as a Liberal. He sponsored the Bank Holiday Bill in 1881 and the Shop Hours Bill of 1886. He took a keen interest in natural history, was President of the British Association, wrote "The Use of Life" and "The Pleasures of Life," was Vice-Chancellor of London University, and was raised to the peerage in 1900 (1834-1912).

AVELLINO, chief town in a province of the name in Campania, 59 m. E. of Naples, famous for its trade in hazel-nuts and chestnuts; manufactures woollens, paper, macaroni, &c.; has been subject to earthquakes.

AVENTINE HILL, one of the seven hills of Rome, the mount to which the plebs sullenly retired on their refusal to submit to the patrician oligarchy, and from which they were enticed back by Menenius Agrippa by the well-known fable of the members of the body and the stomach.

AVENTINUS, JOHANNES, a Bavarian historian, author of the "Chronica Bavarum" (Annals of Bavaria), a valuable record of the early history of Germany (1477-1534).

AVENZOAR, an Arabian physician, the teacher of Averroës (1073-1163).

AVERNUS, a deep lake in Italy, near Naples, 1½ m. in circumference, occupying the crater of an extinct volcano, at one time surrounded by a dark wood, and conceived, from its gloomy appearance, as well as from the mephitic vapours it exhaled, to be the entrance to the infernal world, and identified with it.

AVERROES, an Arabian physician and philosopher, a Moor by birth and a native of Cordova; devoted himself to the study and the exposition of Aristotle, earning for himself the title of the "Commentator," though he appears to have coupled with the philosophy of Aristotle the Oriental pantheistic doctrine of emanations (1126-1198).

AVERSA, an Italian town 8 m. from Naples, amid vineyards and orange groves; much resorted to by the Neapolitans.

AVEYRON, a mountainous dep. in the S. of France, with excellent pastures, where the Roquefort cheese is produced.

AVIATION. During the 18th century experiments were made with balloons, the first fire balloon being built in 1782 by Joseph Montgolfier, while in the following year one filled with hydrogen succeeded in rising from the ground in Paris. In 1785 Blanchard and Jefferies crossed the Channel in a balloon, and in 1836 one flew from London to Nassau. An important landmark was the ascent in 1863 of a balloon with steering apparatus and carrying 14 passengers. These early experiments led to the construction of dirigible balloons. Count Zeppelin producing one in 1900. With the present century came experiments with gliders, to some of which machinery was attached. Lillenthal, the Wright brothers, S. Dumont, and Farman were the chief pioneers. Bleriot, in a monoplane, succeeded in 1909 in flying across the Channel, and from then until 1914 progress was steady if slow. The Great War gave an impetus to aviation and design improved rapidly, so rapidly, in fact, that in June, 1910, Sir John Alcock and Sir A. W. Brown flew in a biplane across the Atlantic from Newfoundland to Ireland, 1890 m., in just under 16 hours. The same year a British ship crossed from Scotland to New York in 4½ days. In 1927 Charles Lindbergh flew from New York to Paris in a monoplane, the first solo flight across the Atlantic. Afterwards Atlantic flights became more common, though mention should be made of the flight in 1928 from Ireland to America of two Germans—Baron Euenfeldt and Capt. Koehl—and an Irishman—Capt. Fitz-maurice—the first successful East to West flight. Flights were made at the same period to India, Persia, South Africa, and Australia. Besides regular routes to Europe an air mail was established in 1920 from London to India. The highest speed attained in the air prior to 1914 was 107 m. an hour. In 1923 the British aerial Derby was won at 102 m. an hour, in 1927 the Schneider Cup was won at 281 m. an hour, and in 1929 at 328 m. an hour, even greater speeds being attained on a straight course. Expert opinion is divided as to the future of the airship, a large school holding that it is unsuited to sea storms, and pointing to the collapse of the Norge in the Arctic in 1928. Others point to such successes as that of the Graf Zeppelin, which carried out a flight round the world in all kinds of weather in 1929.

AVICENNA, an illustrious Arabian physician, surnamed the prince of physicians, a man of immense learning and extensive practice in his art; of authority in philosophy as well as in medicine, his philosophy being of the school of Aristotle with a mixture of Neoplatonism, his "Canon of Medicine" being supreme in medical science for centuries (980-1037).

AVIENUS, RUFUS FESTUS, a geographer and Latin writer of the 4th century.

AVIGNON, capital of the dep. of Vaucluse, France; an ancient city beautifully situated on the left bank of the Rhône, near the confluence of the Durance, of various fortune from its foundation by the Phœnicians in 539 B.C.; was the seat of the Papacy from 1305 to 1377, purchased by Pope Clement VI. at that period, and belonged to the Papacy from that time till 1797, when it was appropriated to France; it contains a number of interesting buildings, and carries on a large trade in wine, oil, and fruits; grows and manufactures silk in large quantities.

AVILA, a town in Spain, in a province of the name, in S. of Old Castile, 3000 ft. above the sea-level, with a Gothic cathedral and a Moorish castle; birth place of St. Theresa.

AVILA, JUAN D', a Spanish priest, surnamed the Apostle of Andalusia, for his zeal in planting the Gospel in its mountains (1500-1569).

AVILA Y ZINUGA, LUIS DE, a soldier, diplomatist, and historian under Charles V. of Spain.

AVLONA, or VALONA, a port of Albania, on an inlet of the Adriatic.

AVOLA, a seaport on the E. coast of Sicily, ruined by an earthquake in 1693, rebuilt since; place of export of the Hybla honey.

AVON, the name of several English rivers, such as Shakespeare's in Warwickshire, of Salisbury in Wiltshire, and of Bristol, rising in Wiltshire; from a Celtic word meaning water.

AVRANCHES, a town in dep. of Manche, Normandy; the place, the spot marked by a stone, where Henry II. received absolution for the murder of Thomas à Becket; lace-making the staple industry, and trade in agricultural products.

AVE, LQEH, in the centre of Argyllshire, overshadowed by mountains, 25 m. in length, the second in size of Scottish lakes, studded with islands, one with the ruin of a castle; the scenery gloomily picturesque; its surface is 100 ft. above the sea-level.

AXEL, archbishop of Lund; born in Zealand; a Danish patriot with Norse blood; subdued tribes of Weende and compelled them to adopt Christianity.

AXHOLME, ISLE OF, a tract of land in N.W. Lincolnshire, 17 m. long and 5 m. broad; once a forest, then a marsh; drained in 1632, and now fertile, producing hemp, flax, rape, &c.

AXIM, a trading settlement on the Gold Coast, Africa, belonging to Britain; belonged to Holland till 1871.

AXOLOTL, an amphibian, numerous in Mexico and the Western States, believed to be in its preliminary or tadpole state of existence.

AX'UM, capital of an Ethiopian kingdom in Abyssinia, now in ruins, where Christianity was introduced in the 4th century, and which as the outpost of Christendom fell early before the Mohammedan power.

AYACUCHO, a thriving town in Peru, founded by Pizarro in 1539, where the Peruvians and Colombians achieved their independence of Spain in 1824, and ended the rule of Spain in the S. American continent.

AYA LA, PEDRO LOPEZ D', a Spanish soldier, statesman, and diplomatist, born in Murcia; wrote a "History of the Kings of Castile," which was more than a chronicle of wars, being also a review of them; and a book of poems entitled the "Rhymes of the Court" (1332-1407).

AYE-AYE, a genus of nocturnal habits found in the woods of Madagascar.

AYESHA, the daughter of Abulckr, and favourite wife of Mohammed, whom he married soon after the death of Kadliah; as much devoted to Mohammed as he was to her, for he died in her arms. "A woman who distinguished herself by all manner of qualities among the Moslems," who is styled by them the "Mother of the Faithful" (see KADITAH). She was, it is said, the only wife of Mohammed that remained a virgin. On Mohammed's death she opposed the accession of Ali, who defeated her and took her prisoner, but released her on condition that she should not again interfere in State matters (610-677).

AYLESBURY, a borough and market-town in Buckinghamshire, 40 m. N.W. of London, in an agricultural district; has an extensive industry in dairy-farming and duck-rearing.

AYLMER, JOHN, tutor to Lady Jane Grey, bishop of London, a highly arbitrary man, and a friend to neither Papist nor Puritan; he is satirised by Spenser in the "Shepherd's Calendar" (1521-1594).

AYLOFFE, SIR JOSEPH, English antiquary, born in Sussex; compiled the "Calendars of the Antient Charters" (1708-1781).

AYMA RAS, the chief native race of Peru and Bolivia, from which it would appear sprang the Quichuas, the dominant people of Peru at the time of the Spanish conquest, attained a high degree of civilisation, and number to day 500,000.

AYMON, THE COUNT OF DORDOGNE, the father of four sons, Renaud, Gislehard, Alard, and Richard, renowned in the legends of chivalry, and particularly as paladins of Charlemagne.

AYMAR-VER-NAY, a peasant of Dauphine, who in the 17th century professed to discover springs and treasures hid in the earth by means of a divining rod.

AYR, the county town of Ayrshire, at the mouth of a river of the same name, a clean, ancient town, its charter, granted by William the Lion, dating from 1200; well built, with elegant villas in the suburbs, a good harbour and docks for shipping, famous in early Scottish history, and doubly so among Scottish towns as figuring frequently in Burns's poems. Alloway, the poet's birthplace, is close to it.

AYRER, JACOB, a German dramatist in the 16th century, of the style of Hans Sachs (q.v.).

AYRSHIRE, a large and wealthy county in the W. of Scotland, bordered on the W. by the Firth of Clyde, agricultural and pastoral, with a large coalfield and thriving manufactures; its divisions, Carrick, to the S. of the Doon; Kyle, between the Doon and the Irvine; and Cunningham, on the N., concerning which there is an old rhyme: "Kyle for a man, Carrick for a coo, Cunningham for butter and cheese, Galloway for 'oo."

AYTON, SIR ROBERT, poet, a native of Fife, born at Kinaldie, who made his fortune by a Latin panegyric to King James I. on his accession; was on friendly terms with the eminent literary men of his time, Ben Jonson in particular (1571-1633).

AYTOIN, WILLIAM EDMONDSTOUNE, poet and critic, a native of Edinburgh, professor of Rhetoric and English Literature in Edinburgh University, author of the "Lays of the Scottish Cavaliers" and part-author with Sir Theodore Martin of the "Bon Gaultier Ballads" (1813-1865).

AZAZEL, one of the Jinns, or desert-spirits, supposed to have inhabited the earth before man's creation, personified in the scapegoat which carried away the sins of the Israelites on the Day of Atonement, in Hell the standard-bearer of Satan's host (Milton, "Paradise Lost").

AZEGLIO, MARCHESE D', an Italian patriot and statesman, native of Turin; wounded at Vicenza in 1848, fighting for Italian independence, entered the Piedmontese Parliament, was Victor Emmanuel's right-hand man, but retired in favour of Cavour; he was not altogether engrossed with politics, being an amateur in art (1798-1866).

AZERBIJAN, prov. of Armenian Persia, S. of the river Aras, with fertile plains, cattle breeding, and rich in minerals.

AZORES (see Islew Islands), a group of nine volcanic islands in the Atlantic, 800 m. W. of Portugal, and forming a province of it; are in general mountainous, covered with orange groves, of which the chief are at St. Michael's and Fayal, the climate is mild, and good for pulmonary complaints; they were known to the Carthaginian mariners, but fell out of the map of Europe till rediscovered in 1431.

AZOV, SEA OF, an opening from the Black Sea, very shallow, and gradually silted up with mud from the Don; in winter it is generally ice-bound.

AZRAEL, the angel of death according to Rabbinical tradition.

AZTECS, a civilised race of small stature, of reddish-brown skin, lean, and broad-featured, which occupied the Mexican plateau for some centuries before the Spaniards visited it, and founded a powerful empire, they were overthrown by the Spaniards under Cortez in 1520.

AZULI, DOMINICO ALBERTO, an Italian jurist, born in Sardinia; president of the Court of Appeal at Genoa; made a special study of maritime law, author of "Droit Maritime de l'Europe" (1720-1827).

AZYMITES (meaning "not leavened"), the name given to a party in the Church who insisted that only unleavened bread should be used in the Eucharist, and the controversy hinged on the question whether the Lord's Supper was instituted before the Passover season was finished or after, as in the former case the bread must have been unleavened and in the latter leavened.

BAADER

BAADER, FRANZ XAVIER VON, a German philosopher, born at Munich: was patronised by the king of Bavaria, and became professor in Munich, but, revolting alike from the materialism of Hume, which he studied in England, and the transcendentalism of Kant, with its self-sufficiency of the reason, fell back upon the mysticism of Jacob Boehme, and taught in 16 vols. what might rather be called a theosophy than a philosophy, which regarded God in Himself, and God even in life, as incomprehensible realities. He identified himself with the liberal movement in politics, and offended the king (1765-1841).

BA'AL (meaning Lord), pl. Baalim, the principal male divinity of the Canaanites and Phoenicians, identified with the sun as the great quickening and life-sustaining power in nature, the god who presided over the labours of the husbandman and granted the increase, his crowning attribute, strength; worshipped on hill-tops with sacrifices, incense, and dancing. Baal-worship, being that of the Canaanites, was for a time mixed up with the worship of Jehovah in Israel, and at one time threatened to swamp it, but under the zealous preaching of the prophets it was eventually stamped out. The name recurs often in personal and place-names.

BAAL-BEK (i.e. City of Baal, or the Sun), an ancient city of Syria, 35 m. NW. of Damascus, called by the Greeks, Heliopolis; once a place of great size, wealth, and splendour; now a small, insignificant village; conspicuous among its ruins is the Great Temple to Baal, one of the most magnificent remains of the ancient East, covering an area of four acres.

BAALISM, the name given to the worship of natural causes, tending to the obscuration and denial of the worship of God as Spirit.

BABA, ALI, the character in the "Arabian Nights" who discovers and extorts the den of the Forty Thieves by the magic password Sesame, a word which he accidentally overheard.

BABA, CAPE, in Asia Minor, the most western point in Asia, in Anatolia, with a town of the same name.

BABBAGE, CHARLES, a mathematician, born in Devonshire; studied at Cambridge, and professor there from 1828 to 1839; spent much time and money over the invention of a calculating machine; wrote on "The Economy of Manufactures and Machinery," and an autobiography entitled "Passages from the Life of a Philosopher" (1791-1871).

BARBITT METAL, an alloy of antimony, lead, and tin used in the construction of machinery.

BABEL, TOWER OF, described in Genesis xi. 9, built with the aim of reaching to Heaven; its workmen were made to speak in confusing languages and the work stopped.

BAB-EL-MANDEB (i.e. the Gate of Tears), a strait between Asia and Africa forming the entrance to the Red Sea, so called from the strong currents which rush through it, and often cause wreckage to vessels attempting to pass it, also a cape on the Arabian coast.

BABER, (i.e. the tiger), the name by which is known ZEHR ED-DIN MORHAMMED, the founder of the Mogul empire in Hindustan, a descendant of Tamerlane; three invaded India, and became at length master of it in 1526; left no heirs; his dynasty lasted for many centuries (1483-1530).

BABINGTON, ANTONY, an English Catholic gentleman; conspired against Elizabeth on behalf of Mary, Queen of Scots, confessed his guilt, and was executed at Tyburn in 1586.

BABIRUSA, a mammal of the pig family found exclusively in Celebes and Buru, in the East Indies; remarkable for four curved tusks which are elongated growths of the upper canine teeth, these arching backwards towards the forehead.

BABIS, a Persian sect founded in 1843 by Mirza Ali; their doctrines a mixture of pantheistic with Gnostic and Buddhist beliefs; adverse to polygamy, concubinage, and divorce; insisted on the emancipation of women; suffered from persecution, their leader being executed, but the sect has survived in Acre and elsewhere.

BACCHYLIDES

BABCEUF, FRANÇOIS NOEL, a violent revolutionary in France, self-styled Gracchus; headed an insurrection against the Directory, which died in the birth, stifled by the soldiery; convicted of conspiracy, was guillotined, after attempting to commit suicide (1764-1797).

BABOO, or BABU, name applied to a native Hindu gentleman who has some knowledge of English.

BA'BRUS, or GABRIUS, a Greek poet of uncertain date; turned the fables of Æsop and of others into verse, with alterations.

BABY-FARMING, a system of nursing new-born infants whose parents desire to get rid of them; under the Infant Life Protection Act of 1897 persons so receiving infants are subject to supervision.

BABYLON, the capital city of Babylonia, one of the richest and most magnificent cities of the East, the gigantic walls and hanging gardens of which were classed among the seven wonders of the world; was taken, according to tradition, by Cyrus in 538 B.C., by diverting out of their channel the waters of the Euphrates, which flows through it, and by Darius in 519 B.C. through the self-sacrifice of Zopyrus. The name was often metaphorically applied to Rome by the early Christians, and is so to-day to great centres of population, such as London, where the overcrowding, the accumulation of material wealth, and the refinements of civilisation are conceived to have a corrupting effect on the religion and morals of the inhabitants.

BABYLO'NIA, the name given by the Greeks to that country called in the Old Testament Sinear, Babel, and "the land of the Chaldees"; it occupied the rich, fertile plain through which the lower waters of the Euphrates and the Tigris flow, now called Iraq. From very early times it was the seat of a highly developed civilisation introduced by the Sumerio-Accadians, who descended on the plain from the mountains in the NW. Semitic tribes subsequently settled among the Accadians and impressed their characteristics on the language and institutions of the country. The 8th century B.C. was marked by a fierce struggle with the northern empire of Assyria, in which Babylonia eventually succumbed and became an Assyrian province. But Nabopolassar in 626 B.C. asserted his independence, and under his son Nebuchadnezzar Babylonia rose to the zenith of its power. Judah was captive in the country from 599 to 538 B.C. In that year Cyrus conquered it for Persia, and its history became merged in that of Persia.

BABYLONISH CAPTIVITY, the name given to the deportation of Jews from Judea to Babylon after the capture of Jerusalem by the king of Babylon, the migration continuing for 70 years, till they were allowed to return to their own land by Cyrus, who had conquered Babylon; those who returned were solely of the tribes of Judah, Benjamin, and Levi.

BACCARAT, an unlawful gambling game which originated in France, being at its height in the reign of Louis Philippe; popular in two forms, baccarat à banque and baccarat chemin de fer.

BACCHANALIA, a festival, originally of a loose and riotous character, in honour of Bacchus.

BACCHANTES, those who took part in the festival of Bacchus, confined originally to women, who were called by a number of names, such as Menads, Thyads, &c.; they wore their hair dishevelled and thrown back and had loose flowing garments.

BACCHUS, son of Zeus and Semele, the god of the vine, and promoter of its culture as well as the civilisation which accompanied it; represented as riding in a car drawn by tame tigers, and carrying a Thyrsus (q.v.); he rendered signal service to Zeus in the war of the gods with the Giants (q.v.). See DIONYSUS.

BACCHYLIDES, a Greek lyric poet, 5th century B.C., nephew of Simonides and uncle of Æschylus, a rival

- of Pindar; only a few fragments of his poems extant.
- BACCIO'CHI, a Corsican officer who married Maria Bonaparte and was created by Napoleon Prince of Lucra (1762-1841).
- BACH, JOHANN SEBASTIAN, one of the greatest of musical composers, born in Eisenach, of a family of Hungarian origin, noted—sixty of them—for musical genius; was in succession a chorister, an organist, a director of concerts, and finally director of music at the School of St. Thomas, Leipzig; his works, from their originality and scientific rigour, difficult of execution (1685-1760).
- BACHE, A. DALLAS, an American physicist, born at Philadelphia, superintendent the United States coast survey (1806-1867).
- BACILLUS, the name given to bacteria which are rod-like in form.
- BACH, SIR GEORGE, Arctic explorer, born at Stockholm, entered the navy, was a French captive for five years, associated with Franklin in three polar expeditions, went in search of Sir John Ross, discovered instead and traced the Great Fish (or Back) River in 1839 (1796-1878).
- BACHHAUS, WILHELM, German pianist. He studied under Keckendorf at Leipzig and D'Albert at Frankfurt, won the Rubenstein Prize at Paris in 1905, subsequently playing all over the world (1884-).
- BACKHUYSEN, LUDOLPH, a Dutch painter, famous for his sea-pieces and skill in depicting sea-waves, was an etcher as well as painter (1631-1708).
- BACON, DELIA, an American authoress, who first broached, though she did not originate, the theory of the Baconian authorship of Shakespeare's works (1811-1859).
- BACON, FRANCIS, LORD VERULAM, the father of the inductive method of scientific inquiry, born in the Strand, London; son of Sir Nicholas Bacon, educated at Cambridge; called to the bar when 21, after study at Gray's Inn, represented successively Taunton, Liverpool, and Ipswich in Parliament; was a favourite with the queen; attached himself to Essex, but witnessed against him at his trial, and became at last in succession Attorney-General, Privy Councillor, Lord Keeper, and Lord Chancellor; was convicted of venality as a judge, deposed, fined, and imprisoned, but pardoned and released, spent his retirement in his favourite studies; his great works were his "Advancement of Learning," "Novum Organum," and "De Augmentis Scientiarum," but is seen to best advantage by the generality in his "Essays," which are full of practical wisdom and keen observation of life; indeed, these show such shrewdness of wit as to embolden some (see DELIA BACON) to maintain that the plays named of Shakespeare were written by him (1561-1626).
- BACON, ROGER, a Franciscan monk, born at Ilchester, Somerset; a fearless truth-seeker of great scientific attainments; accused of magic, convicted and condemned to imprisonment, from which he was released only to die; suggested several scientific inventions, such as the telescope, the air-pump, the diving-bell, the camera obscura, and gunpowder, and wrote some eighty treatises (1214-1294).
- BACON, SIR NICHOLAS, the father of Francis, Lord Bacon, Privy Councillor and Keeper of the Great Seal under Queen Elizabeth; a prudent and honourable man and minister, and much honoured and trusted by the queen (1510-1579).
- BACON, SIR REGINALD, Admiral; commander of the Dover Patrol (q.r.) from 1915 to 1918. He wrote a Life of Admiral Fisher (1863-).
- BACSENYI, JANOS, a Hungarian poet; he suffered from his liberal political opinions, like many of his countrymen (1763-1845).
- BACTE'RIA, exceedingly minute organisms of the simplest structure, being merely cells of varied forms, in the shape of spheres, rods, or intermediate shapes, which develop in infusions of organic matter, and multiply by fission with great rapidity, conspicuous by the part they play in the process of fermentation, in enabling plants to build up proteins, and in the origin and progress of disease, to the knowledge of them and the purpose they serve in nature we owe much to the labours of Pasteur.
- BACTRIA, a province of ancient Persia, now Balkh (q.r.) the presumed fatherland of the Aryans and the birthplace of the Zoroastrian religion.
- BACTRIAN SAGE, a name given to Zoroaster as a native of Bactria.
- BACUP, a manufacturing town in Lancashire, about 20 m. N.E. of Manchester; cotton-spinning and weaving main industries.
- BADAJOS, capital of a Spanish province of the name, on the Guadiana, near the frontier of Portugal; a place of great strength; surrendered to Soult in 1811, and taken after a violent and bloody struggle by Wellington in 1812.
- BADAKANS, a Dravidian people of small stature, living on the Nilghiri Mountains, in S. India.
- BADAKHSHAN, a Mohammedan territory N.E. of Afghanistan, a picturesque hill country, rich in minerals; it is 200 m. from E. to W. and 150 from N. to S.; it has been often visited by travellers, from Marco Polo onwards; the inhabitants, called Badakhshans, are of the Aryan family and speak Persian.
- BADALONA, a seaport 5 m. N.E. of Barcelona.
- BADEN, a town in the canton of Aargau, Switzerland, 14 m. N.W. of Zurich, long a fashionable resort for its mineral springs; also a town near Vienna.
- BAD EN, THE GRAND-DUCHY OF, a German duchy, extends along the left bank of the Rhine from Constantine to Mannheim; consists of valley, mountain and plain; includes the Black Forest; is rich in timber, minerals and mineral springs, cotton fabrics, wood-carving, and jewellery employ a great proportion of the inhabitants, there are two university seats, Heidelberg and Freiburg.
- BADEN-BADEN, a town in the duchy of Baden, 18 m. from Karlsruhe and 22 from Strassburg, noted for its hot mineral springs, which were known to the Romans, and popular as a summer resort.
- BAD ENOCH, a forest-covered district of the Highlands of Scotland, 45 m. long by 19 broad, traversed by the Spey, in the S.E. of Inverness-shire; belonged originally to the Comyns, but was forfeited by them, was bestowed by Bruce on his nephew; became finally the property of the Earl of Huntly.
- BADEN-POWELL, BARON, founder of the Boy Scouts in 1908 as Sir Robert Baden-Powell. He first leapt to fame by his defence of Mafeking in the Boer War; from 1903 to 1907 he was Inspector-General of Cavalry, and in 1910 he retired from the army to devote his whole time to the Scout movement. He was raised to the peerage in 1929 (1857-).
- BADI'A-Y-LABELICH, a Spaniard, born at Barcelona; travelled in the East, having acquired a knowledge of Arabic and Arab customs, disguised himself as a Mohammedan under the name of Ali-Bel; his disguise was so complete that he passed for a Mussulman, even in Mecca itself; is believed to be the first Christian admitted to the shrine of Mecca; after a time settled in Paris, and wrote an account of his travels (1766-1818).
- BADRINATH, a peak and shrine of Vishnu, in NW. India, 10,000 ft. high; much frequented by pilgrims for the sacred waters near it, which are believed to be potent to cleanse from all pollution.
- BAEDEKER, KARL, a German printer in Coblenz, famed for the guide-books to almost every country of Europe that he published (1801-1859).
- BAER, KARL ERNST VON, a native of Esthonia; professor of zoology, first in Königsberg and then in St. Petersburg, the greatest of modern embryologists, styled the "father of comparative embryology"; the discoverer of the law, known by his name, that the embryo when developing resembles those of successively higher types (1792-1876).
- BAEYER, JOHANN FRIEDRICH VON, German chemist, professor at Strassburg and Munich, who carried out a large number of investigations into the structure of organic compounds, particularly indigo, which he prepared artificially. He showed the possibility of a substance having two distinct forms, and his work led to the idea of tautomerism (1835-1917).
- BAFFIN, WILLIAM, an early English Arctic explorer, who, when acting as pilot to an expedition in quest of the NW. Passage, discovered Baffin Bay (1584-1622).
- BAFFIN BAY, or SEA, a strait stretching northward

- between N. America and Greenland, upon four months in summer to whale and seal fishing; discovered in 1615 by William Baffin.
- BAGDAD, on the Tigris, 500 m. from its mouth, and connected with the Euphrates by canal, the capital of Iraq; dates, wool, grain, and horses are exported; red and yellow leather, cotton, and silk are manufactured; the transit trade, though much less than formerly, is still considerable. It is a station on the Anglo-Indian telegraph and air route, and is served by a railway and a fleet of river steamers plying to Basra. Formerly a centre of Arabic culture, it had belonged to Turkey since 1638, but was captured by the British under General Maude in the Mesopotamian campaign of 1917.
- BAGERHOT, WALTER, an English political economist, born in Somerset, a banker by profession, and an authority on banking and finance; a disciple of Ricardo; author of, besides other publications, an important work, "The English Constitution"; was editor of The Economist; wrote in a vigorous style (1826-1877).
- BAGGARA, an Arab people in the Sudan; Mohammedans by religion, they formed part of the dervish armies in the Egyptian wars of 1881-1899.
- BAGGESEN, JENS EMMANUEL, a Danish poet, travelled a good deal, wrote mostly in German, in which he was proficient; his chief works, a pastoral epic, "Parthenais oder die Alpenreise," and a mock epic, "Adam and Eve"; his minor pieces are numerous and popular and are remarkable for their satiric humour (1764-1826).
- BAGHELKAND, name of five native states in Central India, Rewah the most prosperous.
- BAGHERIA, a town in Sicily, 8 m. from Palermo, where citizens of the latter have more or less stylish villas.
- BAGIR MI, a Mohammedan kingdom in Central Africa, S.E. of Lake Tchad, 240 m. from N. to S. and 150 m. from E. to W.
- BAGLIO'NI, an Italian fresco-painter of note (1573-1641).
- BAGLI'VI, GIORGIO, an illustrious Italian physician, wrote "De Fibra Motrice" in defence of the "solidist" theory, as it is called, which traced all diseases to alterations in the solid parts of the body (1667-1706).
- BAGNERES ("the baths"), two French towns on the Pyrenees, well-known watering places, with hot mineral and sulphur springs.
- BAGNES, name given to convict prisons in France after the abolition of the galleys; abandoned in 1852, since when convicts have been sent to French penal settlements.
- BAGRA' TION, PRINCE, Russian general, distinguished in many engagements; commanded the vanguard at Austerlitz, Eylau, and Friedland, and in 1812, against Napoleon; achieved a brilliant success at Smolensk; fell at Borodino (1765-1812).
- BAGSTOCK, JOE, a "self-absorbed" talking character in Dickens' "Dombey & Son."
- BAHA' MAS, THE, a group of over 500 low, flat coral islands in the W. Indies, and thousands of rocks, belonging to Britain, of which 20 are inhabited, and on one of which Columbus landed during his voyage when he discovered America; yield tropical fruits, sponges, turtle, &c.; Nassau the capital.
- BAHAR, a town on the Ganges, 34 m. S.E. of Patna; after falling into decay, is again rising in importance.
- BAHAWALPUR, a feudatory state in the NW. of India, with a capital of the name; is connected administratively with the Punjab.
- BAHIA, or San Salvador, a fine city, one of the chief seaports of Brazil, in the Bay of All Saints, and originally the capital in a province of the name stretching along the middle of the coast.
- BAHR, an Arabic word meaning "river," prefixed to the name of many places occupied by Arabs.
- BAHR, FELIX, classical scholar and philologist, born at Darmstadt; wrote a "History of Roman Literature" in high repute (1798-1872).
- BAHREIN ISLANDS, a group of islands in the Persian Gulf, under the protection of Britain, belonging to Muscat, the largest 27 m. long and 10 broad, cap. Manamah; long famous for their pearl-fisheries, among the richest in the world.
- BAHR-EL-GHAZAL, an old Egyptian prov. including the district watered by the tributaries of the Bahr-el-Arab and the Bahr-el-Ghazal; it was wrested from Egypt by the Mahdi, 1884; a district of French Congo lies W. of it, and it was through it Marchand made his way to Fashoda.
- BALE, a small town near Naples, now in ruins and nearly all submerged; famous as a resort of the old Roman nobility, for its climate and its baths.
- BAIF, a French poet, one of a group of seven known in French literature as the "Pleïade," whose aim was to accommodate the French language and literature to the models of Greek and Latin.
- BAIKAL, a clear fresh-water lake, in S. of Siberia, 397 m. long and from 12 to 64 wide, in some parts 4300 ft. deep, and at its surface 1550 ft. above the sea-level, the third largest in Asia; sledges ply on it for six or eight months in winter, and steam-boats in summer; it abounds in fish, especially sturgeon and salmon, and contains several islands, the largest Olkhon, 32 m. by 10 m.
- BAIKIE, W. BALFOUR, an Orcadian, born at Kirkwall, surgeon in the Royal Navy; was attached to the Niger Expedition in 1854, and ultimately commanded it, opening the region up and letting light in upon it at the sacrifice of his life; died at Sierra Leone (1825-1864).
- BAILEY, NATHAN, an early English lexicographer, whose dictionary, very popular in its day, was the basis of Johnson's; d. 1742.
- BAILEY, PHILIP JAMES, poet, born at Nottingham; author of "Festus," which appeared in 1839 (1816-1902).
- BAILEY, SAMUEL, an English author, born in Sheffield, a liberal-minded man, a utilitarian in philosophy, who wrote on psychology, ethics, and political economy, and left a fortune, acquired in business, to his native town (1791-1870).
- BAILLIE, JOANNA, a poetess, born at Bothwell, child of the Presbyterian manse there; joined a brother in London, stayed afterwards with a sister at Hampstead; produced a series of dramas entitled "Plays of the Passions," besides many others, both comedies and tragedies, one of which, the "Family Legend," was acted in the Theatre Royal, Edinburgh, under the auspices of Sir Walter Scott; she does not stand high either as a dramatist or a writer (1702-1851).
- BAILLIE, LADY GRIZEL, an heroic Scottish lady of covenanting days, famous for her songs; "And were na' heart licht I wad dee" is well known (1665-1746).
- BAILLIE, ROBERT, a Scottish Presbyterian divine, born in Glasgow; resisted Laud's attempt to thrust Episcopacy on the Scottish nation, and became a zealous advocate of the national cause, which he was delegated to represent twice over in London; he was a royalist all the same, and was made principal of Glasgow University (1599-1662).
- BAILLIE, ROBERT, a zealous Scottish Presbyterian, tried for complicity in the Rye House Plot, was unfairly condemned to death and barbarously executed the same day (in 1683) for fear he should die afterwards and cheat the gallows of its victim.
- BAILLY, JEAN SYLVAIN, an astronomer, born at Paris; wrote the "History of Astronomy, Ancient and Modern," in five volumes; was distracted from further study of the science by the occurrence of the Revolution; elected president of the National Assembly; installed mayor of Paris; lost favour with the people; was imprisoned as an enemy of the popular cause and guillotined (1788-1793).
- BAILY, EDWARD HODGES, a sculptor, born in Bristol, studied under Flaxman; his most popular works were, "Eve Listening to the Voice," the "Sleeping Girl," and the "Graces Seated" (1789-1867).
- BAILY, FRANCIS, astronomer, in business as stockbroker in London before devoting his time to science; founder of the Astronomical Society (1820); discovered "Baily's Beads" on the sun; revised the "Nautical Almanac" (1774-1844).
- BAIN, ALEXANDER, born at Aberdeen, professor of Logic in the university, and twice Lord Rector, where he was much esteemed by and exercised a great influence over his pupils; his chief works, "The Senses and the Intellect," "The Emotions and the Will," and "Mental and Moral Science" (1818-1903).

BAIRAM, a Mohammedan festival of three days at the conclusion of the Ramadan, followed by another of four days, seventy days later, called the Second Bairam, in commemoration of the offering up of Isaac, and accompanied with sacrifices.

BAIRD, JAMES, ironmaster and M. P., founder of the Baird Lectureship, in vindication of Scottish orthodoxy; bequeathed £500,000 to support churches (1802-1876).

BAIRD, SIR DAVID, a distinguished English general of Scottish descent, born at Newbyth, Aberdeenshire; entered the army at 15; served in India, Egypt, and at the Cape; was present at the taking of Seringapatam, and the siege of Pondicherry; in command when the Cape of Good Hope was wrested from the Dutch, and on the fall of Sir John Moore at Corunna, wounded; he afterwards retired (1757-1829).

BAIRD, SPENCER FULLERTON, an American naturalist, wrote, among other subjects, on the birds and mammals of N. America, and on fish-culture and fisheries (1823-1887).

BAIRREUTH, the capital of Upper Franconia, in Bavaria, with a large theatre erected by the king for the performance of Wagner's musical compositions, and with a monument, simple but massive, to the memory of Jean Paul, who died there.

BAIREUTH, WILHELMINA, MARGARINE OF, sister of Frederick the Great, left "Memoirs" of her time (1709-1758).

BAJAZET I., sultan of the Ottoman Turks, surnamed Isterim, i. e. Lightning, from the energy and rapidity of his movements; aimed at Constantinople, pushed everything before him in his advance on Europe, but was met and defeated on the plain of Angora by Tamerlane, who is said to have shut him in a cage and carried him about with him in his train till the day of his death (1347-1403).

BAJUS, MICHAEL, deputy from the University of Louvain to the Council of Trent, where he incurred much obloquy at the hands of the Jesuits by his insistence on the doctrine of Augustine, as the Jesuits did after him (1513-1589).

BAKER, MOUNT, an extinct volcano in the Cascade range, in Washington, U.S.A., 11,000 ft.

BAKER, SIR RICHARD, a country gentleman, born in Kent, often referred to by Sir Roger de Coverley; author of "The Chronicle of the Kings of England," which he wrote in the Fleet prison, where he died (1603-1645).

BAKER, SIR SAMUEL WHITE, a man of enterprise and travel, born in London; discovered the Albert Nyanza; commanded an expedition under the Khedive into the Soudan; wrote an account of it in a book, "Ismaïlia"; left a record of his travels in five volumes with different titles (1821-1893).

BAKSHISI (Persian for "a gift"), a word used all over the East to denote a small fee for some slight service rendered.

BAKU, a Russian port on the Caspian Sea, in a district so impregnated and saturated in parts with petroleum that by digging in the soil wells are formed, in some cases so gushing as to overflow in streams, the wells, reckoned by hundreds, being connected by pipes with refineries in the town; a district which, from the spontaneous ignition of the petroleum, was long ago a centre of attraction to the Parsees or fire-worshippers of the East, and resorted to by them as holy ground.

BAKU'NIN, MICHAEL, an extreme and violent anarchist and a leader of the movement; native of Moscow, was banished to Siberia, but escaped; joined the International, but was expelled (1814-1876).

BALA, the county town of Merioneth, in Wales.

BALA LAKE, the largest lake in Wales, 4 m. long, and with a depth of 100 ft.; formed by the river Dee.

BAL'LAAM, a Midianitish seafarer; for the account of him see Num. xiv. xlv., and Carlyle's essay on the "Corn-Law Rhymes"; for its application to modern State councillors of the same time-serving type, and their probable fate.

BALACLAVA, a small port 6 in SE. of Sebastopol, with a large land-locked basin; the headquarters of the British during the Crimean War, and famous in the war, among other events, for the "Charge of the Six Hundred."

BALALAÏKA, a stringed musical instrument like a guitar, popular in Russia.

BALANCE OF POWER, preservation of the equilibrium existing among the States of Europe as a security of peace, for long an important consideration with European statesmen.

BALANCE OF TRADE, the difference in value between the exports and the imports of a country, and said to be in favour of the country whose exports exceed in value the imports in that respect.

BALATA, a vegetable gum used as a substitute for gutta-serena, being at once ductile and elastic; goes under the name of "bully."

BAL'ATON LAKE, the largest lake in Hungary, 48 m. long, and 10 m. broad, 56 m. SW. of Pesth; slightly saline, and abounds in fish.

BALBI, ADRIANO, a geographer of Italian descent, born at Venice, who composed in French a number of works bearing on geography (1782-1848).

BALBO, CESARE, an Italian statesman and publicist, born at Turin, devoted his later years to literature, wrote a life of Dante, and works in advocacy of Italian independence (1789-1853).

BALBOA, VASCO NÚÑEZ DE, a Castilian noble, established a settlement at Darien; discovered the Pacific; took possession of territory in the name of Spain; put to death by a new governor, from jealousy of the glory he had acquired and his consequent influence in the State (1475-1517).

BALDACHINO, a tent-like covering or canopy over portals, altars, or thrones, supported on columns, suspended from the roof, or projecting from the wall.

BALD'ER, the sun-god of the Norse mythology, "the beautiful, the wise, the benignant," who is fated to die, and dies, in spite of, and to the grief of, all the gods of the pantheon, a pathetic symbol conceived in the Norse imagination of how all things in heaven, as on earth, are subject in the long run to mortality.

BALDERSTONE, CALEB, the faithful old domestic in Scott's "Bride of Lammermoor," the family he served with pride.

BALDRICK, an ornamental belt worn hanging over the shoulder, across the body diagonally, with a sword, dagger, or horn suspended from it.

BALDUNG, HANS, or HANS GRÜN, a German artist born in Suabia, a friend of Dürer, his greatest work, a masterpiece, a painting of the "Crucifixion," now in Freiburg Cathedral (1300-1347).

BALDWIN, archbishop of Canterbury, crowned Richard Cœur de Lion, accompanied him on the crusade; died at Acre in 1191.

BALDWIN, the name of several counts of Flanders, nine in all.

BALDWIN I., king of Jerusalem; succeeded his brother Godfrey de Bouillon, assuming said title, made himself master of most of the towns on the coast of Syria, contracted a disease in Egypt; returned to Jerusalem, and was buried on Mount Calvary, there were five of this name and title, the last of whom, a child some eight years old, died in 1186 (1058-1118).

BALDWIN I., the first Latin emperor of Constantinople; by birth, count of Hainault and Flanders, joined the fourth crusade, led the van in the capture of Constantinople, and was made emperor; was defeated and taken prisoner by the Bulgarians (1171-1206).

B. II., nephew of Baldwin I., last king of the Latin dynasty, which lasted only 57 years (1217-1273).

BALDWIN, RT. HON. STANLEY, British statesman. Educated at Harrow and Cambridge, he entered Parliament as a Conservative for Bewdley in 1908, and first took office as financial secretary to the Treasury in the Coalition Govt. in 1917. In 1921 he became President of the Board of Trade, and the following year took an active part in replacing the Coalition by Bonar Law's Conservative Govt., taking the post of Chancellor of the Exchequer and succeeding to the Premiership in May, 1923, on the death of Bonar Law. He went to the country for a mandate for Protection in November, 1923, was defeated at the polls and resigned when Parliament met in January, 1924. On the defeat of the Labour Govt. in November, 1924, he again became Prime Minister, and held office till his party was defeated at the election of May, 1929. In politics he will be remembered for his funding of the American debt in 1923 and his handling of the General Strike situation in 1926 (1867-).

BALEARIC ISLES, a group of five islands off the coast of Valencia, in Spain, Mallorca the largest; inhabitants in ancient times famous as expert slingers (whence the name Balearic), having been one and all systematically trained to the use of the sling from early childhood; cap. Palma.

BALFE, MICHAEL WILLIAM, a musical composer, of Irish birth, born near Wexford; author of "The Bohemian Girl," his masterpiece (1808-1870).

BALFOUR, EARL OF (A. J. Balfour), British politician. Educated at Eton and Cambridge; nephew of Lord Salisbury, and First Lord of the Treasury and leader of the House of Commons in his ministry. He became Prime Minister in 1902, was defeated in 1905, lost his seat in Manchester the following year and was elected for the City of London; till 1911 he was leader of the Conservative opposition; served as Foreign Secretary in the Coalition, 1916-1919; in 1917 he visited the U.S.A. to seek war co-operation. Raised to the peerage in 1922, he acted as Lord President of the Council from 1924 to 1929. A keen philosopher, he was president of the British Association in 1904, and was the author of a "Defence of Philosophic Doubt" and a volume of "Essays and Addresses." In politics he will be remembered as the author of the Balfour Declaration (q.v.) and the Balfour Note (q.v.). He was also prominent in the Washington Conference (q.v.) (1848-1930).

BALFOUR, FRANCIS MAITLAND, brother of the preceding; a promising biologist who wrote on animal embryology. His career was cut short by death in attempting to ascend the Wetterhorn (1851-1882).

BALFOUR, SIR JAMES, Lord President of the Court of Session; native of Fife; an unprincipled man, sided now with this party, now with the opposite, to his own advantage, and that at the most critical period in Scottish history; d. 1583.

BALFOUR DECLARATION, THE, a statement made by the British Govt. in November, 1917, promising that Palestine should be made a national home for the Jewish people, as a result of which the League of Nations gave Great Britain a mandate for the country in 1919.

BALFOUR NOTE, the principle of British finance of post-war years that Britain's receipts from Germany and Allied debtors should equal but not exceed our payments to the U.S.A.

BALFOUR OF BURLEY, leader of the Covenanters in Scott's "Old Mortality."

BALL, one of the Lesser Sunda Islands, Dutch East Indies, 75 m. long by 40 m. broad, produces cotton, coffee, and tobacco.

BALJOL, EDWARD, son of the following, invaded Scotland; was crowned king at Scone, supported by Edward III.; was driven from the kingdom, and obliged to renounce all claim to the crown, on receipt of a pension; died at Doncaster, 1369.

BALJOL, JOHN DE, son of the following; laid claim to the Scottish crown on the death of the Maid of Norway in 1290; was supported by Edward I., and did homage to him for his kingdom, but rebelled, and was forced publicly to resign the crown; died in 1314 in Normandy, after spending some three years in the Tower; satirised by the Scots as King Toom Tabard, i.e. Empty King Cloak.

BALJOL, SIR JOHN DE, of Norman descent; a guardian to the heir to the Scottish crown on the death of Alexander III.; founder of Balliol College, Oxford; d. 1269.

BALIZE, or BELIZE, the capital of British Honduras, in Central America; trade in mahogany, rosewood, &c.

BALKAN PENINSULA, the territory between the Adriatic and the Aegean Sea, bounded on the N. by the Save and the Lower Danube, and on the S. by Greece.

BALKAN WARS, wars fought between Turkey and the Balkan States in 1912 and 1913. After the Balkan League had captured Macedonia and Albania Greece continued the war alone from December, 1912, to February, 1913, when she was again joined by the other allies. On the disintegration of the Balkan League in June, 1913, a second Balkan war started, Serbia, Montenegro, and Greece fighting Turkey, Bulgaria, and Rumania.

BALKANS, THE, a mountain range extending from the Adriatic to the Black Sea; properly the range dividing Bulgaria from Rumania; mean height, 6500 ft.

BALKASH, LAKE, a lake in Siberia, 780 ft. above sea-level, the waters clear, but intensely salt, 345 m. long and 55 m. broad.

BALKH, anciently called Bactria, a district of Afghan Turkestan lying between the Oxus and the Hindu Kush, 250 m. long and 120 m. broad, with a capital of the same name, reduced now to a village; birth-place of Zoroaster.

BALL, JOHN, a priest who had been excommunicated for denouncing the abuses of the Church; a ring-leader in the Wat Tyler rebellion; captured and executed at St. Albans in 1381.

BALL, SIR ROBERT STAWELL, mathematician and astronomer, born in Dublin; Astronomer-Royal for Ireland from 1874 to 1892; appointed director of Cambridge Observatory 1892; author of works on astronomy and mechanics, the best known of a popular kind on the former science being "The Story of the Heavens" (1840-1913).

BALLAD, a story in verse, composed with spirit, generally of patriotic interest, and sung originally to the harp.

BALLANCHE, PIERRE SIMON, a mystic writer, born at Lyons, his chief work "La Palingénésie Sociale," his aim being the regeneration of society (1776-1847).

BALLANTINE, JAMES, glass-stainer and poet, born in Edinburgh (1808-1877).

BALLANTINE, WILLIAM, SERJEANT, distinguished counsel in celebrated criminal cases (1812-1887).

BALL'ANTYNE, JAMES, a native of Kelso, became a printer in Edinburgh, printed all Sir Walter Scott's works; failed in business, a failure in which Scott was seriously implicated (1772-1833).

BALL'ANTYNE, ROBERT MICHAEL, author of many popular books for boys; nephew of James Ballantyne (above); for some time in Canada in the fur trade, afterwards in the publishing house of Constable of Edinburgh (1825-1894).

BALLARAT, a town in Victoria, about 100 m. NW. of Melbourne; the centre of the chief goldfields in the colony, the precious metal being at first washed out of the soil, and now crushed out of the quartz rocks and dug out of deep mines; it is the seat of both a Roman Catholic and a Church of England bishopric.

BALL'ATER, Aberdeenshire village on the Dee, a favourite summer resort; stands 668 ft. above sea-level.

BALLOONS. See AVIATION.

BALM OF GILEAD, a resin yielded by a variety of the balsam tree and much in demand in Egypt in the olden time for its aromatic and medicinal properties; produced in quantities in the mountainous region of Gilead, east of the river Jordan, in Palestine.

BALMAT, JACQUES, of Chamounix, a celebrated Alpine guide (1796-1834).

BALMAWHAPPLE, a prejudiced Scottish clergyman in Scott's "Waverley."

BALMOR'AL, a castle on the upper valley of the Dee, at the foot of Braemar, 524 m. from Aberdeen, 9 m. from Balmoral; the Highland residence of the Royal Family since 1846, when it was purchased by Queen Victoria.

BALMUNG, the sharp-cutting sword of Siegfried, in the Nibelungen legends, so sharp that a smith cut in two by it did not know he was so cut till he began to move, when he fell in pieces.

BALNAVES, HENRY, conditor of John Knox, in the Scottish Reformation, and a fellow-sufferer with him in imprisonment and exile; afterwards contributed towards formulating the creed of the Scottish Church; born at Kirkcaldy, and educated in Germany; d. 1579.

BALTHA'ZAR, one of the three Magi who journeyed to Bethlehem to see the infant Jesus, the other two being Melchior and Gaspar; all three are figured in Cologne Cathedral.

BALTIC PROVINCES, Russian provinces bordering on the Baltic.

BALTIC SEA, an inland sea in the N. of Europe,

900 m. long and from 100 to 200 m. broad, about the size of England and Wales; comparatively shallow; has no tides; waters fresher than those of the ocean, owing to the number of rivers that flow into it and the slight evaporation that goes on at the latitude; the navigation of it is practically closed from the middle of December to April, owing to the inlets being blocked with ice.

BALTIMORE, the metropolis of Maryland, on an arm of Chesapeake Bay, 250 m. from the Atlantic. It is picturesquely situated; not quite so regular in design as most American cities, but noted for its fine architecture and its public monuments. It is the seat of the Johns Hopkins University. The industries are varied and extensive, including textiles, flour, tobacco, iron, and steel. The staple trade is in bread-stuffs; principal exports, grain, flour, and tobacco.

BALUCHISTAN. See BELUCHISTAN.

BALUË, CARDINAL, minister of Louis XI.; imprisoned by Louis in an iron cage for eleven years for having conspired with Charles the Rash (1421-1491).

BALZAC, HONORE DE, native of Tours, in France; a brilliant as well as prolific novel-writer; his productions remarkable for their sense of reality; they show power of observation, warmth, and fertility of imagination, and subtle and profound delineation of human passion, his dexterity in producing them being to make them form part of one great work, the "Comédie Humaine," the whole being a minute dissection of the different classes of society; is regarded as the father of realistic fiction (1799-1850).

BALZAC, JEAN LOUIS GUEZ DE, born at Angoulême, a French littérateur and gentleman of rank, who devoted his life to the refinement of the French language, and contributed by his "Letters" to the classic form it assumed under Louis XIV.; "he deliberately wrote," says Prof. Saintsbury, "for the sake of writing, and not because he had anything particular to say," but in this way did much to improve the language (1694-1854).

BAMANGWATO, a native people, belonging to the Bantu stock, their country lying in the Bechuanaland Protectorate.

BAMBARA, a Soudan state on the banks of the Upper Niger, opened up to trade, the soil fertile; yields grain, dates, cotton, and palm-oil, the natives are negroes of the Mohammedan faith, and are good husbandmen and workers in metal.

BAMBERG, a manufacturing town in Upper Franconia, Bavaria; once the centre of an independent bishopric; with a cathedral, a magnificent edifice, containing the tomb of its founder, the Emperor Henry II.

BAMBINO, a figure of the infant Christ wrapped in swaddling bands, the infant in pictures being surrounded by a halo and angels.

BAMBOUE, a fertile but unhealthy West African negro territory, with natural wealth and deposits of gold. W. of Bambarra.

BAMIAN, a high-lying valley in Afghanistan, 8500 ft. above sea-level; out of the rocks on its N. side, full of caves, are hewn huge figures of Buddha, one of them 173 ft. high, all of ancient date.

BANBURY, a market-town in Oxfordshire, celebrated for its cross and its cakes.

BANCA, an island in the Eastern Archipelago, belonging to the Dutch, with an unhealthy climate; rich in tin, worked by Chinese.

BANCROFT, GEORGE, an American statesman, diplomatist, and historian, born in Massachusetts, his chief work "The History of the United States," issued finally in six vols. (1800-1801).

BANCROFT, RICHARD, archbishop of Canterbury, a zealous Churchman and an enemy of the Puritans; represented the Church at the Hampton Court Conference, and was chief overseer of the Authorized Version of the Bible (1554-1610).

BANCROFT, SIR SQUIRE, English actor, born in London, made his first appearance in Birmingham in 1861; married Miss Wilton, an actress; opened with her the Haymarket Theatre in 1880; retired in 1885 (1841-1926).

BAND OF HOPE, THE, a society for promoting temperance principles among the young, founded in 1855.

BANDA ISLES, a group of the Moluccas, some twelve in number, belonging to Holland; yield nutmegs and mace; are subject to earthquakes.

BANDELLO, MATTEO, an Italian Dominican monk, a writer of tales, some of which furnished themes and incidents for Shakespeare, Massinger, and other dramatists of their time (1480-1562).

BANDIE'RA, ATTILIO and EMILIO, brothers, born in Venice; martyrs, in 1844, to the cause of Italian independence.

BANDINELLI, a Florentine sculptor, tried hard to rival Michael Angelo and Cellini; his work "Hercules and Cacus" is the most ambitious of his productions; did a "Descent from the Cross" in bas-relief, in Milan Cathedral (1487-1559).

BANDY, the game of ice hockey, popular in the northern parts of the U.S.A.; known also as "shinty."

BANFF, (1) county town of Banffshire, on the Moray Firth, at the mouth of the Deveron; the county itself stretches level along the coast, though mountainous on the S. and S.E.; fishing and agriculture the great industries; (2) a township in Alberta, Canada, tourist resort with hot sulphur springs.

BANGA, the Hindu name for the Delta of the Ganges. BANGALORE, the largest town in Mysore, and the capital; stands high; is manufacturing and trading.

BANGHIS, a low-caste people in the Ganges valley.

BANGKOK, the capital of Siam, on the Menam; a very striking city; styled, from the canals which intersect it, the "Venice of the East"; 20 m. from the sea, the centre of the foreign trade, carried on by Europeans and Chinese; includes the royal palace standing on an island, in the courtyard of which several white elephants are kept.

BANGOR, an episcopal city in Carnarvon, N. Wales, with large slate quarries, a place of summer resort, from the beauty of its surroundings.

BANGORIAN CONTROVERSY, a controversy in the Church of England provoked by a sermon which Hoadley, bishop of Bangor, preached before George I. in 1717, and which offended the sticklers for ecclesiastical authority.

BANGWEO LO, a lake in Equatorial Africa, discovered by Livingston, and on the shore of which he died; 150 m. long, and half as wide; 3690 ft. above sea-level.

BANIAN DAYS, days when no meat was served out to ships' crews in the Navy, probably an allusion to the Banians, Hindu ascetics.

BANIM, JOHN, Irish author, a native of Kilkenny, novelist of Irish peasant life on its dark side, who, along with his brother Michael, wrote 24 vols. of Irish stories, &c.; his health giving way, he fell into poverty, but was rescued by a public subscription and a pension; Michael survived him 32 years (1798-1842).

BANJARL, a non-Aryan race in Central India, the carriers and caravan-conductors of the region.

BANK HOLIDAYS, established in 1871 through the efforts of Sir John Lubbock (Lord Avebury), fall in England on Easter Monday, Whit Monday, the first Monday in August and December 26.

BANK OF ENGLAND, THE, Britain's national bank, founded by W. Paterson and M. Godfrey and incorporated in 1694. In 1797 it suspended payment, but resumed in 1819. It is the only bank in England allowed to issue monetary notes, and these have to be cashed into gold on demand. A new and larger building than the old one in Threadneedle Street was begun in 1924.

BANK RATE, the rate at which the Governors of the Bank of England are prepared to lend money. Fixed at their meeting every Thursday, it affects the price of money throughout the London market.

BANKS, SIR JOSEPH, a zealous naturalist, particularly in botany; a collector, in lands far and wide, of specimens in natural history; accompanied Captain Cook in his voyage round the world, and was one of the founders of Botany Bay settlement; left his collection and a valuable library and herbarium to the British Museum; president of the Royal Society for 41 years (1744-1820).

BANKS, THOMAS, an eminent English sculptor, born at Lambeth; first appreciated by the Empress Catharine of Russia; his finest works, "Psyche" and "Achilles Enraged," now in the entrance-hall of Burlington House; he excelled in imaginative art (1735-1805).

BANNATYNE CLUB, a club founded by Sir Walter Scott to print rare works of Scottish interest, whether in history, poetry, or general literature, of which it printed 116, all deemed of value; dissolved in 1861. It was named after George Bannatyne, who collected most of Scotland's ancient poetry.

BAN NOCKBURN, a manufacturing village 3 m. SE. of Stirling, the scene of the victory, on June 24, 1814, of Robert the Bruce over Edward II., which reasserted and secured Scottish independence; it manufactures carpets and tartans.

BANNS OF MARRIAGE, the practice of reading out in churches on three successive Sundays the names of those who intend to marry, in order that objections can be made. The custom dates back to 1200.

BANNU, a district in the Punjab prominent during the Indian Mutiny as the headquarters of John Nicholson (q.v.).

BAN'SHEE, among the Irish, and in some parts of the Highlands and Brittany, a female fairy, believed to be attached to a family, who gave warnings by wailings of an approaching death in it, and kept guard over it.

BANTAM, a chief town in Java, abandoned as unhealthy by the Dutch; whence the Bantam fowl is thought to have come.

BANTING SYSTEM, a dietary for keeping down fat, recommended by a Mr. Banting, a London tradesman, in a "Letter on Corpulence" in 1863; he advocated lean meat, and the avoidance of sugar and starchy foods.

BANTRY BAY, a deep inlet on the SW. coast of Ireland; a place of shelter for ships; the scene of a naval fight between the French and British, in the French favour, on May 1, 1690.

BANTU, the name of most of the races, with their languages, that occupy Africa from 6° N. lat. to 20° S.; are negroid rather than negro, being in several respects superior, the name, however, suggests rather a linguistic than an ethnological distinction, the language differing radically from all other known forms of speech; the inflection, for one thing, chiefly initial, not final.

BANVILLE, THEODORE DE, a French poet, born at Moulins; well characterised as "Roi des Jokes," for with him form was everything, and the matter comparatively insignificant, though there are touches here and there of both fine feeling and sharp wit; was the author of the play "Gringoire," produced in London by Sir H. Beerbohm Tree under the title of "The Ballad-monger" (1823-1891).

BANYAN, the Indian fig; a tree whose branches, bending to the ground, take root and form new stocks, till they cover a large area and become a forest.

BA'OBAB, a large African tropical tree, remarkable for the girth of its trunk, the thickness of its branches, and their expansion; its leaves and seeds are used in medicine.

BAPAUME, a village in the department of the Somme, France, captured by British troops in March, 1917.

BAPHOMET, a mysterious two-headed image, presumed to represent Mohammed, which the Templars were accused of worshipping, but which they may rather be surmised to have invoked to curse them if they failed in their vow.

BAPTISM, the Christian rite of initiation into the membership of the Church, identified by St. Paul (Rom. vi. 4) with that No to the world which accompanies Yea to God, but a misunderstanding of the nature of which has led to endless diversity, debate, and alienation all over the Churches of Christendom.

BAPTISMAL REGENERATION, the High Church doctrine that the power of spiritual life, forfeited by the Fall, is bestowed on the soul in the sacrament of baptism duly administered.

BAPTISTERY, a circular building, originally detached from a church, in which the rite of baptism is administered; the most remarkable, that of Pisa.

BAPTISTS, a denomination of Christians, who insist that the rite of initiation is duly administered only by immersion, and to those who are of age to make an intelligent profession of faith they are a numerous body, particularly in America, and more so in England than in Scotland, and have included in their membership a number of eminent men.

BAR, in Jewish names signifies "son of," as Bar-Jesus, Bartholomew.

BARAGUAY D'HILLIERS, ACHILLE, a French marshal who fought under Napoleon at Quatre-Bras; distinguished himself under Louis Philippe in Algeria, as well as under Louis Napoleon; predated at the trial of Marshal Bazaine (1795-1878).

BARATARIA, the imaginary island in Cervantes' "Don Quixote," of which Sancho Panza was formally installed governor, and where in most comical situations he learned how imaginary is the authority of a king, how, instead of governing his subjects, his subjects govern him.

BARBACAN, or BARBICAN, a fortification to a castle outside the walls, generally at the end of the drawbridge in front of the gate.

BARBA DOES, one of the Windward Islands, rather larger than the Isle of Wight; almost encircled by coral reefs; is the most densely peopled of the group; subject to hurricanes; healthy and well cultivated; it yields sugar, arrowroot, ginger, and aloes.

BARBARA, ST., a Christian martyr of the 3rd century; beheaded by her own father, a fanatical heathen, who was immediately after the act struck dead by lightning; who is the patron saint of those who might otherwise die impudent, of artillerymen, and of the city of Mantua; her attributes are a tower, a sword, and a crown. Festival, Dec. 4.

BARBARIANS, originally those who could not speak Greek, and ultimately synonymous with the uncivilised and people without culture, particularly literary.

BARBAROSSA, the surname of Frederick I., emperor of Germany, of whom there is this tradition, that "he is not yet dead; but only sleeping, till the bad world reach its worst, when he will reappear. He sits within a cavern near Salzburg, at a marble table, leaning on his elbow and winking, only half-asleep, as a peasant once tumbling into the lake saw him, with his beard grown through the table and streaming out on the floor" (1152-1180).

BARBAROSSA (i.e. Red-beard), HORUK, a native of Mitylene, turned corsair; became sovereign of Algiers by the murder of Selim the emir, who had adopted him as an ally against Spain; was defeated twice by the Spanish general Gomara and slain (1473-1518).

BARBAROSSA, KHAIR-ED-DIN, brother and successor of the preceding, became victory of the Porte, made admiral under the sultan, opposed Andrea Doria, ravaged the coast of Italy, and joined the French against Spain; died at Constantinople in 1547.

BARBAROUX, CHARLES, advocate, born at Marseilles, of which he became town-clerk; came to Paris "a young Spartan" and became chief of the Girondins in the French Revolution; represented Marseilles in the Constituent Assembly and the Convention; joined the Islands; sent "fire-eyed" messages to Marseilles for six hundred men "who knew how to die"; held out against Marat and Robespierre; declared an enemy of the people, had to flee; was captured and guillotined (1767-1794).

BARBARY APE, a tallish macaque monkey of gregarious habits, native of the mountainous parts of Barbary, there is a colony of them on the Rock of Gibraltar, the only one in Europe.

BARBARY STATES, the four states of Morocco, Algeria, Tunis, and Tripoli, so called from the Berbers who inhabit the region.

BARBAZAN, a French general under Charles VI. and VII. who deservedly earned for himself the name of the Irreproachable Knight; d. 1432.

BARBECUE, a feast in the open air on a large scale, at which the animals are roasted and dressed whole, formerly common in the SW. States of N. America.

BARBERINI, an illustrious and influential Florentine family, several of the members of which were cardinals, one being made pope in 1623 under the name Urban VIII.

BARBERTON, a mining town and important centre in the Transvaal, 180 m. E. of Pretoria.

BARBIER, ED., juriscout of the French parliament, born in Paris; author of a journal, historical and anecdotal, of the time of Louis XV. (1689-1771).

BARBIZON, a village in Seine-et-Marne, France, which has given its name to a school, or group, of artists among whom have been Millet, Corot, Diaz, and Daubigny, their note being sincerity and realism in painting.

BARBOUR, JOHN, a Scottish poet and chronicler, archdeacon of Aberdeen, a man of learning and sagacity; his only extant work a poem entitled "The Bruce," being a long history in rhyme of the life and achievements of Robert the Bruce, a work consisting of 13,000 octosyllabic lines, and possessing both historical and literary merit; "represents," says Stanford Brodie, "the whole of the eager struggle for Scottish freedom against the English, which closed at Bannockburn, and the national spirit in its full grown into life" (l.c. 1316-1395).

BARBUSSE, HENRI, French novelist. Practically unknown before the Great War, he produced in 1916 "Le Feu," one of the greatest indictments of war ever penned, ranking with Remarque's "All Quiet on the Western Front."

BARCA, an Italian province in the N. of Africa, between Tripoli and Egypt; produces maize, figs, dates, and olives.

BARCA, name of a Carthaginian family to which Hamilcar, Hasdrubal, and Hannibal belonged, and determinedly opposed to the ascendancy of Rome, hence known as the Barcine faction.

BARCELONA, the largest town in Spain next to Madrid, on the Mediterranean, and its chief port, with a naval arsenal, also its largest manufacturing town, called the "Spanish Manchester," the staple manufacture being cotton; is the seat of a bishopric and a university; has numerous churches, convents, and theatres.

BARCLAY, ALEX., a poet and prose-writer, of Scottish birth; bred a monk in England, where he ceased to be on the dissolution of the monasteries; wrote "The Ship of Fools," partly a translation and partly an imitation of the German "Narrenschiff" of Brundt (1475-1492).

BARCLAY, JOHN, born in France, educated by the Jesuits, a staunch Catholic; wrote the "Argenis," a Latin romance, much thought of by Cowper, translated more than once into English (1582-1621).

BARCLAY, JOHN, leader of the Scottish sect of the Bereans, whose name was taken from the Berea whither the apostle Paul went from Thessalonica (1734-1798).

BARCLAY, ROBERT, the celebrated apologist of Quakerism, born in Morayshire; tempted hard to become a Catholic; joined the Society of Friends, as his father had done before him; his greatest work, written in Latin as well as in English, and dedicated to Charles II., "An Apology for the True Christian Divinity, as the same is held forth and preached by the People called in scorn Quakers," a great work, the leading thesis of which is that Divine Truth is not matter of reasoning, but intuition and patent to the understanding of every truth-loving soul (1645-1690).

BARCLAY DE TOLLY, a Russian general and field-marshal, of Scottish descent, and of the same family as Robert Barclay the Quaker; distinguished in successive Russian wars; his promotion rapid, in spite of his unpopularity as German born; on Napoleon's invasion of Russia his tactics were to retreat till forced to fight at Smolensk; he was defeated, and superseded in command by Kutusow; on the latter's death was made commander-in-chief; commanded the Russians at Dresden and Leipzig, and led them into France in 1815; he was afterwards Minister of War at St. Petersburg, and elevated to the rank of prince (1761-1818).

BARD OF AVON, Shakespeare; of Avonshire, Burns; of Hope, Campbell; of Imagination, Akenside; of Memory, Rogers; of Olney, Cowper; of Rydal Mount, Wordsworth; of Twickenham, Pope.

BARDELL, MRS., a widow in the "Pickwick Papers," who sues Pickwick for breach of promise.

BARDOLPH, a drunken, swaggering, worthless follower of Falstaff in Shakespeare's "Henry IV." "Merry Wives of Windsor," and "Henry V."

BARDON HILL, a hill in Leicestershire, from which one can see right across England.

BARDSEY, a small island off the coast of Carnarvon, Wales, the legendary last home of the old Welsh bards; has a lighthouse and is remarkable for its distinctive bird life.

BAR-DURANI, the collective name of a number of Afghan tribes between the Hindu-Kush and the Soliman Mountains.

BARBONE'S PARLIAMENT, Cromwell's Little Parliament, met July 4, 1653; derisively called Barbone's Parliament, from one Fraise-God Barbone, a leading member of it.

BARÈGES, a village on the Hautes-Pyrénées, at 4000 ft. above the sea-level, resorted to for its mineral waters.

BARRELY, a city in NW. India, the chief town in Rohilkhand, 153 m. E. of Delhi, notable as the scene of an outbreak in the Indian Mutiny.

BARNTZ, WILLEM, an Arctic explorer, born in Friesland; discovered Spitzbergen, and doubled the NE. extremity of Nova Zembla, in 1597, and died the same year; gave his name to Barantz Island and Barantz Sea, in the Arctic.

BARÈRE, French revolutionary, a member of the States-General, the National Assembly of France, and the Convention; voted in the Convention for the execution of the king, uttering the oft-quoted words, "The tree of Liberty thrives only when watered by the blood of tyrants"; escaped the fate of his associates, became a spy under Napoleon; was called by Burke, from his flowery oratory, the Anacron of the Guillotine, and by Mercier, "the greatest liar in France"; died in beggary (1755-1841).

BARETTI, GIUSEPPE, an Italian lexicographer, born in Turin; taught Italian in London, was patronised by Johnson, and became secretary of the Royal Academy (1719-1780).

BARFLEUR, a seaport 15 m. E. of Cherbourg, where in May, 1692, the battle began which ended in the naval victory of La Hogue.

BARFRÜSH, a town S. of the Caspian, famous for its bazaar.

BAR GUEST, a goblin long an object of terror in the N. of England, frequently assuming the form of a dog.

BARHAM, RICHARD HARRIS, his literary name Thomas Ingoldsby, born at Canterbury, minor canon of St. Paul's; friend of Sydney Smith; author of "Ingoldsby Legends," published originally as a series of papers in Bentley's Miscellany (1788-1845).

BARING, SIR FRANCIS, founder of the great banking firm of Baring Brothers & Co., amassed property, value of it said to have been nearly seven millions (1740-1810).

BARING, MAURICE, British author. A son of Lord Revelstoke, he entered the diplomatic service, acted as war correspondent in the Russo-Japanese war, and served in the Air Force in the Great War. His writings include poems, essays, books of travel, novels, and plays (1874-).

BARING-GOULD, SABINE, rector of Lew-Trenchard, Devonshire; the author of "Onward, Christian Soldiers"; celebrated in various departments of literature, history, theology, and romance, especially the latter; a voluminous writer on all manner of subjects, and a man of wide reading (1834-1924).

BARIUM, a metallic element, resembling calcium in its chemical properties, first obtained by Davy in 1808. It is present in the minerals heavy spar and witherite.

BARKER, SIR HERBERT, surgeon, who attained extraordinary skill in bone-setting. His methods were not always approved by the medical profession, in which for years he had no status. He was knighted in 1922 (1860-).

BARKING, a market-town in Essex, 7 m. NE. of London, with the remains of an ancient Benedictine convent.

BARKLA, CHARLES GLOVER, physicist, professor at King's College, London, and since 1913 at Edinburgh. He was awarded a Nobel Prize in 1917 for work in connection with X-rays (1877-).

BARLAAM AND JOSAPHAT, a medieval legend, being a Christianised version of an earlier legend relating to Buddha, in which Josaphat, a prince like Buddha, is converted by Barlaam to a like ascetic life.

BARLEYCORN, JOHN, the exhilarating spirit distilled from barley personified.

BARLOW, JANE, authoress of several novels dealing with Irish peasant life; born at Clontarf, co. Dublin (1860-1917).

BARLOW, JOEL, an American poet and diplomatist; for his Republican zeal was in 1792 accorded the rights of citizenship in France; wrote a poem "The Vision of Columbus" (1755-1812).

BARLOWE, a French watchmaker, inventor of the repeating watch; d. 1690.

BARNACLE FEAST, an imaginary feast, so called from a story in the "Arabian Nights" of a hungry beggar invited by a Barnacle prince to a banquet, which proved a long succession of merely empty dishes, and which he enjoyed with such seeming gusto and such good-humour as to earn for himself a sumptuous real one.

BARNEDES, a Persian family of the 8th century, celebrated for their magnificence, which in the end met with the cruellest fate. Yâhya, one of them, eminent for ability and virtue, was chosen by the world-famous Haroun-al-Raschid on his accession to the caliphate to be his vizier; his four sons rose along with him to such influence in the government, as to excite the jealousy of the caliph, whereupon the latter had the whole family invited to a banquet, and every man, woman, and child of them massacred at midnight in cold blood. The caliph, it is related, never forgave himself for this cruelty, and was visited with a gnawing remorse to the end of his days; his crime had fatal issues to his kingdom as well as to himself.

BAR MEN, a long town, consisting of a series of hamlets, 6 m. in extent, in Rhénish Prussia; the population consists chiefly of Protestants; staple industry, the manufacture of ribbons.

BARNABAS, ST., a member of the first Christian brotherhood, a companion of St. Paul's, and characterized in the Acts as "a good man"; stoned to death at Cyprus, where he was born; an epistle extant bears his name, but is not believed to be his work; the Epistle to the Hebrews has by some been ascribed to him; he is usually represented in art as a venerable man of majestic mien, with the Gospel of St. Matthew in his hand. Festival, June 11.

BARNABITES, a proselytising order of monks founded at Milan, where Barnabas was reported to have been bishop, in 1530; bound, as the rest are, by the three monastic vows, and by a vow in addition, not to sue for preferment in the Church.

BARNABY RUDGE, the chief character in Dickens' novel of the name, published in 1841.

BARNARD, FREDERICK, artist; illustrator of the "Household Edition" of Dickens' works; contributor to many humorous periodicals (1846-1890).

BARNARD, LADY ANNE, daughter of Lindsay, the 5th Earl of Balcarres, born in Fife; authoress of "Auld Robin Gray," named after a Balcarres herd; lived several years in the Cape, where her husband held an appointment, and, after his death, in London (1750-1825).

BARNARD CASTLE, an old town W. of Darlington, in Durham; birthplace of John Balliol, and the scene of Scott's "Rokeby."

BAR NARDINE, a reckless character in "Measure for Measure."

BARNARDO, DR. THOMAS JOHN, founder of the home for waifs named after him; devoted his life to the care of destitute children (1845-1905).

BARNAVE, JOSEPH MARIE, French lawyer, born at Grenoble; president of the French Constitutional Assembly in 1790; one of the trio in the Assembly of whom it was said, "Whatever those three have on hand, Dupont thinks it, Barnave speaks it, Lameth does it"; a defender of the monarchy from the day he gained the favour of the queen by his gallant conduct to her on her way back to Paris from her flight with the king to Varennes; convicted by documentary evidence of conspiring with the court against the nation; was guillotined (1791-1793).

BARN-BURNERS, name formerly given (about 1844) to an extreme radical party in the United States, as imitating the Dutchman who, to get rid of the rats, burned his barn.

BARNBY, SIR JOSEPH, composer, wrote many popular hymn tunes, part songs, and the oratorio "Rebekah"; conducted Albert Hall Royal Choral Society from 1871 to 1896; principal of Guildhall School of Music (1838-1896).

BARNES, RT. HON. GEORGE NICOLL, British politician. For ten years secretary of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers, he became Labour representative in the War Cabinet in 1916, acting as Minister of Pensions, and in 1919 as Minister without portfolio. He retired in 1920 (1856-).

BARNES, RT. REV. ERNEST WILLIAM, British scholar and divine, educated at Birmingham and Cambridge, where he was a Wrangler, he became Master of the Temple in 1915, Canon of Westminster in 1918, and Bishop of Birmingham in 1924. An F.R.S., he made a name as a modernist, holding that true religion is not inconsistent with the teaching of modern science (1874-).

BARNES, WILLIAM, a lyric poet, "the Dorsetshire Burns"; author of "Poems of Rural Life in Dorset," in three vols.; wrote on subjects of philological interest (1830-1886).

BARNET, a town in Hertfordshire, almost a suburb of London; a favourite resort of Londoners; has a large annual horse and cattle fair; scene of a battle in 1471, at which Warwick, the kingmaker, was slain.

BARNETT, JOHN, composer, born at Bedford; author of operas and a number of fugitive pieces (1802-1801).

BARNEVELDT, JOHANN VAN OLDEN, Grand Pensionary of Holland, of a distinguished family; studied law at the Hague, and practised as an advocate there; fought for the independence of his country against Spain, concluded a truce with Spain, in spite of the Stadtholder Maurice, whose ambition for supreme power he courageously opposed; being an Arminian, took sides against the Gomarist or Calvinist party, to which Maurice belonged; was arrested, tried, and condemned to death as a traitor and heretic, and died on the scaffold at 71 years of age, with sanction, too, of the Synod of Dort, in 1619.

BARNLEY, a manufacturing town in W. Yorkshire, 18 m. S. of Sheffield; produces textile fabrics, glass, and machinery.

BARNUM, PHINEAS TAYLOR, an American showman; began with the exhibition of George Washington's reputed nurse in 1834, picked up Tom Thumb in 1844; engaged Jenny Lind for 100 concerts in 1849, and realised a fortune, which he lost, started in 1871 with his huge travelling show, and realised another fortune, dying worth five million dollars (1810-1891).

BAROCCI, a celebrated Italian painter, imitator of the style of Caravaggio (1528-1612).

BARODA, a native state of Gujerat, in the prov. of Bombay, with a capital of the same name, the ruling chief being called the Gaekwar; the third city in the presidency, with Hindu temples and a considerable trade.

BAROMETER, an instrument for measuring the pressure of the air. It can be used for finding the height above sea-level by mountaineers and aviators; for small heights it falls at the rate of one inch for every 1000 ft. ascended. Normally air-pressure is sufficient to support 76 centimetres of mercury in the barometer tube.

BARON, BERNHARD, tobacco magnate and philanthropist. Starting life penniless in America, he emigrated to England at 16, made a fortune, which he largely devoted to hospitals, and died leaving £4,000,000 (1851-1929). His son, Sir Louis Baron, was created a baronet in 1930.

BARONIUS, CESAR, a great Catholic ecclesiastic, born near Naples, priest of the Congregation of the Oratory under its founder, and ultimately Superior, cardinal and librarian of the Vatican; his great work, "Annales Ecclesiastici," being a history of the first 12 centuries of the Church, written to prove that the Church of Rome was identical with the Church of the 1st century, a work of immense research that occupied him 30 years; failed of the popehood from the intrigues of the Spaniards, whose political schemes he had frustrated (1538-1607).

BARONS' WAR, a war in England of the barons against Henry III., headed by Simon de Montfort, which lasted from 1258 to 1265.

BAROQUE, ornamentation of a florid, bold, lavish character, reflecting the spirit of the counter-Reformation, much in vogue from the 16th to the 18th centuries in Central Europe.

BAROTSE LAND, otherwise known as North-Western Rhodesia, in the Upper Zambezi, Central Africa; natives of Hantu stock.

BARRA, a small island, one of the Hebrides, 5 m. SW of S. Uist, the inhabitants of which are engaged in fisheries.

BAR-RACKPUR, a town on the Hooghly, 15 m. above Calcutta, where the lieutenant-governor of Bengal has a residence; a health resort of the Europeans; was the scene of the outbreak of the Indian Mutiny, in Jan. 1857.

BARRACUDA, a tropical fish of large size and predatory habits, resembling the mullet.

BARRAS, PAUL FRANÇOIS, a member of the Jacobin Club, born in Provence; voted in the National Convention for the execution of the king; took part in the siege of Toulon; put an end to the career of Robespierre and the Reign of Terror; named general-in-chief to oppose the reactionaries; employed Bonaparte to command the artillery; was a member of the Directory till Bonaparte swept it away (1756-1826).

BAR-RATRY, the offence of inciting and stirring up riots and quarrels among the king's subjects. Also a fraud by a ship captain on the owners of a ship.

BARRE, ISAAC, soldier and statesman, born in Dublin, served under Wolfe in Canada, entered Parliament, supported Pitt, charged with authorship of "Junius' Letters" (1720-1802).

BARREL MIRABEAU, Viscount de Mirabeau, brother of the great tribune of the name, so called from his bulk and the liquor he held.

BARRIE, SIR JAMES MATTHEW, a writer with a rich vein of humour and pathos, born at Kilmuir ("Thrunis"), in Forfarshire, began his literary career as a contributor to journals; author of "Auld Licht Idylls," "A Window in Thrunis," "The Little Minister," "Margaret Ogilvy," &c. As a dramatist, is the author of "Peter Pan," "Quality Street," "The Admirable Crichton," &c.; created a baronet in 1913 (1860-1906).

BARRIER REEF, THE GREAT, a slightly interrupted succession of coral reefs off the coast of Queensland, of 1200 m. extent, and 100 m. wide at the S., and growing narrower as they go N.; are from 7 to 20 m. off the coast, and protect the intermediate channel from the storms of the Pacific.

BARRIÈRE, JEAN FRANÇOIS, French historian of the Revolution (1786-1866).

BARRIÈRE, PIERRE, would be assassin of Henry IV. of France; broken on the wheel in 1593.

BARRIERS, BATTLE OF THE, a battle fought within the walls of Paris in 1814 between Napoleon and the Allies, which ended in the capitulation of the city and the abdication of Napoleon.

BARRINGTON, JOHN SHUTE, 1st Viscount, gained the favour of the Nonconformists by his "Rights of Dissenters," and an Irish peerage from George I. for his "Dissuasive from Jacobitism" (1678-1734).

BARROS, JOÃO DE, a distinguished Portuguese historian; his great work, "Asia Portuguesa," relates, in a pure and simple style, the discoveries and conquests of the Portuguese in the Indies; he did not live to complete it (1493-1570).

BARROT, ODILON, famous as an advocate, born at Villefort; contributed to the Revolutions of both 1830 and 1848; accepted office under Louis Napoleon; retired after the coup d'état, to return to office in 1872 (1791-1873).

BARROW, a river in Ireland rising in the Slieve-bloom Mts.; falls into Waterford harbour, after a course of 114 m.

BARROW, SIR JOHN, secretary to the Admiralty for 40 years, distinguished also as a man of letters; wrote the Lives of Macartney, Anson, Howe, and Peter the Great; one of the founders of the Royal Geographical Society (1764-1848).

BARROW-IN-FURNESS, a town and seaport in N. Lancashire, of rapid growth, when the discovery of extensive deposits of iron in the neighbourhood led to the establishment of smelting works, large manufacture of steel, and a shipbuilding yard; the principal landowners in the district being the Dukes of Devonshire and Buccleuch.

BARRY, JAMES, painter, born in Cork; painted the "Death of General Wolfe"; became professor of Painting at the Royal Academy, but was deposed; died in poverty; his masterpiece is the "Victory at Olympia" (1741-1806).

BARRY, SIR CHARLES, architect, born at Westminster; architect of the Houses of Parliament at Westminster, besides other public buildings (1795-1860).

BARRY, SPENCER, Irish actor, who was the friend and, later, rival of David Garrick in London; most successful in emotional parts (1719-1777).

BARRY CORNWALL. See PROCTER.

BART, or BARTH, JEAN, a distinguished French seaman, born at Dunkirk, son of a fisherman, served under De Ruyter, entered the French service at 20, purchased a ship of two guns, was subsidised as a privateer, made numerous prizes; having had other ships placed under his command, was captured by the English, but escaped; defeated the Dutch admiral, De Vries, and captured his squadron laden with corn, for which he was ennobled by Louis XIV. (1650-1702).

BARTH, HEINRICH, a great African explorer, born at Hamburg; author of "Travels in the East and Discoveries in Central Africa," in five volumes (1821-1865).

BARTHELEMY, AUGUSTE MARSEILLE, a poet and politician, born at Marseille; author of "Nemesis," and the best French translation of the "Æneid," in verse; an enemy of the Bourbons, an ardent Imperialist, and warm supporter of Louis Napoleon (1798-1867).

BARTHELEMY, THE ABBÉ, JEAN JACQUES, a French historian and antiquary, born at Cassis, in Provence; educated by the Jesuits; had great skill in numismatics; wrote several archaeological works, in chief, "Voyage du Jeune Anacharsis en Grèce"; long treated as an authority in the history, manners, and customs of Greece (1716-1795).

BARTHELEMY SAINT-HILAIRE, JULES, a French baron and politician, born at Paris; an associate of Odilon Barrot in the Revolutions of 1830 and 1848, and subsequently a zealous supporter of M. Thiers; for a time professor of Greek and Roman Philosophy in the College of France; an Oriental as well as Greek scholar; translated the works of Aristotle, his greatest achievement, and the "Iliad" into verse, as well as wrote on the Vedas, Buddhism, and Mahomet (1803-1893).

BARTHEZ, PAUL JOSEPH, a celebrated physician, physiologist, and encyclopaedist, born at Montpellier, where he founded a medical school; suffered greatly during the Revolution; was much esteemed and honoured by Napoleon; is celebrated among physiologists as the advocate of what he called the Vital Principle as a physiological force in the functions of the human organism; his work "Nouveaux Elements de la Science de l'Homme" has been translated into all the languages of Europe (1734-1806).

BARTHOLDI, FREDÉRIC AUGUSTE, a French sculptor, born at Colmar; his principal works, "Lion de Belfort," and "Liberté éclairant le Monde," the largest bronze statue in the world, being 200 ft. high, presented by the French government to the U.S.A. to commemorate the centenary of the latter's independence, and erected at the entrance of New York harbour (1834-1904).

BARTHOLOMEW, ST., an apostle of Christ, and martyr; represented in art with a knife in one hand and his skin in the other; sometimes painted as being flayed alive, also as headless. Festival, Aug. 24.

BARTHOLOMEW FAIR, an annual market held at Smithfield, London, and instituted in 1133 by Henry I., to be kept on the saint's day; once the chief cloth fair in England, it was abolished in 1853, when it had ceased to be a market and became an occasion for mere dissipation and riot.

BARTHOLOMEW'S DAY, ST., Aug. 24, day in 1572 memorable for the wholesale massacre of the Protestants in France at the instance of Catharine de Medic, then regent of the kingdom for her son, Charles IX., an event, cruelly gloried in by the Pope and the Spanish Court, which kindled a fire in the nation that was not quenched, although it extinguished Protestantism proper in France, till Charles was coerced to grant liberty of conscience throughout the realm.

BARTHOLOMEW'S HOSPITAL, ST., a hospital in Smithfield, London, founded in 1123, by Rahere, head of an adjoining priory; has a medical school attached to it, with which the names of a number of eminent physicians are associated.

BARTIZAN, an overhanging wall-mounted turret projecting from the walls of ancient fortifications.

BARTLETT, JOHN H., an American ethnologist and philologist, born at Rhode Island, U.S.; author of "Dictionary of Americanisms," among other works particularly on ethnology (1805-1886).

BARTOLI, PIETRO, Italian engraver, engraved a great number of ancient works of art (1636-1700).

BARTOLINI, LORENZO, a Florentine sculptor, patronised by Napoleon; produced a great number of busts (1777-1850).

BARTOLOMEO, FRA., a celebrated Florentine painter of sacred subjects, born at Florence; an adherent of Savonarola, friend of Raphael; "St. Mark" and "St. Sebastian" are among his best productions (1469-1517).

BARTOLOZZI, FRANCESCO, an eminent engraver, born at Florence; wrought at his art both in England and in Portugal, where he died; his chief works, "Clytie," after Annibale Carnacci, the "Prometheus," after Michael Angelo, and "Virgin and Child," after Carlo Dolce; he was the grandfather of Madame Vestris (1728-1813).

BARTON, BERNARD, the "Quaker poet," born in London; a clerk nearly all his days in a bank; his poems, mostly on homely subjects, but instinct with poetic feeling and fancy, gained him the friendship of Southey and Charles Lamb, as well as more substantial patronage in the shape of a government pension (1784-1849).

BARTON, ELIZABETH, "the Maid of Kent," a poor country servant-girl, born in Kent, subject from nervous debility to trances, in which she gave utterances ascribed by Archbishop Warham to divine inspiration, till her communications were taken advantage of by despoiling people, and she was led by them to pronounce sentence against the divorced Catharine of Aragon, which involved her and her abettors in a charge of treason, for which they were all executed at Tyburn (1506-1534).

BARUCH, (1) the friend of the prophet Jeremiah, and his scribe, who was cast with him into prison, and accompanied him into Egypt; (2) a book in the Apocrypha, instinct with the spirit of Hebrew prophecy, ascribed to him; (3) also a book entitled the Apocalypse of Baruch, affecting to predict the fall of Jerusalem, but obviously written after the event.

BARYE, ANTOINE LOUIS, a French sculptor, distinguished for his groups of statues of wild animals (1795-1875).

BASATTI, a Venetian painter of the 15th and 16th centuries, a rival of Bellini; his best works, "Christ in the Garden" and the "Ceiling of St. Peter and St. Andrew."

BASALT, a common basic rock formed from the solidification of volcanic lava.

BASEBALL, America's national summer sport, bearing a resemblance to both rounders and cricket. Played at fast pace with nine players a side, it abounds in thrills, and is watched by large crowds. High fees are paid for players, of whom the most famous has been "Babe" Ruth.

BASEL, in the NW. of Switzerland, on the Rhine, just before it enters Germany; has a cathedral, university, library, and museum; was a centre of influence in Reformation times, and the home for several years of Erasmus; it is now a great money market, and has manufactures of silks and chemicals; the people are Protestant and German-speaking.

BASEL, COUNCIL OF, met in 1431, and laboured for 12 years to effect the reformation of the Church from within. It effected some compromise with the Hussites, but was hampered at every step by the opposition of Pope Eugenius IV. Asserting the authority of a general council over the pope himself, it cited him on two occasions to appear at its bar, on his refusal declared him contumacious, and ultimately endeavoured to suspend him. Failing to effect its purpose, owing to the secession of his supporters, it elected a rival pope, Felix V., who was, however, but scantily recognised. The Emperor Frederick III. supported Eugenius, and the council gradually melted away. At length, in 1449, the pope died, Felix resigned, and Nicholas V. was recognised by the whole Church. The decrees of the council were directed against the immorality of the clergy, the indecorousness of certain festivals, the papal prerogatives and exactions, and dealt with the election of popes and the procedure of the College of Cardinals. They were all confirmed by Nicholas V., but are not recognised by modern Roman canonists.

BASES, the name given to those chemical substances which react with an acid to give salt and water; the class includes the oxides and hydroxides of most of the metals, as well as some organic substances, e.g. the amines. Those bases which are soluble in water and turn red litmus blue are known as alkalis.

BASHAHR, a native hill state in the Punjab, traversed by the Sutlej; tributary to the British Government.

BA'SHAN, a fertile and pastoral district in NE. Palestine, of considerable extent, and at one time densely peopled; the men of it were remarkable for their stature.

BASHI-BAZOUKS', irregular, undisciplined troops in the pay of the Sultan; rendered themselves odious by their brutality in the Bulgarian atrocities of 1876, as well as, more or less, in the time of the Crimean war.

BASHKIRS, originally a Finnish nomad race of E. Russia, professing Mohammedanism; they number some 500,000.

BASIL, ST., THE GREAT, bishop of Caesarea, in Cappadocia, his birthplace; studied at Athens; had Julian the Apostate for a fellow-student; the lifelong friend of Gregory Nazianzen; founded a monastic body, whose rules are followed by different monastic communities; a conspicuous opponent of the Arian heresy, and defender of the Nicene Creed; tried in vain to unite the Churches of the East and West; is represented in Christian art in Greek pontificals, bearded, and with an enacelated appearance (326-380). There were several Basils of eminence in the history of the Church; Basil, bishop of Ancyra, who flourished in the 4th century; Basil, the mystic; and Basil, the friend of St. Ambrose.

BASIL I., the Macedonian, emperor of the East; though he had raised himself to the throne by a succession of crimes, governed wisely; supplied, with his son Leo, surname the Philosopher, a code of laws that were in force till the fall of the empire; fought successfully against the Saracens (867-886).

BASILICA, the code of laws, in 60 books, compiled by Basil I., and Leo, his son and successor, first published in 897, and named after the former.

BASILICA, a spacious hall, twice as long as broad, for public business and the administration of justice, originally open to the sky, but eventually covered in, and with the Judge's bench at the end opposite the entrance, in a circular apse added to it. They were first erected by the Romans, 180 B.C.; afterwards, on the adoption of Christianity, they were converted into churches, the altar being in the apse.

BASILICON DORON (i.e. Royal gift), a work written by James I. in 1599, before the union of the crowns, for the instruction of his son, Prince Henry, containing a defence of the royal prerogative.

BASILIDES, a Gnostic of Alexandria, flourished at the commencement of the 2nd century; appears to have taught the Oriental theory of emanations, to have construed the universe as made up of a series of worlds, some 365 it is alleged, each a degree lower than the preceding, till we come to our own world, the lowest and farthest off from the parent source of the series, of which the God of the Jews was the ruler; he regarded Jesus as having been sent into it direct from the parent source to redeem it from the materialism to which the God of the Jews, as Creator and Lord of the material universe, had subjected it; which teaching a sect called after his name accepted and propagated in both the East and the West for more than two centuries afterwards.

BASILISK, an animal fabled to have been hatched by a toad from the egg of an old cock, before whose breath every living thing withered and died, and the glance of whose eye no bewitched one to his ruin that the bravest could confront and overcome it only by looking at the reflection of it in a mirror, as Perseus (q.v.) was advised to do, when he cut off the head of the Medusa; seeing itself in a mirror, it burst. It is said, at the sight.

BASKERVILLE, JOHN, a printer and typesetter, originally a writing-master in Birmingham; native of Slon Hill, Worcestershire; produced editions of classical works prized for their pre-eminent beauty by connoisseurs in the art of the printer, and all the more for their rarity (1706-1775).

BASNAGE, JACQUES, a celebrated Protestant divine, born at Rouen; distinguished as a linguist and man of affairs; wrote a "History of the Reformed Churches" and on "Jewish Antiquities" (1653-1725).

BASOCHE. See BAZOCHE.

BASQUE PROVINCES, a fertile and mineral district in N. of Spain, embracing the three provinces of Biscaya, Guipuzcoa, and Alava, of which the chief towns are respectively Bilbao, St. Sebastian, and Vittoria, the natives differ considerably from the rest of the Spaniards in race, language and customs. See BASQUES.

BASQUE ROADS, an anchorage between the Isle of Oleron and the mainland; famous for a British naval victory gained in 1809 over a French fleet under Vice-Admiral Allemand.

BASQUES, a people of the Western Pyrenees, partly in France and partly in Spain; distinguished from their neighbours only by their speech, which is non-Argan; a superstitious people, conservative, irascible, ardent, proud, serious in their religious convictions, and pure in their moral conduct.

BASRA, or BASSORAH, a town at the mouth of the Euphrates and Tigris, used as a base by the British forces in Mesopotamia in the Great War.

BAS-RELIEF (i.e. low relief), a term applied to figures very slightly projected from the ground; a design originated by the Egyptians and copied in India, Greece and Rome.

BASS ROCK, a steep basaltic rock at the mouth of the Firth of Forth, 350 ft. high, tenanted by solar geese; once used as a prison, especially in Covenanting times.

BASS STRAIT, strait between Australia and Tasmania, about 150 m. broad, named after George Bass, explorer, who accompanied Matthew Flinders on his voyage to Australia (1798).

BASSANO, the lover of Fortia in the "Merchant of Venice."

BASSANO, a town in Italy, on the Brenta, 30 m. N.W. of Padua; printing the chief industry.

BASSANO, or JACOPO DA PONTE, an eminent Italian painter, chiefly of country scenes, though the "Nativity" at his native town, Bassano, shows his ability in the treatment of higher themes (1510-1592).

BASSES-PYRENEES, a department in the south-west of France which forms the boundary with Spain; among the mountain peaks passes to the number of over twenty lead from one country to the other, including the Pass of Roncaveaux (Roncavalles) associated with Roland the paladin.

BASSOMPIERRE, FRANÇOIS DE, a marshal of France, born in Lorraine; entered military life under Henry IV., was a gallant soldier, and one of the most brilliant wits of his time, took part in the siege of Rochelle; incurred the displeasure of Richelieu; was imprisoned by his order twelve years in the Bastille; wrote his Memoirs there; was liberated on the death of Richelieu (1579-1646).

BASTIA, a town in NE. Corsica, the most commercial in the island, and once the capital, was founded by the Genoese in 1383, and taken by the French in 1553; exports wine, oil, fruits, &c.

BASTIAT, FREDERIC, an eminent political economist, born at Bayonne; a disciple of Cobden; a great advocate of Free Trade; wrote on behalf of it and against Protection, "Sophismes Economiques"; a zealous anti-socialist (1801-1850).

BASTIDE, JULES, French Radical writer, born in Paris; took part in the Revolution of 1848, and later became Minister of Foreign Affairs (1800-1879).

BASTIEN-LEPAGE, JULES, an eminent French painter of pastoral scenes of the realistic school; also painted portraits of King Edward VII., when Prince of Wales, and Sarah Bernhardt (1848-1934).

BASTILLE (the the building), a State prison in Paris, built originally as a fortress of defence to the city, by order of Charles V., between 1369 and 1382, but used as a place of imprisonment from the first; a square structure, with towers and dungeons for the incarceration of the prisoners, the whole surrounded by a moat and accessible only by drawbridges; "tyranny's stronghold"; attacked by a mob on July 14, 1789, demolished, and the key of it sent to Washington; the taking of it was the first event in the Revolution. See Carlyle's "French Revolution" for the description of its fall.

BASUTOLAND, a fertile, healthy, grain-growing territory in S. Africa, SE. of the Orange Free State, under protection of the British crown, of the size of Belgium, yields great quantities of maize, the natives keep large herds of cattle.

BASUTOS, a S. African race of the same stock as the Kafirs, but superior to them in intelligence and industry; although under British protection they are ruled by their own chiefs and head men.

BATANGAS, a port in the island of Luzon, one of the Philippine Islands, which has a considerable trade.

BATAVIA, the capital of Java, on the N. coast, and of the Dutch possessions in the Eastern Archipelago; the emporium, with a large trade, of the Far East, with a very mixed population. Also the ancient name of Holland, insula Batavorum, it was called—that is, island of the Batavi, the name of the native tribes inhabiting it.

BATES, HARRY, famous sculptor, born at Stevenage; chief works, "Pandora" in the Tate Gallery, London, Queen Victoria statue at Dundee, and Lord Robert's statue at Calcutta (1850-1899).

BATES, HENRY WALTER, a naturalist and traveller, born at Leicester, friend of, and a fellow-labourer with, Alfred R. Wallace; author of "The Naturalist on the Amazons"; an advocate of the Darwinian theory, and author of contributions in defence of it (1825-1892).

BATES, THORPE, British actor-singer. After leaving the Royal Academy of Music he appeared on platforms throughout the country, turning in 1916 to the musical comedy stage (1883-).

BATH, the largest town in Somerset, on the Avon; a cathedral city; a place of fashionable resort from the time of the Romans, on account of its hot baths and mineral waters, of which there are six springs; it was from 1704 to 1750 the scene of Beau Nash's triumphs, has a number of educational and other institutions and a fine public park.

BATH, MAJOR, a gentleman in Fielding's "Amelia," who stoops from his dignity to the most menial duties when affection prompts him.

BATH, ORDER OF THE, an English order of knighthood, traceable to the reign of Henry IV., consisting of three classes: the first, Knights Grand Cross; the second, Knights Commanders, and the third, Companions, abbreviated respectively into G.C.B., K.C.B., and C.B.; initiation into the order originally preceded by immersion in a bath, whence the name, in token of the purity required of the members by the laws of chivalry. It was originally a military order, and it is only since 1847 that civil Knights, Knights Commanders, and Companions have been admitted. The first class, exclusive of royal personages and foreigners, is limited to 102 military and 28 civil; the second, to 102 military and 50 civil; and the third, to 525 military and 200 civil. The motto of the order is Trius junctus in uno (Three united in one), and the ribbon is crimson; Henry VII.'s chapel at Westminster is the chapel of the order, with the arms of the Knights on their stalls and their banners suspended over them.

BATHGATE, largest town in Linlithgowshire; a mining centre; the birthplace of Sir J. Simpson, the distinguished physician, who was among the first to advocate the use of anaesthetics.

BATHILDA, ST., queen of France, wife of Clovis II., who governed France during the minority of her sons, Clovis III., Childeric II., and Thierry; died 680, in the monastery of Chelles.

BATH ORI, ELIZABETH, a Polish princess, a woman of infamous memory, caused some 650 young girls to be put to death, in order, by bathing in their blood, to renew her beauty; immersed in a fortress for life on the discovery of the crime, while her accomplices were burnt alive; d. 1614.

BATHSHEBA, a woman of great beauty, wife of Uriah the Hittite (2 Sam.), who afterwards became wife of David and the mother of Solomon.

BATHURST, the capital of British Gambia, at the mouth of the river Gambia, in Western Africa; inhabited chiefly by negroes; exports palm-oil, ivory and gold dust.

BATHURST, the principal town on the western slopes of New South Wales, second to Sydney, with gold mines in the neighbourhood, and in a fertile wheat-growing district.

BATHURST, a district in Ontario, on the Ottawa, a thriving place and an agricultural centre.

BATHYSTUS (i.e. living matter in the deep), substance of a slimy nature found at great sea depth, over-hastily presumed by Huxley to be organic, proved by recent investigation to be inorganic and of no avail to the evolutionist.

BATLEY, a manufacturing town in the W. Riding of Yorkshire, 8 m. SW. of Leeds; a centre of the textile trade.

BATN-EL-HAJAR, a stony tract in the Nubian Desert, near the third cataract of the Nile.

BATON-ROUGE, a city on the E. bank of the Mississippi, 130 m. above New Orleans, and capital of the state of Louisiana; originally a French settlement.

BATON-SINISTER, a bend-sinister like a marshal's baton, an indication of illegitimacy.

BATOUM, a town in Transcaucasia, on the E. of the Black Sea; a place of some antiquity; ceded by Turkey to Russia, and now a free port; has an excellent harbour, and is the terminus of the railway from Baku and Tiflis.

BATRACHOMYOMACHIA, a mock-heroic poem, "The Battle of the Frogs and Mice," falsely ascribed to Homer, more probably written by Pigras of Caria.

BATTAS, a Malay race, native to Sumatra, now much reduced in numbers and driven into the interior, where they still remain independent of Dutch rule.

BATTERSEA, a suburb of London, on the Surrey side of the Thames, opposite Chelsea, and connected with it by three bridges; with a park 185 acres in extent.

BATTERY, a chemical generator of electricity consisting of two metallic plates immersed in certain solutions. The chemical action taking place inside the cell causes a current to flow if the two plates are connected by a wire. The simplest battery consists of two plates, one copper, one zinc, dipping into dilute sulphuric acid; such a cell ceases to act after a time owing to bubbles of hydrogen collecting on the plate, and the batteries in general use contain some substance which will remove the hydrogen as it is formed, e.g. nitric acid or potassium bichromate. Dry-cell batteries in general use contain a paste of sal-ammoniac and manganese dioxide.

BATTHYÁNYI, COUNT LOUIS, a Hungarian patriot, who fought hard to see his country reinstated in its ancient administrative independence, but failed in his efforts; was arrested by the Austrians, tried for high treason by court-martial, and sentenced to be shot, to the horror, at the time, of the civilised world (1809-1849).

BATTLE, a market-town in Sussex, near Hastings, so called from the battle of Senlac, in which William the Conqueror defeated Harold in 1066. It is famous for its abbey, which is now a girls' school.

BATTLE OF THE SPURS, (1) an engagement at Courtrai in 1302 where the burghers of the town beat the knighthood of France, and the spurs of 4000 knights were collected after the battle; (2) an engagement at Guinegate, 1513, in which Henry VIII. made the French forces take to their spurs.

BATTUE, method of killing game after crowding them by cries and beating them towards the sportsmen.

BAUDELAIRE, CHARLES, French poet of the romantic school, born in Paris; distinguished among his contemporaries for his originality and his influence on others of his class; was a charming writer of prose as well as verse, as his "Petits Poèmes" in prose bear witness (1821-1867).

BAUDRICOURT, a French courtier whom Joan of Arc pressed to conduct her into the presence of Charles VII.

BAUDRY, PAUL, French painter, decorated the four of the Grand Opéra in Paris; is best known for his "Triumph of a Vestal Virgin" and the "Assassination of Marat" (1828-1880).

BAUER, BRUNO, a daring Biblical critic, and violent polemic on political as well as theological subjects; born at Saxe-Altenburg; regarded the Christian religion as overlaid and obscured by accretions foreign to it; denied the historical truth of the Gospels, and, like a true disciple of Hegel, ascribed the troubles of the 19th century to the overmastering influence of the "Enlightenment" or the "Aufklärung" that characterised the 18th (1800-1882).

BAUMGARTEN, ALEXANDER GOTTLIEB, professor of Philosophy at Frankfurt-on-the-Oder; disciple of Wolff; born at Berlin; the founder of Aesthetics as a department of philosophy, and inventor of the name (1714-1762).

BAUR, FERDINAND CHRISTIAN, head of the Tübingen school of rationalist divines, born near Stuttgart; distinguished by his scholarship and his labours in Biblical criticism and dogmatic theology; his dogmatic treatises were on the Christian Gospels, the Atonement, the Trinity, and the Incarnation, while his Biblical were on certain epistles of Paul and the canonical Gospels, which he regarded as the product of the 2nd century; regarded Christianity of the Church as Judaic in its origin, and Paul as distinctively the first apostle of pure Christianity (1792-1860).

BAUTZEN, a town of Saxony, an old town on the Sire, where Napoleon defeated the Prussians and Russians in 1813; manufactures cotton, linen, wool, tobacco and paper.

BAUXITE, a hydrated oxide of aluminium occurring as a mineral in most parts of the world and used in the manufacture of aluminium, alum and cement.

BAVARIA, next to Prussia the largest of the German States, about the size of Scotland, is separated by mountain ranges from Czechoslovakia on the E. and the Tyrol on the S.; Wurtemberg lies on the W., Prussia, Meiningen, and Saxony on the N. The country is a tableland crossed by mountains and lies chiefly on the basin of the Danube. It is a busy agricultural state, half the soil is tilled; the other half is uncultivated, planted with vineyards and forests. Salt, coal, and iron are widely distributed and wrought. The chief manufactures are beer, coarse linen, and woollen fabrics. There are universities at Munich, Würzburg, and Erlangen. Munich, on the Isar, is the capital. Nuremberg, where watches were invented, and Augsburg, a banking centre, the other chief towns. Formerly a dukedom, the palatinate, on the banks of the Rhine, was added to it in 1216. Napoleon I. raised the duke to the title of king in 1805. Bavaria fought on the side of Austria in 1806, but joined Prussia in 1870-1871. It is now a republic.

BAVIE'CA, the famous steed of the Cid, held sacred after the hero's death, and buried at Valencia.

BAVOU, ST., a soldier monk, the patron saint of Ghent.

BAKTER, RICHARD, an eminent Nonconformist divine, native of Shropshire, at first a conformist, and parish minister of Kidderminster for 19 years; sympathised with the Puritans, yet stopped short of going the full length with them; acted as chaplain to one of his regiments, and returned to Kidderminster; became, at the Restoration, one of the king's chaplains; driven out of the Church by the Act of Uniformity, was thrown into prison at 70, let out, spent the rest of his days in peace; his popular works, "The Saints' Everlasting Rest," and his "Call to the Unconverted" (1615-1691).

BAY CITY, place of trade, and of importance as a great railway centre in Michigan, U.S.; the third city in it.

BAYADERE, a dancing-girl in India, dressed in loose Eastern costume; of two classes, one attached to temples and associated with religious rites, the other (Nautch girls) travelling about the country.

BAYARD, a horse of remarkable swiftness belonging to the four sons of Aymon, which they sometimes rode all at once; also a horse of Amadis de Gaul, better known under the Italian form, Bayardo.

BAYARD, CHEVALIER DE, an illustrious French knight, born in the Château Bayard, near Grenoble; covered himself with glory in the wars of Charles VIII., Louis XII., and Francis I.; his bravery and generosity commanded the admiration of his enemies, and procured for him the thrice-honourable cognomen of "The Knight sans peur et sans reproche"; one of his most brilliant feats was his defence, single-handed, of the bridge over the Garigliano, in the face of a large body of Spaniards; was mortally wounded defending a pass at Abbiategrosso; fell with his face to the foe, who carried off his body, but restored it afterwards for due burial by his friends (1470-1524).

BAYEUX, an ancient Norman city in the dep. of Calvados, France; manufactures lace, hosiery, &c.; is a bishop's seat; has a very old (Gothic) cathedral of the 11th century.

BAYEUX TAPESTRY, representations in tapestry of events connected with the Norman invasion of England, commencing with Harold's visit to the Norman court, and ending with his death at the battle of Hastings; still preserved in the public library of Bayeux; is so called because originally found there; it is 214 ft. long by 20 in. wide, divided into 72 scenes, and contains a variety of figures. Whose work the tapestry was is unknown; its first historical mention was in an inventory of 1369; its later discovery due to Bernard de Montfaucon, who published reproductions in 1729-1733.

BAYLE, PIERRE, a native of Languedoc; first Protestant (as the son of a Calvinist minister), then Catholic, then sceptic; professor of Philosophy at Padua, then at Rotterdam, and finally retired to the Bourneville in the latter city; known chiefly as the author of the famous "Dictionnaire Historique et Critique," to the composition of which he consecrated his energies with a zeal worthy of a religious devotee, and which became the fountainhead of the sceptical philosophy that flooded France on the eve of the Revolution (1647-1700).

BAYLEN, a town in the province of Jaen, Spain, where General Castaños defeated Dupont, and compelled him to sign a capitulation, in 1808.

BAYLEY, SIR JOHN, a learned English judge; author of a standard work "On the Law of Bills of Exchange"; d. 1841.

BAYONNE, a fortified French town, trading and manufacturing, in the dep. of Basses-Pyrénées, at the confluence of the Adour and Nive, 4 m. from the Bay of Biscay; noted for its strong citadel, constructed by Vauban and one of his chef-d'œuvre, and its 12th-century cathedral church; it belonged to the English from 1152 to 1451.

BAZAINE, FRANÇOIS ACHILLE, a marshal of France, born at Versailles; distinguished himself in Algiers, the Crimea, and Mexico; did good service, as commander of the army of the Rhine, in the Franco-German war, but after the surrender at Sedan was shut up in Metz, surrounded by the Germans, and obliged to surrender, with all his generals, officers, and men; was tried by court-martial, and condemned to death, but was imprisoned instead; made good his escape one evening to Madrid, where he lived to write a justification of his conduct, the sale of the book being prohibited in France (1811-1888).

BAZARD, SAINT-AMAND, a French socialist, founder of the Charbonnerie Française; a zealous but unsuccessful propagator of St. Simonianism, in association with Enfantin (q.v.), from whom he at last separated (1791-1832).

BAZOCHE, a guild of clerks of the parliament of Paris, under a mock king, with the privilege of performing religious plays, which they abused.

BEACHES, RAISED, elevated lands, formerly sea beaches, the result of upheaval, or left high by the recession of the sea, their origin being shown by the shells found in them and the nature of the débris.

BEACHY HEAD, a chalk cliff in Sussex, 575 ft. high, projecting into the English Channel; famous for a naval engagement between the allied English and Dutch fleets and that of France, in which the latter was successful.

BEACONSFIELD, capital of the gold-mining district in Tasmania; also a town in Buckinghamshire, 10 m. N. of Windsor, from which Benjamin Disraeli took his title on his elevation to the peerage.

BEACONSFIELD, BENJAMIN DISRAELI, EARL OF, British politician and novelist, born in London; son of Isaac D'Israeli, littérateur, and thus of Jewish parentage; was baptized at the age of 12; educated under a Unitarian minister; studied law, but did not qualify for practice. His first novel, "Vivian Grey," appeared in 1826, and thereafter, whenever the business of politics left him leisure, he devoted it to fiction. "Contarini Fleming," "Coningsby," "Tancred," "Lothair," and "Endymion" are the most important of a brilliant and witty series, in which many prominent personages are represented and satirised under thin disguises. His endeavours to enter Parliament as a Radical failed twice in 1832; in 1835 he was unsuccessful again as a Tory. His first seat was for Malden in 1837; thereafter he represented Shrewsbury and Buckinghamshire. For 9 years he was a free-lance in the House, hating the Whigs, and after 1842 leading the Young England party; his onslaught on the Corn Law repeal policy of 1846 made him leader of the Tory Protectionists. He was for a short time Chancellor of the Exchequer under Lord Derby in 1852, and coolly abandoned Protection. Returning to power with his chief six years later, he introduced a Franchise Bill, the defeat of which threw out the Government. In office a third time in 1866, he carried a democratic Reform Bill, giving household suffrage in boroughs and extending the county franchise. Succeeding Lord Derby in 1868, he was forced to resign soon afterwards. In 1874 he entered his second premiership. Two years were devoted to home measures, among which were Russell's Shipping Act and the abolition of Scottish Church patronage. Then followed a slow foreign policy. The securing of the half of the Suez Canal shares for Britain; the proclamation of the Queen as Empress of India; the support of Constantinople against Russia, afterwards stultified by the Berlin Congress, which he himself attended; the annexation of Cyprus; the Afghan and Zulu wars, were its salient features. Defeated at the polls in 1880 he resigned, and died next year. A master of epigram and a brilliant debater, he really led his party. He was the opposite in all respects of his protagonist, Mr. Gladstone. Lacking in zeal, he was yet loyal to England, and a warm personal friend of the Queen (1804-1881).

BEALE, DOROTHEA, a pioneer in higher education for girls. In 1838 appointed first principal of the Ladies' College, Cheltenham, which she developed on new lines; her work served as a model for the many girls' high schools which followed (1831-1906).

BEAM TRANSMISSION, a system of wireless transmission whereby the waves sent out are confined to a beam in the direction of the receiving station, instead of being radiated equally in all directions.

BEAR, name given in the Stock Exchange to one who contracts to deliver stock at a fixed price on a certain day, in contradistinction from the bull, or he who contracts to take it, the interest of the former being that in the intervening time the stocks should fall and that of the latter that they should rise.

BEAR, GREAT. See URSA MAJOR.

BEARDSLEY, AUBREY VINCENT, a distinguished black-and-white artist with a high sense of the decorative; illustrated many notable volumes, including the "Morte d'Arthur," and was art editor of the "Yellow Book" (1872-1898).

BEARN, an ancient prov. of France, fell to the crown with the accession of Henry IV. in 1589; formed a great part of the dep. of Basses-Pyrénées; capital, Pau.

BEATIFICATION, religious honour allowed by the pope to certain who are not so eminent in sainthood as to entitle them to canonisation.

BEATON, or BETHUNE, DAVID, cardinal, archbishop of St. Andrews, and primate of the kingdom, born in life; an adviser of James V., twice over ambassador to France; on the death of James secured to himself the chief power in Church and State as Lord High Chancellor and Papal Legate; opposed alliance with England; persecuted the Reformers; condemned the preacher, George Wishart, to the stake, witnessed his sufferings from a window of his castle in St. Andrews, and was assassinated within its walls shortly after; with his death ecclesiastical tyranny of that type came to an end in Scotland (1494-1546).

BEATON, JAMES, archbishop of Glasgow and St. Andrews, uncle of the preceding, a prominent figure in the reign of James V.; was partial to affiliation with France, and a persecutor of the Reformers; d. 1539.

BEATTIE, JAMES, a poet and essayist, born at Laurencekirk; became professor of Logic and Moral Philosophy at Marischal College, Aberdeen; wrote an "Essay on Truth" against Hume; his chief poem, "The Minstrel," a didactic piece, which traces the progress of poetic genius, admitted him to the Johnsonian circle in London, obtained for him the degree of LL.D. from Oxford, and brought him a pension of £200 per annum from the king; died at Aberdeen (1735-1803).

BEATRICE, a beautiful Florentine maiden of the family of Portinari, for whom Dante conceived an undying affection, and whose image abode with him to the end of his days. She is the heroine of his "Vita Nuova" and "Divina Commedia."

BEATTY, DAVID, EARL, Admiral of the Fleet; commanded the Battle Cruiser Squadron from 1912 to 1916, when he succeeded Lord Jellicoe as commander of the whole fleet after the Battle of Jutland. From 1919 to 1927 he was First Sea Lord; was raised to the peerage in 1919 and granted £100,000 by the nation (1871-).

BEAU BRUMMELL, George Bryan Brummell, a notable leader of fashion in the Regency; an intimate friend of George IV.; owing to losses in gambling died in poverty (1773-1840).

BEAU NASH, Richard Nash, a Welshman who superintended the social activities of Bath; died in beggary (1674-1761).

BEAU TIBBS, a character in Goldsmith's "Citizen of the World," noted for his finery, vanity and poverty.

BEAUGAIRE, a French town near Avignon, on the Rhône, which it spans with a magnificent bridge; once a great centre of trade, and famous, as it still is, for its annual fair, frequented by merchants from all parts of Europe.

BEAUCHAMP, ALPHONSE DE, a historian, born at Monaco; wrote the "Conquest of Peru" and a "History of Brazil" (1769-1832).

BEAUCLERE, Henry I. of England, so called from his superior learning.

BEAUCOURT, a village in the department of the Somme, France, on the River Ancre. It was the scene of British offensives in November, 1916, and August, 1918.

BEAUFORT, DUKE OF, grandson of Henry IV. of France; one of the chiefs of the Fronde; was surnamed Roi des Halles (King of the Market-folk); appointed admiral of France; did good execution against the pirates; passed into the service of Venice; was killed at the siege of Candia in 1669.

BEAUFORT, HENRY, cardinal, bishop of Winchester, son of John of Gaunt, learned in canon law, was several times chancellor; took a prominent part in all the political movements of the time, exerted an influence for good on the nation, lent immense sums to Henry V. and Henry VI., also left bequests for charitable uses, and founded the hospital of St. Cross at Winchester (1377-1447).

BEAUFORT, NAIS, ALEXANDRE, VICOMTE DE, born at Martinique, where he married a lady who afterwards, as wife of Napoleon, became the Empress Josephine; accepted and took part in the Revolution; was secretary of the National Assembly and its president when Louis XVI. fled from the capital; was convicted of treachery to the cause of the Revolution in the matter of the loss of Mayence, and put to death; as the father of Hortense, who married Louis, Napoleon's brother, he became grandfather of Napoleon III. (1760-1794).

BEAUFORT, EUGENE DE, son of the preceding and of Josephine, born at Paris, step-son of Napoleon, therefore was made viceroy of Italy; took an active part in the wars of the empire; died at Munich, whither he retired after the fall of Napoleon (1781-1824).

BEAUFORT, HORTENSE EUGÉNIE, sister of the preceding, ex-queen of Holland; wife of Louis Bonaparte, an ill-starred union; mother of Napoleon III., the youngest of three sons (1783-1837).

BEAUMAR CHAIS, PIERRE AUGUSTIN CARON DE, a dramatist and translator of the most versatile, brilliant gifts, and French to the core, born in Paris, son of a watchmaker at Caen; ranks as a comic dramatist next to Molière; author of "Le Barbier de Séville" (1775), and "Le Mariage de Figaro" (1784), his masterpiece. He was a zealous supporter of the Revolution, and made sacrifices on its behalf, but narrowly escaped the guillotine; died in distress and poverty. He made a fortune by speculations in the American war, and lost by others, one of them being the preparation of a sumptuous edition of Voltaire (1732-1799).

BEAUMARIS, principal town in Anglesea, Wales, on the Menai Strait, near Bangor, a favourite watering-place, with remains of a castle erected by Edward I.

BEAUMONT, CRISTOPHE DE, archbishop of Paris, born at Perigord; spent his life in persecuting hysterical Jansenists and incredulous non-confessors; but scrupled to grant, though he felt would have granted, absolution on his deathbed to the disolute monarch of France, Louis XV.; issued a charge condemnatory of Rousseau's "Emile," which provoked a celebrated letter from Rousseau in reply (1703-1781).

BEAUMONT, FRANCIS, dramatic poet, born in Leicestershire, of a family of good standing; bred for the bar, but devoted to literature; was a friend of Ben Jonson; in conjunction with his friend Fletcher the composer of a number of plays, about the separate authorship of which there has been much discussion, but the dramatic power of which comes far short of that so conspicuous in the plays of their great rival Shakespeare, though it is said contemporary criticism gave them the preference; buried in Westminster Abbey (1584-1616).

BEAUMONT, JEAN BAPTISTE ELIE DE, French geologist, born in Calvados; became secretary to the Academy of Sciences; was joint-editor of a geological map of France. He had a theory of his own of the formation of the crust of the earth (1798-1874).

BEAUNE, a town in the department of Côte d'Or, France, famous for its burgundy wine.

BEAUREGARD, PIERRE GUSTAVE TOUTANT, American Confederate general, born at New Orleans; adopted the cause of the South, and fought in its behalf (1818-1893).

BEAUREPAIRE, a French officer, noted for his noble defence of Verdun against the Prussians; preferred death by suicide to the dishonour of surrender (1748-1792).

BEAUSOBRE, ISAAC, a Huguenot divine, born at Poitou, fled to Holland on the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, settled in Berlin, and became a notability in high quarters there; attracted the notice of the young Frederick, the Great that was to be; author of a "History of Manichæism," praised by Gibbon, and of other books famous in their day, including a translation of the New Testament (1659-1739).

BEAUTIFUL PARRICIDE, Beatrice Cenci (q.v.).
BEAUTY AND THE BEAST, the hero and heroine of a famous fairy tale. Beauty falls in love with a being like a monster, who has, however, the heart of a man, and she marries him, upon which he is instantly transformed into a prince of handsome presence and noble mien.

BEAUVAIS, capital of the dep. of Oise, in France, 34 m. S.W. of Amiens, an ancient town, noted for its cathedral, its tapestry-weaving, and the feat of Jeanne-Hachette and her female following when the town was besieged by Charles the Bold.

BEAUVAIS, a French prelate, born at Cherbourg, bishop of Senes, celebrated as a pulpit orator (1781-1790).

BEAUVILLIER, a statesman, patron of letters, to whom Louis XIV. committed the governorship of his sons; died of a broken heart due to the shock the death of the dauphin gave him (1607-1687).

BEAVERBROOK, LORD (W. M. Aitken), newspaper proprietor. Son of a New Brunswick minister, he was active in the organisation of the Canadian forces in France. From 1910 to 1917 he was Conservative M.P. for Ashton, was knighted in 1911 and raised to the peerage in 1916. He acquired control of the Daily Express group of papers, and in 1918 served for a short time as Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1879-).

BESEK BAY, a fashionable resort on the Bosphorus, near Constantinople, and at one time the site of a palace of the sultan.

BECCAFUMI, DOMENICO, Italian painter, distinguished also as a sculptor and a worker in mosaic (1486-1550).

BECCA'RIA, CÉSARE BONESANA, MARQUIS OF, an Italian publicist, author of a celebrated "Treatise on Crimes and Punishments," which has been widely translated and contributed much to lessen the severity of sentences in criminal cases. He was a utilitarian in philosophy and a disciple of Rousseau in politics (1735-1794).

BECHER, JOHANN JOACHIM, chemist, born at Spire, distinguished as a pioneer in the scientific study of chemistry; wrote "Physica Subterranea" and originated the Phlogiston Theory (q.v.) (1635-1682).

BECHUANALAND, an inland tract in S. Africa, extends from the Orange River to the Zambezi. The whole country is under British protection, that part which is S. of the river Moposi was made a crown colony in 1885. On a plateau 4000 ft. above sea-level, the climate is suited for British emigrants. The soil is fertile; extensive tracts are suitable for corn, sheep and cattle thrive; rains fall in summer. In winter there are frosts, sometimes snow. Gold is found near Sitalgohi and diamonds at Vryburg. The Bechuannas are the most advanced of the black races of S. Africa.

BECHUA NAB, a widespread S. African race, totipotent, rears of cattle, and growers of maize; are among the most intelligent of the Bantu peoples, and show considerable capacity for self-government.

BECKER, KARL, German philologist; bred to medicine, author of a German grammar (1775-1849).

BECKER, NICOLAUS, author of the "Wacht am Rhein," was an obscure lawyer's clerk, and unnoted for anything else (1810-1845).

BECKER, WILLIAM ADOLPHE, an archaeologist, born at Dresden, was professor at Leipzig, wrote books in reproductive representation of ancient Greek and Roman life; author of "Manual of Roman Antiquities" (1796-1846).

BECKET, ST. THOMAS A., archbishop of Canterbury, born in London, of Norman parentage; studied at Oxford and Bologna; entered the Church; was made Lord Chancellor; had a large and splendid retinue, but on becoming archbishop cast all pomp aside and became an ascetic, and devoted himself to the vigorous discharge of the duties of his high office; declared for the independence of the Church, and refused to sign the Constitutions of Clarendon (q.v.). King Henry II. grew restive under his assumption of authority, and got rid of him by the hands of four knights, who, to please the king, shed his blood on the steps of the altar of Canterbury Cathedral, for which outrage the king did penance four years afterwards at his tomb. The struggle was one affecting the relative rights of Church and king, and the chief combatants in the fray were both high-minded men, each inflexible in the assertion of his claims; he was canonised in 1173, his festival being the day of his martyrdom, Dec. 29. (1118-1170).

BECKFORD, WILLIAM, author of "Vathek," son of a rich alderman of London, who bequeathed him property to the value of £100,000 per annum; kept spending his fortune on extravagances and vagaries, is alleged to have written "Vathek," an Arabian tale, when a youth of twenty-two, at a sitting of three days and two nights, a work which established his reputation as one of the first of the imaginative writers of his country, but the story of its inception is now discredited. Although he wrote two volumes of travels in Italy, his fame rests on his "Vathek" alone (1759-1844).

BECKX, PETER JOHN, general of the Jesuits, born in Belgium (1790-1887).

BECCQUEREL, ANTOINE CÉSAR, a French physicist; served as engineer in the French army in 1808-1814, but retired in 1815, devoting himself to science, and obtained high distinction in electro-chemistry, working with Ampère, Biot, and other eminent scientists (1788-1878).

BECCQUEREL, ANTOINE HENRI, grandson of the preceding. He discovered that uranium gives off rays which affect a photographic plate, and carried out researches on magnetism and phosphorescence. His work on radioactivity won him a Nobel Prize in 1903 (1852-1908).

BED OF JUSTICE, a formal session of the Parlement of Paris, under the presidency of the king, for the compulsory registration of the royal edicts, the last session being in 1787, under Louis XVI., at Versailles, whither the whole body, now "refractory, rolled out, in wheeled vehicles, to receive the order of the king."

BEDCHAMBER, LORDS or LADIES OF, officers or ladies of the royal household whose duty it is to wait upon the sovereign—the chief of the former called Groom of the Stole, and of the latter Mistress of the Robes.

BEDDOES, THOMAS LOVELL, born at Tilton, studied first in medicine, an enthusiastic student of science; a dramatic poet, author of "Bride's Tragedy," got into trouble for his radical opinions, his principal work, "Danti's Jest-Book, or the Fool's Tragedy," highly esteemed by Barry Cornwall (1803-1840).

BEDE, or BEDA, surnamed "The Venerable," an English monk and ecclesiastical historian, born at Monkwearmouth, in the abbey of which, together with that of Jarrow, he spent his life, devoted to quiet study and learning; his writings numerous and encyclopaedic, in the shape of commentaries, biographies, and scientific and philosophical treatises; his most important work, the "Ecclesiastical History" of England, written in Latin, and translated by Alfred the Great, completed a translation of St. John's Gospel the day he died. An old monk, it is said, wrote this epitaph over his grave, Hic sunt in fossa Bede . . . ossa. "In this pit are the bones . . . of Bede," and then fell asleep; but when he awoke he found some invisible hand had inserted venerabilis in the blank which he had failed to fill up, whence Bede's epithet, it is alleged.

BEDELL, WILLIAM, bishop of Kilmore and Ardagh, born in Essex, studied at Cambridge; superintended the translation of the Old Testament into Irish; though his virtues saved him and his family for a time from outrage by the rebels in 1641, he was imprisoned at the age of 70, and, though released, died soon after (1571-1642).

BEDFORD, a midland agricultural county of England, generally level, with some flat fen-land; also the county town, on the Great Ouse, with a fine park and excellent educational institutions, famous in connection with the life of John Bunyan, where relics of him are preserved, and where a bronze statue of him by Boehm was erected to his memory by the Duke of Bedford in 1871; manufactures agricultural implements, lace, and straw plaiting; Elstow, Bunyan's birthplace, is a mile distant.

BEDFORD, JOHN, DUKE OF, brother of Henry V., protector of the kingdom and regent of France during the minority of Henry VI., whom, on the death of the French king, he proclaimed king of France, taking up arms thereafter and fighting for a time victoriously on his behalf, till the enthusiasm created by Joan of Arc turned the tide against him and hastened his death, previous to which, however, though he prevailed over the dauphin and burnt Joan at the stake, his power had gone (1389-1435).

BEDFORD LEVEL, a flat marshy district, comprising part of six counties, to the S. and W. of the Wash, about 40 m. in extent each way, caused originally by incursions of the sea and the overflowing of rivers; received its name from the Earl of Bedford, who, in the 17th century, undertook to drain it.

BED IVERE, a knight of the Round Table; the last to be with King Arthur after the latter's final battle, and the bearer of the magic sword Excalibur to the mere; immortalised in Malory's "Morte d'Arthur" and Tennyson's poem of the same name.

BEDLAM, a lunatic asylum in Lambeth, London, so named from the priory "Bethlehem" in Bishopsgate, first appropriated to the purpose, Bedlam being a corruption of the name Bethlehem. It was founded in 1247, transferred to Moorfields in 1676, and moved to Lambeth in 1816.

BEDMAR, MARQUIS DE, cardinal and bishop of Oviedo, and a Spanish diplomatist, notorious for a part he played in a daring conspiracy in 1618 aimed at the destruction of Venice, but which, being betrayed, was defeated, for concern in which several people were executed, though the arch-delinquent got off; he is the subject of Otway's "Venice Preserved"; it was after this that he was made cardinal, and governor of the Netherlands, where he was detested and obliged to retire (1572-1655).

BEDOUINS, Arabs who lead a nomadic life in the desert and subsist by the pasture of cattle and the rearing of horses, the one element that binds them into a unity being community of language, the Arabic namely, which they all speak with great purity and without variation of dialect; they are generally of small stature, of wiry constitution, and dark complexion, and are divided into tribes, each under an independent chief.

BEE, THE, a periodical started by Goldsmith, in which some of his best essays appeared, as well as his "Citizen of the World".

BEECHAM, SIR THOMAS, British conductor and composer. Educated at Russell and Oxford, he came to the fore in 1910 through the Covent Garden opera season, and founded in 1915 the Albert Hall Promenade. Associated with the London Symphony Orchestra, the Royal Philharmonic Society, and the British Broadcasting Company, he strove to popularise opera (1879-).

BEECHER, HENRY WARD, a celebrated American preacher, born at Litchfield, Connecticut, pastor of a large Congregational church, Brooklyn, a vigorous thinker and eloquent orator, a liberal man both in theology and politics, wrote "Life Thoughts"; denied the eternity of punishment, considered a great heresy by some then, and his opinions led to his secession from the Congregational body (1813-1887).

BEECHER STOWE, HARRIET ELIZABETH, sister of the above, authoress of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Born at Litchfield, Connecticut, U.S.A., married Professor C. E. Stowe in 1832 (1812-1895).

BEECHY, REAR-ADMIRAL, born in London, son of the following; accompanied Franklin in 1818 and Parry in 1819 to the Arctic regions; commanded the Blossom in the third expedition of 1825-1828 to the same regions; published "Voyage of Discovery towards the North Pole", has given his name to Beechy Island in the Arctic Archipelago (1706-1856).

BEECHY, SIR WILLIAM, portrait-painter, born in Oxfordshire, among his portraits were those of Lord Nelson, John Kemble and Mrs. Siddons (1753-1830).

BEECHING, JAMES, of Great Yarmouth; from his desk, which won the Duke of Northumberland's prize of 100 guineas in 1851, was built the first self-righting lifeboat, taken as a model for the boats of the National Lifeboat Institution (1788-1859).

BEEFEATERS, yeomen of the royal guard, whose institution dates from the reign of Henry VII. and whose office it is to wait upon royalty on high occasions; the name is also given to the wardens of the Tower, though they are a separate body and of more recent origin; the name simply means (royal) dependant, a corruption of the French word buffetier, one who attends the sideboard.

BEEHIVE HOUSES, small stone structures, of ancient date, remains of which are found sometimes in clusters in Ireland and the W. of Scotland, with a conical roof formed of stones overlapping one another, undressed and without mortar, some of them appear to have been monks' cells.

BEEL-ZEBUB, the god of flies, protector against them, worshipped by the Phoenicians; being a heathen deity, transformed by the Jews into a chief of the devils, sometimes identified with Satan, and sometimes his aide-de-camp, as in Milton's "Paradise Lost."

BEERBOHM, MAX, caricaturist and author. Educated at Charterhouse and Oxford, he first became prominent as a writer and later as a caricaturist. Socialists and modern art enthusiasts forming many of his subjects (1872-).

BEERBOHM TREE, SIR HERBERT, born in London, son of a grain merchant; his first appearance was as the timid curate in the "Private Secretary," and then as the spy Macari in "Called Back"; had many notable successes, mainly in Shakespearean revivals (1852-1917).

BEER-SHEBA, a village in the S. of Canaan, and the most southerly, 27 m. from Hebron; associated with Dan, in the N., to denote the limit of the land and what lies between; lies in a pastoral country abounding in wells, and is frequently mentioned in patriarchal history; means "the Well of the Oath."

BEESEING, a gauze-like film which forms on the sides of a bottle of good port.

BEEET SUGAR, a sugar, similar to cane sugar, extracted from beets. Its production was first shown to be practicable by Maschaf in 1749. About half of the world's supply of sugar is now produced from beets. The production of beet sugar on a large scale has been carried out for many years in the U.S.A., Germany, and elsewhere, and efforts have been made in recent years to stimulate the industry in Great Britain, with this end in view a Government subsidy was granted after the Great War.

BEETHOVEN, LUDWIG VON, one of the greatest musical composers, born in Bonn, of Dutch extraction; the author of symphonies and sonatas that are known over all the world; showed early a most precocious genius for music, commenced his education at five as a musician, trained at first by a companion named Pfeiffer, to whom he confessed he owed more than all his teachers, trained at length under the tuition of the most illustrious of his predecessors, Bach and Handel, revealed wonderful musical talent; quitted Bonn and settled in Vienna; attracted the attention of Mozart; at the age of 40 was attacked with deafness that became total and lasted for life; continued to compose despite his affliction, to the admiration of thousands, during his last days was a prey to melancholy; died during a thunderstorm (1770-1827).

BEETS, NICOLAS, a Dutch theologian, poet, and author of stories of Dutch life, born at Haarlem, came, as a poet, under the influence of Byronism (1814-1903).

BEFA'NA, an Indian female Santa Claus, who on Twelfth Night, as the stockings of good children with good things and those of bad with ashes.

BEGHARDS, a religious order that arose in Belgium in the 13th century, connected with the Beguines, a mystic and socialist sect.

BEGUINES, a sisterhood confined now to France and Germany, who, without taking any monastic vow, devote themselves to works of piety and benevolence.

BEGUM, the Hindustani name given in the E. Indies to a princess, mother, sister, or wife of a native ruler.

BEHM, MARTIN, a photographer and cartographer, born in Nuremberg; accompanied Diego Cam on a voyage of discovery along W. coast of Africa, constructed and left behind him a famous terrestrial globe, some would make him out to be the discoverer of America (1459-1506).

BEHAR, a province of Bengal, in the valley of the Ganges, which divides it into two; densely peopled; cradle of Buddhism.

BEHE MOTH, a large animal mentioned in Job, understood to be the hippopotamus.

BEHISTUN, a mountain in Iraq, on which there are rocks covered with cuneiform inscriptions, the principal relating to Darius Hystaspes, of date about 515 B.C., bearing on his genealogy, domains, and victories.

BEHN, AFRA, a licentious writer, born in Kent, for whom, for her free and easy ways, Charles II. took a liking; sent by him as a spy to Holland, and instrumental in discovering the intention of the Dutch to burn the shipping in the Thames. She wrote plays and novels (1640-1689).

BEHRING STRAIT, a strait about 50 m. wide between Asia and N. America, which connects the Arctic Ocean with the Pacific; discovered by the Danish navigator Vitus Behring in 1728, sent out on a voyage of discovery by Peter the Great.

BEIRA, (1) a central province of Portugal, mountainous and pastoral; gives title to the heir-apparent to the Portuguese throne; (2) a seaport town in Portuguese East Africa, connected by rail with Moshonaland.

BEKE, DR., traveller, born in London; travelled in Abyssinia and Palestine, author of "Origines Biblicæ" and researches into primeval history as shown not to be in keeping with the orthodox belief (1800-1874).

BEEKER, IMMANUEL, philologist, born in Berlin, and professor in Halle, classical textual critic; issued recensions of the Greek and Latin classics (1785-1871).

BEL AND THE DRAGON, HISTORY OF, one of the books of the Apocrypha, a spurious addition to the book of Daniel, relates how David persuaded Cyrus of the vanity of idol-worship, and is intended to show its absurdity.

BELA I., king of Hungary from 1060 to 1083; an able ruler; introduced a great many measures for the permanent benefit of the country, affecting both religion and social organisation.

BELA IV., king of Hungary, son of Andreas II., who had in 1222 been compelled to sign the Golden Bull, the Magna Charta of Hungarian liberty; faithfully respected the provisions of this charter, and incurred the enmity of the nobles by his strenuous efforts to subdue them to the royal power; reigned 1235-1241.

BELCH, SIR TOBY, a reckless, jolly, swaggering character in "Twelfth Night."

BELCHER, SIR EDWARD, admiral, was engaged in several exploring and surveying expeditions; sailed round the world, and took part in the operations in China (1799-1877).

BELFAST, capital and seat of the Parliament of Northern Ireland, and county town of Antrim, stands on the Lagan, at the head of Belfast Lough, 100 m. N. of Dublin; is a bright and pleasant city, with some fine streets and handsome buildings, Presbyterian, Catholic, and Methodist colleges. It is the centre of the Irish linen and cotton manufactures, the most important shipbuilding centre, and has also rope-making, whiskey, and aerated-water industries. It is the headquarters of Presbyterianism in Ireland.

BELFORT, a fortified town in dep. of Haut-Rhin, and its capital, 35 m. W. by N. of Basel, capitulated to the Germans in 1871; restored to France; its fortifications now greatly strengthened. The Citadel was by Vauban.

BELGE, Cesar's name for the tribes of the Celtic family in Gaul N. of the Seine and Marne; mistakenly rated as Germans by Cesar.

BELGIUM, a small European State bordering on the North Sea, with Holland to the N., France to the S., and Rhenish Prussia and Luxembourg on the E.; is less than a third the size of Ireland, but it is the most densely populated country on the Continent. The people are of mixed stock, comprising Flemings, of Teutonic origin; Walloons, of Celtic origin; Germans, Dutch, and French. Roman Catholicism is the predominant religion. Education is excellent; there are universities at Ghent, Liège, Brussels and Louvain. French is the language of educated circles and of the State; but the prevalence of dialects hinders the growth of a national literature. The land is low and level and fertile in the N. and W., undulating in the middle, rocky and hilly in the S. and E. The Meuse and Scheldt are the chief rivers, the basin of the latter embracing most of the country. Climate is similar to the English, with greater extremes. Rye, wheat, oats, beet and flax are the principal crops. Agriculture is the most painstaking and productive of the world. The hilly country is rich in coal, iron, zinc and lead. After mining, the chief industries are textile manufactures and making of machinery; the former at Antwerp, Ghent, Brussels and Liège; the latter at Liège, Mons and Charleroi. The trade is enormous; France, Germany, and Britain are the best customers. Exports are coal to France; farm products, eggs, &c.

to England; and raw material imported from across seas, to France and the basin of the Rhine. It is a small country of large cities. The capital is Brussels, in the centre of the kingdom, but communicating with the ocean by a ship canal. The railways, canals, and river navigation are very highly developed. The government is a limited monarchy; the king, senate, and house of representatives form the constitution. There is a conscript army of 50,000 men, but no navy. Transferred from Spain to Austria in 1713, Belgium was under French sway from 1794 till 1814, when it was united with Holland, but established its independence in 1830. Was invaded by Germany in 1914, in defiance of the guarantee of neutrality, and was the scene of the opening battles of the Great War.

BELGRADE, the capital of Jugo-Slavia, on the confluence of the Save and Danube; a fortified city in an important strategical position, and the scene of many conflicts; a commercial centre; once Turkish in appearance, now becoming more European.

BELGRA VIA, a fashionable quarter in the southern part of the West End of London.

BELLAL, properly a good-for-nothing, a child of worthlessness; an incarnation of iniquity and son of perdition, and the name in the Bible for the children of such.

BELINDA, the heroine in Pope's "Rape of the Lock"; in real life Arabella Fernor, from whose head Lord Petre cut a lock of hair.

BELISA RIUS, a general under the Emperor Justinian, born in Illyria, defeated the Persians, the Vandals, and the Ostrogoths; was falsely accused of conspiracy, but acquitted, and restored to his dignities by the emperor; another tradition, now entirely discredited, alleges that for the crimes charged against him he had his eyes put out, and was reduced to beggary (505-565).

BELIZE, British Honduras, a fertile district, and its capital; exports mahogany, rosewood, sugar and indiarubber.

BELL, ALEXANDER GRAHAM, inventor. Born in Edinburgh, he emigrated to America and became professor of physiology at Boston. He invented the telephone and photophone and devised improvements in connection with the phonograph (1847-1922).

BELL, ANDREW, noted educationist, born at St. Andrews; founder of the monitorial system of education, which he had adopted, for want of qualified assistants, when in India as superintendent of an orphanage in Madras, so that his system was called "the Madras system"; returned from India with a large fortune, added to it by lucrative preferments, and bequeathed a large portion of it, some £120,000, for the endowment of education in Scotland and the establishment of schools, such as the Madras College in his native city (1753-1832).

BELL, BESSY, and MARY GRAY, the "two bonnie lassies" of a Scottish ballad, daughters of two Perthshire gentlemen, who in 1666 built themselves a bower in a spot retired from a plague then raging; supplied with food by a lad in love with both of them, who caught the plague and gave it to them, of which they all sickened and died.

BELL, BOOK, AND CANDLE, a ceremony at one time attending the greater excommunication in the Romish Church, when after sentence was read from the "book," a "bell" was rung, and the "candle" extinguished.

BELL, SIR CHARLES, Scottish surgeon and anatomist, carried out research on the nervous system. He was the first to make clear the distinction between the motor and sensory nerves, publishing his discoveries in "The Anatomy of the Brain" and "The Nervous System" (1774-1842).

BELL, HENRY, bred a millwright, born in Linlithgowshire; the first who applied steam to navigation in Europe, demonstrating it in a small steamboat called the Comet, driven by a three horse-power engine (1767-1830).

BELL, HENRY GLASSFORD, born in Glasgow, a lawyer and literary man, sheriff of Lanarkshire; wrote a vindication of Mary, Queen of Scots, and some volumes of poetry (1803-1874).

BELL, JOHN, sculptor; executed the Guards'

Memorial in Waterloo Place, London, the Wellington monument at the Guildhall, and other notable works; was prominent in the establishing of the South Kensington Museum (1811-1895).

BELL, PETER, Wordsworth's simple rustic, to whom the primrose was but a yellow flower and nothing more.

BELL, ROBERT, journalist and miscellaneous writer, born at Cork; edited "British Poets, from Chaucer to Cowper," his best-known work, which he annotated, and accompanied with careful memoirs of each (1800-1867).

BELL, THOMAS, a naturalist, born at Poole; professor of Zoology in King's College, London; author of "British Quadrupeds," "British Reptiles," and "British Stalk-eyed Crustacea," and editor of "White's Natural History of Selborne" (1792-1880).

BELL ROCK, or INCHCAPE ROCK, a dangerous reef of sandstone rocks in the North Sea, 12 m. NE. of Arbroath, on which a lighthouse 120 ft. high was erected in 1807-1810; so called from a bell rung by the sway of the waves, which the abbot of Arbroath erected on it at one time as a warning to seamen; celebrated in a ballad by Southey.

BELL-THE-CAT, Archibald Douglas, 5th Earl of Angus, so called from his offer to dispose by main force of an obnoxious favourite of the king, James III.

BELLA, STEPHANO DELLA, a Florentine engraver of great merit; engraved over 1000 plates; was patronised by Richelieu in France, and the Medici in Florence (1610-1664).

BELLAMY, EDWARD, American author and socialist; wrote "Looking Backward" in 1888, a prevision of social conditions in the year 2000 (1850-1898).

BELLAMY, JACOB, a Dutch poet, born at Flushing; his poems highly esteemed by his countrymen (1757-1786).

BELLANGE, a celebrated painter of battle-pieces, born at Paris (1800-1860).

BELLARMIN, ROBERT, cardinal, born in Tuscany; a learned Jesuit, controversial theologian and in his writings, which are numerous, a valiant defender at all points of Roman Catholic dogma; the greatest champion of the Church in his time, and regarded as such by the Protestant theologians; he was at once a learned man and a doughty polemic (1542-1621).

BELLAY, JOACHIM DU, French poet; author of sonnets entitled "Regrets," full of vigour and poetry; wrote the "Antiquités de Rome," was called the Apollo of the Pléiade, the best poet and the best prose-writer among them (1524-1500).

BELLE-ISLE, a fortified island on the W. coast of France, near which Sir Edward Hawke gained a brilliant naval victory over the French, under Marshal Conflans, in 1759.

BELLEISLE, CHARLES LOUIS AUGUSTE FOUQUET, COUNT OF, marshal of France; distinguished in the war of the Spanish Succession; an ambitious man, mainly to blame for the Austrian Succession war; had grand schemes in his head, no less than the supremacy of France in Europe and the world, expounded them to Frederick the Great; concluded a fast and loose treaty with him, which, nevertheless, was binding to neither party; found himself blocked upon Prague with his forces; had to force his way out and retreat, but it was a retreat, the French boast, comparable only with the retreat of the Ten Thousand; was made War Minister after, and wrought important reforms in the army (1684-1761). See Carlyle's "Frederick" for a graphic account of him and his schemes, especially in HK. xii. chap. ix.

BELLENDEN, JOHN, of Moray, a Scottish writer in the 16th century; translated from the Latin, at the request of James V., Hector Boece's "History of Scotland" and the first five books of Livy, which remain the earliest extant specimens of Scottish prose, for the execution of which he was well rewarded, being made archdeacon of Moray; after the Reformation he died in exile in Italy (1508-1560).

BELLENDEN, WILLIAM, a Scottish writer, distinguished for diplomatic services to Queen Mary, and for the purity of his Latin composition; a professor of belles-lettres in Paris University (1555-1633).

BELLEROPHON, a mythical hero, son of Glaucus and grandson of Sisyphus; having unwittingly caused the death of his brother, withdrew from his country and sought retreat with Preteus, king of Argos, who, becoming jealous of his guest, but not willing to violate the laws of hospitality, had him sent to Iobates, his son-in-law, king of Lycia, with instructions to put him to death. Iobates, in consequence, imposed upon him the task of slaying the Chimæra, persuaded that this monster would be the death of him. Bellerophon, mounted on Pegasus, the winged horse given him by Pallas, slew the monster, and on his return received the daughter of Iobates to wife.

BELLEROPHON, the ship on which Napoleon was conveyed to St. Helena.

BELLES-LETTRES, that department of literature which implies literary culture and belongs to the domain of art, whatever the subject may be or the special form; it includes poetry, the drama, fiction and criticism.

BELLEVILLE, a low suburb of Paris, included in it since 1860; the scene of one of the outrages of the Communists.

BELLARD, COMTE DE, a French general and diplomatist; fought in most of the Napoleonic wars, but served under the Bourbons on Napoleon's abdication; was serviceable to Louis Philippe in Belgium by his diplomacy (1769-1832).

BELLINI, the name of an illustrious family of Venetian painters.

BELLINI, GENTILE, the son of Jacopo Bellini, was distinguished as a portrait-painter; decorated with his brother the council-chamber of the ducal palace; his finest picture the "Preaching of St. Mark" (1421-1508).

BELLINI, GIOVANNI, brother of the preceding, produced a great many works; the subjects religious, all nobly treated; had Glorione and Tiddi for pupils; among his best works, the "Circumlocution," "Feast of the Gods," "Blood of the Redeemer," did much to promote painting in oil (1428-1516).

BELLINI, JACOPO, a painter from Florence who settled in Venice, the father and founder of the family; d. 1470.

BELLINI, VINCENZO, a musical composer, born at Catania, Sicily; his works operas, more distinguished for their melody than their dramatic power; the best are "Il Pirati," "La Sonnambula," "Norma," and "I Puritani" (1802-1835).

BELLMANN, the poet of Sweden, a man of true genius, called the "Astræon of Sweden," patronised by Gustavus Adolphus (1741-1795).

BELLOC, JEAN PIERRE HILAIRE, British author, with G. K. Chesterton a champion of the Catholic position. His best-known book is "The Path to Rome," and he has written several volumes of essays and novels satirising political life, of which he had four years' taste as M.P., from 1906 to 1910, as a Liberal (1870-).

BELLO'NA, the goddess of fury in war among the Romans, related by the poets to Mars as sister, wife, or daughter; inspirer of the war-spirit, and represented as armed with a bloody scourge in one hand and a torch in the other.

BELLOT, JOSEPH RENÉ, a naval officer, born in Paris, distinguished in the expedition of 1845 to Madagascar, and one of those who went in quest of Sir John Franklin; drowned while crossing the ice. Bellot Strait in the Arctic is named after him (1820-1853).

BELLOY, PIERRE LAURENT BUIRETTE DE, a French poet, born at St. Flour; author of "Le Siège de Calais" and numerous other dramatic works (1727-1775).

BELON, PIERRE, a French naturalist, one of the founders of natural history, and one of the precursors of Cuvier; wrote in different departments of natural history, the chief, "Natural History of Birds"; murdered by robbers while gathering plants in the Bois de Boulogne (1518-1564).

BEL'PIEGOR, a Moabitte deity whose rites were of an obscene character.

BELPHEBE (i.e. Beautiful Diana), a huntress in the "Fæerie Queene," the impersonation of Queen Elizabeth, conceived of, however, as a pure, high-spirited maiden rather than a queen.

BELSHAM, THOMAS, a Unitarian divine, originally Calvinist, born at Bedford; successor to the celebrated Priestley at Hackney, London; wrote an elementary work on psychology (1750-1820).

BELSHAZZAR, the last Chaldean king of Babylon, slain, according to the Scripture account, at the capture of the city by Cyrus in 538 B.C.

BELT, GREAT and LITTLE, gateways of the Baltic: the Great between Zealand and Funen, 15 m. broad; the Little between Funen and Jutland, half as broad; both 70 m. long, the former of great depth.

BELT OF CALMS, the region in the Atlantic and Pacific, 4° or 5° latitude broad, where the trade-winds meet and neutralise each other, in which, however, torrents of rain and thunderstorms occur almost daily.

BELTANE, or BELTEIN, an ancient Celtic festival connected with the sun-worship, and supposed to have marked the beginning of summer, observed about May 1, during which time fires were kindled on the tops of hills and various ceremonies gone through. In early days human sacrifices attended the festival.

BELUCHISTAN, a desert plateau lying between Persia and India, Afghanistan and the Arabian Sea; is crossed by many mountain ranges, the Suliman, in the N., rising to 12,000 ft. Rivers in the NE. are subject to great floods. The centre and W. is a sandy desert exposed to bitter winds in winter and sandstorms in summer. Fierce extremes of temperature prevail. There are few cattle, but sheep are numerous; the camel is the draught animal. Where there is water the soil is fertile, and crops of rice, cotton, indigo, sugar, and tobacco are raised; in the higher parts wheat, maize, and pulse. Both precious and useful metals are found; petroleum wells were discovered in the N. in 1887. The population comprises Beluchis, robber nomads of Arran stock, in the E. and W., and Mongolian Brakhs in the centre. All are Mohammedan. Kelat is the capital; its position commands all the caravan routes. Quetta, in the N., is a British stronghold and health resort. The Khan of Kelat is the ruler of the country and a vassal of the Crown.

BELUS, another name for Baal (q.v.), or the legendary god of Assyria and Chaldean.

BELVEDERE, name given to a gallery of the Vatican at Rome, especially that containing the famous statue of Apollo, and applied to any room or gallery commanding a fine view.

BELZO NI, GIOVANNI BATTISTA, a famous traveller and explorer in Egypt, born at Padua, of poor parents; a man of great stature; figured as an athlete in Astley's Circus, London, and elsewhere, first of all in London streets; applied himself to the study of mechanics; visited Egypt as a mechanic and engineer at the instance of Mehmet Ali; commenced explorations among its antiquities, sent to the British Museum trophies of his achievements; published a narrative of his operations; opened an exhibition of his collection of antiquities in London and Paris; undertook a journey to Timbuctoo, was attacked with dysentery, and died at Gato (1778-1823).

BEM, JOSEPH, a Polish general, born in Galicia; served in the French army against Russia in 1812; took part in the insurrection of 1830; joined the Hungarians in 1848; gained several successes against Austria and Russia, but was defeated at Temesvár; turned Mussulman, and was made pasha; died at Aleppo, where he had gone to suppress an Arab insurrection (1795-1850).

BEMBA, a lake in Africa, the highest feeder of the Congo, of an oval shape, 150 m. long and over 70 m. broad, 3000 ft. above the sea-level; known also as Lake Bangweilo; discovered by Livingstone in 1868.

BEMBO, PIETRO, cardinal, an erudite man of letters and patron of literature and the arts, born at Venice; secretary to Pope Leo X.; historiographer of Venice, and librarian of St. Mark's; made cardinal by Paul III., and bishop of Bergamo; a fastidious stylist and a stickler for purity in language (1470-1547).

BEN, Gaelic for mountain, occurring elsewhere in Great Britain in the Cymric form "pen."

BEN LAWERS, a mountain in Perthshire, 3084 ft. high, on the W. of Loch Tay.

BEN LEDI, a mountain in Perthshire, 2873 ft. high, 44 m. NW. of Callander.

BEN LOMOND, a mountain in Stirlingshire, 3192 ft. high, on the E. of Loch Lomond.

BEN NEVIS, the highest mountain in Great Britain, in SW. Inverness-shire, 4406 ft. high, a sheer precipice on the NE. 1500 ft. high, and with an observatory on the summit supported by the Scottish Meteorological Society.

BEN RHYDDING, a village in the West Riding of Yorkshire, 15 m. NW. of Leeds, with a thoroughly equipped hydropathic establishment, once much resorted to.

BENARES, the most sacred city of the Hindus, and an important town in the NW. Provinces; is on the Ganges, 420 m. by rail NW. of Calcutta. It presents an amazing array of 1700 temples and mosques, with towers and domes and minarets innumerable. The bank of the river is laid with continuous flights of steps whence the pilgrims bathe; but the city itself is narrow, crooked, crowded, and dirty. Many thousand pilgrims visit it annually. It is a seat of Hindu learning; there is also a government college. The river is spanned here by a magnificent railway bridge. There is a large trade in country produce, English goods, jewellery, and gems; while its brasswork, "Benares ware," is famous.

BENBOW, JOHN, admiral, born at Shrewsbury; distinguished himself in an action with a Barbary pirate; rose rapidly to the highest rank in the navy; gained fame in an engagement with a French fleet in the W. Indies, in which he lost a leg, and at this crisis some of his captains disobeyed orders and the enemy escaped. The captains were tried by court-martial, and two of them shot; the wound he received and his vexation caused his death (1657-1721).

BENCOOLEN, a town and a Dutch residency in SW. of Sumatra; exports pepper and camphor.

BENDER, a town in Bessarabia, remarkable for the siege which Charles XII. of Sweden sustained there after his defeat at Pultowa.

BENDIGO, a town in Victoria, Australia, the centre of a large gold-mining and agricultural district; the gold-field discovered in 1851.

BENEDEK, LUDWIG VON, an Austrian general, born in Hungary; distinguished himself in the campaigns of 1848-1849; was defeated by the Prussians at Sadowa; superseded and tried, but got off; retired to Graz, where he died (1804-1881).

BENEDETTI, COUNT VINCENT, French diplomatist, born at Bastia, in Corsica; is remembered for his draft of a treaty between France and Prussia, published in 1870, and for his repudiation of all responsibility for the Franco-German war (1817-1900).

BENEDICT, the name of 15 popes: B. I., from 574 to 575; B. II., from 684 to 685; B. III., from 855 to 858; B. IV., from 900 to 907; B. V., from 964 to 965; B. VI., from 972 to 974; B. VII., from 975 to 984; B. VIII., from 1012 to 1024; extended the territory of the Church by conquest, and effected certain clerical reforms; B. IX., from 1033 to 1048, a licentious man, and deposed; B. X., from 1058 to 1059; B. XI., from 1303 to 1304; B. XII., from 1334 to 1342; B. XIII., from 1724 to 1730; B. XIV., from 1740 to 1758, a native of Bologna, a man of marked scholarship and ability; a patron of science and literature, who did much to purify the morals and elevate the character of the clergy and reform abuses in the Church; B. XV., from 1914 to 1922.

BENEDICT BISCOPE, an Anglo-Saxon monk, born in Northumbria; made two pilgrimages to Rome; assumed the tonsure as a Benedictine monk in Provence; returned to England and founded two monasteries on the Tyne, one at Wearmouth and another at Jarrow, making them seats of learning (628-690).

BENEDICT, ST., the founder of Western monachism, born near Spoleto; left home at 14; passed three years as a hermit, in a cavern near Subiaco, to prepare himself for God's service; attracted many to his retreat; appointed to an abbey, but left it; founded 12 monasteries of his own; though possessed of no scholarship, composed his "Regula Monachorum," which formed the rule of his order; represented in art as accompanied by a raven with sometimes a loaf in his bill, or surrounded by thorns or by howling demons (480-543). See BENEDICTINES.

BENEDICT, SIR JULIUS, musician and composer, native of Stuttgart; removed to London in 1835; author of, among other pieces, the "Chimes of Westminster," the "Brides of Venice," and the "Crusaders"; conducted the performance of "Elizah" in which Jenny Lind made her first appearance before a London audience, and accompanied her as pianist to America in 1850 (1804-1885).

BENEDICTINES, the order of monks founded by St. Benedict and following his rule, the cradle of which was the celebrated monastery of Monte Cassino, near Naples, an institution which reckoned among its members a large body of eminent men, who in their day rendered immense service to both literature and science, and were, in fact, the only learned class of the Middle Ages; spent their time in diligently transcribing manuscripts, and thus preserving for posterity the classic literature of Greece and Rome; the order has given 40 popes to the Church of Rome.

BENEDICTUS, part of the musical service at Mass in the Roman Catholic Church; has been introduced into the morning service of the English Church.

BENEFIT OF THE CLERGY, the system under which the clergy were immune from trial in a civil court, not finally abolished till 1779, though inoperative for a century before. In practice it was not confined to priests, and Ben Jonson was one to benefit by it.

BENEKE, FRIEDRICH EDUARD, a German philosopher and professor in Berlin of the so-called empirical school, that is, the Baconian; an opponent of the methods and systems of Kant and Hegel; confined his studies to psychology and the phenomena of consciousness; was more a British thinker than a German (1798-1854).

BENENGE LL, an imaginary Moorish author, whom Cervantes credits with the story of "Don Quixote."

BENES, EDUARD, Czechoslovakian statesman. Son of a Bohemian farmer, he became a professor at Prague. He worked in Paris during the Great War for the liberation of his country, and in 1918 became minister of foreign affairs in its first cabinet. From 1921 to 1922 he was premier, and he also represented his country on the League of Nations (1884-).

BENETIER, the vessel for holding the holy water in Roman Catholic churches.

BENEVENTO, a town 33 m. NE. of Naples, built out of and amid the ruins of an ancient one; also the province, of which Talleyrand was made prince by Napoleon.

BENEVOLENCE, the name given to a forced tax exacted from the people by certain kings of England, and which, under Charles I., became so obnoxious as to occasion the demand of the Petition of Rights (q.v.), that no tax should be levied without consent of Parliament; first enforced in 1473, declared illegal in 1689.

BENFEY, THEODOR, Orientalist, born near Göttingen, of Jewish birth; a great Sanskrit scholar, and professor of Sanskrit and Comparative Philology at his native place; author of "Lexicon of Greek Roots," "Sanskrit Grammar," &c. (1809-1881).

BENGAL, a province of India lying in the plain of the lower Ganges and the delta of the Ganges-Brahmaputra, with the Himalayas on the N. At the base of the mountains are great forests, along the seashore dense jungles. The climate is hot and humid, drier at Behar, and passing through every gradation up to the snowline. The people are engaged in agriculture, raising indigo, jute, opium, rice, tea, cotton and sugar. Coal, iron, and copper mines are worked in Burdwan. The manufactures are of cotton and jute. The population is mixed in blood and speech, but Hindus speaking Bengali predominate. Education is further advanced than elsewhere; there are five colleges affiliated to Calcutta University, and many other scholastic institutions. The chief city, Calcutta, is the former capital of India; the next town in size is Patna.

BENGA'ZL, the capital of Barca, on the Gulf of Sidra, in N. Africa, a caravan terminus from Egypt with a considerable trade.

BENGEL, JOHANN ALBRECHT, a distinguished Biblical scholar and critic, born at Württemberg; best known by his "Gnomon Novi Testamenti," being an invaluable body of short notes on the New Testament; devoted himself to the critical study of the text of the Greek Testament (1687-1752).

BENIGUE'LA, a fertile Portuguese territory in W. Africa, S. of Angola, with considerable mineral wealth; has sunk in importance since the suppression of the slave-trade.

BENICIA, the former capital of California, 30 m. NE. of San Francisco; has a commodious harbour and a U.S. arsenal.

BENI-HASSAN, a village in Middle Egypt, on the right bank of the Nile, above Minieh, with remarkable catacombs that have been excavated.

BENI-ISRAEL (i.e. Sons of Israel), a remarkable people, few in number, of Jewish type and customs, in the Bombay Presidency, who have existed there quite isolated for at least 1000 years, with a language of their own, and even some literature; they do not mingle with the Jews, but they practise similar religious observances.

BENIN, a densely populated and fertile country in W. Africa, between the Niger and Dahomey, with a city and river of the name; forms part of what was once a powerful kingdom; was captured by the British in 1897; yields palm-oil, rice, maize, sugar, cotton, and tobacco.

BENI-SOU'EF, a town in Middle Egypt, on the right bank of the Nile, 70 m. above Cairo; a centre of trade, with cotton-mills and quarries of alabaster.

BENJAMIN, Jacob's youngest son, by Rachel, the head of one of the twelve tribes, who were settled in a small fertile territory between Ephraim and Judah; the tribe to which St. Paul belonged.

BENNET, ENOCH ARNOLD, British novelist and playwright. Born near Hanley, he made the Potteries the scene of a number of his books, which he started to write after studying law. "Anna of the Five Towns" was his first success. In 1902, since when his output has been prolific. Wrote the play "Milestones" in collaboration with Edward Knoblauch. For some years he lived in France, and the period obviously influenced his style (1867-).

BENNETT, JAMES GORDON, an American journalist, born at Keith, Scotland; trained for the Catholic priesthood; emigrated, a poor lad of 19, to America, got employment in a printing-office in Boston as proof-reader; started the New York Herald in 1835 at a low price as both proprietor and editor, an enterprise which brought him great wealth and the success he aimed at (1795-1872).

BENNETT, JAMES GORDON, son of preceding, conductor of the Herald; sent Stanley out to Africa, and supplied the funds. He founded the balloon race named after him in 1899 (1841-1918).

BENNETT, SIR WILLIAM STERNDAL, an English musical composer and pianist, born at Sheffield, whose musical genius recommended him to Mendelssohn and Schumann; became professor of Music in Cambridge, and conductor of the Philharmonic Concerts; was president of the Royal Academy of Music (1816-1875).

BENNETT, WILLIAM, a High-Churchman, celebrated for having provoked the decision that the doctrine of the Real Presence is a dogma not inconsistent with the creed of the Church of England (1804-1886).

BENNINGSEN, COUNT, a Russian general, born at Brunswick; entered the Russian service under Catherine II.; was commander-in-chief at Eylau, fought at Borodino, and victoriously at Leipzig; he died at Hanover, whither he had retired on failure of his health (1745-1826).

BENSON, ARTHUR CHRISTOPHER, British author. Son of Archbishop Benson (below); he was educated at Eton and Cambridge, returned to the former to teach, and later to Cambridge as a don and Master of Magdalene. He has published literary criticism, biographies, essays, novels, and poems (1862-).

- BENSON, EDWARD FREDERIC, British novelist brother of the preceding. Educated at Marlborough and Cambridge, he achieved fame with his "Dodo" in 1893. Among his later work "The Luck of the Valls" is best known (1897-).
- BENSON, EDWARD WHITE, Archbishop of Canterbury. After leaving Cambridge he became a master at Rugby and the headmaster of Wellington; was made Bishop of Truro in 1877, where he started the building of the present cathedral; succeeded Taft as Archbishop of Canterbury, and took a prominent part in the trial of Dr. King, Bishop of Lincoln, on charges of ritual (1829-1896).
- BENSON, SIR FRANK ROBERT, actor-manager, educated at Winchester and Oxford; founded repertoire company bearing his name; directed many Shakespearean Festivals at Stratford-on-Avon (1858-).
- BENT, JAMES THEODORE, African traveller and author; explored the ruins of Zimbabwe; later visited Arabia (1852-1897).
- BENTHAM, GEORGE, botanist, born near Plymouth, nephew of Jeremy Bentham and editor of his works; an authority on the British flora. His greatest work was "Genera Plantarum," which took 20 years to write, in conjunction with Sir Joseph Hooker (q.v.) (1800-1884).
- BENTHAM, JEREMY, a writer on jurisprudence and ethics, born in London; bred to the legal profession, but never practised it; spent his life in the study of the theory of law and government, his leading principle on both these subjects being utilitarianism, or what is called the greatest happiness principle, as the advocate of which he is chiefly remembered—a principle against which Carlyle never ceased to protest (1748-1832).
- BENTINCK, LORD GEORGE, statesman and sportsman, a member of the Portland family; entered Parliament as a Whig, turned Conservative on the passing of the Reform Bill of 1832; served under Sir Robert Peel; assumed the leadership of the Party as a Protectionist when Sir Robert Peel became a Free-trader; was a great patron of the Turf; the memory of him owes something to the memoir of his life by Lord Beaconsfield (1802-1848).
- BENTINCK, LORD WILLIAM HENRY CAVENDISH, Indian statesman, governor of Madras in 1806, but recalled for an error which led to the mutiny at Vellore; but was in 1827 appointed governor-general of India, which he governed wisely, abolishing many evils, such as Thuggism and Suttee, and effecting many beneficent reforms. Macaulay held office under him. He returned to England in 1836, became member for Glasgow in 1837, and died before he made any mark on home politics (1774-1859).
- BENTINCK, WILLIAM, a distinguished statesman, first Earl of Portland, born in Holland; a favourite, friend, and adviser of William III., whom he accompanied to England, and who bestowed on him for his services great honours and large domains, which provoked ill-will against him; retired to Holland after the king died, but returned afterwards (1649-1709).
- BENTIVOGLIO, an Italian family of princely rank, long supreme in Bologna; B., Guido, cardinal, though a disciple of Galileo, was one of the Inquisitors-General who signed his condemnation (1579-1641).
- BENTLEY, RICHARD, scholar and philologist, born in Yorkshire; from the first devoted to ancient, especially classical, learning; rose to eminence as an authority on literary criticism, his "Dissertation upon the Epistles of Phalaris," which he proved to be a forgery, commending him to the regard and esteem of all the scholars of Europe, a work which may be said to have inaugurated a new era in literary historical criticism (1662-1742).
- BENUE, an affluent of the Niger, 300 m. long, falling into it 230 m. up, described by Dr. Barth and explored by Dr. Baikie; it offers great facilities for the prosecution of commerce.
- BENVENUTO, known as TISIO DA GAROFALO, Italian painter whose works are in several national galleries (1481-1559).
- BENYOWSKY, COUNT, a Hungarian, fought with the Poles against Russia; taken prisoner; was exiled to Kamchatka; escaped with the governor's daughter; came to France; sent out to Madagascar; was elected king by the natives; fell in battle against the French (1741-1786).
- BENZ, KARL, German engineer, built a motor-car in 1885 driven by benzine, which attained a speed of 15 m. an hour. His work formed the basis of many later improvements in internal combustion engines (1844-).
- BENZALDEHYDE, an aromatic compound prepared from bitter almonds, to which it gives the characteristic smell. It can be prepared from benzene or toluene on the industrial scale, and is used as a flavouring essence for "almond paste."
- BENZENE, or benzol, a hydrocarbon obtained by the destructive distillation of coal-tar, used as a substitute for turpentine and for dissolving grease; it is the basis of many compounds used in the dye industry.
- BENZINE, gasolene, or benzoline, is obtained from petroleum and is used as motor spirit and for cleaning purposes. It is mainly composed of the paraffin hydrocarbons hexane, heptane, and octane.
- BENZOLIN, a fragrant concrete resinous juice flowing from a styrax-tree of Sumatra, used as a cosmetic and burnt as incense.
- BENZOL, the commercial name for benzene (q.v.).
- BENZOLE, the name given to a motor spirit, similar to petrol, obtained from the by-products of carbonisation in gasworks and coke ovens.
- BENZOLINE. See BENZINE.
- BENZYL CHLORIDE, a liquid with an irritating smell obtained by passing chlorine through boiling toluene. It was used in the Great War in tear shells.
- BEOWULF, an old Anglo-Saxon romance of the 7th century consisting of 8356 short alliterative lines, and the oldest extant in the language, recording the exploits of a mythical hero of the name, who wrestled Hercules-wise, at the cost of his life, with first a formidable monster and then a dragon that had to be exterminated or tamed into submission before the race to which the champion belonged could live with safety on the soil.
- BERANGER, PIERRE JEAN DE, a celebrated French song-writer, born at Paris, of the lower section of the middle class, and the first of his countrymen who in that department rose to the high level of a true lyric poet; his first struggles with fortune were a failure, but Lucien Bonaparte took him up, and under royal patronage a career was opened up for him; in 1815 appeared as an author, and the sensation created was immense, for the songs were not mere personal effusions, but in stirring accord with, and helped to influence, the great passion of the nation at the time; was, as a Republican—which brought him into trouble with the Bourbons—a great admirer of Napoleon as an incarnation of the national spirit, and contributed not a little to the elevation of his nephew to the throne, though he declined all patronage at his hands, refusing all honours and appointments; has been compared with Burns, but he lacked both the fire and the humour of the Scottish poet. "His poetical works," says Professor Saintebeury, "consist entirely of chansons political, amatory, bacchanalian, satirical, philosophical after a fashion, and of almost every other complexion that the song can possibly take" (1780-1857).
- BERAR, one of the central provinces of India, E. of Bombay; known as the Hyderabad Assigned Districts; transferred to Great Britain 1801; it occupies a fertile, well-watered valley, and yields large quantities of grain, and especially cotton.
- BERAT, FREDERIC, a French poet and composer, author of a great number of popular songs (1800-1858).
- BERBER, native language spoken in the mountainous parts of Barbary.
- BERBER, a town in Nubia, on the Nile, occupied by the English; starting-point of caravans for the Red Sea; railways run to Suakin, Cairo and Khartoum.
- BER-BERAH, the seaport of Somaliland, on the Gulf of Aden, under Great Britain, with an annual fair lasting several months that brings together at times as many as 30,000 people.
- BERBERS, a race aboriginal to Barbary and N.

Africa, predominant in Algeria and Morocco, and including the Kabyles and Tuaregs of the Sahara; of a proud and unruly temper; though different from the Arab race, are of the same religion.

BERBICE, the eastern division of British Guiana; produces sugar, cocoa, tobacco, and timber.

BERBRUGGER, a French archaeologist and philologist; wrote on Algiers, its history and monuments (1801-1869).

BERCHTA, a German female bogey, the name signifying "the white lady," supposed to have dominion over enchantresses, elves, dwarfs, and held up as a terror before bad children. See BERTHA.

BERCY, a commune on the right bank of the Seine, outside Paris, included in it since 1860; is the great mart for wines and brandies.

BEREANS, a sect formed by John Barclay (q.v.) in 1778, who regard the Bible as the one exclusive revelation of God.

BERENGER, or BERENGARIUS OF TOURS, a distinguished theologian, born at Tours; held an ecclesiastical office there, and was made afterwards archdeacon of Angers; ventured to deny the doctrine of transubstantiation, for which denial he was condemned by successive councils of the Church; he was compelled more than once publicly to retract, though he so often and openly recalled his retraction that the pope, Gregory VII., notwithstanding the opposition of the orthodox, deemed it prudent at length to let him alone. After this he ceased to trouble the Church, and retired to an island on the Loire, where he gave himself up to quiet meditation and prayer (908-1088).

BERENGER I., king of Italy, grandson of Louis the Débonnaire, an able general; provoked the jealousy of the nobles, who dreaded the abridgment of their rights, which led to his assassination at their hands in 924. B. II., king of Italy, grandson of the preceding, was dethroned twice by the German Emperor Otto, who sent him a prisoner to Bamberg, where he died, 966.

BERENICE, a Jewish widow, daughter of Herod Agrippa, with whom Titus was fascinated, and whom he would have taken to wife, had not the Roman populace protested, from their anti-Jewish prejudice, against it. The name was a common one among Egyptian as well as Jewish princesses, a famous Berenice being the queen of Ptolemy III., who, from a legend concerning the dedication of her hair to the war-gods, has given her name to the constellation "Coma Berenices," the seven stars near the tail of Leo.

BERESFORD, WILLIAM CARE, VISCOUNT, an English general, natural son of the first Marquis of Waterford; distinguished himself in many a military enterprise, and particularly in the Peninsular war, for which he was made a peer; he was a member of the Wellington administration, and master-general of the ordnance (1770-1854).

BERESNA, a Russian river, affluent of the Dniester, into which it falls after a course of 350 m.; it is serviceable as a water conveyance for large rafts of timber to the open sea, and is memorable for the disastrous passage of the French in their retreat from Moscow in 1812.

BEREZOV, a town in Siberia, in the government of Tobolsk; a place of banishment for political exiles.

BERG, DUCHY OF, on right bank of the Rhine, between Düsseldorf and Cologne, now part of Prussia; Murat was grand-duke of it by Napoleon's appointment when previously it had been ceded to France.

BERGAMO, a Lombard town and episcopal see, in a province of the same name, and 34 m. N.E. of Milan, with a large annual fair in August, the largest in Italy; has grindstone quarries in the neighbourhood.

BERGASSE, French juriconsult, born at Lyons; celebrated for his quarrel with Beaumarchais; author of an "Essay on Property" (1750-1832).

BERGEN, the old capital of Norway, on a fiord of the same, open to the Gulf Stream, and never frozen; the town, consisting of wooden houses, is built on a slope on which the streets reach down to the sea, and has a picturesque appearance; the trade, which is considerable, is in fish and fish products; manufactures gloves, porcelain, leather, &c.; the seat of a bishop, and has a cathedral; is the birthplace of Ole Bull, the violinist, and Grieg, the composer.

BERGEN-OP-ZOOM, a town in N. Brabant, once a strong fortified place, and much coveted and frequently contested for by reason of its commanding situation; has a large trade in anchovies.

BERGENROTH, GUSTAV ADOLPH, historian, born in Prussia; held a State office, but was dismissed and exiled because of his sympathy with the revolutionary movement of 1848; came to England to collect materials for a history of the Tudors; examined in Simons, in Spain, under great privations, papers on the period in the public archives; made of these a collection and published it in 1862-1868, under the title of "Calendar of Letters, Despatches, &c., relating to Negotiations between England and Spain" (1818-1869).

BERGERAC, a manufacturing town in France, 60 m. E. of Bordeaux, celebrated for its wines; it was a Huguenot centre, and suffered greatly in consequence.

BERGERAC, SAVINIEN CYRANO DE, an eccentric man with comic power, a Gascon by birth; wrote a tragedy and a comedy; his best work a fiction entitled "Histoire Comique des États et Empires de la Lune et du Soleil"; a good swordsman, fought no end of duels in vindication, it is said, of his preposterously large nose, and is thereby the subject of a play by Rostand, the French dramatist (1619-1655).

BERGHAUS, HEINRICH, a geographer of note, born at Cleves; served in both the French and Prussian armies as an engineer, and was professor of mathematics at Berlin; his "Physical Atlas" is well known (1797-1884); uncle of Hermann Berghaus, an eminent cartographer (1829-1890).

BERGHEM, a celebrated landscape-painter of the Dutch school, born at Haarlem (1624-1683).

BERGMAN, TORBERN OLOF, a Swedish chemist, studied under Linnaeus, and became professor of Chemistry at Upsala; discovered oxalic acid; was the first to arrange and classify minerals on a chemical basis (1735-1784).

BERGSON, HENRI, French philosopher. Of Jewish descent, he early studied metaphysics and became professor of Philosophy at the College of France. His system regards life as the ultimate reality, and his ideas of creative evolution are reflected in the writings of Bernard Shaw (1859-).

BERI, a town in the Punjab, 40 m. NW. of Delhi; is a trading centre.

BERI-BERI, a disease common in the East due to a diet deficient in certain vitamins (q.v.). It is often due to an absence of fresh vegetables or to a diet mainly composed of rice with the husks removed.

BERKELEY, a town in Gloucestershire, famous for its cattle.

BERKELEY, GEORGE, bishop of Cloyne, born in Kilkenny; a philanthropic man, who indulged in a self-sacrificing spirit, practical schemes for the good of humanity, which failed, but the interest in whom has for long centred, and still centres, in his philosophic teaching, his own interest in which was that it contributed to clear up our idea of God and consolidate our faith in Him; it is known in philosophy as Idealism, but it must be understood that his idealism is not, as it was absurdly conceived to be, a denial of the existence of matter, but is an assertion of the doctrine that the universe, with every particular in it, as man sees it and knows it, is not the creation of matter but the creation of mind, and a reflex of the Eternal Reason that creates and dwells in both it and him; for as Dr. Stirling says, "the object can only be known in the subject, and therefore is subjective, and if subjective, ideal." The outer, as regards our knowledge of it, is within; such is Berkeley's fundamental philosophical principle, and it is a principle radical to the whole recent philosophy of Europe (1684-1753).

BERKSHIRE, a midland county of England, with a fertile, well-cultivated soil on a chalk bottom, in the upper valley of the Thames, one of the smallest but most beautiful counties in the country. In the E. part of it is Windsor Forest, and in the SE. Bagshot Heath. It is famous for its breed of pigs. BERLICHINGEN, GÖTZ VON, surnamed "The Iron land," a brave but turbulent noble of Germany, of the 15th and 16th centuries, the story of whose life was dramatised by Goethe. "to save," as he said, "the memory of a brave man from darkness," and translated from the German by Sir Walter Scott.

BERLIN, capital of Prussia and Germany; stands on the Spree, in a flat, sandy plain, 177 m. by rail SE. of Hamburg. The old royal and imperial palaces, the great library, the university, national gallery and museums, and the arsenal are all near the centre of the city. There are schools of science, art, agriculture, and mining; technical and military academies; a cathedral and some old churches; zoological and botanical gardens. Its position between the Baltic and North Seas, the Spree, and the numerous canals and railways which converge on it, render it a most important commercial centre; its staple trade is in grain, cattle, spirits, and wool. Manufactures are extensive and very varied; the chief are woollens, machinery, bronze ware, drapery goods, and beer.

BERLIN DECREE, a decree of Napoleon of Nov. 21, 1806, declaring Britain in a state of blockade and vessels trading with it liable to capture.

BERLIOZ, HECTOR, a celebrated musical composer and critic, born near Grenoble, in the dep. of Isere, France; went to study medicine in Paris; abandoned it for music, to which he devoted his life. His best known works are the "Symphonie Fantastique," "Romeo and Juliet," and the "Damnation of Faust"; the "Symphonie," which he produced while he was yet but a student at the Conservatoire in Paris, so struck Paganini that the violinist presented him with 20,000 francs (1803-1869).

BER MONDSEY, a busy SE. suburb of London, on the S. bank of the Thames, well known for its tanneries and its civic park.

BERMOO THES, the Bermudas.

BERMU DAS, a group of 400 coral islands (20 inhabited) in mid-Atlantic, 677 m. SE. of New York; have a delightful temperate climate and are a popular health resort for Americans. They produce a fine arrowroot and export onions. They are held by Britain as a valuable naval station, and are provided with docks and fortifications. Of the population more than two-thirds are negroes, survivors of the old slave days.

BERNADOTTE, JEAN BAPTISTE JULES, a marshal of France, born at Pau; rose from the ranks, distinguished himself in the wars of the Revolution and the Empire, though between him and Napoleon there was constant distrust; adopted by Charles XIII., king of Sweden; joined the Allies as a naturalised Swede in the war against France in alliance with Russia; became king of Sweden himself under the title of Charles XIV., to the material welfare, as it proved, of his adopted country (1764-1844).

BERNARD, CLAUDE, a distinguished French physiologist, born at St. Julien, he studied at Paris; was Magendie's assistant and successor in the College of France; discovered that the function of the pancreas is the digestion of ingested fats, that of the liver the transformation into sugar of certain elements in the blood, and that there are nervous centres in the body which act independently of the great cerebro-spinal centre (1813-1878).

BERNARD, ST., abbot of Clairvaux, born at Fontaines, in Burgundy; pronounced one of the grandest figures in the church militant; studied in Paris, entered the monastery of Cîteaux, founded in 1115 a monastery at Clairvaux, in Champagne; drew around him disciples who rose to eminence as soldiers of the cross; prepared the statutes for the Knights-Templar; defeated Abelard in public debate, and procured his condemnation; founded 160 monasteries; awoke Europe to a second crusade; dealt death-blows all round to numerous heretics, and declined all honours to himself, content if he could only awaken some divine passion in other men; represented in art as accompanied by a white dog, or as contemplating an apparition of the Virgin and the Child, or as bearing the implements of Christ's passion (1090-1153). Festival, Aug. 20.

BERNARD OF MENTHON, an ecclesiastic, founder of the monasteries of the Great and the Little St. Bernard, in the passes of the Alps (923-1008). Festival, June 15.

BERNARD OF MORLAIX, a monk of Cluny, of the 12th century; wrote a poem entitled "De Contemptu Mundi," translated by Dr. Neale, including "Jerusalem the Golden."

BERNARDIN DE SAINT-PIERRE—See ST. PIERRE.

BERNARDINE, ST., OF SIENA, born at Massa Carrara in Italy, of noble family; founder of the Observantines, a branch, and restoration on strict lines, of the Franciscan order; established 300 monasteries of the said branch; his works, written in a mystical vein, fill five folio vols. (1380-1444).

BERNAUER, AGNES, wife of Duke Albrecht of Bavaria, whom his father, displeased at the marriage, convicted of sorcery and drowned in the Danube in 1435.

BERNE, a fine Swiss town on the Aar, which almost surrounds it. In a populous canton of the same name; since 1848 the capital of the Swiss Confederation; commands a magnificent view of the Bernese Alps; a busy trading and manufacturing city. It is famous for its bear pit.

BERNERS, JOHN BOURCHIER, LORD, writer or translator of romance; was Chancellor of the Exchequer in 1516, and governor of Calais from 1520; translated Froissart's "Chronicles," and "Huon of Bordeaux" (1487-1533).

BERNERS, JULIANA, to whom is ascribed a treatise on outdoor sports, mainly hunting and fishing, published in 1486, is said to have been prioress of Sopwell nunnery, near St. Albans.

BERNESE ALPS, a chain in the Middle Alps, of which the eastern half is called the Bernese Oberland; they form the watershed between the Aar and the Rhone.

BERNHARD, Duke of Saxe-Weimar, a great German general; distinguished himself on the Protestant side in the Thirty Years' war; fought under the standard of Gustavus Adolphus; held command of the left wing at the battle of Lützen, and completed the victory after the fall of Gustavus; died at Neuburg, as alleged, without sufficient proof, by poison (1600-1639).

BERNHARDT, SARAH, a dramatic artiste, born in Paris, of Jewish descent, but baptised as a Christian; distinguished specially as a tragedienne, her most famous parts having been in "La Danie aux Camellias," "Hernani," "La Tosca," and "L'Aiglon"; displayed abilities qualifying her to shine in other departments of the profession and of art, such as painting and sculpture (1844-1923).

BERNI, FRANCESCO, an Italian poet, born in Tuscany, who excelled in the burlesque, and to whom the Italian as a literary language owes much; remodelled Bolardo's "Orlando Innamorato" in a style surpassing that of the original; gave his name to the type of poetry known as Bernesque (1497-1535).

BERNICA, an ancient British kingdom, afterwards included in Northumbria; founded by King Ida (547-559); it extended from the Tees in the south to the borders of Strathclyde in Scotland.

BERNIER, FRANÇOIS, a French physician and traveller, born at Angers; physician for 12 years to Aurumzebe, the Great Mogul; published "Travels," a work full of interest and a model of exactitude (1625-1688).

BERNIER, THE ABBE, born in Mayenne, France; one of the principal authors of the Concordat; promoted afterwards to be Bishop of Orleans (1762-1806).

BERNI NA, a mountain in the Swiss canton of Grisons, 13,290 ft. high, remarkable for its extensive glaciers.

BERNINI, GIOVANNI LORENZO, an Italian painter, sculptor, and architect, born at Naples; produced his "Apollo and Daphne" at eighteen, his masterpiece; was architect to the Pope, and designed the colonnade of St. Peter's; he died wealthy (1598-1680).

BERNOULLI, name of a Swiss family of mathematicians, born at Basel, though of Dutch origin. The most celebrated is Jean (1667-1748), professor at Basel, who discovered the exponential calculus and the method of integrating rational functions, as well as the line of swiftest descent. Jacques (1654-1705) is remembered for his applications of the - calculus to various problems. Several other members of the family were distinguished mathematicians.

- BERNSTORFF, COUNT, a celebrated statesman, diplomatist, and philanthropist of Denmark; called the Danish Oracle by Frederick the Great; founded an Agricultural Society and a hospital at Copenhagen, and obtained the emancipation of the serfs (1711-1772).
- BEROSUS, a priest of the temple of Belus in Babylon, who, 3rd century B.C., translated into Greek certain records of Babylonian history, valuable fragments of which are preserved by Josephus and Eusebius; these have been collected and published by W. Richter, in Germany.
- BERRI, an ancient province of France, forms dep. of Indre and Cher, which became crown property in 1100 under Philippe I., and a duchy in 1630, giving title to a succession of French princes.
- BERRI, DUC DE, second son of Charles X. and father of Count de Chambord, a benevolent man; assassinated by a fanatic, Louvel, as he was leaving the Opera House (1778-1830).
- BERRI, DUCHESSE DE, dowager of preceding, distinguished herself by her futile efforts to restore the Bourbon dynasty in the reign of Louis Philippe (1798-1890).
- BERRYER, PIERRE ANTOINE, an eminent French barrister, born at Paris; a red-hot Legitimist, which brought him into trouble; was member of the National Assembly of 1848; inimical to the Second Empire, and openly protested against the coup d'état (1790-1868).
- BERSERKER, a Norse warrior who went into battle unharnessed, whence his name (which means bare of bark or shirt of mail), and was said to have been inspired with such fury as to render him invulnerable and irresistible.
- BERT, PAUL, a French physiologist and statesman, born at Auxerre; was professor of Physiology at Paris; took to politics after the fall of the Empire; Minister of Public Instruction under Gambetta; sent governor to Tonquin; died of fever soon after; wrote a science primer for children entitled "La Première Année d'Enseignement Scientifique" (1833-1886).
- BERTHA, goddess in S. German mythology, of the spinning-wheel principally, and of the household as dependent on it, on behalf of which and its economical management she is often harsh to idle spinners; at her festival thrift is the rule.
- BERTHA, ST., a British princess, wife of Ethelbert, king of Kent; converted him to Christianity.
- BERTHE, "au Grand Pied," (i.e. Long Foot), wife of Pepin the Short, and mother of Charlemagne, so called from her club foot.
- BERTHELIER, a Swiss patriot, an uncompromising enemy of the Duke of Savoy in his ambition to lord it over Geneva.
- BERTHELOT, PIERRE EUGÈNE, a French chemist, born at Paris; professor in the College of France; distinguished for his researches in organic chemistry and his attempt to produce organic compounds; the dyeing trade owes much to his discoveries in the extraction of dyes from coal-tar; he laid the foundation of thermo-chemistry (1827-1907).
- BERTHIER, ALEXANDRE, prince of Wagram and marshal of France, born at Versailles; served with Lafayette in the American war, and rose to distinction in the Revolution; became head of Napoleon's staff, and his companion in all his expeditions; swore fealty to the Bourbons at the restoration of 1814; on Napoleon's return retired with his family to Bamberg; threw himself from a window, maddened at the sight of Russian troops marching past to the French frontier (1758-1815).
- BERTHOLET, COUNT, a famous chemist, native of Savoy, to whom we owe the discovery of the bleaching properties of chlorine, the employment of carbon in purifying water, and many improvements in manufactures; became a senator and officer of the Legion of Honour under Napoleon; attached himself to the Bourbons on their return, and was created a peer (1748-1822).
- BERTHON, REV. EDWARD LYON, inventor of the two-bladed marine propeller and of canvas collapsible boats for use in shipwreck (1813-1890).

BERTHOUD, a celebrated clockmaker, native of Switzerland; settled in Paris; invented a marine chronometer to determine the longitude at sea (1727-1807).

- of Paris; comprises measurements of the body, of the fingers, feet, and ears in particular.
- BERTIN, PIERRE, introduced stenography into France, after its invention by Taylor in England (1761-1810).
- BERTIN, ROSE, milliner to Marie Antoinette, famed for her devotion to the ill-fated queen.
- BERTINAZZI, a celebrated actor born at Turin, long a favourite in Paris (1710-1783).
- BERTRAND and RATON, two personages in La Fontaine's fable of the Monkey and the Cat, of whom R. cracks the nut and B. eats it.
- BERTRAND DU GUESCLIN, See DU GUESCLIN.
- BERTRAND, HENRI GRATIEN, COMTE, a French general, and faithful adherent of Napoleon, acquitted himself in all his campaigns to and from Elba, as well as in his exile at St. Helena; conducted his remains back to France in 1840 (1773-1844).
- BERTRAND DE MOLLEVILLE, Minister of Marine under Louis XVI.; a fiery partisan of royalty, surmised the enfant terrible of the monarchy (1744-1818).
- BERTON, PIERRE, French composer of operas (1726-1780). Henri, his son, composed operas; wrote a treatise on harmony (1761-1844).
- BERVILLE, CARDINAL, born at Troyes; founder of the order of Carmelites and of the Congregation of the Oratory (1576-1620).
- BERWICK, JAMES FITZ-JAMES, DUKE OF, a natural son of James II., a naturalised Frenchman; defended the rights of his father; was present with him at the battle of the Boyne; distinguished himself in Spain, where he gained the victory of Almanza; was made marshal of France; fell at the siege of Philippsburg; left "Memoirs" (1670-1734).
- BERWICK, NORTH, a place on the N. shore of the Forth, in Haddingtonshire; a summer resort, especially for the golfing links.
- BERWICK-ON-TWEED, a town on the Scottish side of the Tweed, at its mouth, reckoned since 1885 in Northumberland, though at one time treated as a separate county; of interest from its connection with the Border wars, during which it frequently changed hands, till in 1482 the English became masters of it.
- BERWICKSHIRE, a fertile Scottish county between the Lammermoors, inclusive, and the Tweed; is divided into the Merse, a richly fertile plain in the S., the Lammermoors, hilly and pastoral, dividing the Merse from Mid and East Lothian, and Lauderdale, of hill and dale, along the banks of the Leader; Greenlaw the county town.
- BERZELIUS, JOHAN JAKOB, BARON, a celebrated Swedish chemist, one of the creators of modern chemistry; instituted the chemical notation by symbols based on the notion of equivalents; determined the equivalents of a great number of simple bodies, such as cerium and selenium; discovered selenium, and thorium and zirconium, and shared with Davy the honour of propounding the electro-chemical theory; he ranks next to Lavoisier as a man of science in Sweden (1779-1848).
- BESANCON, capital of the dep. of Doubs, in France; a very strong place fortified by Vauban; seat of an archbishopric; abounds in relics of Roman and mediæval times; watchmaking a staple industry, employing some 15,000 of the inhabitants; manufactures also porcelain and carpets.
- BESANT, MRS. ANNE, nee WOOD, born in London; of Irish descent; married to an English clergyman, from whom she was legally separated; took a keen interest in social questions and secularism; drifted into theosophy, of which she became an active propagandist (1847-).
- BESANT, SIR WALTER, a man of letters, born at Portsmouth; eminent chiefly as a novelist of a healthily realistic type; wrote a number of novels, some jointly with James Rice, of which "The Golden Butterfly," "Ready-Money Mortiboy," and "Dorothy Foster" are best known. One of his books, "All Sorts and Conditions of Men," Utopian in character, was the cause of the People's Palace being built in the East End of London. He produced several valuable volumes on the history of London, and was the author of "French Humourists." As champion of the cause of Authors versus Publishers he founded the Society of Authors in 1884 (1836-1901).

BESSEVAL, BARON, a Swiss, commandant of Paris under Louis XVI.; a royalist stunned into a state of helpless dismay at the first outbreak of the Revolution in Paris; could do nothing in the face of it but run for his life (1722-1791).

BESIKA BAY, a bay on the Asiatic coast, near the mouth of the Dardanelles.

BESME, a Bohemian in the pay of the Duke of Guise; assassinated Coligny, and was himself killed by Berteneville, a Protestant gentleman, in 1571.

BESSARA'BLA, a province to the SW. of Russia, between the Dniester and the Pruth; a cattle-breeding province; exports cattle, wool, and tallow. In 1918 it was added to Rumania.

BESSARTON, JOHN, cardinal, native of Trebizond; contributed by his zeal in Greek literature to the fall of scholasticism and the revival of letters; tried hard to unite the Churches of the East and the West; joined the latter, and was made cardinal; too much of a Grecian to recommend himself to the popehood, to which he was twice over nearly elevated (1395-1472).

BESSEL, FRIEDRICH WILHELM, a Prussian astronomer of prominent ability, born at Minden; professor of Mathematics at Königsberg, and director of the Observatory; discovered—that was a great achievement—the parallax of the fixed star 61 Cygni; his greatest work, "Fundamenta Astronomiae," on which he spent ten years, a marvel, like all he did, of patient toil and painstaking accuracy (1784-1846).

BESSEMER, SIR HENRY, civil engineer and inventor, born at Charlton, Hert; of his many inventions the chief is the process, named after him, of converting pig-iron into steel at once by blowing a blast of air through the iron while in fusion till everything extraneous is expelled and only a definite quantity of carbon is left in combination, a process which has revolutionized the iron and steel trade all over the world, leading, as has been calculated, to the production of thirty times as much steel as before and at one-fifth of the cost per ton (1813-1898).

BESSIERES, JEAN BAPTISTE, Duke of Istria, marshal of France, born at Languedoc, of humble parentage; rose from the ranks; a friend and one of the ablest officers of Napoleon, and much esteemed by him; distinguished himself in the Italian campaign, in Egypt, and at Marengo; was shot at 10 days before the battle (1768-1818).

BESSUS, a satrap of Bactria under Darius, who assassinated his master after the battle of Arbela, but was delivered over by Alexander to Darius's brother, by whom he was put to death, 328 B.C.

BESTIARY, a name given to a class of medieval books treating of animals, viewed allegorically.

BETA PARTICLES, electrons (e⁻) emitted during certain radioactive changes. They are lighter, faster, and more penetrating than the alpha particles (α⁺); some beta particles have a velocity closely approaching that of light. See RADIOACTIVITY.

BETELGEUSE, a variable giant star of 1st magnitude in constellation Orion.

BETHANY, village on E. of the Mount of Olives, abode of Lazarus and his sisters; the scene of the ascension of Christ.

BETHEL (i.e. house of God), a place 11 m. N. of Jerusalem, scene of Jacob's dream, and famous in the history of the patriarchs.

BETHENCOURT, a Norman baron, in 1425 discovered and conquered the Canaries, and held them as a fief of the crown of Castile.

BETHLEHEM, a village 6 m. S. of Jerusalem, the birthplace of Jesus Christ and King David, with a convent containing the Church of the Nativity; near it is the grotto where St. Jerome translated the Bible into Latin.

BETHLEN-GABOR, prince of Transylvania, assumed the title of king of Hungary; assisted Bohemia in the Thirty Years' war (1580-1599).

BETHNAL GREEN, an eastern suburb of London, a parliamentary borough and populous district.

BETHUNE, a town in the department of Pas-de-Calais, France, which served as a railway centre for the Allies in the Great War. Twice the Germans tried unsuccessfully to capture it, in January, 1915, and April, 1918.

BETTERTON, THOMAS, born at Westminster, a tragic actor and producer, and as such an interpreter of Shakespeare on, it is believed, the traditional lines (1685-1710).

BETTING TAX, a tax on bookmakers' turnover included in Winston Churchill's budget of 1926 and abolished by him in 1929, as it failed to produce the anticipated revenue.

BETTY, W. HENRY, a boy actor, known as the Infant Rucius; answered a fortune; the House of Commons once adjourned to see him act "Hamlet" (1791-1874).

BEULE, CHARLES ERNEST, a French statesman and archaeologist; superintended excavations on the Acropolis of Athens; held office in the National Assembly under Macmahon (1826-1874).

BEUST, COUNT VON, a German statesman, born at Dresden; Minister for Foreign Affairs in Saxony; of strong conservative leanings, friendly to Austria; became Chancellor of the Austro-Hungarian empire; adopted a liberal policy; sympathized with France in the Franco-German war; resigned office in 1871; left "Memoirs" (1809-1888).

BEUTHEN, a manufacturing town in Prussian Silesia, in the centre of a mining district.

BEVERLEY, a Yorkshire manufacturing town, 8 m. NW. of Hull, with a Gothic minster, which contains the tombs of the Percys.

BEVERLEY, JOHN, a learned man, tutor to the Venerable Bede, archbishop of York, and founder of a college for secular priests at Beverley; was one of the most learned men of his time; d. 721.

BEVIS OF SOUTHAMPTON, or HAMPTON, SIR, a famous knight of English medieval romance, which was founded on an older Italian tale of chivalry; a man of gigantic stature, whose marvellous feats are recorded in "Bevis's" "Polydoron."

BEWICK, THOMAS, a distinguished wood-engraver, born in Northumberland, apprenticed to the trade in Newcastle; showed his art first in woodcuts for his "History of Quadrupeds," the success of which led to the publication of his "History of British Birds," in which he established his reputation both as a naturalist, in the truest sense, and an artist (1758-1828).

BEWICK, WILLIAM, a great wood-engraver; did a cartoon from the Elgin Marbles for Goethe (1795-1866).

BEYLE, MARIE HENRI, French critic and novelist, usually known by his pseudonym "De Stendhal" or "Stendhal"; born at Grenoble; wrote in criticism "De l'Amour," and in fiction "Le Charles de Farnes" and "Le Rouge et le Noir"; an ambitious writer and a cynic (1788-1842).

BEYBUR, a port in the Madras presidency, a railway terminus, with coal and iron in the neighbourhood.

BEYROUT, the most flourishing commercial city on the coast of Syria, and the port of Damascus, from which it is distant 55 m.; a very ancient place.

BEZA, THEODORE, a French Protestant theologian, born in Burgundy, of good birth; professor of Greek at Lausanne; deputed from Germany to intercede for the Huguenots in France, persuaded the king of Navarre to favour the Protestants; settled in Geneva, became the friend and successor of Calvin; wrote a book, "De Hereticis a Civili Magistratu Puniendis," in which he justified the burning of Servetus, and a "History of the Reformed Churches" in France (1519-1605).

BEZANTS, Byzantine gold and silver coins of varying weight and value, introduced by the Crusaders into England, where they were current till the time of Edward III.

BEZIERS, a manufacturing town in the dep. of Hérault, 49 m. SW. of Montpellier; manufactures silk fabrics and confectionery.

BHAGALPUR, a town in Bengal, on the right bank of the Ganges, 205 m. NW. of Calcutta; chief product of district indigo.

BHAGAVAD GITA (i.e. Song of Krishna), a poem introduced into the Mahābhārata, divided into three sections, and each section into six chapters, called Upanishads; being a series of mystical lectures addressed by Krishna to his royal pupil Arjuna on the eve of a battle, from which he shrunk, as it was with his own kindred; the whole conceived from the point of view or belief, calculated to allay the scruples of Arjuna, which regards the extinction of existence as absorption in the Deity.

BEHMO, a town in Burmah, the chief centre of trade with China, conducted mainly by Chinese, and a military station, only 40 m. from the Chinese frontier.

BEARTUR, a town in a native state of the name in Rajputana, yielding wheat, maize, cotton, sugar, with quarries of building stone; 80 m. W. of Agra; carries on an industry in the manufacture of chowries.

BEARTRIHARI, Indian author of apothegms, who appears to have lived in the 11th century B.C., and to have been of royal rank.

BEHLS, an aboriginal pro-Aryan race of Central India, living in the hilly districts and still untrained to settled life; number 750,000.

BEHOD-PA, name given to the aborigines of Tibet, and applied by the Hindus to all the Tibetan peoples.

BEOPAL, a well-governed native state in Central India, under British protection, with a capital city of the same name; under a government that has been always friendly to Britain.

BEUTAN, an independent state in the Eastern Himalayas, with magnificent scenery; subsidised by Britain; has a government like that of Tibet, with religion the same, though the people are at a low stage of civilisation; the country exports horses, musk, and salt.

BEAUFRA, BIGHT OF, a large bay in the Gulf of Guinea, in W. Africa; includes several islands, and resolves into it the waters of the Calabar rivers.

BEAUFITZ, a bathing-place on the Bay of Biscay, 6 m. SW. of Bayonne; became a place of fashionable resort by the visits of the Empress Eugénie.

BEAS, one of the seven wise men of Greece, born at Priene, in Ionia; lived in the 6th century B.C.; many wise sayings are ascribed to him; was distinguished for his indifference to possessions.

BEAS BAY, a bay off the coast of China, infested with pirates.

BIBLE, THE (i.e. the Book par excellence, and not so much a book as a library of books), a collection of sacred writings divided into two parts, the Old Testament and the New; the Old, written in Hebrew, comprehending three groups of books, the Pentateuch, the Prophets, and the Hagiographa, bearing on the religion, the history, the institutions, and the manners of the Jews; and the New, written in Greek, comprehending the Four Gospels, the Acts of the Apostles, and the Epistles. The Old Testament was translated into Greek at Alexandria by 72 Jews, 280 B.C., and is known as the Septuagint; and the whole book, Old and New, was translated into Latin in a grotto near Bethlehem by St. Jerome, A.D. 385-404, and is known as the Vulgate, after which the two came to be regarded by the Church as of equal divine authority and as sections of one book. It may be permitted to note that the Bible is written throughout, not in a speculative or a scientific, but a spiritual interest, and that its final aim is to guide men in the way of life. The spirit in which it is composed is the spirit of conviction; its essence, both in the root of it and the fruit of it, is faith, and that primarily in a moral power above, and ultimately a moral principle within, both equally divine. The one principle of the book is that loyalty to the divine commands is the one foundation of all well-being, individual and social.

BIBLE CHRISTIANS, a sect of Methodism founded in 1815 in Devon by William O'Bryan, and merged in 1907 with the United Methodists.

BIBLE SOCIETY, THE BRITISH AND FOREIGN, founded in 1803, with George Borrow (q.v.) as one of its agents.

BIBLES WITH NICKNAMES, so called from printers' errors in the pages. The best known are the Vinegar Bible, which has "vinegar" for "vineyard," the Wicked Bible, which omits the "not" from the Seventh Commandment, and the Breeches Bible, which applies the word to part of a woman's dress.

BIBLIA PAUPERUM (i.e. Bible of the Poor), a book consisting of some 50 leaves, with pictures of scenes in the Life of Christ, and explanatory inscriptions in Latin verse, printed, from wooden blocks, in the 15th century, before the invention of printing by movable types.

BIOESTER, a market town in Oxfordshire 12 m. N.E. of Oxford. Cattle fairs are held here, and the manufactures include beer, leather, and rope. There are remains of a 12th-century abbey.

BIOETRE, a hospital, originally a Carthusian monastery, in the S. side of Paris, with a commanding view of the Seine and the city; named after an archbishop of Winchester; since used for old soldiers, as a prison, and now for confined lunatics.

BICHAT, MARIE FRANÇOIS KAVIER, an eminent French anatomist and physiologist; physician to the Hôtel-Dieu, Paris; one of the first to resolve the structure of the human body into, as "Sartor" has it, "cellular, vascular, and muscular tissues"; his great work "Anatomie Générale appliquée à la Physiologie et à la Médecine"; died at 31 (1771-1802).

BICKERSTAFF, ISAAC, the pen-name adopted by Swift and Steele in many of their writings.

BICKERSTETH, EDWARD, English clergyman; author of several evangelical works, and one of the founders of the Evangelical Alliance (1785-1850).

BICKERTON, SIR RICHARD, admiral, served in several naval engagements, and died commander-in-chief at Plymouth (1759-1832).

BICYCLES, first used about 1800, feet being pushed against the ground to propel them. The "boneshaker" came in 1865, and the "penny-farthing" about 1880, types which were followed by the "safety bicycle" with two wheels of the same size. Pneumatic tyres and free wheels were added later.

BIDDERY WARE, ware of tin, copper, lead, and zinc, made at Bidar, in India.

BIDDING PRAYER, an exhortation to prayer in some special reference, followed by the Lord's Prayer, in which the congregation joins.

BIDDLE, JOHN, Socinian writer in the time of Charles I. and the Commonwealth; much persecuted for his belief, and was imprisoned, but released by Cromwell; regarded as the founder of English Unitarianism; author of a "Confession of Faith concerning the Holy Trinity" (1615-1662).

BIDPAL, or FILPAL, the presumed author of a collection of Hindu fables of ancient date, in extensive circulation over the East, and widely translated.

BIELLA'S COMET, discovered in 1826 by Biella, an Austrian officer, was found to have a period of 6½ years. On its appearance in January, 1846, it was found to have divided into two parts, which were farther apart when the comet was next observed in 1852. It was not visible in 1859 or 1866, but in 1872, at the time when the comet was expected (Nov. 10), an unprecedented shower of meteors fell upon the earth. Biella's comet had disintegrated and the earth had passed through the remains.

BIELEFELD, a manufacturing town in Westphalia, with a large trade in linen, and the centre of the trade.

BIRLU'KA, with its twin peaks, highest of the Altai Mountains, 11,100 ft.

BIENNE, LAKE OF, in the Swiss canton of Berne; the Aar is led into it when in flood, so as to prevent inundation below; on the shores of it are remains of lake-dwellings, and an island in it, St. Pierre, the retreat of Rousseau in 1765.

BIFROST, a bridge in the Norse mythology stretching from heaven to earth, of firm solidity and exquisite workmanship, represented in the rainbow, of which the colours are the reflections of the precious stones.

BIGELOW, ERASTUS BRIGHAM, American inventor of weaving machines, born in Massachusetts (1814-1879).

BIGELOW, POULTNEY, American author; wrote "The Borderland of Czar and Kaiser," and "White Man's Africa"; a student of German affairs (1855-).

BIG-ENDIANS, a name given to the Catholics, as Little-endians is the name given to the Protestants.

- In the imaginary kingdom of Lilliput, in Swift's "Gulliver's Travels," of which the former are regarded as heretics by the latter because they break their eggs at the big end.
- BIOGARR, a town in Lanarkshire, birthplace of Dr. John Brown and of the Gladstone ancestry.
- BIGLOW, imaginary author of poems in the Yankee dialect, written by James Russell Lowell.
- BIJAPUR, city in the presidency of Bombay, once the capital of an extensive kingdom, now deserted, but with remains of its former greatness.
- BILBAO, capital of the Basque prov. of Biscay, in Spain; a commercial city of ancient date, famous at one time for its steel, specially in Queen Elizabeth's time, when a rapier was called a "bilbo."
- BILDERDIJK, WILLEM, Dutch poet, born at Amsterdam (1756-1831).
- BILE, a fluid secreted from the blood by the liver to aid in digestion, the secretion of which is most active after food.
- BILLAUD-VARENNE, JEAN NICOLAS, "a grim, resolute, unrepentant" member of the Jacobin Club; egged on the mob during the September massacres in the name of liberty; was president of the Convention; assisted at the fall of Robespierre, but could not avert his own; was deported to Ruffinham, and content to die there rather than return to France, which Bonaparte made him free to do; died at Port-au-Prince (1756-1819).
- BILLAUT, ADAM, the carpenter poet, called "Maitre Adam," born at Nevers, and designated "Virgile au Rabot" (a carpenter's plane); d. 1662.
- BILLIARDS, a game known in England as long ago as the 16th century (cf. "Antony and Cleopatra," Act 2, Sc. v.). It is believed to have been invented by a Spaniard, and has grown rapidly in favour since the middle of last century. J. Roberts, W. Cook, Mitchell, C. Dawson, Diggle, Stevenson, Inman, Reece, Davis, W. Smith, and Newman have been some of the leading exponents of the game in this country, to whom must be added W. Lindrum, the Australian champion.
- BILLINGS, ROBERT WILLIAM, architect, born in London; delineator of old historical buildings; his great work "Baronial and Ecclesiastical Antiquities of Scotland," richly illustrated; was engaged in the restoration of old buildings, as well as delineating them (1813-1874).
- BILLINGSGATE, a fish-market in London, below London Bridge; also a name given to low, coarse language indulged in there.
- BILLINGTON, ELIZABETH, nee WEICHSEL, a celebrated singer, born in London, of German descent; kept up her celebrity to the last; died at Venice in 1817.
- BILNEY, THOMAS, martyr, born in Norfolk, a priest who adopted the reformed doctrine; was twice arraigned, and released on promise not to preach, but could not refrain, and was at last burned as a heretic in 1531.
- BIMINI, a fabulous island with a fountain possessed of the virtue of restoring youth.
- BINARY, or DOUBLE, STARS, were first studied by Sir Wm. Herschel, 1738-1822 (q.v.). These systems consist of one star revolving about another, giving rise in some cases to a variation in the apparent brightness. Though many of the binaries reveal their double nature in a powerful telescope, others are only identified by the spectroscope or by the variation in their brightness. Data obtained from the observation of double stars enable us to calculate their masses.
- BINET, a French litterateur, translator of Horace and Virgil (1732-1812).
- BINGEN, a manufacturing and trading town on the left bank of the Rhine, in Grand-Duchy of Hesse Darmstadt, opposite which is the tower associated with the myth of Bishop Hatto (q.v.).
- BINGHAM, JOSEPH, an English divine, born at Wakefield; author of "Origines Ecclesiasticæ," a laborious and learned work; lost his all in the South-Sea Scheme and died (1668-1723).
- BINTON, LAURENCE, poet. He showed early gifts by winning the Newdigate Prize at Oxford, and then worked as an assistant in the British Museum. Besides many war poems he wrote "The Death of Adam." His line "They shall grow not old as we
- that are left grow old," is quoted on hundreds of war memorials (1869-).
- BIOCHEMISTRY, the study of the chemical reactions involved in the changes occurring in living plants and animals.
- BIOGENESIS, name of the theory that derives life from life, and opposed to Abiogenesis (q.v.).
- BIOLOGY, the science of life in a purely physical reference, or of life in organised bodies generally, including that of plants, in its varied forms and through its successive stages.
- BION, a Greek pastoral poet of 3rd century B.C., born at Smyrna; a contemporary of Theocritus; settled in Sicily; was poisoned, it is said, by a rival; little of his poetry survives.
- BIOT, JEAN BAPTISTE, an eminent French mathematician, astronomer, and physicist, born at Paris; professor of Physics in the College of France; took part in measuring an arc of the meridian along with Arago; made observations on the polarisation of light by liquids such as turpentine and solutions of sugar and tartaric acid, and contributed numerous memoirs to scientific journals; wrote works on astronomy (1774-1862).
- BIRAGUE, RENE DE, cardinal and chancellor of France, born at Milan; charged, especially by contemporary historians, with being the chief instigator of the St. Bartholomew Massacre (1507-1583).
- BIRCH, SAMUEL, archaeologist and Egyptologist, born in London; keeper of Oriental antiquities in the British Museum; had an extensive knowledge of Egyptology, wrote largely, and contributed articles on that and kindred archaeological subjects (1813-1885).
- BIRCH, THOMAS, antiquary, born in London; wrote a history of the Royal Society (1705-1766).
- BIRCH-PFEIFFER, CHARLOTTE, actress, born in Stuttgart; acted in Berlin; wrote dramas (1800-1868).
- BIRD, EDWARD, an English genre painter, born in Wolverhampton, settled in Bristol; among his works are the "Choristers Rehearsing," "The Field of Clary," and the "Day after the Battle," pronounced his masterpiece (1772-1819).
- BIRD, ISABELLA. See BISHOP.
- BIRD, WILLIAM, or BYRD, a musician in the time of Elizabeth, composed madrigals and much sacred music; "Non Nobis, Domine," is ascribed to him (1563-1623).
- BIRDWOOD, GENERAL SIR WILLIAM, entered Army in 1883, served on the North-West Frontier in 1898 and in the Boer war. In 1915 he was in command of the forces in the Dardanelles campaign, and was appointed Commander-in-Chief in India in 1925 (1865-).
- BIREN, DUKE OF COURLAND, son of a peasant, favourite of the Russian Empress Anne; held the reins of government even after her death; ruled with great cruelty; was banished to Siberia, but recalled, and had his honours restored to him, which six years after he relinquished in favour of his eldest son (1687-1772).
- BIRKBECK, GEORGE, a Yorkshireman, was a zealous promoter all over the country of mechanics' institutes, and founder of the Mechanics' Institute, London, afterwards known as Birkbeck College, in association with Brougham and others interested in the diffusion of useful knowledge (1776-1841).
- BIRKENHEAD, in Cheshire, on the Mersey, opposite Liverpool and a suburb of it; a town of rapid growth, due to the vicinity of Liverpool; has large shipbuilding yards and docks.
- BIRKENHEAD, EARL OF (F. E. Smith), British politician. Educated at Birkenhead and Oxford, he rose rapidly at the bar, entered Parliament as Conservative for Liverpool in 1906, and won a name as "The Galloper" in support of the Ulster Unionists in 1914. He became Attorney-General in 1915, Lord Chancellor in 1919, and was Secretary for India from 1924 to 1928, when he left politics for a commercial career (1872-).
- BIRKENHEAD, SIR JOHN, a political writer, several times imprisoned during the Commonwealth for his obtrusive royalism (1615-1679).
- BIRMINGHAM, in the NW. of Warwickshire, 112 m. NW. of London by rail; is the chief town of the Midlands, and celebrated all over the world for its metal ware, and as the "home of a thousand trades." All kinds of engines and machinery, fine gold, silver, copper, and brass ware, cutlery and ammunition are made here: steel pens, buttons, nails, and screws are specialties. It is a picturesque town, with many fine buildings, libraries, art gallery and museums, educational institutions, a cathedral, and a great town-hall. Of this town Burne-Jones was a native, and Priestley, George Dawson, and Dale were dissenting ministers, while it sent the Chamberlains to Parliament.

BIRNAM, a hill near Dunkeld, in Perthshire; contains part of a forest mentioned in "Macbeth."

BIRON, a madcap lord in "Love's Labour's Lost."

BIRON, BARON DE, marshal of France, born at Périgord; served bravely under Henry IV.; though a Catholic, favoured the Huguenots; narrowly escaped at the Massacre of St. Bartholomew; was killed at the siege of Ennery; carried a notebook with him everywhere, and so observant was he that it passed into a proverb, "You will find it in Biron's notebook" (1524-1592).

BIRON, DUC DE, son of the preceding; served also bravely under Henry IV.; but being a man of no principle and discontented with the reward he got for his services, intrigued with the Duke of Savoy and with Spain against Henry; was arrested and sent to the Bastille, where, after trial, he was beheaded (1592-1602).

BIRRELL, RT. HON. AUGUSTINE, British politician. Entering Parliament as a Liberal in 1889, he served as Minister of Education in Campbell-Bannerman's Government in 1905. In 1907 he became Secretary for Ireland, a post he resigned in 1916 on account of the Dublin Easter rebellion (1850-).

BISCAY, BAY OF, a bay in the Atlantic, extending from Cape Ortegal, in Spain, to Cape Finisterre, in France, and 400 m. broad, of depth varying from 20 to 200 fathoms, and, under S.W. winds particularly, one of the stormiest of seas.

BISCHOF, KARL GUSTAV, chemist, born at Nuremberg, professor at Bonn; experimented on the inflammable power of gas (1792-1870).

BISCHOFF, THEODOR LUDWIG WILHELM, distinguished biologist, born at Hanover; made a special study of embryology; was professor of Anatomy at Heidelberg, of Physiology at Glessen, and of both at Munich (1807-1882).

BISHOP, ISABELLA (BIRD), distinguished lady traveller and authoress; visited North America, Japan, China, Malaysia, and Korea; the first woman elected a member of the Royal Geographical Society; interested herself in medical missions abroad; wrote "Unbeaten Tracks in Japan," "The Englishwoman in America," &c. (1832-1904).

BISHOP, SIR HENRY ROWLEY, an English composer, born in London, composer and director of music in Covent Garden Theatre for 14 years; was for a brief space professor of Music in Edinburgh University, and eventually held a similar chair in Oxford (1786-1855).

BISHOP AUCKLAND, a town on the Wear 10 m. S.W. of Durham, and in the county of Durham. It contains the Bishop's palace, or castle, which was built in Edward I.'s reign. Chief industries, coal-mining and engineering.

BISHOP OF HIPPO, St. Augustine, as once in office there.

BISLEY, a village in Surrey, noted for the annual meeting of the National Rifle Association in the summer, when the best shots in the world compete for the King's Prize and teams from the public schools for the Ashburton Shield.

BISMARCK ARCEPELAGO, the German name for New Britain, NE. of New Guinea; under protectorate of Australia.

BISMARCK-SCHÖNEHAUSEN, EDUARD LEOPOLD, PRINCE VON, born at Schönhausen; rose in civil life by the events of 1848; took a bold stand against revolutionary ideas and measures; conceived the idea of freeing the several States of Germany from foreign control and welding them into one under the crown of Prussia. Summoned in 1862 by King William to be his political adviser, his influence was at first distrusted, but the annexation of Schleswig-Holstein by force of arms in 1863 raised him into general favour. His next feat, the humiliation of Austria at Königgrätz in 1866, and the consequent erection of a German Confederation, with Prussia at its head, made him the idol of the nation. His treatment of Napoleon III. provoked the latter into a declaration of war, and to an advance on the part of the French against Berlin. To the surprise of nearly all Europe, the Germans proved to be a nation of soldiers, marshalled as army never was before, and beat the French ignominiously back from the Rhine. Count Bismarck had the satisfaction of seeing the power of France that still threatened, as well as that of Austria, helpless at his feet, the German empire restored under a Hohenzollern king, and himself installed as chancellor of the monarchy he had served so well. Nothing he did after this—though he reformed the coinage, codified the law, established protection, increased the army, and repressed Socialism—equalled this great feat. He ceased to be chancellor of Germany on the accession of William II., because the young king felt he would have a freer hand with a minister more likely to be under his control (1815-1898).

BISMUTH, a grey metal similar to antimony used for many alloys; its compounds are used extensively in medicine.

BISON, the name given to two species of the ox family, of which the European branch is almost extinct. The North American bison was once in danger of being exterminated, but remnants of herds were collected by the Canadian government, and these are now preserved and are multiplying in parts of the north-west. The bison is remarkable for the development of the fore part of its body, for its heavy mane and beard.

BISSA GOS, a group of some 20 volcanic islands off the coast of Senegambia, with a large negro population; yield tropical products, and belong now to Portugal.

BISSEN, HERMANN WILHELM, a Danish sculptor, born Slesvig; a pupil of Thorvaldsen; entrusted by him to finish a statue he left unfinished at his death; he produced some fine works, but his best known are his "Cupid Sharpening his Arrow" and "Atlantis Hunting" (1798-1868).

BITHUR, a town on the right bank of the Ganges, 12 m. above Cawnpore, where Nana Sahib lived and concocted the conspiracy which developed into the mutiny of 1857.

BITHYNIA, a country in the NW. of Asia Minor, anciently so called; the people of it were of Thracian origin.

BITLIS, a high-lying town in Asiatic Turkey, 62 m. W. of Van; stands in a valley 8470 ft. above the sea-level, with a population of Mohammedans and Armenians.

BITTER LAKES, two pieces of water in Egypt which form part of the Suez Canal.

BITUMEN, an inflammable mineral substance, presumably of vegetable origin, called Naphtha when liquid and light-coloured, Petroleum when less fluid and darker, Maltha when viscid, and Asphalt when solid.

BITZIUS, a Swiss author, composed stories of Swiss life under the nom de plume of Jeremias Gotthelf, fascinating from their charming simplicity and truth; he was much admired by Ruskin; was by profession a Protestant pastor, continuing to discharge his duties till his death (1797-1864).

BIZERIA, a seaport of Tunis, northernmost town in Africa, 38 m. N.W. of the capital, with an excellent harbour.

BIZET, GEORGES, an operatic composer, born at Paris; his greatest work "Carmen"; died of heart-disease shortly after its appearance (1838-1875).

BLACK, JOSEPH, a celebrated chemist, born at Bordeaux, of Scottish parents; the discoverer of what has been called latent heat, but what is really transformed energy; professor of Chemistry, first in Glasgow, then in Edinburgh, where his lectures were very popular; his discoveries in chemistry were fruitful in results and showed that carbon dioxide combines with bases to form salts (1728-1799).

BLACK, WILLIAM, novelist, born in Glasgow; started life as a journalist in connection with the Morning Star; wrote some 30 novels, about the West Highlands of Scotland, rich in picturesque description; the best known, "A Daughter of Heth," "Madcap Violet," "Maclod of Dare," "The Strange Adventures of a Phaeton," and "A Princess of Thule" (1841-1898).

BLACK ART, name given to the presumed power of evoking evil spirits.

BLACK ASSEZ, a plague at Oxford in 1877, which carried off 800 victims; caught at the asseze from the prisoners under trial.

BLACK BOOK OF THE ADMIRALTY, THE, was lost at the end of the eighteenth century, but was found in 1874 at the bottom of a chest belonging to a former Redstar the Admiralty Court, and is now kept in a glass-topped table in the room of the President of that court. It contains the most ancient laws of the sea in force in this country, which were based on the Laws of Oleron in use during the Crusades, which were in turn based on the Sea Law of Rhodes. Oleron is the island at the mouth of the Charente, and the laws are said to have been promulgated by Queen Eleanor of Guienne, the mother of Richard the First, who is sometimes given the credit of introducing them into England. The book is about 9 in. high and 64 in. broad, and its leaves are of thin parchment and tough paper.

BLACK DEATH, a name given to a succession of fatal epidemics that devastated the world from China to Ireland in the 14th century, believed to be the same as the Oriental plague, though attended with peculiar symptoms; the most serious was that of 1348, which, as is reckoned, stripped England alone of one-third of its inhabitants.

BLACK FOREST, a wooded mountain chain 4000 ft. high (so called from the black pines that cover it), which runs parallel with the Rhine, and E. of it, through Württemberg and Baden, from the Swiss frontier to Karlsruhe; is remarkable for its picturesque scenery and its mineral wealth; it possesses many health resorts, as Haden-Baden and Wildbad, where are mineral springs; silver, copper, cobalt, lead, and iron are wrought in many places; the women and children of the region make articles of woodwork, such as wooden clocks, &c.

BLACK FRIARS, monks of the Dominican order; name of a district in London where they had a monastery, this having stood near the north end of the present Blackfriars Bridge over the Thames.

BLACK HOLE OF CALCUTTA, a confined apartment 20 ft. square, into which 146 English prisoners were crammed by the orders of Suraj-ud-Dowlah, Nawab of Bengal, on June 20, 1756; their sufferings were excruciating, and only 23 survived till morning.

BLACK LANDS, lands in the heart of Russia, extending between the Carpathians and the Urals, constituting one-third of the soil, and consisting of a layer of black earth or vegetable mould, of from 8 to 20 ft. in thickness, and a chief source, from its fertility, of the wealth of the country.

BLACK MONDAY, Easter Monday in 1851, remarkable for the extreme darkness that prevailed, and an intense cold, under which many died.

BLACK PRINCE, Prince of Wales, son of Edward III., so called, it is said, from the colour of his armour; distinguished himself at Crécy, gained the battle of Poitiers, but involved his country in further hostilities with France; returned to England, broken in health, to die (1380-1376).

BLACK ROD, GENTLEMAN USHER OF, an official of the House of Lords, whose badge of office is a black rod surmounted by a gold lion; summons the Commons to the House; is also Usher of the Order of the Garter.

BLACK SATURDAY, name given in Scotland to Saturday, August 4, 1621; a stormy day of great darkness, regarded as a judgment of Heaven against Acts then passed in the Scottish Parliament tending to establish Episcopacy.

BLACK SEA, or EUXINE, an inland sea, lying between Europe and Asia, twice the size of Britain, being 700 m. in greatest length and 400 m. in greatest breadth; communicates in the N. with the Sea of Azov, and in the SW., through the Bosphorus, the Sea of Marmora, and the Dardanelles, with the Mediterranean. It washes the shores of Turkey, Rumania, Bulgaria, Russia, and Asia Minor; receives the waters of the Danube, Dniester, Bug, and Don, from Europe, and the Kilik-Innak and Sakaria from Asia—three times as much as is received by the Mediterranean. It has but one island, Adas, off the mouths of the Danube; no reefs or shoals; hence in summer navigation is very safe. In winter it is harassed by severe storms. Among the chief ports are Odessa, Kherson, Batoum, Trebizond, and Sinope; the first two are ice-bound in January and February. For three centuries the Turks excluded all other nations from its waters; but the Prussians (1774), Austrians (1784), French and English (1802) secured trading rights. Its waters are fresher than those of the ocean, and it has no noticeable tides.

BLACK WATCH, a Highland regiment, late the 42nd and 73rd of the line, so called from the dark colour of the tartan; the 42nd raised originally for the preservation of the peace in the Highlands.

BLACKBURN, a manufacturing town in Lancashire, 21 m. NW. of Manchester, a centre of the cotton industry; is the birthplace of Hargreaves, the inventor of the spinning-jenny.

BLACKHEATH, a common 7 m. SE. of London, once a favourite haunt of highwaymen, now a place of holiday resort for Londoners; for long provided one of the two old golfing-courses in England.

BLACKIE, JOHN STUART, Scottish author, born in Glasgow; he studied German; executed a metrical translation of Goethe's "Faust." Part I. filled the chair of Humanity in Aberdeen, and afterwards that of Greek in Edinburgh; was a zealous educational reformer; took an active interest in everything affecting the welfare and honour of Scotland; founded a Celtic Chair in Edinburgh University; did Æschylus and Homer's "Iliad" in verse (1809-1896).

BLACKLOCK, THOMAS, a clergyman, born in Annan, blind from early infancy; after occupying a charge for two years, set up as a teacher in Edinburgh; was influential in inducing Burns to abandon his intention to emigrate, and may be credited, therefore, with saving for his country and humanity at large one of the most gifted of his country's sons; was author of some volumes of poems (1721-1791).

BLACKMORE, RICHARD BODDRIDGE, novelist, born in Berks; bred to the bar; wrote several novels, the best known "Lorna Doone," which, though coldly received at first, became highly popular (1825-1900).

BLACKMORE, SIR RICHARD, physician, born in Wilts; the most voluminous of poetsasters, published four long worthless poems, besides essays and psalms, &c., and made himself the butt of all the wits of the period; one of the writers ridiculed in Pope's "Dunciad"; d. 1729.

BLACKPOOL, a watering-place on the coast of Lancashire, 18 m. NW. of Preston, sometimes called the "Brighton of the North."

BLACKSTONE, SIR WILLIAM, an eminent jurist and judge, born in London, the son of a silk-mercer; was fellow of Pembroke College, Oxford, and in 1746 called to the bar; became first Vinerian professor of Law at Oxford; had Jeremy Bentham for one of his pupils; author of the well-known "Commentaries on the Laws of England," an authority on the subject and a work that has appeared in many editions (1723-1780).

BLACKWATER FEVER, a disease, similar to malaria, prevalent in tropical countries.

BLACKWELL, ALEXANDER, adventurer, born in Aberdeen; studied medicine; took to printing; thrown into prison for debt; was supported by his wife; on his release went to Sweden, was patronised by the king; convicted of conspiracy, and beheaded in 1747.

BLACKWELL, ELIZABETH, a lady doctor, born in Bristol, and the first to hold a medical diploma in the United States; graduated in 1849; was admitted into the Maternity Hospital in Paris, and to St. Bartholomew's in London, and distinguished herself as a social reformer (1821-1910).

BLACKWOOD, ALGERNON, author; educated at Wellington and Edinburgh; has written many notable novels, including "John Silence," "The Lost Valley," "Pan's Garden," and several plays (1869-).

BLACKWOOD, SIR HENRY, British admiral, much trusted by Nelson; distinguished at Aboukir Bay

- and Trafalgar; was present at Nelson's death; held subsequently high naval positions (1770-1882).
- BLACKWOOD, WILLIAM, born in Edinburgh, originator of Blackwood's Magazine; began as a bookseller; started Maga, as it was called, in 1817, his principal literary advisers being Professor Wilson and Lockhart; conducted it as editor till his death (1776-1884). John, his third son, his successor, no less distinguished in the cause of literature; publisher of Lord Lytton's and George Eliot's books (1818-1879).
- BLANVILLE, HENRI MARIE DE, a French naturalist; devoted himself to medicine; became Commissaire Curvier; succeeded him as professor of Comparative Anatomy; wrote largely on natural science, and particularly on subjects connected with his appointment as a professor (1777-1850).
- BLAIR, ROBERT, author of "The Grave," a thoughtful and cultured man, born in Edinburgh; minister of Athelstaneford, where he was succeeded by Home, the author of "Douglas." His poem has the merit of having been illustrated by William Blake (1699-1746).
- BLAKE, ROBERT, the great English admiral and "Sea King," born at Bridgewater; successful as a soldier under the Commonwealth, before he tried seamanship; took first to sea in pursuit of Prince Rupert and the royalist fleet, which he destroyed; beat the Dutch under Van Tromp, De Ruyter, and De Witt; sailed under the great guns of Tunis into the harbour, where he fired a fleet of Turkish pirates; and finally, his greatest feat, annihilated a Spanish fleet in Santa Cruz Bay under the shadow of the Peak of Teneriffe, "one of the fiercest actions ever fought on land or water" (1598-1657).
- BLAKE, WILLIAM, poet, painter, and engraver, born in London, where, with rare intervals, he spent his life, a mystic from his very boyhood; apprenticed to an engraver, whom he assisted with his drawings; started on original lines of his own as illustrator of books and a painter; devoted his leisure to poetry; wrote "Songs of Innocence," "Marriage of Heaven and Hell," "Gates of Paradise," and "Songs of Experience"; was an intensely religious man of deep spiritual insight, most vivid feeling and imagination; illustrated, among many notable works, Young's "Night Thoughts," Blair's "The Grave," and the Book of Job. He was a man of stainless character but eccentric habits, and had for wife Catherine Boucher, who under his tuition assisted him in his art work (1757-1827).
- BLANC, JEAN JOSEPH LOUIS, a French Socialist, born at Madrid; started as a journalist, founded the Revue du Progrès, and published separately in 1840 "Organisation of Labour," which had already appeared in the Revue, a work which gained the favour of the working-classes; was member of the Provisional Government of 1848, and eventually of the National Assembly; threatened with impeachment, fled to England; returned to France on the fall of the Empire, and was elected to the Chamber of Deputies in 1871; wrote "History of the French Revolution"; died at Cannes (1811-1882).
- BLANC, MONT, the highest mountain in the Alps, 15,780 ft., almost entirely within France; sends numerous glaciers down its slopes, the Mer de Glace the chief; was first ascended in 1786 by Paccard and Balmat.
- BLANCHARD, FRANÇOIS, a celebrated French aeronaut, inventor of the parachute; he fell from his balloon and was killed at the Hague (1738-1809).
- BLANCHARD, SAMUEL LAMAN, a prolific periodical contributor and play-writer, born at Yarmouth; a man of a singularly buoyant spirit, crushed by calamities (1804-1845).
- BLANCHET OF CASTLE, wife of Louis VIII. of France and mother of St. Louis; regent of France during the minority of her son and during his absence on crusade; governed with great discretion and firmness; died of grief over the long absence of her son and his rumoured intention to stay in the Holy Land (1186-1252).
- BLANCHET, THE ABBÉ, French litterateur; author of "Apologues and Tales," much esteemed (1707-1784).
- BLANDRATA, GIORGIO, Piedmontese physician, who for his religious opinions was compelled to take refuge, first in Poland, then in Transylvania, where he sowed the seeds of Unitarianism (1618-1800).
- BLANQUI, JEROME ADOLPHE, a celebrated French publicist and economist, born at Nîmes; a disciple of J. B. Say, and a free-trader; his principal work, "History of Political Economy in Europe" (1798-1854).
- BLANQUET, LOUIS AUGUSTE, a brother of the preceding, a French republican of extreme views and violent procedure; would appear to have posed as a martyr; spent nearly half his life in prison (1805-1881).
- BLARNY STONE, a stone in Castle Blarney, Cork, of difficult access, which is said to endow whoso kisses it with a fair-spoken tongue, hence the application of the word.
- BLASIUS, ST., bishop of Sebaste, in Armenia; the patron of wool-combers; suffered martyrdom in 316.
- BLASTING GELATINE, a powerful explosive discovered by Nobel in 1875, consisting of gun-cotton dissolved in nitroglycerine, with which it forms a jelly-like mass.
- BLAVATSKY, NNEE, a theosophist, born in Russia; a great authority on theosophy, the doctrines of which she professed to derive from the fountain-head in Tibet (1831-1891).
- BLUME, FRIEDRICH, eminent German Biblical exegete and critic of the Schleiermacher school, born in Holstein; professor at Bonn; his chief work, "Commentary on the Hebrews"; others are Introductions to the Old and to the New Testaments (1793-1859).
- BLEEK, WILLIAM, son of preceding, a philologist; accompanied Colenso to Natal; author of "Comparative Grammar of the S. African Languages" (1827-1875).
- BLEFUSCU, an island separated from Lilliput, in Swift's "Gulliver's Travels," by a strait 400 yards wide, and inhabited by pigmies; understood to represent France.
- BLENHEIM, a village in Bavaria, near Augsburg; famous for Marlborough's victory in 1704, and giving name to it.
- BLENHEIM PARK, near Woodstock, Oxford, the gift, with the Woodstock estate, of the country to the Duke of Marlborough, for his military services in the Spanish Succession war; it was designed by Vanbrugh.
- BLERIOT, LOUIS, aviator. He was the first man to fly an aeroplane over the English Channel, which he did in 1909 (1872-).
- BLESSINGTON, COUNTESS OF, an Irish lady celebrated for her beauty and wit; figured much in intellectual circles in London; had her salon at Kensington; was on intimate terms with Byron, and published "Conversations with Byron," and several novels; being extravagant, fell into debt, and had to flee the country (1780-1849).
- BLICHER, STEEN STRENGSEN, Danish poet and novelist of rural life (1782-1848).
- BLIGH, WILLIAM, a naval officer; served under Cook; commanded the Bounty at Tahiti, when his crew mutinied under his harsh treatment and set him adrift, with 18 others, in an open boat, in which, after incredible privations, he arrived in England; was afterwards governor of N. S. Wales, but deported for his rigorous and arbitrary conduct (1754-1817).
- BLIND, KARL, revolutionist and journalist, born at Mannheim; took part in the riots of 1848; was sentenced to prison in consequence of a pamphlet he wrote entitled "German Hunger and German Princes," but rescued by the mob; found refuge in England, where he interested himself in democratic movements, and cultivated his literary as well as his political propensities by contributing to magazines (1828-1907).
- BLIND HARRY, a wandering Scottish minstrel of the 15th century; composed in verse "The Life of that Noble Champion of Scotland, Sir William Wallace."
- BLIND-WORM. See SLOW-WORM.
- BLINKHET DUNE, a dune near Haarlem, 197 ft. above the sea-level.
- BLOEMERT, a family of Flemish painters and engravers in 16th and 17th centuries.

BLOEMFONTEIN, capital of the Orange Free State on the River Modder, founded in 1846. The town has a cathedral, museum, library and theatre, and is the seat of the Supreme Court of the Union. Lord Roberts captured it from the Boers in 1900.

BLOIS, capital of the dept. of Loire and Cher, France, on the Loire, 35 m. S. of Orleans; a favourite residence of Francis I. and Charles IX., and the scene of events of interest in the history of France.

BLOMFIELD, FRANCIS, a clergyman, born in Norfolk; author of "Topographical History of the County of Norfolk" (1706-1751).

BLOMFIELD, CHARLES JAMES, bishop of London, born at Bury St. Edmunds; (Greek scholar; active in the Church extension of his diocese (1785-1857).

BLOMFIELD, SIR REGINALD THEODORE, British architect. He specialised in garden design and civil architecture. Elected A.R.A. in 1905, he was made R.A. in 1914 (1856-).

BLOUNDEL, a troubadour of the 12th century; a favourite of Richard Cœur de Lion, who, it is said, discovered the place of Richard's imprisonment in Austria by singing the first part of a love-song which Richard and he had composed together, the voice of the king responding to the strain.

BLOUND, CHARLES, an acrobat and rope-dancer, born at St. Omer, France; celebrated for his feats in crossing Niagara Falls on the tight-rope and taking a woman over in a wheelbarrow (1824-1897).

BLOOD, the vital fluid of the human body. It consists of a liquid, plasma, containing microscopic corpuscles of two kinds: (1) red, containing hemoglobin, which absorb oxygen in the lungs and give it out to the various parts of the body; (2) white, in smaller numbers than red, which serve to destroy bacteria and thus defend the body from disease. The blood passes from the heart through the arteries to all parts of the body, supplying them with oxygen and nourishment; this oxygenated blood is bright red; the blood returns to the heart through the veins, removing the waste products from the various parts of the body; the blood in the veins is a bluish colour. The arteries and veins are connected by small channels called capillaries. The circulation of the blood was discovered by William Harvey in 1628.

BLOOD, THOMAS, COLONEL, an Irish desperado, noted for his daring attempts against the life of the Duke of Ormonde, and for carrying off the regalia in the Tower; unaccountably pardoned by Charles II., and received afterwards into royal favour with a pension of £500 per annum. He was afterwards charged with conspiracy, and committed to the King's Bench, and released; d. 1680.

BLOODY ASSIZES, the judicial massacres and cruel injustices perpetrated by Judge Jeffreys during circuit in 1685.

BLOODY MARY, Queen Mary (q.v.), on account of her persecution of Protestants.

BLOODY STATUTE, statute of Henry VIII. making it a crime involving the heaviest penalties to question any of the fundamental doctrines of the Romish Church.

BLOOMERS, a costume for women devised by an American, Mrs. Bloomer, and consisting of a short skirt and bodice, with loosely made trousers; although of short popularity it led to the adoption of a national feminine dress for cycling and other sports.

BLOOMFIELD, ROBERT, an English poet, born in Suffolk, by trade a shoemaker; author of the "Farmer's Boy," a highly popular production, translated into French and Italian; spent his last days in ill-health, struggling with poverty, which brought on delusion of mind (1766-1823).

BLOUNT, CHARLES, a deist, born in London; assailant of revealed religion; was involved in all the controversies of the time; died by his own hand (1654-1693).

BLOWPIPE, a contrivance by which a current of air is driven through a flame, and the flame directed upon some fusible substance to fuse or vitrify it.

BLÜCHER, GEBHARD VON, Prussian field-marshal, familiarly named "Marshal Forward", born at Rostock; served first in the Swedish army, then in the Prussian; distinguished as a leader of cavalry, and most with varying fortune; at the age of 70 commanded the centre of the Allied army in 1813; distinguished himself at Lützen and Leipzig; pursued the French across the Rhine; pressed forward to Paris at the time of Napoleon's abdication; defeated by Napoleon at Ligny, June 16, 1815; arrived on the field of Waterloo just as the French were preparing to make their last charge, and contributed to decide the fate of the day (1742-1819).

BLUE, one of the highest honours in sport, awarded at Oxford and Cambridge to those who play against the other University. Blues for rowing, cricket, and both codes of football are the most highly prized. Oxford is a dark blue and Cambridge a light.

BLUE BOY, THE, Thomas (Gainsborough's (q.v.) famous portrait of Master Buttol, painted in 1770.

BLUE MOUNTAIN, a range of thickly wooded mountains traversing Jamaica from E. to W., from 5000 to 7000 ft. in height; also a chain of mountains in New South Wales of two parallel ranges, with a deep chasm between, and full of gloomy ravines and beetling precipices, the highest 4100 ft.

BLUE NOSE, a nickname given to an inhabitant of Nova Scotia or New Brunswick.

BLUEBEARD, a wealthy seigneur of fable, the owner of a castle; marries a beautiful woman, and leaves her in charge of the keys of the apartments in his absence, with strict orders not to unlock any of the doors, an injunction which she fails to respect, and finds to her horror the remains of his former wives locked up in one of them; her disobedience is discovered, and she is to prepare for death, but is rescued, as she lies with her head on the block, by the timely arrival of her brothers, who at once despatch the husband to his merited doom. English version of the fairy-tale is derived from Perrault's "Contes".

BLUE-BOOKS, Parliamentary documents bound in blue paper, as the corresponding documents in France are in yellow; they have been published regularly since the beginning of the 18th century, those of a single session now forming a collection of some 60 folio volumes.

BLUE-COAT SCHOOL, a name given to Christ's Hospital, West Herts, founded by Edward VI., from the blue coats worn by the boys.

BLUE-GOWN, in Scotland a beggar, a bedesman of the king, who wore a blue gown, the gift of the king, and had his licence to beg; abolished in 1863.

BLUE-STOCKING, a female pedant or femme savante, a name derived from a learned coterie, formed in the 15th century, at Venice, who wore blue stockings as a badge.

BLUFF HALL or HARRY, Henry VIII. of England.

BLUM, ROBERT, a German politician, born at Cologne; tried by court-martial and shot for abetting a political movement in Vienna in 1848, a proceeding which created a widespread sensation at the time all over Europe (1807-1848).

BLUMENBACH, JOHANN FRIEDRICH, a distinguished German naturalist and ethnologist, born at Göttingen; studied at Jena; became professor at Göttingen, an office he filled for 60 years; his works gave a great impulse to scientific research in all directions; the chief were "Institutiones Physiologiae," "Manual of Natural History," "Manual of Comparative Anatomy and Physiology"; he made craniology a special study; was a great advocate for religious liberty (1752-1840).

BLUMENTHAL, JACQUES, composer, of German birth; writer of many popular songs (1829-1899).

BLUMENTHAL, LEONARD VON, field-marshal in the Prussian army; distinguished in the wars with Denmark, Austria, and France; an eminent strategist (1810-1900).

BLUNT, JOHN HENRY, D.D., born at Chelsea; wrote largely on theological and ecclesiastical subjects (1823-1884).

BLUNT, WILFRID SCRAWEN, poet; born at Petworth; in diplomatic service for some years; championed cause of Arabi Pasha in 1882; author of "The Future of Islam," &c. (1840-1922).

BLUNTSCHLI, JOHANN KASPAR, a distinguished jurist, born at Zurich; an authority in international law; a liberal conservative both in Church and State; founder and president of the Protestant Union called the Protestantverein (1808-1881).

BOA, the name given to a genus of constricting, non-venomous serpents found in tropical America; included with pythons and anacondas (q.v.) in the species Pythonidae. The largest of the boa family known measured 27 ft. in length.

BOABDIL, or ABU-ABDALLAH, surnamed "The Unfortunate," the last Moorish king of Granada, from 1481 to 1492; expelled from his throne by Ferdinand of Castile and Aragon; as he rode off he halted on a hill called "The Last Sight of the Moor," and wept as he looked back on the Alhambra, while his mother added to his bitterness with the cutting sarcasm, "Weep as a woman for a throne you have not been able to defend as a man"; died shortly after in Africa, recklessly throwing away his life on a field of battle.

BOADICEA, a British heroine, queen of the Iceni, who occupied Norfolk and Suffolk; roused by indignity done to her and her people by the Romans, gathered round her an army, who, with a murderous onslaught, attacked their settlements and destroyed them; but being attacked and defeated in turn by Suetonius Paulinus, the Roman governor, she, in her despair, put an end to her life by poison, A.D. 62. Cowper made her the theme of one of his poems.

BOANERGES (i.e. Sons of Thunder), applied by Christ to the sons of Zebedee for the vehemence of their zeal.

BOARD OF TRADE, THE, embracing the Department of Overseas Trade and the Mines Department, looks after national trade affairs. Nominally it is the Committee of the Council of Trade, supervised by a President and instituted in 1786.

BOAT RACE, THE, annual rowing match on the Thames in March or April between Oxford and Cambridge Universities from Putney to Mortlake. The first race was rowed in 1829 at Henley, and it became an annual fixture in 1856.

BOAZ and JACHIN, two pillars of brass at the entrance of Solomon's Temple, signifying respectively strength and stability.

BOB ADIL, CAPTAIN, a braggadoocio in Ben Jonson's "Every Man in his Humour."

BOBÈCHE, a French theatrical clown, under the Empire and the Restoration, son of an upholsterer of the St. Antoine faubourg, the type of the merry-andrew at country fairs.

BOCCACCIO, GIOVANNI, the celebrated Italian vaconteur, born near Florence; showed early a passion for literature; sent by his father to Naples to pursue a mercantile career; gave himself up to story-telling in prose and verse; fell in love with Maria, a beautiful woman, daughter of the king, styled by him Flaminetta, for whom he wrote several of his works and his greatest, the "Decameron"; early formed a lifelong friendship with Petrarch, with whom he contributed to the revival and study of classic literature; lectured on Dante in Florence; Petrarch's death deeply affected him, and he died the year after (1313-1375).

BOCCHERINI, LUIGI, a celebrated Italian musical composer, born at Lucca; was associated with Manfredi, the violinist; his works were numerous; appears to have lived in poverty and obscurity (1743-1805).

BOCHART, SAMUEL, a Protestant divine, born at Rouen; pastor at Caen; a geographer and an Orientalist; wrote a treatise on sacred geography; celebrated for a nine-days' discussion with the Jesuit Verin (1599-1667).

BODE, JOHANN ELBERT, an astronomer, born at Hamburg; was professor of Astronomy and director of Observatory at Berlin; produced a number of astronomical works, one of his best, "An Introduction to the Knowledge of the Starry Heavens"; gave name to the law of the planetary distances, called Bode's Law, although it was observed by Kepler long before his day (1747-1826).

BODEL, a celebrated troubadour of the 13th century, born at Arras.

BODENSEE, another name for the Lake of Constance, well called the filter of the Rhine.

BODIN, JEAN, a publicist and diplomatist, born at Angers; author of "The Republic," in six books, published at first in French and then in Latin, which summed up all the political philosophy of his time and contributed to prepare the way for subsequent speculations; was the precursor of Hobbes and Montesquieu (1530-1596).

BODLEIAN LIBRARY, the university library of Oxford, founded, or rather restored, by Sir Thomas Bodley in 1598; enlarged from time to time by bequests, often munificent. A copy of every book published in the United Kingdom has to be sent there.

BODLEY, SIR THOMAS, born at Exeter; employed on embassies by Elizabeth on the Continent, where he collected a number of valuable books; bequeathed them and his fortune to the university library of Oxford, named after him (1545-1613).

BODMER, JOHANN JACOB, a distinguished Swiss critic, born near Zurich; the first, by study of the masters in literature of Greece and Rome, France, England, and Italy, to wake up Germany to a sense of its poverty in that line, and thus aided, along with others, in the inauguration of a new era, which he did more by his republication of the Minnesingers and part of the "Nibelungen Lied" than by his advocacy (1698-1783).

BODMIN, the county town of Cornwall, superseded Truro as capital; an important agricultural centre; has large annual fairs for cattle, horses, and sheep.

BODONI, an Italian printer; settled at Parma, where his press was set up in the ducal palace, whence issued magnificent editions of the classics, Horace, Virgil, Tacitus, Tasso, and, last of all, Homer. He was often tempted to Rome, but he refused to quit Parma and the patronage of the ducal house there (1740-1813).

BÖDTCHER, LUDWIG, a Danish lyric poet, born at Copenhagen; lived chiefly in Italy (1793-1874).

BOECE, HECTOR, known also as BOETHIUS, a humanist and Scottish historian, born at Dundee; professor of Philosophy at Paris; friend of Erasmus; was principal of university at Aberdeen; wrote "History of Bishops of Morlaich and Aberdeen," and "History of Scotland" in excellent Latin (1465-1536).

BOECKH, PHILIP AUGUST, classical antiquary, born at Karlsruhe; professor of Ancient Literature in Berlin; a classic of the first rank, and a contributor on a large scale to all departments of Greek classical learning; was an eminently erudite man, and an authority in different departments of learning (1785-1867).

BOEHM, SIR JOSEPH EDGAR, sculptor, born in Vienna, of Hungarian parentage, settled in England; executed a colossal statue of Queen Victoria at Windsor, a seated statue of Carlyle, and a statue of Bunyan at Bedford; patronised by the Queen and royal family; buried in St. Paul's by the Queen's desire (1834-1890).

BOEHME, JACOB, celebrated German mystic, born at Görlitz; of an imaginatively meditative turn from boyhood as a neat-herd, and afterwards in his stall as a shoemaker; spent his whole life in meditation on divine things; saw in the Bible a revelation of these as in no other book; seemed to have eyes given him to see visions of these things himself, for which he felt he had no organ to express, and which he conveyed to others in mystical, apocalyptic speech; a thinker very fascinating to all minds of the near class. His philosophy would seem to have anticipated the secret of Hegel, who acknowledges him as one of the fathers of German philosophy. He left writings which embody a scheme of mystical theology, setting forth the trinity in unity of the Hegelian system, that is, viewing the divine as it is in itself, as it comes out in nature, and as it returns to itself in the human soul (1575-1624).

BOEHMER, a German historian, born at Frankfurt; author of works on the Carolingian period of history (1795-1863).

BOEOTIA, a country of ancient Greece, N. of the Gulf of Corinth; the natives, though brave, were mere tillers of the soil under a heavy atmosphere, innocent of culture, and regarded as bores and dullards by the educated classes of Greece, and particularly of Athens, although Hesiod, Pindar, and Plutarch were natives of Boeotia.

BOER WAR, THE, started in October, 1899, when the Boers invaded Natal, and was ended by the treaty of Pretoria in May, 1902. Britain suffered heavily in the opening six months of the war, but with the appointment of Lord Roberts as Commander-in-Chief, with Lord Kitchener as chief of staff, the tide turned. Kimberley was relieved in February, 1900, and Ladysmith and Mafeking were other successes leading to the surrender of the Boer leaders.

BOERHAAVE, HERMANN, a great physician, born near Leyden, and son of a pastor; ultimately professor of Medicine and Botany there, as well as of Chemistry, chairs of which he filled and adorned with the greatest distinction; his reputation spread over Europe, and even as far as China; his system was adopted by the profession, and patients from far and wide came to consult him—among others, Pope Benedict VIII. and Peter the Great; his character was as noble as his abilities were great; his principal works were "Institutiones Medicæ," "Aphorismi de Cognoscendis et Curandis Morbis," "Libellus de Materia Medica," and "Institutiones Chemicæ" (1668-1738).

BOERS (i.e. peasants engaged in tillage), Dutch colonists of an independent republican temper, who in the 17th century squatted in S. Africa; gave themselves to agriculture and cattle-rearing; settled at length in the Transvaal in a self-governed community by themselves.

BOETHIUS, ANICIUS MANLIUS SEVERINUS, a Roman statesman, born at Rome, of Consular rank, a profoundly learned man, held the highest offices, Consul among others, under Theodoric the Goth; his integrity and opposition to injustice procured him enemies, who accused him of treason; he was cast into prison, and finally put to death; wrote in prison his "De Consolatione Philosophiæ." In five parts, employing verse and prose alternately, which King Alfred translated into Anglo-Saxon; he was canonised as a martyr, and his influence was great during the Middle Ages (470-524).

BOGATZKY, KARL HEINRICH VON, religious writer; wrote hymns and an autobiography; is best known as the author of the "Golden Treasury" (1690-1744).

BOGDANOVITCH, a Russian poet, called by his countrymen the Russian Anacreon; his best-known poem "Psyche" (1743-1803).

BOGERMAN, JOHANN, Dutch divine, translated the Bible into Dutch, and was President of the Synod of Dort (1676-1683).

BOGOTA, capital of the State of Colombia, situated on a remarkable, almost mountain-encircled, plateau, on the river Bogotá, 85 m. S.E. of its port, Honda, the highest navigable point of the Magdalena; is 8600 ft. above sea-level, and has a spring-like climate. It is regularly built, with innumerable churches, a mint, university, library, and observatory, and several schools. Though the country is fertile and the mountains rich in coal, iron, salt, and precious metals, its situation and the want of a railway hinder trade.

BOGUE, DAVID, born in Berwickshire, a Congregational minister; one of the founders of the London Foreign Missionary, the Foreign Bible, and the Religious Tract Societies (1750-1825).

BOHEMIA, the chief province of Czechoslovakia, two-thirds the size of Scotland; is encircled by mountains, and drained by the upper Elbe and its tributaries. The Kráskoříz separate it from Saxony; the Riesengebirge, from Prussia; the Böhmerwald, from Bavaria; and the Moravian Mountains, from Moravia. The mineral wealth is varied and great, including coal, the most useful metals, silver, sulphur, and porcelain clay. The climate is mild in the valleys, the soil fertile; flax and hops the chief products; forests are extensive. Dyeing, calico-printing, linen and woollen manufactures, are the chief industries. The glassware is widely celebrated; there are ironworks and sugar-refineries. The transit trade is very valuable. The people are mostly Czechs, of the Slavonic race, Roman Catholics in religion; there is a large and influential German minority. There is a university at Prague, the capital. In the 16th century the crown was united with the Austrian, but in 1608 religious questions led to the election of the Protestant Frederick V. This was followed by the Thirty Years' war, the extermination of the Protestants, and the restoration of the Austrian House. In 1918 the independence of Czechoslovakia was proclaimed.

BOHEMIAN, name given to one who lives by his wits and shuns conventionality.

BOHEMIAN BROTHERS, a fraternity of an extreme sect of the Hussites, organised as United Brethren in 1455; broken up in the Thirty Years' war, met in secret, and were invited, under the name of Moravians or Herrnhuters, by Count Zinzendorf to settle on his estate in Silesia.

BOHEMOND, first prince of Antioch, son of Robert Guiscard; set out on the first crusade; besieged and took Antioch; was besieged in turn by the Saracens, and imprisoned for two years; liberated, he collected troops and recaptured the city (1056-1111).

BOHLEN, PETER VON, a German Orientalist, professor at Königsberg (1796-1840).

BOHN, HENRY GEORGE, an enterprising publisher and learned bibliographer; issued a series of works identified with his name (1796-1884).

BOHR, NIELS HENRIK DAVID, professor of Physics at Copenhagen, a distinguished mathematical physicist. His greatest work has been in connection with the application of the quantum theory (q.v.) to the structure of the atom (q.v.). His work is based upon the planetary conception of the atom put forward by Rutherford (1885-).

BÖHTLINGK, OTTO, Sanskrit scholar, a German, born in St. Petersburg; author, among other works, of a Sanskrit dictionary in 7 vols. (1815-1904).

BOIARDO, MATTEO MARIA, Count of Scandiano, surnamed the "Flower of Chivalry"; an Italian poet, courtier, diplomatist, and statesman; author of "Orlando innamorato" (1456), the model of Ariosto's "Orlando Furioso," which eclipsed it (1434-1494).

BOIELDIEU, ADRIEN FRANÇOIS, a distinguished French musical composer of light operas; author of the "Café de Bagdad," "Télémaque," and "La Dame Blanche," reckoned his masterpiece; called the French Mozart (1775-1834).

BOIGNE, COUNT DE, a French soldier of fortune, born at Chambéry; served under France, Russia, East India Company, and the prince of the Maharratta, to whom he rendered signal service; amassed wealth, which he dealt out generously and for the benefit of his country (1751-1830).

BOIL, an ancient people of Gaul, occupying territory between the Allier and the Loire, from whose name Bohemia is derived.

BOILEAU, NICOLAS (surnamed Despréaux, to distinguish him from his brother), poet and critic, born in Paris; brought up to the law, but devoted to letters, associating himself with La Fontaine, Racine, and Molière; author of "satires" and "Epistles," "L'Art Poétique," "Le Lutrin," &c., in which he attacked and employed his wit against the bad taste of his time; did much to reform French poetry, as Pascal did to reform the prose, and was for long the law-giver of Parnassus; was an imitator of Pope, but especially of Horace (1636-1711).

BOISSARD, a French fabulist of remarkable fecundity (1743-1831).

BOIS-BRÛLÉS, the French name for the half-breeds of North America who are of Canadian-French and Indian ancestry.

BOISGODEY, FORTUNE DE, French author of sensational fiction (1824-1891).

BOIS-GUILLEBERT, a French economist, cousin of Vauban; advocate of free trade; d. 1714.

BOIS-LE-DUC, capital of North Brabant, 45 m. S.E. of Amsterdam, and with a fine cathedral; seat of an archbishop.

BOISMONT, THE ABBÉ, one of the best French pulpits orators of the 18th century (1715-1786).

BOISROBERT, THE ABBÉ, a French poet, one of the first members of the French Academy; patronised by Richelieu (1592-1662).

BOISSONADE, JEAN FRANÇOIS, a French Greek scholar; for a time carried away by the revolutionary movement, but abandoned politics for letters (1774-1857).

BOISSIERE, a French lexicographer (1806-1885).

BOISSY D'ANGLAS, COUNT, a member and president of the Convention in Paris, noted for his firmness and coolness during the frenzy of the Revolution; became a senator and commander of the Legion of Honour under Napoleon; was made a peer by Louis XVIII. (1786-1836).

BOITO, ARRIGO, Italian composer and librettist; born at Padua; produced "Mastotefe" and other operas; wrote librettos for works of Verdi and other composers (1842-1918).

BOIKHA'RA, a Mohammedan State in Central Asia, N. of Afghanistan, attached to Soviet Russia. The surface is arid, and cultivation possible only near the rivers—the Oxus, Zarafshan, and Karshi. In the sands of the Oxus, gold and salt are found. Rice, cotton, and cereals are grown; silk, cotton-thread, jewellery, cutlery, and firearms are manufactured. The people are of Turkish and Persian origin. The capital, Bokhara, is on the plain of the Zarafshan, a walled, mud-built city, 8 or 9 m. in circumference, with numerous colleges and mosques, the centre of learning and religious life in Central Asia. It has important trade and large slave markets.

BOLAN' PASS, a high-lying, deep, narrow gorge, with a torrent running through it, extending between Quetta (Beluchistan) and Kandahar (Afghanistan), sloping upwards at an inclination of 90 ft. a mile; is traversed by a military road.

BOLESŁAUS, the name of several dukes of Poland, of whom the most famous is Boleslaus I. the Great, who ruled from 992 to 1025.

BOLEYN, ANNE, or BULEYN, second wife of Henry VIII. and mother of Queen Elizabeth; daughter of Sir Thomas Bullen (afterwards Earl of Wiltshire); after a three years' residence at the French Court became maid of honour to Queen Katherine; attracted the admiration of Henry; was married to him, and became queen; charged with adultery and conspiracy, was found guilty and beheaded; was of the Reformed faith; her marriage with Henry had important bearings on the English Reformation (1507-1538).

BOLINGBROKE, HENRY ST. JOHN, VISCOUNT, English statesman, orator, and political writer; born at Battersea; Prime Minister of Queen Anne in the Tory interest, after her dismissal of the Whigs; on the accession of George I. fled to France and joined the Pretender; was impeached and attainted; returned in 1723 to his estates, but denied a seat in the House of Lords, an indignity which he resented by working the overthrow of Walpole; was the friend of Pope and Swift, and the author of "Letters" bearing upon politics and literature. "Bolingbroke," says Prof. Saintsbury, "is a rhetorician pure and simple, but the subjects of his rhetoric were not the great and perennial subjects, but puny ephemeral forms of them—the partisan and personal politics of his day, the singularly shallow form of infidelity called Deism and the like; and his time deprived him of many, if not most, of the rhetorician's most telling weapons. The 'Letter to Windham,' a sort of apologia, and the 'Ideal of a Patriot King,' exhibit him at his best." It was he who suggested to Pope his "Essay on Man" (1678-1751).

BOLIVAR, SIMON, surnamed the Liberator, general and statesman, born at Caracas; a man of good birth and liberal education; seized with the passion for freedom during a visit to Madrid and Paris, devoted himself to the cause of S. American independence; freed from the yoke of Spain Venezuela and New Grenada, which, in 1810, he erected into a republic under the name of Colombia; achieved in 1824 the same for Upper Peru, henceforth called Bolivia, after his name; accused of aspiring to the Dictatorship, he abdicated, and was preparing to leave the country when he died of fever, with the sage reflection on his lips, "The presence of a soldier, however disinterested he may be, is always dangerous in a State that is new to freedom"; he has been called the Washington of S. America (1788-1830).

BOLIVIA, an inland republic of S. America, occupying lofty tablelands E. of the Andes, and surrounded by Peru, Brazil, Paraguay, Argentina, and Chile. The S. is chiefly desert; in the N. are Lake Titicaca and many well-watered valleys. The very varied heights afford all kinds of vegetation, from wheat and maize to tropical fruits. In the lower plains coffee, tobacco, cotton, and cinchona are cultivated.

The most important industry is mining: gold, silver, copper, and tin. Trade is hampered by want of navigable rivers, but helped by railways from Chile, Peru, and Argentina. Silver is the chief export; manufactured goods are imported. The country has been independent since 1825; it lost its sea provinces in the war with Chili, 1879-1883. The capital is Sucre, but La Paz and Cochabamba are larger towns.

BOLLAND, JOHN, a Jesuit of Antwerp, born in Holgium; compiled five vols. of the Lives of the Saints called "Acta Sanctorum," which was continued by others, called after him "Bollandists" (1566-1658).

BOLOGNA, an ancient walled city of Italy, on a fertile plain, at the foot of the Lower Apennines, 82 m. N. of Florence; has many fine buildings, a university, one of the oldest in Europe, schools of music and art, libraries, and art collections. There are some silk and other industries, and considerable trade.

BOLOGNA, JOHN OF, one of the most celebrated sculptors of art in his time, born at Douai, settled at Florence (1524-1608).

BOLOMETER, an instrument designed by Prof. Langley of Washington in 1881 for the study of the distribution of heat in the solar spectrum. It is extremely sensitive to very feeble heat rays, its action depending upon the change of resistance of a thin strip of metal with varying temperature.

BOLSHETAGH, a high tableland in Central Asia, stretching from the Hindu Kush mountains northwards to the Tian Shan.

BOLSE'NA, a small town in Italy, on the E. shore of Lake Bolsena.

BOLSENA, a lake in Italy with clear water in a hollow crater of a volcano, and abounding with fish, but with an unwholesome atmosphere.

BOLSHEVISM, an extreme form of communism and violently opposed to capitalism, religion, and indeed civilization as generally understood. Under Lenin and Trotsky its adherents took control of Russia in 1918.

BOLTON, manufacturing town of Lancashire, a centre of the cotton industry, with iron-works, bleaching and chemical works.

BOLTON ABBEY, an old abbey in Yorkshire, 6 m. E. of Skipton; was founded in 1151 by the Augustinian canons.

BOMA, a station on the Lower Congo; once a great slave mart.

BOMARSUND, a fortress of the island of Aland occupied by Russia, destroyed by the Anglo-French fleet in 1864; the Russians bound by the Treaty of Paris not to restore it.

BOMBA, nickname of Ferdinand II., late king of the Two Sicilies, given him, it is alleged, from his calling upon his soldiers to bombard his people during an insurrection.

BOMBASTES FURIOSO, an opera by William Barnes Rhodes in ridicule of the bombastic style of certain tragedies in vogue (1810).

BOMBAY, the western Presidency of India, embraces 28 British districts and 19 feudatory states. N. of the Nerbudda River the country is flat and fertile; S. of it are mountain ranges and tablelands. In the fertile N. cotton, opium, and wheat are the staple products. In the S., salt, iron, and gold are mined; but coal is wanting. The climate is hot and moist on the coast and in the plains, but pleasant on the plateaus. Cotton manufacture has developed extensively, and cotton cloths, with sugar, tea, wool, and drugs are exported. Machinery, oil, coal, and liquors are imported. Bombay, the chief city, stands on an island, connected with the coast by a causeway, and has a magnificent harbour and noble docks. It is rapidly surpassing Calcutta in trade, and is one of the greatest of seaports; its position promises to make it the most important commercial centre in the East, as it already is in the cotton trade of the world. It swarms with people of every clime, and its merchandize is mainly in the hands of the Parsees, the descendants of the ancient fire-worshippers. It is the most English town in India. It came to England from Portugal as dowry with Catherine of Braganza, wife of Charles II., who leased it to the East India Company for £10 a year. Its prosperity began when the civil war in America afforded it an opening for its cotton.

BONA, a seaport in Algeria, in the province of Constantine, on a bay of the Mediterranean, with an excellent harbour and a growing trade; is much improved since its occupation by the French in 1832. Near it are the ruins of Hippo Regius, the episcopal city of Augustine.

BONA, an ascetic writer, surnamed the Fénelon of Italy, one of the feulliant order of monks (1609-1674).

BONA DEA (the good goddess), a Roman goddess of fertility, worshipped by women; her priestesses vestals and her worship by rites from which men were excluded. Her symbol was a serpent, but the name under which she was worshipped is not known.

BONALD, VICOMTE DE, a French publicist, a violent royalist and ultramontanist; looked upon the Catholic religion and the royal authority as fundamental to the stability of the social fabric, and was opposed to the law of divorce, which led to its alteration. He denied that language was innate, but revealed, and that causation was inherent in matter (1753-1840).

BONAPARTE, name of a celebrated family of Italian origin settled in Corsica; the principal members of it were: Charles Marie, born at Ajaccio, 1744; died at Montpellier, 1785; married, 1767, Marie-Louise Ramolino, born at Ajaccio, 1750; died at Rome, 1830; of this union were born eight children: Joseph, became king of Naples, 1806; king of Spain from 1808 to 1813; retired to United States after Waterloo; returned to Europe, and died at Florence, 1844. Napoleon I. (c.n.), Lucien, b. 1775; became president of the Council of the Five Hundred, and prince of Canino; died in Viterbo, 1840. Marie-Anne-Elisa, b. 1777; married Felix Bacciochi, who became prince of Lucca; died at Trieste, 1826. Louis, b. 1778; married Hortense de Beauharnais; father of Napoleon III.; king of Holland (from 1806 to 1810); died at Leghorn, 1840. Marie Pauline, b. 1780; married General Leclerc, 1801; afterwards, in 1803, Prince Camille Borghese; became Duchess of Guastalla; died at Florence, 1825. Caroline-Marie, b. 1782; married Murat in 1800; became Grand-duchess of Berg and Cleves, then queen of Naples; died at Florence, 1839. Jerome, b. 1784, king of Westphalia (from 1807 to 1813); marshal of France in 1850; married, by second marriage, Princess Catherine of Wurtemberg; died in 1860; his daughter, the Princess Mathilde, b. 1820, and his son, Prince Napoleon, called Jerome, b. 1822, married Princess Clothilde, daughter of Victor Emmanuel, of which marriage was born Prince Victor Napoleon in 1862.

BONAR, HORATIUS, a clergyman of the Free Church of Scotland, and a celebrated hymn writer, born at Edinburgh (1808-1849).

BONAR LAW. See LAW.

BONAVENTURA, ST., cardinal, surnamed "the Seraphic Doctor," his real name John Fidenza, born in Tuscany; entered the Franciscan Order; was chosen general of the Order and papal legate at the Council of Lyons in 1274, during the session of which he died; was a mystic in theology; ascribed knowledge of the truth to union with God, such as existed between man and his Maker prior to the Fall, a state which could be recovered only by a life of purity and prayer; his writings were admired by Luther. He was canonised by Pope Sixtus IV. in 1482 (1221-1274).

BONCHAMP, CHARLES, MARQUIS DE, French general, born in Anjou, served in the American war; became one of the chiefs of the Vendean army; fell at the battle of Cholet, and when dying released over the blood already shed; ordered the release of 5000 prisoners which his party, in their revenge, was about to massacre (1746-1793).

BOND, WILLIAM, a distinguished American astronomer, who with his son, George Phillips, discovered the eighth satellite of Saturn (1789-1859).

BONDFIELD, RT. HON. MARGARET GRACE, British politician. After years in trade union work she became chairman of the Trades Union Congress in 1923, and in 1924 was the first woman to take a Government post, as Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of Labour. In 1929 she became Minister of Labour, and the first woman to join a Cabinet.

BONDU, a country of Senecambia, a dependency of France; yields maize, cotton, fruits.

BONE, HENRY, a celebrated enamel painter, especially in miniature on ivory; born at Truro (1755-1834).

BONER, ULRICH, a German fabulist and Dominican monk of the 14th century, author of "Der Edelstein" (The Jewel), a book of fables.

BONHEUR, ROSA, a celebrated French animal painter, born at Bordeaux; brought up in poverty from ill-fortune; taught by her father; exhibited when she was 19; her best-known works are the "Horse Fair," the "Hay Harvest in Auvergne," and "Houpling with Oxen," considered her masterpiece; through the Empress Eugénie she received the Cross of the Legion of Honour; during the siege of Paris her studio was spared by order of the Crown Prince (1822-1899).

BONHOMME, JACQUES, a name of contempt given by the nobility of France to the peasants in the 14th century.

BONIFACE, the name of nine Popes. B. I., pope from 418 to 422, assumed the title of First Bishop of Christendom; B. II., pope from 530 to 532; B. III., pope for 10 months, from 607 to 608; B. IV., pope from 608 to 614; B. V., pope from 617 to 625; B. VI., pope in 896; B. VII., pope from 974 to 985; B. VIII., pope from 1294 to 1303, a strenuous assertor of the papal supremacy over all princes, and a cause of much turmoil in Europe, provoked a war with Philip the Fair of France, who arrested him at Anagni, and though liberated by the citizens died on his way to Rome; B. IX., pope from 1389 to 1405, the first pope to wear the Triple Crown.

BONIFACE, ST., the Apostle of Germany, born in Devonshire, his real name Winfrid; consecrated Peppin le Bref; was made Primate of Germany; was, with 53 companions, massacred by the barbarians of Friesland, whom he sought to convert (640-755).

BONIN, a group of rocky volcanic islands SE. of Japan and since 1876 subject to that power; for over a hundred years used as a penal settlement by the Japanese.

BONINGTON, RICHARD, an eminent English landscape painter of exceptional precocity, born near Nottingham; painted the "Ducal Palace" and "Grand Canal" at Venice, his masterpieces (1801-1828).

BONIVARD, FRANÇOIS DE, a Genevese patriot and historian, twice imprisoned by Charles III., a Duke of Savoy, for his sympathy with the struggles of the Genevese against his tyranny, the second time for six years in the Castle of Chillon; immortalised by Lord Byron in his "Prisoner of Chillon"; he was released at the Reformation, and adopted Protestantism (1493-1570).

BONN, a Prussian town on the Rhine, SE. of Cologne, an old Roman station, with a famous university; the birthplace of Beethoven, with a monument to his memory; it is a stronghold of the old Catholics.

BONNAT, JOSEPH LEON, a French painter, born at Bayonne; imitated for a time the religious paintings of the old masters, but later he followed a style of his own; "Christ at the Cross" in the Palais de Justice, Paris, is his work (1833-1922).

BONNER, EDMUND, bishop of London, born at Worcester; was chaplain to Wolsey; sided with Henry VIII. against the Pope; fell into disgrace under Edward VI.; was restored by Mary, whom he served in her anti-Protestant zeal; affected to welcome Elizabeth to the throne; was again deposed and imprisoned for refusing to take the oath of supremacy under Elizabeth; died in the Marshalsea Prison; he does not deserve all the odium that has been heaped on his memory; he was faithful as a bishop, consistent in his conduct, and bore the indignities done him with manly fortitude (1495-1569).

BONNET, CHARLES DE, Swiss naturalist and philosopher, born at Geneva; his studies as a naturalist gave a materialistic cast to his philosophy; though he did not deny the existence of mind, still less that of its sovereign Author, he gave to material impressions a dominant influence in determining its manifestations (1720-1793).

BONNET-PIECE, a gold coin of James V. of Scotland, so called from the king being represented on it as wearing a bonnet instead of a crown.

BONNEY, REV. THOMAS GEORGE, geologist; professor of Geology at University College, London, he carried out a detailed study of rock formations in the Alps and in many parts of England, Scotland, and Wales; wrote many books on geology, geography, and theology (1833-1923).

BONNIE DUNDEE, Graham of Claverhouse, Viscount Dundee.

BONNY, ANN, one of two women who, in disguise, served on board pirate ships in the 18th century, the other woman being Mary Read. Both were pardoned.

BONPLAND, AIME, a French botanist and traveller, born at Rochelle; companion of Alexander von Humboldt in his S. American scientific explorations; brought home a large collection of plants, thousands of species of them new to Europe; went out again to America, was arrested by Dr. Francia in Paraguay as a spy, kept prisoner there for about nine years; was released, and settled in the prov. of Corrientes, where he died; wrote several works bearing on plants (1773-1858).

BONSTETTEN, CHARLES VICTOR VON, a Swiss publicist and judge, born at Bern; wrote on anthropology, psychology, &c. (1745-1832).

BONTemps, ROGER, a French personification of a state of leisure and freedom from care.

BONZE, a Buddhist priest in China, Japan, Burmah, &c.

BOOMERANG, a missile of hard curved wood used by the Australian aborigines, usually between 2 and 3 ft. long and 3 ins. wide; a deadly weapon, so constructed that, though thrown forward, it takes a whirling course, and when it misses the mark returns with a swoop and falls in the rear of the thrower.

BOONE, DANIEL, American backwoodsman, pioneer and explorer; did much to open Kentucky to settlement; the hero of many fights and adventures with Red Indians (1735-1820).

BOOTES (the ox-driver or waggoner), a son of Ceres; inventor of the plough in the Greek mythology; translated along with his ox to become a constellation in the northern sky, the brightest star in which is Arcturus.

BOOTH, BARTON, English actor, acted Shakespearean characters and in Addison's "Cato" (1681-1730).

BOOTH, BRAMWELL, general of the Salvation Army. He succeeded his father after 32 years as chief of staff. In 1928 he was taken ill, and the High Council removed him from office despite strenuous opposition on the part of the Booth family. He died a few months later (1856-1929).

BOOTH, EDWIN THOMAS, greatest of American tragedians, famous for Shakespearean impersonations; appeared with success in England (1833-1893).

BOOTH, JOHN WILKES, actor, brother of above; served with the Southern forces in the American Civil War and, after their defeat, assassinated Lincoln; he was shot by his captors (1839-1865).

BOOTH, WILLIAM, founder and general of the Salvation Army, born in Nottingham; published "In Darkest England"; a man of singular self-devotion to the religious and social welfare of the race (1829-1912).

BOOTHIA, a peninsula of British N. America, W. of the Gulf of Boothia, in which the N. magnetic pole of the earth is situated; discovered by Sir James Clark Ross in 1829.

BOOTON, an island in the Malay Archipelago, SE. of Celebes; subject to the Dutch.

BOFF, FRANZ, a celebrated German philologist and Sanskrit scholar, born at Mayence; was professor of Oriental Literature and General Philology at Berlin; his greatest work, "A Comparative Grammar of Sanskrit, Zend, Greek, Latin, Lithuanian, Old Slav, Gothic, and German"; translated portions of the "Mahabharata" q.v. (1791-1867).

BORA, KATHARINA VON, the wife of Luther, born in Meissen, originally a nun, who, with eight others, was at Luther's instance released from her convent; proved "a pious and faithful wife" to Luther, as he says of her, and became the mother of six children, three sons and three daughters (1499-1552).

BORAX, the borate of soda, found in the mineral colemanite. It is used for enamels, glasses, &c., for softening hard water, and as an antiseptic.

BORDA, JEAN CHARLES DE, a French mathematician and physicist, born at Dax, in the dep. of Landes, served in both army and navy; one of those employed in measuring an arc of the meridian to establish the metric system in France (1733-1799).

BORDEAUX, a great industrial and commercial city, the chief seat of the wine trade in France, and the third seaport on the Gironde; cap. of the dep. of Gironde; the birthplace of Rosa Bonheur, and Richard III., his father, the Black Prince, having had his seat here as governor of Aquitaine. There are sugar-refineries, potteries, foundries, glass and chemical works. The cod-fishing industry has its base here. A cathedral dates from the 11th century. There are schools of science, art, theology, medicine, and navigation, a library, museum, and rich picture-gallery. It became the seat of the French Government in 1914 when the fall of Paris seemed imminent.

BORDEN, RT. HON. SIR ROBERT LAIRD, Canadian statesman. Succeeding to the leadership of the Conservative Party in 1896, after a distinguished legal career, he became Prime Minister in 1911, and held the post till 1920, frequently visiting London during the war to co-operate with the British Cabinet (1854-).

BORDERS, THE, the shifting boundary between Scotland and England before the Union, a centre of endless fighting and marauding on the opposite sides for centuries.

BORDONE, an Italian painter, born at Treviso, a pupil of Titian and Giorgione; his most celebrated picture, "The Gondoller presenting the Ring of St. Mark to the Doge" (1500-1570).

BORE, a watery ridge rushing violently up an estuary, due to a strong tidal wave travelling up a gradually narrowing channel. Bores are common in the estuary of the Ganges and other Asiatic rivers, in those of Brazil, and at the mouth of the Severn, in England.

BOREAS, the god of the north wind, and son of the Titan Astræus and of Aurora.

BORGHESE, name of a family of high position and great wealth in Rome; Camillo, having become Pope in 1605 under the title of Paul V.; and Prince Borghese having married Pauline Bonaparte, sister of Napoleon, who separated himself from her on the fall of her brother (1775-1832); the palace of the family one of the finest in Rome, with a rich collection of paintings.

BORGHESE, COUNT, an Italian savant skilled in numismatics (1761-1860).

BORGIA, CÉSAR, fourth son of Pope Alexander VI.; was made cardinal at the age of 17, an honour he relinquished to become a soldier, in which capacity it is alleged he gave himself up to deeds of inhumanity, which have made his name a synonym for every action that is most crafty, revolting, and cruel; a portrait of him by Raphael, in the Borghese gallery, is a masterpiece. Notwithstanding the execration in which his memory is held, he is reputed to have been just as a ruler in his own domain, and a patron of art and literature (1475-1507).

BORGIA, FRANCESCO, third general of the Order of the Jesuits, a post he filled with great zeal as well as prudent management; was beatified by Urban VIII., and canonised by Clement IX., 1671 (1510-1572).

BORGIA, LUCRETIA, sister of César Borgia, born at Rome; her father annulled her first marriage, and gave her to a nephew of the king of Naples, who was murdered by her brother's assassins, when she married the Duke of Ferrara; was celebrated for her beauty and her patronage of letters, though she has been accused of enormities as well as her brother (1480-1519).

BORGU, fertile and densely-peopled state in Africa, traversed by the Niger, a British vassal state, in one of the chief towns of which Mungo Park lost his life.

BORIS III., Czar of Bulgaria, son of Ferdinand; succeeded his father on his abdication in October, 1918 (1894-).

BORN, BERTRAND DE, one of the most celebrated troubadours of the 12th century, born in Perigord, aggravated the quarrel between Henry II. of England and his sons; is placed by Dante in the "Inferno."

BORNE, LUDWIG, a political writer, born at Frankfurt, of Jewish parentage, but later became a Christian; disgusted with the state of things in Germany, went to Paris after the Revolution there of 1830; was disappointed with the result, and turned Radical; he and Heine were at deadly feud (1788-1887).

BORNEO, an island in the Malay Archipelago, the third largest on the globe, Greenland and New Guinea being larger; its length 800 m., and its breadth 700, covered with mountains in the interior, Kinabalu the highest (19,000 ft.); has no volcanoes; bordered all round with wide plains and low, marshy ground; rich in vegetation and in minerals, in gold and precious stones; its forests abound with valuable timber, teak, ebony, &c.; all tropical crops and spices are cultivated; the population is Dyak, Malay, and Chinese; possessed in great part by the Dutch, and in the north part by the British.

BORNHOLM, an island belonging to Denmark, in the Baltic; has no good harbour; agriculture, cattle-breeding, and fishing the occupation of the inhabitants.

BORNU, a Mohammedan State in the Central Sudan, lying partly in Nigeria, W. and S. of Lake Chad; famed for a breed of horses; population mostly negroes; the ruling race of Arab descent, called Shuwas; climate hot and unhealthy in the low ground, but temperate in the high.

BORO BUDOR, the ruin of a magnificent Buddhist temple in Java, ornamented with figures of Buddha and scenes in his life, with representations of battles, processions, chariot races, &c.

BORODINO, a village 70 m. W. of Moscow; the scene of a bloody battle between Napoleon and the Russians, Sept. 7, 1812.

BORORO, an important native Brazilian nation between Cuyaba and Goyas, noted for the height of its people.

BOROUGH, in Scotland BURGH, is in its modern sense primarily a town that sends a representative to Parliament; but it is further an area of local government, under a mayor and corporation, exercising police, sanitary, and sometimes educational supervision, and deriving its income from rates levied on property within its bounds, and in Scotland sometimes from "common good" and petty customs. Its charter may be held from the Crown or granted by Parliament.

BOROWLASKI, COUNT, a Polish dwarf, of perfect symmetry, though only three feet in height; attained the age of 98 (1739-1837).

BORROME'AN ISLANDS, four islands in Lake Maggiore, Italy, of which three were converted into gardens by Count Borromeo in 1671, on one of which, Isola Bella, stands a palace of the Borromeos, enriched with fine paintings and other works of art.

BORROME'O, ST. CARLO, cardinal and archbishop of Milan, a prominent member of the Council of Trent, who contributed to the Tridentine Catechism; conspicuous by his self-sacrificing offices during a plague in the city of which he was the archbishop; canonised by Pope Paul V. in 1610 (1538-1584).

BORROMEO, FREDERIGO, COUNT, nephew and successor of the preceding, of equal station in the Church, and similar character (1564-1631).

BORROW, GEORGE HENRY, traveller and philologist, born in Norfolk; showed early a passion for adventure and a facility in languages; was appointed agent for the Bible Society in Russia and Spain; in his fondness for open-air life, associated much with the gipsies; wrote an account of those in Spain, and a famous book, entitled "The Bible in Spain"; also "The Romany Rye" and "Lazarillo"; his masterpiece (a gipsy designation applied to him, meaning "word-master," which he was), which is chiefly autobiography (1803-1881).

BORROWDALE, a valley in the Lake District, W. Cumberland, celebrated for its beautiful scenery.

BORTHWICK CASTLE, a ruined peel tower, 13 m. S.E. of Edinburgh, where Queen Mary and Bothwell spent four days together in June, 1567.

BORY DE SAINT-VINCENT, JEAN BAPTISTE, a

French traveller and naturalist; explored Réunion and St. Helena (1780-1846).

BOSBOOM, JAN, Dutch painter who specialised in local landscapes and church interiors (1817-1891).

BOSCAWEN, SIR EDWARD, a British admiral, known from his fearlessness as "Old Dreadnought"; distinguished himself in engagements at Puerto Bello, Cartagena, Cape Finisterre, and the Bay of Lagos, where, after a "sea hunt" of 24 hours, he wrecked a fine French fleet, eager to elude his grasp (1711-1763).

BOSCOVICH, ROGER JOSEPH, an Italian mathematician and astronomer, born at Ragusa; entered the Order of the Jesuits; was professor in Pavia, and afterwards at Milan; discovered the equator of the sun and the period of its rotation; advocated the molecular theory of physics, with which his name is associated; died insane (1711-1787).

BOSE, SIR JAGADIS CHANDRA, Indian botanist, devoted himself to the study of the nervous system in plants and obtained many remarkable results (1858-).

BOSIO, BARON, a celebrated Italian sculptor; patronised in France (1769-1846).

BOSNA-SERAI, old name of Seraljevo.

BOSNIA, a province in NW. of the Balkan Peninsula, part of Jugo-Slavia; the inhabitants of Serbian extraction.

BOSNIA AND HERZEGOVINA, since 1919 part of Jugo-Slavia, lying at the NW. of the Balkans and adjoining Croatia and Slavonia on the N. In 1908 the district was annexed by Austria-Hungary.

BOS'PHORUS (Ox-ford), a channel 17 m. long and from $\frac{1}{2}$ to 3 m. broad, and about 30 fathoms deep, strongly defended by forts, extending from the Sea of Marmora to the Black Sea. It derives its name from the channel which, according to the Greek myth, Zeus, in the form of an ox, crossed into Europe, with Europa on his back.

BOSQUET, PIERRE FRANÇOIS JOSEPH, a marshal of France, distinguished in Algiers and the Crimea; was wounded at the storming of the Malakoff (1810-1861).

BOS'SUET, JACQUES BÉNIGNE, bishop of Meaux, born at Dijon, surnamed the "Eagle of Meaux"; one of the greatest of French pulpit orators, and one of the ablest defenders of the doctrines of the Catholic Church; the great aim of his life the conversion of Protestants back to the Catholic faith; took a leading part in establishing the rights of the Gallican clergy, or rather of the Crown, as against the claims of the Pope; proved himself more a time-server than a bold, outspoken champion of the truth; conceived a violent dislike to Madame Guyon, and to Fénelon for his defence of her and her Quietist; and he is not clear of the guilt of the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes; wrote largely; his "Discourse on Universal History" is on approved lines, and the first attempt at a philosophy of history; his Funeral Orations are monuments of the most sublime eloquence; while his "Politique founded on Holy Scripture" is a defence of the divine right of kings (1627-1704).

BOSTON, a Lincolnshire seaport, on the Witham, 30 m. S.E. of Lincoln; exports coal, machinery, corn, and wool, and imports timber and general goods. There is a large cattle and sheep market, also canvas and sailcloth works. For the martyrologist, was a native. It has a spacious church, which is a conspicuous landmark and beacon at sea.

BOSTON, on Massachusetts Bay, is the capital of Massachusetts and the chief city of New England. With an excellent harbour and eight converging railways it is an emporium of trade, and very wealthy. Sugar, wool, hides, and chemicals are imported; farm produce, cattle, cotton, and tobacco exported; boot- and shoe-making is one of many varied industries. The many educational institutions and its interest in literature and art have won for it the title of American Athens. Among famous natives were Franklin, Poe, and Emerson; while most American men of letters have been associated with it. The Boston riots of 1770 and 1773 were the heralds of the revolution, and the first battle was fought at Bunker Hill, not far off, now included in it. BOSTON, THOMAS, a Scottish divine, born at Duns, educated at Edinburgh, became minister of Ettrick;

- author of the "Fourfold State," a popular exposition of Calvinism, and "The Crook in the Lot," both at one time much read and studied by the pious Presbyterian burghers and peasantry of Scotland; the former an account of the state of man, first in innocence, second as fallen, third as redeemed, and fourth as in glory. He was a shrewd man and a quaint writer; exercised a great influence on the religious views of the most pious-minded of his countrymen (1676-1782).
- BOSTON TEA-PARTY, the insurgent American colonists who, disguised as Indians, boarded, on Dec. 16, 1773, three English ships laden with tea, and hurled several hundred chests of it into Boston harbour, "making it black with unexpected tea."
- BOSWELL, JAMES, the biographer of Johnson, born in Edinburgh, showed early a penchant for writing and an admiration for literary men; fell in with Johnson on a visit to London in 1763, and conceived for him the most devoted regard; made a tour with him to the Hebrides in 1773, the "Journal" of which he afterwards published; settled in London, and was called to the English bar; succeeded, in 1782, to his father's estate, Auchinleck, in Ayrshire, with an income of £1600 a year. Johnson dying in 1784, Boswell's "Life" of him appeared five years after, a work unique in biography, and such as no man could have written who was not a hero-worshipper to the backbone. He succumbed in the end to intemperate habits, aggravated by the death of his wife (1740-1796).
- BOSWELL, SIR ALEXANDER, son and heir of the preceding, an antiquary; mortally wounded in a duel with James Stuart of Dunearn, who had impugned his character, for which the latter was tried, but acquitted (1775-1822).
- BOSWORTH, a town in Leicestershire, near which Richard III. lost both crown and life in 1485, an event which terminated the Wars of the Roses and led to the accession of the Tudor dynasty to the throne of England in the person of Henry VII.
- BOSWORTH, JOSEPH, an Anglo-Saxon scholar, born in Derbyshire; became professor of Anglo-Saxon at Oxford; was the author of an Anglo-Saxon Grammar and Dictionary (1789-1876).
- BOTANY BAY, an inlet in New South Wales, 6 m. S. of Sydney; discovered by Captain Cook in 1770; so called, by Sir Joseph Banks, from the variety and beauty of its flora; convict settlement at Sydney, known by the name, abolished in 1840.
- BOTH, JOHN AND ANDREW, Flemish painters of the 17th century, the former a landscape and the latter a figure painter; worked frequently on the same canvas.
- BOTHA, GENERAL LOUIS, South African statesman. One of the leading Boer generals in the South African war; he became first Prime Minister of the Transvaal in 1907 and of the Union in 1910. He took up his military career again in 1914 and led the South Africans against the German colonies, besides stamping out a rebellion fomented by Germany. He attended the 1919 Peace Conference (1863-1919).
- BOTHNIA, a prov. of Sweden, divided into E. and W. by a gulf of the name.
- BOTHWELL, a village in Lanarkshire, on the Clyde, 8 m. SE. of Glasgow; scene of a battle between Monmouth and the Covenanters in 1679.
- BOTHWELL, JAMES HEPBURN, EARL OF, one of the envoys sent in 1560 to convey Mary, Queen of Scots, from France home; was made Privy Counsellor the year after; had to flee to France for an act of conspiracy; was recalled by Mary on her marriage with Darnley; was a great favourite with the queen; was believed to have murdered Darnley, though when tried was acquitted; carried off Mary to Dunbar Castle; was pardoned and made Duke of Orkney, and married to her at Holyrood; parted with her at Carberry Hill; fled to Norway, and was kept captive there at Malmoe; after ten years of misery he died, insane, as is believed (1525-1577).
- BOTOGUDOS, a wandering wild tribe in the forests of Brasil, near the coast; a very low type of men, and at a very low stage of civilization; are demon-worshippers, and are said to have no numerals beyond one.
- BO-TREE, a species of Ficus, also known as the Pipal tree, sacred to the Buddhists as the tree under which Buddha sat when the light of life first dawned on him. See BUDDHA.
- BOTTA, CARLO GIUSEPPE, an Italian political historian, born in Piedmont; his most important work is his "History of Italy from 1789 to 1814"; was the author of some poems (1766-1887).
- BOTTA, PAUL EMILE, Assyriologist, born at Turin, son of the preceding; when consul at Mosul, in 1843, discovered the ruins of Nineveh; made further explorations, published in the "Memoire de l'Academie des Inscriptions et Belles-Lettres" and "Monuments de Ninive" (1803-1870).
- BOTTICELLI, SANDRO, or ALESSANDRO, a celebrated painter of the Florentine school; began as a goldsmith's apprentice; a pupil of Fra Lippo Lippi; the best-known examples of his art are on religious subjects, though he was no less fascinated with classical-mythological conceptions; is distinguished for his attention to details and for delicacy, particularly in the drawing of flowers (1447-1510).
- BOTTIGER, KARL AUGUST, German archaeologist, was a voluminous writer on antiquities, especially classical (1760-1838).
- BOTTOM, a weaver in the interlude in "A Midsummer Night's Dream," with whom, with his ass's head, Titania falls in love under the influence of a love-potion.
- BOTZARIS, or BOZZARIS, MARCOS, one of the heroes of the war of Greek Independence, known as the Leonidas of Greece (c. 1749-1823).
- BOUCHARDON, a celebrated French sculptor (1698-1770).
- BOUCHER, DE PERTHES, French archaeologist, a pioneer in the study of prehistoric man; devoted himself to the elucidation of the remains of palaeolithic man in the valley of the Somme (1748-1868).
- BOUCHER, FRANCOIS, a French painter of the Louis XV. period, born at Paris (1703-1770).
- BOUCICAULT, DION, a dramatic writer, author of popular Irish pieces, as "The Colleen Bawn" and "The Shaughraun" (1822-1890).
- BOUCICAULT, MARSHAL DE, one of the bravest and noblest of French soldiers, born at Tours; distinguished in several famous battles; was taken captive by the English at Agincourt; died in England (1364-1421).
- BOUDIN, EUGENE, French painter. Son of a Honfleur sea captain, he early took to art, being especially good at sky scenes. He was a friend of Corot, and made Normandy the subject of most of his painting (1825-1898).
- BOUFFLERS, CHEVALIER DE, field-marshal of France, courtier and author (1737-1815).
- BOUFFLERS, MARQUE DE, marshal of France, distinguished for his defence of Namur (1695) and of Lille (1708), and his masterly retreat from Malplaquet (1646-1711).
- BOUGAINVILLE, LOUIS ANTOINE DE, a French navigator, born in Paris; voyaged round the world, which occupied him two years and a half; his "Travels" had a remarkably stimulating effect on the imaginations of the "philosophes," as described by him in "Un Voyage autour du Monde" (1729-1811).
- BOUGH, SAMUEL, landscape painter, born at Carlisle, and settled in Edinburgh for 20 years (1822-1878).
- BOUGUER, PIERRE, French physicist, born in Brittany; wrote on optics and the figure of the earth (1698-1758).
- BOUGUEREAU, ADOLPHE, a distinguished French painter, born at Rochelle; his subjects both classical and religious, as well as portraits (1825-1905).
- BOUHOURS, DOMINIQUE, French litterateur, born at Paris (1623-1702).
- BOUILLE, MARQUIS DE, a French general, born in Auvergne, distinguished in the Seven Years' war, in the West Indies and during the Revolution; favoured the flight of Louis XVI.; did his utmost for royalty, failed, and quitted France; died in London, and left "Memoirs of the French Revolution" (1739-1800).
- BOUILLON, district in Belgium, originally a German duchy; belonged to Godfrey, the crusader, who pledged it to raise funds for the crusade.

- BOUILLY, JEAN NICOLAS, a French dramatist, born near Tours, nicknamed, from his sentimentality "poète lacrymal" (1763-1842).
- BOULAINVILLIERS, HENRI, COUNT DE, a French historian, author of a "History of Mohammed" (1658-1722).
- BOULAK, the port of Cairo, on the Nile.
- BOULANGER, JEAN MARIE, a French general, born at Rennes; of note for the political intrigues in which he was involved during the last years of his life, and the dangerous popular enthusiasm which he excited; accused of peculation; fed the country, and committed suicide at Brussels (1837-1891).
- BOULAY DE LA MEURTHE, ANTOINE, COUNT, a French statesman, distinguished as an orator; took part in the redaction of the Civil Code; was a faithful adherent of Napoleon (1761-1840). Henri, a son, Vice-President of the Republic from 1849 to 1851 (1797-1858).
- BOULDER, a large mass or block of rock found in localities often far removed from the place of its formation, and transported thither on the ice of the Glacial Age.
- BOULDER CLAY, the clayey material containing rocks and stones, which forms the deposits of the Pleistocene Age (q.v.). It was formed as a result of glacial action during the Ice Ages (q.v.).
- BOULEVARD, the rampart of a fortified city converted into a promenade flanked by rows of trees, and a feature of Paris in particular, though the boulevard is not always on the line of a rampart.
- BOULOGNE, BOIS DE, a promenade between Paris and St. Cloud, much frequented by people of fashion, and a favourite place of recreation. It rivals that of the Champs Elysées.
- BOULOGNE-SUR-MER, a fortified seaport in France, on the English Channel, in the dep. of Pas-de-Calais, 27 m. SW. of Calais, one of the principal ports for debarkation from England; where Napoleon collected in 1803 a flotilla to invade England; is connected by steamer with Folkestone, and a favourite watering-place; the chief station of the North Sea fisheries; in the centre of an important coasting trade. It was used as a port of landing for part of the British Expeditionary Force (q.v.), and by British troops throughout the Great War.
- BOULOGNE-SUR-SEINE, a town on the right bank of the Seine, 5 m. SW. of Paris, from which it is separated by the Bois-de-Boulogne.
- BOULTON, MATTHEW, an eminent engineer, born in Birmingham; entered into partnership with James Watt, and established with him a manufactory of steam-engines at Soho, on a barren heath near his native place; contributed to the improvement of the coinage (1728-1809).
- BOUNTY, MUTINY OF THE, a mutiny which took place on the ship Bounty, on April 28, 1789, bound from Otaheite to the West Indies, on the part of 25 of the crew, who returned to Otaheite after setting the captain (Bligh) adrift with others in an open boat. Bligh (q.v.) reached England after a time, his report leading to the seizure at length of certain of the offenders and the execution of others. Those who escaped founded a colony on Pitcairn Island.
- BOURBAKI, CHARLES DENIS SAUTER, a French general, born at Pau, served in the Crimean war and in Italy, suffered disastrously in the Franco-German war, and attempted suicide; served for a time under Gambetta, afterwards retired (1816-1897).
- BOURBON, a family of French origin, hailing from Bourbonnais, members of which occupied for generations the thrones of France, Naples, and Spain, and who severally ruled their territories under a more or less overweening sense of their rights as born to reign. Two branches, both of which trace back to Henry IV., held sway in France, one beginning with Louis XIV., eldest son of Louis XIII., and the other, called the Orleans, with Philip of Orleans, second son of Louis XIII., the former ending with Charles X. and his family, and the latter ending with Louis Philippe and his line. The branches of the family ruling in Spain and Naples began with Philip VI., grandson of Louis XIV., the former branch still on the throne, the latter ending with Francis II. in 1860.
- BOURBON, CHARLES DE, styled the Constable de Bourbon, acquired immense wealth by the death of an elder brother and by his marriage, and lived in royal state; was for his daring in the field named Constable of France by Francis I.; offended at some, perhaps imaginary, injustice Francis did him, he clandestinely entered the service of the Emperor Charles V., defeated the French at Pavia, and took Francis captive; parted from Charles, laid siege to Rome, and fell in the assault, mortally wounded. It is said, by Benvenuto Cellini (1490-1527).
- BOURBONNAIS, ancient province in the centre of France, being the duchy of Bourbon; united to the crown in 1531; cap. Moulins.
- BOURDALOUE, LOUIS, a French Jesuit, born at Bourges, called the "king of preachers, and preacher of kings"; one of the most eloquent pulpit orators of France; did not suffer by comparison with Bossuet, his contemporary, though junior. His sermons are ethical in their matter from a Christian standpoint, carefully reasoned, and free from ornament, but fearless and uncompromising (1632-1704).
- BOURDON, SEBASTIAN, a French painter, born at Montpellier; his chef-d'œuvre "The Crucifixion of St. Peter," executed for the church of Notre Dame (1616-1681).
- BOURDON DE L'OISE, a French revolutionist, member of the Convention; banished to Guiana, where he died in 1797.
- BOURGOIS, SIR FRANCIS, painter to George III.; left his collection to Dulwich College, and £10,000 to build a gallery for them (1756-1811).
- BOURGOISIE, the name given in France to the middle class, professional people, and merchants, as distinguished from the nobles and the peasants, but applied by the Socialists to the capitalists as distinct from the workers.
- BOURGES, a French town in the dep. of Cher; birth-place of Louis XI. and Bourdaloue.
- BOURGET, PAUL, an eminent French novelist and essayist, born at Amiens; a subtle analyst of character, with a clear and elegant style, on which he bestows great pains; his novels are what he calls "psychological," and distinct from the romanticist and naturalistic (1852-).
- BOURIGNON, ANTOINETTE, a Flemish visionary and fanatic; resolved religion into emotion; brought herself into trouble by the wild fancies she promulgated, to the derangement of others as well as herself (1615-1680).
- BOURMONT, LOUIS AUGUSTE VICTOR, COMTE DE, a French marshal; at the Revolution joined the Bourbons on the frontiers; served the royal cause in La Vendée; held high commands under Napoleon; commanded under Ney on Napoleon's return from Elba, deserted on the eve of Waterloo to Louis XVIII.; gave evidence against Ney to his execution; commanded the expedition against Algiers; refused allegiance to Louis Philippe on his accession, and was dismissed the service (1773-1846).
- BOURNE, HUGH, founder of the Primitive Methodists, and a zealous propagator of their principles; he was a carpenter, and appears to have wrought at his trade while prosecuting his mission, which he did extensively both in Britain and America (1772-1852).
- BOURNEMOUTH, a town in Hants, on Poole Bay, 37 m. SW. of Southampton, with a fine sandy beach; a great health resort; is of recent, and has been of rapid, growth.
- BOURRIENNE, LOUIS ANTOINE FAUVELET, secretary of Napoleon, and a school friend, born at Sens; held the post for five years, but dismissed for being implicated in disgraceful money transactions; joined the Bourbons at the Restoration; the Revolution of 1830 and the loss of his fortune affected his mind, and he died a lunatic at Caen; wrote "Mémoires" disparaging to Napoleon (1769-1834).
- BOUSSA, a town in North Nigeria, where Mungo Park, the explorer, in 1806, lost his life as he was going up the Niger.
- BOUSTROPHE DON, an ancient mode of writing from right to left, and then from left to right as in ploughing a field.
- BOUTERWEK, FRIEDRICH, a German philosopher

- and professor of Philosophy at Göttingen; a disciple of Kant, then of Jacobi, and expounder of their doctrines; wrote "History of Poetry and Eloquence among the Modern Races" (1766-1829).
- BOWDICH, THOMAS EDWARD, an English traveller, born at Bristol; sent on a mission to Guinea, and penetrated as far as Coomassie; wrote an interesting account of it in his "Mission to Ashanti" (1791-1824).
- BOWDITCH, NATHANIEL, American mathematician, born at Salem, Massachusetts; a practical scientist; published "Practical Navigation," translated the "Mécanique Céleste" of Laplace, accompanied with an elaborate commentary (1773-1838).
- BOWLER, THOMAS, an English physician; edited expurgated editions of Shakespeare and Gibbon in the interest of moral purity; added in consequence a new term to the English language, Bowdlerism (1754-1825).
- BOWDOIN, JAMES, an American statesman, born in Boston, of French extraction; a zealous advocate of American independence; author of "Discourse on the Constitution of the United States" (1727-1790).
- BOWEN, RICHARD, a gallant British naval commander, distinguished himself in several engagements, and by his capture of the enemy's ships; killed by a musket-shot at the storming of Santa Cruz, at the moment when Nelson was wounded (1761-1797).
- BOWER, WALTER, abbot of Incheolm, Scottish chronicler; continued Fordun's History from 1153 down to the death of James I., in 1437 (1385-1449).
- BOWLES, WILLIAM LISLE, a poet, born in Northamptonshire; his sonnets, by their "linking," as Professor Saintsbury has it, "of nature's aspect to human feeling," were much admired by Coleridge, and their appearance is believed to have inaugurated a new era in English poetry, as developed in the Lake School (1762-1850).
- BOWLING, TOM, a typical British sailor in "Roderick Random."
- BOWLS, a popular British summer game, dates back to the 13th century. Henry VIII. was an exponent, and Francis Drake played at it just before the arrival of the Armada. The present rules were drawn up in the last century, and international games are now played.
- BOWRING, SIR JOHN, linguist and political writer, born at Exeter; friend and disciple of Bentham as well as editor of his works; first editor of Westminster Review; at the instance of the English Government visited the Continental States to report on their commercial relations; became governor of Hong-Kong; ordered the bombardment of Canton, which caused dissatisfaction at home (1792-1872).
- BOWYER, WILLIAM, printer and scholar, born in London; wrote on the origin of printing, and published an edition of the Greek New Testament with notes (1699-1777).
- "BOX AND COX," a farce by J. M. Morton, remarkable for a successful run which is said to have brought the author £7000. It was adapted as a comic opera by Gilbert and Sullivan.
- BOXER RISING, THE, an outburst of fanatical nationalist feeling in China, which broke out in riots in 1900. The Empress was largely in sympathy with the rioters, who besieged the legations in Peking, and attacked Europeans, especially missionaries. European troops and naval forces were sent out to end the trouble.
- BOY BISHOP, a boy chosen on December 6, St. Nicholas' Day, generally out of the choir, to act as bishop and do all his episcopal duties, except celebrate mass. For the term of his office, which varied, he was treated as bishop, and if he died during his tenure of it was buried with episcopal honours. The term of office was limited in 1279 to 24 hours, and the custom of the election abolished in Elizabeth's reign.
- BOY SCOUTS, an international organisation founded by Lord (then Sir Robert) Baden-Powell in 1908. Its motto is "Be Prepared," and it inculcates principles of citizenship, with instruction in sport, first aid, &c., for which badges are awarded. The movement spread to all parts of the world, and at the coming of age Jamboree at Birkenhead in 1929 50,000 Scouts from all nations attended.
- BOYARS, the old nobility of Russia, whose undue influence in the State was broken by Peter the Great; also the lauded aristocracy of Rumania.
- BOYCE, WILLIAM, composer, chiefly of church music, born in London; published a collection of the "Cathedral Music of the Old English Masters"; composed "Hearts of Oak," a naval song sung by ships' crews at one time before going into action (1710-1779).
- BOYDOTT, CAPTAIN, an Irish landlord's agent in Connaught, with whom the population of the district in 1880 refused to have any dealings on account of disagreements with the tenantry. Hence the term to "boycott."
- BOYD, ANDREW KENNEDY HUTCHISON, a Scottish clergyman and writer; bred for the bar, but entered the Church; known to fame as A.K.H.B.; author of "Recreations of a Country Parson," which was widely read, and of Reminiscences of his life; died at Bournemouth by mischance of swallowing a lotion instead of a sleeping-draught (1825-1890).
- BOYD, ZACHARY, a Scottish divine; regent of a Protestant college at Samur, in France; returned to Scotland in consequence of the persecution of the Huguenots; became minister of Haddingburgh, thence, and rector of the University; preached before Cromwell after the battle of Dunbar; author of the "Last Battell of the Soule in Death" and "Zion's Flowers," being mainly metrical versions of Scripture, called "Boyd's Bible" (1685-1653).
- BOYDELL, JOHN, an English engraver and print-seller, famous for his "Shakespeare Gallery," with 96 plates in illustration of Shakespeare, and the encouragement he gave to native artists, he issued also Hume's "History of England," with 196 plates in illustration (1719-1804).
- BOYER, BARON, French anatomist and surgeon; attendant on Napoleon, afterwards professor in the University of Paris; wrote works on anatomy and surgical diseases, which continued for long text-books on those subjects; was a man of very conservative opinions (1757-1833).
- BOYER, JEAN PIERRE, president of Hayti, born at Port-au-Prince of a negro and a Creole father; secured the independence of the country; held the presidency for 25 years from 1818, but, suspected of consulting his own advantage more than that of the country, was driven from power by a revolution in 1843; retired to Paris, where he spent the rest of his life and died (1776-1850).
- BOYLE, CHARLES, fourth Earl of Orrery, distinguished for the connection of his name with the Bentley controversy, and for its association with an astronomical contrivance by one Graham to illustrate the planetary system (1676-1731).
- BOYLE, RICHARD, first and great Earl of Cork, distinguished among Irish patriots and landlords for what he did to improve his estates and develop manufactures and the mechanical arts in Ireland, also for the honours conferred upon him for his patriotism; when Cromwell saw how his estates were managed he remarked that had there been one like him in every province in Ireland rebellion would have been impossible (1566-1643).
- BOYLE, THE HON. ROBERT, a distinguished natural philosopher, born at Lismore, of the Orrery family; devoted his life to science and contributed greatly to it, especially chemistry and pneumatics; was one of the originators of the Royal Society; showed that an acid combines with a base to form a salt; enunciated Boyle's law (q.v.); was the first to prepare methyl alcohol. His greatest work was "The Sceptical Chymist" (1626-1691).
- BOYLE LECTURES, the lectureship founded by the Hon. Robert Boyle in 1691, and held for a tenure of three years, the endowment being £50 per annum; the lecturer must deliver eight lectures in defence of Christianity, and some of the most eminent men have held the post.
- BOYLE'S LAW, that the volume of a given mass of gas varies inversely as the pressure, if the temperature remains constant.
- BOYNE, a river in Ireland, which flows through Meath into the Irish Sea; gives name to the battle in which William III. defeated the forces of James II. on July 1, 1690.

BOYS' BRIGADE, THE, an organisation founded in 1883 in Glasgow by Sir William Smith, aiming at the development of character and discipline on a religious basis.

BOZ, a nom de plume under which Dickens wrote at first, being his nickname when a boy for a little brother.

BRABANCONNE, LA, Belgium's national anthem, written at the time of the revolution, 1830; music by Van Campenhout.

BRABANT, in medieval times was an important prov. of the Low Countries, inhabitants Dutch, cap. Breda; is now divided between Holland and Belgium. It comprises three provs., the N. or Dutch Brabant; Antwerp, a Belgian prov., inhabitants Flemings, cap. Antwerp; and S. Brabant, also Belgian, inhabitants Walloons, cap. Brussels; the whole mostly a plain.

BRACHIOPODES, a group of bivalves abundant as fossils, especially in the Lower Paleozoic rocks. There are comparatively few living species, the best known being Lingula.

BRACHYCEPHALIC, the name given to skulls which are less than 1½ times as long as broad. This type of skull (roundhead) is found in the Alpine type of Europeans and distinguishes them from both the Nordic and Mediterranean peoples; a certain proportion of brachycephalic skulls is found among the populations of most of the countries of Central Europe. The roundheaded peoples appear to have been invaders from Central Asia after the Nordic and Mediterranean stocks were settled in Europe.

BRACTON, HENRY DE, an English "justice itinerant," a writer on English law of the 13th century; author of "De Legibus et Consuetudinibus Anglie," a "Treatise on the Laws and Customs of England," and the first attempt of the kind; d. 1268.

BRADAMANTE, sister to Rinaldo, and one of the heroines in "Orlando Furioso"; had a lance which unhorsed every one it touched.

BRADDOCK, EDWARD, British general, born in Perthshire; entered the Coldstream Guards, and became major-general in 1764; commanded a body of troops against the French in America; fell in an attempt to invest Fort Duquesne, and lost nearly all his men (1765-1766).

BRADFORD, a Yorkshire manufacturing town, on a tributary of the Aire, 9 m. W. of Leeds; it is the chief seat of worsted spinning and weaving in England, and has an important wool market; coal and iron mines are at hand, and ironworks and machinery-making are its other industries.

BRADLAUGH, CHARLES, a social reformer on secularist lines, born in London; had a chequered career; had for associate in the advocacy of his views Mrs. Annie Besant; elected M.P. for Northampton three over, but not allowed to sit till he took the oath, which he did in 1886; died respected by all parties in the House of Commons; wrote the "Impeachment of the House of Brunswick" (1888-1891).

BRADLEY, JAMES, astronomer, born in Gloucestershire; professor of Astronomy at Oxford, and astronomer-royal at Greenwich; discovered the aberration of light and the nutation of the earth's axis; made 50,000 astronomical observations (1693-1762).

BRADSHAW, GEORGE, an engraver of maps in Manchester; published maps illustrative of certain canal systems, and did the same service for railways, which developed into the well-known "Railway Guide" (1801-1853).

BRADSHAW, JOHN, president of the High Court of Justice for trial of Charles I., born at Stockport; bred for the bar; a friend of Milton; a thorough republican and opposed to the Protectorate; became president of the Council on Cromwell's death; was buried in Westminster; his body was exhumed and hung in chains at the Restoration (1602-1659).

BRADWARDINE, THOMAS, archbishop of Canterbury, surnamed "Doctor Profundus" from his treatise "De Causa Dei" against Pelagianism; chaplain to Edward III.; was present at Crécy and at the taking of Calais; died of the black death shortly after his consecration (1290-1348).

BRADWARDINE, the name of a baron and his daughter, the heroine of "Waverley."

BRAMMAR, a Scottish Highland district SW. of Aberdeenshire; much frequented by tourists, and resorted to for summer country quarters. It is famous for its annual Highland games.

BRAGA, a city, 34 m. NE. of Oporto, Portugal; the residence of the Primate; the capital of Minho.

BRAGANZA, capital of Trás-os-Montes, in Portugal; gives name to the royal dynasty of Portugal, called the House of Braganza, the eighth duke of Braganza having ascended the throne in 1640, on the liberation of Portugal from the yoke of Spain.

BRAGG, SIR WILLIAM HENRY, physicist, professor at Adelaide, Leeds, and London. He carried out research on radioactivity and X-rays, his greatest work being in connection with crystal structure, which he investigated by means of X-rays. In 1923 he was appointed Director of the Royal Institution (1867-).

BRAGG, WILLIAM LAWRENCE, son of the preceding, professor of Physics at Manchester University, 1919. He was associated with his father in researches on X-rays and crystal structure (1890-).

BRAGI, the Norse god of poetry and eloquence, son of Odin and Frigg; represented as an old man with a long flowing beard and unwrinkled brow, with a mild expression of face; received in Valhalla the heroes who fell in battle.

BRAGG, TOM, a celebrated tenor singer, known all over Europe, was particularly effective in rendering the national songs; born in London, of Jewish parents; composed operas, which, however, were only dramas interspersed with songs. Scott described him as "a beast of an actor, but an angel of a singer" (1774-1856).

BRAHE, TYCHO, a Swedish astronomer, of noble birth; spent his life in the study of the stars; discovered a new star in Cassiopeia; had an observatory provided for him on an island in the Sound by the king, where he made observations for 20 years; he was, on the king's death, compelled to retire under persecution at the hand of the nobles; accepted an invitation of the Kaiser Rudolf II. to Prague, where he continued his work and had Kepler for assistant and pupil (1546-1601).

BRAHMA, in the Hindu religion and philosophy at one time the formless spirit of the Universe, from which all beings issue and into which they all merge, and as such is not an object of worship, but a subject of meditation; and at another the creator of all things, of which Vishnu (q.v.) is the preserver and Shiva (q.v.) the destroyer, killing that he may make alive. See TRIMURTI.

BRAHMAN, or BRAHMIN, one of the sacred caste of the Hindus that boasts of direct descent from, or immediate relationship with, Brahma; its members are custodians and mediators of religion, and therefore of high-priestly rank.

BRAHMANAS, treatises on the ceremonial system of Brahmanism, with prescriptions bearing upon ritual, and abounding in legends and speculations.

BRAHMAPUTRA (i.e. son of Brahma), a river which rises in Tibet, circles round the E. of the Himalayas, and, after a course of some 1800 m., joins the Ganges, called the Rampo in Tibet, the Dihong in Assam, and the Brahmaputra in British India; it has numerous tributaries, brings down twice as much mud as the Ganges, and in the lower part of its course overflows the land, particularly Assam, like an inland sea.

BRAHMINISM, the creed and ritual of the Brahmans, or that social, political, and religious organisation which developed among the Aryans in the valley of the Ganges under the influence of the Brahmans. According to the religious conception of this class, Brahma, or the universal spirit, takes form or incarnates himself successively as Brahma, Vishnu, and Shiva, which triple incarnation constitutes a trimurti or trinity. In this way Brahma, the first incarnation of the universal spirit, had four sons, from whom issued the four castes of India—Brahmans, Kshatriyas, Vaisyas, and Sudras—all the rest being outcasts or pariahs. See CASTE.

BRAHMO-SOMAJ (i.e. church of God), a from traditional Hinduism, originated in 1880 by Rajaram Mohun Roy, and developed by Debendra Nath Tagore and Keshub Chandra Sen; founded on theistic, or rather monotheistic, i.e. unitarian principles, and the rational ideas and philosophy of Europe, as well as a profession of a sense of the brotherhood of man no less than the unity of God.

BRAHMS, JOHANNES, a distinguished composer, born at Hamburg; of great promise from a boy; settled in Vienna; famous as a performer as well as a composer (1833-1897).

BRAIDWOOD, JAMES, born in Edinburgh; director of the London fire brigade; distinguished for his heroism on the occasion of great fires both in Edinburgh and London (1790-1861).

BRAILLE, LOUIS, a blind Frenchman, invented printing in relief for the blind (1800-1862).

BRainerd, DAVID, American missionary to the Red Indians, born in Connecticut; his life was written by Jonathan Edwards, in whose house he died (1718-1747).

BRAMAH, JOSEPH, an engineer, born in Barnsley, Yorkshire; author of many mechanical inventions, 18 of which were patented, among others the hydraulic press and the lock, named after him (1748-1814).

BRAMANTE, DONATO, architect; laid the foundation of St. Peter's at Rome, which he did not live to complete (1444-1514).

BRAMHALL, JOHN, archbishop of Armagh, born in Yorkshire, a high-handed Churchman and initiator of Laud; was foolishly enough once to engage, nowise to his credit, in public debate with such a dialectician as Thomas Hobbes on the questions of necessity and free-will (1594-1663).

BRAMPTON, LORD (Sir Henry Hawkins), British judge. As counsel he took part in the Tichborne trial among others, and was made a judge in 1876. He retired in 1898 and was raised to the peerage (1817-1907).

BRAMWELL, SIR FREDERICK, civil engineer, president of the British Association in 1886, and previously of the Association of Engineers (1818-1903).

BRAND, JOHN, antiquary, born in Durham, wrote a "Popular Antiquities" (1744-1806).

BRANDAN, ST., ISLAND OF, an island reported by St. Brendan as lying W. of the Canary Islands; it figured on charts as late as 1755, and voyages of discovery were undertaken in quest of it as recently as the beginning of the 18th century, up to which time it was believed to exist.

BRANDENBURG, in the great northern plain of Germany, is a central Prussian province, and the nucleus of the Prussian kingdom; most of it a sandy plain, with fertile districts and woodlands here and there.

BRANDENBURG, THE HOUSE OF, an illustrious German family dating from the 10th century, from which descended the kings of Prussia.

BRANDT, a Swedish chemist; chanced on the discovery of phosphorus while in quest of a solvent to transmute metals, such as silver, into gold (1694-1768).

BRANDT, SEBASTIAN, a satirical writer, born at Strassburg; author of the "Narrenschiff" or "Ship of Fools," of which there have been many translations and not a few imitations (1468-1521).

BRANDY NAN, a nickname for Queen Anne, from her fondness for brandy.

BRANDYWINE CREEK, a small river in Delaware; scene of a victory of the British over the Americans in 1777.

BRANGWYN, FRANK, British artist. Born in Bruges, of Welsh extraction, he early became familiar with Flemish tapestry, a study that brought him in contact with William Morris (q.v.). At 16 he went to sea and added shipping to his studies. Has done much decorative work for public buildings (1867-).

BRANT, JOSEPH, Indian chief of the Mohawks, who sided with the British in the American war; a brave and good man (1742-1807).

BRANTÔME, PIERRE DE BOURDEUILLES, a French chronicler, contemporary of Montaigne, born in Perigord; led the life of a knight-errant, and wrote Memoirs remarkable for the free-and-easy, faithful, and vivid delineations of the characters of the most celebrated of his contemporaries (1540-1614).

BRASIDAS, a Spartan general, distinguished in the Peloponnesian war; his most celebrated action, the defeat at the expense of his life, in 423 B.C., of the flower of the Athenian army at Amphipolis, with a small body of helots and mercenaries.

BRASS, an alloy of copper and zinc in the proportion of two to one.

BRASS, SAMSON, a knavish attorney in Dickens' "Old Curiosity Shop"; affected feeling for his clients, whom he fleeced.

BRASSES, sepulchral tablets of a mixed metal, called latten, inlaid in a slab of stone, and insculptured with figures and inscriptions of a monumental character; the oldest in England is at Stoke d'Abernon, in Surrey.

BRASSEY, THOMAS, a great railway contractor, born in Cheshire; contracted for the construction of railways in all parts of the world (1805-1870).

BRAUN, AUGUSTE EMIL, German archaeologist, born at Gotha; works numerous and of value (1809-1886).

BRAXY, an inflammatory disease in sheep, due to a change in food from succulent to dry; and the name given to the mutton of sheep affected with it.

BRAY, a Berkshire village, famous for Simon Ayrton, its vicar from 1540 to 1588, who, to retain his living, never scrupled to change his principles; the well-known song makes him live during the five reigns from Charles II. to George I.

BRAZEN AGE, in the Greek mythology the age of violence, that succeeded the weak Silver Age. See AGES.

BRAZIL, the largest South American State, almost equal to Europe, occupies the eastern angle of the continent, and comprises the Amazon basin, the tablelands of Matto Grosso, the upper basin of the Paraguay, and the maritime highlands, with the valleys of the Parana and San Francisco. Great stretches of the interior are uninhabitable swamp and forest lands; forests tenanted by an endless variety of brilliantly plumed birds, and insects; the coasts are often humid and unhealthy, but the upper levels have a fine climate. Almost the country is within the tropics. The population at the seaports is mostly white; inland it is negro, mulatto, and Indian. Vegetable products are indescribably rich and varied; timber of all kinds, rubber, cotton, and fruit are exported; coffee and sugar are the chief crops. The vast mineral wealth includes diamonds, gold, mercury, and copper. Most of the trade is with Britain and America. The language is Portuguese; the religion, Roman Catholic; education is very backward and government unsettled. Discovered in 1500, and annexed by Portugal; the Portuguese king, expelled by the French in 1808, fled to his colony, which was made a kingdom 1815, and an empire in 1822. The emperor, Pedro II., was driven out in 1889, and a republic established on the federal system, which has been harassed since by desultory civil war. The capital is Rio de Janeiro; Bahia and Pernambuco, the other seaports.

BRAZIL-WOOD, a wood found in Brazil, of great value for dyeing red, the colouring principle being named Brazilin.

BRAZZA, an island in the Adriatic; is richly wooded; noted for its wines; yields marble.

BRAZZA, PIERRE SAVORGNAU DE, explorer, born in Rome; acquired land N. of the Congo for France, and obtained a governorship (1852-1906).

BREDEFTREE, a South Sea island tree producing fruit which, when roasted, is used as bread.

BREAKESPARE, NICHOLAS, the only Englishman to become Pope; was elected as Adrian IV.; born at Langley, Hert., entered monastic life in France, created cardinal in 1146, Pope in 1154 (1100-1159).

BREAI, MICHEL, a French philologist, born at Landau; translator into French of Bopp's "Comparative Grammar" (1832-1915).

BRECCIA, a rock composed of angular fragments cemented together, which are not water-worn, but probably the debris from surrounding rocks which has fallen into water and been consolidated.

BRECHE-DE-ROLAND, a gorge in the dep. of the Hautes-Pyrénées, which, according to tradition, Charlemagne's paladin of the name of Roland cleft with one stroke of his sword when he was beset by the Gascons.

BRECHIN, a town in Flintshire, W. of Montrose, on the S. Eak, with a cathedral and an old round tower near it, 86 ft. high.

BREDA, fortified town, the capital of N. Brabant; a place of historical interest; Charles II. resided here for a time during his exile, and issued hence his declaration prior to his restoration.

BREHON LAWS, a body of judge-created laws that for long formed the common law of Ireland, existing from prehistoric times till Cromwell's conquest. The origin of the code is unknown, and whether it was at first traditional, but there is reason to believe that the Brehons, or judges, were connected with the ancient priesthood, the Druids; many manuscript redactions of portions exist still.

BREMEN, the chief seaport of Germany, after Hamburg; is on the Weser, 50 m. from its mouth, and is a free city, with a territory less than Rutlandshire. Its export and import trade is very varied; half the total of emigrants sail from its docks; it is the headquarters of the North German Lloyd Steamship Company. Textiles, tobacco, and paper industries add to its prosperity; it was one of the principal cities of the Hanseatic League.

BREMER, FREDERIK, a highly popular Swedish novelist, born in Finland; "The Neighbours," "The President's Daughter," and "Strife and Peace," are perhaps his best stories; has been called the Jane Austen of Sweden (1801-1865).

BREMER, SIR JAMES, rear-admiral; distinguished in the Burmese and Chinese wars (1786-1850).

BREMERHAVEN, the port of Bremen, on the estuary of the Weser, founded for the accommodation of large vessels in 1830, with a large hospice for emigrants.

BRENDAN, ST., an Irish saint, born at Tralee, celebrated for his voyages in quest of "a land beyond human ken" and his discovery of "a paradise amid the waves of the sea"; founded a monastery at Clonfert; died in 577, in his ninety-fourth year.

BRENNER PASS, pass in the central Tyrolean Alps, 6853 ft. high, between Innsbruck and Bolzano, crossed by a railway, which facilitates trade between Venice, Germany, and Austria.

BRENNUS, a Gallic chief, who, 300 B.C., after taking and pillaging Rome, invested the Capitol for so long that the Romans offered him a thousand pounds' weight of gold to retire; as the gold was being weighed out he threw his sword and helmet into the opposite scale, adding Vae victis, "Woe to the conquered," an insolence which so roused Camillus that he turned his back and offered battle to him and to his army, and totally routed the whole host.

BRENTA, an Italian river; rises in the Tyrol, waters Bassano, and debouches near Venice.

BRENTANO, CLEMENS, poet of the romanticist school, born at Frankfurt-on-the-Main, brother of Goethe's Bettina von Arnim; was a roving genius (1778-1842).

BRENTFORD, market-town in Middlesex, on the Brent, 10 m. W. of London, that figures in history and literature.

BRENTFORD, 1ST BARON (Sir William Joynton-Hicks), British politician. By profession a solicitor, he entered Parliament in 1908, became Parliamentary Secretary for the Department of Overseas Trade in 1922 under Bonar Law, and in 1923 Postmaster-General. He was Home Secretary in Baldwin's 1924 Government, a post he held till 1929, in which year he was raised to the peerage. An ardent Low Churchman, he was largely responsible for the House of Commons' rejection of the new Prayer Book of 1927 (1865-).

BRENZ, JOHANN, the reformer of Württemberg, and one of the authors of the Württemberg Confession, as well as a catechism extensively used (1499-1570).

BRESCIA, a city of Lombardy, on the Mella and Garza, 50 m. E. of Milan; has two cathedrals, an art gallery and library, a Roman temple excavated in 1822 and now a classical museum; its manufactures are woollens, silks, leather, and wine.

BRESLAU, the capital of Silesia, and second city in Prussia; an important commercial and manufacturing centre, with a first-class fortress; is on the Oder, 150 m. by rail S.E. of Frankfurt; it stands in the centre of the Baltic, North Sea, and Danube trade, and has a large woollen industry and grain market; there are a cathedral, university, and library.

BRESSAY, one of the Shetland Isles, near Lerwick, with one of the best natural harbours in the world.

BREST, a strongly-fortified naval station in the extreme N.W. of France; one of the chief naval stations in France, with a magnificent harbour, and one of the safest, first made a marine arsenal by Richelieu; has large shipbuilding yards and arsenal; its industries are chiefly related to naval equipment, with leather, waxcloth, and paper manufactures.

BREST-LITOVSK, TREATY OF, an agreement between Russia and Germany signed in March, 1918, ending the War after a preliminary armistice the previous December.

BRETON, JULES ADOLPHE, a French genre and landscape painter, born at Courrières, in Pas-de-Calais (1827-1906).

BRETON DE LOS HERREROS, MANUEL, Spanish poet and dramatist; wrote comedies and satires in an easy, flowing style (1798-1873).

BRETEUIL, BARON DE, an ex-secretary of Louis XVI. (1733-1807).

BRETHREN OF THE COMMON LIFE, a Dutch branch of the "Friends of God," founded at Deventer about 1375 by Geert Groote (1340-1384) and Florentinus Radewijm (1350-1400). Thomas à Kempis and Erasmus were members.

BRETSCHNEIDER, HENRY GOTTFRIED VON, a German satirical writer, born at Gera; led a Bohemian life; served in the army; held political posts; composed, besides satirical writings, "Almanach der Heiligen auf das Jahr, 1788," "Walters Leben und Sitten," and the comic epic, "Graf Esau" (1739-1810).

BRETSCHNEIDER, KARL GOTTLIEB, a German rationalistic theologian; much regarded for his sound judgment in critical matters; his theological writings are of permanent value; his chief works, "Handbuch der Dogmatik," and an edition of Melancthon's works (1778-1848).

BRETWALDA, a title apparently of some kind of acknowledged supremacy among the Anglo-Saxon kings, and bestowed upon a leader in war.

BREUGHEL, a family of Dutch painters, a father and two sons, the father, Peter, called "Old" B. (1510-1570); a son, John, "Velvet" B., either from his dress or from the vivid freshness of his colours (1560-1625); and the other, Peter, "Hellish" B., from his fondness for horrible subjects (1559-1637).

BREVIARY, a book containing the daily services in the Roman Catholic Church and corresponding to the English Prayer Book; differs from the "Missal," which gives the services connected with the celebration of the Eucharist, and the "Pontifical," which gives those for special occasions.

BREWER, JOHN SHEPHERD, historian, professor of English Literature in King's College, London; author of "Calendar of Letters and Papers of Henry VIII.'s Reign," his work the sole authority on Henry's early reign (1810-1879).

BREWSTER, SIR DAVID, an eminent Scottish natural philosopher, born at Jedburgh; edited the "Edinburgh Encyclopedia," in the pages of which Carlyle served his apprenticeship; specially distinguished for his discoveries in connection with the polarisation of light, his studies in optics, and for his optical inventions, such as the kaleidoscope and the stereoscope; connected with most scientific associations of his time; wrote largely on scientific and other subjects, e.g. a Life of Newton, as well as Lives of Euler, Kepler, and others of the class; Principal of the United Colleges of St. Andrews, and afterwards of Edinburgh (1781-1868).

BREWSTER, WILLIAM, leader of the Pilgrim Fathers in the Mayflower, who conveyed them to Plymouth, Massachusetts, in 1620; had been a clergyman of the Church of England.

BRIAN BORUOHME, an Irish chief, who early in the 10th century established his rule over a great part of Ireland, and made great efforts for the civilisation of the country; died defeating the Danes at Clontarf, being, it is said, the twenty-fifth battle in which he defeated them.

BRIANÇON, the highest town in France, 4300 ft. above sea-level, 42 m. SE. from Grenoble, with a trade in cutlery.

BRIAND, ARISTIDE, French statesman. He first became Prime Minister in 1915 for two years, and took the helm several times subsequently. Throughout the post-war years he was prominent in the Peace Conferences and served for several years as Foreign Minister (1862-).

BRIAREUS, a Uranid with 50 heads and 100 arms, son of Ouranos and Gaia, i.e. Heaven and Earth, whom Poseidon cast into the sea and buried under Etna, but whom Zeus delivered to aid him against the Titans; according to another account, one of the Giants (g.v.).

BRICE, ST., bishop of Tours in the beginning of the 5th century, and disciple of St. Martin. Festival, Nov. 13.

BRICE'S, ST., a day in 1002 on which a desperate attempt was made to massacre all the Danes in England and stamp them wholly out, an attempt which was avenged by the Danish king, Sweyn.

BRIDE OF THE SEA, Venice, so called from a ceremony in which her espousals were celebrated by the Doge casting a ring into the Adriatic.

BRIDWELL, a house of correction in Blackfriars, London, so called from St. Bridget's well, near it, demolished in 1863.

BRIDGE OF ALLAN, a village on Allan water, 3 m. N. of Stirling, with a mild climate and mineral waters.

BRIDGE OF SIGHS, a covered way in Venice leading from the Ducal Palace to the State prison, over which culprits under capital sentence were transported to their doom, whence the name.

BRIDGEPORT, a thriving manufacturing town and seaport of Connecticut, U.S., 58 m. NE. from New York.

BRIDGES, ROBERT, British poet. He became a doctor on leaving Oxford, retiring in 1882 to devote his time to poetry; produced numerous volumes of verse, including lyric and narrative poems, sonnets, &c., and essays; was appointed Poet Laureate in 1913 (1844-1930).

BRIDGET, ST., an Irish saint, born at Dundalk; entered a monastery at 14; founded monasteries; takes rank in Ireland with St. Patrick and St. Columba. Festival, Feb. 1 (453-523). Also the name of a Swedish saint in the 14th century; founded a new Order, and 72 monasteries of the Order.

BRIDGETON, a manufacturing town in New Jersey, 38 m. S. of Philadelphia.

BRIDGETOWN, capital of Barbadoes, seat of the government, the bishop, a college, &c.; it has suffered frequently from hurricane and fever.

BRIDGEWATER, FRANCIS EGERTON, 3RD DUKE OF, celebrated for his self-sacrificing devotion to the improvement and extension of canal navigation in England, embarking in it all his wealth, in which he was aided by the skill of Brindley; he did not take part in politics, though he was a supporter of Pitt; died unmarried (1736-1803).

BRIDGEWATER, FRANCIS HENRY EGERTON, 5TH EARL OF, educated for the Church, bequeathed £8000 for the best work on natural theology, which his trustees expended in the production of eight works by different eminent men, called "Bridge-water Treatises," all to be found in Bohn's Scientific Library (1756-1829).

BRIDGMAN, LAURA, a deaf, dumb, and blind child, born in New Hampshire, U.S.; noted for the surprising development of intellectual faculty notwithstanding these drawbacks; Dickens gives an account of her in his "American Notes" (1829-1889).

BRIDGWATER, a seaport town in Somersetshire, 29 m. SW. of Bristol.

BRIDLEGOOSE, JUDGE, a judge in Rabelais' "Pantagruel," who decided cases by the throw of dice.

BRIDLINGTON, a watering-place in Yorkshire, 6 m. SW. of Flamborough Head, with a chalybeate spring.

BRIDPORT, VISCOUNT, a British admiral, distinguished in several engagements (1727-1814).

BRIEG, a thriving commercial town in Prussian Silesia, 25 m. SE. of Breslau.

BRIENNE, JEAN DE, descendant of an old French family; elected king of Jerusalem, then emperor of Constantinople (1148-1237).

BRIENZ, LAKE OF, lake in the Swiss canton of Bern, 8 m. long, 2 m. broad, over 800 ft. above sea-level, and of great depth in certain parts, abounding in fish. Town of B., a favourite resort for tourists.

BRIEU, ST., a seaport and an episcopal city in the dep. of Côtes-du-Nord, France.

BRIGHTONES, a powerful British tribe that occupied the country between the Humber and the Roman Wall.

BRIGHT, HENRY, a distinguished English mathematician; first Savilian professor at Oxford; made an important improvement on the system of logarithms, which was accepted by Napier, the inventor, and is the system now in use (1581-1630).

BRIGHAM YOUNG, the chief of the Mormons (1810-1877).

BRIGHT, SIR CHARLES TILSTON, engineer and electrician, a pioneer in telegraphy. He laid a cable across the Irish Sea in 1853, the first cable across the Atlantic from Ireland to Newfoundland in 1858, and the first cable to India, as well as inventing a number of improvements for land telegraphy (1832-1888).

BRIGHT, JAMES FRANCK, historian, Master of University College, Oxford; author of "English History for the Use of Public Schools," a book of superior literary merit (1832-1920).

BRIGHT, JOHN, English statesman, son of a Lancashire cotton millener, born near Rochdale; of Quaker birth and profession; engaged in manufacture; took an early interest in political reform; he joined the Anti-Corn-Law League on its formation in 1839, and soon was associated with Cobden in its great agitation; entering Parliament in 1843, he was a strong opponent of protection, the game laws, and later of the Crimean war; he advocated financial reform and the reform of Indian administration; and on the outbreak of the American Civil War supported the North, though his business interests suffered severely; he was closely associated with the 1867 Reform Act, Irish Church Disestablishment, 1869, and the 1870 Irish Land Act; his Ministerial career began in 1868, but was interrupted by illness; in 1873, and again in 1881, he was Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster; he succeeded from Gladstone's Government on the Egyptian policy in 1882, and strenuously opposed Home Rule in 1886; in 1880 he was Lord Rector of Glasgow University; he was a man of lofty and unblemished character, an animated and eloquent orator (1811-1889).

BRIGHTON, a much-frequented watering-place in Sussex, 50 m. S. of London, of which it is virtually a suburb; a place of fashionable resort ever since George IV. took a fancy to it; a fine parade extends along the whole length of the sea front; has many handsome buildings, an aquarium, a museum, schools of science and art, public library, and public gallery; the principal building is the Pavilion or Marine Palace, originally built for George IV. Also the name of a suburb of Melbourne.

BRIGHT'S DISEASE, a disease of the kidneys, due to several diseased conditions of the organ, so called from Dr. Richard Bright, who first investigated its nature.

BRIIL BROTHERS, MATTHEW AND PAUL, landscape painters, born at Antwerp; employed in the 16th century by successive Popes to decorate the Vatican at Rome; of them Paul, the younger, was the greater artist; his best pictures are in Rome.

BRILLAT-SAVARIN, ANTHELME, a French gastronomist, author of "Physiologie du Gout," a book full of wit and learning, published posthumously; was professionally a lawyer and some time a judge (1755-1825).

BRINDISI, a seaport of Southern Italy, on the Adriatic coast; has risen in importance since the opening of the Overland Route as a point of departure for the East; it is 60 hours by rail from London, and three days by steam from Alexandria; it was the port of embarkation for Greece in ancient times, and for Palestine in mediæval.

BRINDLEY, JAMES, a mechanician and engineer, born in Derbyshire; bred a millwright; devoted his skill and genius to the construction of canals, under the patronage of the Duke of Bridgewater, as the greatest service he could render to his country (1716-1772).

BRINVILLIERS, MARQUISE DE, notorious for her gallantries and for poisoning her father, brother, and two sisters for the sake of their property; was tortured and beheaded; the poison she used appears to have been the Tofana poison, an art which one of her paramours taught her (1630-1676). See AQUA TOFANA.

BRISBANE, capital of Queensland, on the Brisbane River, 25 m. from the sea, 500 m. N. of Sydney, is the chief trading centre and seaport of the Colony; it has steam communication with Australian ports and London, and railway communication with Sydney, Melbourne, and Adelaide; prosperity began when the colony was opened to free settlement in 1842; it was dislocated from New South Wales and the city incorporated in 1859.

BRISBANE, ADMIRAL SIR CHARLES, a naval officer of distinction under Lords Hood and Nelson; captured in 1796 Dutch warships, including three ships of the line, in Saldanha Bay, and in 1807 the island of Curacao; was made governor of St. Vincent (1769-1829).

BRISBANE, SIR JAMES, naval officer, brother of the preceding, served under Lord Howe and under Nelson at Copenhagen (1774-1836).

BRISBANE, SIR THOMAS MAKDOUGALL, British general, a man of science and an astronomer, born near Larn, Ayrshire; saw service as a soldier; was appointed governor of New South Wales, to the profit of the colony; gave name to the capital of Queensland; catalogued over 7000 stars; succeeded Scott as president of the Royal Society of Edinburgh, and was president of the British Association in 1834 (1773-1860).

BRISTEIS, a young virgin priestess, who fell to the lot of Achilles among the spoil of a victory, but whom Agamemnon carried off from him, whereupon he retired to his tent and sullenly refused to take any further part in the war, to its prolongation, in consequence, as Homer relates, for ten long years; the theme of the "Iliad" and being the "wrath of Achilles" on this account, and what it led to.

BRISBAC, the name of a noble family which supplied several marshals to France.

BRISON, HENRI, French publicist and journalist; after holding presidential posts in the Chamber became premier in 1885, but resigned after a few months; formed a Radical administration in 1898, which was short-lived (1835-1912).

BRISSET DE WARVILLE, JEAN PIERRE, a French revolutionary, born at Chartres, son of a pastry-cook; bred to the bar, took to letters; became an outspoken disciple of Rousseau; spent some time in the Bastille; liberated, he went to America; returned on the outbreak of the Revolution, sat in the National Assembly, joined the Girondists; became one of the leaders, or rather of a party of his own, named after him Brissotins, midway between the Jacobins and Girondists; fell under suspicion like the rest of the party, was arrested, tried, and guillotined (1754-1793).

BRISTOL, on the Avon, 6 m. from its mouth, and 118 m. W. of London, is the largest town in Gloucestershire, the seventh in England, and a great seaport, with Irish, W. Indian, and S. American trade; it manufactures tobacco, boots and shoes; it has a cathedral, two colleges, a library, and many educational institutions; by a charter of Edward III. it forms a county in itself.

BRISTOL CHANNEL, an inlet in SW. of England, between S. Wales and Devon and Cornwall, 8 m. in length, from 5 to 43 in breadth, and with a depth of from 5 to 40 fathoms; is subject to very high tides, and as such dangerous to shipping; numerous rivers flow into it.

BRITANNIA, a name for Britain as old as the days of Cæsar, when the island was inhabited by Celts, as Gaul also was.

BRITANNIA TUBULAR BRIDGE, a railway bridge spanning the Menai Strait, designed by Robert Stephenson, and completed in 1850; consists of hollow tubes of wrought-iron plates riveted together, and took five years to erect.

BRITANNICUS, the son of Claudius and Messalina, poisoned by Nero.

BRITISH ASSOCIATION, an association, of Sir David Brewster's suggestion, founded in 1831 of men of all departments of science for the encouragement of scientific research and the diffusion of scientific knowledge, which holds its meetings annually under the presidency of some distinguished scientist, now in this, now in that, selected central city of the country, and sometimes in the Dominions. It is divided into twelve sections—mathematics and physics, chemistry, geology, geography, anthropology, zoology, physiology, mechanics, agriculture, botany, education, economics and statistics.

BRITISH BROADCASTING CORPORATION, a semi-public body set up in 1927 to control broadcasting throughout the country and to supersede the British Broadcasting Co. which had been started in 1922.

BRITISH COLUMBIA, a western fertile prov. of British America, extending between the Rocky Mountains and the Pacific, and from the United States on the S. to Alaska on the N., being 800 m. long and four times the size of Great Britain; rich in timber and minerals; rain is abundant, and cereals do well.

BRITISH EMPIRE, THE, covers about a fifth of the globe and includes a quarter of its inhabitants. It consists primarily of the United Kingdom, India, Canada, Newfoundland, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, parts of Central Africa, and British Guiana.

BRITISH EMPIRE, ORDER OF THE, an order with civil and military divisions instituted in 1917; it has five classes: G.B.E., K.B.E., C.B.E., O.B.E., and M.B.E., of which the first two rank as knight-hoods.

BRITISH EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, landed in France on August 16, 1914, under the command of Sir John French, the first British troops to take part in the Great War.

BRITISH GAZETTE, THE, was published for the duration of the General Strike of May, 1926 (q.v.), by the Government, with Winston Churchill as editor.

BRITISH ISRAELITES, a sect who hold that the British are descendants of some of the lost tribes of Israel. See JEWS.

BRITISH LEGION, an organisation of ex-servicemen started in 1920 by Earl Haig (q.v.), who remained its president until his death.

BRITISH MUSEUM, a national institution in London for the collection of MSS., books, prints and drawings, antiquities, and objects of natural history, ethnology, &c.; founded as far back as 1700, though not opened, in Montagu House, till 1759; a public lottery helped to raise the necessary funds.

BRITOMART, a lady knight in the "Faerie Queene," representing chastity with a resistless magic spear.

BRITTANY, an old French prov., land of the Bretons, comprising the peninsula opposite Devon and Cornwall, stretching westward between the Bays of Cancale and Biscay; was in former times a duchy; a third of its inhabitants still retain their Breton language.

BRITTON, JOHN, topographer and antiquary, born in Wiltshire in humble position; author of "Beauties of Wiltshire," an instalment of a work embracing all the counties of England and Wales; his principal works, and works of value, are "Antiquities of Great Britain" and "Cathedral Antiquities of England," the latter in 14 volumes; his "Antiquities in Normandy" did much to create an interest in antiquarian subjects (1771-1857).

BRITXTON, a southern suburb of London, on the Surrey side, noted for its remand prison.

BROAD ARROW, a stamp like an arrow-head to indicate Government property, and used on convicts' dress; originally a royal mark on stores under the authority of the Earl of Romney, a master-general of ordnance (1693-1702).

BROAD BOTTOM MINISTRY, a coalition of great weight under Pelham, from Nov., 1744, to Mar., 1755, so called from the powerful parties represented in it.

BROAD CHURCH, that section of the Church of England which inclines to liberal opinions in theology, and is opposed to the narrowing of either spirit or form by Anglo-Catholics or Evangelicals.

BROADCASTING, See BRITISH BROADCASTING and WIRELESS.

BROADS, THE NORFOLK, are a series of inland lakes in the E. of that county, which look like expansions of the rivers; they are favourite holiday resorts on account of the expanse of fine scenery, abundant vegetation, keen air, fishing, and boating attractions. BROB DINGHAG, an imaginary country in "Gulliver's Travels," inhabited by giants, each as tall "as an ordinary spire-steeple"; properly a native of the country, in comparison with whom Gulliver was a pigmy, not half so big as a round little worm plucked from the lazy finger of a maid.

BROCA, PAUL, an eminent French surgeon, anthropologist, and one of the chief French evolutionists; held a succession of important appointments, and was the author of a number of medical works (1824-1890).

BROCHS, dry-stone circular towers, called also Picts' towers and Duns, with thick Cyclopean walls, a single doorway, and open to the sky, found on the edge of straths or lochs in the N. and W. of Scotland.

BROCK, SIR THOMAS, sculptor, born at Worcester; executed many notable monuments, including Lord Canning statue at Calcutta, statues of Sir Richard Owen and the Black Prince (at Leeds), and part of the National Memorial to Queen Victoria (1847-1922).

BROCKEN, or BLOCKSBURG, the highest peak (3740 ft.) of the Harz Mts. in Germany, cultivated to the summit; famous for a "Spectre" so called, long an object of superstition, but which is only the beholder's shadow projected through, and magnified by, the mists.

BROCKHAUS, FRIEDRICH ARNOLD, a German publisher, born at Dortmund; a man of scholarly parts; began business in Amsterdam, but settled in Leipzig; publisher of the famous "Conversations Lexikon," and a great many other important works (1772-1823).

BROCOLLIANDO, a forest in Brittany famous in Arthurian legend.

BRODIE, SIR BENJAMIN, surgeon, born in Wiltshire; for 30 years surgeon in St. George's Hospital; was medical adviser to three sovereigns; president of the Royal Society (1783-1862).

BRODIE, WILLIAM, a Scottish sculptor, born in Banff; did numerous busts and statues (1816-1881).

BROGLIE, ALBERT, son of the following, a Conservative politician and litterateur, author of "The Church and the Roman Empire in the 4th century." He was Premier of France in 1873 and 1877 (1821-1901).

BROGLIE, CHARLES VICTOR, DUC DE, a French statesman, born at Paris; a Liberal politician; was of the party of Guizot and Royer-Collard; held office under Louis Philippe; negotiated a treaty with England for the abolition of slavery; was an Orleanist, and an enemy of the Second Empire; retired after the coup d'état (1785-1870).

BROGLIE, VICTOR FRANÇOIS, DUC DE, marshal of France, distinguished in the Seven Years' war, being "a firm disciplinarian"; was summoned by royalty to the rescue as "war god" at the outbreak of the Revolution; could not persuade his troops to fire on the rioters; had to "mount and ride"; took command of the Emigrants in 1792, and died at Munster (1718-1804).

BROKE, SIR PHILIP BOWEN VERE, rear-admiral, born at Ipswich, celebrated for the action between his ship Shannon, 38 guns, and the American ship Chesapeake, 49 guns, in June, 1813, in which he boarded the latter and ran up the British flag; one of the most brilliant naval actions on record, and likely to be long remembered in the naval annals of the country (1776-1841).

BROMBERG, a busy town on the Brabe, in Posen, Poland. Being a frontier town, it suffered much in times of war.

BROME, ALEXANDER, a cavalier, writer of songs and lampoons instinct with wit, whim, and spirit; of his songs some are amatory, some festive, and some political (1626-1666).

BROME, RICHARD, an English comic playwright, contemporary with Ben Jonson, and a rival; originally his servant; his plays are numerous, and were characterised by his enemies as the sweepings of Jonson's study; d. 1652.

BROMINE, a liquid element of a dark colour and a disagreeable smell, extracted from bittern, a liquid which remains after the separation of salt.

BROMLEY, a suburb in Kent, 10 m. S.E. of London, where the bishops of Rochester had their palace.

BROMPTON, S.W. district of London, in Kensington, now called St. Kensington; a once rustic locality, which became a fashionable district, with several public buildings and the Oratory.

BRONSTED, PETER OLAF, a Danish archaeologist; author of "Travels and Researches in Greece," where by excavations he made important discoveries; his great work "Travels and Archaeological Researches in Greece" (1780-1842).

BROWNIAET, ADOLPHE, French botanist, son of the succeeding, the first to discover and explain the function of the pollen in plants (1801-1876).

BROWNIAET, ALEXANDER, a French chemist and zoologist, collaborator with Cuvier, born at Paris; director of the porcelain works at Sevres; revived painting on glass; introduced a new classification of reptiles; author of treatises on mineralogy and the ceramic arts (1770-1847).

BRONTE, a town in Sicily, on the western slope of Etna, which gave title of duke to Nelson.

BRONTE, the name of three sisters, Charlotte, Emily, and Anne, daughters of a Yorkshire clergyman of Irish extraction: Charlotte, born at Thornton, Yorkshire; removed with her father, at the age of four, to Haworth, a moorland parish, in the same county, where she lived most of her days; spent two years at Brussels as a pupil-teacher; on her return, in conjunction with her sisters, prepared and published a volume of poems under the pseudonyms respectively of "Currier, Ellis, and Acton Bell," which proved a failure. Nothing daunted, she set to novel writing, and her success was instant; first, "Jane Eyre," then "Shirley," and then "Villette," appeared, and her fame was established. In 1854 she married her father's curate, Mr. Nicholls, but her constitution gave way, and she died (1816-1855). Emily (Ellis), two years younger, poet rather than novelist; wrote "Wuthering Heights," a remarkable production, showing still greater genius, which she did not live to develop. Anne (Acton), four years younger, also wrote two novels, but very ephemeral productions.

BRONX SAURUS, a large dinosaur, remains of which have been found in the American Mesozoic strata. It had a length of 80 ft., weighed over 30 tons, and lived in swampy places, being herbivorous, unlike some other species of dinosaur.

BRONZE, an alloy of copper, tin, and zinc in varying proportions. The metal used for British coins contains 96 per cent. copper, 4 per cent. tin, and 1 per cent. zinc.

BRONZE AGE, the age in the history of a race intermediate between the Stone Age and the Iron, and in some cases overlapping these two, when weapons and tools were made of bronze.

BRONZINO, a Florentine painter, painted both in oil and fresco; a great admirer of Michael Angelo; his most famous picture, "Descent of Christ into Hell" (1502-1572).

BROOK FARM, an abortive literary community organized on Fourier's principles, 8 m. from Boston, U.S., by George Ripley in 1840; Nathaniel Hawthorne was one of the community, and wrote an account of it.

BROOKE, HENRY, Irish dramatist and novelist, born in Co. Cavan; author of the "Pool of Quality," a book commended by John Wesley and much lauded by Charles Kingsley, and the only one of his works that survives; wrote, among other things, a poem called "Universal Beauty," and a play called "Gustavus Vasa" (1708-1783).

BROOKE, SIR JAMES, rajah of Sarawak, born at Benares, educated in England; entered the Indian army; was wounded in the Burmese war, returned in consequence to England; conceived the idea of suppressing piracy and establishing civilization in the Indian Archipelago; sailed in a well-manned and well-equipped yacht from the Thames with that object; arrived at Sarawak, in Borneo; assisted the Sultan in suppressing an insurrection, and was made rajah, the former rajah being deposed in his favour; brought the province under good laws, swept the seas of pirates, for which he was rewarded by the English government; was appointed governor of Labuan; finally returned to England and died.

- being succeeded in Sarawak by a nephew (1803-1868).
- BROOKE, RUPERT, British poet. Educated at Rugby and Cambridge, he lived near Granchester. In 1914 he joined the navy and died of fever in hospital at Seyos in April, 1915. His Collected Poems, containing the well-known war sonnets, South Sea poems, and earlier work, all displaying the promise of his great gifts, were issued in 1925 (1887-1915).
- BROOKE, STOPFORD, preacher and writer, born in Donegal; after other clerical appointments became incumbent of Bedford Chapel, Bloomsbury, and Queen's chapel; from conscientious motives seceded from the Church, but continued to preach in Bloomsbury; wrote the "Life of Robertson of Brighton," a "Primer of English Literature," "History of English Poetry," "Theology in the English Poets," and "Life of Milton," all works in evidence of critical ability of a high order (1832-1916).
- BROOKLYN, a suburb of New York, on Long Island, though ranking as a city, and the fourth in the Union; separated from New York by the East River, a mile broad, and connected with it by a magnificent suspension bridge, the largest in the world, as well as by some 12 lines of ferry boats piled by steam; it is now incorporated in Greater New York; has 10 m. of water front, extensive docks and warehouses, and does an enormous shipping trade; manufactures include glass, clothing, chemicals, metallic wares, and tobacco; there is a naval yard, dock, and storehouse; the city is really a part of New York; has many fine buildings, parks, and pleasure grounds.
- BROOKS, CHARLES WILLIAM SHIRLEY, novelist and journalist, born in London; was on the staff of the Morning Chronicle; sent to Russia to inquire into and report on the condition of the peasantry and labouring classes there, as well as in Syria and Egypt; his report published in his Russians of the South; formed a connection with Punch in 1851, writing the "Lemon of Parliament," and succeeded Mark Lemon as editor in 1870; he was the author of several works (1816-1874).
- BROSSES, CHARLES DE, a French archaeologist, born at Dijon; wrote among other subjects on the manners and customs of primitive and prehistoric man (1709-1777).
- BROSSETTE, a French littérateur, born at Lyons; friend of Boileau, and his editor and commentator (1671-1743).
- BROTHERS, RICHARD, born in Newfoundland, a mystic and "prophet"; he was one of the founders of the belief that the English people represent the ten lost tribes of Israel (1757-1824).
- BROUGHAM, HENRY, LORD BROUGHAM AND VAUX, born in Edinburgh, and educated at the High School and University of that city; was admitted to the Scottish bar in 1800; excluded from promotion in Scotland by his liberal principles, he joined the English bar in 1808, speedily acquired a reputation as a lawyer for the defence in Crown libel actions, and, by his eloquence in the cause of Queen Caroline, 1820, won universal popular favour; entering Parliament in 1810, he associated with the Whig opposition, threw himself into the agitation for the abolition of slavery, the cause of education, and law reform; became Lord Chancellor in 1830, but four years afterwards his political career closed; he was a supporter of many popular institutions; a man of versatile ability and untiring energy; together with Horner, Jeffrey, and Sidney Smith, one of the founders of the Edinburgh Review, also of London University, and the Society for the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge; a writer on scientific, historical, political, and philosophical themes, but his violence and eccentricity hurt his influence; spent his last days at Cannes, where he died. A type of closed carriage is named after him (1778-1868).
- BROUGHAM, LORD. See HOBHOUSE.
- BROUGHAM, BEODA, novelist, her best work "Not Wisely but Too Well"; wrote also "Cometh up as a Flower," "Red as a Rose is She" (1840-1893).
- BROUGHAM, WILLIAM ROBERT, an English sea-
- man, companion of Vancouver; discovered a portion of Oceania (1763-1822).
- BROUGHTY FERRY, a watering-place, with villas, near Dundee, and a favourite place of residence of Dundee merchants.
- BROUSSA, a city in the extreme NW. of Turkey, at the foot of Mt. Olympus, 12 m. from the Sea of Marmora; the capital of the Turkish empire till the taking of Constantinople in 1453; abounds in mosques, and is celebrated for its baths.
- BROUSSAIS, JOSEPH VICTOR, a French materialist, founder of the "physiological school" of medicine; resolved life into excitation, and disease into too much or too little (1772-1838).
- BROUSSEAU, a member of the Parlement de Paris, whose arrest, in 1648, was the cause of, or pretext for, the organisation of the Fronde.
- BROUSSON, a French Huguenot who returned to France after the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes, and was broken on the wheel, 1698.
- BROUWER, ADRIAEN, a Dutch painter, mostly of low, vulgar life, which, as familiar with it, he depicted with great spirit (1605-1638).
- BROWN, AMY, the first wife of the Duc de Berri, born in England, died in France; the Pope, in 1816, annulled her marriage, but declared her two daughters legitimate (1783-1876).
- BROWN, SIR ARTHUR WHITTEN, British aviator. With Sir John Alcock (q.v.) he first flew across the Atlantic in an aeroplane from Newfoundland to Ireland in June, 1919 (1886-).
- BROWN, CHARLES BROCKDEN, an American novelist, born in Philadelphia, of Quaker connection; his best-known works are "Wieland," and "Edgar Huntly" (1771-1810).
- BROWN, FORD MADOX, an English painter, born at Calais; his subjects nearly all of a historical character, one of which is "Chaucer reciting his Poetry at the Court of Edward III."; anticipated Pre-Raphaelitism (1821-1893).
- BROWN, SIR GEORGE, British general, born near Elgin, distinguished both in the Peninsular and in the Crimean War; was severely wounded at Inkerman, when in command of the Light Division (1790-1868).
- BROWN, HENRY KIRKE, an American sculptor, did a number of statues, a colossal one of Washington in New York among them (1814-1886).
- BROWN, JOHN, American slavery abolitionist; settled in Kansas, and resolutely opposed the project of making it a slave state; in the interest of emancipation, with six others, seized on the State armory at Harper's Ferry in hope of a rising, entrenched himself armed in it, was surrounded, seized, tried, and hanged. It was of him that the song "John Brown's Body" was written, which served the Union forces as a marching song in the Civil War (1800-1859).
- BROWN, JOHN, of Haddington, a self-educated Scottish divine, born at Carnow, near Abernethy, Perthshire, son of a poor weaver, left an orphan at 11; became a minister of a Dissenting church in Haddington; a man of considerable learning, and deep piety; author of "Dictionary of the Bible," and "Self-interpreting Bible" (1722-1787).
- BROWN, JOHN, M.D., great-grandson of the preceding, born at Biggar, educated in Edinburgh High School and at Edinburgh University; was a pupil of James Syme, the eminent surgeon, and commenced quiet practice in Edinburgh; author of "Horse Subjection," "Rab and his Friends," "Pet Marjorie," "John Leech," and other works (1810-1882).
- BROWN, JOHN, M.D., founder of the Brunonian system of medicine, born at Bunkie, Berwickshire; reduced diseases into two classes, those resulting from redundancy of excitation, and those due to deficiency of excitation; author of "Elements of Medicine" and "Observations on the Old and New Systems of Physic" (1735-1788). See BROUSSAIS.
- BROWN, MOUNT (16,000 ft.), the highest of the Rocky Mts. in N. America.
- BROWN, RAWDON, historical scholar, spent his life at Venice in the study of Italian history, especially in its relation to English history, which he prosecuted with unwearied industry; his great work, result of 20 years' hard labour, "Calendar of State Papers and Manuscripts relating to English Affairs existing in the Archives of Venice and Northern Italy," left unfinished at his death; died at Venice, where he spent a great part of his life, and where Beakin found him and conceived a warm friendship for him (1800-1833).

BROWN, ROBERT, a distinguished botanist, born at Montrose, son of an Episcopal clergyman; accompanied an expedition to survey the coast of Australia in 1801, returned after four years' exploration, with 4000 plants, mostly new to science, which he classified and described in his "Prodromus Florae Novae Hollandiae"; became librarian to, and finally president of, the Linnean Society; styled by Humboldt botanicorum facile princeps; he was a man of most minute and accurate observation, and of a wide range of knowledge, much of which died with him, out of the fear of committing himself to mistakes (1778-1858).

BROWN, SAMUEL, M.D., chemist, born in Haddington, grandson of John Brown of Haddington, whose life was devoted, with the zeal of a medieval alchemist, to a reconstruction of the science of alchemy, which he did not live to see realised; a man of genius, a brilliant conversationalist, and an associate of the more intellectual men of his time among the number De Quincy, Carlyle, and Emerson; wrote "Lay Sermons on the Theory of Christianity," "Lectures on the Atomic Theory," and two volumes of "Essays, Scientific and Literary" (1817-1856).

BROWN, THOMAS, Scottish psychologist, born in Kirkcubrightshire, bred to medicine; professor of Moral Philosophy in the University of Edinburgh, colleague and successor to Dugald Stewart; his lectures, all improvised on the spur of the moment, were published posthumously; "Lectures on the Philosophy of the Human Mind" established a sixth sense, which he called the "muscular." He was a man of precocious talent, and a devoted student, to the injury of his health and the shortening of his life; he was obliged from ill-health to resign his professorship after 10 years (1778-1820).

BROWN WILLY, the highest peak (1368 ft.) in Cornwall.

BROWNE, CHARLES FARRAR, a humorist and satirist, known by the pseudonym of "Artemus Ward," born in Maine, U.S.; his first literary effort was as "showman" to an imaginary travelling menagerie; travelled over America lecturing, carrying with him a whimsical panorama as affording texts for his numerous jokes, which he brought with him to London, and exhibited with the same accompaniment with unbounded success; he spent some time among the Mormons, and wrote humorous accounts of that community (1834-1867).

BROWNE, HABLOT KNIGHT, artist, born in London; illustrated Dickens' works, "Pickwick" to begin with, under the pseudonym of "Phiz," as well as the works of Lever, Alenworth, Fielding, and Smollett, and the Abbotsford edition of Scott; he was skilful as an etcher and an architectural draughtsman (1815-1882).

BROWNE, ROBERT, founder of the Brownists, born in Rutland; the first seceder from the Church of England, and the first to found a Church of his own, Congregational in principles, which he did at Norwich, though his project of secession proved a failure, and he returned to the English Church; died in jail at Northampton, where he was imprisoned for assaulting a constable; he may be accounted the father of the Congregational body in England (1550-1633).

BROWNE, SIR THOMAS, physician and religious thinker, born in London; resided at Norwich for nearly half a century, and died there; was knighted by Charles II.; "was," Professor Saintsbury says, "the greatest prose writer perhaps, when all things are taken together, in the whole range of English"; his principal works "Religio Medici," "Inquiries into Vulgar Errors," and "Hydrophobia, or Urn-Burial, a Discourse of the Sepulchral Urns found in Norfolk" (1605-1682).

BROWNE, WILLIAM, English pastoral poet, born at Tavistock; author of "Britannia's Pastorals" and "The Shepherd's Pipe," a collection of eclogues, and "The Inner Temple and Masque," or the story of Ulysses and Circe, with some exquisitely beautiful opening verses, "Steer hither, steer," among them; was an imitator of Spenser, and a parallel has been instituted between him and Keats (1590-1645).

BROWNIAN MOVEMENT, the motion observed in the particles of a colloidal solution when seen under a microscope; the motion is due to molecular vibrations. The phenomenon was first observed by Robert Brown, a botanist, in 1827.

BROWNE, a good-natured household elf, believed in Scotland to render obliging services to good housewives, his presence being an evidence that the internal economies were approved of; as he favoured good husbandry, and was partial to houses where it was observed. The name has been adopted by the junior section of the Girl Guides, once called Rosebuds.

BROWNING, ELIZABETH BARRETT, née BARRETT, poetess, born at Carlton Hall, Durham; a woman of great natural abilities, which developed early; suffered from injury to her spine; went to Torquay for her health; witnessed the death by drowning of a brother, that gave her a shock the effect of which never left her; published in 1838 "The Seraphim" and in 1844 "The Cry of the Children"; married Robert Browning in 1846, who immediately took her abroad, settling in Florence; wrote in 1850 "Sonnets from the Portuguese," in 1851 "Casa Guidi Windows," and in 1856 "Aurora Leigh," "a novel in verse," and in 1880 "Poems before Congress"; ranks high, if not highest, among the poetesses of England; she took an interest all through life in public affairs; her work is marked by musical diction, sensibility, knowledge, and imagination, which no poetess has rivalled (1806-1881).

BROWNING, OSCAR, eminent Cambridge man of letters, took an active part in University life and was principal of the Cambridge Training College from 1891 to 1900; wrote extensively on literature, education, and history. He spent the latter part of his life abroad (1837-1923).

BROWNING, ROBERT, poet, one of the two greatest in the Victorian era, born in Camberwell; early given to writing verses; prepared himself for his literary career by reading through Johnson's Dictionary; his first poem "Pauline," published in 1833, which was followed by "Paracelsus" in 1835, "Sordello" in 1840; after a time, in which he was not idle, published, with some of his "Dramatic Romances and Lyrics" in 1855 his "Men and Women," and in 1898 "The Ring and the Book" (i.e.), his longest poem, and more analytic than poetic; this was succeeded by a succession of others, finishing up with "Asolando," which appeared the day he died at Venice; was a poet of great subtlety, deep insight, creative power, and strong faith, of a genius and learning which there are few able to compass the length and breadth of; lies buried in Westminster Abbey; of Browning it has been said by an eminent writer, "Timor mortis non contrahatur, the fear of death did not trouble him." In the browner shades of age as well as in the spring of youth he sang, not like most poets Love and Death, but Love and Life. James Lee, "Rabbi Ben Ezra," and "Prophet" are among the greatest poems of the century. His creed was an optimism of the brightest, and his restful faith "It is all right with the world" (1812-1889).

BROWN-SÉQUARD, CHARLES EDWARD, physiologist, born in Mauritius, of American parentage; studied in Paris; practised in New York, and became a professor in the Collège de France; made a special study of the nervous system and nervous diseases, and published works on the subject. He was the first to show that organs can supply to blood secretions which affect other parts of the body. See HORMONES (1817-1894).

BRUANT, a French architect, born in Paris; architect of the Invalides and the Hôpitalière; d. 1697.

BRUAT, a French admiral, commanded the French fleet at the Crimea (1796-1885).

BRUCE, a family illustrious in Scottish history, descended from a Norman knight, Robert de Brul, who came over with the Conqueror, and who acquired lands first in Northumberland and then in Annandale, BRUCE, JAMES, traveller, called the "Abyssinian," born at Kinnaird House, Stirlingshire; set out from Cairo in 1768 in quest of the source of the Nile; believed he had discovered it, though his quest took him to the head waters of the Blue Nile; stayed two years in Abyssinia, and returned home by way of France, elated with his success; felt hurt that no honour was conferred on him, and for relief from the chagrin wrote an account of his travels in five quarto vols., the general accuracy of which, as far as it goes, has been attested by subsequent explorers (1780-1784).

BRUCE, MICHAEL, a Scottish poet, born near Lochleven, in poor circumstances, in the parish of Portmouck; studied for the Church; died of consumption; his poems singularly plaintive and pathetic; his title to the authorship of the "Ode to the Cuckoo" has been matter of contention, while his Scottish Paraphrases have been ascribed to John Logan (q.v.) (1746-1767).

BRUCE, ROBERT, rival with John Balliol for the crown of Scotland on the death of Margaret, the Maiden of Norway, against whose claim Edward I. decided in favour of Balliol (1210-1295).

BRUCE, ROBERT, son of the preceding, earl of Carrick, through Marjory his wife; served under Edward at the battle of Dunbar; sued for the Scottish crown in vain (1269-1304).

BRUCE, ROBERT, king of Scotland, son of the preceding, did homage for a time to Edward, but joined the national party and became one of a regency of four, with Comyn for rival; stabbed Comyn in a quarrel at Dumfries, 1306, and was that same year crowned king at Scone; was defeated by an army sent against him, and obliged to flee to Rathlin, Ireland; returned and landed in Carrick; cleared the English out of all the fortresses except Stirling, and on June 24, 1314, defeated the English under Edward II. at Bannockburn, after which, in 1328, the independence of Scotland was acknowledged, as well as Bruce's right to the crown; suffering from leprosy, spent his last two years at Cardross Castle, on the Clyde, where he died in the thirty-third year of his reign (1274-1329).

BRUCE, STANLEY, Australian statesman. Educated at Cambridge, where he won a rowing Blue in 1904; he returned to Europe during the Great War to serve with the forces, and won the M.C. In 1923 he became Nationalist Prime Minister of Australia, and was defeated in Sept., 1929 (1884-).

BRUCINE, an alkaloid, allied in action to strychnine, though much weaker, being only a twenty-fifth of the strength.

BRUCKENAU, small town in Bavaria, 17 m. NW. of Kissingen, with mineral springs good for nervous and skin diseases.

BRUCKER, JOHANN JACOB, historian of philosophy, born at Augsburg, and a pastor there; author of "Historia Critica Philosophiae" (1696-1770).

BRUEYS, DAVID AUGUSTIN DE, French dramatist, born at Aix, an abbé converted by Bossuet, and actively engaged in propagating the faith; managed to be joint editor with Palaprat in the production of plays (1640-1723).

BRUGES, cap. of W. Flanders, in Belgium, intersected by canals crossed by some 50 bridges, whence its name "Bridges"; one of these canals connects it with Ostend, another with Zeebrugge; many of them are now, however, as well as some of the streets, little disturbed by traffic, and in a decayed condition; has a number of fine churches, one specially noteworthy, the church of Notre Dame; it has several manufactures, textile and chemical, as well as distilleries, sugar-refineries, and shipbuilding yards. It was used by the Germans during the Great War as a submarine base, the North Sea being reached by way of the canal to Zeebrugge; to block the route the British raided Zeebrugge Mole on April 23, 1918.

BRUGSCH, HEINRICH KARI, a German Egyptologist, born at Berlin; was associated with Mariette in his excavations at Memphis; became director of the School of Egyptology at Cairo; his works on the subject are numerous and of great value (1827-1894).

BRÜHL, HEINRICH, COUNT VON, minister of Augustus III., king of Poland, an unprincipled man, who encouraged his master, and indulged himself, in silly foppery and wasteful extravagance, so that when the Seven Years' war broke out he and the king had to flee from Dresden and seek refuge in Warsaw (1700-1764).

BRUIN, the bear personified in the German epic of "Reynard the Fox."

BRUMAIRE, the 18th (i.e. November 9, 1799, the foggy month), the day when Napoleon, on his return from Egypt, overthrew the Directory and established himself in power.

BRUMMEL, see BEAU BRUMMELL.

BRUNANBURGH, the scene of a great and decisive battle (937) between Athelstan, King of Wessex, and a united force of Danes, Scots, and Northern Celts; the site doubtful, variously placed in Scotland, Northumberland, and Yorkshire; the victory commemorated in the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle.

BRUNCE, RICHARD FRANÇOIS, an able French Hellenist, classical scholar, and critic, born at Strassburg; edited several classical works, played a perilous part in the French Revolution; was imprisoned, and, on his release, had to sell his library in order to live (1728-1803).

BRUNE, GUILLAUME MARIE, French marshal, saw service in the Vendean war and in Italy, distinguished himself under Napoleon in Italy and Holland; submitted to Bourbons in 1814; joined Napoleon on his return from Elba; was appointed to a post of command in the S. of France, but had to surrender after Waterloo, and was attacked by a mob of Royalists at Avignon as he was setting out for Paris, and brutally murdered, his body being thrown into the Rhône (1768-1815).

BRUNEL, ISAMBARD KINGDOM, son of the following, assisted his father in his engineering operations, in particular the Thames tunnel; was engineer of the Great Western Railway; designed the Great Western steamship, the first to cross the Atlantic; was the first to apply the screw propeller to steam navigation; designed with Scott Russell the Great Eastern; constructed bridges and naval docks (1806-1869).

BRUNEL, SIR MARC ISAMBARD, engineer, born in Rouen, entered the French navy, emigrated to the United States; was chief engineer of New York; settled in England, and invented many mechanical tools; constructed the Thames tunnel, begun in 1825 and finished in 1843 (1789-1849).

BRUNELLESCHI, FILIPPO, Italian architect, born in Florence, bred a goldsmith, studied at Rome; returned to his native city, built the Duomo of the Cathedral, the Pitti Palace, and the churches of San Lorenzo and Spirito Santo (1377-1446).

BRUNETIERE, FERDINAND, French critic, editor of the Revue des Deux Mondes; a very sound and sensible critic; his chief work, begun in the form of lectures in 1890, entitled "L'Évolution des genres de l'Histoire de la Littérature Française" (1849-1906).

BRUNETTO-LATINI, an Italian writer, who played an important part among the Guelphs, and was obliged to flee to Paris, where he had Dante for a pupil (1220-1294).

BRUNHILDA, a masculine queen in the "Nibelungen Lied" who offered to marry the man that could beat her in feats of strength, was deceived by Siegfried into marrying Gunther, and meditated the death of Siegfried, who had married her rival Kriemhilda, which she accomplished by the hand of Hagen. Also a queen of Austrasia, who, about the 7th century, had a lifelong quarrel with Fredegunde, queen of Neustria, the other division of the Frankish world, which at her death she seized possession of for a time, but was overthrown by Clothaire II., Fredegunde's son, and dragged to death at the heels of an infuriated wild horse.

BRUNI, LEONARDO, Italian humanist and historian, born at Arezzo, hence called Arezzo; was papal secretary; settled in Florence, and wrote a history of it; did much by his translations of Greek authors to promote the study of Greek (1369-1444).

BRUNN, an ancient city, capital of Moravia, Czechoslovakia, beautifully situated, 93 m. N. of Vienna, with large manufactures; woollens the staple industry of the country; about one-half of the population Czechs.

BRUNNOW, COUNT VON, a Russian diplomatist, born at Dresden; represented Russia in several conferences, and was twice ambassador at the English Court (1797-1875).

BRUNO, GIORDANO, a bold and fervid original thinker, born at Nola, in Italy; a Dominican monk, quitted his monastery, being accused of heterodoxy and obliged to flee; attached himself to Calvin for a time, went for some freedom to Paris, attacked the scholastic philosophy, had to leave France as well; spent two years in England in friendship with Sir Philip Sidney, propagated his views in Germany and Italy, was arrested by the Inquisition, and after seven years spent in prison was burned as a heretic; he was a pantheist, and regarded God as the living omnipresent soul of the universe, and Nature as the living garment of God, as the Earth-Spirit does in Goethe's "Faust" (1550-1600).

BRUNO, ST., born at Cologne, retired to a lonely spot near Grenoble with six others, where each lived in cells apart, and they met only on Sundays; founder of the Carthusian Order of Monks, the first house of which was established in the desert of Chartreuse (1080-1101). Festival, Oct. 6.

BRUNO THE GREAT, third son of Henry the Fowler; archbishop of Cologne, chancellor of the Empire, a great lover of learning, and promoter of it among the clergy, who he thought should, before all, represent and encourage it (925-965).

BRUNOIAN SYSTEM, a system which regards and treats diseases as due to defective or excessive excitation, as sthenic or asthenic. See BROWN, JOHN.

BRUNSWICK, a N. German duchy, made up of eight detached parts, mostly in the upper basin of the Weser; is mountainous, and contains part of the Harz Mts.; climate and crops are those of N. Germany generally. Brunswick, the capital, a busy commercial town, once a member of the Hanseatic League, which fell into comparative decay after the dwindling of the League; on the Oker, 140 m. S.W. of Berlin; an irregularly built city, it has a cathedral, and manufactures textiles, leather, and sewing-machines.

BRUNSWICK, CHARLES WILLIAM, DUKE OF, Prussian general, commanded the Prussian and Austrian forces levied to put down the French Revolution; enlisted a violent, blustering manifesto, but a Revolutionary army under Dumouriez and Kellermann met him at Valmy, and compelled him to retreat in 1792; was beaten by Davout at Auerstadt, and mortally wounded (1735-1806).

BRUNSWICK, FREDERICK WILLIAM, DUKE OF, brother of Queen Caroline; raised troops against France, which, being embarked for England, took part in the Peninsular war; fell fighting at Ligny two days before the battle of Waterloo (1771-1815).

BRUSSELS, on the Senne, 27 m. S. of Antwerp, is the capital of Belgium, in the heart of the country. The old town is narrow and crooked, but picturesque, and is dominated by the Palace of Justice; the town-hall is a magnificent building. The new town is well built, and one of the finest in Europe. There are many parks, boulevards, and squares; a cathedral, art gallery, museum and library, university, and art schools. It is Paris in miniature. The manufactures include linen, ribbons, and paper; a ship-canal and numerous railways foster commerce. German troops captured the city on August 20, 1914, and King Albert returned in November, 1918.

BRUSILOFF, ALEKSEI, Russian general. He commanded an army corps in Galicia at the outbreak of the Great War, being transferred to the SW. front in 1915. In 1917 he held the supreme command for a short time after the revolution (1856-).

BRUTUS, LUCIUS JUNIUS, the founder of Republican Rome, in the 6th century B.C.; affected idiosyncrasy (whence his name, meaning stupid); it saved his life when Tarquin the Proud put his brother to death; but when Tarquin's son committed an outrage on Lucretia, he threw off his disguise, headed a revolt, and expelled the tyrant; was elected one of the two first Consuls of Rome; sentenced his two sons to death for conspiring to restore the monarchy; fell repelling an attempt to restore the Tarquins in a hand-to-hand combat with Aruns, one of the sons of the banished king.

BRUTUS, MARCUS JUNIUS, a descendant of the preceding, and son of Cato Uticensis's sister; much beloved by Caesar and Caesar's friend, but persuaded by Caesar and others to believe that Caesar aimed at the overthrow of the republic; joined the conspirators, and was recognized by Caesar among the factionists as party to his death; forced to flee from Rome after the event, was defeated at Philippi by Antony and Augustus, but escaped capture by falling on a sword held out to him by one of his friends, exclaiming as he did so, "O Virtue, thou art but a name!" (85-42 B.C.).

BRUYERE, JEAN DE LA, a French writer, author of "Caractères de Théophraste," a satire on various characters and manners of his time; was attached to the household of the Prince de Condé (1644-1698).

BRYAN, WILLIAM JENNINGS, American statesman, born in Salem, Illinois; bred to the bar and practised at it; entered Congress in 1890 as an extreme Free Silver man; lost his seat from his uncompromising views on that question; was twice nominated for the Presidency in opposition to McKinley, but defeated (1860-1920).

BRYANT, WILLIAM CULLEN, American poet; his poems were popular in America, the chief, "The Age," published in 1821; was 50 years editor of the New York Evening Post; wrote short poems all through his life, some of the later his best, particularly "Thanatopsis" (1794-1878).

BRYCE, JAMES, 1ST VISCOUNT, historian and politician, born at Belfast; Fellow of Oriel College, Oxford; bred to the bar; for a time professor of Civil Law at Oxford; entered Parliament in 1880; was member of Gladstone's last cabinet; from 1907 to 1913 he was ambassador in America. His chief literary production, "The Holy Roman Empire," a work of high literary merit (1858-1922).

BRYDGES, SIR SAMUEL EGBERTON, English antiquary, born at Wootton House, in Kent; called to the bar, but devoted to literature; was M.P. for Maidstone for six years; lived afterwards at Geneva, where he died; wrote novels and poems, and edited old English writings of interest (1762-1837).

BUBASTIS, an Egyptian goddess, the Egyptian Diana, the wife of Ptah; also a city in Lower Egypt, on the eastern branch of the Nile.

BUBONIC PLAGUE, a disease carried exclusively by the rat flea. It was this plague which killed 25 million people in Europe in the Black Death of the 14th century. During the first decade of the present century nearly a million people died annually from this disease, but it has decreased since.

BUCANEEERS, an association, chiefly English and French, of piratical adventurers in the 16th and 17th centuries, with their headquarters in the Caribbean Sea, organized to plunder the ships of the Spaniards in resentment of the exclusive right the latter claimed to the wealth of the M. American continent, which they were carrying home across the sea. Their name was taken from the "buccon" or dried meat, which they prepared on their island fires in the Indies.

BUCOLEUGH, a glen 18 m. S.W. of Selkirk, with a stronghold of the Scott family, giving the head the title of earl or duke.

BUCER TAUR, the state galley, worked by oars and manned by 168 rowers, in which the Doge of Venice used to sail on the occasion of the annual ceremony of wedding anew the Adriatic Sea by sinking a ring in it, the ceremony marking Venice's rule over the seas.

BUCEPH'ALUS (i.e. ox-head), the horse which Alexander the Great, while yet a youth, broke in when no one else could, and on which he rode through all his campaigns; it died in India from a wound. The town, Bucephala, on the Hydaspes, N. India, was built near its grave.

BUCER, MARTIN, a German Reformer, born at Strasburg; originally a Dominican, adopted the Reformed faith, ministered as pastor and professor in his native place; differed in certain matters from both Luther and Zwingli, while he tried to reconcile them; invited by Cranmer to England, he accepted the invitation, and became professor of Divinity at Cambridge, where he died, but his bones were exhumed and burned a few years later (1491-1551).

BUCH, LEOPOLD VON, a German geologist, a pupil of Werner and fellow-student of Alexander von Humboldt, who esteemed him highly; adopted the volcanic theory of the earth; wrote many scientific memoirs (1774-1853).

BUCHAN, a district in the N.E. of Aberdeenshire, between the rivers Deveron and Ythan; abounds in magnificent rock scenery. The Comyns were earls of it till they forfeited the title in 1309.

BUCHAN, ALEXANDER, the son of a Scots weaver, who started life as a schoolmaster, and later gave up his time to the study of the weather. He discovered the "Buchan's Cold Periods," six in number, which occur in February, April, May, June, August, and November; secretary of the Scottish Meteorological Society and connected with the Meteorological Office in London (1829-1907).

BUCHAN, JOHN, novelist, of Scottish birth, he went in for law, served in France in the Great War, and became a Conservative M.P. in 1927. "Prester John," published in 1910, was his first novel to catch attention, and "Greenmantle," probably his most popular, has been followed by several romances (1875-).

BUCHANAN, CLAUDIUS, born at Cambuslang, near Glasgow; chaplain in Barrackpore under the East India Company; vice-provost of the College at Fort William, Calcutta; one of the first to awaken an interest in India as a missionary field; wrote "Christian Researches in Asia" (1766-1816).

BUCHANAN, GEORGE, a most distinguished scholar and humanist, born at Killearn, Strirlingshire; educated at St. Andrews and Paris; professor for three years in the College at St. Barbe; returned to Scotland, became tutor to James V.'s illegitimate sons; imprisoned by Cardinal Beaton for satires against the monks, escaped to France; driven from one place to another, imprisoned in a monastery in Portugal at the instance of the Inquisition, where he commenced his celebrated Latin version of the Psalms; came back to Scotland, was appointed in 1562 tutor to Queen Mary, in 1566 principal of St. Leonard's College in St. Andrews, in 1567 moderator of the General Assembly, in 1570 tutor to James VI., and had several offices of State conferred on him; wrote a "History of Scotland," and his book "De Jure Regni," against the tyranny of peoples by kings; died in Edinburgh without enough to bury him; was buried at the public expense in Greyfriars' churchyard; when dying, it is said he asked his housekeeper to examine his money-box and see if there was enough to bury him, and when he found there was not, he ordered her to distribute what there was among his poor neighbours, and left it to the city to bury him or not as they saw good (1506-1582).

BUCHANAN, JAMES, statesman of the United States, was ambassador in London in 1853, made President in 1856, the fifteenth in order, at the time when the troubles between the North and South came to a head, favoured the South after Lincoln's election in 1860 to the Presidency retired into private life (1791-1868).

BUCHANAN, ROBERT, a writer in prose and verse, born in Warwickshire, educated at Glasgow University; his first work, "Undertones," a volume of verse published 1860; wrote "The Wandering Jew," which attacks the Christian religion, and a number of novels, of which "God and the Man" and "The Shadow of the Sword" are the best; also some plays (1841-1901).

BUCHANITES, a fanatical sect who appeared in the W. of Scotland in 1783, named after a Mrs. Buchan, who claimed to be the woman mentioned in Rev. xii.

BUCHAREST, capital of Rumania, picturesquely situated on the Danubius, a tributary of the Danube, in a fertile plain, 180 m. from the Black Sea; there is a Catholic cathedral and a university; it is the emporium of trade between the Balkans and Austria; textiles, grain, hides, metal, and coal are the chief articles in its markets.

BUCHÉZ, JOSEPH, a French historian, politician, and Socialist; joined the St. Simonian Society, became a Christian Socialist, and a collaborator in an important historical work, the "Parliamentary History of the French Revolution"; figured in political life after the Revolution of 1848, but retired to private life after the establishment of the Empire (1796-1865).

BÜCHNER, LUDWIG, physician and materialist, born at Darmstadt; lectured at Tübingen University; wrote a book entitled "Kraft und Stoff," i.e. Force and Matter, and had to retire into private practice as a physician on account of the materialistic philosophy, which he insisted on teaching (1824-1899).

BUCHON, a learned Frenchman; wrote chronologies of French history (1781-1846).

BUCKINGHAM, GEORGE VILLIERS, DUKE OF, favourite of James I. and Charles I., born in Leicestershire; rose under favour of the former to the highest offices and dignities of the State; provoked by his conduct wars with Spain and France; fell into disfavour with the people; was assassinated at Portsmouth by Lieutenant Felton, on the eve of his embarking for Rochelle (1602-1628).

BUCKINGHAM, GEORGE VILLIERS, DUKE OF, son of the preceding; served under Charles I. in the Civil War, was at the battle of Worcester; became minister of Charles II.; a profligate courtier and an unprincipled man (1627-1688).

BUCKINGHAM, JAMES BILK, traveller and journalist, born in Falmouth; conducted a Journal in Calcutta, and gave offence to the East India Company by his outspokenness; had to return to England, where his cause was warmly taken up; by his writings and speeches paved the way for the abolition of the Company's charter (1786-1855).

BUCKINGHAM PALACE, the London residence of the King, built in 1703, and considerably enlarged since, a new front being erected in 1913.

BUCKINGHAM PALACE CONFERENCE, was held in July, 1914, at the instance of King George, to see whether some way could be found to meet Ulster's objections to the Asquith Home Rule Bill (q.v.). The conference broke down after three days.

BUCKINGHAMSHIRE, English S. midland county, lying E. of Oxford, W. of Bedford and Hertford, is full of beautiful and varied scenery, hill, dale, wood, and water. The Thames forms the southern boundary, the Ouse flows through the N., and the Thame through the centre. The Chiltern Hills cross the county. Agriculture is the prevailing industry; dairy produce, cattle and poultry feeding, and sheep rearing the sources of wealth. The county town is Buckingham, on the Ouse, 60 m. N.W. of London.

BUCKLAND, FRANCIS (FRANK), naturalist, son of the succeeding, bred to medicine; devoted to the study of animal life; was inspector of salmon fisheries; wrote "Curiosities of Natural History," "Familiar History of British Fishes," &c.; contributed largely to journals such as the Field, and edited Land and Water, which he started in 1806 (1829-1880).

BUCKLAND, WILLIAM, a distinguished geologist, born at Fiverton; had a predilection from boyhood for natural science; awoke in Oxford University an interest in it by his lectures on mineralogy and geology; his pen was unceasingly occupied with geological subjects, and he was president of the British Association in 1832; exerted himself to reconcile the teachings of science with the accounts in Genesis; was made Dean of Westminster by Sir Robert Peel; his intellect gave way in 1850, and he remained in mental weakness till his death (1784-1856).

BUCKSTONE, JOHN BALDWIN, an able comic actor and popular dramatist, born in London; for a long period the lessee of the Haymarket Theatre, London (1802-1879).

BUDA-PESTH, a twin city, the capital of Hungary, on the Danube; Buda (Ger. Ofen) on the right bank and Pesth on the left, the two cities being connected by a suspension bridge, the former standing on a rocky elevation and the latter on level ground; a great commercial centre.

BUDAPEST, an ancient town in Lower Egypt, where festivals in honour of Bacchus used to be held every year.

BUDDHA, GAUTAMA, or SAKYA-MUNI, the founder of Buddhism about the 5th century B.C., born a Hindu, of an intensely contemplative nature, the son of a king, who did everything in his power to tempt him from a religious life, from which, however, in his contemplation of the vanity of existence, nothing could detain him; retired into solitude at the age of 30, as Sakya-muni, i.e. solitary of the Sakyas, his tribe; consulted religious books, could get no good out of them, till, by-and-by, he abstracted himself more and more from everything external, when at the end of ten years, as he sat brooding under the Bo-tree alone with the universe, soul with soul, the light of truth rose full-orbed upon him, and he called himself henceforth and gave himself out as Buddha, i.e. the Enlightened; now he said to himself, "I know it all," as Mohammed in his way did after him, and became a preacher to others of what had proved salvation to himself, which he continued to do for 40 years, leaving behind him disciples, who went forth without sword, like those of Christ, to preach what they believed was a gospel to every creature.

BUDDHISM, the religion of Buddha, a religion which, eschewing all speculation about God and the universe, set itself solely to the work of salvation, the end of which was the merging of the individual in the unity of being, and the "way" to which was the mortification of all private passion and desire, which mortification, when finished, was the Buddhist Nirvana. This is the primary doctrine of the Buddhist faith, which ere long became a formality, as all faiths of the kind, or of this high order, ever tend to do. Buddha is not answerable for this, but his followers, who in three successive councils resolved it into a system of formulae, which Buddha, knowing belike how the letter killeth and only the spirit giveth life, never attempted to do. Buddha wrote none himself, but in some 300 years after his death, his teachings assumed a canonical form, under the name of Tripiṭaka, or triple basket, as it is called. Buddhism from the first was a proselytising religion; it at one time overran the whole of India, and is understood to be the religion of 340 millions of the human race.

BUEDE-LIGHT, a very brilliant light produced by introducing oxygen into the centre of an Argand burner, so called from the place of the inventor's abode.

BUDGET, THE, annual account of national finances submitted to the House of Commons every April by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and so called from the "bouquette" or leather bag he carried.

BUDWEIS, a Bohemian trading town on the Moldau, 133 m. NW. of Vienna.

BUENOS AIRES, capital of the Argentine Republic, stands on the right bank of the broad but shallow river Plate, 150 m. from the Atlantic; it is a growing city, improving in appearance, with a cathedral, several Protestant churches, a university and military school, libraries, and hospitals; printing, cigar-making, cloth and boot manufacture are the leading industries; it is the principal Argentine port, and the centre of export and import trade; the climate does not correspond with the name it bears; a great deal of the foreign trade is conducted through Monte Video, but it monopolises all the inland trade.

BUFFALO, a city of New York State, at the E. end of Lake Erie, 300 m. due NW. of New York; is a well-built, handsome, and healthy city; the railways and the Erie Canal are channels of extensive commerce in grain, cattle, and coal; while immense ironworks, tanneries, breweries, and flour-mills represent the industries; electric power for lighting, traction, and factories is supplied from Niagara.

BUFFON, GEORGE LOUIS LECLERC, COMTE DE, a great French naturalist, born at Montbard, in Burgundy; his father one of the noblesse de robe, studied law at Dijon; spent some time in England, studying the English language; devoted from early years to science, though more to the display of it, and to natural science for life on being appointed keeper of the Jardin du Roi (now Jardin des Plantes); assisted by Daubenton and others, produced 16 vols. of his world-famous "Histoire Naturelle" between the years 1749 and 1767. The saying "Style is the man" is ascribed to him, and he has been measured by some according to his own standard. Neither his style nor his science is rated of any high value now (1707-1788).

BUGEAUD, THOMAS, marshal of France, born at Limoges, served under Napoleon; retired from service July 1850; served under Louis Philippe; contributed to the conquest of Algiers; was made governor, and created duke for his victory over the forces of the emperor of Morocco at the battle of Isly in 1844; his motto was Ense et aratro, "By sword and plough" (1784-1849).

BUGENHAGEN, JOHANN, a German Reformer, a convert of Luther and his coadjutor; helpful to the cause as an organiser of churches and schools (1485-1558).

BUHL, ornamental work for furniture, which takes its name from the inventor (see buira), consisted in piercing or inlaying metal with tortoiseshell or enamel, or with metals of another colour; much in fashion in Louis XIV.'s reign.

BUHL, or BOULE, CHARLES ANDRÉ, an Italian cabinet-maker, inventor of the work which bears his name (1642-1732).

BUKOWINA, a small prov. and duchy in the E. of Hungary; rich in minerals, breeds cattle and horses.

BULGARIA, with Eastern Roumelia, constitutes a Balkan principality larger than Ireland, with hills and fertile plains in the N., mountains and forests in the S.; Turkey is the southern boundary, Serbia the western, the Danube the northern, while the Black Sea washes the eastern shores. The climate is mild, the people are industrious; chief export is cereals; manufactures of woollens, atlas of roses, wine, and tobacco are staple industries; the chief import is live-stock. Sofia, the capital, is the seat of a university. Varna, on the Black Sea, is the principal port. Bulgaria was cut out of Turkey and made independent in 1878, and Eastern Roumelia incorporated with it in 1885.

BULL, an edict of the Pope, so called from a leaden seal (Latin bulia) attached to it.

BULL, GEORGE, bishop of St. Davids, born at Wells; a staunch Churchman; wrote "Harmonia Apostolica" in reconciliation of the teachings of Paul and James on the matter of justification, and "Defensio Fidei Nicene," in vindication of the Trinity as enunciated in the Athanasian Creed (q.v.), and denied or modified by Arians, Socinians, and Sabellians (1634-1710).

BULL, JOHN, a humorous impersonation of the collective English people, conceived of as well-fed, good-natured, honest-hearted, justice-loving, and plain-spoken; the designation is derived from Arbuthnot's satire, "The History of John Bull" (1712), in which the Church of England figures as his mother.

BULL, OLE BOLNEMANN, a celebrated violinist, born in Bergen, Norway, pupil of Paganini; mostly performed his own compositions, and made tours in Europe and America with immense success (1810-1880).

BULL RUN, a stream in Virginia, U.S., 25 m. from Washington, where the Union army was twice defeated by the Confederate, July, 1861, and August, 1862.

BULLANT, a French architect and sculptor; built the tombs of Montmorency, Henry II., and Catherine de Medici, as well as wrought at the Tuilleries and the Louvre (1510-1578).

BULLEN, FRANK THOMAS, author, served at sea on whaling ships and wrote several notable books on sea life, among them "The Cruise of the Cachalot," "The Log of a Sea Wolf," and "Creatures of the Sea" (1857-1915).

BULLER, CHARLES, a politician, born in Calcutta, pupil of Thomas Carlyle; entered Parliament at 24, a Liberal in politics; held distinguished State appointments; died in his prime, universally beloved and respected (1806-1848).

BULLER, GENERAL SIR REDVERS HENRY, served in China, Ashanti, South Africa, Egypt, and the Soudan, with distinction, in the 60th King's Royal Rifles; held staff appointments, and was for a short time Under-Secretary for Ireland. On the outbreak of the Boer War he was made commander of the British forces, but was superseded by Lord Roberts owing to the number of reverses; he later relieved Ladysmith, and in 1906 he retired on half-pay (1836-1908).

BULLINGER, HEINRICH, a Swiss Reformer, born in AARGAS, friend and successor of Zwingli; assisted in drawing up the Helvetic Confession; was a correspondent of Lady Jane Grey (1504-1578).

BULLS AND BEARS, in the Stock Exchange, the bull being one who buys in the hope that the value may rise, and the bear one who sells in the hope that it may fall. See BEAR.

BULOW, BERNARD VON, Chancellor of the German empire; early entered the Foreign Office, and did important diplomatic work in connection with it. Was secretary to several embassies and chargé d'affaires to Greece during the Russo-Turkish war. He was dismissed on account of the rebuke he administered to the Kaiser for his indiscreet Daily Telegraph interview in 1904. During the Great War he was recalled as Ambassador to Italy (1850-1929).

BULOW, FRIEDRICH WILHELM, BARON VON, a Prussian general; served his country in the war with Revolutionary France; defeated the French under the Empire in several engagements, and contributed to the victory at Waterloo, heading the column that first came to Wellington's aid at the decisive moment (1756-1816).

BULOW, GUIDO VON, a famous pianist, pupil of Liszt; conducted many important works, including Wagner's at Munich, Hanover, and elsewhere (1830-1894).

BULOW, KARL VON, German general. He was in charge of the 2nd German Army, which invaded Belgium in 1914, and he retired in 1916 after the Battle of the Aisne (1846-1921).

BULOZ, a French litterateur, born near Geneva; originator of the Revue des Deux Mondes (1803-1877).

BULUWAYO (B., "the place of slaughter"), trading town in Rhodesia, once the kraal of Lobengula, king of the Matabele; connected by rail with Cape Town and Beira.

BUMBLE, MR., a leader in "Oliver Twist."

BUNAU, a German historian, author of a "History of the Seven Years' War" (1697-1702).

BUNCOMBE, a district in N. Carolina, the representative of which many years ago delivered a dull speech in the U.S. Congress, whence the phrase to "talk Buncombe," i.e. to please one's constituency.

BUNDESKHAND, a territory in NW. Provinces, India, between the Chambal and the Jumna; has been extensively irrigated at great labour and expense.

BUNHILL FIELDS, an old cemetery off the City Road, London, first used by dissenters in 1665, and containing the graves of Bunyan, Defoe, Isaac Watts, and William Blake.

BUNKER HILL, an eminence of 112 ft., now included in Boston, the scene on June 10, 1776, of the first great battle in the American War of Independence.

BUNSEN, BARON VON, a diplomatist and man of letters, born at Korbach, in Waldeck; studied at Marburg and Göttingen; became acquainted with Niebuhr at Berlin; studied Oriental languages under Silvestre de Sacy at Paris; became secretary under Niebuhr, to the Prussian embassy at Rome; recommended himself to the king, and succeeded Niebuhr; became ambassador in Switzerland and then in England; was partial to English institutions, and much esteemed in England; wrote "The Church of the Future," "Hippolytus and his Age," &c. (1791-1860).

BUNSEN, ROBERT WILLIAM, distinguished German scientist, professor of Chemistry at Heidelberg; invented the charcoal pile, the magnesium light, and the burner named after him; discovered the antidote for arsenical poisoning, hydrate of iron, and studied the caecodyl compounds. He founded the study of spectrum analysis, discovered the salts of rubidium, and isolated metallic lithium (1811-1899).

BUNSEN BURNER, a small gas-jet above which is screwed a brass tube with holes at the bottom of it to let in air, which burns with the gas, and causes at the top a non-luminous flame; largely used in chemical operations.

BUNTER SANDSTONES, the name given to the red sandstones forming the base of the Triassic strata; they are found in Cheshire and Devon.

BUNYAN, JOHN, author of the "Pilgrim's Progress," born in Elstow, near Bedford, the son of a tinker and bred himself to that humble craft; he was early visited with religious convictions, and brought, after a time of resistance to them, to an earnest faith in the gospel of Christ, his witness for which to his poor neighbours led to his imprisonment, a confinement which extended first and last over twelve and a half years, and it was towards the close of it, and in the precincts of Bedford jail, in the spring of 1678, that he dreamed his world-famous dream; here two-thirds of it were written, the whole finished the year after, and published at the end of it; extended, it came out eventually in two parts, but it is the first part that is the "Pilgrim's Progress," and ensures it the place it holds in the religious literature of the world; encouraged by the success of it—for it leapt into popularity at a bound—Bunyan wrote some sixty other books, but except this, his masterpiece, not more than two of these, "Grace Abounding" and the "Holy War," continue to be read (1628-1688).

BUNTALENTI, an Italian artist, born at Florence, one of the greatest, being, like Michael Angelo, at once architect, painter, and sculptor (1536-1608).

BURBAGE, RICHARD, English tragedian, born in London, associate of Shakespeare, took the chief rôle in "Hamlet," "King Lear," "Richard III." &c. (1562-1619).

BURCHELL, MR., the name under which Sir William Thornhill disguised himself in the "Vicar of Wakefield"; noted for his habit of applying "fudge" to everything his neighbours affected to believe.

BURCKHARDT, JACOB, Swiss historian and archaeologist, born at Basel, author of "Civilisation in Italy during the Renaissance" (1818-1897).

BURCKHARDT, JOHN LUDWIG, traveller, born at Lausanne, sent out from England by the African Association to explore Africa; travelled by way of Syria; acquired a proficiency in Arabic and assumed Arabic customs; pushed on to Mecca as a Mussulman pilgrim—the first Christian to risk such a venture; returned to Egypt, and died at Cairo just as he was preparing for his African exploration; his travels were published after his death, and are distinguished for the veracious reports of things they contain (1784-1817).

BURDER, GEORGE, Congregational minister, became secretary to the London Missionary Society; author of "Village Sermons," which were once widely popular (1752-1832).

BURDET, SIR FRANCIS, a popular member of Parliament, married Sophia, the youngest daughter of Thomas Coutts, a wealthy London banker, and acquired through her a large fortune; becoming M.P. he resolutely opposed the government measures of the day, and got himself into serious trouble; advocated radical measures of reform, many of which have since been adopted; was prosecuted for a libel; fined £1000 for condemning the Peterloo massacre, and imprisoned three months; joined the Conservative party in 1835, and died a member of it (1770-1844).

BURDET-COUTTS, RT. HON. ANGELA GEORGINA, BARONESS, daughter of Sir Francis Burdet, inherited the wealth of Thomas Coutts, her grandfather, which she devoted to all manner of philanthropic as well as patriotic objects; was made a peeress in 1871; received the freedom of the City of London in 1874, and in 1881 married Mr. William Lehman Ashmead-Bartlett, an American, who obtained the royal licence to assume the name of Burdet-Coutts (1814-1906).

BUREAU, a name given to a department of public administration, hence bureaucracy, a name for government by bureaux.

BURGER, GOTTFRIED AUGUST, a German lyric poet, author of the ballads "Lenore," which was translated by Sir Walter Scott, and "The Wild Huntsman," as well as songs; led a wild life in youth, and a very unhappy one in later years; died in poverty (1747-1794).

BURGMEIR, HANS, painter and engraver, born at Augsburg; celebrated for his woodcuts, amounting to nearly 700 (1473-1531).

BURGOS, ancient cap. of Old Castile, on the Arlanzon, 225 m. N. of Madrid by rail; boasts a magnificent cathedral of the Early Pointed period, and an old castle: was the birthplace of the Cid, and once a university seat: it has linen and woollen industries.

BURGOYNE, JOHN, English general, and distinguished as the last sent out to subdue the revolt in the American colonies; after a victory or two was obliged to capitulate to General Gates at Saratoga and fell into disfavour; defended his conduct with alidity and successfully afterwards; devoted his leisure to poetry and the drama, the "Hedress" in the latter being his best (1723-1792).

BURGOYNE, SIR JOHN, field-marshal, son of the above, joined the Royal Engineers, served under Abercromby in Egypt, and under Sir John Moore and Wellington in Spain; was present at the battles of Alma, Balaklava, and Inkerman in the Crimea; was governor of the Tower (1782-1871).

BURGUNDY, was, prior to the 6th century, a Teutonic duchy of varying extent in the SE. and E. of France; annexed to France as a province in the 6th century; the country is noted for its wines.

BURHANPUR, a town in the Central Provinces of India, in the Nimar district, 280 m. NE. of Bombay; was at one time a centre of the Mogul power in the Deccan, and a place of great extent; is now in comparative decay, but still famous, as formerly, for its muslins, silks, and brocades.

BURIDAN, JEAN, a scholastic doctor of the 14th century, born in Artois, and famous as the reputed author, though there is no evidence of it in his works, of the puzzle of the hungry and thirsty ass (called after him Buridan's Ass), between a bottle of hay and a pail of water, a favourite illustration of his in discussing the freedom of the will.

BURKE, EDMUND, orator and philosophic writer, born at Dublin, and educated at Dublin University; entered Parliament in 1765; distinguished himself by his eloquence on the Liberal side, in particular by his speeches on the American war, Catholic emancipation, and economical reform; his greatest oratorical efforts were his orations in support of the impeachment of Warren Hastings; he was a resolute enemy of the French Revolution, and eloquently denounced it in his "Reflections," a weighty appeal; wrote in early life two small but notable treatises, "A Vindication of Natural Society," and another on our ideas of the "Sublime and Beautiful," which brought him into contact with the philosophic intellects of the time, and some time after planned the "Annual Register," to which he was to the last chief contributor (1729-1797).

BURKE, SIR JOHN BERNARD, genealogist, born in London, of Irish descent, author of the "Peerage and Baronetage of the United Kingdom"; produced, besides editing successive editions of it, a number of works on aristocratic genealogies (1815-1892).

BURKE, ROBERT O'HARA, Australian explorer, born in Galway; conducted an expedition across Australia, but on the way back both he and his companion Wills perished, after terrible sufferings from privation and drought (1820-1861).

BURKE, WILLIAM, a notorious murderer, native of Ireland; executed in 1828 for wholesale murders of people in Edinburgh by suffocation, after intoxicating them with drink, whose bodies he sold for dissection to an Edinburgh anatomist of the name of Knox, whom the citizens mobbed; he had an accomplice (William Hare) as bad as himself, who, becoming informer, got off. His crimes gave rise to the expression "to burke."

BURKITT, WILLIAM, Biblical expositor, born in Suffolk; author of "Expository Notes on the New Testament," once held in high esteem (1650-1703).

BURLINGAME, WILLIAM CECIL, LORD, a great statesman, born in Lincolnshire; bred to the legal profession, and patronised and promoted by the Protector Somerset; managed to escape the Marian persecution; Queen Elizabeth recognised his statesmanlike qualities, and appointed him chief secretary of state, an office which, to the glory of the queen and the good of the country, he held for forty years, till his death. His administration was conducted in the interest of the common weal, without respect of persons, and nearly all his subordinates were men of honour as well as himself (1520-1598).

BURLINGAME, ANSON, American diplomatist; sent as ambassador to China, and returned as Chinese envoy to the American and European courts; concluded treaties between them and China (1820-1870).

BURMA, a vast province of British India, lying E. of the Bay of Bengal, and bounded landward by Bengal, Tibet, China, and Siam; the country is mountainous, drained by the Irrawadi, Salween, and Sittang Rivers, whose deltas are flat, fertile plains; the heights on the Chinese frontier reach 15,000 ft.; the climate varies with the elevation, but is mostly hot and trying; rice is the chief crop; the forests yield teak, gum, and bamboo; the mines, iron, copper, lead, silver, and rubies. Lower Burma is the coastland from Bengal to Siam, cap. Rangoon; it was seized by Britain in 1826 and 1854. Upper Burma, cap. Mandalay, an empire nearly as large as Spain, was annexed in 1886.

BURN, RICHARD, English vicar, born in Westmorland; compiled several law digests, the best known his "Justice of the Peace" and "Ecclesiastical Law" (1709-1785).

BURNABY, COLONEL FREDERICK, a traveller of daring adventure, born at Bedford, a tall, powerful man; Colonel of the Royal Horse Guards; travelled in South and Central America, and with Gordon in the Sudan; was chiefly distinguished for his ride to Khiva in 1875 across the steppes of Tartary, of which he published a spirited account, and for his travels next year in Asia Minor and Persia, and his account of them in "On Horseback through Asia Minor"; killed, pierced by an Arab spear, at Abu Klea as he was rallying a broken column to the charge; he was a daring aeronaut, having in 1882 crossed the Channel to Normandy in a balloon (1842-1885).

BURNARD, SIR FRANCIS COWLEY, editor of Punch; studied for the Church, and became a Roman Catholic; an expert at the burlesque, and author of a series of papers, entitled "Happy Thoughts," which give evidence of a most keen, observant wit; wrote several plays, of which "Black-eyed Sam" is the best known (1836-1917).

BURNES-JONES, SIR EDWARD, artist, born at Birmingham, of Welsh descent; came early under the influence of the Pre-Raphaelite movement, and all along produced works imbued with the spirit of it, which are at once mystical in conception and realistic in execution; he was one of the foremost, if not the foremost, of the artists of his day; imbued with ideas that were specially capable of art-treatment; William Morris, Dante Gabriel Rossetti, and he were bosom friends from early college days at Oxford, and Rossetti's influence is evident in his early work. The Tate and other public galleries possess some of his finest paintings (1839-1896).

BURNES, SIR ALEXANDER, born at Monrovia, his father a cousin of Robert Burns; was an officer in the Indian army; distinguished for the services he rendered to the Indian Government through his knowledge of the native languages; appointed Resident at Kabul; was murdered, with his brother and others, by an Afghan mob during an insurrection (1805-1841).

BURNET, GILBERT, bishop of Salisbury, born at Edinburgh, of an old Aberdeen family; professor of Divinity in Glasgow; afterwards preacher at the Rolls Chapel, London; took an active part in supporting the claims of the Prince of Orange to the English throne; was rewarded with a bishopric, that of Salisbury; wrote the "History of the Reformation," an "Exposition of the Thirty-nine Articles," and the "History of His Own Times"; he was a Whig in politics, a broad Churchman in creed, and a man of strict moral principle as well as Christian charity (1644-1716).

BURNETT, JOHN, engraver and author, born at Fishersburg; engraved Wilkie's works, and wrote an art (1784-1868).

BURNET, THOMAS, master of the Charterhouse, born in Yorkshire, author of the "Sacred Theory of the Earth," eloquent in descriptive parts, but written wholly in ignorance of the facts (1635-1715).

BURNETT, FRANCES HODGSON, novelist, born in Manchester, resident for a time in America; wrote "That Lam o' Lowrie's," "Little Lord Fauntleroy,"

- and several other novels, characterised by shrewd observation, pathos, and descriptive power (1849-1824).
- BURNEY, SIR CECIL, Admiral of the Fleet. He first saw service in 1882, was A.D.C. to King Edward, and was in charge of the Atlantic Fleet in 1911. In 1914 he was in command of the Channel Fleet, and later acted as second in command of the Grand Fleet, in which capacity he served at Jutland (1869-).
- BURNEY, CHARLES, musical composer and organist, born at Shrewsbury; a friend of Johnson; author of "The History of Music," and the father of Madame d'Arbly; settled in London as a teacher of music (1726-1814).
- BURNEY, CHARLES, son of preceding, a great classical scholar; left a fine library, purchased by the British Museum for £18,600 (1767-1817).
- BURNEY, FRANCES. See D'ARBLAY, MADAME.
- BURNEY, JAMES, brother of preceding, rear-admiral, accompanied Cook in his last two voyages; wrote "History of Voyages of Discovery" (1760-1821).
- BURNLEY, a manufacturing town in Lancashire, 27 m. N. of Manchester; with cotton mills, foundries, breweries, &c.
- BURNOUT, EUGENE, an illustrious Orientalist, born in Paris; professor of Sanskrit in the College of France; an authority on Zend or Zoroastrian literature; edited the text of and translated the "Bhagavata Purana," a book embodying Hindu mythology; made a special study of Buddhism; wrote an introduction to the history of the system (1801-1852).
- BURNS, JOHN, politician and Socialist, born at Vauxhall, of humble parentage; bred to be an engineer; imbued with socialist ideas from a fellow-workman, a Frenchman, a refugee of the Commune from Paris; became a platform orator in the interest of Socialism, and popular among the working class; got into trouble in consequence; was four times elected member of the London County Council for Battersea; and twice represented Battersea in Parliament; was President of the Local Government Board. He was M.P. for Battersea 1898-1918, became President of the Board of Trade in 1914, and resigned on the outbreak of war (1858-).
- BURNS, ROBERT, celebrated Scottish poet, born at Alloway, near Ayr, son of an honest, intelligent peasant, who tried farming in a small way, but did not prosper; tried farming himself on his father's decease in 1784, but took to rhyming by preference; driven desperate in his circumstances, meditated emigrating to Jamaica, and published a few poems he had composed to raise money for that end; realised a few pounds thereby, and was about to set sail, when friends and admirers rallied round him and persuaded him to stay; he was invited to Edinburgh; his poems were reprinted, and money came in; soon after he married, and took a farm, but, failing, accepted the post of exciseman in Dumfries; fell into bad health, and died in 1796, aged 37. See Carlyle's "Miscellaneous" for an estimate of both the man and the poet (1759-1796).
- BURNARD INLET, an inlet of Georgia Strait, in British Columbia, forming one of the best harbours on the Pacific coast.
- BURRITT, ELIHU, a blacksmith, born in Connecticut; devoted to the study of languages, of which he knew many, both ancient and modern; best known as the unwearied Advocate of Peace all over America and a great part of Europe; organised first international Peace Congress in 1848 at Brussels, and another at Paris the following year (1810-1879).
- BURROUGHS, JOHN, popular author, born in New York; a farmer, a cultured man, with a great liking for country life and animals and birds, on which he wrote largely (1837-1921).
- BUREUS, a Roman general, who with Seneca had the conduct of Nero's education, and opposed his tyrannical acts, till Nero, weary of his expostulations, got rid of him by poison, A.D. 63.
- BURSCHENSCHAFT, an association of students in the interest of German liberation and unity; formed in 1813, and broken up by the government in 1819;
- the movement, however, was revived and existed for a number of years.
- BURSLEM, a pottery-manufacturing town in Staffordshire, and the "mother of the potteries"; manufactures porcelain and glass.
- BURTON, JOHN HILL, historian and miscellaneous writer, born at Aberdeen; an able man, bred for the bar; wrote articles for the leading reviews and journals. "Life of Hume," "History of Scotland," "The Book-Hunter," "The Scot Abroad," &c.; characterised by Lord Rosely as a "dispassionate historian"; was Historiographer-Royal for Scotland (1809-1881).
- BURTON, SIR RICHARD FRANCIS, traveller, born in Hertfordshire; served first as a soldier in Scind under Sir C. Napier; visited Mecca and Medina as an Afghan pilgrim; wrote an account of his visit in his "Personal Narrative of a Pilgrimage, &c."; penetrated Central Africa with Captain J. H. Speke, and discovered Lake Tanganyika; visited Utah, and wrote "The City of the Saints"; travelled in Brazil, Palestine, and Western Africa, accompanied through many a hardship by his devoted wife; translated the "Arabian Nights"; his numerous works on his travels show him to have been of daring adventure (1821-1890).
- BURTON, ROBERT, an English clergyman, born in Leicestershire; Scholar of Christ Church, Oxford; lived chiefly in Oxford, spending his time in it for some 50 years in study; author of "The Anatomy of Melancholy," which he wrote to alleviate his own depression of mind, a book which is a perfect mosaic of quotations on every conceivable topic, familiar and unfamiliar, from every manner of source (1576-1640).
- BURTON-ON-TRENT, a town in Staffordshire; brews and exports large quantities of ale, the water of the place being peculiarly suitable for brewing purposes.
- BURY, a manufacturing town in Lancashire, 10 m. NW. of Manchester; originally but a small place engaged in woollen production but cotton is now the staple manufacture, in addition to paper-works, dye-works, &c.
- BURY ST. EDMUNDS, or ST. EDMUNDSBURY, a market-town in Suffolk, 28 m. NW. of Ipswich, named from Edmund, king of East Angles, martyred by the Danes in 870, in whose honour it was built; famous for its abbey, of the interior life of which in the 12th century there is a matchlessly graphic account in Carlyle's "Past and Present."
- BUSA'CO, a mountain ridge in the prov. of Beira, Portugal, where Wellington with 40,000 troops beat Massena with 65,000 in 1810.
- BUSBY, RICHARD, distinguished English schoolmaster, born at Luton, Lincolnshire; was headmaster of Westminster School; had a number of eminent men for his pupils, among others Dryden, Locke, and South (1606-1696).
- BUSCHING, ANTON FRIEDRICH, a celebrated German geographer; his "Erdbeschreibung," the first geographical work of any scientific merit, though it gives only the geography of Europe (1724-1793).
- BUSHIDO, the Samurai code of Japan, setting forth the highest ideals of honour and courage, and still an influence among the Japanese people; literally, the word signifies "the way of the warrior."
- BUSHIRE, the chief port of Persia on the Persian Gulf, and a great trading centre.
- BUSHMEN, or BOSJESMANS, aborigines of south-west Africa; a rude, nomadic race, at one time numerous, but now fast becoming extinct; they are small in stature and with scarcely any culture, their language being very defective.
- BUSHERANGERS, in Australia, gangs made up at first of convicts who escaped to the bush, and there associated with other desperadoes; these were succeeded by others who caused a great deal of trouble by their maraudings, attacks on gold escorts, and murders. Among the most notorious of the bushrangers were Gardiner, Thunderbolt, and the Kellys.
- BUSIRIS, a king of Egypt who used to offer human beings in sacrifice; seized Hercules and bound him to the altar, but Hercules snapped the bonds he was bound with, and sacrificed him.

BUSK, HANS, one of the originators of the Volunteer movement, born in Wales; author of "The Rifle, and How to Use it" and other similar practical works (1816-1882).

BUSEKIN, a kind of half-boot worn after the custom of hunters as part of the costume of actors in tragedy on the ancient Roman stage, and a synonym for tragedy.

BUSS, FRANCES MARY, shares with Dorothea Beale (q.v.) the honour of having laid the foundations of high-school education for girls; she founded the North London Collegiate School (1827-1894).

BUTE, an island in the Firth of Clyde, about 16 m. long and from 8 to 5 broad, N. of Arran, nearly all the Marquis of Bute's property, with his seat at Mount Stuart, and separated from the mainland on the N. by a winding romantic arm of the sea called the "Kyles of Bute."

BUTE, JOHN STUART, THIRD EARL OF, statesman, born of an old Scottish family; Secretary of State, and from May, 1762, to April, 1763, Prime Minister under George III., over whom he had a great influence; was very unpopular as a statesman, his leading idea being the supremacy of the king; spent the last 24 years of his life in retirement, devoting himself to literature and science (1712-1792).

BUTLER, ALBAN, hagiographer, born in Northampton; head of the college at St. Omer; wrote "Lives of the Saints" (1710-1773).

BUTLER, CHARLES, an English barrister, nephew of the preceding, born in London; wrote "Historical Account of the Laws against the Catholics" (1750-1832).

BUTLER, ELIZABETH, LADY, painter of military subjects; see Thompson, married in 1877 Major-General Sir William F. Butler, who served with distinction under Wolseley; her most famous pictures are "The Roll Call," "Scotland for Ever!" "Defence of Horke's Drift," and "Balaclava."

BUTLER, JOSEPH, an eminent English divine, born at Wantage, in Berks; at first a Dissenter, conformed to the Church of England; became preacher at the Rolls, where he delivered his celebrated "Sermons," the first three of which contributed so much to the stability of moral science; was raised, in virtue of his merits alone, to the see of Bristol; made dean of St. Paul's, and finally bishop of Durham; his great work, "The Analogy of Religion, Natural and Revealed, to the Constitution and Course of Nature," the aim of which is twofold—first, to show that the objections to revealed religion are equally valid against the constitution of nature; and second, to establish a conformity between the divine order in revelation and the order of nature; his style is far from interesting, and is often obscure (1692-1752).

BUTLER, SAMUEL, a master of burlesque, born at Strensham, in Worcestershire, the son of a small farmer; the author of "Hudibras," a poem of about 10,000 octosyllabic lines, in which he subjects to ridicule the ideas and manners of the English Puritans of the Civil War and the Commonwealth; it appeared in three parts, the first in 1663, the second soon after, and the third in 1678; it is sparkling with wit, yet is hard reading, and few who take it up read it through; was an especial favourite with Charles II., who was never weary of quoting from it. "It represents," says Stopford Brooke, "the fierce reaction that (at the Restoration) had set in against Puritanism. It is justly famed," he adds, "for wit, learning, good sense, and ingenious drollery, and, in accordance with the new criticism, is absolutely without obscurity. It is often as terse as Pope's best work; but it is too long; its wit wears us at last, and it undoes the force of its attacks on the Puritans by its exaggeration" (1612-1680).

BUTLER, SAMUEL, novelist. He wrote in satirical vein on modern civilization, and largely inspired Bernard Shaw. "Erewhon," published in 1872, is his best known work (1835-1902).

BUTLER, WILLIAM ARCHER, a philosophical writer, born near Clonmel, Ireland; professor of Moral Philosophy at Dublin; author of "Lectures on the History of Ancient Philosophy" (1814-1848).

BUTT, CLARA, DAME, operatic singer, born in Sussex; made her debut in London at the Albert Hall in the "Golden Legend," and in "Orfeo" at the Lyceum, after which appearances she has been much in demand as a singer (1873-).

BUTT, ISAAC, Irish patriot, distinguished for his scholarship at Dublin University; became editor of the Dublin University Magazine; entered Parliament, and at length took the lead of the "Home Rule" party, but could not control it, and retired (1813-1870).

BUTTMANN, PHILIPP, a German philologist, born at Frankfurt-on-the-Main; professor of Philology in Berlin; best known by his "Greek Grammar" (1766-1820).

BUXTON, a high-lying town in Derbyshire, noted for its calcareous and chalybeate springs, and a resort for invalids; is also famous for its rock crystals, stalactite cavern, and fine scenery.

BUXTON, SIR THOMAS FOWELL, a philanthropist, born in Essex, a tall man of energetic character; entered life as a brewer, and made his fortune; was conspicuous for his interest in benevolent movements, such as the amelioration of criminal law and the abolition of slavery; represented Weymouth in Parliament from 1818 to 1837; was made a baronet in 1840; he was Wilberforce's successor (1786-1845).

BUXTORF, JOHANN, a celebrated Hebraist, born in Westphalia, member of a family of Orientalists; professor of Hebrew for 30 years at Basel; was known by the title, "Master of the Rabbin" (1684-1620).

BYBLIS, in the Greek mythology a daughter of Miletus, in love with her brother Caunus, whom she pursued into far lands, till, worn out with sorrow, she was changed into a fountain.

BYNG, GEORGE, VISCOUNT TORRINGTON, admiral, favoured the Prince of Orange, and won the navy over to his interest; commanded the squadron that took Gibraltar in 1704; conquered the Spaniards off Cape Passaro; was made First Lord of the Admiralty in 1727, an office he held till his death (1663-1733).

BYNG, JOHN, admiral, fourth son of the preceding; having failed to compel the French to raise the blockade of Minorca, was recalled, in deference to popular clamour, and, being tried and condemned as guilty of treason, was shot at Portsmouth, a fate it is now believed he did not deserve (1704-1757).

BYNG, BARON, OF VIMY, British general. He saw service in the Sudan and the Boer War, and in November, 1917, as Sir Julian Byng, led the great attack on the Hindenburg line (q.v.). For the greater part of the war he commanded the Canadian Corps, and was made Governor-General of Canada in 1921. In 1925 he became Chief Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police (1862-).

BYRD, COMMANDER R. E., American explorer and aviator. He took charge of the MacMillan Arctic Expedition of 1925; flew to the North Pole in 1926, and across the Atlantic in 1927 (1889-).

BYRON, JOHN, poet and stenographer, born near Manchester; invented a system of shorthand, now superseded, which he had the sole right of teaching for 2 years; contributed as "John Gladstone" to the Spectator; author of the pastoral, "My Time, O ye Muses, was Happily Spent"; his poetry satirical and genial (1692-1768).

BYRON, GEORGE GORDON, SIXTH LORD, an English poet, born in London, son of Captain Byron of the Guards, and Catherine Gordon of Gight, Aberdeenshire; spent his boyhood at Aberdeen under his mother, now a widow, until he succeeded his grandfather in the title and estates and removed to Newstead Abbey, Nottingham; was educated at Harrow and Cambridge, spending, when at the latter, his vacations in London, where his mother had taken a house; wrote "Hours of Idleness," a poor first attempt, which called forth a severe criticism in the Edinburgh Review, and which he satirised in "English Bards and Scotch Reviewers," and soon afterwards left England and spent two years in foreign travel; wrote first part of "Childe Harold," "awoke one morning and found himself famous"; produced the "Glaucou," "Bride of Abydos," "Hebrew Melodies," and other work. In his school-days he had fallen in love with Mary Chaworth, but she had not returned his affection, and in 1815 he married Miss Millbank, an heiress, who in a year left him never to return, when a storm raised against him on account of his private life drove him from England, and he never came back; on the Continent, moved from place to place, finished "Childe Harold," completed several short poems, and wrote "Don Juan"; threw himself into revolutionary movements in Italy and Greece, risked his all in the emancipation of the latter, and, embarking in it, died at Missolonghi in a fit, at the age of 36 (1798-1824).

BYRON, HENRY JAMES, dramatist, born in Manchester, wrote "Our Boys" and a large number of more or less successful comedies, farces, and pantomimes; was the first editor of Punch (1834-1884).

BYRON, JOHN, naval officer, grandfather of the poet, nicknamed from his misfortunes "Foulweather Jack"; accompanied Anson in his voyage round the world, but was wrecked in his ship the Wager; suffered almost unexampled hardships, of which he wrote a classical account on his safe return home; he rose to the rank of admiral, and commanded the squadron in the West Indies during the American war; died in England (1728-1786).

BYRSA, a celebrated citadel of Carthage.

BYZANTINE ART, a decorative style of art patronised by the Romans after the seat of empire was removed to the East; it has been described by Fairholt as "an engraftment of Oriental elaboration of detail upon classic forms, ending in their debasement."

BYZANTINE EMPIRE, called also the Eastern, the Lower, or the Greek Empire; dates from A.D. 895, when, by the death of Theodosius, the Roman Empire was divided between his two sons, Arcadius and Honorius, the Eastern section falling to the share of the former, who established the seat of his government at Byzantium; the empire included Syria, Asia Minor, Pontus, Egypt, Thrace, and Ancient Greece, and it lasted with varied fortune for ten centuries after the accession of Arcadius, till Constantinople was besieged and taken by the Turks in 1453.

BYZANTIUM, the ancient name of Constantinople founded by Greek colonists in 667 B.C.

CAABA

CAABA, an ancient Arab temple, a small square structure in the grand mosque of Mecca, with a mysterious black stone, probably an acrolite, built in it, on which all pilgrims who visit the shrine imprint a kiss: "the Kephah of all Moslems, the eyes of innumerable praying men being turned towards it from all the quarters of the compass five times a day." In earlier times the stone was probably the object of pagan worship.

CAB, the name given to one-horse public vehicles, being a contraction of "cabriolet." The first cab was licensed in 1855, and the two-wheel type invented by Joseph Hansom, and named after him, came soon after.

CABAL', a secret intriguing faction in a State, a name applied to a junto of five ministers of Charles II. in power from 1668 to 1673, the initials of whose names go to make up the word; their names were Clifford, Ashley, Buckingham, Arlington, and Lauderdale; derived from Cabala (q.v.).

CABALA, a secret science alleged to have been directly imparted to Moses and preserved by tradition, by means of which the Rabbis affected to interpret the pretended mystic sense of the words, letters, and very accents of the Hebrew Scriptures, a science which really owes its existence to a dissatisfaction in the rabbinical mind with the traditional literal interpretation, and a sense that there is more in Scripture than meets the ear. The name comes from a Hebrew word suggesting "to receive," and denotes "that which is received," or tradition.

CABALLERO, FERNAN, the nom de plume of Cecilia Boethel de Faber, a Spanish authoress, born in Switzerland, of German descent; a collector of folk tales; wrote charmingly; told stories of Spanish, particularly Andalusian, peasant life (1790-1877).

CABANEL, ALEXANDRE, a French painter of religious and classical subjects, but eminent also for portraits; born at Montpellier (1828-1889).

CABANIS, PIERRE JEAN GEORGES, a celebrated French medical man, born in Cosme, in the dep. of Charente Inférieure, a pronounced materialist in philosophy, and friend of Mirabeau; attended him in his last illness, and published an account of it; his materialism was of the grossest; treated the soul as a nonentity, and held that the brain secretes thought just as the liver secretes bile (1757-1808).

CABEL, a celebrated painter of the Dutch school, born at Ryswyck (1631-1698).

CABET, ETIENNE, a French communist, born in Dijon; a leader of the Carbonari; provoked prosecution, and fled to England; wrote a history of the First Revolution, in which he defended the Jacobins; author of the "Voyage en Icarie," in description of a communistic Utopia, which became the textbook of a communistic sect called "Icarians," a body of whom he headed to carry out his schemes in America, first in Texas and then at Nauvoo, but failed; died at St. Louis broken-hearted (1758-1856).

CABINET, THE, in Great Britain the centre of the executive power, consisting of the Prime Minister and his principal colleagues. In origin the Cabinet is a committee of the Privy Council, and came into being at the same time as the office of Prime Minister when George I. came to the throne, unable to speak English. The modern tendency has been for Cabinets to increase in size and adhere to a policy of collective responsibility for individual actions and words.

CABIRI, certain mysterious demoniac beings to whom inviolable honours were paid in Lemnos and elsewhere in Greece, in connection with nature-worship, and especially with that of Demeter and Dionysus (q.v.).

CABLE, FRANK, engineer, born in Connecticut. A pioneer in the development of the submarine; he acted in an advisory capacity to the navies of most of great powers when submarines were first introduced.

CADE

CABLE, GEORGE WASHINGTON, a journalist, born at New Orleans, wrote interestingly on, and created an interest in, Creole life in America; best known novels, "The Grandisines" and "Old Creole Days" (1844-1895).

CABOT, GIOVANNI (JOHN), a Venetian pilot, born at Genoa, settled in Bristol, entered the service of Henry VII., and discovered part of the mainland of N. America, at Labrador, about 1497; sailed in 1498 on another expedition and was never heard of again (1425-1498).

CABOT, SEBASTIAN, son of the preceding; accompanied his father to N. America; sought service as a navigator, first in Spain, then in England, but failed; returned to Spain; attempted under Charles V. to plant colonies in Brazil, with no success, for which he was imprisoned and banished; was the first to notice the variation of the magnetic needle, and to open up to England trade with Russia (1474-1557).

CABRAL, PEDRO ALVAREZ, a Portuguese navigator; sailing for the Indies, drifted on the coast of Brazil, on which he planted the Portuguese flag, 1500, and of which he is accounted by some the discoverer; continued his course, and established a factory at Calicut in 1501 (1460-1528).

CABRE'RA, one of the Balearic Isles, used as a penal settlement by Spain; produces wild olives.

CABRERA, RAMON, COUNT, a Spanish general, born at Tortosa, Catalonia, a zealous supporter of the claims of Don Carlos, took up arms in his behalf; died in England; he was an unscrupulous adversary (1810-1877).

CACOLA, Italian fresco-painter, did altar-pieces: his best work, "Deposition from the Cross," at Novara; d. 1625.

CACERAS, a Spanish province in the N. of Estremadura; the name also of its capital, famous for its bacon and sausages, as the province is for cattle-rearing.

CACHALOT, the sperm whale, often attaining 60 ft. in length with a head of abnormal size; hunted for the oil obtained from its blubber, for spermaceti, and the ambergris found within its intestine.

CACHAB, a great tea-growing district in Assam.

CACHE, name given in North America to a hole in the ground for hiding provisions when they prove cumbersome to carry, or as a source of supply for others.

CACHET, LETTRE DE. See LETTRE DE CACHET. CACIQUE, a title signifying chief, borne by the head man of native tribes in Mexico, Peru, Cuba, and elsewhere in S. America.

CACTUS, a prickly exogenous plant, varying in form and size, and often of abnormal shape; found mostly in Mexico, California, and South America.

CA'OUS, a mythological brigand of gigantic stature, the son of Vulcan, who occupied a cave in Mount Aventine, represented by Virgil as breathing smoke and flames of fire; stole the oxen of Hercules as he was asleep, dragging them to his cave tail foremost to deceive the owner; strangled by Hercules in his rage at the deception quite as much as the thief.

CADAMOSTO, a Venetian in the service of Portugal, discovered the Cape de Verde Islands in 1487; wrote the first book giving an account of modern voyages, published posthumously (1482-1480).

CADASTRE, a register of the landed proprietors of a district, and the extent of their estates, with maps illustrative called Cadastral Maps.

CADBURY, GEORGE, philanthropist and business man. A prominent Quaker and Liberal, he was the head of the important cocoa firm bearing his name, in connection with which he was a pioneer of industrial welfare in establishing the model village of Bournville; he also owned the Daily News (1830-1922).

CADE, JACK, an Irish adventurer, headed an insurrection in Kent, in 1460, in the reign of Henry VI.; encamped with his following on Blackheath; demanded of the king redress of grievances; was answered by an armed force, which he defeated; entered the city, could not prevent his followers from plundering; the citizens retreating, he had to flee, but was overtaken and slain.

CADIZ, one of the chief commercial ports in Spain, in Andalusia; founded by the Phoenicians about 1100 B.C.; called Gades by the Romans; at the NW. extremity of the Isla de Leon, and separated from the rest of the island by a channel crossed by bridges; it is 7 m. from Xeres and 80 m. from Gibraltar, and carries on a large export trade.

CADMIUM, a metallic element used in small quantities for alloying with other metals.

CADMUS, a semi-mythological personage, founder of Thebes, in Bœotia, to whom is ascribed the introduction of the Greek alphabet from Phœnicia and the invention of writing; in the quest of his sister Europa, was told by the oracle at Delphi to follow a cow and build a city where she lay down; arrived at the spot where the cow lay down, he went, with a view to its sacrifice, his companions to a well guarded by a dragon, which devoured them; slew the dragon; sowed its teeth, which sprang up into a body of armed men, who speared each other to death, all but five, who, the story goes, became the forefathers of Thebes.

CADORNA, COUNT LUIGI, Italian general. From May, 1915, to November, 1917, he commanded the Italian armies in the Great War; did yeoman service in reorganizing the army early in the war, but suffered a heavy defeat at Caporetto in 1917, soon after which he was retired (1850-1928).

CADOUDAL, GEORGES, chief of the Chouans (q.v.), born in Brittany, the son of a farmer; took up arms to restore the Bourbons in the teeth of the Republic, but was defeated; refused to serve under Bonaparte, who would fain have enlisted him, having seen in him "a mind cast in the true mould"; came over from London, whither he had retired, on a secret mission from Charles X.; was suspected of evil designs against the person of Bonaparte; arrested, and, after a short trial, condemned and executed, having confessed his intention to overthrow the Republic and establish Louis XVIII. on the throne (1771-1804).

CADUCEUS, the winged rod of Hermes, entwined with two serpents; originally a simple olive branch, in the hands of the god was possessed of magical virtues; it was the symbol of peace.

CÆDMON, an English monastic poet of the 7th century, the fragment of a hymn by whom, preserved by Bede, is the oldest specimen extant of English poetry; wrote a poem on the beginning of things at the call of a voice from heaven, saying as he slept, "Cædmon, come sing me some song"; and thereupon he began to sing the story of Genesis and Exodus, many other tales in the sacred Scriptures, and the story of Christ and the Apostles, and of heaven and hell to come.

CAEN, a fine old Norman town, capital of Calvados, about 80 m. SE. of Cherbourg; lace the chief manufacture; the burial-place of William the Conqueror, and the native place of Charlotte Corday; it is a well-built town, and has fine old public buildings, a large library, and a noble collection of pictures.

CAERLEON, a small old town in Monmouthshire, on the Usk, 2½ m. NE. of Newport; celebrated by Tennyson in connection with Arthurian legend; it is a very ancient place, and contains baths, sections of walls, and other relics of Roman times.

CÆSAR, name of an old Roman family claiming descent from the Trojan Æneas, which the emperors of Rome from Augustus to Nero of right inherited, though the title was applied to succeeding emperors and to the heirs-apparent of the Western and the Eastern Empires; it survived in the titles of the German Kaiser and the Czar of Russia.

CÆSAR, GAJUS JULIUS, pronounced the greatest man of antiquity, by birth and marriage connected with the democratic party; early provoked the jealousy of Sulla, then dictator, and was, by an edict of proscription against him, obliged to quit the city; on the death of Sulla returned to Rome; was elected to one civic office after another, and finally to the consulship. United with Pompey and Crassus in the First Triumvirate (60 B.C.); was appointed to the government of Gaul, which he subdued after nine years to the dominion of Rome; his successes awoke the jealousy of Pompey, who had gone over to the aristocratic side, and he was recalled; this roused Caesar, and, crossing the Rubicon with his victorious troops, he soon saw all Italy lying at his feet (49 B.C.); pursued Pompey, who had fled to Greece, and defeated him at Pharsalia (48 B.C.); was thereupon elected dictator and consul for five years, distinguishing himself in Egypt and elsewhere; returned to Rome (47 B.C.); conspired and executed vast schemes for the benefit of the city, and became the idol of its citizens; was assassinated on the Ides (the 15th) of March, 44 B.C., in the fifty-eighth year of his age (102-44 B.C.).

CÆSAREA, a Syrian seaport, 30 m. N. of Joppa, built in honour of Augustus Cæsar by Herod the Great, now in ruins, though a place of note in the days of the Crusades. Also C. Philippi, at the source of the Jordan, whence Christ, on assuring Himself that His disciples were persuaded of His divine sonship, turned to go up to Jerusalem, and so by His sacrifice perfect their faith in Him.

CÆSIUM, a rare metallic element of low melting-point, resembling potassium. Cæsium was first recognized from the distinctive lines in its spectra.

CAFFEINE, an alkaloid drug found in the tea and coffee plants.

CAGLIARI, the cap. of Sardinia, and the chief port, on the S. coast, was a colony of Jews from the time of Tiberius till 1492, whence they were expelled by the Spaniards; lies on the slopes of a hill, the summit of which is 300 ft. high, and is on the site of an ancient Carthaginian town.

CAGLIARI, PAOLO, proper name of Paul Veronese (q.v.).

CAGLIOSTRO, COUNT ALESSANDRO DI, assumed name of an arch-impostor, his real name being Giuseppe Balsamo, born in Palermo, of poor parents; early acquired a smattering of chemistry and medicine, by means of which he perpetrated the most audacious frauds; married a pretty woman named Lorenza Felliciana, who became an accomplice; professed supernatural powers and possession of the "elixir of life," and wrung large sums from his dupes wherever he went; absconded to Paris and thrown into the Bastille for complicity in the Diamond Necklace affair; on his wife turning informer, he was consigned to the Inquisition, and committed to the fortress of San Leone, where he died at 62, his wife having retired into a convent (1743-1795).

CAGNOLA, LUIGI, MARQUIS OF, Italian architect, born at Milan; his greatest work, the "Arco della Pace," of white marble, in his native city, the execution of which occupied him over 30 years (1782-1833).

CAGOTS, a race in the SW. of France of uncertain origin; treated as outcasts in the Middle Ages, owing, it has been supposed, to some taint of leprosy, from which, it is argued, they were by their manner of life in course of time freed.

CAHORS, a town in the dep. of Lot, in the S. of France, 71 m. N. of Toulouse, with interesting Roman and other relics of antiquity.

CAIAPHAS, the High-Priest of the Jews who condemned Christ to death as a violator of the law of Moses.

CAIAPOR, a wild, savage race in the woods of Brazil, hard to persuade to reconcile themselves to a settled life.

CAICOS, a group of small islands connected with the Bahamas, but annexed to Jamaica since 1874.

CAILLE, LOUIS DE LA, astronomer, studied at the Cape of Good Hope, registered stars of the Southern Hemisphere, numbering 9000, before unknown; calculated the table of eclipses for 1800 years (1713-1762).

CAILLET, a chief of the Jacquerie, a peasant insurrection in France in 1358, taken prisoner and tortured to death.

CAILLAUX, JOSEPH PIERRE AUGUSTE, French politician. Trained as a lawyer, he entered the Civil Service and was elected to the Chamber of Deputies in 1898. He acted as Minister of Finance four times before the Great War, and from 1911 to 1912 he was Prime Minister. Arrested in 1918, he spent two years in prison for holding harmful relations with the enemy, but in 1935 he returned to politics as Finance Minister to handle the franc depreciation question, and held the same post again in 1926, making debt agreements with Britain and the U.S.A. (1863-).

GAILLÉ, RENÉ, French traveller in Africa, born in Poitou, the first European to penetrate as far as Timbuctoo, in Central Africa, which he did in 1828; the temptation was a prize of 10,000 marks offered by the Geographical Society of Paris, which he received with a pension besides (1799-1839).

CAIN, according to Genesis, the first-born of Adam and Eve, and therefore of the race, and the murderer of his brother Abel.

CAINE, SIR THOMAS HENRY HALL, novelist, born in Cheshire, of Manx blood; began life as architect and took to journalism; author of a number of novels bearing on Manx life, such as "The Deemster" and "The Manxman"; his most famous novel, "The Christian," his greatest but most ambiguous work, has been translated into most of the languages of Europe (1853-).

CAINOZOIC, or Tertiary Period of geologists, in which were deposited the rocks which contain fossils of the early forms of mammals. In England the age is represented by the London Clay and the Pliocene Beds which cover most of East Anglia. During this period we find an increasing number of fossils of living species.

CAIRA, "It will go on," a popular song in France during the Revolution, said to have been a phrase of Benjamin Franklin, which he was in the habit of using in answering inquirers about the progress of the American revolution by his friends in France; the words by Ladré and the music by Bécourt, both unknown except for this composition.

CAIRD, EDWARD, brother of the following, interpreter of Kant and Hegel; succeeded Jowett as master of Balliol; wrote on the "Evolution of Religion," and edited the lectures and sermons of his brother (1835-1908).

CAIRD, JOHN, an eloquent Scottish preacher, born at Greenock, Principal of Glasgow University, famous for a sermon entitled "The Religion of Common Life," preached before Queen Victoria at Crathie in 1855; made a special study of the philosophy of religion, and wrote eloquently on it, more especially the Christian version of it (1820-1898).

CAIRN, a heap of stones often, though not always, loosely thrown together, generally by way of a prehistoric sepulchral monument, and it would seem sometimes in exorcism of some foul deed.

CAIRNES, JOHN ELLIOT, a political economist of the school of John Stuart Mill with modifications, born in co. Louth, Ireland; professor successively in Dublin, Galway, and London; author of works on political economy (1828-1875).

CAIRNGORM, a yellowish-brown variety of rock-crystal, so called from being found, among other places, on one of the Scottish Grampians, in Aberdeenshire, so named.

CAIRNS, HUGH MACCORMACK, EARL, lawyer and politician, born in co. Down, Ireland; called to the English bar; entered Parliament, representing Belfast; became Lord Chancellor under Disraeli's government in 1866, and again in 1874; took an active interest in philanthropic movements (1819-1885).

CAIRO, cap. of Egypt, and largest city in Africa, on the right bank of the Nile, just above the Delta, 120 m. SE. of Alexandria, covers an extensive area on a broad sandy plain, and presents a strange agglomeration of ancient and modern elements. The modern city is the fourth founded in succession on the same site, and remains of the former cities are included in it, old walls, gateways, narrow streets, and latticed houses, palaces, and 400 mosques. These, though much spoiled by time and tourists, still represent the brightest period of Saracenic art. The most modern part of the city consists of broad boulevards, with European-built villas, hotels, &c. There is a rich museum, and university with 2000 students. Extensive railway communication and the Nile waterway induce a large transport trade, but there is little industry. The population is mixed; the townsfolk are half Arab, half Egyptian, while Copts, Turks, Jews, Italians, and Greeks are numerous; it is a centre of Mohammedan learning, and since 1883 the centre of British influence in Egypt.

CAITHNESS, a level, except in the W. and S., bare, and somewhat barren county in the NE. of Scotland, 43 m. by 28 m., with a bold and rocky coast; has dagstone quarries; fishing the chief industry, of which Wick is the chief seat; the inhabitants are to a great extent of Scandinavian origin, and English, not Gaelic, is the language spoken.

CAJETAN, CARDINAL, general of the Dominicans, born in Gaeta; represented the Pope at the Diet of Augsburg, and tried in vain to persuade Luther to recant; wrote a Commentary on the Bible, and on the "Summa Theologiae" of Aquinas (1469-1534).

CALABAR, a district under British protection on the coast of Upper Guinea, the country flat and the climate unhealthy.

CALABAR BEAN, poisonous seed of an African bean, employed in medicine; known as the Ordeal Bean, having been used in West Africa to test the innocence of people charged with witchcraft.

CALABRIA, a fertile prov. embraced in the SW. peninsula of Italy, and traversed by the Apennines; has tunny and anchovy fisheries; yields grain and fruit, and a variety of minerals; is inhabited by a race of somewhat fiery temper; is much subject to earthquakes.

CALAIS, a fortified seaport in France, on the Strait of Dover, where it is 21 m. across; was in possession of the English from 1347 to 1558, and the last town held by them on French soil; is the chief landing-place for travellers from England to the Continent, and has considerable export trade, as well as cotton and tulle manufactures. It was one of the landing ports of the British Expeditionary Force in August, 1914.

CALAMY, EDMUND, a Presbyterian divine, born in London; favourable to Royalty, but warmly opposed to Episcopacy, against which he vigorously opposed with his pen; opposed the execution of Charles I. and the protectorate of Cromwell; made chaplain to Charles II. after the Restoration; refused a bishopric, which he could not, on conscientious grounds, accept (1600-1666).

CALAMY, EDMUND, a grandson of the preceding, an eminent Nonconformist minister in London, on whom, for the high esteem in which he was held, honorary degrees were conferred by the Edinburgh, Glasgow, and Aberdeen universities (1671-1732).

CALAS, JEAN, a tradesman of Toulouse, whose son committed suicide, and who was charged with murdering him, to prevent his going over to the Catholic Church, was tried, convicted, and sentenced to torture and death on the wheel; after which his property was confiscated, and his children compelled to embrace the Catholic faith, while the widow escaped into Switzerland. Voltaire took up her case, proved to the satisfaction of the legal authorities in France the innocence of the victim, got the process revised, and Louis XV. granted a sum of money out of the royal bounty for the benefit of the family (1698-1762).

CALAVE RAS, an inland county of California, E. of San Francisco, rich in minerals, with copper and gold mines, and remarkable for its forests of giant pines.

CALCAREOUS ROCKS, those sedimentary rocks composed almost entirely of compounds of lime, especially the carbonate. They are abundant in all parts of the world as chalk or limestone. They are chiefly of organic origin, being formed of the remains of animals with lime skeletons or plant stems such as corals. Some limestones have been laid down as the result of denudation of earlier calcareous rocks, whilst others contain a certain amount of non-calcareous matter. Some chalk beds contain many flints.

CALCHAS, the soothsayer who accompanied Agamemnon to the siege of Troy; enjoined the sacrifice of Iphigenia to propitiate the gods, foretold the length of the war, and advised the construction of the wooden horse, a device by means of which Troy was surprised and taken.

CALCITE, or Iceland Spar, a form of carbonate of lime, abundant as crystals in many igneous rocks.

It exhibits the phenomenon of double refraction (q.v.).

CALCIUM, a light metal, the compounds of which include lime, chalk, marble, strepum, apelite, and plaster of Paris.

CALCULUS, DIFFERENTIAL AND INTEGRAL, in mathematics, is the method by which we discuss the properties of continuously varying quantities. The nature of the method and the necessity for it may be indicated by a simple example; e.g. the motion of a train in a track, or the motion of a planet in its orbit. If we know the successive positions of the moving body at successive short intervals of time, the rules of the differential calculus enable us to calculate the speed, the change of speed, the change of direction of motion (i.e. the curvature of the path), and the effective force acting on the body. Conversely, given the force at every point, and the initial position and velocity, the rules of the integral calculus assist us in calculating the position and velocity of the body at any future time. Expressed somewhat crudely, the differential calculus has to do with the differentials (increments or decrements) of varying quantities; while the integral calculus is a process of summation or integration of these differentials.

CALCUTTA, on the left bank of the Hooghly, the largest and westernmost branch of the Ganges delta, about 80 m. from the sea; is the capital of Bengal and formerly of the Indian Empire, and the residence of the Governor-General; the Government buildings, Bishop's College (now an engineering school), High Court, town hall, bank, museum, university, St. Paul's Cathedral, and many other English buildings have earned for it the name "city of palaces"; but the native quarters, though being improved, are still squalid, the houses of mud or bamboo; an esplanade, numerous quays, an excellent water-supply, gas, electricity and tramway services add to the amenities; there are extensive dockyards, ironworks, timber yards, and lute nulls; extensive railway and steamboat communications make it the chief emporium of commerce in Asia; ships of 5000 tons enter the docks; founded in 1686, Calcutta was captured by Surajah Dowlah, and the "Black Hole" massacre perpetrated in 1756; became the capital of India in 1772; has suffered frequently from cyclones; the population are two-thirds Hindus, less than a third Mohammedan, and 4 per cent. Christian.

CALCUTTA CUP, the trophy for which England and Scotland meet annually at Rugby football, presented by the Calcutta Club.

CALCUTTA SWEEP, a gigantic sweepstake, the chief prizes in which run into thousands of pounds, organised on the Derby each year by the Calcutta Club.

CALDBOOT, RANDOLPH, artist, born in Chester; exercised his art chiefly in book illustrations, which were full of life and instinct with a kindly, graceful humour; though professionally untired, his abilities as an artist were promptly and generously recognised by the Academy; illustrated the books of Washington Irving; he suffered from ill-health, and died in Florida, whither he had gone to recruit (1846-1886).

CALDER, SIR ROBERT, British naval officer; served bravely in several naval engagements; was tried by court-martial, and reprimanded for not following up a victory which he had gained, a sentence which was afterwards found to be unjust; attained later the rank of admiral (1745-1818).

CALDERON DE LA BARRA, the great Spanish dramatist, born at Madrid; entered the army, and served in Italy and Flanders, producing the while dramas which were received with great enthusiasm; took holy orders, and became a canon of Toledo, but to the last continued to write poems and plays; he was a dramatist of the first order, and has been ranked by the more competent critics among the foremost of the class in both ancient and modern times (1600-1681).

CALDERWOOD, DAVID, a Scottish ecclesiastic, born at Dalkeith; became minister of Crailing; first imprisoned and then banished for resisting the attempts of James VI. to establish Episcopacy in Scotland; wrote a book, "Altare Damasceum," in Holland, whither he had retired, being a searching criticism of the claims of the Episcopacy; returned on the death of the king, and wrote a "History of the Kirk" (1575-1650).

CALEDONIA, the Roman name for Scotland N. of the Wall of Antoninus, since applied postively to the whole of Scotland.

CALEDONIAN CANAL, a canal across the NW. of Scotland, executed by Telford, for the passage of ships between the Atlantic and the North Sea, 60 m. long, 40 m. of which consist of natural lakes; begun 1803; finished 1822; cost £1,500,000; has 28 locks; was constructed for the benefit of coasting vessels to save the risks they encountered in the Pentland Firth.

CALENDS, the first day of the Roman month, so called as the day on which the feast days and unlucky days of the month were announced.

CAL'GARY, a flourishing town in the province of Alberta, Canada; railway centre for grain distribution.

CALHOUN, JOHN CALDWELL, an American statesman, born in S. Carolina, of Irish descent; all through his public life in high civic position; leader of "the States' rights" movement, in vindication of the doctrine that the Union was a mere compact and any State had a right to withdraw from its conditions; was champion of the slave-holding States, regarding slavery as an institution fraught with blessing to all concerned. His chief work is a treatise on the "Nature of Government" (1782-1850).

CALIBAN, a slave in Shakespeare's "Tempest," of the grossest animality of nature.

CALICUT, chief town on the Malabar coast, in the Madras Presidency of India, the first port at which Vasco da Gama landed in 1498, whence the cotton cloth first imported from the place got the name "calico."

CALIFORNIA, the most south-westerly State in the U.S.A., occupies the Pacific seaboard between Oregon and Mexico, and is bounded landward by Nevada and Arizona. It is the second largest State, larger by a quarter than the United Kingdom. In the N. the rainfall is excessive and winters severe; in the S. there is little rain and a delightful climate. Wheat is the most important product; the grape and all manner of fruits grow luxuriantly. Mineral wealth is great; it is the foremost State for gold and quicksilver; lead, silver, copper, iron, sulphur, coal, and many other minerals abound. The industries include brandy and sugar manufactures, silk-growing, shipbuilding, and fishing. At Hollywood a film industry employing thousands of people has been established. All products are exported, eastward by the great Central, Union, and Southern Pacific railroads; and seaward, the chief port being San Francisco, the largest city, as Sacramento is the capital of the State. The Yosemite Valley, in the Sierra Nevada, through which falls the Merced River, is the most wonderful gorge in the world. Captured from Mexico in 1847, the discovery of gold next year raised great excitement, and brought thousands of adventurers from all over the world. Constituted a State in 1850, the original lawlessness gradually gave way to regular administration, and progress has since been steady and rapid.

CALIFORNIA, LOWER, an extensive, mountainous, dry, and scarcely habitable peninsula, stretching southward from the State, in Mexican territory; agriculture is carried on in some of the valleys, and pearl and whale fisheries support some coast towns.

CALIGULA, Roman emperor from A.D. 37 to 41, youngest son of Germanicus and Agrippina, born at Antium; having ingratiated himself with Tiberius, was named his successor; ruled with wisdom and magnanimity at first, while he lived in the unbridled indulgence of every lust, but after an illness due to his dissipation, gave way to the most atrocious and insane acts of cruelty and impiety; would entertain people at a banquet and then throw them into the sea; wished Rome had only one head, that he might shear it off at a blow; had his horse installed as consul in mockery of the office; declared himself a god, and had divine honours paid to him, till a conspiracy was formed against him on his return from an expedition into Gaul, when he was assassinated (12-41).

CALIPHE, the title adopted by the successors of Mohammed, as supreme in both civil and religious matters. The principal caliphates are: (1) the Caliphate of the East, established by Abubekr at Mecca, transferred to Bagdad by the Abbasides (632-1258); (2) the Caliphate of Cordova, established at Cordova by Abderrahman (756-1031); (3) the Caliphate of Egypt, established by the Fatimites (909-1171). It was at Bagdad that Moctam el-Mansour achieved its final development.

CALISTO, daughter of Lyscon, king of Arcadia; changed by Juno into a she-bear, and placed by Jupiter among the stars.

CALIXTUS, the name of three Popes: C. I., Pope from 218 to 222; C. II., Pope from 1119 to 1124; C. III., Pope from 1455 to 1458.

CALIXTUS, GEORGE, a Lutheran theologian of an eminently tolerant type, born at Sleswick; travelled for four years in Germany, Belgium, England, and France; accused of apostasy, for the liberal spirit in which he had learned in consequence to treat both Catholics and Calvinists, and for considering the Apostles' Creed a broad enough basis for Christian union and communion, which might embrace both; his friends, however, stood by him, and he retained the position he held in the Lutheran Church (1586-1656).

CALLAO, a port in Peru, 7 m. from Lima, with a fine harbour, the safest on the coast, if not in the world; its prosperity depends on trade, which is less than it was before the annexation of the nitrate fields to Chile.

CALCOTT, JOHN WALL, an eminent musical composer, born at Kensington; was a pupil of Handel, and is celebrated for his glee compositions (1766-1821). Sir Augustus Wall, landscape painter, brother; was knighted for his eminent skill as an artist (1770-1844). Lady Maria, wife of Sir Augustus, author of "Little Arthur's History of England" (1770-1842).

CALLENDAR, HUGH LONGBOURNE, British physicist, professor at McGill University, Montreal, and afterwards at London. He carried out much research into thermodynamics and the conductivity of solids, and devised new forms of air thermometers and of platinum resistance thermometers, used for high temperatures and for detecting radiant heat. He invented the transpiration balance (1893-).

CALLERNISH, a district in the W. of the island of Lewis, 10 m. from Stornoway; noted for its circles of standing stones, from 10 to 17 ft. in height, the whole in cruciform arrangement.

CALLICRATES, along with Ictinus, architect of the Parthenon in Athens, circ. 400 B.C.

CALLIMACHUS, Greek architect, inventor of the Corinthian order, 4th century B.C.

CALLIMACHUS, Greek poet, born in Cyrena; taught grammar and belles-lettres at Alexandria; was keeper of the library there; of his writings, which are said to have been on a variety of subjects and very numerous, only a few epigrams and hymns remain; was admired by Catullus, Ovid, and Propertius, and flourished in the 3rd century B.C.

CALLIOPE, the muse of epic poetry and eloquence, is represented with a tablet and stylus, and sometimes with a paper roll. SEE MUSES.

CALLISTHENES, a disciple of Aristotle, who accompanied Alexander the Great to India, and was put to death by his order for remonstrating with him on his adoption of the manners and style of the potentates of the East, but professedly on a charge of treason; d. 361 B.C.

CALLISTRATUS, an Athenian orator, who kindled in Demosthenes a passion for his art; his Spartan sympathies brought him to grief, and led to his execution as a traitor about 366 B.C.

CALLOT, JACQUES, engraver and etcher, born at Nancy; his etchings, executed many of them at the instance of the Grand-duke of Tuscany and Louis XIII. of France, amounted to 1600 pieces, such as those of the sieges of Breda and Rocelle, which are much admired, as also those of the gipsies with whom he associated in his youth (1563-1635).

CALMET, AUGUSTINE, a learned Benedictine and Biblical scholar, born in Lorraine, but known in England by his "Historical, Critical, and Chronological Dictionary of the Bible," the first published book of its kind of any note, and much referred to at one time as an authority; he wrote also a "Commentary on the Bible" in 25 vols., and a "Universal History" in 17 vols. (1673-1757).

CALMES, THE, tracts of calm in the ocean, on the confines of the trade winds, which last for weeks at a time.

CALOMAR DE FRANCESCO, a Spanish statesman; minister of Ferdinand VII.; a violent enemy of liberal principles and measures, and a reactionary; obnoxious to the people; arrested for treachery, escaped into France by bribing his captors (1770-1842).

CALOWNE, CHARLES ALEXANDRE DE, French financier under Louis XVI., born at Douay; a man of "fiscal genius"; genius for persuading, before all things for borrowing; succeeded Necker in 1783 as controller-general of the finances in France; after four years of desperate attempts at financial adjustment, could do nothing but convolve the Notables in 1787; could give no account of his administration that would satisfy them; was dismissed, and had to quit Paris and France; "his task to raise the wind and the winds," says Carlyle, "and he did it," referring to the Revolution he provoked; was permitted by Napoleon to return to France, where he died in embarrassed circumstances (1784-1802).

CALORIC THEORY, a theory of heat formerly held which postulated a weightless fluid "caloric," the presence of which caused a body to be hot. When a hot and cold body were placed in contact it was supposed that "caloric" flowed from the hot to the cold body. The theory was abandoned in favour of the kinetic or dynamical theory, as the result of the conclusive experiments of Count Rumford (Benjamin Thomson) in 1798-1799.

CALORIE, the name given by physicists to the unit quantity of heat; the heat required to raise one gram of pure water from 15° C. to 16° C.; for certain practical purposes the calorie is taken to be 1000 times this value.

CALORIUS, ABRAHAM, a fiery Lutheran polemic, a bitter enemy of George Calixtus (1612-1686).

CALOTYPE, a process of photography invented by Fox Talbot in 1840, by means of the action of light on nitrate of silver.

CALPE, now known as Gibraltar; one of the Pillars of Hercules (q.v.).

CALPURNIA, the last wife of Julius Caesar, daughter of the consul Piso, who, alive to the danger of conspiracy, urged Caesar to stay at home the day he was assassinated.

CALZAGHIONE, a city 38 m. SW. of Catania; the staple industry is pottery and terra-cotta ware.

CAL'UMET, among the American Indians a pipe for smoking, which, if accepted when offered, was an emblem of peace, and, if rejected, a declaration of war.

CALVADOS, a maritime dep. in N. of France, skirted by dangerous rocks of the same name, with a fertile soil and a moist climate.

CALVAERT, DENIS, a painter, born at Antwerp; settled at Bologna, where he founded a school, from whence issued many eminent artists, among others Guido Reni, Domenichino, and Albani; his masterpiece, "St. Michael" in St. Peter's, Bologna (1565-1619).

CALVARY, the place of the crucifixion. Identified with a hill on the N. of Jerusalem, looked down upon from the city, with a cliff on which criminals were cast down prior to being stoned; also name given to edifices of the crucifixion in Catholic countries, erected for devotion.

CALVERLEY, CHARLES STUART, a clever English parodist, Fellow of Christ's Church, Oxford; wrote "Fly-Leaves" and "Verses and Translations"; his parodies among the most amusing of the century, flavoured by the author's scholarship (1831-1884).

CALVERT, GEORGE and OGBILL, father and son, Lords Baltimore; founders, under charter from James I. of Maryland, U.S.

CALVIN JOHN, or CALVIN, the great Reformer, born at Noyon, in Picardy; devoted for a time to the law, was sent to study at the university of Orleans, after having mastered Latin as a boy at Paris; became acquainted with the Scriptures, and acquired a permanently theological bent; professed the Protestant faith; proceeded to Paris; became the centre of a dangerous religious excitement; had to flee for his life from France; retired to Basel, where he studied Hebrew and wrote his great epoch-making book, the "Institutes of the Christian Religion"; making after this for Strasbourg, he chanced to pass through Geneva, was arrested as by the hand of God to stay and help on God's work in the place, but proceeded with such rigour that he was expelled, though recalled after three years; on his return he proposed and established his system of Church government, which allowed of no license in faith any more than conduct, as witness the burning of Servetus for denying the doctrine of the Trinity; for twenty years he held sway in Geneva, and for so long he was regarded as the head of the Reformed Churches in Scotland, Switzerland, Holland, and France. Besides his "Institutes," he found time to write Commentaries on nearly all the books of the Bible; was a man of masculine intellect and single-hearted devotion to duty, as ever in the "Great Taskmaster's" eye. His greatest work was his "Institutes," published in Basel in 1535-1536. It was written in Latin, and four years after translated by himself into French. "In the translated form," says Prof. Saintsbury, "it is beyond all question the first serious work of great literary merit not historical in the history of French prose. . . . Considering that the whole of it was written before the author of it was seven-and-twenty, it is perhaps the most remarkable work of its particular kind to be anywhere found; the merits of it being those of full maturity and elaborate preparation rather than of youthful exuberance" (1560-1564).

CALVINISM, the theological system of Calvin, the chief characteristic of which is that it assigns all in salvation to the sovereign action and persistent operation of Divine grace.

CALVO, CHARLES, an Argentine publicist, born at Buenos Aires; author of "International Law, Theoretical and Practical" (1824-1906).

CALYPSO, in the Greek mythology a nymph, daughter of Atlas, queen of the island of Ogygia, who by her fascinating charms detained Ulysses beside her for 7 of the 10 years of his wanderings home from Troy; she died of grief on his departure.

CAMBACERES, JEAN JACQUES REGIS DE, Duke of Parma, born at Montpellier; bred to the legal profession, took a prominent part as a lawyer in the National Convention; after the Revolution of the 18th Brumaire, was chosen second consul; was sincerely attached to Napoleon; was made by him High Chancellor of the Empire as well as Duke of Parma; his "Projet de Code" formed the basis of the Code Napoleon (1758-1824).

CAMBAY, a town and seaport N. of Bombay, on a gulf of the same name, which is fast silting up, in consequence of which the place, once a flourishing port, has fallen into decay.

CAMBODIA, a small kingdom in Indo-China, occupying an area as large as Scotland in the plains of the Lower Mekong. The coast-line is washed by the Gulf of Siam; the landward boundaries touch Siam, Annam, and French Cochinchina; in the N. are stretches of forest and hills in which iron and copper are wrought; a branch of the Mekong flows backward and forms the Great Lake; most of the country is inundated in the rainy season, and rice, tobacco, cotton, and maize are grown in the tracts thus irrigated; spices, gutta-percha, and timber are also produced; there are ironworks at Kompong Boal; foreign trade is done through the port Kampot. The capital is Phnom-Penh, on the Mekong. The kingdom was formerly much more extensive; remarkable ruins of ancient grandeur are numerous; it has been under French protection since 1863.

CAMBRAL, a city in the dep. of Nord, in France, on the Scheldt; famous for its fine linen fabrics, hence called cambrics. Fénelon was archbishop here, and in the cathedral is a monument to his memory. It was the scene of intensive fighting in the Great War in November, 1917, and in October, 1918, when British forces captured it in the final push that ended the war.

CAMBRIA, the ancient name of Wales, country of the Cymry, a Celtic race, to which the Welsh belong.

CAMBRIAN rocks form the lowest strata of the Paleozoic series, containing many forms of primitive animal life. The deposits, consisting of grits, sandstones, shales, and slates, present considerable uniformity over the whole earth. Rocks of this age are particularly abundant in Wales. The principal fossils are trilobites and brachiopods.

CAMBRIDGE, county town of Cambridgeshire, stands in flat country, on the Cam, 58 m. N.E. of London; an ancient town with interesting archaeological remains; there are some fine buildings, the oldest round church in England, Holy Sepulchre, and a Roman Catholic church. The glory of the city is the University, founded in the 12th century, with its colleges housed in stately buildings, chapels, libraries, museums, &c., which shares with Oxford the academic prestige of England. It lays emphasis on mathematical and scientific, as Oxford on classical, culture. Among its eminent men have been Bacon, Newton, Cromwell, Pitt, Thackeray, Spenser, Milton, Dryden, Wordsworth, and Tennyson.

CAMBRIDGE, a suburb of Boston, U.S., one of the oldest towns in New England; seat of Harvard University; the centre of the book-making trade; here Longfellow resided for many years.

CAMBRIDGE, FIRST DUKE OF, seventh and youngest son of George III.; served as volunteer under the Duke of York, and carried a marshal's baton; was made viceroy of Hanover, which he continued to be till, in 1837, the crown fell to the Duke of Cumberland (1774-1850).

CAMBRIDGE, SECOND DUKE OF, son of the preceding and cousin to the Queen, born in Hanover; served in the army; became commander-in-chief in 1850 on the resignation of Viscount Hardinge; field-marshal in 1862; retired in 1895, and was succeeded by Lord Wolseley (1819-1904).

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY contains 19 colleges: Peterhouse, founded 1257; Clare College, 1326; Pembroke, 1347; Gonville and Caius, 1364; Trinity Hall, 1360; Corpus Christi, 1352; King's, 1441; Queens', 1448; St. Catharine's, 1473; Jesus, 1496; Christ's, 1505; St. John's, 1511; Magdalene, 1542; Trinity, 1546; Emmanuel, 1584; Sidney Sussex, 1596; Downing, 1800; Selwyn, 1882; and Fitzwilliam House, 1869. Each college is a corporation by itself, governed by statutes sanctioned by the crown, and capable of holding landed or other property.

CAMBRIDGESHIRE, an inland agricultural county, nine-tenths of its surface under cultivation; famed for its butter and cheese; very flat, marshy in the N., with a range of chalk-hills, the Gog-Magog in the S.; is rich in Roman remains.

CAMBRONNE, French general, born at Nantes; served under the Republic and the Empire; accompanied Napoleon to Elba in 1814; commanded a division of the Old Guard at Waterloo; fought to the last; though surrounded by the enemy and summoned to surrender, refused, and was taken prisoner; is credited with the saying, La Garde meurt, et ne se rend pas, "The Guard dies, but does not surrender" (1770-1842).

CAMBUS CAN, king of Tartary, identified with Genghis Khan, who had a wonderful steed of brass, magically obedient to the wish of the rider, together with a magical mirror, sword, and ring; his history is recorded by Chaucer in "The Canterbury Tales."

CAMEYSES, king of Persia, succeeded his father, the great Cyrus; invaded and subdued Egypt, but afterwards suffered serious reverse, and in the end gave himself up to dissipation and vindictive acts of cruelty, from which not only his subjects suffered, but the members of his own family; d. 54 B.C.

CAMEYSES, KING, a ranting character in a play called "The Lamentable Tragedy"; referred to by Faletta in 1 Henry IV., Act ii. sc. 4.

CAMDEN, a busy town in New Jersey, U.S., on the left bank of the Delaware, opposite Philadelphia; the terminus of six railways.

CAMDEN, CHARLES FRATY, FIRST EARL OF, a distinguished British lawyer and statesman, chief-justice of the King's Bench in George I.'s reign, and ultimately Lord Chancellor of England; opposed, as judge in the case, the prosecution of Wilkes as illegal, and as a statesman, the policy and action of the government towards the American colonies; he was created earl in 1786 (1719-1794).

CAMDEN, WILLIAM, a learned English antiquary, born in London; second master, and eventually headmaster in Westminster School, during which time he gave proof of his antiquarian knowledge, which led to his appointment as Clarenceux king-at-arms; author of "Britannia," a historical and topographical account of the British Isles, his most widely known work, and "Annals of Elizabeth's Reign," both, as all the rest of his works, written in Latin; he has been surnamed the Strabo and the Pausanias of England (1561-1623).

CAMELOT, the ancient town where King Arthur held his court; variously identified with Caerleon (q.v.); Winchester, in which town old entrenchments are associated with the legend; Queen's Camel, Somersetshire; and Camelford, Cornwall.

CAMENE, in the Roman mythology, a set of nymphs endowed with semi-prophetic powers, and sometimes identified with the Muses.

CAMEO, a precious stone cut in relief; consists generally of two or three different colours, the upper cut in relief and the under forming the ground.

CAMERA LUCIDA, an optical instrument or contrivance, by means of which the image of an object may be made to appear on a light or white surface.

CAMERA OBSCURA, an optical contrivance, by means of which the images of external objects are exhibited distinctly on a surface in the focus of the lens.

CAMERARIUS, JOACHIM, a distinguished scholar, born at Bamberg; active as a German Reformer; played a prominent part in the religious struggles of his time; friend and biographer of Melancthon; collaborated with him in drawing up the Augsburg Confession (1500-1574).

CAMERON, SIR DAVID YOUNG, British artist. Born in Glasgow, he made a name for himself as an etcher, and later as a landscape painter, especially of Scottish scenes. He was made A.R.A. in 1911, an R.A. in 1920, and was knighted in 1924 (1805-).

CAMERON, JOHN, a learned divine, born in Glasgow, who held several professorial appointments on the Continent; was for a time Principal of Glasgow University; his knowledge was so extensive that he was styled a "walking library," but he fell in disfavour with the people for his doctrine of passive obedience, and he died of a wound inflicted by an opponent of his views (1579-1626).

CAMERON, RICHARD, a Scottish Covenanter of the 17th century, born in Falkland, Fife; a ringleader of the persecuted Presbyterians, took to arms together with sixty others in defence of his rights; was surprised by a body of dragoons at Airds Moss (q.v.), and after a brave fight slain, his head and hands cut off and fixed on the Netherbow Port, at the head of the Canongate, Edinburgh, in 1680.

CAMERON, VERNER LOVETT, African explorer, born near Weymouth; traversed Africa all the way from east to west (1873-1875); explored Lake Tanganyika, and traced the sources of the Zambesi River; wrote "Across Africa"; killed in the hunting field (1844-1894).

CAMERONIANS, (1) a Presbyterian body in Scotland who derived their name from Richard Cameron, contended like him for the faith to which the nation by covenant had bound itself, and even declined to take the oath of allegiance to sovereigns such as William III. and his successors, who did not explicitly concede to the nation this right. (2) Also a British regiment, originally raised in defence of Scottish religious rights; for long the 26th Regiment of the British line, now the Scottish Rifles.

CAMEROON, (1) a river in W. Africa, falling by a wide estuary into the Bight of Biafra, known as the Oil river, from the quantities of palm-oil exported; (2) a mountain range, a volcanic group, the highest peak nearly 14,000 ft., NW. of the estuary; (3) also a French colony, extending 190 m. along the coast.

CAMILLA, (1) a virgin queen of the Volsci, one of the heroines in the "Æneid," noted for her preter-natural sweetness on the reascendence, and her grace; (2) also a sister of the Horatii (q.v.), killed by her brother because she wept at the death of her betrothed, one of the Curiatii (q.v.), whom the Horatii slew.

CAMILLE, MARCUS FURIUS, a famous patrician of early Rome; took Veii, a rival town, after a ten years' siege; retired into voluntary exile at Ardea on account of the envy of his enemies in Rome; recalled from exile, saved Rome from destruction by the Gauls under Brennus, was five times elected dictator, and gained a succession of victories over rival Italian tribes; died at eighty of the plague, in 365 B.C., lamented by the whole nation, and remembered for generations after as one of the noblest heroic figures in Roman history.

CAMILLE, Huguenots of the Covenants, who took up arms by thousands in serious revolt against Louis XIV., in which others joined, under Jean Cavalier their chief, after, and in consequence of, the revocation of the Edict of Nantes (1685); so called because they wore a camille (Fr. a chemise), or white blouse, over their armour; were partly persuaded and partly compelled into submission by Marshal Villars in 1704.

CAMOENS, LUIZ DE, the poet of Portugal, born at Lisbon, studied at Coimbra; fell in passionate love with a lady of high rank in Lisbon, as she with him, but whom he was not allowed to marry; left Lisbon, joined the army, and fought against the Moors; volunteered service in India, arrived at Goa, and got into trouble with the Portuguese authorities; was banished to Macao, and consoled himself by writing his "Lusiad"; coming home was shipwrecked and lost everything but his poems; died neglected and in poverty; the title of his greatest work is properly "The Lusiad," or the Lusitanians, i.e. the Portuguese, and in their national epic, called, not inaptly, the "Epos of Commerce"; it has been translated into most European languages, and into English alone no fewer than six times (1524-1580).

CAMORRA, a secret society in Naples with wide ramifications, which at one time had by sheer terrorism considerable political influence in the country, although at first instituted for brigandage and smuggling; when steps were taken by Francis II. to suppress it, the members of it joined the revolutionary party, and had their revenge in the expulsion eventually of the Bourbons from Italy.

CAMPAGNA, (1) an unhealthy flat, district round Rome, co-extensive with ancient Latium, infected with malaria; (2) a town in Italy, in Salerno, with a cathedral, and a trade in wine, oil, and fruit.

CAMPAIGN, THE, poem by Addison in celebration of Marlborough's victory at Blenheim.

CAMPAN, MME. DE, born at Paris, faithful friend and confidante of Marie Antoinette; after the Revolution opened a boarding-school at St. Germain; became under Napoleon matron of an institution for daughters of officers of the Legion of Honour; wrote the "Private Life of Marie Antoinette" (1752-1822).

CAMPANELLA, TOMMASO, an Italian philosopher of the transition period, originally a Dominican monk, born in Calabria; contemporary of Bacon; aimed, like him, at the reform of philosophy; opposed scholasticism, fell back upon the ancient systems, and devoted himself to the study of nature; was persecuted all along by the Church, and spent 27 years of his life in a Neapolitan dungeon; released, he retired to France, and enjoyed the protection of Richelieu; he was the author of sonnets as well as philosophical works (1568-1639).

CAMPANIA, an ancient prov. in the W. of Italy, of great fertility, yielding corn, wine, and oil in great abundance; Capua was the capital, the chief towns now being Naples, Salerno, and Gaeta; it was a favourite resort of the wealthy families of ancient Rome.

CAMPANILE, a tower for bells constructed beside a church, but not attached to it; very common in Italian cities, the leaning tower of Pisa being one, and that of Florence one of the most famous. That of St. Mark's, Venice, collapsed in 1902 and was rebuilt in exact facsimile.

- a celebrated Scottish Highland clan, the members of which have played an important rôle in English and Scottish history.
- CAMPBELL, ALEXANDER, an anti-Calvinistic Baptist, born in Antrim; emigrated to America in 1807, and founded a sect called the "Disciples of Christ"; disowned creeds, and owned no authority in religion but the Bible; the sect has upwards of 5000 meeting-houses in America, and over half a million members. Campbell executed a translation of the New Testament, in which he employed the words "Immersion" and "Immersion" for "baptist" and "baptism" (1788-1866).
- CAMPBELL, SIR COLIN, LORD CLYDE, born in Glasgow, son of a carpenter named MacIver; entered the army, and rose rapidly; served in China and the Punjab; commanded the Highland Brigade in the Crimea; won the day at Alma and Balaclava; commanded in India during the Mutiny; relieved Lucknow, and quelled the rebellion; was made field-marshal, with a pension of £2000, and created Lord Clyde; he was one of the bravest soldiers of England (1792-1863).
- CAMPBELL, GEORGE, a Scottish divine, Principal of Aberdeen University; wrote "Philosophy of Rhetoric," and an able reply to Hume's argument against miracles, entitled "Dissertation on Miracles" (1719-1796).
- CAMPBELL, JOHN, LORD, Lord Chancellor of England, born at Cupar-Fife; a son of the manse; destined for the Church, but took the study of law; was called to the bar; did journalistic work and law reports; was a Whig in politics; held a succession of offices both on the Bench and in the Cabinet; wrote the "Lives of the Chancellors" and the "Lives of the Chief Justices" (1779-1861).
- CAMPBELL, JOHN FRANCIS, born at Ilay, author of, among other works, "Popular Tales of the West Highlands, orally collected," a work all his own, and a remarkable one for the enthusiasm and the patriotic devotion it displays (1822-1886).
- CAMPBELL, JOHN MACLEOD, a Scottish clergyman, born in Arny; deposed from the ministry of the Scottish Church in 1881 for his liberal theological sentiments; before his death a testimonial and address in recognition of his worth was presented to him by representatives of nearly every religious community in Scotland (1801-1872).
- CAMPBELL, CAPT. MALCOLM, British motorist, who set up what was a world's speed record of 174 m. an hour at Pendine in 1927, and another, also beaten later, of 202 m. an hour at Daytona, in 1928.
- CAMPBELL, REV. REGINALD JOHN, preacher and theological writer, first as a Nonconformist and later as Church of England. He succeeded Dr. Parker at the City Temple in 1903, remained there till 1915, and joined the Church of England in 1916, being appointed to a Brighton church (1867-).
- CAMPBELL, THOMAS, poet, born in Glasgow; studied with distinction at the University; when a student of law in Edinburgh wrote "The Pleasures of Hope"; the success of the work, which was great, enabled him to travel on the Continent, where he wrote the well-known lines, "Ye Mariners of England," "Hohenlinden," and "The Exile of Erin"; married, and settled in London, where he did writing, lecturing, and some more poetry, in particular "The Last Man"; after settling in London a pension of £200 was awarded him through the influence of Fox; he wrote in prose as well as verse; he was elected Rector of Glasgow University in 1827, and again in the following year; buried in Westminster (1777-1844).
- CAMPBELL-BANNERMAN, SIR HENRY, British statesman. He entered Parliament as a Liberal in 1868, holding his seat at Stirling Burghs till his death; first took office in 1871 as financial secretary to the War Office, and became Secretary for War in 1884. He succeeded to the leadership of the Liberal Party in 1899, and in 1905, on the fall of the Balfour administration, he became Prime Minister, remaining at the helm to within a few weeks of his death. (1836-1908).
- CAMPBELLTOWN, a town in Kintyre, Argyllshire, with a fine harbour; is a great fishing centre, and has whisky distilleries.
- CAMPPE, JOACHIM HEINRICH, German educationist; disciple of Basedow, and author of educational works (1746-1818).
- CAMPPEACHY, a Mexican seaport on a bay of the same name; manufactures cigars.
- CAMPPEGGIO, LORENZO, cardinal; twice visited England as legate, the last time in connection with the divorce between Henry VIII. and Catherine, with the effect of mortally offending the former and being of no real benefit to the latter, whom he would fain have befriended; his mission served only to embitter the relations of Henry with the see of Rome (1474-1539).
- CAMPER, PETER, a Dutch anatomist, born at Leyden; held sundry professorships; made a special study of the facial angle in connection with intelligence; he was an artist as well as a scientist, and a patron of art (1722-1789).
- CAMPERDOWN, a tract of sandy hills on the coast of N. Holland, near which Admiral Duncan defeated the Dutch fleet under De Winter in 1797.
- CAMPFOR, a colourless crystalline substance, obtained from the wood of the camphor tree. Camphor can be prepared synthetically from pinene, which is present in oil of turpentine.
- CAMPHUYSEN, a Dutch landscape painter of the 17th century, famous for his moonlight pieces.
- CAMPI, a family of painters, distinguished in the annals of Italian art at Cremona in the 16th century.
- CAMPINE, a vast moor of swamp and peat to the E. of Antwerp, now rendered fertile by irrigation.
- CAMPION, EDMUND, a Jesuit, born in London; a renegade from the Church of England; became a keen Catholic propagandist in England; was arrested for sedition, of which he was innocent, and executed; was in 1886 beatified by Pope Leo XIII. (1540-1581).
- CAMPO-FORMIO, a village near Udine, in Venetia, where a treaty was concluded between France and Austria in 1797, by which the Belgian provinces and part of Lombardy were ceded to France, and certain Venetian States to Austria in return.
- CAMPO SANTO (Holy Ground), Italian and Spanish names for a burial-place.
- CAMPORA, a trading city of Brazil, in the prov. of Rio de Janeiro.
- CAMPVEERE, now called Vars, on the N.E. of the island of Walcheren; had a Scottish factory under Scottish law, civil and ecclesiastical.
- CAMUS, bishop of Belley, born at Paris; a violent enemy of the mendicant monks (1582-1603).
- CAMUS, ARMAND GASTON, a learned French jurist-consult, member of the National Convention; a determined enemy of the Court party in France; voted for the execution of the king as a traitor and conspirator; was conservator of the national records, and did good service in preserving them (1740-1804).
- CANAAN, originally the coast land, but eventually the whole, of Palestine W. of the Jordan.
- CANAANITES, a civilised race with towns for defence; dependent on agriculture; worshippers of the fertilising powers of nature; and the original inhabitants of Palestine, from which they were never wholly rooted out.
- CANADA, which with Newfoundland forms British North America, occupies the northern third of the continent, stretches from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from the United States to Alaska and the Arctic Ocean; nearly as large as Europe. It comprises a lofty and a lower tableland W. and E. of the Rocky Mountains, the peninsulas of Labrador and Nova Scotia, and between these a vast extent of prairie and undulating land, with rivers and lakes innumerable, many of them of enormous size and navigable, constituting the finest system of inland waterways in the world; the Rocky Mountains rise to 16,000 ft., but there are several gorges, through one of which the Canadian Pacific railroad runs; the chief rivers are the Fraser, Mackenzie, Saskatchewan, and St. Lawrence; Great Slave, Great Bear, Athabasca, Winnipeg, Manitoba, Superior, Huron, Erie, and Ontario are the largest lakes; the climate is varied, very cold in the north, very wet west of the Rockies, elsewhere drier than in Europe, with hot summers, long, cold, but bracing and exhilarating winters; the corn-growing land is practically inexhaustible; the finest wheat is grown without manure, year after year, in the rich soil of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and the western prairie; the forests yield maple, oak, elm, pine, ash, and poplar in immense quantities, and steps are taken to prevent the wealth of timber ever being exhausted; gold, coal, iron, and copper are widely distributed; fisheries, both on the coasts and inland, are of great value; agriculture and forestry are the most important industries; the chief trade is done with England and the United States; the nine provinces, Quebec, Ontario, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island, British Columbia, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta, each with its own Parliament, are united under the Dominion Government; the Governor-General is the Viceroy of the King; the Dominion Parliament meets at Ottawa, the federal capital; nearly every province has its university, that of Toronto being the most important; the largest town is Montreal; Toronto, Quebec, Hamilton, and Halifax are all larger than the capital; taken possession of by France in 1534, settlement began at Quebec in 1608; by the treaty of Utrecht, 1713, Hudson Bay, Nova Scotia, and Newfoundland passed to England; the rest of French territory was ceded to England in 1763; constituted at different times, the various provinces, except Newfoundland, were finally confederated and given Dominion status in 1907.

CANAL RAYS. SEE POSITIVE RAYS.

CANALETTO, ANTONIO, a Venetian painter, famous for his pictures of Venice and handling of light and shade (1697-1768).

CANALETTO, BERNARDO BELLOTTO, nephew and pupil of preceding; distinguished as painter and engraver (1720-1780).

CANARIS, CONSTANTINE, a Greek statesman, did much to free and consolidate Greece, more than any other statesman (1790-1877).

CANARY ISLANDS, a group of mountainous islands in the Atlantic, off the NW. African coast, belonging to Spain, with rocky coasts, and wild, picturesque scenery; on the lower levels the climate is delightful, and sugar, bananas, and dates grow; farther up there are zones where wheat and cereals are cultivated; the rainfall is low, and water often scarce; sugar, wine, and tobacco are exported; the islands are a health resort of growing favour.

CANBERRA, a tract of land formerly in New South Wales made the federal capital of Australia; ranks as the Federal Capital Territory, with an area of 940 sq. m. In 1927 the Duke of York laid the foundation stone of the Parliament House there.

CANCER, or the Crab, the sign of the zodiac, which the sun enters on June 21, when it is overhead at noon at all places on the Tropic of Cancer.

CANDIA, the ancient name of Crete, now the name of the capital, in the centre of the N. coast.

CANDIDE, a philosophic romance by Voltaire, and written in ridicule of the famous maxim of Leibnitz, "All for the best in the best of all possible worlds"; it is a sweeping satire, and "religion, political government, national manners, human weakness, ambition, love, loyalty, all come in for a sneer."

CANDLE POWER, the unit of luminosity based on the standard sperm candle weighing six to the pound and burning 180 grains per hour.

CANDLEMAS, a festival in commemoration of the purification of the Virgin, held on February 2, celebrated with lighted candles; an old Roman custom in honour of the goddess Februa.

CANDLER, ROBERT SMITH, a Scottish ecclesiastic born in Edinburgh; distinguished, next to Chalmers, for his services in organising the Free Church of Scotland; was an able debater and an eloquent preacher (1806-1878).

CANDOUR, MRS., a slanderess in Sheridan's "School for Scandal."

CANE, chief commercial town in Crete, on NW. coast; trades in wax, oil, fruit, wool, and silk.

CANINA, LUIGI, Italian architect; wrote on the antiquities of Rome, Etruria, &c., and himself conducted excavations at Tusculum (1795-1866).

CANNÆ, ancient town in Apulia, near the mouth of the Aufidus, where Hannibal, in a great battle, defeated the Romans in 216 B.C., but, failing to follow up his success by a march on Rome, was twitted by Maharbal, one of his officers, who addressing him said, "You know how to conquer, Hannibal, but not how to profit by your victory."

CANNES, a French watering-place and health resort on the Mediterranean, in the S.E. of France, where Napoleon landed on his return from Elba.

CANNING, CHARLES JOHN, EARL, son of the succeeding; after service in Cabinet offices, was made Governor-General of India, 1856, in succession to Lord Dalhousie; held this post at the time of the Mutiny in 1857; distinguished himself during this trying crisis by his discretion, firmness, and moderation; became Viceroy on the transfer of the government to the Crown in 1858; died in London without issue, and the title became extinct (1812-1842).

CANNING, GEORGE, a distinguished British statesman and orator, born in London; studied for the bar; entered Parliament as a protégé of Pitt, whom he strenuously supported; was rewarded by an under-secretaryship; married a lady of high rank, with a fortune; satirised the Whigs by his pen in his "Anti-Jacobin"; on the death of Pitt became Minister of Foreign Affairs; under Portland distinguished himself by defeating the schemes of Napoleon; became a member of the Liverpool ministry, and once more Minister of Foreign Affairs; on the death of Liverpool was made Prime Minister, and after a period of unpopularity became popular by adopting the title of his old colleagues, a liberal policy; was not equal to the opposition he provoked, and died at the age of 57 (1770-1827).

CANNIZZARO, STANISLAW, Italian chemist, remembered for his work in the accurate determination of the atomic weights of the elements; his results were held as the standards for many years (1826-1910).

CANO, ALONZO, a celebrated artist, born at Granada; surmamed the Michael Angelo of Spain, having been painter, sculptor, and architect (1601-1667).

CANO, SEBASTIAN DEL, a Spanish navigator, the first to sail round the world; perished on his second voyage to India (1460-1526).

CANON, the name given to the body of Scripture accepted by the Church as of divine authority.

CANON OF COLORADO, a gorge in Arizona through which the Colorado River flows, the largest and deepest in the world, being 800 m. long, with a wall from 3000 to 6000 ft. in perpendicular height.

CANONISATION, in the Roman Church, is the solemn declaration by the Pope, that a servant of God, renowned for his virtue and for miracles he has wrought, is to be publicly venerated by the whole Church, termed Saint, and honoured by a special festival. A preparatory stage is beatification, and the beatification and canonisation of a saint are promoted by a long, tedious, and costly process, much resembling a suit at law.

CANOPUS, (1) the blue vault of heaven with its stars; (2) the star alpha Argus; (3) an ancient town of Egypt, 15 m. N.E. of Alexandria, famed for its temple of Serapis.

CANOËA, a town in Apulia, abounding in Roman remains, on the site of ancient Canusium.

CANOËSA, a town NW. of Bologna, in the courtyard of the castle of which the Emperor Henry IV. stood three days in the cold, in January, 1077, bare-headed and barefooted, waiting for Pope Gregory VII. to remove from him the sentence of excommunication.

CANOVA, ANTONIO, a great Italian sculptor, born near Venice; gave early proof of his genius; his first important work, which established his fame, was the group of "Theseus and the Minotaur," which was succeeded by his "Cupid and Psyche," distinguished by a tenderness and grace quite peculiar to him, and by "Perseus with the Head of Medusa," perhaps the triumph of his art; his works were numerous, and brought him a large fortune, of which he made a generous use (1767-1822).

CANROBERT, FRANÇOIS, marshal of France; served for some 20 years in Algeria; was a supporter of Napoleon III., and a fool; commanded in the Crimea, first under, and then in succession to, St. Arnaud; fought in Italy against Austria; was shut up in Metz with Bazaine, and made prisoner; became a member of the senate under the Republic (1806-1895).

CANDREANT, W., a Scottish Presbyterian minister, who had an equal seal for the Scottish covenant and the cause of Charles Stuart (1690-1664). A son of his was Principal of Edinburgh University from 1675 to 1685.

CANTABRI, the original inhabitants of the N. of Spain; presumed to be the ancestors of the Basques.

CANTACUZE'NUS, JOHN, emperor of the East; an able statesman, who, acting as regent for the heir, had himself crowned king, but was driven to resign at length; retired to a monastery on Mount Athos where he wrote a history of his time; died in 1411, 100 years old.

CANTARINI, SIMONE, an Italian painter, born at Pesaro; a pupil of Guido and a rival, but only an imitator from afar (1612-1648).

CANTERBURY, in E. Kent, on the Stour, by rail 62 m. N.E. of London; is the ecclesiastical capital of England; the cathedral was founded A.D. 597 by St. Augustine; the present building belongs to various epochs, dating as far back as the 11th century; it contains many interesting monuments, statues, and tombs, among the latter that of Thomas à Becket, murdered in the north transept, 1170; the cloisters, chapter-house, and other buildings occupy the site of the old monastic houses; the city is rich in old churches and ecclesiastical monuments; there is an art gallery; trade is chiefly in hops and grain. Kit Marlowe was a native.

CANTERBURY, a district in New Zealand, in the centre of the South Island, on the east side of which are the Canterbury Plains or Downs, a great pasture-land for sheep of over three million acres.

CANTERBURY TALES, a body of 25 tales by Chaucer, conceived of as related by a small company of pilgrims from London to the shrine of Thomas à Becket at Canterbury. They started from the Tabard Inn at Southwark, and agreed to tell each a tale going and each another coming back, the author of the best tale to be treated with a supper. The tales intended to be related on the homeward journey are not given.

CANTICLES, a book in the Bible erroneously ascribed to Solomon, and called in Hebrew the Song of Songs, about the canonicity and interpretation of which there has been much debate, though, as regards the latter, recent criticism inclines, if there is any unity in it at all, to the conclusion that it represents a young maiden seduced into the harem of Solomon, who cannot be persuaded to transfer to the king the affection she has for a shepherd in the northern hills of Galilee, her sole beloved; the aim of the author presumed by some to present a contrast between the morals of the south and those of the north, in justification possibly of the secession. It was for long, and is by some still, believed to be an allegory in which the Bridegroom represents Christ and the Bride His Church.

CANTON, chief commercial city and port of Southern China; stands on a river almost on the seaboard, 90 m. N.W. of Hong-Kong, and is a healthy town, but with a heavy rainfall; it is surrounded by walls, has narrow, crooked streets, 125 temples, mostly Buddhist, and two pagodas, 10 and 13 centuries old respectively; great part of the population live in boats on the river; the fancy goods, silk, porcelain, ivory, and metal work are famous; its river communication with the interior has fostered an extensive commerce; exports tea, silk, sugar, opium, &c.

CANTON, JOHN, an ingenious experimentalist in physics, and particularly in electricity; born at Stroud; discovered the means of making artificial magnets and the compressibility of water (1718-1772).

CANTONESE, the Nationalist forces of Southern China, who declared a separate republic in 1920. In 1925 they began to march northwards, and in 1927 captured Shanghai, Nanking, and Hankow, after which success the Nanking troops broke away from the Hankow government.

CANTO, CESARE, an Italian historian, born in Lombardy; imprisoned by the Austrian government for his bold advocacy of liberal views, but at length liberated; wrote, among a number of other works, literary as well as historical, a "Universal History" in 35 vols. (1807-1896).

CANUTE, or CNUT, THE DANE, called the Great, son of Sweyn, king of Denmark; invaded England, and after a success or two was elected king by his fleet; the claim was repudiated by the Saxons, and he had to flee; returned in 1015, and next year, though London held out for a time, carried all before him; on the death of his sole rival became undisputed king of England, and ruled it as an Englishman born, wisely, equitably, and well, though the care of governing Denmark and Norway lay on his shoulders as well; died in England, and was buried in Winchester Minster; every one is familiar with the story of the rebuke he administered to the courtiers by showing how regardless the waves of the sea were of the authority of a king (994-1035).

CAPABLANCA, JOSÉ RAOUL, noted chess player. Of Cuban birth, he started to play at the age of four, and became champion of the world in 1919 (1888-).

CAPE BRETON, the insular portion of the prov. of Nova Scotia at its eastern extremity, 100 m. long and 85 broad; is covered with forests of pine, oak, &c., and exports timber and fish.

CAPE COAST CASTLE, former capital of the Gold Coast colony.

CAPE HORN, the most southerly point of South America, a black, steep, frowning rock at the S.E. extremity of the Fucian Islands; much dreaded at one time by sailors on account of the heavy weather encountered there.

CAPE PROVINCE, comprises the extremity of the African continent south of the Orange River and Natal, and is nearly twice the size of the United Kingdom; the Nieuwveld Berge, running E. and W., divides the country into two slopes, the northern slope long and gradual to the Orange River, the southern shorter and terraced to the sea; two-thirds of the country is arid plain, which, however, only requires irrigation to render it very fertile; the climate is dry and healthy, but hot in summer; the prevalent vegetation is healthy and bulbous plants, Broom and ostrich farming and the chief industries; wool, goats' hair, ostrich feathers, hides, diamonds from Kimberley, and copper from Namaqualand are the chief exports; two-thirds of the people are of African race, chiefly Kaffirs, who flourish under British rule; the remainder are of Dutch, English, French, and German origin; Cape Town is the capital, Kimberley and Port Elizabeth the only other large towns, but there are many small towns; roads are good, with railway and telegraph communication. The government is in the hands of an administrator appointed by the Governor-General of the Union of South Africa, aided by a Council of fifty-one members and an executive committee of five; local government is in vogue all over the country; education is well cared for; the university of the Cape of Good Hope was founded in 1873. Discovered by the Portuguese Dias in 1486, the Cape was taken possession of by the Dutch in 1652, from whom it was captured by Great Britain in 1805. Various steps towards self-government culminated in 1909 with Home Rule.

CAPE TOWN, capital of Cape Province, situated at the head of Table Bay, on the S.W. coast, with Table Mountain rising behind it; is a regularly built, flat-roofed, imposing town, with handsome buildings and extensive Government gardens; well drained, paved, and lit, and with a good water supply. The Government buildings and law courts, museum and art gallery, bank and exchange, are its chief architectural features. It has docks, and a graving dock, and is a port of call for vessels of all nations, with a thriving commerce.

CAPE VERDE ISLANDS, a group of mountainous volcanic islands belonging to Portugal, 350 m. from Cape Verde, on the W. of Africa, of which 10 are inhabited, the largest and most productive Santiago and St. Vincent, with an excellent harbour, oftenest visited. These islands are unhealthy, and cattle-breeding is the chief industry.

CAPEK, KAREL, Czechoslovakian author. Son of a Bohemian doctor, he was educated in Prague, Berlin, and Paris, and became a journalist. In 1919 he was producer at Prague Municipal Theatre and wrote "R.U.R." and "The Insect Play," both of which came to London (1890-1900).

CAPELL, EDWARD, an inspector of plays, born at Hury St. Edmunds; spent 20 years in editing the text of Shakespeare, in three vols., with notes and various readings (1713-1781).

CAPELLA, a bright red star of first magnitude in constellation Auriga, at a distance of 41 light years.

CAPERCAILLIE, the wood-grouse, a large game-bird found in fir woods in mountainous districts, as in Sweden and Scotland, and highly esteemed for table.

CAPERNAUM, a town on the N. side of the Sea of Galilee, the centre of Christ's labours, the exact site of which is uncertain.

CAPET, the surname of Hugh, the founder, in 987, of the third dynasty of French kings, which continued to rule France till 1328, though the name is applied both to the Valois dynasty, which ruled till 1689, and the Bourbon, which ruled till 1848. Louis XVI. having been officially designated as a Capet at his trial, and under that name sentenced to the guillotine.

CAPGRAVE, JOHN, Augustine friar, wrote "Chronicle of England," and voluminously both in Latin and English (1393-1464).

CAPILLARITY, name given to the phenomenon that liquids rise in very narrow tubes against the force of gravity, owing to surface tension. In this way moisture rises up the narrow channels in plants.

CAPISTRANO, GIOVANNI DA, an Italian Franciscan, a rabid adversary of the Hussites, aided John Hunyadi in 1456 in defending Belgrade against the Turks (1385-1456).

CAPITAL LEVY, a tax on all owners of a certain sum of capital. Bonar Law suggested it as a means of paying for the Great War, and it was advocated by the Labour Party at the General Elections of 1922, 1923, and 1924, after which it was dropped.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT, the enforcement of the death sentence, now limited in Great Britain to the crimes of murder and some forms of treason. Hanging is the method of execution used in this country, and electrocution in America. Some of the Swiss cantons have abolished the penalty, and its removal here is a frequent theme for agitation.

CAPITOL, a temple and citadel erected by Tarquin on the Capitoline hill, one of the seven hills of Rome, where victors who were voted a triumph were crowned; terminated at its southern extremity by the Tarpeian Rock, from which criminals guilty of treason were precipitated; hence the saying, "The Tarpeian Rock is near the Capitol" to denote the close connection between glory and disgrace.

CAPITULARIES, collections of royal edicts issued by the Frankish kings of the Carolingian dynasty, with sanction of the nobles, for the whole Frankish empire, as distinct from the laws for the separate peoples comprising it, the most famous being those issued or begun by Charlemagne and St. Louis.

CAPO D'ISTRIA, a port of a small island in the government of Trieste, connected with the mainland by a causeway half a mile in length.

CAPO D'ISTRIA, COUNT OF, born in Corfu; entered the Russian diplomatic service; played a prominent part in the insurrection of the Greeks against Turkey; made President of the Greek Republic; assassinated at Nauplia from distrust of his fidelity (1776-1831).

CAPPADOCIA, an ancient country in the heart of Asia Minor, of varied political fortunes; a plateau with pastures for immense flocks.

CAPRARA, CARDINAL, born at Bologna, legate of Pius VII. in France, concluded the "Concordat" of 1801 (1733-1810).

CAPRE'RA, a small, barren island off the N. coast of Sardinia, the home of Garibaldi, where he died, and his burial place.

CAPRI, a small island at the entrance from the S. of the bay of Naples, with a capital of the same name on the eastern side; a favourite retreat of the Emperors Augustus and Tiberius, and noted for its fine air and picturesque scenery.

CAPRICORNUS, or the Sea-Goat, the sign of the zodiac which the sun enters on December 21, when it is overhead at noon at all places on the Tropic of Capricorn.

CAPRI, COUNT VON, born in Berlin, entered the army in 1849; held chief posts in the Austrian and Franco-German wars; in 1890 succeeded Bismarck as Imperial Chancellor; resigned in 1894 (1831-1890).

CAPUA, a fortified city in Campania, on the Volturno, 27 mi. N. of Naples, where, or rather near which, in a place of the same name, Hannibal, at the invitation of the citizens, retired with his army to spend the winter after the battle of Cannae, 216 B.C., and where, from the luxurious life they led, his soldiers were enervated, after which it was taken by the Romans, destroyed by the Saracens in 840, and the modern city built in its stead.

CAPUCHINS, monks of the Franciscan Order, founded in 1525, so called from a cowl they wear; they were a mendicant order, and were twice over suppressed by the Pope, though they exist still, chiefly in Austria and Switzerland.

CAPULET, a celebrated (Hibelline) family of Verona at mortal feud with that of the Montagues, familiar to us through Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet," Romeo being of the latter and Juliet of the former.

CAPYBARA, the water-hog, the largest rodent extant, in appearance like a small pig; found in South America.

CARACAL, a species of the lynx family found in Africa and Southern Asia; of a somewhat fierce disposition.

CARACALLA (Marcus Aurelius Antoninus), a Roman emperor, son of Septimius Severus, born at Lyons; his reign (211-217) was a series of crimes, follies, and extravagances; he put to death 20,000 persons, among others the jurist Papinianus, and was assassinated himself by one of his guards (188-217).

CARACAS, or CARACOGAS, the cap. of Venezuela, stands at an altitude 3000 ft. above the level of the sea; subject to earthquakes, in one of which (1812) 12,000 perished, and a great part of the city was destroyed; it contains the tomb of Bolívar.

CARACCI, or CARRACCI, a family of painters, born at Bologna; Ludovico, the founder of a new school of painting, the principle of which was eclecticism, in consequence of which it is known as the Eclectic School, or imitation of the styles of the best masters (1555-1619); Annibale, cousin and pupil, did "St. Roche distributing Alms," and his chief work, "Three Marys weeping over Christ"; went to Rome and painted the celebrated Farnese gallery, a task which occupied him four years (1660-1609); Agostino, brother of above, assisted him in the frescoes of the gallery, the "Communion of St. Jerome," his greatest work (1557-1602).

CARACACUS, a British chief, king of the Silures, maintained a gallant struggle against the Romans for nine years, but was overthrown by Ostorius, A.D. 60, taken captive, and led in triumphal procession through Rome, when the Emperor Claudius was so struck with his dignified demeanour that he set him and all his companions at liberty.

CARADOC, a knight of the Round Table, famous for his valour and the chastity and constancy of his wife.

CARAFFA, a distinguished Neapolitan family, which gave birth to a number of eminent ecclesiastics, Paul IV. one of them.

CARAGLIO, an eminent Italian engraver, born at Verona, engraved on gems and medals as well as copperplate, after the works of the great masters (1600-1670).

CARAMEL, the brown substance obtained when sugar is burnt; it is used for colouring beer and certain foodstuffs.

CARAVAGGIO, MICHELANGELO, an Italian painter, disdained the ideal and the ideal style of art, and kept generally to crass reality, often in its grossest forms; a man of a violent temper, which hastened his end; a painting by him of "Christ and the Disciples at Emmaus" is in the National Gallery, London (1569-1609).

CARAVANSERAI, a large unfurnished inn, with a court in the middle for the accommodation of caravans and other travellers at night in the East.

CARBOHYDRATES, a class of substances such as the sugars, starch, and cellulose, consisting of carbon, hydrogen, and oxygen, the latter in the proportion in which they exist in water.

CARBOLIC ACID. See PHENOL.

CARBON, one of the commonest elements. It is found in the allotropic forms of charcoal, lamp black, graphite, and diamond, and in combination with oxygen and hydrogen, in most of the substances of which living organisms are composed.

CARBONARI, (lit. charcoal burners) a secret society that, in the beginning of the 19th century, originated in Italy and extended itself into France, numbering hundreds of thousands, including Lord Byron, Silvio Pellico, and Mazzini among them, the object of which was the overthrow of despotic governments; they were broken up by Austria, and absorbed by the Young Italy party.

CARBONIFEROUS, the geological strata above the Devonian (q.v.) and below the Permian (q.v.). The rocks include limestones and grits, as well as most of the coal measures of the period. The Carboniferous Age had a hot, wet climate that gave rise to luxuriant forests, the remains of which form the coal beds. In rocks of this age remains of the earliest amphibians are found.

CARBONYL CHLORIDE, or Phosgene, the acid chloride derived from carbonic acid; used in the Great War as a poison gas.

CARBORUNDUM, a silicide of carbon, produced by heating carbon and sand in the electric furnace. It is a very hard substance and is used as an abrasive.

CARBURETTOR, the part of an internal combustion engine where the petrol vapour is mixed with sufficient air to ensure complete combustion on ignition.

CARDAN, JEROME, Italian physician and mathematician, born at Pavia; was far-famed as a physician; studied and wrote on all manner of known subjects, made discoveries in algebra, believed in astrology, left a candid account of himself entitled "De Vita Propria"; was the author of "Cardan's Formula," a formula for the solution of cubic equations; he is said to have starved himself to death so as to fulfil a prophecy he had made as to the term of his life (1501-1576).

CARDIFF, county town of Glamorgan-shire, S. Wales, on the river Taff, the sea outlet for the mineral wealth and products of the district, a town that has risen more rapidly than any other in the kingdom, having had at the beginning of the 19th century only 2000 inhabitants; it has a university, a number of churches, few of them belonging to the Church of England, and has also two daily papers.

CARDIGAN, EARL OF, a British officer; commanded the Light Cavalry Brigade in the Crimean war, and distinguished himself in the famous charge of the Six Hundred, which he led; his favourite regiment, the 11th Hussars, on the equipment of which he lavished large sums of money (1797-1868).

CARDIGANSHIRE, a county in S. Wales, low-lying on the coast, and mountainous in the interior, but with fertile valleys where sheep and cattle are reared; the county is remarkable for its many early British remains and other antiquities.

CARDINALISTS, name given to the partisans in France of Richelieu and Mazarin.

CARDUCCI, Florentine artists, brothers, of the 17th century; did their chief work in Spain.

CARDUCCI, GIOSUE, an Italian poet and critic; author of "Hymn to Satan," "Odi Barbare," "Commentaries on Petrarch" (1835-1907).

CAREW, THOMAS, English courtier poet; his poems, chiefly masques and lyrics (1589-1639).

CAREY, HENRY, English poet and musician, excelled in ballads; composed, "Sally in Our Alley"; d. 1748.

CAREY, SIR ROBERT, warden of the Border Marches under Elizabeth; present at her death-bed; rode off post-haste on the occurrence of her decease with the news to Edinburgh to announce it to King James (1560-1639).

CAREY, WILLIAM, celebrated Baptist missionary, born in Northamptonshire; founder of the Baptist Missionary Society, and its first missionary; founded the mission at Serampore and directed its operations, distributing Bibles and tracts by thousands in native languages, as well as preparing grammars and dictionaries; was 29 years Oriental professor in the College of Fort William, Calcutta (1781-1834).

CARGILL, DONALD, a Scottish Covenantar, born in Perthshire; was minister of the Barony Parish, Glasgow; fought at Bothwell Brig; suffered at the Cross of Edinburgh for daring to excommunicate the king; died with the faith and courage of a martyr (1619-1681).

CARIA, a SW. country in Asia Minor, bordering on the Archipelago, of which the Mæander is the chief river.

CARIBBEAN SEA, an inland sea of the Atlantic, lying between the Greater Antilles and South America, subject to hurricanes; it corresponds to the Mediterranean in Europe, and is the turning-point of the Gulf Stream.

CARIBS, a race of American Indians, once inhabiting the West India, now confined to the southern shores of the Caribbean Sea, as far as the mouth of the Amazon; ethnologically they originated in Central Brazil; they are a fine race, tall, and of ruddy-brown complexion, but have lost their distinctive physique by an amalgamation with other tribes; they give name to the Caribbean Sea.

CARISBROOKE, a village in the Isle of Wight, in the castle of which, now in ruins, Charles I. was imprisoned 13 months before his trial; it was at one time a Roman station.

CARLEN, EMILIA, Swedish novelist; her novels, some 30 in number, treat of the everyday life of the lower and middle classes (1807-1882).

CARLETON, WILL, American poet whose verse, treating solely of home and pioneer life, has become widely popular; wrote "Farm Ballads" (1845-1912).

CARLETON, WILLIAM, Irish novelist; his first work, and the foundation of his reputation, "Traits and Stories of the Irish Peasantry," followed by others of a like class (1794-1869).

CARLI, GIOVANNI, COUNT, Italian archaeologist, numismatist, and economist, born at Capo d'Istria; wrote as his chief work on political economy; president of the Council of Commerce at Milan; was instrumental in bringing about the abolition of the Inquisition (1720-1795).

CARLILE, RICHARD, English Radical and Free-thinker, born in Devonshire; a disciple of Tom Paine, and propagandist of his views with a zeal which no prosecution could subdue, although he time after time suffered imprisonment for it, as well as those who associated themselves with him, his wife included; his principal organ was The Republican, the first twelve volumes of which are dated from his prison; he was a martyr for the freedom of the press, and in that interest did not suffer in vain (1790-1843).

CARLILE, FREDERENDARY WILSON, founder, in 1882, of the Church Army (1847-).

CARLISLE, county town of Cumberland, on the Eden; a great railway centre; with an old castle of historical interest, and a cathedral founded by William Rufus and dedicated to Henry I.

CARLISLE, GEORGE FREDERICK, WILLIAM HOWARD, EARL OF, a Whig in politics; supported the successive Whig administrations of his time, and became eventually Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland under Palmerston (1802-1864).

CARLISTS, a name given in France to the partisans of Charles X. (1830), and especially in Spain to those of Don Carlos (1833), and those of his grandson (1873-1874).

CARLOMAN, son of Charles Martel, and brother of Pepin le Bref, king of Austrasia from 741 to 747; abdicated, and retired into a monastery, where he died.

CARLOMAN, son of Pepin le Bref, and brother of Charlemagne, king of Austrasia, Burgundy, and Provence in 768; d. 771.

CARLOMAN, king of France conjointly with his brother Louis III.; d. 884.

CARLOS, DON, son of Philip II. of Spain, born at Valladolid, and heir to the throne; but from incapacity, or worse, excluded by his father from all share in the government; confessed to a priest a design to assassinate someone, believed to be his father; was seized, tried, and convicted, though sentence against him was never pronounced; died shortly after; the story of Don Carlos has formed the subject of tragedies, especially one by Schiller, the German poet (1545-1568).

CARLOS, DON, the brother of Ferdinand VII. of Spain, on whose death he laid claim to the crown as heir, against Isabella, Ferdinand's daughter, who by the Salic law, though set aside in her favour by her father, had, he urged, no right to the throne; his cause was taken up by a large party, and the struggle kept up for years; defeated at length, he retired from the contest, and abdicated in favour of his son (1785-1856).

CARLOS, DON, grandson of the preceding, and heir to his rights; revived the struggle in 1870, but fared no better than his grandfather; took refuge in London (1848-1902).

CARLOVINGIANS, or KARLINGS, the name of the second dynasty of Frankish kings, in succession to the Merovingians, which had become feinleut; bore sway from 762 to 987. Pepin le Bref the first, and Louis V. the last; Charlemagne was the greatest of the race, and gave name to the dynasty.

CARLOW, an inland county in Leinster, Ireland; also the county town.

CARLOWITZ, a town on the Danube, 30 m. NW. of Belgrade, where a treaty was concluded in 1699 between Turkey and other European powers, very much to the curtailment of the territories of the former.

CARLSBAD, a celebrated watering-place in Czechoslovakia, of aristocratic resort, the springs being the hottest in Europe, the water varying from 117° to 165°; population nearly trebled in the season; the inhabitants are engaged in industries which minister to the tastes of the visitors.

CARLSBORO, a Swedish town, strongly fortified, on the Baltic, with a spacious harbour, naval station, and arsenal; it is built on five rocky islands united by dykes and bridges.

CARLSTADT, ANDREAS RUDOLF BODENSTEIN AF, a German Reformer, associated for a time with Luther, but parted from him both on practical and dogmatical grounds; succeeded Zwingli as professor at Basel (1483-1541).

CARLTON CLUB, the Conservative club in London, so called, as erected on the site of Carlton House, demolished in 1823, and occupied by George IV. when he was Prince of Wales.

CARLYLE, ALEXANDER, surnamed Jupiter Carlyle, from his noble head and imposing person, born in Dumfriesshire; minister of Inveresk, Musselburgh, from 1747 to his death; friend of David Hume, Adam Smith, and Home, the author of "Douglas"; a leader of the Moderate party in the Church of Scotland; left an "Autobiography," which was not published till 1860, which shows its author to have been a man who took things as he found them, and enjoyed them to the full as any easy-going, cultured pagan (1723-1808).

CARLYLE, THOMAS, born in the village of Ecclefechan, Annandale, Dumfriesshire; son of James Carlyle, a stone-mason and afterwards a small farmer, and of Janet Aitken; educated at the parish school and Annan Academy; entered the University of Edinburgh at the age of 14, in the Arts classes; distinguished himself early in mathematics; enrolled as a student in the theological department; became a teacher first in Annan Academy, then at Kirkcaldy; formed there an intimate friendship with Edward Irving; threw up both schoolmastering and the church; removed to Edinburgh, and took to tutoring and working for an encyclopaedia, and by-and-by to translating from the German and writing criticisms for the Reviews, the latter of which were collected afterwards in the "Miscellaneous;" wrote a "Life of Schiller"; married (1826) Jane Welsh, a descendant of John Knox; removed to Craigenputtock, in Dumfriesshire, "the loneliest nook in Britain," where his original work began with "Sartor Resartus," written in 1831, a radically spiritual book, and a symbolical; removed to London in 1834, where he wrote his "French Revolution" (1837), a book instinct, with the all-consuming fire of the event which it pictures, and revealing "a new moral force" in the literary life of the country and century; delivered three courses of lectures to the Academy of London Society (1837-1840), the last of them "Heroes and Hero-Worship," afterwards printed in 1840; in 1840 appeared "Chartism," in 1843 "Past and Present," and in 1850 "Letter-Day Pamphlets"; all on what he called the "Condition-of-England-Question," which to the last he regarded as the most serious question of the time, seeing, as he all along taught and felt, that the social life affects the individual life to the core; in 1845 he published "Letters and Speeches of Oliver Cromwell," and after writing in 1851 a brief biography of his mis-represented friend, John Sterling, concluded (1858-1865) his life's task, prosecuted from first to last, in "sore travail" of body and soul, with "The History of Friedrich II. of Prussia, called Frederick the Great"; lies buried beside his own kindred in the place where he was born, as he had left instructions to be (1795-1881).

CARMAGNOLE, a Red-republican song and dance popular in Paris in 1792.

CARMARTHENSHIRE, a county in S. Wales, and the largest in the Principality; contains part of the coalfields in the district; capital Carmarthen, on the right bank of the Towy, a river which traverses the county.

CARMEI, a NW. extension of the limestone ridge that bounds on the S. the Plain of Kedron, in Palestine, and terminates in a rocky promontory 500 ft. high; forms the southern boundary of the Bay of Acre; its highest point is 3,742 ft. above the sea-level.

CARMELITE, a monastic order, originally an association of hermits on Mount Carmel, afterwards mendicant, called the Order of Our Lady of Mount Carmel, i.e. the Virgin, in consecration to whom it was founded by a pilgrim of the name Berthold, a Calabrian, in 1156; known formerly as the "White Friars." The Order is said to have existed from the days of Elijah.

CARMEN SYLVA, the nom-de-plume of Elizabeth, queen of Rumania; having lost an only child, she took to literature for consolation; evinced an active interest in the elevation and welfare of her sex (1843-1916).

CARMINATIVES, name given to those drugs used on account of their stimulating effect on the stomach.

CARMONTEL, a French dramatist; author of little pieces under the name of "Proverbes" (1717-1806).

CARNAO, a seaside fishing-village in the Bay of Quiberon, in the dep. of Morbihan, France, with interesting historical remains of menhirs and mounds particularly Celtic.

CARNARVON, a maritime county in N. Wales, with the highest mountains and grandest scenery in the Principality, and a capital of the same name on the Mount Serrat, with the noble ruins of a castle, in which Edward II., the first Prince of Wales, was born. It was Lloyd George's parliamentary constituency.

CARNARVON, HENRY HOWARD, 4TH EARL OF, Conservative statesman; held office under Lord Derby and Disraeli; was a good classical scholar; wrote the "Druses of Mount Lebanon" (1881-1890).

CARNARVON, GEORGE EDWARD STANHOPE, 5TH EARL OF, Egyptologist. Most of his life and much of his money were spent in excavations, his most notable discovery being the tomb of Tutankhamen (q.v.) at Luxor in 1923, just before his death (1866-1923).

CARNATIO, an old prov. in the Madras Presidency of India that extended along the Coromandel coast from Cape Comorin, 600 m. N.

CARNEADES, a Greek philosopher, born at Cyrene; his whole philosophy a polemic against the dogmatism of the Stoics, on the alleged ground of the absence of any criterion of certainty in matters of either science or morality; conceded that truth and virtue were admirable qualities, but he denied the reality of them; sent once on an embassy to Rome, he propounded this doctrine in the ears of the Conscript Fathers, upon which Cato moved that he should be expelled from the senate-house and sent back to Athens, whence he came (213-129 B.C.).

CARNEGIE, ANDREW, ironmaster, born in Dumfriesshire, the son of a weaver; made a large fortune by his iron and steel works at Pittsburgh, U.S., out of which he liberally endowed institutions and libraries, both in America and his native country (1835-1919).

CARNIOLA, a district in Jugo-Slavia, SW. of Austria, on the Adriatic, S. of Carinthia; contains quick-silver mines, second only to those of Almaden, in Spain; the surface is mountainous, and the soil is not grain productive, though in some parts it yields wine and fine fruit.

CARNIVAL, in Roman Catholic countries the name given to a season of feasting and revelry immediately preceding Lent, akin to the Saturnalia of the Romans.

CARNOT, LEONARD SADI, son of Nicolas, founder of thermo-dynamics; in his "Réflexions sur la Puissance du Feu" enunciates the principle of Reversibility, considered the most important contribution to physical science since the time of Newton (1796-1832).

CARNOT, MARIE FRANÇOIS, civil engineer and statesman, born at Limoges, nephew of the preceding; Finance Minister in 1879 and 1887; became President in 1887; was assassinated at Lyons by an anarchist (1837-1894).

CARNOT, NICOLAS, French mathematician and engineer, born at Noy, in Burgundy; a member of the National Convention; voted for the death of the king; became member of the Committee of Public Safety, and organizer of the armies of the Republic, whence his name, the "organizer of victory"; Minister of War under Napoleon; defender of Antwerp in 1814; and afterwards Minister of the Interior (1793-1823).

CARO, ANNIBALE, an Italian author and poet, notable for his classic style (1507-1566).

CARO, MARIE, a French philosopher, born at Poitiers; a popular lecturer on philosophy, surnamed le philosophe des dames; wrote on mysticism, materialism, and pessimism (1820-1887).

CAROL II., KING OF RUMANIA, Son of King Ferdinand; as heir to the throne, he married in 1921 Princess Helen of Greece, by whom he had one son, Michael. In 1925 he renounced his claim to the throne, and on the death of Ferdinand Michael became king. Subsequently Carol after abortive attempts to claim the throne, was successful in 1930, when King Michael abdicated and became Crown Prince (1892-).

CAROLINA, NORTH, one of the original 13 States of N. America, on the Atlantic, about the size of England, S. of Virginia, 480 m. from E. to W. and 180 m. from N. to S.; has a fertile, well-watered subsoil in the high lands; is rich in minerals and natural products; the mountains are covered with forests, and the manufactures are numerous.

CAROLINA, SOUTH, S. of N. Carolina, is alluvial with swamps, 100 m. inland from the coast, and is well watered; produces rice and cotton in large quantities and of a fine quality.

CAROLINE ISLANDS, a stretch of lagoon islands, 2000 m. from E. to W., belonging to Spain, N. of New Guinea and E. of the Philippine Islands; once divided into eastern, western, and central; the soil of the western is fertile, and there is abundance of fish and turtle in the lagoons; products, copra, bêche de mer, turtle, and pearl shell.

CAROLINE OF BRUNSWICK, queen of George IV. and daughter of the Duke of Brunswick; married George, then Prince of Wales, in 1795; gave birth to the Princess Charlotte the year following, but almost immediately after her husband abandoned her; she retired to a mansion at Blackheath; was allowed to go abroad after a time; on the accession of her husband she was offered a pension of £50,000 if she stayed out of the country, but rejected it and claimed her rights as queen; was charged with adultery, but after a long trial, acquitted; on the day of the coronation sought admission to Westminster Abbey, but the door was shut against her; she died a fortnight after (1768-1821).

CARPACCIO, VITTORIO, a Venetian painter of great celebrity, particularly in his early pieces, for his truth of delineation, his fertile imagination, and his rich colouring; his works are numerous, and have nearly all of them sacred subjects; an Italian critic says of him, "He had truth in his heart" (1450-1522).

CARPATHIANS, a range of wooded mountains in Central Europe, 880 m. long, which, in two great masses, extend from Presburg to Orsova, both on the Danube, in a semicircle round the greater part of Hungary, particularly the whole of the N. and E., the highest of them Negoi, 8517 ft.; they are rich in minerals, and their sides are clothed with forests, principally of beech and pine.

CARPEAUX, JEAN BAPTISTE, sculptor, born at Valenciennes; adorned by his art, reckoned highly imaginative, several of the public monuments of Paris, and the façade of the Opera House (1827-1875).

CARPENTARIA, GULF OF, a broad, deep gulf in the N. of Australia; contains several islands, and receives several rivers.

CARPENTIER, MARY, a philanthropist, born at Exeter, daughter of Dr. Lant Carpenter, Unitarian minister; took an active part in the establishment of reformatory and ragged schools, and a chief promoter of the Industrial Schools Act; her philanthropic efforts extended to India, which, in her zeal, she visited four times, and she was the founder of the National Indian Association (1807-1877).

CARPENTIER, WILLIAM BENJAMIN, biologist, brother of the preceding; author, among other numerous works, of the "Principles of General and Comparative Physiology" (1838); contributed to mental physiology; held several high professional appointments in London; inaugurated deep-sea soundings, and advocated the theory of a vertical circulation in the ocean (1813-1885).

CARPI, GIROLAMO DA, Italian painter and architect, born at Ferrara; successful imitator of Correggio (1501-1556).

CARPI, UGO DA, Italian painter and wood engraver; is said to have invented engraving in chiaroscuro (1486-1530).

CARPINI, GIOVANNI, a Franciscan monk, born in Umbria; headed an embassy from Pope Innocent IV. to the Emperor of the Mogul Tartars to persuade him out of Europe, which he threatened; travelled from Lyons to beyond Lake Baikal and back; wrote a report of his journey in Latin, which had a quieting effect on the panic in Europe (1182-1252).

CARPIO, BERNARDO DEL, a legendary hero of the Moors of Spain; is said to have slain Roland at Roncesvalles.

CARPOCRATES, a Gnostic of Alexandria of the 2nd century, who believed in the transmigration of the soul and its final emancipation from all external bonds and obligations, by means of concentrated meditation on the divine unity, and a life in conformity therewith; was the founder of a sect called after his name.

CARRARA, a town in N. Italy, 30 m. NW. of Leghorn; famous for its quarries of white statuary marble, the working of which is its staple industry; these quarries have been worked for 2000 years, are 500 in number, and employ as quarrymen alone regularly over 6000 men.

CARREL, ARMAND, French publicist, born at Rouen; a man of high character, and highly esteemed; editor of the National, which he conducted with great ability and courage; died of a wound in a duel with Emile de Girardin (1800-1836).

CARRICK, the southern division of Ayrshire, See AYRSHIRE.

CARRICKFERGUS, a town and seaport N. of Belfast Lough, 9½ m. from Belfast, with a picturesque castle.

CARRIER, JEAN BAPTISTE, one of the most blood-thirsty of the French Revolutionists, born near Aurillac; an attorney by profession; sent on a mission to La Vendée; caused thousands of victims to be drowned, beheaded, or shot; was guillotined himself after trial by a Revolutionary tribunal (1758-1794). See NOYADES.

CARRIÈRE, MORITZ, a German philosopher and man of letters, born in Hesse, author of works on aesthetics and art in its relation to culture and the ideal; advocated the compatibility of the pantheistic with the deistic view of the world (1817-1895).

CARROLL, LEWIS, pseudonym of C. L. Dodgson (q.v.), the author of "Alice in Wonderland," with its sequel, "Through the Looking-Glass."

CARRON OIL, a mixture of lneed oil and lime water used in the treatment of burns.

CARSE, the name given in Scotland to alluvial lands bordering on a river.

CARSON, KIT, American trapper and scout, born in Kentucky; was of service to the States in expeditions in Indian territories from his knowledge of the habits of the Indians (1809-1868).

CARSON, LORD (SIR EDWARD), British politician. Born at Portlargo and educated at Trinity College, Dublin, he made a name at the Irish bar, came to England to practise, entered the House of Commons for Dublin University, and acted as a Unionist champion. In 1900 he was made solicitor-general and knighted. The Irish crisis of 1913 and 1914 found Carson at the head of the Ulster volunteers raised to resist Home Rule, but the Great War settled the matter, and he took office again as Attorney-General in the 1915 coalition. He held various posts in the War Cabinet, and resigned in January, 1918. In 1921 he was raised to the peerage (1854-1921).

CARSTARES, WILLIAM, a Scottish ecclesiastic, born at Cathcart, near Glasgow; sent to Utrecht to study theology; recommended himself to the regard of the Prince of Orange, and became his political adviser; accompanied him to England as chaplain in 1688, and had no small share in bringing about the Revolution; controlled Church affairs in Scotland; was made Principal of Edinburgh University; was chief promoter of the Treaty of Union; was held in high esteem by his countrymen for his personal character as well as his public services (1640-1716).

CARSTENS, ASMUS JAKOB, Danish artist, born in Slesvig; on the appearance of his great picture, "The Fall of the Angels," rose at once into fame; was admitted to the Berlin Academy; afterwards studied the masters at Rome; brought back to Germany a taste for art; was the means of reviving it; treated classical subjects; quarrelled with the Academy; died in poverty at Rome (1754-1798).

CARTAGENA, a naval port of Spain, on the Mediterranean, with a capacious harbour; one of the oldest towns in it, founded by the Carthaginians; was once the largest naval arsenal in Europe. Also capital of the Bolívar State in Colombia.

CARTE, THOMAS, historian, a devoted Jacobite, born near Rugby; wrote a "History of England," which has proved a rich quarry of facts for subsequent historians (1686-1754).

CARTE-BLANCHE, a blank paper with a signature to be filled up with such terms of an agreement as the holder is authorised to accept in name of the person whose signature it bears.

CARTER, ELIZABETH, an accomplished lady, born at Deal, friend of Dr. Johnson, Sir Joshua Reynolds, and others; a great Greek and Italian scholar; translated Epictetus and Algarotti's exposition of Newton's philosophy; some of her papers appear in the Rambler (1717-1806).

CARTERET, JOHN, EARL GRANVILLE, eminent British statesman, orator, and diplomatist, entered Parliament in the Whig interest; his first speech was in favour of the Protestant succession; after service as diplomatist abroad, was made Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, in which capacity he was brought into contact with Swift, first as an enemy but at length as a friend, and proved a successful viceroy; in Parliament was head of the party opposed to Sir Robert Walpole, and of the subsequent administration; his foreign policy has been in general approved of; had the satisfaction of seeing the elder Pitt installed in office before he retired; was a "fiery, emphatic man" (1690-1763).

CARTERET, PHILIP, English sailor and explorer, voyaged in the Southern Seas, and discovered several islands, Pitcairn's Island among the number; d. 1796.

CARTHAGE, an ancient maritime city, on a peninsula in the N. of Africa, near the site of Tunis, and founded by Phœnicians in 850 B.C.; originally the centre of a colony, it became the capital of a widespread trading community, which even ventured to compete with, and at one time threatened, under Hannibal, to overthrow the power of Rome, in a series of protracted struggles known as the Punic Wars; in the last of these it was taken and destroyed by Publius Cornelius Scipio in 146 B.C., after a siege of two years, though it rose again as a Roman city under the Cæsars, and became a place of great importance till burned in A.D. 698 by Hassan, the Arab; the struggle during the early part of its history was virtually a struggle for the ascendancy of the Semitic people over the Aryan race in Europe. CARTHUSIANS, a monastic order of a very severe type, founded by St. Bruno in 1088, each member of which had originally a single cell, eventually one consisting of two or three rooms with a garden, all of them opening into one corridor; they amassed considerable wealth, but were given to deeds of beneficence, and spent their time in study and contemplation, in consequence of which their figure was not so much in the outside world as many other orders do.

CARTIER, JACQUES, a French navigator, born at St. Malo, made three voyages to N. America in quest of a North-West passage, at the instance of Francis I.; took possession of Canada in the name of France, by planting the French flag on its soil (1491-1557).

CARTOONS, drawings or designs made on stiff paper for a fresco or other paintings, transferred by tracing or punching to the surface to be painted, the most famous of which are those of Raphael.

CARTOUCHE, a notorious captain of a band of thieves, born in Paris, who was broken on the wheel alive in the Place du Grève (1698-1721).

CARTWRIGHT, EDMUND, inventor of the power-loom and the carding machine, born in Nottinghamshire; a country parson; his invention, at first violently opposed, to his ruin for the time being, is now universally adopted; a grant of £10,000 was made him by Parliament in consideration of his services and in compensation for his losses; he had a turn for versifying as well as mechanical invention (1743-1823).

CARTWRIGHT, JOHN, brother of the preceding; served in the navy and the militia, but left both services for political reasons; took to the study of agriculture, and the advocacy of radical political reform much in advance of his time (1740-1824).

CARUS, KARL GUSTAV, a celebrated German physiologist, born at Leipzig; a many-sided man; advocate of the theory that health of body and mind depends on the equilibrium of antagonistic principles (1789-1869).

CARUSO, ENRICO, Italian tenor. Born in Florence, he first appeared on the stage there and met with tremendous success. Confining himself largely to opera, he drew large audiences in whatever part of the world he appeared (1874-1921).

CARY, HENRY FRANCIS, translator of Dante, born at Gibraltar; his translation is admired for its fidelity as well as for its force and felicity (1772-1844).

CARYATIDES, draped female figures surmounting columns and supporting entablatures; the corresponding male figures are called Atlantes.

CASA, GIOVANNI DELLA, Italian statesman, Secretary of State under Pope Paul II.; wrote "Indaleco" or, the Art of Living in the World" (1503-1566).

CASABIANCA, LOUIS, a French naval officer, born in Corsica, who, at the battle of Aboukir, after securing the safety of his crew, blew up his ship and perished along with his son, who would not leave him (1756-1798).

CASA'LE, a town on the Po; manufactures silk twist.

CASANOVA, FRANCESCO, painter, born in London, of Venetian origin; painted landscapes and battle-pieces (1730-1805).

CASANOVA DE SEINGALT, a clever Venetian adventurer and scandalous impromptu, of the Caftro type, who insinuated himself into the good graces for a time of all the distinguished people of the period, including even Frederick the Great, Voltaire, and others; died in Bohemia after endless roamings; wrote a long, detailed, brazen-faced account of his career of scoundrelism; was a brother of the preceding (1725-1798).

CASAS, BARTOLOMEO DE LAS, a Spanish prelate, distinguished for his exertions on behalf of the Christianisation and civilisation of the Indians of S. America (1474-1566).

CASAUBON, ISAAC, an eminent classical scholar and commentator, born in Geneva; professor of Greek at Geneva and Montpellier, and afterwards of belles-lettres at Paris, invited thither by Henry IV., who pensioned him; being a Protestant he removed to London on Henry's death, where James I. gave him two prebends; has been ranked with Lepidus and Scaliger as a scholar (1559-1614).

CASAUBON, MERIC, son of preceding; accompanied his father to England; held a church living under Charles I. and II.; became professor of Theology at Oxford, and edited his father's works (1599-1671).

CASCADE MOUNTAINS, a range in Columbia that slopes down toward the Pacific from the Western Plateau, of which the Rocky Mountains form the eastern boundary; they are nearly parallel with the coast, and above 100 m. inland.

CASEIN, a protein present in milk and cheese; it forms the basis of most of the patent foodstuffs obtained from milk and has extensive uses in the cotton industry.

CASEMENT, ROGER, Irish spy. Knighted in 1911 after years in the British consular service; he worked among Irish prisoners in Germany in 1915, and the following year landed in Ireland from a German boat to start a rebellion. For high treason he was deprived of his knighthood and hanged (1894-1916).

CASERTA, a town in Italy, 20 m. from Naples, noted for a magnificent palace, built after plans supplied by Vanvitelli, one of the architects of St. Peter's at Rome.

CASHIEL, a town in Tipperary, Ireland, 49 m. N.E. of Cork; a bishop's see, with a "Rock" 800 ft. high, occupied by interesting ruins; it was formerly the seat of the kings of Munster.

CASHMERE, or KASHMIR, a native Indian State, bordering upon Tibet, 120 m. long and 80 m. wide, with beautiful scenery and a delicious climate, in a valley of the Himalayas, forming the basin of the Upper Indus, hemmed in by deep-gorged woods and snow-peaked mountains, and watered by the Jhelum, which spreads out here and there near it into lovely lakes; shawl weaving and lacquer-work are the chief occupations of the inhabitants.

CASIMIR, the name of five kings of Poland; the most eminent, Casimir III., called the Great; after distinguishing himself in wars against the Teutonic Knights, was elected king in 1333; recovered Silesia from Bohemia in two victories; defeated the Tartars on the Vistula, and annexed part of Lithuania; formed a code of laws, limiting both the royal authority and that of the nobles (1309-1370).

CASIMIR-PÉRIER, JEAN PAUL PIERRE, president of the French Republic, born in Paris; a man of moderate views and firm character; was premier in 1898; succeeded Carnot in 1894; resigned 1895, because, owing to misrepresentation, the office had become irksome to him (1847-1907).

CASINO, a club-house or public building in Continental towns provided with rooms for social gathering, music, dancing, billiards, and gambling.

CASIRI, a Syro-Maronite religious leader, and a learned Orientalist (1710-1791).

CASLON, WILLIAM, typesetter; born in Worcester-shire; was the father of modern types in printing (1692-1766).

CASPARI, KARL PAUL, German theologian, born at Dessau; professor at Christiania (1814-1892).

CASPIAN SEA, an inland sea, partly in Europe and partly in Asia, the largest in the world, being 600 m. from N. to S. and from 130 to 270 m. in breadth, with the Caucasus Mts. on the W. and the Elburz on the E.; is the fragment of a larger sea which extended to the Arctic Ocean; shallow in the N., deep in the S.; the waters, which are not so salt as the ocean, abound in fish, especially salmon and sturgeon.

CASS, LEWIS, an eminent American statesman, a member of the Democratic party, and openly hostile to Great Britain; though in favour of slaveholding, a friend of the Union; wrote a "History of the U.S. Indians" (1783-1866).

CASSAGNAC, GRANIER DE, a French journalist; at first an Orleanist, became a supporter of the Empire; started several journals, which all died a natural death; edited Le Pays, a semi-official organ; embroiled himself in duels and lawsuits without number (1806-1889).

CASSANDER, king of Macedonia, passed over in the succession by his father Antipater; allied himself with the Greek cities; invaded Macedonia and ascended the throne; married Thesalonica, the sister of Alexander the Great, but put Alexander's mother to death, thus securing himself against all rival claimants; left his son Philip as successor (354-297 B.C.).

CASSANDREA, a beautiful Trojan princess, daughter of Priam and Hecuba, whom Apollo endowed with the gift of prophecy, but, as she had rejected his suit, doomed to utter prophecies which no one would believe, as happened with her warnings of the fate and the fall of Troy, which were treated by her countrymen as the ravings of a lunatic; her name is applied to anyone who entertains gloomy forebodings.

CASSANO, a town in the S. of Italy; also a town near Milan, scene of a French victory under Vendôme in 1705, and a French defeat under Moreau in 1799.

CASSATION, COURT OF, a court of highest and last appeal in France, appointed in the case of appeal to revise the forms of a procedure in an inferior court; it consists of a president and vice-president, 49 judges, a public prosecutor called the procureur-général, and six advocates-general; it consists of three sections: first, one to determine if the appeal should be received; second, one to decide in civil cases; and third, one to decide in criminal cases.

CASSEL, capital of Hesse-Cassel, an interesting town, 120 m. from Frankfurt-on-Main; it is the birthplace of Rumen.

CASSELL, JOHN, the publisher, born in Manchester; a well-made man who knew the value of knowledge and did much to extend it; founded the firm of Cassell, Petter and Galpin, afterwards Cassell & Co. (1817-1865).

CASSIANUS, JOANNES, an Eastern ascetic; came to Constantinople, and became a pupil of Chrysostom, who ordained him; founded two monasteries in Marseilles; opposed the extreme views of Augustine in regard to grace and free-will, and human depravity; and not being able to go the length of Pelagianism, adopted semi-Pelagianism, q.v. (360-448).

CASSINI, name of a family of astronomers of the 17th and 18th centuries, of Italian origin; distinguished for their observations and discoveries affecting the comets, the planets, and the moon; they settled, father and son and grandson, in Paris, and became in succession directors of the observatory of Paris, the last of whom died in 1844, after completing in 1793 a great topographical map of France begun by his father.

CASSIODORUS, a Latin statesman and historian, born in Calabria; prime minister of Theodoric the Great and his successor; retired into a monastery about 70, and lived there nearly 30 years; wrote a history of the Goths, and left letters of great historical value (468-508).

CASSIOPEIA, queen of Ethiopia, mother of Andromeda, placed after death among the constellations; a constellation well north in the northern sky of five stars in the figure of a W.

CASSIQUITA RIVER, a remarkable river in Venezuela, which, like a canal, connects the Rio Negro, an affluent of the Amazon, with the Orinoco.

CASSITERIDES, islands in the Atlantic, which the Phœnician sailors visited to procure tin; presumed to have been the Scilly Islands or Cornwall, which they adjoin.

CASSITERITE, a mineral occurring in metamorphic rocks; it is the chief ore of tin and is mined where the rock has been weathered and laid down in deposits. The chief workings are in Cornwall, Malay, Tasmania, West Africa, and South America.

CASSIUS, CAIUS, chief conspirator against Cæsar; won over Brutus to join in the foul plot; soon after the deed was done fled to Syria, and made himself master of it; joined his forces with those of Brutus at Philippi; repulsed on the right, thought all was lost; withdrew into his tent, and called his freedmen to kill him; Brutus, in his lamentation over him, called him the "last of the Romans" &c. d. 42 B.C.

CASSIUS, SPURIUS, a Roman, thrice chosen consul, first time 502 B.C.; subdued the Sabines, made a league with the Latins, promoted an agrarian law, the first passed, which conceded to the plebs a share in the public lands.

CASSIVELAUNUS, a British warlike chief who unsuccessfully opposed Caesar on his second invasion of Britain, 54 B.C.; surrendered after defeat, and became tributary to Rome.

CASSOWARY, a large bird resembling the ostrich, but smaller than the emu, a native of Australia and New Guinea.

CASTALIA, a fountain at the foot of Parnassus sacred to the Muses; named after a nymph who drowned herself in it to escape Apollo.

CASTANET, bishop of Albi; procured the canonisation of St. Louis (1256-1317).

CASTAÑOR, FRANCISCO XAVIER, Duke of Bailén, a Spanish general; distinguished for his victory over the French under Dupont, whom he compelled to surrender and sign the capitulation of Bailén, in 1808; after this he served under Wellington in several engagements, and was commander of the Spanish army, ready, if required, to invade France in 1815 (1786-1852).

CASTE, rank in society of an exclusive nature due to birth or origin, such as prevails among the Hindus especially. Among them there are originally two great classes, the twice-born and the once-born, i.e. those who have passed through a second birth, and those who have not; of the former there are four grades, Brahmins, or the priestly caste, from the mouth of Brahma; Kshatriyas, or the soldier caste, from the hands of Brahma; Vaishyas, or the agricultural caste, from the loins of Brahma; and the Sudras, menials, from the feet of Brahma; notwithstanding which distinction often members of the highest class sink socially to the lowest level, and members of the lowest rise socially to the highest.

CASTEL, RENÉ-RICHARD, French poet and naturalist (1768-1832).

CASTELLAR, EMILIO, a Spanish republican, born in Cadix; an eloquent man and a literary; appointed dictator of Spain in 1873, but, not being equal to the exigency in the affairs of the State, resigned, and made way for the return of monarchy, though under protest; wrote a history of the "Republican Movement in Europe" among other works of political interest (1832-1899).

CASTELLAMARE, a port on the coast of Italy, 115 m. S.E. of Naples, the scene of Pliny's death from the eruption of Vesuvius in A.D. 79. It takes its name from a castle built on it by the Emperor Frederick II.; has a cathedral, arsenal, and manufactures.

CASTELLIO, SEBASTIANO, Protestant theologian, a protégé of Calvin for a time, till he gave expression to some heretical views, which led to a rupture; he ventured to pronounce the Song of Solomon a mere erotic poem (1515-1563).

CASTIGLIONE, a town of Sicily, on N. slope of Etna, 36 m. S.W. of Messina; famed for hazel nuts.

CASTIGLIONE, COUNT, an accomplished Italian, born in Mantua; author of "Il Cortegiano," a manual for courtiers, called by the Italians in admiration of it "The Golden Book"; had spent much of his time in courts in England and Spain, as well as Rome (1478-1529).

CASTILE, a central district of Spain, divided by the mountains of Castile into Old Castile in the N., and New Castile in the S.; the former, consisting of a high bare plateau, bounded by mountains on the N. and on the S., with a variable climate, yields wheat and good pasturage, and is rich in minerals; the latter, also tableland, has a richer soil, and yields richer produce, breeds horses and cattle, and contains besides the quicksilver mines of Almadén. Both were at one time occupied by the Moors, and were created into a kingdom in the 11th century, and united to the crown of Spain in 1469 by the marriage of Ferdinand and Isabella.

CASTLEFORD, a town 10 m. S.E. of Leeds, with extensive glass-works.

CASTLEREAGH, LORD, entered political life as a member of the Irish Parliament, co-operated with Pitt in securing the Union, after which he entered the Imperial Parliament, became War Minister (1806), till the ill-fated Walcheren expedition and a duel with Canning obliged him to resign; became Foreign Secretary in 1812, and the soul of the coalition against Napoleon; represented the country in a congress after Napoleon's fall; succeeded his father as Marquis of Londonderry in 1821, and committed suicide the year following; his name has been unduly defamed, and his services to the country as a diplomatist have been largely overlooked (1769-1822).

CASTLETOWN, a seaport in the Isle of Man, 11 m. S.W. of Douglas, and the former capital.

CASTLEWOOD, BEATRICE, the heroine in Thackeray's "Edmond."

CASTER AND POLLUX, the Dioscuri, the twin sons of Zeus by Leda; the former great in horsemanship, and the latter in boxing; famed for their mutual affection, so that when the former was slain the latter begged to be allowed to die with him, whereupon it was agreed they should spend a day in Iliades alternately; were raised eventually to become stars in the sky, the Gemini, twin signs in the zodiac, rising and setting together; this name is also given to the electric phenomenon called St. Elmo's Fire (q.v.).

CASTREN, MATHIAS ALEXANDER, an eminent philologist, born in Finland, professor of the Finnish Language and Literature in Helsingfors; travelled all over Northern Europe and Asia, and left accounts of the races he visited and their languages; translated the "Kalevala" (q.v.), the epic of the Finns; died prematurely, worn out with his labours (1813-1862).

CASTRES, a town in the dep. of Tarn, 46 m. E. of Toulouse; was a Roman station, and one of the first places in France to embrace Calvinism.

CASTRO, GUILLEN DE, a Spanish dramatist, author of the play of "The Old," which gained him European fame; he began life as a soldier, became acquainted with Lope de Vega, and took to dramatic composition (1569-1631).

CASTRO, INEZ DE, a royal heiress of the Spanish throne in the 14th century, the beloved wife of Don Pedro, heir of the Portuguese throne; put to death out of jealousy of Spain by the latter's father, but on his accession dug out of her grave, arrayed in her royal robes, and crowned along with him, after which she was entombed again, and a magnificent monument erected over her remains.

CASTRO, JOÃO DE, a Portuguese soldier, born at Lisbon, distinguished for his exploits on behalf of Portugal; made viceroy of the Portuguese Indies, but died soon after in the arms of Francis Xavier (1500-1548).

CASTRO, VAGA DE, a Spaniard, sent out by Charles V. as governor of Peru, but addressing himself to the welfare of the natives rather than the enrichments of Spain, was ridiculed, to pine and die in prison in 1558.

CASTROGIOVANNI, a town in a strong position in the heart of Sicily, 3270 ft. above the sea-level; at one time a centre of the worship of Ceres, and with a temple to her.

CASTRUCCIO-CASTRACANI, Duke of Lucra, and chief of the chibelline party in that town, the greatest war-captain in Europe in his day; lord of hundreds of strongholds; wore on a high occasion across his breast a scroll, inscribed, "He is what God made him," and across his back another, inscribed, "He shall be what God will make" (1261-1328).

CATACOMBS, originally underground quarries, afterwards used as burial-places for the dead, found beneath Paris and in the neighbourhood of Rome, as well as elsewhere; those around Rome, some 40 in number, are the most famous, as having been used by the early Christians, not merely for burial but for purposes of worship, and are rich in monuments of art and memorials of history.

CATALANI, ANGELICA, a celebrated Italian singer and prima donna, born near Ancona; began her career in Rome with such success that it led to engagements over all the chief cities of Europe, the enthusiasm which followed her reaching its climax when she came to England, where, on her first visit, she stayed eight years; by the failure of an enterprise in Paris she lost her fortune, but soon repaired it by revisiting the capitals of Europe; died of cholera in Paris (1779-1849).

CATALONIA, old prov. of Spain, on the N.E.; has a most fertile soil, which yields a luxuriant vegetation; chief seat of manufacture in the country, called hence the "Lancashire of Spain"; the people are specially distinguished from other Spaniards by their intelligence and energy.

CATALYSIS, the method of promoting a chemical action by the addition of a small quantity of some substance which appears to take no part in the reaction and remains unchanged at the end. A large number of industrial processes depend upon a catalytic agent, e.g. in the contact process for the manufacture of sulphuric acid, sulphur dioxide, and oxygen will only combine to give the trioxide when heated if a small quantity of platinum is present. It has been found that impurities may "poison" the catalyst and retard or prevent the action.

CATAMARCA, NW. prov. of the Argentine Republic; rich in minerals, especially copper.

CATANIA, an ancient city at the foot of Etna, to the S., on a plain called the Granary of Sicily; has been several times devastated by the eruptions of Etna, particularly in 1169, 1669, and 1693; manufactures silk, linen, and articles of amber, &c., and exports sulphur, grain, and fruits.

CATANZARO, a city in Calabria, 6 m. from the Gulf of Squillace, with an old castle of Robert Guiscard.

CATEGORICAL IMPERATIVE, Kant's name for the self-derived moral law, "universal and binding on every rational, a commandment of the autonomous, one and universal reason."

CATEGORIES are either classes under which all our notions of things may be grouped, or classes under which all our thoughts of things may be grouped; the former called Logical, we owe to Aristotle, and the latter called Metaphysical, we owe to Kant. The Logical, so derived, that group our notions, are ten in number: Substance or Being, Quantity, Quality, Relation, Place, Time, Position, Possession, Action, Passion. The Metaphysical, so derived, that group our thoughts, are twelve in number: (1) as regards quantity, Totality, Plurality, Unity; (2) as regards quality, Reality, Negation, Limitation; (3) as regards relation, Substance, Accident, Cause and Effect, Action and Reaction; (4) as regards modality, Possibility and Impossibility, Existence and Non-existence, Necessity and Contingency. John Stuart Mill resolves the categories into five: Existence, Co-existence, Succession, Causation, and Resemblance.

CATESBY, ROBERT, born in Northamptonshire, a Catholic of good birth; concerned in the famous Gunpowder Plot; shot dead three days after its discovery by officers sent to arrest him (1573-1605).

CATHARI, or CATHARISTS, i.e. purists or puritans, a sect of presumably Gnostic derivation, scattered here and there under different names over the S. and W. of Europe during the Middle Ages, who held the Manichean doctrine of the radically sinful nature of the flesh, and the necessity of mortifying all its desires and affections to attain purity of soul.

CATHAY, the name given to China by Marco Polo and medieval writers, which it still bears in Central Asia.

CATHART, EARL, a British general and diplomatist, born in Renfrewshire; saw service in America and Flanders; distinguished himself at the bombardment of Copenhagen; represented England at the court of Russia and the Congress of Vienna (1755-1843).

CATHART, SIR GEORGE, a lieutenant-general, son of the preceding; enlisted in the army; served in the later Napoleonic wars; was present at Quatre Bras and Waterloo; was governor of the Cape; brought the Kaffir war to a successful conclusion; served in the Crimea and fell at Inkerman (1794-1854).

CATHEDRAL, the principal church in a diocese, which contains the throne of the bishop as his seat of authority; is of a rank corresponding to the dignity of the bishop; the governing body consists of the dean and chapter.

CATHÉLINEAU, JACQUES, a famous leader of the Vendéens in their revolt against the French Republic on account of a conscription on its behalf; a peasant by birth; mortally wounded in attacking Nantes; he is remembered by the peasants of La Vendée as the "Saint of Anjou" (1759-1793).

CATHERINE, ST., OF ALEXANDRIA, a virgin who, in 307, suffered martyrdom after torture on the wheel, which has since borne her name; is represented in art as in a vision presented to Christ by His Mother as her sole husband, who gives her a ring. Festival, Nov. 25.

CATHERINE I., wife of Peter the Great and empress of Russia, daughter of a Livonian peasant; "a little stumpy body, very brown, . . . strangely chased about from the bottom to the top of the world, . . . had once been a kitchen wench"; married first to a Swedish dragoon, became afterwards the mistress of Prince Menschikoff, and then of Peter the Great, who eventually married her; succeeded him as empress, with Menschikoff as minister; for a time ruled well, but in the end gave herself up to dissipation and died (1680-1727).

CATHERINE II., THE GREAT, empress of Russia, born at Stettin, daughter of Prince of Anhalt-Zerbst; "a most clever, clear-eyed, stout-hearted woman"; became the wife of Peter III., a scandalous mortal, who was dethroned and then murdered, leaving her empress; ruled well for the country, and though her character was immoral and her reign despotic and often cruel, her efforts at reform, the patronage she accorded to literature, science, and philosophy, and her diplomatic successes, entitle her to a high rank among the sovereigns of Russia; she reigned from 1763 to 1796, and it was during the course of her reign, and under the sanction of it, that Europe witnessed the three partitions of Poland (1720-1796).

CATHERINE DE' MEDICI, daughter of Lorenzo de' Medici, wife of Henry II. of France, and mother of his three successors; on the accession of her second son, Charles IX.—for the reign of her first, Francis II., was very brief—acted as regent during his minority; joined heart and soul with the Catholics in persecuting the Huguenots, and persuaded her son to issue the order which resulted in the massacre of St. Bartholomew; on his death, which occurred soon after, she acted as regent during the minority of her third son, Henry III., and lived to see both herself and him dethroned by the whole French people, and this although she was during her ascendancy the patroness of the arts and of literature (1619-1589).

CATHERINE OF ARAGON, fourth daughter of Ferdinand and Isabella of Spain, and wife of Henry VIII., her brother-in-law as widow of Arthur, from whom and at whose instance, after 18 years of married life, and after giving birth to five children, she was divorced on the plea that as she had been his brother's wife before, it was not lawful for him to have her; after her divorce she remained in the country, led an austere religious life, and died broken-hearted. The refusal of the Pope to sanction this divorce led to the final rupture of the English Church from the Church of Rome (1485-1536).

CATHERINE OF BRAGANZA, the wife of Charles II. of England, of the royal house of Portugal; was unpopular in the country as a Catholic and neglected by her husband, on whose death, however, she returned to Portugal, and did the duties ably of regent for her brother Don Pedro (1638-1705).

CATHERINE OF SIENNA, born at Sienna, a sister of the Order of St. Dominic, and patron saint of the Order; celebrated for her ecstasies and visions and the marks which by favour of Christ she bore on her body of His sufferings on the Cross (1347-1380). Festival, April 30.

CATHERINE OF VALOIS, daughter of Charles VI. of France, and wife of Henry V. of England, who, on his marriage to her, was declared heir to the throne of France, with the result that their son was afterwards, while but an infant, crowned king of both countries; becoming a widow, she married Owen Tudor, a Welsh gentleman, whereby a grandson of his succeeded to the English throne as Henry VII., and the first of the Tudors (1401-1438).

CATHERINE PARR, the sixth wife of Henry VIII., and the daughter of a Westmorland knight; was of the Protestant faith and obnoxious to the Catholic faction, who trumped up a charge against her of heresy and treason, from which, however, she cleared herself to the satisfaction of the king, over whom she retained her ascendancy till his death (1513-1548).

CATHERINE THEOT, a religious fanatic, born in Arranches; gave herself out as the Mother of God; appeared in Paris in 1794, and declared Robespierre a second John the Baptist and forerunner of the Word; the Committee of Public Safety had her arrested and guillotined.

CATHOLIC EMANCIPATION, the name given to the emancipation in 1829 of the Roman Catholics of the United Kingdom from disabilities which precluded their election to office in the State, so that they are eligible now to any office the Lord Chancellorship of England and offices representative of royalty.

CATHOLIC EPISTLES, the name, equivalent to encyclical, given to certain epistles in the New Testament not addressed to any community in particular but to several, and given eventually to all not written by St. Paul.

CATILINE, or LUCIUS SERGIUS CATILINA, a Roman patrician, an able man, but unscrupulously ambitious; frustrated in his political designs, he formed a conspiracy against the State, which was detected and exposed by Cicero, a discovery which obliged him to leave the city; he tried to stir up hostility outside; this too being discovered by Cicero, an army was sent against him, when an engagement ensued, in which, fighting desperately, he was slain, 62 B.C.

CATINAT, NICOLAS, a marshal of France, born in Paris; one of the greatest military captains under Louis XIV.; defeated the Duke of Savoy twice over, though defeated by Prince Eugene and compelled to retreat; was an able diplomatist as well as military strategist (1657-1712).

CATLIN, GEORGE, a traveller among the North American Indians, and author of an illustrated work on their life and manners; spent eight years among them (1796-1822).

CATO DIONYSIUS, name of the author of a book of maxims in verse, held in high favour during the Middle Ages; nothing is known of the author.

CATO, MARCUS PORCIUS, or CATO MAJOR, sur-named Censor, Friscus, and Sapiens; born at Tusculum, of a good family, and trained to rustic, frugal life; after serving occasionally in the army, removed to Rome; became in succession censor, ædile, prætor, and consul; served in the second Punic war, towards the end of it, and subjugated Spain; was a Roman of the old school; disliked and denounced all innovations, as censor dealt sharply with them; sent on an embassy to Africa, was so struck with the increasing power and the threateningly evil ascendancy of Carthage that on his return he urged its demolition, and in every speech which he delivered afterwards he ended with the words, Ceterum censeo Carthaginem esse delendam, "But, be that as it may, my opinion is Carthage must be destroyed" (234-149 B.C.).

CATO, MARCUS PORCIUS, or CATO THE YOUNGER, or UTICENSIS, great-grandson of the former, and a somewhat pedantic second edition of him; fortified himself by study of the Stoic philosophy; conceived a distrust of the public men of the day, Cæsar among the number; preferred Pompey to him, and sided with him; after Pompey's defeat retired to Utica, whence his surname, and stabbed himself to death rather than fall into the hands of Cæsar (95-46 B.C.).

CATO-STREET CONSPIRACY, an insignificant, abortive plot, headed by one Thistlewood, to assassinate Castlereagh and other ministers of the Crown in 1820; so called from their place of meeting off the Edgeware Road, London.

CATELAI, an old Roman earthwork, 50 m. long, passing S. from near Galashiels through Belkirk and Roxburgh, or from the Cheviots; it is known by the name of the "Devil's Dyke."

CATS, JACOB, a Dutch poet and statesman, venerated in Holland as "Father Cats"; his works are written in a simple, natural style, and abound in wise maxims; he did service as a statesman; twice visited England as an envoy, and was knighted by Charles I. (1577-1660).

CATSKILL MOUNTAINS, a group of mountains, of steep ascent and with rocky summits, in New York State, W. of the Hudson, none of them exceeding 4000 feet; celebrated as the scene of Rip Van Winkle's long slumber; belong to the Appalachians. CATTAGAT, an arm of the sea, 150 m. in length and 84 of greatest width, between Sweden and Jutland; a highway into the Baltic, all but blocked up with islands; is dangerous to shipping on account of the storms that infest it at times.

CATTERMOLE, GEORGE, artist, born in Norfolk; illustrated Britton's "English Cathedrals," Waverley Novels, and the "Historical Annual" by his brother; painted mostly in water-colour; his subjects chiefly from English history (1800-1868).

CATTLE PLAGUE, or Rinderpest, a disease which affects ruminants, but especially bovine cattle; indigenous to the East, Russia, Persia, India, and China, and imported into Britain only by contagion of some kind; the most serious outbreaks were in 1845 and 1872.

CATULLUS, GAIUS VALERIUS, the great Latin lyric poet, born at Verona, a man of wealth and good standing, being, it would seem, of the equestrian order; associated with the best wits in Rome; fell in love with Clodia, a patrician lady, who was the inspiration, both in peace and war, of many of his effusions, and whom he addresses as Lesbia; the death of a brother affected him deeply, and was the occasion of the production of one of the most pathetic elegies ever penned; in the civic strife of the time he sided with the senate, and opposed Cæsar to the length of directing against him a coarse lampoon (87-54 B.C.).

CAUCA, a river in Colombia, S. America, which falls into the Magdalena after a northward course of 600 m.

CAUCASIA, a prov. of Russia, geographically divided into Cis-Caucasia on the European side, and Trans-Caucasia on the Asiatic side of the Caucasus, with an area four times as large as England.

CAUCASIAN RACE, a name adopted by Blumenbach to denote the Indo-European race, from the fine type of a skull of one of the race found in Georgia.

CAUCASUS, an enormous mountain range, 750 m. in length, extending from the Black Sea ESE to the Caspian, in two parallel chains, with tablelands between, bounded on the S. by the valley of the Kur, which separates it from the tableland of Armenia; snow-line higher than that of the Alps; has fewer and smaller glaciers; has no active volcanoes, though there is abundant evidence of volcanic action.

CAUCHON, bishop of Beauvais, infamous for the iniquitous part he played in the trial and condemnation of Joan of Arc; d. 1443.

CAUCHY, AUGUSTE LOUIS, BARON, mathematician, born in Paris; wrote largely on physical subjects; his "Mémoire" on the theory of the waves suggested the undulatory theory of light; professor of Astronomy at Paris; declined to take the oath of allegiance to Napoleon III., and retired (1789-1857).

CAUDINE FORKS, a narrow mountain gorge in Samnium, in which, during the second Samnite war, a Roman army was entrapped and caught by the Samnites, who obliged them to pass under the yoke in token of subjugation, 321 B.C.

CAUL, a membrane covering the head of some children at birth, to which a magical virtue was at one time ascribed, and which, on that account, was rated high and sold often at a high price.

CAULAINCOURT, ARMAND, MARQUIS DE, a French general and statesman of the Empire, a faithful supporter of Napoleon, who conferred on him a peerage, with the title of Duke of Vicenza, of which he was deprived at the Restoration; represented Napoleon at the Congress of Châtillon (1772-1827).

CAUTERETS, a fashionable watering-place in the dep. of the Hautes-Pyrénées, 3250 ft. above the sea, with sulphurous springs of very ancient repute, 25 in number, and of varying temperature.

CAVAIGNAC, LOUIS EUGENE, a distinguished French general, born in Paris; appointed governor of Algeria in 1849, but recalled to be head of the executive power in Paris the same year; appointed dictator, suppressed the insurrection in June, after the most obstinate and bloody struggle the streets of Paris had witnessed since the first Revolution: stood candidate for the Presidency, to which Louis Napoleon was elected; was arrested after the coup d'état, but soon released; never gave in his adherence to the Empire (1802-1857).

CAVALCASELLE, GIOVANNI BATTISTA, Italian writer on art; joint-author with J. A. Crowe of works on the "Early Flemish Masters" and the "History of Painting in Italy"; chief of the art department under the Minister of Public Instruction in Rome (1820-1897).

CAVALIERE, JEAN, leader of the Camisards (q.v.), born at Elbaute, in the dep. of Gard; bred a baker; held his own against Montreuil and Villars; in 1704 concluded peace with the latter on honourable terms; haughtily received by Louis XIV., passed over to England; served against France, and died governor of Jersey (1670-1740).

CAVALIERE, the royalist partisans of Charles I. in England in opposition to the parliamentary party, or the Roundheads, as they were called.

CAVALLO, a distinguished Italian physician, born at Naples (1740-1800).

CAVAN, inland county S. of Ulster, Ireland, with a poor soil; has minerals and mineral springs.

CAVAN, 10TH EARL OF, British soldier. Entering the Grenadier Guards, he first saw service in the Boer War, and took command of the Guards division in France in 1915. In 1917 he went to the Italian front, taking command there in 1918. He was made Chief of the Imperial General Staff in 1922 (1865-).

CAVE, EDWARD, a London bookseller, born in Warwickshire; projected the Gentleman's Magazine, to which Dr. Johnson contributed; was the first to give Johnson literary work, employing him as parliamentary reporter, and Johnson was much attached to him; he died with his hand in Johnson's (1691-1764).

CAVE, VISCOUNT, British politician. He entered Parliament as a Conservative in 1906, and from 1910 to 1919 was Home Secretary in the Coalition. He was Lord Chancellor in 1922 under Bonar Law, and again in 1924 under Baldwin (1856-1928).

CAVE, WILLIAM, an English divine; author of works on the Fathers of the Church and on primitive Christianity, of high repute at one time (1637-1718).

CAVELL, EDITH LOUISE, the British nurse who was shot by the Germans at Brussels in October, 1915, for harbouring refugees and facilitating their escape into Holland. After the death she was buried in Norwich Cathedral, near which town she was born. She had been matron of a Brussels hospital since 1906 (1865-1915).

CAVENDISH, the surname of the Devonshire ducal family, traceable back to the 14th century.

CAVENDISH, GEORGE, the biographer of Wolsey; never left him while he lived, and never forgot him or the lesson of his life after he was dead; this appears from the vivid picture he gives of the prelate, though written 30 years after his death (1500-1561).

CAVENDISH, LORD FREDERICK, brother of the ninth Duke of Devonshire, educated at Trinity College, Cambridge, and a Liberal; was made Chief Secretary for Ireland in 1882, but chancing to walk home one evening through the Phoenix Park, he fell a victim, stabbed to the heart, of a conspiracy that was aimed at Mr. Burke, an unpopular subordinate, who was walking with him, and who came to the same fate. Eight months after, several men were arrested as concerned in the murder, when one of them informed; five of them were hanged; the informer, Carey, was afterwards murdered, and his murderer, O'Donnell, hanged (1836-1882).

CAVENDISH, HENRY, natural philosopher and chemist, born at Nice, of the Devonshire family; devoted his entire life to scientific investigations; the first to analyse the air of the atmosphere, determine the mean density of the earth, discover the composition of water, ascertain the properties of hydrogen, and discover the presence of nitrogen in nitric acid. He was an extremely shy, retiring man; born rich and died rich, leaving over a million sterling (1781-1850).

CAVENDISH, SPENCER COMPTON, ninth Duke of Devonshire, for long known in public life as Marquis of Hartington; also educated at Trinity College, and a leader of the Liberal Party; served under Gladstone till he adopted Home Rule for Ireland, but joined Lord Salisbury in the interest of Union, and one of the leaders of the Liberal-Unionist party (1833-1908).

CAVENDISH, THOMAS, an English navigator, fitted out three vessels to cruise against the Spaniards; extended his cruise into the Pacific; succeeded in taking valuable prizes, with which he landed in England, after circumnavigating the globe; he set out on a second cruise, which ended in disaster, and died in the island of Ascension broken-hearted (1560-1592).

CAVENDISH, WILLIAM, English courtier and cavalier in the reigns of James I. and Charles I.; joined Charles II. in exile; returned at the Restoration; was made Duke of Newcastle; wrote on horsemanship (1562-1676).

CAVENDISH, WILLIAM, first Duke of Devonshire; friend and protector of Lord William Russell; became a great favourite at court, and was raised to the dukedom (1640-1707).

CAVIARE, the roe (the immature ovaries) of the common sturgeon and other kindred fishes, caught chiefly in the Black and Caspian Seas, and prepared and salted; deemed a great luxury by those who have acquired the taste for it; largely imported from Astrakhan.

CAVOUR, COUNT CAMILLO BENSO DI, one of the greatest of modern statesmen, born the younger son of a Piedmontese family, at Turin; entered the army, but was precluded from a military career by his liberal opinions; retired, and for 16 years laboured as a private gentleman to improve the social and economic condition of Piedmont; in 1847 he threw himself into the great movement which resulted in the independence and unification of Italy; for the next 14 years, as editor of Il Risorgimento, member of the chamber of deputies, holder of various portfolios in the government, and ultimately as prime minister of the kingdom of Sardinia, he obtained a constitution and representative government for his country, improved its fiscal and financial condition, and raised it to a place of influence in Europe; he co-operated with the allies in the Crimean war; negotiated with Napoleon III. for the expulsion of the Austrians from Italy, and so precipitated the successful war of 1859; he encouraged Garibaldi in the expedition of 1860, which liberated Sicily and Southern Italy, and saw the parliament of 1861 summoned, and Victor Emmanuel declared king of Italy; but the strain of his labours broke his health, and he died a few months later (1810-1861).

CAWDOR, a Scottish village SW. of Nairn; scene of the murder of Duncan in Shakespeare's "Macbeth."

CAWNPORE, a city on the right bank of the Ganges, in the North-Western Provinces of India, 40 m. SW. of Lucknow, and 628 N.W. of Calcutta; the scene of one of the most fearful atrocities, perpetrated by Nana Sahib, in the Indian Mutiny in 1857.

CAXTON, WILLIAM, the first English printer, born in Kent, bred a mercer, settled for a time in Bruges, learned the art of printing there, where he printed a translation of the "Recuyell of the Historiis of Troyes," and "The Game and Playe of Chess"; returning to England, set up a press in Westminster Abbey, and in 1477 issued "Dietes and Sayings of the Philosophers," the first book printed in England, which was soon followed by many others; he was a good linguist as well as a devoted workman (1392-1491).

CAYENNE, cap. and port of French Guiana, a swampy, unhealthy place, rank with tropical vegetation; a French penal settlement since 1852.

CAYLA, COUNTESS OF, friend and confidante of Louis XVIII. (1784-1850).

CAYLEY, ARTHUR, an eminent English mathematician, professor at Cambridge, and president of the British Association in 1893 (1821-1895).

CAYLEY, CHARLES BAGOT, a linguist, translated Dante into the metre of the original, with annotations; besides metrical versions of the "Iliad," the "Prometheus" of Æschylus, the "Canzoniere" of Petrarch, &c. (1823-1893).

CAYLUS, COUNT, a distinguished archaeologist, born in Paris; author of a "Collection of Antiquities of Egypt, Etruria," &c., with excellent engravings (1892-1785).

CAYLUS, MARQUISE DE, born in Poitou, related to Mms. de Maintenon; left piquant souvenirs of the court of Louis XIV. and the house of St. Cyr (1673-1729).

CAYMAN ISLANDS, THE, are three in number and are a dependency of Jamaica, which is about 200 m. away to the south-east. They are sometimes called the Turk's and Caicos Islands; and have an area of 4900 sq. m. and a population of over 5000. When discovered by Columbus, on his voyage from Porto Bello to Hayti, they were called the Tortugas.

CAZALES, a member of the French Constituent Assembly, a dragon captain, a fervid, eloquent orator of royalism, who "earned thereby," says Carlyle, "the shadow of a name" (1758-1805).

CAZOTTE, author of the "Diable Amoureux"; victim as an enemy of the French Revolution; spared for his daughter's sake for a time, but guillotined at last; left her a "lock of his old grey hair" (1720-1792).

CEAN-BERNUDEZ, JUAN, a Spanish writer on art; author of a biographical dictionary of the principal artists of Spain (1749-1829).

CEARA, cap. of the prov. of the name, in N. of Brasil.

CEBES, a Greek philosopher, disciple and friend of Socrates, reputed author of the "Pinax" or Tablet, a once popular book on the secret of life, being an allegorical representation of the temptations that beset it.

CECIL, ROBERT, EARL OF SALISBURY, succeeded his father, Lord Burielgh, as first Minister under Elizabeth, and continued in office under James I., whose friendship he sedulously cultivated before his accession, and who created him earl (1556-1612). See BURLEIGH, LORD.

CECIL, VISCOUNT, OF CHELWOOD (Lord Robert Cecil), British politician. A son of the Marquess of Salisbury, he spent 19 years at the bar before entering Parliament as a Conservative in 1906. He became Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs in 1915, and was given a seat in the Cabinet in 1916, later representing Great Britain at the Peace Conference and doing a great deal to establish the League of Nations. He served in the Baldwin Government of 1924 until he resigned, as he thought its peace policy insufficient, and he again represented Britain at Geneva when Labour took office in 1929 (1864-).

CECILIA, ST., a Roman virgin and martyr, A.D. 230, patron saint of music, especially church music, and reputed inventor of the organ; sometimes represented as holding a small organ, with her head turned heavenwards as if listening to the music of the spheres, and sometimes as playing on an organ and with a heavenly expression of face. Festival, Nov. 22.

CECROPE, the mythical first king and civiliser of Attica and founder of Athens with its citadel, dedicated by him to Athena, whence the name of the city.

CEDAR RAPIDS, a manufacturing town in Iowa, U.S.; a great railway centre.

CELADON, poetical name for a languid swain, all sighs and longings; a character in Thomson's "Seasons."

CELENO, name of one of the Harpies (g.r.).

CELEBES, an island in the centre of the Eastern Archipelago, third in size, in the shape of a body with four long limbs, traversed by mountain chains, and the greater part of it a Dutch possession, though it contains a number of small native states; it yields among its mineral products gold, copper, tin, &c.; and among its vegetable, tea, coffee, rice, sugar, pepper, &c.; capital, Macassar.

CELESTIE, MIMI, actress and dancer, born in Paris; made her debut in New York; in great repute in England, and particularly in the States, where she in her second visit realised $40,000 (1814-1832).

CELESTINE, the name of five Popes: C. I., Pope from 422 to 432; C. II., Pope from 1143 to 1144; C. III., Pope from 1191 to 1198; C. IV., Pope for 18 days in 1241; C. V., Pope in 1294, a hermit for 60 years; nearly 80 when elected against his wish; abdicated in five months; imprisoned by order of Boniface VIII.; d. 1296; canonised 1313.

CELESTINE, an order of monks founded by Celestine V. before he was elected Pope; they followed the rule of the Benedictine Order, and led a contemplative life.

CELL THEORY of biology, that all organisms are made up of cells. In the early days the cell was considered as an elementary particle, but later the microscope showed that the cell had a complicated structure. The cell consists of a nucleus surrounded by a fluid containing colloidal proteins. The nucleus itself contains the chromosomes, which transmit the hereditary characters. The fluid surrounding the cell is known as the cytoplasm.

CELLINI, BENVENUTO, a celebrated engraver, sculptor, and goldsmith, a most versatile and erratic genius, born at Florence; had to leave Florence for a brawl he was involved in, and went to Rome; wrought as a goldsmith there for 20 years, patronised by the nobles; killed the Constable de Bourbon at the sack of the city; and for this received plenary indulgence from the Pope; Francesco I. attached him to his court and kept him in his service five years, after which he returned to Florence and executed his famous bronze "Perseus with the Head of Medusa," which occupied him four years; was a man of a quarrelsome temper, which involved him in no end of scrapes with sword as well as tongue; left an autobiography, from its self-dissection of the deepest interest to all students of human nature (1500-1571).

CELLULOSE, a translucent substance manufactured from cellulose. It is used extensively for a variety of purposes.

CELLULOSE, the carbohydrate which forms the framework of all vegetable tissues. Linen, cotton, paper, &c., are nearly pure cellulose. Cellulose can be hydrolysed to give sugars, and on nitration gives gunotton and products used in the manufacture of artificial silk.

CELSIUS, ANDERS, a distinguished Swedish astronomer, born at Upsala, and professor of Astronomy there; inventor of the Centigrade scale for thermometers (1701-1744).

CELSUS, a celebrated Roman physician of the age of Augustus, and perhaps later; famed as the author of "De Medicina," a work often referred to, and valuable as one of the sources of our knowledge of the medicine of the ancients.

CELSUS, AULUS, or AURELIUS, a philosopher of the 2nd century, and notable as the first assailant on philosophic grounds of the Christian religion, particularly as regards the power it claims to deliver from the evil that is inherent in human nature, inseparable from it, and implanted in it not by God, but some inferior being remote from Him; the book in which he attacked Christianity is no longer extant, only quotations from it scattered over the pages of the defence of Origen in reply.

CELTIC, an ancient Spanish race occupying the centre of the peninsula, sprung from a blending of the aborigines and the Celts who invaded the country; "a brave race, divided into four tribes; distinguished in war both as cavalry and infantry, whom the Romans had much trouble in subduing."

CELTIC, The W. of Europe was in prehistoric times subjected to two invasions of Aryan tribes, all of whom are now referred to as Celts. The earlier invaders were Goidels or Gaels; they conquered the Iberian and Iberian peoples of ancient Gaul, Britain, and Ireland; their successors, the Brythons or Britons, pouring from the E., drove them to the westernmost borders of these countries, and there compelled them to make common cause with the surviving Iberians in resistance; in the eastern parts of the conquered territories they formed the bulk of the population, in the W. they were in a dominant minority; study of languages in the British Isles leads to the conclusion that the Irish, Manx, and Scottish Celts belonged chiefly to the earlier immigration, while the Welsh and Cornish represent the latter; the true Celtic type is tall, red or fair, and blue-eyed, while the short, swarthy type, so long considered Celtic, is now held to represent the original Iberian races.

CEMENTITE, name given in the steel industry to one of the carbides of iron.

CENCI, THE, a Roman family celebrated for their crimes and misfortunes as well as their wealth. Francesco Cenci was twice married, had had twelve children by his first wife, whom he treated cruelly; after his second marriage cruelly treated the children of his first wife, but conceived a criminal passion for the youngest of them, a beautiful girl named Beatrice, whom he outraged, upon which, being unable to bring him to justice, she, along with her stepmother and a brother, hired two assassins to murder him; the crime was found out, and all three were beheaded (1599); this is the story on which Shelley founded his tragedy, but it is now discredited.

CENIS, MONT., one of the Cottian Alps, over which Napoleon constructed a pass 6884 ft. high in 1802-1810, through which a tunnel 7½ m. long passes from Modane to Bardonnèche, connecting France with Italy; the construction of this tunnel cost £3,000,000, and Napoleon's pass a tenth of the sum.

CENOTAPH, the British national War Memorial in Whitehall, designed by Sir Edwin Lutyens.

CENSORS, two magistrates of ancient Rome, who held office at first for five years and then eighteen months, and whose duty it was to keep a register of the citizens, guard the public morals, collect the public revenue, and superintend the public property.

CENSUS, a periodical numbering of the people, now held in Britain every ten years. The first in England was that of 1801.

CENTAURS, a savage race living between Pelion and Ossa, in Thessaly, and conceived of at length by Pindar as half men and half horses, treated as embodying the relation between the spiritual and the animal in man and nature, in all of whom the animal prevails over the spiritual, except in Chiron, who therefore figures as the trainer of the heroes of Greece; in the mythology they figure as the progeny of Centaurus, son of Ixion (q.v.) and the cloud, their mothers being mares.

CENTIGRADE SCALE, the thermometric scale having the freezing-point of water 0° and the boiling-point 100°. It is used for everyday purposes in most of the countries of the world except Germany and the English-speaking countries, and for scientific purposes everywhere. It was introduced by Celsius. To change a Centigrade reading to Fahrenheit multiply by nine, divide by five, and add three-two; to Fahrenheit, multiply by 4 and divide by 5.

CENTRAL AMERICA, territory of fertile tableland sloping gradually to both oceans, occupied chiefly by a number of small republics, lying between Tehuantepec and Panama in N. America; it includes the republics of Guatemala, Honduras, St. Salvador, Nicaragua, and Costa Rica, and a few adjoining fractions of territory.

CENTRAL AUSTRALIA, a portion of the Northern Territory which under the Northern Australia Act of 1926 was divided into two parts, North (q.v.) and Central respectively; Central A. extends from the 20th parallel of south latitude to the borders of South A., is bounded on the W. by W. Australia, and on the E. by Queensland; it is administered by a Government Resident who is assisted by an Advisory Council; area 236,564 sq. m.; is traversed by the MacDonnell and James ranges; produces gold and mica.

CENTRAL ELECTRICITY BOARD, THE, the body established in 1927 under the Electricity Supply Act to supervise regional schemes for the supply of electric power.

CENTRAL INDIA, includes a group of feudatory States lying between Rajputana in the N. and Central Provinces in the S.

CENTRAL PROVINCES, States partly British and partly native occupying the N. of the Deccan, and lying between the Nerbudda and the Godavary.

CENTRE OF GRAVITY, that point of a body through which the resultant of the earth's attractive forces on all its particles passes. A body behaves as if its whole mass were concentrated at its centre of gravity.

CEOS, one of the Cyclades, a small island 13 m. by 8 m., yields fruits; was the birthplace of Simonides and Bacchylides.

CEPHALOPODS, a group of marine molluscs, including cuttle fishes, squids, and nautilus, and the extinct ammonites (q.v.).

CEPHALONIA, the largest of the Ionian Islands, 80 m. long, the ancient Samos; yields grapes and olive oil.

CEPHALUS, king of Thessaly, who, having involuntarily killed his wife Procris, in despair put himself to death with the same weapon. He was a contemporary of Plato.

CEPHEIDS, a class of variable stars of average period 7 days, whose variation is not due to eclipse (see BINARY STARS and ALGOL). These pulsatory stars are generally found in clusters. No satisfactory explanation of the cause of their variation has been found, although their periods have been shown to depend upon their absolute brightness.

CERAM, the largest of S. Molucca Islands, yields sago, which is chiefly cultivated and largely exported.

CERBERUS, the three-headed or three-throated monster that guarded the entrance to the nether world of Pluto; could be soothed by music, and tempted by honey; only Hercules overcame him by sheer strength, dragging him by neck and crop to the upper world.

CERES, the Latin name for Demeter (q.v.); also the name of one of the asteroids, the first discovered by Piazzi in 1801.

CERI'GO, an Ionian island, the southernmost, the ancient Cythera; yields wine and fruits.

CERINTHUS, a heresiarch of the first century, whom, according to tradition, St. John held in special detestation, presumably as denying the Father and the Son.

CERUM, one of the rare earth group of metallic elements, found in monazite sand.

CERRO DE PASCO, a town in Peru, 14,200 ft. above the sea-level, with the richest silver mine in S. America.

CERUTTI, a Jesuit, born at Turin; became a Revolutionary in France; pronounced the funeral oration at the grave of Mirabeau in 1789.

CERVANTES-SAAVEDRA, MIGUEL DE, the author of "Don Quixote," born at Alcalá de Henares; was distinguished in arms before he became distinguished in letters; fought in the battle of Lepanto like a very hero, and bore away with him as a "maimed soldier" marks of his share in the struggle; sent on a risky embassy, was captured by pirates and remained in their hands five years; was ransomed by his family at a cost which beggared them, and it was only when his career as a soldier closed that he took himself to literature; began as a dramatist before he devoted himself to prose romance; wrote no fewer than 30 dramas; the first part of the work which has immortalised his name appeared in 1605, and the second in 1615; it took the world by storm, was translated into all the languages of Europe, but the fortune which was extended to his book did not extend to himself, for he died poor some ten days before his great contemporary, William Shakespeare; though carefully written, "Don Quixote" is one of the few books of all time, and is as fresh to-day as when it was first written (1647-1616).

CERVIN, MONT., the French name for the Matterhorn, 14,705 ft., the summit of the Pennine Alps, between Valais and Piedmont.

CESAREWITCH, the eldest son and heir of the Czars of Russia before the revolution.

CE'SARI, GIUSEPPE, sometimes called ARPINO, an eminent Italian painter; painted a series of frescoes in the Conservatorio of the Capitol illustrative of events in the history of Rome (1568-1640).

CESAROTTI, an Italian poet, translator of the "Iliad" and "Ossian" into Italian (1730-1806).

CESTUS, a girdle worn by Greek and Roman women, especially the girdle of Aphrodite, so embellished with symbols of the joys of love that no susceptible soul could resist the power of it; it was borrowed by Hera to captivate Zeus.

CETEOSAURUS, a species of dinosaur somewhat resembling a whale. Remains of this reptile have been found in the Oolite Beds of the Jurassic in England. It was a herbivorous quadruped.

CETINJE, the former capital of Montenegro, in a valley 2000 ft. high; now in Jugoslavia.

CETTE, a seaport, trading, and manufacturing town, on a tongue of land between the lagoon of Thau and the Mediterranean, 23 m. SW. of Montpellier, with a large safe harbourage.

CEUTA, a port opposite Gibraltar belonging to Spain, on the coast of Morocco, guarded by a fort on one of the Pillars of Hercules, overlooking it; of importance as a military and convict station.

CEVENNES, a range of low mountains on the eastern edge of the central plateau of France, separating the basin of the Rhône from those of the Loire and Garonne; average height from 3000 to 4000 ft.; the chief scene of the dragnonnades against the Huguenots under Louis XIV.

CEYLON, a pear-shaped island about the size of Scotland, separated from India, to which it geographically belongs, and SE. of which it lies, by Palk Strait, 32 m. broad; comprises a lofty, central tableland with numerous peaks, the highest Talagalla, 8000 ft., and a broad border of well-watered plains. It was an ancient centre of civilisation; the soil is everywhere fertile; the climate is hot, but more equable than on the mainland; the chief products are tea, cinnamon, and tobacco; the forests yield satin-wood, ebony, &c.; the coconut palm abounds; there are extensive deposits of iron, anthracite, and plumbago; precious stones, sapphires, rubies, amethysts, &c., are in considerable quantities; the pearl fisheries are a valuable government monopoly. The chief exports are tea, rice, cotton goods, and coal. Two-thirds of the people are Singhalese and Buddhists; there are 6000 Europeans. The island is a crown colony, the largest in the British Empire, administered by a governor with executive and legislative councils; the capital and chief port is Colombo.

CEZANNE, PAUL, French painter. One of the pioneers of Impressionism, his work was for long rejected by the Salon, though his pictures are to be found in the Louvre. Landscapes and flowers were his forte (1839-1906).

CHABAS, FRANÇOIS, a French Egyptologist, born in Briançon; his works have contributed much to elucidate the history of the invasion and repulsion of the Hyksos in Egypt (1817-1882).

CHABOT, a member of the National Convention of France, a "disfranchised Capuchin," adjoined "Heaven," amid enthusiasm, "that at least they may have done with kings"; guillotined (1759-1794).

CHACKTAW INDIANS. See CHOCKTAW.

CHAD, LAKE, a shallow lake in the Sahara, of varied extent according as the season is dry or rainy; at its largest covering an area as large as England, and abounding in hippopotamuses, rhinoceroses, &c., as well as waterfowl and fish.

CHADBAND, REV. MR., a character in Dickens' "Black House."

CHADWICK, SIR EDWIN, an English social reformer, born in Manchester, associated with measures bearing upon sanitation and the improvement of the poor-laws, and connected with the administration of them (1801-1890).

CHERONEA, a town in Boeotia, where Philip of Macedon defeated the Athenians and extinguished the liberties of Greece.

CHALAIS, COUNT DE, a favourite of Louis XIII., accused of conspiracy against Richelieu, arrested at Nantes, and beheaded (1599-1626).

CHALCEDON, a city of Bithynia, at the entrance of the Thracian Bosphorus, where the fourth Council of the Church was held in 451, which defined the orthodox conception of Christ as God-man.

CHALCEDONY, rock found in the form of pebbles composed of concentric layers of silica, often of different colours. The centre is sometimes filled with a crystalline mass of quartz. They have been formed by deposition in the cavities of rocks by percolating water.

CHALCEDICE, the three-fingered peninsula of the Balkan territory stretching into the Egean Sea.

CHALCIS, the ancient capital of Eubœa or Negropont.

CHALDEA, ancient name for Babylonia.

CHALAPINE, THEODORE IVANOVITCH, Russian singer. Brought up a shoemaker, he gained a place in a cathedral choir. In 1890 he joined an opera company as a bass and later was in the State operas of Moscow and St. Petersburg, since when he has appeared in several capitals in Europe and America (1873-).

CHALLER, a Piedmontese, head of the party of the Mountain at Lyons; his execution the signal for an insurrection at Lyons against the Convention (1747-1793).

CHALLENGER EXPEDITION, a scientific expedition sent out by the British Government in the Challenger in 1872 in the interest of science, and under the management of scientific experts, to various stations over the globe, to explore the ocean, and ascertain all manner of facts regarding its open to observation, an expedition which concluded its operations in 1876, of which as many as 50 volumes of reports have been compiled.

CHALLONER, RICHARD, a Roman Catholic bishop, born at Lewes; a zealous Catholic, author of "Garden of the Soul," a popular devotional book, as well as several controversial works (1661-1781).

CHALMERS, ALEXANDER, a miscellaneous writer, born at Aberdeen; settled in London; edited the "British Essayists" in 45 vols., and author of "A General Biographical Dictionary" (1759-1834).

CHALMERS, GEORGE, an English publicist, born at Pochabers, author of "An Account, Historical and Topographical, of North Britain" (1742-1825).

CHALMERS, JAMES, Scottish missionary and explorer; visited Karatonga and New Guinea, in the latter island contributing greatly to the establishment of the British protectorate; killed by cannibals (1841-1901).

CHALMERS, THOMAS, a celebrated Scottish ecclesiastic and pulpit orator, born at Anstruther, Fife; he was not much of a scholar or even a theologian, but a great man, and a great force in the religious life of his country; though the first pulpit-orator of his day, and though he wrote largely as well as eloquently, he left no writings worthy of him except the "Astronomical Discourses" perhaps, to perpetuate his memory; he was distinguished for his practical sagacity, and was an expert at organisation (1780-1847).

CHALONS-SUR-MARNE, capital of the French dep. of Marne, 100 m. E. of Paris, where Attila was defeated by the Romans and Goths in 451; Napoleon III. formed a camp near it for the training of troops.

CHALONS-SUR-SAÔNE, a trading centre some 80 m. N. of Lyons; manufactures machinery, glass, paper, and chemicals.

CHÂLUS, chief town of the French dep. of Haute-Vienne, where Richard Cœur de Lion was mortally wounded in 1199 by an arrow.

CHAM, the pseudonym of the French caricaturist Amédée de Noé, famous for his humorous delineations of Parisian life (1819-1879).

CHAMBER OF DEPUTIES, a French legislative assembly, elected now by universal suffrage.

CHAMBERLAIN, RT. HON. ARTHUR NEVILLE, British politician. Second son of Joseph Chamberlain, he spent his early life in municipal politics in Birmingham, where he was Lord Mayor. In 1922 he became Postmaster-General under Bonar Law, was Minister of Health in 1923, and succeeded Baldwin as Chancellor of the Exchequer the same year. In Baldwin's second Government of 1924-1929 he was Minister of Health and fostered the Daring Bill (1889-).

CHAMBERLAIN, RT. HON. JOSEPH, born in London, connected as a business man with Birmingham; after serving the latter city in a municipal capacity, was elected the parliamentary representative in 1874; became President of the Board of Trade under Mr. Gladstone in 1880, and chief promoter of the Bankruptcy Bill; broke with Mr. Gladstone on his Home Rule measure for Ireland, and joined the Liberal-Unionists; distinguished himself under Lord Salisbury as Colonial Secretary. It was he who raised the tariff reform issue in 1905 which led to the defeat of the Conservative party (1836-1914).

CHAMBERLAIN, RT. HON. SIR JOSEPH AUSTEN, British politician. Elder son of Joseph Chamberlain, he entered Parliament as a Liberal-Unionist in 1892, and became a Lord of the Admiralty three years later, being made Chancellor of the Exchequer in 1903. On the fall of the Unionists in 1905 he

- remained out of office till 1916, when he joined the Coalition Government as Secretary for India. In 1919 he was again Chancellor of the Exchequer; from 1921 to the fall of the Coalition he was leader of the House; and in 1924 he joined Baldwin's Government as Foreign Secretary, holding the post till the Government fell in 1929 (1868-).
- CHAMBERS, EPHRAIM, an English writer, born in Kendal, author of a cyclopaedia which bears his name, and which formed the basis of subsequent ones, as Johnson confessed it did of his Dictionary (1680-1760).
- CHAMBERS, GEORGE, an English marine painter, born at Whitby (1803-1840).
- CHAMBERS, ROBERT, brother of the succeeding and in the same line of life, but of superior accomplishments, especially literary and scientific, which served him well in editing the publications issued by the firm; was the author of a great many works of a historical, biographical, and scientific, as well as literary interest; wrote the "Vestiges of Creation," a book on evolutionary lines which made no small stir at the time of publication, 1844, and for a time afterwards, the authorship of which he was slow to own (1802-1871).
- CHAMBERS, WILLIAM, born at Peebles; apprenticed to a bookseller in Edinburgh, and commenced business on his own account in a small way; edited with his brother the "Gazetteer of Scotland"; started, in 1832, Chambers's Edinburgh Journal to meet a demand of the time for popular instruction; in company with his brother founded a printing and publishing establishment; was a distinguished Edinburgh citizen, and did much for the expansion and improvement of the city (1800-1883).
- CHAMBERS, SIR WILLIAM, architect, born at Stockholm, of Scottish origin; architect of Somerset House; was of the Johnson circle of wits (1726-1798).
- CHAMBERY, chief town of dep. of Savoy, in a beautiful district; is the ancient capital, and contains the castle, of the dukes of Savoy; manufactures cloth, wines, soap, and textile fabrics; is also a summer resort.
- CHAMBEZE, a head-stream of the Congo, N. of Lake Nyassa.
- CHAMBORD, spacious château in the dep. of Loire-et-Cher, France, built by Francis I.; after being long a residence for royalty and people of distinction, was presented in 1821 to the Duc de Bordeaux, the Comte de Chambord.
- CHAMBORD, COMTE DE, Duc de Bordeaux, son of the Duc de Berri and grandson of Charles X., born in Paris; exiled in 1830, he sought refuge in England with his grandfather; his father and grandfather being dead, the monarchical party resolved to attempt a restoration in his behalf in 1872, but he refused to adopt the tricolour flag of the Revolution, and the scheme was abandoned, a like opportunity offering itself twice before being let slip; died at Froehdorf, in Austria, without issue (1820-1883).
- CHAMBER ARDENNE, a name given to certain courts of justice established to try certain cases that required to be sharply dealt with; they were held at night, and even when held in the daytime, with lighted torches; a court of the kind was instituted for trial of the Huguenots in 1680, and again in 1680 and 1716.
- CHAMFORT, NICOLAS, French wit and littérateur, born in Auvergne; took to the Revolution, but offended the leaders, and, being threatened with arrest, committed suicide; he was a born cynic, and was famous for his keen insight into human nature and his sharp criticisms of it, summed up in a collection of maxims he left, as well as for his anecdotes in incisive portraiture of character (1741-1794).
- CHAMILLARD, Minister of Finance and of War under Louis XIV.; "distinguished himself by his incapacity" (1651-1721).
- CHAMBERG, ADELBERT VON, a German naturalist and littérateur, born in France, but educated in Berlin; is famous for his poetical productions, but especially as the author of "Peter Schlemihl" the man who lost his shadow, which has been translated into nearly every European language; he wrote several works on natural history (1781-1838).
- CHAMMOUNI, or CHAMONIX, a village in the dep. of Haute-Savoie, 33 m. SE. of Geneva, in a valley forming the upper basin of the Arve, famous for its beauty and for its glaciers; it is from this point that the ascent of Mont Blanc is usually made.
- CHAMOUSSET, a French philanthropist, born in Paris; the originator of mutual benefit societies (1717-1778).
- CHAMPAGNE, an ancient province of France, 180 m. long by 150 broad, annexed to the Crown, 1286, and including the depts. of Aube, Haute-Marne, Marne, and Ardennes; the province where the wine of the name is principally manufactured.
- CHAMP-DE-MARS, a large space of ground in Paris, between the front of the Ecole Militaire and the left bank of the Seine; the scene of the Federation Fête, July 14, 1790.
- CHAMPLAIN, a beautiful lake between the States of New York and Vermont; it is 100 m. in length, and from 1 m. at its S. end to 14 m. at its N. end broad.
- CHAMPLAIN, SAMUEL DE, a French navigator, born at Brouage, in Saintonge, was founder of Quebec, and French Governor of Canada; wrote an account of his voyages (1607-1685).
- CHAMPOLLION, JEAN FRANÇOIS, a celebrated French Egyptologist, born in Figeac, dep. of Lot; early gave himself to the study of Coptic and Egyptian antiquities; was the first to decipher the hieroglyphics of ancient Egypt, a great discovery; conducted a scientific expedition to Egypt in 1828, and returned in 1830 with the fruits of his researches; a chair of Egyptology was in consequence instituted in the College of France, and he was installed as the first professor; his writings on the science, of which he laid the foundation, are numerous (1790-1832).
- CHAMPS-ELYSEES, a Parisian promenade between the Place de la Concorde and the Arc de Triomphe.
- CHANAË, a town of the sanjak of Bigha, Asia Minor, on the Dardanelles. It was unsuccessfully attacked by the Allied fleet in March, 1915, and was occupied in 1922 by the British to check the advance of the Kemalist forces, the incident nearly resulting in war, a catastrophe prevented by the tact of Sir Charles Harington, who commanded the troops.
- CHANCELLOR, RICHARD, an English seaman, who, voyaging in northern parts, arrived in the White Sea, and travelled to Moscow, where he concluded a commercial treaty with Russia on behalf of an English company; wrote an interesting account of his visit; after a second voyage, in which he visited Moscow, was wrecked on the coast of Aberdeenshire in 1556.
- CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER, THE, the member of the Cabinet in charge of the nation's finances, to whom is entrusted the task of introducing an annual budget. The office dates from 1221.
- CHANDERNAGORE, a small town and territory on the Hooghly, 22 m. N. of Calcutta, belonging to France.
- CHANDLER, RICHARD, a learned Hellenistic archaeologist, born in Hants; travelled in Asia Minor and Greece, together with two artists, to examine and describe the antiquities; the materials collected were published in his "Ionian Antiquities," "Travels in Asia Minor," &c. (1738-1810).
- CHANDOS, an English title inherited by the Grenville family, of Norman origin.
- CHANDOS, JOHN, a celebrated English general in the 14th century; was present at Crécy, governor of English provinces in France ceded by Treaty of Bretigny; defeated and took prisoner Du Guesclin of Aragon; served under the Black Prince, and was killed near Poitiers, 1369.
- CHANGARNIER, NICOLAS, French general, born at Autun; distinguished himself in Algeria, was exiled after the coup-d'état, returned in 1870, served in the Franco-German war; surrendered at Metz, at the close of the war came back and assisted in reorganising the army (1793-1877).
- CHANNEL, ENGLISH, an arm of the Atlantic between France and England, 280 m. long and 100 m. wide at the mouth; the French call it La Manche (the sleeve) from its shape.
- CHANNEL FERRIES have been in operation for years: among others there is that from Copenhagen to Malmö, 19 miles; another is from Warnemünde to Gdynia, 26 m.; there is one across Chesapeake Bay of 38 m.; during the Great War a regular train ferry service for military purposes was run by the Inland Waterways Section of the Royal Engineers from Richborough to Dunkirk, 54 m., and Calais, 35 m.; and the same corps also ran another ferry from Southampton to Dunkirk, 130 m., and afterwards from Southampton to Calais, but in each case Dunkirk had to be abandoned as being too exposed to enemy action. The ferry, with the boats used at Richborough and Southampton, is now in operation between Harwich and Zebruges.

CHANNEL ISLANDS, a group of small islands off the NW. coast of France, of which the largest are Jersey, Guernsey, Alderney, and Sark; formerly part of the Duchy of Normandy, and now all that remains to Britain of her French dominions, being subject to her since 1066; have a delightful climate, mild and bright, and varied and beautiful scenery; the soil is fertile; flowers and fruit are grown for export to Britain, also early potatoes for the London market; Guernsey bears and Jersey cows are famous; valuable quarries of granite are wrought; the language is Norman-French.

CHANNEL SWIMMING. The English Channel was first swum from England to France in August, 1875, by Capt. Matthew Webb, who took 21 hrs. 45 mins. It was not till 1911 that the feat was repeated, and not till 1923 that Webb's time was beaten by S. Tiraboschi, who swam from France to England in 16 hrs. 53 mins., the first crossing from France. Gertrude Ederle, of America, was the first woman to accomplish the swim, in 1926.

CHANNING, WILLIAM ELLERY, a Unitarian preacher and miscellaneous writer, born at Newport, Rhode Island, U.S.; a man of the most liberal sentiments, who shrank from being classed with any sect; ranked high in point of moral character; was a vigorous thinker and eloquent with the pen (1780-1842).

CHANSONS DE GESTES (i.e. Songs of Deeds), poems of a narrative kind much in favour in the Middle Ages, relating in a legendary style the history and exploits of some famous hero, such as the "Chanson de Roland," ascribed to Théroutle, a trouvère of the 9th century.

CHANTREY, SIR FRANCIS, an English sculptor, born in Derbyshire; was apprenticed to a carver and glazier in Sheffield; displayed a talent for drawing and modelling; received a commission to execute a marble bust for the parish church, which was so successful as to procure him further commissions; executed four colossal busts of admirals for Greenwich Hospital; being expert at portraiture, his busts were likenesses; executed busts of many of the most illustrious men of the time, among them of Sir Walter Scott, Wordsworth, Southey, and Wellington, as well as of royal heads; made a large fortune, and left it (the Chantrey Bequest) for the encouragement of art (1781-1842).

CHANZY, ANTOINE EUGÈNE, French general, born at Nouart, Ardennes; served in Algeria; commanded the army of the Loire in 1870-1871; distinguished himself by his brilliant retreat from Mans to Laval; was afterwards Governor-General in Algeria (1823-1869).

CHAPBOOKS, a cheap issue of pamphlets in the early part of the 17th century, containing popular romances and legends, or devoted to astrology, palmistry, and the interpretation of dreams; similar publications appeared in France and Germany.

CHAPELAIN, JEAN, a French poet, protégé of Richelieu, born at Paris; composed a pretentious poem on Joan of Arc, entitled "Pucelle," which was laughed out of existence on the appearance of the first half, consisting of only 12 of the 24 books promised; the remainder of the work was not issued until 1882, and did not add materially to the poet's reputation (1595-1674).

CHAPLIN, CHARLES, film comedian. Born in London, he emigrated to America, and after a time on the stage took to film work in the early days of the art. His comic genius gave the cinema its first wide appeal and earned him a fortune (1889-). CHAPMAN, GEORGE, English dramatic poet, born at Hitholin, Hertfordshire; wrote numerous plays, both in tragedy and comedy, as well as poems, of unequal merit, but his great achievement, and the one on which his fame rests, is his translation into verse of the works of Homer, which, though not always true to the letter, is instinct with somewhat of the freshness and fire of the original; his translation is reckoned the best yet done into English verse, and the best rendering into verse of any classic, ancient or modern. It was the poem that inspired Keats' sonnet "On First Looking into Chapman's Homer" (1850-1894).

CHAPPELL, WILLIAM, musical amateur, collector and editor of old English airs, and contributor to the history of English national music; was one of the founders of the Musical Antiquarian Society, and the Percy Society (1800-1888).

CHAPTAL, JEAN ANTOINE, COMTE DE CHANTELOUP, a distinguished French chemist and statesman, born at Nogaret, Lozère; author of inventions in connection with the manufacture of alum and saltpetre, the bleaching and the dyeing of cotton; held office under Napoleon, and rendered great service to the arts and manufactures of his country (1756-1832).

CHARCOT, JEAN MARTIN, a French pathologist; made a special study of nervous diseases, including hypnotism, and was eminent for his works in connection therewith (1825-1893).

CHARDIN, SIR JOHN, traveller, born in Paris; author of "Travels in India and Persia," valuable for their accuracy (1648-1713).

CHARENTE, a dep. of France, W. of the Gironde, capital, Angoulême; with vast chestnut forests; produces wines, mostly distilled into brandy.

CHARENTE-INFÉRIEURE, a maritime dep. of France, W. of the former; includes the islands of Ré, Oléron, Aix, and Madame; capital, La Rochelle.

CHARENTE DE LA CONTRÉE, FRANÇOIS ATHANASE, the leader of the insurrection in La Vendée; active in prosecuting guerilla warfare against the Convention; defeated by General Hoche, captured and executed (1763-1796).

CHARITY COMMISSIONERS, a public body set up in 1858 to supervise charitable trusts and endowed schools, most of its work in connection with the latter being transferred to the Board of Education in 1899.

CHARLEMAGNE, Charles or Karl the Great, the first Carolingian king of the Franks, son and successor of Pepin le Bref (the Short); became sole ruler on the death of his brother Carloman in 771; he subjugated by his arms the southern Gauls, the Lombards, the Saxons, and the Avars, and conducted a successful expedition against the Moors in Spain, with the result that his kingdom extended from the Ebro to the Elbe; having passed over into Italy in support of the Pope, he was on Christmas Day, 800, crowned Emperor of the West, after which he devoted himself to the welfare of his subjects, and proved himself as great in legislation as in arms; enacted laws for the empire called capitularies, reformed the judicial administration, patronised letters, and established schools; kept himself in touch with everything over his vast domain; he died and was buried at Aix-la-Chapelle (742-814).

CHARLEROI, a manufacturing town in Hainault, Belgium, 35 m. SE. of Brussels; a centre of the coal and iron industries.

CHARLES II., surnamed THE BALD, son of Louis "le Débonnaire"; after conquering his brother Lothaire at Fontenoy in 841, became by the treaty of Verdun king of France, 843; was unable to defend his kingdom against the Normans; went to Italy, and had himself crowned emperor at Rome (823-877).

CHARLES III., surnamed THE SIMPLE; became king of France in 893; his reign one long struggle against the Normans, which ended by conceding Normandy to Rollo; was conquered by Hugh Capet, a rival for the crown, at Soissons, and dethroned in 922; died in captivity (879-929).

CHARLES IV., THE FAIR, third son of Philip the Fair, king of France from 1322 to 1328; lost to France Guenne, which was taken from him by the English; was the last of the Capets (1294-1328).

CHARLES V., THE WISE, son of John II., king of France from 1361 to 1380; recovered from the English almost all the provinces they had conquered, successes due to his own prudent policy, and especially the heroism of Du Guesclin, De Clisson, and De Boucicaut; France owed to him important financial reforms, the extension of privileges to the universities, and the establishment of the first national library, into which were gathered together thousands of MSS.; the Bastille was founded in his reign (1337-1380).

CHARLES VI., THE WELL-BELOVED, king of France from 1380 to 1422, was son and successor of Charles V.; began his reign under the guardianship of his uncles, who rified the public treasury and provoked rebellion by their exactions; gained a victory at Rosebach over the Flemings, then in revolt, and a little after dismissed his uncles and installed in their stead the wise councillors of his father, whose sage, upright, and benevolent administration procured for him the title of "Well-Beloved," a state of things, however, which did not last long, for the harassments he had been subjected to drove him insane, and his kingdom, torn in pieces by rival factions, was given over to anarchy, and fell by the treaty of Troyes almost entirely into the hands of the English conquerors at Agincourt (1367-1422).

CHARLES VII., THE VICTORIOUS, son of Charles VI., became king of France in 1422; at his accession the English held possession of almost the whole country, and he indolently made no attempt to expel them, but gave himself up to effeminate indulgences; was about to lose his whole patrimony when the patriotism of the nation woke up at the enthusiastic summons of Joan of Arc; her triumphs and those of her associates weakened the English domination, and even after her death the impulse she gave continued to work, till at the end of 20 years the English were driven out of France, and lost all they held in it except Calais, Havre, and Guines Castle (1403-1461).

CHARLES VIII., king of France, son and successor of Louis XI.; during his minority the kingdom suffered from the turbulence and revolts of the nobles; married Anne of Brittany, heiress of the rich duchy of that name, by which it was added to the crown of France; sacrificed the interests of his kingdom by war with Italy to support the claims of French princes to the throne of Naples, which, though successful from a military point of view, proved politically unfruitful (1470-1498).

CHARLES IX., second son of Henry II. and Catharine de' Medici, became King of France in 1560; the civil wars of the Huguenots and Catholics fill up this reign; the first was concluded by the peace of Amboise, during which Francis of Guise was assassinated; the second concluded by the peace of Longjumeau, during which Montmorency fell; the third concluded by the peace of St. Germain, in which Condé and Moncontour fell, which peace was broken by the massacre of St. Bartholomew, into the perpetration of which Charles was inveigled by his mother and the Guises; incensed at this outrage, the Huguenots commenced a fourth war, and were undertaking a fifth when Charles died, haunted by remorse (1560-1574).

CHARLES X., brother of Louis XVI. and Louis XVIII., the latter of whom he succeeded on the throne of France in 1824; was unpopular in France as Duc d'Angoulême in the time of the Revolution, and had to flee the country at the outbreak of it, and stayed for some time as an exile in Holyrood, Edinburgh; on his accession he became no less unpopular from his adherence to the old régime; at an evil hour in 1830 he issued ordinances in defiance of all freedom, and after an insurrection of three days in the July of that year had again to flee; abdicating in favour of his son, found refuge for a time again in Holyrood, and died at Görtz in his eightieth year (1757-1836).

CHARLES V. (I. of Spain), emperor of Germany, son of Philip, Archduke of Austria, born at Ghent; became king of Spain in 1516, on the death of his maternal grandfather Ferdinand, and emperor of Germany in 1519 on the death of his paternal grandfather Maximilian I., being crowned at Aix-la-Chapelle in 1520; reigned during one of the most important periods in the history of Europe; the events of the reign are too numerous to detail; it is enough to mention his rivalry with Francis I. of France, his contention as a Catholic with the Protestants of Germany, the invasions of the Turks, revolts in Spain, and expeditions against the pirates of the Mediterranean; the ambition of his life was the suppression of the Protestant Reformation and the succession of his son Philip to the imperial crown; he failed in both; resigned in favour of his son, and retired into the monastery of St. Yuste, in Estremadura, near which he built a magnificent retreat, where, it is understood, notwithstanding his apparent retirement, he continued to take interest in political affairs and to advise in the management of them (1500-1558).

CHARLES VI., emperor of Germany from 1711 to 1740, as well as king of Spain from 1703, was son of the Emperor Leopold I., and father of Maria Theresa (1685-1740).

CHARLES XII., king of Sweden, son of Charles IX., a warlike prince; ascended the throne at the age of 15; he had to cope with Denmark, Russia, and Poland combined against him; foiled the Danes at Copenhagen, the Russians at Narva, and Augustus II. of Poland at Riga; trapped in Russia, and cooped up to spend a winter there, he was, in spring 1709, attacked by Peter the Great at Pultowa and defeated, so that he had to take refuge with the Turks at Bender; here he was attacked, captured, and conveyed to Demotica, but, escaping, he found his way miraculously back to Sweden, and making peace with the Czar, commenced an attack on Norway, but was killed by a musket-shot at the siege of Friedrichshall (1682-1718).

CHARLES I., king of England, third son of James I., born at Dunfermline; falling in his suit for the Infanta of Spain, married Henrietta Maria, a French princess, a devoted Catholic, who had great influence over him, but not for good; had for public advisers Strafford and Laud, who cherished in him ideas of absolute power adverse to the liberty of the subject; acting on these ideas brought him into collision with the Parliament, and provoked a civil war; himself the first to throw down the gauntlet by raising the royal standard at Nottingham; in the end he surrendered himself to the Scots army at Newark, who delivered him to the Parliament; was tried as a traitor to his country, condemned to death, and beheaded, January 30, at Whitehall (1600-1649).

CHARLES II., king of England, son of Charles I., born at St. James's Palace, London; was at The Hague, in Holland, when his father was beheaded; assumed the royal title; was proclaimed King by the Scots; landed in Scotland, and was crowned at Scoon; marching into England, was defeated by Cromwell at Worcester, September 3, 1651; fled to France; by the policy of General Monk, after Cromwell's death, was restored to his crown and kingdom in 1660, an event known as the Restoration; he was an easy-going man, and is known in history as the "Merry Monarch"; his reign was an inglorious one for England, though it is distinguished by the passing of the Habeas Corpus Act, one of the great bulwarks of English liberty next to the Magna Charta (1630-1685).

CHARLES-JACQUES ALEXANDRE CÉSAR, a French physicist, born at Beaugency; was the first to apply hydrogen to the inflation of balloons, and first stated the law of expansion of gases known as Charles' law (1746-1823).

CHARLES, ARCHDUKE, of Austria, son of the Emperor Leopold II. and younger brother of Francis II., one of the ablest generals of Austria in the wars against the French Republic and the Empire; lost the battle of Wagram, after which, being wounded, he retired into private life (1771-1847).

CHARLES ALBERT, king of Sardinia, succeeded his brother, Charles Felix, in 1831; conceived a design to emancipate and unite Italy; in the pursuit of this object he declared war against Austria; though at first successful, was defeated at Novara, and to save his kingdom, was compelled to resign in favour of his son Victor Emmanuel: retired to Oporto, and died of a broken heart (1798-1849).

CHARLES EDWARD, the Young Pretender, grandson of James II. of England, born at Rome, landed in Scotland (1745); issued a manifesto in assertion of his father's claims; had his father proclaimed king at Edinburgh; attacked and defeated General Cope at Prestonpans; marched at the head of his adherents into England as far as Derby; returned, and defeated the king's force at Falkirk, but retired before the Duke of Cumberland, who dispersed his army at Culloden; wandered about thereafter in disguise; escaped to France, and died at Florence (1720-1788).

CHARLES MARTEL (i.e. "Charles the Hammer"), son of Pépin d'Héristal and grandfather of Charlemagne; became mayor of the Palace, and, as such, ruler of the Franks; notable chiefly for his signal victory over the Saracens at Tours in 732, whereby the tide of Mussulman invasion was once for all rolled back and the Christianisation of Europe assured; no greater service was ever rendered to Europe by any other fighting man (688-741).

CHARLES OF ANJOU, brother of St. Louis, king of Naples; lost Sicily after the Sicilian Vespers (1226-1284).

CHARLES OF VALOIS, third son of Philip the Bold, one of the greatest captains of his age (1270-1324).

CHARLES THE RASH, last Duke of Burgundy, son of Philip the Good, born at Dijon; enemy of Louis XI. of France, his feudal superior; was ambitious to free the duchy from dependence on France, and to restore it as a kingdom, and by daring enterprises tried hard to achieve this; on the failure of the last effort, at Nancy, was found lying dead on the field (1433-1477).

CHARLES'S WAIN, the constellation of Ursa Major, a wagon without a wagoner.

CHARLESTON, the largest city in S. Carolina, and the chief commercial city; also a town in Western Virginia, U.S., with a spacious landlocked harbour; is the chief outlet for the cotton and rice of the district, and has a large cotton trade.

CHARLET, NICOLAS TOUSSAINT, a designer and painter, born in Paris; famous for his sketches of military subjects and country life, in which he displayed not a little humour (1792-1846).

CHARLEVILLE, a manufacturing and trading town in the dep. of Ardennes, France; exports iron, coal, wines, and manufactures hardware and beer.

CHARLEVILLE, PIERRE FRANÇOIS XAVIER DE, a Jesuit and traveller, born at St. Quentin, explored the St. Lawrence and the Mississippi (1682-1761).

CHARLOTTE, PRINCESS, daughter and only child of George IV. of England, married to Prince Leopold of Saxe-Coburg, afterwards king of Belgium; died after giving birth to a still-born boy, to the great grief of the whole nation (1796-1817).

CHARLOTTE ELIZABETH OF BAVARIA, second wife of the Duke of Orleans, brother of Louis XIV., called the Princess Palatine (1652-1722).

CHARLOTTENBURG, a town on the Spree, 3 m. W. of Berlin, with a palace, the favourite residence of Sophie Charlotte, the grandmother of Frederick the Great, and so named by her husband Frederick I. after her death; contains the burial-place of William I., German emperor.

CHARLOTTETOWN, the capital of Prince Edward Island.

CHARMETTES, a picturesque hamlet near Chambéry, a favourite retreat of Rousseau.

CHARNAY, a French traveller; a writer on the ancient civilisation of Mexico, which he made a special study (1822-1915).

CHARWOOD, BARON (G. R. Benson), British author. Born 1892 to 1895 M.P. for Woodstock; he is best known for his biography of Abraham Lincoln (1864-).

CHARON, in the Greek mythology the ferryman of the ghosts of the dead over the Styx into Hades, a grim old figure with a mean dress and a dirty beard, peremptory in exacting from the ghosts he ferried over the obols allowed him for passage-money.

CHARONDAS, a Sicilian lawyer, disciple of Pythagoras; is said to have killed himself when he found he had involuntarily broken one of his own laws (600 B.C.).

CHARRON, PIERRE, a French moralist and theologian, as well as pulpit orator, born in Paris; author of "Les Trois Vérités," the unity of God, Christianity the sole religion, and Catholicism the only Christianity; and of a sceptical treatise "De la Sagesse"; a friend and disciple of Montaigne, but bolder as more dogmatic, with less bonhomie and originality, and much of a cynic withal (1641-1608).

CHARTERHOUSE, a large school, originally a Cistercian monastery, and for a time a residence of the Dukes of Norfolk. The school moved from London to Godalming in 1872, and Merchant Taylors' school took over its buildings.

CHARTIER, ALAIN, an early scholarly French poet and prose writer of note, born at Bayeux; secretary to Charles V., VI., and VII. of France; Margaret, daughter of James I. of Scotland and wife of Louis XI., herself a poetess, once kissed him as he lay asleep for the pleasure his poems gave her; was a patriot, and wrote as one (1390-1441).

CHARTISM, a movement of the working-classes of Great Britain for greater political power than was conceded to them by the Reform Bill of 1832, which found expression in a document called the "People's Charter," drawn up in 1838, embracing six "points," as they were called, viz., Manhood Suffrage, Equal Electoral Districts, Vote by Ballot, Annual Parliaments, Abolition of a Property Qualification in the Parliamentary Representation, and Payment of Members of Parliament, all of which took the form of a petition presented to the House of Commons in 1839, and signed by 1,380,000 persons. The refusal of the petition gave rise to great agitation over the country, which gradually died out in 1848.

CHARTRES, the capital of the French dep. of Eure-et-Lois, 55 m. SW. of Paris; gave title of Duke to the eldest of the Orleansist Bourbons.

CHARTREUSE, LA GRANDE, a Cistercian monastery founded by St. Bruno in 1134 in the dep. of Isère, 14 m. NE. of Grenoble; famous as the original place of manufacture of the Chartreuse liqueur, held in much repute; it was honoured by a visit of Queen Victoria in 1897.

CHARYBDIS. See SCYLLA.

CHASE, SALMON PORTLAND, Chief Justice of the United States; a great anti-slavery advocate and leader of the Free-Soil party; introduced the "greenback" note; aimed at the Presidency, but failed (1808-1873).

CHASIDIM, a party among the Jews identified with the Pharisees, their supreme concern the observance of their religion in its purity.

CHARLES, PHILARÈTE, a French littérateur, born near Chartres, a disciple of Rousseau; lived several years in England, and wrote extensively on English subjects, Shakespeare, Mary Stuart, Charles I., and Cromwell among the chief (1790-1873).

CHASSE, DAVID HENDRIK, BARON, a Dutch soldier; served France under Napoleon, who called him "Général Balonnette," from his zealous use of the bayonet; fought at Waterloo on the opposite side; as governor of Antwerp, gallantly defended its citadel in 1832 against a French and Belgian force twelve times larger than his own (1766-1849).

CHASTELARD, PIERRE DE BOSCOVEL DE, grandson of Bayard; conceived an insane passion for Queen Mary, whom he accompanied to Scotland; was surprised in her bedchamber, and condemned to death, it being his second offence (1540-1562).

CHAT MOSS, a large bog in Lancashire, 7 m. W. of Manchester, which is partly reclaimed and partly, through the ingenuity of George Stephenson, traversed by the Liverpool and Manchester Railway.

CHATEAUBRIAND, FRANÇOIS RENÉ, VICOMTE DE, eminent French littérateur, born in St. Malo, younger son of a noble family of Brittany; travelled to N. America in 1791; returned to France on the arrest of Louis XVI., and joined the Emigrants (i.e.) at Coblenz; was wounded at the siege of Thionville, and escaped to England; wrote an "Essay on Revolutions Ancient and Modern," conceived on liberal lines; was tempted back again to France in 1800; wrote "Atala," a story of life in the wilds of America, which was in 1802 followed by his most famous work, "Génie du Christianisme"; entered the service of Napoleon, but withdrew on the murder of the Duc d'Enghien; though not obliged to leave France, made a journey to the East, the fruit of which was his "Itinéraire de Paris à Jérusalem"; hailed with enthusiasm the restoration of the Bourbons in 1814; supported the Bourbon dynasty all through, though he wavered sometimes in the interest of liberty; withdrew from public life on the elevation of Louis Philippe to the throne; he was no thinker, but he was a fascinating writer and, as such, exercised no small influence on the French literature of his day; he lived in a transition period, and hovered between legitimism and liberty, the revolution and reaction, and belonged to the Romantic school of literature—was perhaps the father of it in France (1768-1848).

CHÂTELET, MARQUISE DU, a learned Frenchwoman, born at Paris, with whom Voltaire kept up an intimate acquaintance (1706-1749).

CHATELERAULT, a town in the dep. of Vienne, 24 m. N.E. of Poitiers; gave title to the Scottish regent, the Earl of Arran; manufactures cutlery and small-arms for the Government.

CHATHAM, a town in Kent, on the estuary of the Medway, a fortified naval arsenal; is connected with Rochester.

CHATHAM, WILLIAM PITT, EARL OF, a great British statesman and orator, born in Cornwall; determined opponent of Sir Robert Walpole; succeeded in driving him from power and at length installing himself in his place; had an eye to the greatness and glory of England, and summoned the English nation to look to its laurels; saw the French, the rivals of England, beaten back in the four quarters of the globe; driven at length from power himself, he still maintained a single regard for the honour of his country, and the last time his voice was heard in the Parliament of England was to protest against her degradation by an ignoble alliance with savages in the war with America; on this occasion he fell back ill into the arms of his friends, and died little more than a month after at Hayes; was buried in Westminster Abbey (1708-1778).

CHATHAM ISLANDS, a group of islands 360 m. E. of New Zealand, and politically connected with it; the chief industry is the rearing of sheep and cattle.

CHATHWORTH, the palatial seat of the Duke of Devonshire, in Derbyshire, 8 m. W. of Chesterfield, enclosed in a park, with gardens, 10 m. in circumference.

CHATTERTON, THOMAS, a poet of great promise, born at Bristol; passed off while but a boy as copies of ancient MSS., and particularly of poems which he ascribed to one Rowley, a monk of the 17th century, what were compositions of his own, exhibiting a genius of no small literary, not to say lyric, power; having vainly endeavoured to persuade any one of their genuineness, though he had hopes of the patronage of Horace Walpole, Earl of Orford, he left Bristol for London, and made vehement efforts with his pen to bespeak regard, but failed; grew desperate, and committed suicide at the early age of 18 (1762-1770).

CHAUER, GEOFFREY, the great early English poet, and father of English poetry, the son of a vintner and taverner, born probably in London, where he lived almost all his days; when a lad, served as page in the royal household; won the favour and patronage of the king, Edward III., and his son, John of Gaunt, who pensioned him; served in an expedition to France; was made prisoner, but ransomed by the king; was often employed on royal embassies, in particular to Italy; held responsible posts at home; was thus a man of the world as well as a man of letters; he comes first before us as a poet in 1360; his poetic powers developed gradually, and his best and ripest work, which occupied him at intervals from 1373 to 1400, is his "Canterbury Tales" (q.v.), characterised by an eminent critic as "the best example of English story-telling we possess"; besides which he wrote, among other compositions, "The Life of St. Cecilia," "Troilus and Cressida," the "House of Fame," and the "Legend of Good Women"; his influence on English literature has been compared with that of Dante on Italian, while his literary life has been divided into three periods—the French, the Italian, and the English, according as the spirit of it was derived from a foreign or a native source (1340-1400).

CHAUMETTE, PIERRE GASPARD, a violent member of the extreme party in the French Revolution, could "recognise the suspects from the very faces of them"; provoked the disgust of even Robespierre, and was arrested and guillotined (1793-1794).

CHAUTAUQUA, a summer resort on a lake of the name in the W. of New York State, centre of a novel institution, which prescribes a four years' course of private readings, and grants diplomas to those who anywhere achieve it.

CHAUVINISM, a name among the French for what is known as Jingoism among the English, i.e. an extravagant zeal for the glory of one's country or party, from one Chauvin, who made threatening displays of his devotion to Napoleon after his fall in 1815.

CHEDDAR, a village in Somersetshire, on the Mendip Hills, famous for its cheese.

CHEETAH, a species of leopard found in Asia and Africa, and capable of being trained for purposes of hunting.

CHEKE, SIR JOHN, a zealous Greek scholar, born at Cambridge, and first regius professor of Greek there; did much to revive in England an interest in Greek and Greek literature; was tutor to Edward VI., who granted him landed estates; favouring the cause of Lady Jane Grey on the accession of Mary, left the country, was seized, and sent back; for fear of the stake abjured Protestantism, but never forgave himself, and died soon after; he introduced the mode of pronouncing Greek formerly prevalent in England (1514-1557).

CHEKOV, ANTON, Russian dramatist and author. Born in Taganrog of peasant stock, he was educated at the local grammar school, became a pupil teacher at the age of 16, studied medicine at Moscow, and took to writing. His first play "Ivanov," was produced when he was 27, and was followed by "Uncle Vanya" and "The Seagull." Ill-health compelled him to settle in the Crimea, where he wrote "The Cherry Orchard" a few months before he died in Germany. He was buried in Moscow (1860-1904).

CHELLEAN, name given to the early part of the palaeolithic or old stone age, from Chelles, in France, where large numbers of the flint tools characteristic of this age have been found.

CHELMSFORD, the county town of Essex, on the Chelmer. It was the site of one of the earliest wireless stations.

CHEILONIA, a group of reptiles, the most important members being tortoises and turtles.

CHELSEA, a western suburb of London, on the N. of the Thames; famous for its hospital for old and disabled soldiers, and the place of residence of sundry literary celebrities, among others Sir Thomas More, Swift, Steele, and Carlyle.

CHELTONHAM, a healthy water-place and educational centre in Gloucestershire; first brought into repute as a place of fashionable resort by the visits of George III. to it; contains a well-equipped college, where a number of eminent men have been educated, and Cheltenham Ladies' College.

CHELYUSKIN, CAPK, in Siberia, the most northerly point in the Eastern hemisphere.

CHEMISTRY, the science concerned with the constitution of substances and the changes they undergo under the action of heat and solution or by reactions with other substances. The foundations of chemistry were laid by the alchemists of the Middle Ages. Early work was based on the theory of Phlogiston (q.v.) which was not overthrown till the end of the 18th century, when the work of Lavoisier, Priestley, and Dalton led the way to modern chemistry. In more modern times great advances have been made in chemical theory and practice, among the most important being the processes underlying the steel and dye industries, the synthesis of many substances found in living organisms, and the manufacture of explosives and artificial silk. The discovery of X-rays threw new light on the constitution of many substances. Chemistry is usually divided into (1) Inorganic, or the study of mineral materials; (2) Organic, originally the study of those substances found in living organisms but now taken to include all the compounds of carbon; (3) Physical, dealing with the nature of changes and based on the idea of energy. Biochemistry is the branch dealing with chemical processes in living plants and animals.

CHEMNITZ, a manufacturing town in Saxony, called the "Saxon Manchester," at the foot of the Erzgebirge in a rich mineral district; manufactures cottons, woollens, silks, machinery, &c.

CHEMNITZ, MARTIN, an eminent Lutheran theologian, born in Brandenburg, a disciple of Melancthon; author of "Loci Theologici," a system of theology; took a leading part in procuring the adoption of the "Formula of Concord"; his chief work "Examen Concilii Tridentini" (1622-1686).

CHEMOCH, the national god of the Moabites, akin to Moloch, and their stay in battle, but an abomination to the children of Jehovah.

CHEMULPO, a town on the W. coast of Korea; a thriving town since it became a treaty-port in 1883.

CHEMAP, an affluent on the left bank of the Indus, one of the five rivers, and the largest, which give name to the Punjab; is 750 m. long.

CHEMERY, THOMAS, a journalist; became editor of the Times; was distinguished for his knowledge of Arabic and Hebrew, and was one of the Old Testament revisers (1826-1884).

CHENIER, MARIE-ANDRÉ, DE, French poet, greatest in the 18th century, born at Constantinople; author of odes, idylls, and elegies, which place him high among French poets; took part in the Revolution as a lover of order as well as of liberty; offended Robespierre, and was guillotined a few days before the fall of the latter; as a poet he was distinguished for the purity of his style and his originality (1762-1794).

CHENONCEAUX, a magnificent château near Amboise in France; built by Francis I. for the Duchesse d'Etampes afterwards the property of the Condés, and later of Madame Dupin, the friend of Voltaire.

CHEOPHREN, king of Egypt, brother and successor of Cheops; built the second great pyramid.

CHEOPS, king of Memphis, in Egypt, of the 4th dynasty; builder of the largest of the pyramids about 8000 B.C.

CHEPSTOW, a port on the Wye, Monmouthshire, 17 m. N. of Newport; with a tubular suspension bridge, and noted for the tides, which are higher than anywhere else in Britain.

CHEQUERS, country residence of British Prime Ministers, situated in the Chilterns, and presented to the nation by Lord Lee of Fareham in 1917.

CHESE, an affluent of the Loire below Tours; also the dep. in France to which it gives name; an agricultural and pastoral district; capital Bourges.

CHESTBOURG, a French port and arsenal in the dep. of Manche, opposite the Isle of Wight, 70 m. distant, on the construction and fortifications of which immense sums were expended, as much as eight millions; the fortifications were begun by Vauban. It is a port of call for Atlantic liners.

CHESTBULKEZ, VICTOR, novelist, critic, and publisher, born at Geneva, of a distinguished family; professor of Greek at Geneva; widely known as a writer of a series of works of fiction (1829-1899).

CHESTIBON, a seaport of Java, on the N. of the island.

CHEITH, a brook E. of the Jordan, Elijah's hiding-place.

CHEKOKES, a tribe of American Indians in the N.W. of the Indian Territory, U.S.; civilised, self-governing, and increasing; formerly occupied the region about the Tennessee River.

CHEKONEA, a town in Bœotia, where Philip of Macedonia conquered the Athenians and Thebans, 338 B.C., and Sulla defeated Mithridates, 86 B.C.; the birthplace of Plutarch, who is hence called the Cheronæan Sage.

CHEERA PUNJI, a village in the Khasi Hills, Assam, with the heaviest rainfall of any place on the globe. Some 500 ins. fall annually, and over 40 ins. have been known to fall in 24 hrs., more than a year's average fall in many parts of England.

CHERSONESUS, (i.e. continent island), a name which the Greeks gave to several peninsulas, viz., the Tauric C., the Crimea; the Thracian C., Gallipoli; the Cimbric O., Jutland; the Golden C., the Malay Peninsula.

CHERTSEY, a very old town of Surrey, 21 m. SW. of London, on the right bank of the Thames.

CHERUBIM, an order of angelic beings conceived of as accompanying the manifestations of Jehovah, supporting His throne and protecting His glory, guarding it from profane intrusion; winged figures of them overshadowed the Mercy Seat (q.v.).

CHERUBINI, MARIA LUIGI CARLO, a celebrated musical composer, born at Florence, naturalised in France; settled in Paris, the scene of his greatest triumphs; composed operas, of which the chief were "Iphigenia in Aulis," "Elisa," "Médée," and "Les deux Journées," considered his masterpiece; also a number of sacred pieces and requiems, all of the highest merit; there is a portrait of him by Ingres (1842) in the Louvre, representing the Muse of his art extending her protecting hand over his head (1760-1842).

CHERUEL, ADOLPHE, French historian, born at Rouen; author of "History of France during the Minority of Louis XIV.," published the "Mémoires of Saint-Simon" (1809-1891).

CHERUSI, an ancient people of Germany, whose leader was Arminius, under whom they defeated the Romans, commanded by Varus, in 9 A.D.

CHESAPEAKE BAY, a northward-extending inlet on the Atlantic coast of the United States, 200 m. long and from 10 to 40 m. broad, cutting Maryland in two; the scene of a naval battle between French and British fleets in 1781.

CHESHIRE, a western county of England, between the Mersey and the Dee, the chief mineral products of which are coal and rock-salt, and the agricultural, butter and cheese; has numerous manufacturing towns, with every facility for inter-communication, and the finest pasture-land in England.

CHESHUNT, a town in Hertfordshire, 14 m. N. of London, with rose gardens, and a college founded by the Countess of Huntingdon.

CHEST BEACH, a neck of land on the Devonshire coast, 15 m. long, being a ridge of loose pebbles and shingle.

CHESNEY, CHARLES CORNWALLIS, professor of Military History, nephew of the succeeding, author of "Waterloo Lectures" (1826-1876).

CHESNEY, FRANÇOIS RAWDON, explorer, born in co. Down, Ireland; explored with much labour the route to India by way of the Euphrates, though his labours were rendered futile by the opposition of Russia; proved, by survey of the isthmus, the practicability of the Suez Canal (1789-1872).

CHESS, a game of Eastern origin but uncertain antiquity. Known in Persia and India from early days. It was introduced into Europe in the 15th century, probably by the Moors into Spain, and reached England via France. Of modern players Capablanca (q.v.) has been the most famous.

CHESTER, the county town of Cheshire, on the Dee, 16 m. E.E. of Liverpool; an ancient city founded by the Romans; surrounded by walls nearly 2 m. long, and from 7 to 8 ft. thick, forming a promenade with parapets; the streets are peculiar; along the lower storeys of the houses there stretch piazzas called "Rows," 16 ft. wide, for foot-passengers, and approached by steps; it abounds in Roman remains, and is altogether a unique town.

CHESTERFIELD, a town in Derbyshire, 21 m. N. of Derby; in a mineral district; manufactures cotton, woollen, and silk goods; has a canal connecting it with the Trent.

CHESTERFIELD, PHILIP DORMER STANHOPE, EARL OF, statesman, orator, and man of letters, eldest son of the third earl, born in London; sat in the House of Commons from 1716 to 1726; was an opponent of Walpole; held office under the Pelhams; in 1748 retired from deafness, or perhaps disgust, into private life; celebrated for his "Letters to his Son," models of elegance, though of questionable morality, which it appears he never intended should be published, and for the scorn with which Dr. Johnson treated him when he offered to help him, after he no longer needed any, in a letter which gave the death-blow to the patronage of literature: is credited by Carlyle with having predicted the French Revolution (1694-1773).

CHESTERTON, GILBERT KEITH, British author. Educated at St. Paul's School, he early made a name as a critic and an original writer. Besides poems, essays, and biographies he has written "The Napoleon of Notting Hill," "The Wisdom of Father Brown," and other novels, and is a noted Catholic apologist (1874-).

CHEVALIER, MICHEL, a celebrated French economist, born at Limoges; originally a Socialist of the St. Simonian school; for defending Socialism was imprisoned, but recanted, and wrote ably against Socialism; was a free-trader and coadjutor of Cobden (1806-1870).

CHEVAUX-DE-FRISE, a military fence composed of a beam or a bar armed with long spikes; literally Friesland horses, having been first used in Friesland.

CHEVERT, a French general, born at Verdun; distinguished himself in many engagements, and especially at the siege of Prague in 1757 (1696-1773).

CHEVIOT HILLS, a range on the borders of England and Scotland, extending 35 m. south-westwards, the highest in Northumberland 2676 ft., the Carter Fell being 2020 ft.; famous for its breed of sheep.

CHEVREUL, MICHEL EUGENE, a French chemist, born at Angers; an expert in the department of dyeing, and an authority on colours, as well as the chemistry of fats; was director in the dyeing department in the Gobellins manufactory; he lived to celebrate the centenary of his birth (1786-1889).

CHEVREUSE, DUCHESSE DE, played an important part in the Fronde and in the plots against Richelieu and Mazarin; her life has been written by Victor Cousin (1600-1670).

CHEVRON, in heraldry an ordinary of two bands forming an angle descending to the extremities of the shield; representing the two rafters of a house, meeting at the top.

CHEVY CHASE, the subject and title of a highly popular old English ballad preserved in Percy's "Reliques" and presumed to refer to an event in connection with the battle of Otterburn; there were strains in it which Sir Philip Sidney said moved his heart more than with a trumpet.

CHEYENNES, a once warlike tribe of Red Indians, now much reduced, and partially settled in the Indian Territory, U.S.; noted for their horsemanship.

CHÉZY, DE, a French Orientalist, born at Neuilly; the first to create in France an interest in the study of Sanskrit (1773-1832).

CHIABRELLI, GABRIELLO, an Italian lyric poet, born at Savona; distinguished especially for his lyrics; surnamed the "Pindar of Italy." Pindar being a Greek poet whom it was his ambition to imitate (1552-1637).

CHIA'NA, a small, stagnant, pestilential affluent of the Tiber, now deepened into a healthful and serviceable stream, connecting the Tiber with the Arno.

CHIAPAS, LAS, a Pacific State of Mexico, covered with forests; yields maize, sugar, cacao, and cotton.

CHIAROSCURO, the reproduction in art of the effects of light and shade on nature as they mutually affect each other.

CHIBCHAS, or MUYSCAS, a civilised people, though on a lower stage than the Peruvians, whom the Spaniards found established in New Granada in the 16th century, now merged in the Spanish population; they worship the sun.

CHICA, an orange-red colouring matter obtained from boiling the leaves of the Bignonia chica, which grows in S. America and is used as a dye.

CHICAGO, the metropolis of Illinois, in the NE. of the State, on the SW. shore of Lake Michigan, is the second city in the Union; its unparalleled growth, dating only from 1837 (in 1832 it was a mere log-fort), is due to its matchless facilities for communication. Situated in the heart of the continent, a third of the United States railway system centres in it, and it communicates with all Canada, and with the ocean by the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence River; laid out with absolute regularity, it has many magnificent buildings, enormously tall office "sky-scrapers," and an unrivalled system of parks and avenues; there are a university, medical, commercial, and theological colleges, an art institute, libraries, and observatory; it suffered severely from fire in 1871 and 1874; it is one of the greatest grain and pork markets in the world, and its manufactures include every variety of production; the population is a mixture of all European peoples; native-born Americans are a small minority, outnumbered by the Germans and almost equalled by the Irish. It has acquired an unenviable reputation for lawlessness and gang crimes.

CHICARD, the harlequin of the modern French carnival, grotesquely dressed up.

CHICHELEY, HENRY, archbishop of Canterbury, a scholar and statesman, often employed on embassies, a moderate churchman; accompanied Henry V. to Agincourt (1362-1442).

CHICHESTER, a cathedral city in the W. of Sussex, 17 m. NE. of Portsmouth, with a port on the Channel 2 m. SW. of it; chief trade in agricultural produce.

CHICHEVACHE, a monster fabled to feed on good women, and starved, from the scarcity of them, to skin and bone, in contrast with another called Bicorn, that fed on good men, who are more plentiful, and was fat and plump; referred to in Chaucer's "Canterbury Tales."

CHICKASAWS, N. American Indians, allied to the Choctaws, settled in a civilised state in the Indian Territory like the Cherokees.

CHIGLANA, a watering-place 12 m. SE. of Cadiz, with mineral baths.

CHIEM-SEE, a high-lying lake in Upper Bavaria, 48 m. from Munich, adorned with three islands; famous for its fish.

CHIE' TI, a city in Central Italy, 78 m. NE. of Rome, with a fine Gothic cathedral.

CHIGI, a distinguished Italian family, eminent in the church.

CHIGOE, a tropical sand flea which infests the skin of the feet, and multiplies incredibly.

CHIHUA'HUA, a town in Mexico; capital of a State, the largest in Mexico, of the same name, with famous silver and also copper mines.

CHILD, FRANCIS JAMES, an American scholar, born in Boston; professor of Anglo-Saxon and Early English Literature at Harvard; distinguished as the editor of Spenser and of "English and Scottish Ballads," a "monumental collection" (1825-1896).

CHILD, LYDIA MARIA, an American novelist and anti-slavery advocate (1802-1880).

CHILD, SIR JOSIAH, a wealthy London merchant, author of "Discourse on Trade," with an appendix against usury, advocated the compulsory transportation of paupers to the Colonies (1630-1699).

CHILDE, a title bestowed in olden times upon a knight and popular with poets and romancers, as Childe Roland and Childe Harold (q.v.).

CHILDE HAROLD, a poem by Byron, written between 1812 and 1819, representing the author himself as wandering over the world in quest of satisfaction and returning sated to disgust; it abounds in striking thoughts and vivid descriptions; in his "Dernier Chant of C. H." Lamartine takes up the hero where Byron leaves him.

CHILDEBERT I., son of Clovis, king of Paris, reigned from 511 to 558. C. II., son of Siegbert and Brunhilda, king of Austrasia, reigned from 575 to 596. C. III., son of Thierry III., reigned over all France from 695 to 711, under the mayor of the palace, Pépin d'Héristal.

CHILDEBRAND, a Frank warrior, who figures in old chronicles as the brother of Charles Martel, and signalled himself in the expulsion of the Saracens from France.

CHILDERIC I., the son of Meroving and father of Clovis, king of the Franks; d. 481. C. II., son of Clovis II., king of Austrasia in 660, and of all France in 670; assassinated 673. C. III., son of the preceding, last of the Merovingian kings, from 743 to 752; was deposed by Pépin le Bref; died in the monastery of St. Omer in 755.

CHILDERMAS, a festival to commemorate the massacre of the children by Herod

CHILDERS, ROBERT CESAR, professor of Pali and Buddhist Literature in University College, and author of Pali Dictionary (1898-1876).

CHILE, S. American State, occupies a strip of country, 100 m. broad, between the Andes and the Pacific Ocean, and stretching from Cape Horn northward 2200 m. to Peru, with Argentine and Bolivia on its eastern borders. The climate is naturally various. In the N. are rainless tracts of mountains rich in copper, manganese, silver, and other metals, and deserts with wonderful deposits of nitrate. In the S. are stretches of pastoral land and virgin forest, with excessive rains and cold, raw climate. The central portion enjoys a temperate climate with moderate rainfall, and produces excellent wheat, grapes, and fruits of all kinds. The Andes tower above the snow-line, Aconcagua reaching 23,500 ft. The rivers are short and rapid, of little use for navigation. The coast-line is even in the N., but excessively rugged and broken in the S., the most southerly regions being weird and desolate. The people are descendants of Spaniards, mingled with Araucanian Indians; but there is a large European element in all the Mining and agriculture are the chief industries; manufactures of various kinds are fostered with foreign capital. The chief trade is with Britain: exports, nitre, wheat, copper, and iodine; imports, textiles, machinery, sugar, and cattle. Santiago is the capital; Valparaiso and Iquique the principal ports. The government is republican; Roman Catholicism the State religion; education is fairly well fostered; there is a university at Santiago. The country was first visited by Magellan in 1520. In 1540 Pedro Valdivia entered it from Peru and founded Santiago. During colonial days it was an annex of Peru. In 1810 the revolt against Spain broke out. Independence was gained in 1826. Settled government was established in 1847. Since then a revolution in 1861, successful wars with Spain 1864-1866, with Bolivia and Peru 1870-1881, and a revolution in 1891, have been the most stirring events in its history.

CHILKOOT PASS, a pass in the Rocky Mountains in Alaska, notable as one of the chief routes from Dyea into the Yukon; open for travel most months of the year.

CHILLANWALLA, a village in the Punjab, 80 m. NW. of Lahore, the scene in 1849 of a bloody battle in the second Sikh War, in which the Sikhs were defeated by Gen. Gough; it was also the scene of a battle between Alexander the Great and Porus.

CHILLINGHAM, a village in Northumberland, 8 m. SW. of Belford, with a park attached to the castle, the seat of the Earl of Tankerville, containing a herd of native white wild cattle.

CHILLINGWORTH, WILLIAM, an able English controversial divine, who thought forcibly and wrote simply, born at Oxford; championed the cause of Protestantism against the claims of Popery in a long-famous work, "The Religion of Protestants the Safe Way to Salvation," summing up his conclusion in the oft-quoted words, "The Bible, the Bible alone, is the religion of Protestants"; though a Protestant, he was not a Puritan or a man of narrow views, and he suffered at the hands of the Puritans as an adherent of the Royalist cause (1602-1643).

CHILLON, CASTLE OF, a castle and state prison built on a rock, 62 ft. from the shore, at the eastern end of the Lake of Geneva; surnamed the Bastille of Switzerland, in which Bonivard, the Genevese patriot, was, as celebrated by Byron, incarcerated for six years; it is now an arsenal.

CHILOE, a thickly wooded island off the coast, and forming a province of Chile, 115 m. long from N to S., and 43 m. broad; inhabited chiefly by Indians; exports timber; is said to contain vast deposits of HILLS, a range of chalk hills extending about 70 m. NE. from the Thames in Oxfordshire through Bucks. from 15 to 20 m. broad, the highest, Wendover, 950 ft.

CHILTERN HUNDREDS, a wardship of beech forests on the Chiltern Hills against robbers that at one time infested them; now a sinecure office, the acceptance of which enables a member of Parliament to resign his seat if he wishes to retire, the office being regarded as a Government one.

CHIMÆRA, a fire-breathing monster of the Greek mythology, with a goat's body, a lion's head, and a dragon's tail; slain by Bellerophon, and a symbol of any impossible monstrosity.

CHIMBORAZO, one of the loftiest peaks of the Andes, in Ecuador, 20,700 ft.; is an extinct volcano, and covered with perpetual snow; first ascended by Whymper in 1879.

CHIMPANZEE, a large African anthropoid ape, from 3 to 4 ft. in height, and more allied in several respects to man than any other ape; it is found chiefly in W. Africa.

CHINA, a vast, compact, and densely peopled country in Eastern Asia; bounded on the N. by Mongolia; W. by Tibet and Burmah; S. by Siam, Annam, and the China Sea; and E. by the Pacific. In the W. are lofty mountain ranges running N. and S., from which parallel ranges run E. and W., rising to greatest height in the S. Two great rivers traverse the country, the Hoang-ho and the Yangtze-kiang, the latter with many large lakes in its course, and bearing on its waters an innumerable fleet of boats and barges. Between the lower courses of these rivers lies the Great Plain, one of the vastest and richest in the world, whose yellow soil produces great crops with little labour and no manure. The coast-line is long and much indented, and out of it are bitten the gulfs of Pe-che-lee, the Yellow Sea, and Hang-chou. There are many small islands off the coast; the mountainous Hainan is the only large one still Chinese. The climate in the N. has a clear frosty winter, and warm rainy summer; in the S. it is hot. The country is rich in evergreens and lawerling plants. In the N. wheat, millet, and cotton are grown; in the S. rice, tea, sugar, silk, and opium. Agriculture is the chief industry, and though primitive, it is remarkably painstaking and skilful. Forests have everywhere been cleared away, and the whole country is marvellously fertile. Its mineral wealth is enormous. Iron, copper, and coal abound in vast quantities; has coalfields that, it is said, if they were worked, "would revolutionise the trade of the world." The most important manufactures are of silk, cotton, and china. Tea and silk are exported; cotton goods and opium imported. About twenty-five ports are open to British vessels, of which the largest are Shanghai and Canton. The people are a mixed race of Mongol type, kindly, courteous, peaceful, and extremely industrious, and in their own way well educated. Buddhism is the prevailing faith of the masses, Confucianism of the upper classes. The Government is in a state of flux. The capital is Peking, in the NE. Chinese history goes back to 2300 B.C. English intercourse with the Chinese began in A.D. 1635, and diplomatic relations between London and Peking were established last century. The Anglo-Chinese wars of 1840, 1857, and 1860 broke down the barrier of exclusion previously maintained against the outside world. The Japanese war of 1894-1895 betrayed the weakness of the national organisation; and in 1911 a revolution broke out in Hankow which resulted in the removal of the Manchu dynasty and the establishment in 1912 of a republic. Attempts to restore the monarchy from 1915 to 1917 failed, and in 1920 Canton established a separate republic. The Cantonese (q.v.) in 1925 started a civil war against the Peking government, and in 1926 captured Hankow, Shanghai, and Nankin. A British Expeditionary Force defended the International Settlement at Shanghai, but the concession at Hankow was surrendered. Later, Nankin broke away from the Peking government, and the position became even more complicated, by warring generals who frequently changed sides.

CHINA, THE GREAT WALL OF, a wall, with towers and forts at intervals, about 2000 m. long, from 20 to 80 ft. high, and 25 ft. broad, which separates China from Mongolia on the N., and traverses high hills and deep valleys in its winding course.

CHINCHA ISLANDS, islands off the coast of Peru that had beds of guano, often 100 ft. thick, due to the droppings of penguins and other sea birds, now all but, if not quite, exhausted.

- CHINCHILLA, a rodent of S. America, hunted for its fur, which is soft and of a grey colour; found chiefly in the mountainous districts of Peru and Chile.
- CHINOOK, a tribe of Indians in Washington and Oregon, noted for flattening their skulls; their language provided the Impua franca which is spoken on a great portion of the Pacific coast.
- CHINOOK WIND, a warm wind blowing down the eastern side of the Rocky Mountains, which keeps the pasture lands of Montana and Wyoming free from snow in the winter.
- CHINSURA, a Dutch-built town on the right bank of the Hoogly, 20 m. N. of Calcutta, with a college; is famous for cheroots.
- CHINTZ, a calico printed with flowers and other devices in different colours; originally of Eastern manufacture.
- CHIOGGIA, a seaport 16 m. S. of Venice, built on piles, on a lagoon island at the mouth of the Brenta, connected with the mainland by a bridge with 43 arches.
- CHIOS, or SCIO, a small island in the Grecian Archipelago; subject to earthquakes; yields oranges and lemons in great quantities; claims to have been the birthplace of Homer.
- CHIPMUNK, the American ground squirrel, marked with dark bands on the back and possessing a tail less bushy than the ordinary squirrel.
- CHIPPENDALE, THOMAS, a cabinetmaker, born in Worcestershire; famous for the quality and style of his workmanship; his work still much in request (1760).
- CHIPPWAYS, a Red Indian tribe, some 12,000 strong, located in Michigan, U.S., and in Canada adjoining; originally occupied the N. and W. of Lake Superior; known also by the name of Ojibways, they have mostly settled down in agricultural communities.
- CHIKUITOS, Indians of a low but lively type in Bolivia and Brazil; remarkable for their communal mode of life.
- CHIKUL, an archipelago and a lagoon as well as province in Costa Rica.
- CHIRON, a celebrated Centaur, in whose nature the animal element was subject to the human, and who was intrusted with the education of certain heroes of Greece, among others Peleus and Achilles; was endowed with the gift of prophecy, and skilled in athletics as well as music and the healing art. See CENTAURS.
- CHISLEHURST, a village in Kent, 10 m. SE. of London, where Napoleon III. died in exile in 1878.
- CHISWICK, a suburb of London, 7 m. SW. of St. Paul's; the Church of St. Nicholas has monuments to several people of distinction.
- CHITRAL, a State on the frontier of India, NW. of Cashmere; since 1896 occupied by the British; a place of great strategical importance, as it commands important passes through the Hindu-Kooh mountains.
- CHITTAGONG, a seaport in the Bay of Bengal, 220 m. E. of Calcutta; exports rice, gum, tobacco, and jute.
- CHITIM, the Bible name for Cyprus, applied also to any maritime power to the west of Palestine.
- CHIVALRY, a system of knighthood, for the profession of which the qualifications required were dignity, courtesy, bravery, generosity; the aim of which was the defence of right against wrong, of the weak against the strong, and especially of the honour and the purity of women, and the spirit of which was of Christian derivation; originally a military organisation in defence of Christianity against the infidel.
- CHIVALEY, COURT OF, a court established by Edward III., which took cognisance of questions of honour and heraldry, as well as military offences; it lasted until the 18th century.
- CHLOPIEL, JOSEPH, a Polish hero, born in Galicia; fought against Russia under Napoleon; was chosen Dictator of Poland in 1830, but was forced to resign; fought afterwards in the ranks, and was severely wounded (1771-1854).
- CHLORAL, a colourless narcotic liquid, obtained by the action of chlorine on alcohol; treated with water it produces chloral hydrate; was discovered by Liebig, 1831.
- CHLORINE, elementary, greenish-yellow gas obtained from common salt; powerful as a disinfectant, and a bleaching agent. It was the earliest form of poison gas used in warfare.
- CHLORIS, the wife of Zephyrus, the goddess of flowers.
- CHLOROFORM, a volatile liquid, in extensive use as an anæsthetic; produced by treating alcohol with chloride of lime.
- CHLOROPHYLL, the green substance present in most plants which enables them to build up carbohydrates (q.v.) from carbon dioxide under the influence of sunlight. The process is known as photosynthesis.
- CHLOROSIS, green sickness, a form of anemia incident to young females at a critical period of life, causing a pale-greenish complexion.
- CHOCTAWS, a tribe of American Indians, settled to civilised life in the Indian Territory, U.S.; formerly a powerful nation in the Mississippi region, possessing considerable culture.
- CHOISEUL, DUO DE, minister of Louis XV.; served his master in various capacities; was rewarded with a peerage; effected many reforms in the army, strengthened the navy, and aided in bringing about the family compact of the Bourbons; exercised great influence on the politics of Europe; was nicknamed by Catherine of Russia Le Cocher de l'Europe, "the Driver of Europe"; but becoming obnoxious to M. du Barry, "in whom he would discern nothing but a wonderfully dizen'd scarlet woman," was dismissed from the helm of affairs, Louis's "last substantial man" (1719-1785).
- CHOISY, ABBÉ, a French writer, born in Paris; author of a "History of the Church" (1644-1724).
- CHOKE, an inductive coil placed in an electric circuit to reduce the current; this involves no waste of power, as would be the case were a resistance used instead. This device is only applicable to alternating current circuits.
- CHOKE DAMP, the name given by miners to carbon dioxide, owing to the fact that this gas, produced by the combustion of explosive gases, causes suffocation.
- CHOLERA MORBUS, an epidemic disease characterised by violent vomiting and purging, accompanied with spasms, great pain, and debility; originated in India, and has frequently spread itself by way of Asia into populous centres of both Europe and America, especially in the epidemic of 1892.
- CHOLET, a French manufacturing town, 32 m. SW. of Angers; produces linen, cotton cloth, lace, and shoes; the scene of a defeat of the Vendée insurgents in 1793.
- CHOLULA, an ancient city, 60 m. SE. of Mexico; the largest city of the Aztecs, with a pyramidal temple, now crowned by a Catholic church.
- CHOPIN, FRANÇOIS FRÉDÉRIQUE, a musical composer, born near Warsaw, of Polish origin; his genius for music early developed itself; distinguished himself as a pianist first at Vienna and then in Paris, where he introduced the mazurkas; became the idol of the salons; visited England twice, in 1837 and 1848, and performed to admiration in London and three of the principal cities; died of consumption in Paris (1809-1849).
- CHORALE, a musical composition originated by Luther and used in the German Reformed Church; sometimes based on hymn tunes, sometimes on secular airs.
- CHORLEY, a manufacturing town in N. Lancashire, 25 m. NE. of Liverpool, with mines and quarries near it; a centre for cotton-spinning, weaving, and bleaching.
- CHORUS, in the ancient drama a group of persons introduced on the stage representing witnesses of what is being acted, and giving expression to their thoughts and feelings regarding it; originally a band of singers and dancers on festive occasions, in connection particularly with the Bacchus worship.
- CHOSROES I., surnamed the Great, king of Persia from 531 to 579, a wise and beneficent ruler; waged war with the Roman armies successfully for 20 years. Ch. II., his grandson, king from 590 to 628; made extensive inroads on the Byzantine empire, but was defeated and driven back by Heraclius; was eventually deposed and put to death.

CHOUANS, insurrectionary royalists in France, in particular Brittany, under Cadoudal, during the French Revolution, and even for a time under the Empire, when their headquarters were in London; so named from their muster by night at the sound of the chaf-huant, the screech-owl, a nocturnal bird of prey which has a weird cry.

CHRISTEN, or CHRESTIEN, DE TROYES, a French poet or trouvère of the latter half of the 12th century; author of a number of vigorously written romances which are among the earliest connected with chivalry and the Round Table.

CHRISTENHILDE, a heroine in the "Nibelungen" and sister of Gunther, who, on the treacherous murder of her husband, Siegfried, is changed from a gentle woman into a relentless fury.

CHRISIAOR, the sword of Sir Artgal in Spenser's "Faerie Queene"; it excelled every other.

CHRIST CHURCH, a college in Oxford, founded by Wolsey 1525; was Gladstone's college and John Ruskin's, as well as John Locke's.

CHRISTABEL, a fragmentary poem by Coleridge; characterised by Stopford Brooke as, for "exquisite metrical movement and for imaginative phrasing," along with "Kubla Khan," without a rival in the TADELPHIANS, an American sect, called also Thomastics, whose chief distinctive article of faith is conditional immortality, that is, immortality only to those who believe in Christ, and die believing in him.

CHRISTCHURCH, capital of the province of Canterbury, New Zealand, 5 m. from the sea; Lyttelton port.

CHRISTIAN, the name of ten kings of Denmark, of whom the first began to reign in 1448 and the last in 1868, and the following deserve notice: Christian II., conquered Sweden, but, proving a tyrant, was driven from the throne by Gustavus Vasa in 1522, upon which his own subjects deposed him, an act which he resented by force of arms; he was defeated in 1581, his person seized, and imprisoned for life; characterised by Carlyle as a "rash, unwise, explosive man" (1481-1589). Christian IV., king from 1588 to 1648; took part on the Protestant side in the Thirty Years' War, and was defeated by Tilly; he was a good ruler, and was much beloved by his subjects; was founder of the Danish navy (1577-1648). Christian IX., king from 1863 to 1906; son of Duke William of Sleswick-Holstein, father of the late Queen Alexandra, George I., king of Greece, and the dowager Empress of Russia (1818-1906). Christian X., married in 1898 Princess Alexandra of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, and succeeded to the throne in May, 1912 (1870-).

CHRISTIAN CONNECTION, a sect in the United States which acknowledges the Bible alone as the rule of faith and manners.

CHRISTIAN KING, ICE MOST, a title of the king of France conferred by two different Popes.

CHRISTIANIA. See OSLO.

CHRISTIANITY. The religion of which Jesus Christ is the founder and the centre, and which has spread from Jerusalem throughout the world in the last 2000 years. Its believers see God revealing Himself in Jesus Christ His Son, who was crucified that they might be reconciled unto Him and that sin should no more have dominion over them. The religion, with its accompanying high view of the worth of the human soul, has been the greatest civilising factor the world has ever known. When Christianity was likely to become merely a sect of Judaism St. Paul carried it into Europe and to Rome, which under Constantine at length adopted it as the official religion. Rome held sway over the Church till the Reformation of the 16th century established Protestantism, which with Catholicism has since been a wing of the Christian Church in spreading the gospel to all parts of the globe. Christians look for an ultimate return to earth of Jesus Christ as King, a return which will usher in the millennium which is to precede the end of the world.

CHRISTIANSTAND, a town and seaport in the extreme S. of Norway, with a considerable trade.

CHRISTINA, queen of Sweden, daughter and only child of Gustavus Adolphus; received a masculine education, and was trained in manly exercises; governed the country well, and filled her court with learned men, but by-and-by her royal duties becoming irksome to her, she declared her cousin as her successor, resigned the throne, and turned Catholic; her cousin dying, she claimed back her crown, but her subjects would not now have her; she stayed for a time in France, but was obliged to leave; retired to Rome, where she spent 80 years of her life engaged in scientific and artistic studies, and died (1626-1689).

CHRISTINA, MARIA, daughter of Francis I. of Naples, and wife of Ferdinand VII. of Spain, on whose death she acted for four years as regent during the infancy of her daughter Isabella (1806-1878).

CHRISTMAS, the festival in celebration of the birth of Christ, now celebrated all over Christendom on December 25, as coinciding with an old heathen festival celebrated at the winter solstice, the day of the return of the sun northward, and in jubilation of the prospect of the renewal of life in the spring.

CHRISTMAS CARDS, greetings sent to friends at Christmas, a practice dating from 1844, when W. E. Doobson, R.A., designed one to send to a friend.

CHRISTMAS ISLAND is in the Indian Ocean, 200 m. S.W. of Java. It is a dependency of Malaya, and has large deposits of phosphates, exporting about 100,000 tons of them a year. The area is 86 sq. m. and the population is 750.

CHRISTOLOGY, the department of theology which treats of the person of Christ.

CHRISTOPHE, HENRI, a negro, born in Grenada; one of the leaders of the insurgent slaves in Hayti, who, proving successful in arms against the French, became king under the title of Henry I., but ruling despotically provoked revolt and shot himself through the heart; he was a man of powerful physique (1767-1820).

CHRISTOPHER, ST. (the Christ-Bearer), according to Christian legend a giant of great stature and strength, who, after serving the devil for a time, gave himself up to the service of Christ by carrying pilgrims across a bridgeless river, when one day a little child, who happened to be none other than Christ Himself, appeared to be carried over, but, strange to say, as he bore Him across, the child grew heavier and heavier, till he was nearly baffled in landing Him on the opposite shore. The giant represented the Church, and the increasing weight of the child the increasing sin and misery which the Church has from age to age to bear in carrying its Christ across the Time-river; the giant is represented in art as carrying the infant on his shoulder, and as having for staff the stem of a large tree.

CHRISTOPHER'S, ST., popularly called St. Kitts, one of the Leeward Islands, discovered by Columbus (1493), who named it after himself; belongs to England; has sugar plantations.

CHRIST'S HOSPITAL, the Blue-Coat School, Horsham, was founded in 1552, a large institution, 820 boys at Horsham and 280 girls at Hertford; entrance to it is gained partly by presentation and partly by competition, and attached are numerous exhibitions and prizes; among the alumni have been Bishop Stillingfleet, Coleridge, Leigh Hunt, and Charles Lamb. Until 1902 the school stood on the site of Greyfriars Monastery in Newgate Street. The boys still wear the 16th-century costume, comprising knee-breeches, yellow stockings, and blue gowns, without headgear.

CHROMATICS, that department of optics which treats of colours, and resolves the primary colours into three—red, yellow, and blue.

CHROMIUM, a chemical element used for alloying with steel.

CHROMOSOMES, minute structures found within the nucleus of the living cell, which appear to control heredity. The chromosomes are composed of genes, each of which is concerned with certain specific characters.

CHROMOSPHERE, the outer layer of the sun's atmosphere, consisting of glowing, red gases which frequently burst forth in the form of "Prominences," normally overpowered by the light of the Photosphere, but visible during a total eclipse.

CHRONICLERS, THE RHYMING, a series of writers who flourished in England in the 18th century, and related histories of the country in rhyme, in which the fabulous occupies a conspicuous place, among which Layamon's "Brut" (1206) takes the lead.

CHRONICLES I. and II., two historical books of the Old Testament, the narratives of which, with additions and omissions, run parallel with those of Samuel and Kings, but, written from a priestly standpoint, give the chief prominence to the history of Judah as the support in Jerusalem of the ritual of which the priests were the custodians; Ezra and Nehemiah are continuations.

CHRYSEUS, the daughter of Chryseus, priest of Apollo, a beautiful maiden who fell among the spoils of a victory to Agamemnon, and became his slave, and whom he refused to restore to her father until a deadly plague among the Greeks, at the hands of Apollo, compelled him to give her up.

CHRYSIPPUS, a Greek philosopher, born at Soli, in Cilicia, who lived in Athens; especially skilled in dialectic; the last and greatest expounder and defender of the philosophy of the Stoics, so pre-eminent, that it was said of him: "If Chrysippus were not, the Stoics were not"; is said to have written 705 books, not one of which, however, has come down to us save a few fragments (280-208 B.C.). See STOICISM.

CHRYSOLO'RAS, MANUEL, a Grecian scholar, born at Constantinople, left his native country and lived in Florence, where he, in the 14th century, became a teacher of Greek literature, and contributed thereby to the revival of letters in Italy (1350-1415).

CHRYSOSTOM, ST. JOHN, that is, Mouth of Gold, so called from his eloquence, born at Antioch; converted to Christianity from a mild paganism; became one of the Fathers of the Church, and Patriarch of Constantinople; he was zealous in suppressing heresy as well as corruption in the Church, and was for that reason thrice over subjected to banishment; in the course of the third exile, while on the way, he died, though his remains were brought back to Constantinople and there deposited with great solemnity; he left many writings behind him—sermons, homilies, commentaries, and epistles, of which his "Homilies" are most studied and prized (347-407). Festival, Jan. 27.

CHUBB, THOMAS, an English Deist, born near Salisbury; he regarded Christ as a divine teacher, but held reason to be sovereign in matters of religion; yet was on rational grounds a defender of Christianity; had no learning, but was well versed in the religious controversies of the time, and bore his part in them creditably (1679-1749).

CHUNDER SEN, one of the founders of the Brahmo-Soma (q.v.); he visited Europe in 1870, and was welcomed with open arms by the rationalist class of Churchmen and Dissenters.

CHUQUISA'CA (i.e. Bridge of Gold), the capital of Bolivia, in a sheltered plain 9000 ft. above the sea-level; is a cathedral city; has a mild climate; it was founded in 1538 by the Spaniards on the site of an old Peruvian town.

CHURCH ARMY, THE, a movement similar to the Salvation Army but confined to the Church of England, founded in 1882 by Prebendary W. Carlile for evangelistic work in the slums.

CHURCH ENABLING ACT, a measure passed in 1819 setting up the Church Assembly with wide powers delegated from the parishes, but subject to Parliamentary veto.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND, THE, the Protestant Church established by law in England, dating from 1534 when Henry VIII. was declared its head and the authority of Rome was repudiated. Its present Prayer Book dates from 1662. The Enabling Act of 1919 gave greater internal freedom to the Church, and especially to the laity. The Church of England is governed by Bishops.

CHURCH, RICHARD WILLIAM, dean of St. Paul's, born in Lisbon; a scholarly man; distinguished himself first as such by his "Essays and Reviews," wrote thoughtful sermons, and "A Life of Anselm," also essays on eminent men of letters, such as Dante, Spenser, and Bacon (1815-1890).

CHURCH, STATES OF THE, the Papal States, extending irregularly from the Po to Naples, of which the Pope was the temporal sovereign until their seizure by Italy in 1870. By the Lateran Treaty (q.v.) of 1929 the States were restored to the Pope in a modified form.

CHURCHILL, CHARLES, an English poet, born at Westminster; began life as a curate, an office which he was compelled to resign from his unseemly ways; took himself to the satire, first of the actors of the time in his "Roscius," then of his critics in his "Apology," and then of Dr. Johnson in the "Ghost"; he wrote numerous satires, all vigorous, his happiest being deemed that against the Scots, entitled "The Prophecy of Famine"; his life was a short one, and not wisely regulated (1731-1764).

CHURCHILL, LORD RANDOLPH, an English Conservative politician, third son of the 7th Duke of Marlborough, who, though a man of mark, and more than once in office, could never heart and soul join any party and settle down to steady statesmanship; set out on travel, fell ill on the journey, and came home in a state of collapse to die (1849-1895).

CHURCHILL, RT. HON. WINSTON SPENCER, British politician. Son of Lord Randolph Churchill, he started his career as a soldier, fighting in India in 1897 and Egypt 1899, afterwards going to South Africa, where he acted as war correspondent as well as being on service. Politically he started as a Conservative and turned Liberal on the tariff issue. He first took office as Under-secretary for the Colonies in 1905, and became Home Secretary in 1908, during which period the "Sidney Street siege" (q.v.) took place. He was First Lord of the Admiralty on the outbreak of the Great War, and was responsible for the speedy mobilisation of the fleet, the glamour of which achievement was later diminished by his handling of the troops at Antwerp and the Dardanelles campaign. He returned to Parliament in 1916, and became successively Minister of Munitions, War Secretary, Air Minister, and Colonial Secretary. On the defeat of the Coalition he went for a time into the political wilderness, emerging a Conservative and becoming Chancellor of the Exchequer under Baldwin in 1924, a post he held till the Conservative defeat of 1929 (1874-).

CHURCHILL, WINSTON, American novelist. "Richard Carvel," published in 1899, was his first success, and was followed by "The Crisis" and "The Crossing," among others (1871-).

CHUZZLEWIT, MARTIN, the hero of a novel by Dickens of the name. James, a character in the same novel, a man distinguished for his mean and tyrannical character.

CHUSAN, principal island in the Chusan Archipelago, 18 m. long and 10 broad; near the estuary of the Yangtze-kiang, has been called "the Key of China."

CHYLE, a fluid of a milky colour, which is separated from the chyme by the action of the pancreatic juice and the bile, and which, being absorbed by the lacteal vessels, is gradually assimilated into blood.

CHYME, the pulpy mass into which the food is converted in the stomach prior to the separation in the small intestines of the chyle.

CIALDINI, ENRICO, an Italian general and politician, born at Modena; distinguished himself in Spain against the Carlists, and both as a soldier and diplomatist in connection with the unification of Italy (1811-1892).

CIBBER, COLLEY, actor and dramatist, of German descent; was manager and part-proprietor of Drury Lane; wrote plays, one in particular, which procured for him the post of poet-laureate, which he held till his death; was much depreciated by Pope; wrote an "Apology for his Life," the most amusing autobiography in the language (1671-1757).

CIBRARIO, LUIGI, COUNT, an Italian historian and statesman, born at Turin; he held office under Charles Albert of Sardinia (1802-1870).

CICERO, MARCUS TULLIUS, a Roman orator, statesman, and man of letters, born near Arpinum, in Latium; trained for political life partly at Rome and partly at Athens; distinguished himself as the first orator at the Roman bar when he was 30, and afterwards rose through the successive grades of civic rank till he attained the consulship in 63 B.C.; during this period he acquired great popularity by his exposure and defeat of the conspiracy of Catiline, by which he earned the title of Father of his Country, though there were those who condemned his action and procured his banishment for a time; on his recall, which was unanimous, he took sides first with Pompey, then with Caesar after Pharsalia, on whose death he delivered a Philippic against Antony; was proscribed by the second triumvirate, and put to death by Antony's soldiers; he was the foremost of Roman orators, the most elegant writer of the Latin language, and has left behind him orations, letters, and treatises, very models of their kind; he was not a deep thinker, and his philosophy was more eclectic than original (106-43 B.C.).

CICERO OF GERMANY, John III., Elector of Brandenburg; "could speak 'four hours at a stretch, in elegantly flowing Latin,' with a fair share of meaning in it too" (1455-1499).

CICOGNARA, COUNT, an Italian writer, born at Ferrara, author of a "History of Sculpture" (1767-1834).

CID CAMPEADOR, a famed Castilian warrior of the 11th century, born at Burgos; much celebrated in Spanish romance; being banished from Castile, in the interest of which he had fought valiantly, he became a free-lance, fighting now with the Christians and now with the Moors, till he made himself master of Valencia, where he set up his throne and reigned, with his faithful wife Ximena by his side, till the news of a defeat by the Moors took all spirit out of him, and he died of grief. Faithful after death, his wife had his body embalmed and carried to his native place, on the high altar of which it lay enthroned for 10 years; his real name was Don Rodrigo (Ruy) Diaz of Bivar, and the story of his love for Ximena is the subject of Corneille's masterpiece, "The Cid."

CIGOLI, LODOVICO, a Florentine painter, called the Florentine Correggio, whom he specially studied in the practice of his art; "The Apostle Healing the Lame," in St. Peter's, is by him, as also the "Martyrdom of St. Stephen," in Florence (1559-1613).

CILICIA, an ancient province in S. of Asia Minor, originally Persian, then under Greek and, later, Roman domination.

CILICIAN GATES, the pass across Mount Taurus by which Alexander the Great entered Cilicia.

CIMABUE, GIOVANNI, a Florentine painter, and founder of the Florentine school, which ranked among its members such artists as Michael Angelo, Raphael, and Leonardo da Vinci; was the first to leave the stiff traditional Byzantine forms of art and copy from nature and the living model, though it was only with the advent of his great disciple Giotto that art found beauty in reality, and Florence was made to see the divine significance of lowly human worth, at sight of which, says Ruskin, "all Italy threw up its cap"; his "Madonna," in the Church of Santa Maria, has been long regarded as a marvel of art, and of all the "Mater Dolorosa" of Christianity, Ruskin does not hesitate to pronounce his at Assisi the noblest; his principal Madonnas are to be seen in the Louvre, Paris, in Florence, and the National Gallery, London (1240-1302).

CIMAROSA, DOMENICO, a celebrated Italian composer; composed between 20 and 30 operas, mostly comic, his masterpiece being "Il Matrimonio Segreto"; he was imprisoned for sympathizing with the principles of the French Revolution, and treated with a severity which shortened his life; said by some to have been poisoned by order of Queen Caroline of Naples (1749-1801).

CIMBER, a friend of Caesar who turned traitor, and whose act of presenting a petition to him was the signal to the conspirators to take the dictator's life.

CIMBRI, a barbarian horde who, with the Teutons, invaded Gaul in the 2nd century B.C.; gave the Romans no small trouble, and were all but exterminated by Marius in 101 B.C.; believed to have been a Germanic race, who descended on Southern Europe from the N.

CIMMERIANS, an ancient people N. of the shores of the Black Sea, fabled to inhabit a region unvisited by a single ray of the sun.

CIMON, an Athenian general, son of Miltiades; distinguished himself in the struggle of Athens against Persia in 466 B.C.; gained two victories over the Persians in one day, one by land and another by sea, was banished by the democratic party, and after four years recalled to continue his victories over his old foes, and died at Cyprus (510-449 B.C.).

CINCINNATI, the metropolis of Ohio, stands on the Ohio River, opposite Covington and Newport, by rail 270 m. SE. of Chicago; the city stands on hilly ground, and is broken and irregular; there are many fine buildings, among them a Roman Catholic cathedral, and large parks; there are a university, the Lane Theological Seminary (Presbyterian), schools of medicine, law, music, and art, an observatory, zoological garden, and large libraries; it is a centre of culture in the arts; manufactures include clothing, tobacco, leather, moulding, and machine shops; there is some boatbuilding and printing; but the most noted trade is in pork and grain; is one of the greatest pork markets in the world; a third of the population is of German origin.

CINCINNATUS, LUCIUS QUINTUS, an old hero of the Roman republic, distinguished for the simplicity and austerity of his manners; was called from the field to become consul in 460 B.C., and on the defeat of a Roman army by the Æquii, called to the dictatorship from the plough, to which he returned on the defeat of the Æquii; he was summoned to fill the same post a second time, when he was 80, on the occasion of the conspiracy of Mælius, with the like success.

CINCINNATUS, THE ORDER OF, an American order founded by officers of the revolutionary army at its dissolution in 1783; was denounced by Franklin as anti-republican in its spirit and tendency; the order was hereditary.

CINDERELLA (the little cinder-girl), the youngest member of a family who must drudge at home while her elder sisters go to balls, till one day a fairy befriends her and conveys her to a ball, where she shines as the centre of attraction, and wins the regard of a prince. On quitting the ball she leaves a slipper behind her, by means of which she is identified by the prince, who finds that hers is the only foot that the slipper will fit, and marries her. The story in one version or another is a very ancient and widespread one, being found in the writings of Ælian and Strabo.

CINEAS, the minister of Pyrrhus, king of Epirus; was the ablest orator of his time, and his master was in the habit of saying of him that his eloquence had gained him more cities than his own arms; sent on a mission to Rome, the senate refused to hear him, lest his eloquence should prove too fascinating; d. 270 B.C.

CINEMATOGRAPH, an adaptation of the old magic lantern, invented by Edison and first used for the showing of moving pictures as an entertainment in this country early this century. Within a few years cinemas sprang up all over the country, threatening the popularity of the theatre and music hall, and in 1928 talking films, in which sound as well as movement was reproduced, gave an immense impetus to the industry. Hollywood, California, is the centre of the industry, and a law was passed in England in 1927 to make it compulsory for British cinemas to show a quota of home-produced films. Charles Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks, and Mary Pickford were the actors and actresses who first made the popularity of the cinema worldwide.

CINGALESE, a native of Ceylon.

CINNA, LUCIUS CORNELIUS, a Roman patrician, a friend and supporter of Marius; drove Sulla from Rome and recalled Marius from exile; participated in the murders which followed his recall, and after the death of Marius was assassinated when organising an expedition against Sulla, 84 B.C.

CINNABAR, a sulphide of mercury from which the mercury of commerce is obtained.

CINQ-MARS, HENRI, MARQUIS DE, a French courtier, a favourite of Louis XIII.; a man of handsome figure and fascinating manners; died on the scaffold for conspiring with his friend De Thou against Richelieu (1620-1642).

CINQUE CENTO (Ni. five hundred), the Renaissance in literature and art in the 16th century, the expression 5 hundred standing for 16 hundred.

CINQUE PORTS, the five ports of Hastings, Romney, Hythe, Dover, and Sandwich, to which were added Winchelsea and Rye, which possessed certain privileges in return for supplying the royal power with a navy; the Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports is only an honorary dignity.

CINTRA, a Portuguese town, 17 m. NW. of Lisbon, where a much repudiated convention between the French under Marshal Junot and the English under Sir Hew Dalrymple was signed in 1808, whereby the former were let off with all their arms and baggage on condition of evacuating Portugal.

CIPANGO, a legendary island in the Eastern Ocean, described by Marco Polo as a sort of El Dorado, an object of search to subsequent navigators, and an attraction among the number to Columbus, it is said.

CIPRIANI, GIAMBATTISTA, an Italian painter and etcher, born in Florence; settled in London; was an original member of the Royal Academy, and designed the diploma (1727-1785).

CIRCARS, THE, a territory in India along the coast of the Bay of Bengal, from 18 to 100 m. wide; ceded first to the French and in 1766 to the East India Company, now under the Crown and forming part of the Madras Presidency.

CIRCASSIA, a territory on the Western Caucasus, now an autonomous province of Soviet Russia; celebrated for the sturdy spirit of the men and the beauty of the women; the nobles professing Mohammedanism and the lower classes a certain impure form of Christianity; they are of the Semite race, and resemble the Arabs in their manners.

CIRCE, a sorceress who figures in the "Odyssey." Ulysses having landed on her isle, she administered a potion to him and his companions, which turned them into swine, while the effect of it on himself was counteracted by the use of the herb moly, provided for him by Hermes against sorcery; she detained him with her for years, and disenchanted his companions on his departure.

CIRCEAN POISON, a draught of any kind that is magically and fatally intoxicating, such as the effect often of popular applause.

CIRCUITS, districts outside of London into which England is divided for judicial purposes, for the trial of civil as well as criminal cases connected with them; are seven in number—the Midland, the Oxford, the North-Eastern, the South-Eastern, the Northern, the Western, and North Wales and South Wales; the courts are presided over by a judge sent from London, or by two, and are held twice a year, or oftener if the number of cases require it.

CIRCULATION OF THE BLOOD, the course of the blood from the heart through the arteries to the minute vessels of the body, and from these last through the veins back to the heart again.

CIRCUMCISION, the practice of cutting away the foreskin, chiefly of males, as observed by the Jews and the Mohammedans, as well as other nations of remote antiquity; regarded by some as a mark of belonging to the tribe, and by others as a sacrifice in propitiation by blood.

CISALPINE REPUBLIC, a republic so called on both sides of the Po, formed out of his conquests by Napoleon, 1797; became the Italian Republic in 1802, with Milan for capital, and ceased to exist after the fall of Napoleon.

CISTERCIANS, a monastic order founded by Abbot Robert in 1088 at Cîteaux, near Dijon; they followed the rule of St. Benedict, who reformed the Order after it had lapsed; became an ecclesiastical republic, and were exempt from ecclesiastical control; contributed considerably to the progress of the arts, if little to the sciences; among their most famous abbeys were those at Tintern, Kirkstall, Melrose, and Deer, and, in France, at Clairvaux.

CITAEARON, a wood-covered mountain on the borders of Bœotia and Attica; famous in Greek legend as the haunt of Bacchus.

CITIES OF REFUGE, among the Jews, three on the

E. and three on the W. of the Jordan, in which the manslayer might find refuge from the avenger of blood; so appointed by law (see Joshua, ch. 20).

CITIES OF THE PLAIN, Sodom and Gomorrah, with adjoining cities under the like doom.

CITIZEN KING, Louis Philippe of France, so called as elected by the citizens of Paris.

CITY OF DESTRUCTION, Bunyan's name for the world as under divine judgment.

CITY OF GOD, Augustine's name for the Church as distinct from the cities of the world, and the title of a book of his defining it.

CITY OF THE PROPHET, Medina, where Mohammed found refuge when driven out of Mecca by the Korish and their adherents.

CITY OF THE SEVEN HILLS, Rome, as built on seven hills, viz. the Aventine, Caelian, Capitoline, Esquiline, Palatine, Quirinal, and Viminal.

CITY OF THE SUN, Babel (q.v.); and a work by Campanella, describing an ideal republic, after the manner of Plato and Sir Thomas More.

CIUDAD REAL (royal city), a Spanish town in a province of the same name, 106 m. S. of Madrid, where Sebastian defeated the Spaniards in 1809.

CIUDAD RODRIGO, a Spanish town near the Portuguese frontier, 50 m. SW. of Salamanca; stormed by Wellington, after a siege of 11 days, in 1812, for which brilliant achievement he earned the title of Earl in England, and Duke of Ciudad Rodrigo in Spain.

GIVA, the third member of the Hindu Trinity. See SIVA.

GIVET, small carnivore included among the cats, which yields a musky perfume valued in the East; found in Africa, India, China, and the Malay Peninsula.

CIVIL LAW, a system of laws for the regulation of civilised communities formed on Roman laws, digested in the pandects of Justinian.

CIVIL LIST, the yearly sum granted by the Parliament of England at the commencement of each reign for the support of the royal household and to maintain the dignity of the Crown; it amounts now to over £570,000.

CIVIL SERVICE, the paid service done to the State by several departments, exclusive of that of the army and navy.

CIVITA VECEIA, a fortified port on the W. coast of Italy, 40 m. NW. of Rome, with a good harbour, founded by Trajan; exports wheat, alum, cheese, &c.

CLACKMANNANSHIRE, the smallest county in Scotland, lies between the Ochils and the Forth; rich in minerals, especially coal.

CLAIR, ST., a lake 30 m. long by 12 broad, connecting Lake Erie with Lake Huron.

CLAIRAUT, ALEXIS CLAUDE, a French mathematician and astronomer, born at Paris, of so precocious a genius that he was admitted to the Academy of Sciences at the age of 18; published a theory of the figure of the earth, and computed the orbit of Halley's comet (1718-1765).

CLAIRVAUX, a village of France, on the Aube, where St. Bernard founded a Cistercian monastery in 1115, and where he lived and was buried; now used as a prison or reformatory.

CLAIRVOYANCE, the power ascribed to certain persons in a mesmeric state of seeing and describing events at a distance or otherwise invisible.

CLAN, a tribe of blood relations descended from a common ancestor, ranged under a chief in direct descent from him, and having a common surname, as in the Highlands of Scotland; at bottom a military organisation for defensive and predatory purposes.

CLAN-NA-GAEL, a Fenian organisation founded at Philadelphia in 1870 to secure by violence the complete emancipation of Ireland from British control.

CLAPHAM, a SW. suburb of London, in the borough of Wandsworth, 4 m. from St. Paul's, with a large common; an important railway junction.

CLAPPERTON, HUGH, a noted African explorer, born at Annan; served in the navy, joined two expeditions into Central Africa to ascertain the length and course of the Niger, but on the second journey got no farther than Sokoto, where he was attacked with dysentery and died (1788-1827).

- CLARCHEN, a female character in Goethe's "Ermont," distinguished by qualities of constancy and devotion.
- CLARE, a county in Munster, Ireland, where cattle and sheep are largely reared; also an island at the mouth of Clew Bay, county Mayo.
- CLARE, JOHN, the peasant poet of Northamptonshire, born near Peterborough; wrote "Poems Descriptive of Rural Life and Scenery," which attracted attention, and even admiration, and at length, with others, brought him a small annuity, which he wasted in speculation; fell into despondency, and died in a lunatic asylum (1793-1864).
- CLARE, ST., a virgin and abbess, born at Assisi; the founder of the Order of Poor Clares (1193-1253). Festival, Aug. 12.
- CLAREMONT, a mansion in Surrey, 14 m. SW. of London, built by Lord Clive, where Princess Charlotte lived and died, as also Louis Philippe after his flight from France; is now the property of the King, and was the residence of the Duchess of Albany.
- CLARENCE, DUKE OF, brother of Edward IV.; convicted of treason, he was condemned to death, and being allowed to choose the manner of his death, is said to have elected to die by drowning in a butt of Malmsey wine (1459-1478); the last to bear the title was Albert Victor, eldest son of Edward VII.
- CLARENCEUX, or CLARENOIEUX, the provincial king-at-arms, whose jurisdiction extends from and includes all England S. of the Trent.
- CLARENDON, a place 2 m. SE. of Salisbury, in the royal palace of which the magnates of England, both lay and clerical, met in 1164 under Henry II., and issued a set of ordinances, called the Constitutions of Clarendon, 16 in number, to limit the power of the Church and assert the rights of the Crown in ecclesiastical affairs.
- CLARENDON, EDWARD HYDE, EARL OF, sat in the Short Parliament and the Long on the popular side, but during the Civil War became a devoted Royalist; was from 1641 one of the chief advisers of the King; on the failure of the royal cause, took refuge first in Jersey, and then in Holland with the Prince of Wales; contributed to the Restoration; came back with Charles, and became Lord Chancellor; fell into disfavour, and quitted England in 1667; died at Rouen; wrote, among other works, a "History of the Great Rebellion," dignifiedly written, though often carelessly, but full of graphic touches and characterisations, especially of contemporaries; it has been called an "epical composition," as showing a sense of the central story and its unfolding. "Few historians," adds Prof. Saintsbury, "can describe a given event with more vividness. Not one in all the long list of the great practitioners of the art has such skill in the personal character" (1609-1674).
- CLARENDON, GEORGE VILLIERS, EARL OF, a Whig statesman; served as a Cabinet minister under Lord Melbourne, Lord John Russell twice, Lord Aberdeen, Lord Palmerston, and Mr. Gladstone; held the office of Foreign Secretary under the three preceding; was Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland at the time of the potato failure, and represented Britain at the Congress of Paris; died in harness as Foreign Minister, deeply lamented both at home and abroad (1800-1870).
- CLARETTE, JULES, a French journalist, novelist, dramatic author, and critic, born at Limoges; published some 40 volumes of causeries, history, and fiction; appointed Director of the Comédie Française in 1893 (1840-1913).
- CLARISSA HARLOWE, the heroine of Richardson's novel of the same name, exhibiting a female character which, as depicted by him, is pronounced to be "one of the brightest triumphs in the whole range of imaginative literature," and is described by Stopford Brooke as "the pure and ideal star of womanhood."
- CLARK, SIR ANDREW, an eminent London physician, born near Cargill, in Perthshire, skilful in the treatment of diseases affecting the respiratory and digestive organs (1826-1893).
- CLARK, SIR JAMES, physician to Queen Victoria, born in Cullen; an authority on the influence of climate on chronic and pulmonary diseases (1788-1870).
- CLARK, JOSIAH, railway and electrical engineer; invented the electric battery named after him (1822-1898).
- CLARK, THOMAS, chemist, born in Ayr; discovered the phosphate of soda and the process of softening hard water (1801-1867).
- CLARKE, ADAM, a Wesleyan divine, of Irish birth; a man of considerable scholarship, best known by his "Commentary" on the Bible; author also of a Bibliographical Dictionary (1762-1882).
- CLARKE, CHARLES COWDEN, a friend of Lamb, Keats, and Leigh Hunt; celebrated for his Shakespearean learning; brought out an annotated Shakespeare, assisted by his wife; lectured on Shakespeare characters (1797-1877).
- CLARKE, EDWARD DANIEL, a celebrated English traveller, born in Sussex; visited Scandinavia, Russia, Circassia, Asia Minor, Syria, Palestine, Egypt, and Greece; brought home 100 MSS. to enrich the library of Cambridge, the colossal statue of the Eleusinian Ceres, and the sarcophagus of Alexander, now in the British Museum; was professor of mineralogy at Cambridge University. 1808; his "Travels" were published in six volumes (1769-1822).
- CLARKE, SIR EDWARD GEORGE, British lawyer. After early struggles as a reporter, he was called to the bar in 1869, made his name in the Penge murder trial; entered Parliament in 1880 as a Conservative, and was Solicitor-General from 1886 to 1892 (1841-).
- CLARKE, HENRI, Duc de Feltre, of Irish origin, French marshal, and Minister of War under Napoleon; instituted the provost court, a pro re nata court without appeal (1767-1818).
- CLARKE, MARY COWDEN, née Novello, of Italian descent, wife of Charles Cowden, assisted her husband in his Shakespeare studies, and produced among other works "Concordance to Shakespeare," a work which occupied her 16 years (1809-1898).
- CLARKE, WILLIAM GEORGE, English man of letters; Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge; edited the "Cambridge Shakespeare," along with Aldrich Wright (1821-1897).
- CLARKSON, THOMAS, philanthropist, born in Wisbech, Cambridgeshire; the great English anti-slavery advocate, who lived to see in 1833 the abolition in the British empire of the slavery he denounced, in which achievement he was assisted by the powerful advocacy in Parliament of Wilberforce (1780-1846).
- CLASSICO RACES, the English horse-races, the Derby, the Oaks, the St. Leger, the Two Thousand Guineas, and the One Thousand Guineas.
- CLASSICOS, originally, and often still, the standard authors in the literature of Greece or Rome, now authors in any literature that represent it at its best, when, as Goethe has it, it is "vigorous, fresh, joyous, and healthy," as in the "Nibelungen," no less than in the "Iliad."
- CLAUDE, JEAN, a French Protestant controversial divine, a powerful antagonist of Bossuet and other Catholic writers; allowed only 24 hours to escape on the eve of the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes, though other Protestant ministers were allowed 15 days (1619-1687).
- CLAUDE LORRAINE, a great landscape painter, born in Lorraine, of poor parents, and apprenticed to a pastry-cook; went as such to Rome; became servant and colour-grinder to Tassi, who instructed him in his art; by assiduous study of nature in all her aspects attained to fame; was eminent in his treatment of aerial perspective, and an artist whom it was Turner's ambition to rival; he was eminent as an etcher as well as a painter; Turner left one of his finest works to the English nation on condition that it should hang side by side with a masterpiece of Claude, which it now does; his pictures are found in every gallery in Europe, and a goodly number of them are to be met with in England; there are in the Leningrad gallery four pieces of exquisite workmanship, entitled "Morning," "Noon," "Evening," and "Twilight" (1600-1682).
- CLAUDIAN, a Latin epic poet of the 5th century, born in Alexandria, panegyrist of Stilicho on his victory over Alaric; a not unworthy successor of Catullus and Propertius, though his native tongue was Greek.

CLAUDIUS, APPIUS, a Roman decemvir and patrician in 451 B.C.; outraged Virginia, a beautiful plebeian damsel, whom her father, on discovering the crime, killed with a knife snatched from a butcher's stall, rousing thereby the popular rage against the decemvir, who was cast into prison, where he put an end to himself, 449 B.C.

CLAUDIUS, APPIUS, censor in 312-307 B.C.; wrought important changes in the Roman constitution; set on foot the construction of the Appian Way and the Appian Aqueduct, named after him.

CLAUDIUS I., TIBERIUS, surnamed GERMANICUS, brother of Tiberius, emperor of Rome from 41 to 54, born at Lyons; after spending 50 years of his life in private, occupying himself in literary study, was, on the death of Caligula, raised, very much against his wish, by the soldiers to the imperial throne, a post which he filled with honour to himself and benefit to the State; but he was too much controlled by his wives, of whom he had in succession four, till the last of them, Agrippina, had him poisoned to make way for her son Nero.

CLAUDIUS II., surnamed GOTHICUS, Roman emperor from 268 to 270; an excellent prince and a good general; distinguished himself by his ability and courage against the Goths and other hordes of barbarians.

CLAUSEL, BERTRAND, marshal of France, born at Mirepoix; served under Napoleon in Holland, Italy, Austria, and Spain; was defeated at Salamanca, executing thereafter a masterly retreat; left France for America in 1815 on the fall of Napoleon, to whom he was devoted; returned in 1830, became commander-in-chief in Algeria, and ultimately governor (1772-1842).

CLAUSEN, SIR GEORGE, British painter. Of Danish parentage, he studied at South Kensington and in Paris, was elected A.R.A. in 1836 and R.A. in 1908. His "Gleaners Returning" and "The Girl at the Gate" are in the Tate Gallery (1862-).

CLAUSEWITZ, KARL VON, a Prussian general, born at Burg; distinguished himself against Napoleon in Russia in 1812; an authority on the art of war, on which he wrote a treatise in three volumes, entitled "Vom Kriege" (1780-1831).

CLAUSIUS, RUDOLF, an eminent German physicist, born at Kœlin, in Pomerania; professor of Natural Philosophy at Bonn; specially distinguished for his contributions to the science of thermo-dynamics, and the application of mathematical methods to the study, as also to electricity and the expansion of gases (1822-1888).

CLAUVERHOUSE, JOHN GRAHAM OF, VISCOUNT DUNDEE, commenced life as a soldier in France and Holland; on his return to Scotland in 1677 was appointed by Charles II. to the command of a troop to suppress the Covenanters; was defeated at Drumclog 1679, but by the help of Monmouth had his revenge at Bothwell Brig; affected to support the Revolution, but intrigued in favour of the Stuarts; raised in Scotland a force in their behalf; was met at Killiecrankie by General Mackay, where he fell (1649-1689).

CLAVIERE, Minister of Finance in France after Necker, born at Geneva; projector of the Moniteur; friend of Mirabeau; committed suicide in prison (1735-1793).

CLAVIGO, a drama by Goethe in five acts, the first work to which he put his name; was received with disfavour.

CLAVIERO, FRANCISCO, a Jesuit missionary, born in Vera Cruz; laboured for 40 years as missionary in Mexico; on the suppression of his Order went to Italy, and wrote a valuable work on Mexico (1731-1787).

CLAVILEÑO, Don Quixote's wooden horse.

CLAY, a plastic material abundant in nature composed of silica and silicates of aluminum with varying quantities of iron, magnesia, potash, and soda, and used in the manufacture of bricks and earthenware. It is composed of the finer particles resulting from the weathering of rocks.

CLAY, HENRY, an American statesman, born in Virginia; bred for the bar, and distinguished for his oratory; was for many years Speaker of the House of Representatives; was a supporter of war with Britain in 1812-1815, and party to the treaty which ended it; was an advocate of protection; aspired three times unsuccessfully to the Presidency; his public career was a long and honourable one (1777-1852).

CLAYTON, REV. PHILIP THOMAS BYARD, British padre and founder of Talbot House (Toc H) in Poppertinghe, near Ypres, during the Great War, which he continued as a peacetime movement among young men (1885-).

CLEANTHES, a Stoic philosopher, born at Assos, in Troas, of the 3rd century B.C.; wrought as a drawer of water by night that he might earn his fee as pupil of Zeno by day; became Zeno's successor and the head of his school; regarded "pleasure as a renunciation of that moral energy of the soul, which alone is happiness, as an interruption to life, and as an evil, which was not in accordance with nature, and no end of nature"; killed himself by voluntary starvation.

CLEAR THE CAUSEWAY RIOTS, bickerings in the streets of Edinburgh in 1515 between the rival factions of Angus and Arran, to the utter rout of the former, or the Douglas party.

CLEAR, CAPE, a headland S. of Clear Island, most southerly point of Ireland, and the first land sighted coming from America.

CLEARCHUS, a Spartan general who accompanied Cyrus on his expedition against Artaxerxes; commanded the retreat of the Ten Thousand; was put to death by Tissaphernes in 401 B.C., and replaced by Xenophon.

CLEARING-HOUSE, a house for interchanging the respective claims of banks and of railway companies.

CLEISHBOTHAM, JEDEDIAH, an imaginary editor of Scott's "Tales of My Landlord."

CLELIA, a Roman heroine, who swam the Tiber to escape from Porcena, whose hostage she was; sent back by the Romans, she was set at liberty, and other hostages along with her, out of admiration on Porcena's part, on both her and her people.

CLEMENCEAU, GEORGES EUGENE BENJAMIN, French politician. Son of a doctor, he was elected in 1871 to the National Assembly as a Republican, and later was one of the supporters of the demand for justice for Dreyfus. He became Minister of the Interior in 1906 and Prime Minister from that year till 1909, separating the Church and State while in office and also cementing the Entente. He defeated Caillaux in 1912 and Briand in 1913, and becoming Premier again in 1917 he secured the appointment of Marshal Foch to command the army. He resigned in 1920 after presiding over the Peace Conference. He was known internationally as "The Tiger" (1841-1920).

CLEMENCEY, CHARLES, a French Benedictine, born near Autun; one of the authors of the great chronological work, "Art de Verifier les Dates," and wrote the history of the Port Royal (1703-1778).

CLEMENCIN, DIEGO, a Spanish statesman and litterateur; his most important work a commentary on "Don Quixote."

CLEMENS, SAMUEL LANGHORNE, an American humorist with the pseudonym of "Mark Twain," born at Florida, Missouri, U.S.; began his literary career as a newspaper reporter and a lecturer; his first book "The Jumping Frog"; visited Europe, described in the "Innocents Abroad"; married a lady of fortune; wrote largely in his peculiar humorous vein, such as "A Tramp Abroad," "Tom Sawyer," and "Huckleberry Finn"; produced with Dudley Warner a drama entitled "The Gilded Age," and compiled the "Memoirs of General Grant" (1856-1910).

CLEMENS ALEXANDRINUS, one of the Greek Fathers of the Church, of the 2nd and 3rd centuries; had Origen for pupil; brought up in Greek philosophy; converted in manhood to Christianity from finding in his appreciation of knowledge over faith confirmations of it in his philosophy, which he still adhered to; his "Stromata" or "Miscellanies" contain facts and quotations found nowhere else.

CLEMENT, the name of 14 Popes: C. I., Pope from 91 to 100; one of the Apostolic Fathers; wrote an Epistle to the Church of Corinth, with references to the Canonical books. C. II., Pope from 1046 to 1047. C. III., Pope from 1187 to 1191. C. IV.,

- Pope from 1265 to 1268. C. V., Bertrand de Goth, Pope from 1305 to 1314; transferred the seat of the Papacy to Avignon, and abolished the Order of the Knights Templars. C. VI., Pope from 1342 to 1352; resided at Avignon. C. VII., Giulio de Medici, Pope from 1523 to 1534; celebrated for his quarrels with Charles V. and Henry VIII., was made prisoner in Rome by the Constable of Bourbon; refused to sanction the divorce of Henry VIII., and brought about the schism of England from the Holy See. C. VIII., Pope from 1592 to 1606; a patron of Tasso; resided at Henry IV. to the Church and the Jesuits to France. C. IX., Pope from 1667 to 1669. C. X., Pope from 1670 to 1676. C. XI., Pope from 1700 to 1721; as Francesco Albani opposed the Jansenists; issued the bull Unigenitus against them; supported the Pretender and the claims of the Stuarts. C. XII., Pope from 1738 to 1740. C. XIII., Pope from 1758 to 1769. C. XIV., Pope from 1769 to 1774, Ganganelli, an able, liberal-minded, kind-hearted, and upright man; abolished the Order of the Jesuits out of regard to the peace of the Church; his death occurred not without suspicions of foul-play.
- CLEMENT, French critic, born at Dijon, surnamed by Voltaire from his severity the "Inclement" (1742-1812).
- CLEMENT, a French manufacturer and savant, born near Dijon; author of a memoir on the specific heat of the gases (1779-1841).
- CLEMENT, JACQUES, a Dominican monk; assassinated Henry III. of France in 1589.
- CLEMENT, ST., St. Paul's coadjutor, the patron saint of tanners; his symbol an anchor.
- CLEMENTI, MUZIO, a musical composer, especially of pieces for the pianoforte, born in Rome; was the father of pianoforte music; one of the foremost pianists of his day; was buried in Westminster (1752-1832).
- CLEMENTINE, THE LADY, a lady, accomplished and beautiful, in Richardson's novel, "Sir Charles Grandison," in love with Sir Charles, who marries another he has no partiality for.
- CLEOBULUS, one of the seven sages of Greece; friend of Plato; wrote lyrics and riddles in verse, 530 B.C.
- CLEOMEROTUS, a philosopher of Ephesus, so fascinated with Plato's "Iphedon" that he leapt into the sea in the expectation that he would thereby exchange this life for a better.
- CLEOMEDES, a Greek astronomer of the 1st or 2nd century; author of a treatise which regards the sun as the centre of the solar system and the earth as a globe.
- CLEOMENES, the name of three Spartan kings.
- CLEOMENES, an Athenian sculptor, who, as appears from an inscription on the pedestal, executed the statue of the Venus de Medici towards 220 B.C.
- CLEON, an Athenian demagogue, surnamed the Tanner, from his profession, which he forsook that he might champion the rights of the people; rose in popular esteem by his victory over the Spartans, but being sent against Brasidas, the Spartan general, was defeated and fell in the battle, 422 B.C.; is regarded by Thucydides with disfavour, and by Aristophanes with contempt, but both these writers were of the aristocracy, and possibly prejudiced, though the object of their disfavour had many of the marks of the vulgar agitator, and stands for the type of one.
- CLEOPATRA, Queen of Egypt, a woman distinguished for her beauty, her charms, and her amours; first fascinated Caesar, to whom she bore a son, and whom she accompanied to Rome, and after Caesar's death took Mark Antony captive, on whose fall and suicide at Actium she killed herself by applying an asp to her arm, to escape the shame of being taken to Rome to grace the triumph of Augustus, the victor (69-30 B.C.).
- CLEOPATRA'S NEEDLE, an obelisk of 186 tons weight and 68½ ft. high, brought from Alexandria to London by Sir Erasmus Wilson in 1878, and erected on the Thames Embankment, London.
- CLERO, or LECLERO, JEAN, a French theologian of the Arminian school, born at Geneva; a prolific author; wrote commentaries on all the books of the Old Testament, on lines since followed by the Rationalist school or Neologians of Germany (1657-1736).
- CLERFAYT, COMTE DE, an Austrian general, distinguished in the Seven Years' War; commanded with less success the Austrian army against the French armies of the Revolution (1738-1798).
- CLERK, SIR DUGALD, engineer, actively engaged during the Great War on research work for the Navy and Air Force (1854-).
- CLERK, JOHN, OF ELIDIN, of the Penicuik family, an Edinburgh merchant, first suggested the naval manoeuvre of "breaking the enemy's lines," which was first successfully adopted against the French in 1782 (1728-1812).
- CLERK, JOHN, son of preceding, a Scottish judge, under the title of Lord Eldin, long remembered in Edinburgh for his wit (1757-1832).
- CLERKENWELL, a parish in Finsbury, London, originally an aristocratic quarter, now the centre of the manufacture of jewellery and watches.
- CLERMONT, ROBERT, COMTE DE, sixth son of St. Louis, head of the house of Bourbon.
- CLERMONT FERRAND, the ancient capital of Auvergne, and chief town of the dep. Puy-de-Dôme; the birthplace of Pascal, Gregory of Tours, and Dossais, and where, in 1095, Pope Urban II. convoked a council and decided on the first Crusade; it has been the scene of seven Church Councils.
- CLERMONT-TONNERRE, MARQUIS, minister of France under the Restoration of the Bourbons (1770-1865).
- CLERY, Louis XVI.'s valet, who waited on him in his last hours, and has left an account of what he saw of the king's touching farewell with his family.
- CLEVELAND, a hilly district in the North Riding of Yorkshire, rich in ironstone, famous for its breed of horses.
- CLEVELAND, the second city of Ohio, on the shores of Lake Erie, 230 m. N.E. of Cincinnati; is built on a plain considerably above the level of the lake; the winding Cuyahoga River divides it into two parts, and the industrial quarters are on the lower level of its banks; the city is noted for its wealth of trees in the streets and parks, hence called "The Forest City," and for the absence of tenement houses; it has a university, several colleges, and two libraries; it is the terminus of the Ohio Canal and of seven railways, and the iron ore of Lake Superior shores, the limestone of Lake Erie islands, and the Ohio coal are brought together here, and every variety of iron manufacture carried on; there is a great lumber market, and an extensive general trade.
- CLEVELAND, GROVER, President of the United States, born in New Jersey, son of a Presbyterian minister; bred for the bar; became President in the Democratic interest in 1885; unseated for his free-trade leaning by Senator Harrison, 1889; became the President a second time in 1893; retired in 1897 (1837-1908).
- CLEVELAND, JOHN, partisan of Charles I.; imprisoned for abetting the Royalist cause against the Parliament, but after some time set at liberty in consequence of a letter he wrote to Cromwell pleading that he was a poor man, and that in his poverty he suffered enough; he was a poet, and used his satirical faculty in a political interest, one of his satires being an onslaught on the Scots for betraying Charles I. (1613-1658).
- CLEVE, a Prussian town 46 m. N.W. of Düsseldorf, once the capital of a duchy connected by a canal with the Rhine; manufactures textile fabrics and tobacco.
- CLICHY, a manufacturing suburb of Paris, on the N.W. and right bank of the Seine, with oil, candle, and chemical factories.
- CLIFF DWELLINGS, the name given to very ancient houses built in recesses of cliffs in New Mexico, Colorado, Arizona, and other parts of Western America, these structures being the work of a people anterior to the Pueblo Indians. Many such dwellings, of which ruins remain, are several hundreds of feet from the ground, and access to them was probably made by ladders or ropes.
- CLIFFORD, GEORGE, Earl of Cumberland, a distinguished naval commander under Queen Elizabeth, and one of her favourites (1558-1605).

- CLIFFORD, JOHN, D.D. Baptist minister in London, a leader of Nonconformist thought, and active in temperance, housing of the poor, and other social matters; author of "Is Life Worth Living?" (1886-1924).
- CLIFTON, a fashionable suburb of Bristol, resorted to as a watering-place; romantically situated on the sides and crest of high cliffs, whence its name. It is the site of a famous public school.
- CLIFTON, WILLIAM, American poet, one of the earliest of the post-revolutionary writers (1772-1799).
- CLIMACOTERIC, THE GRAND, the 68rd year of a man's life, and the average limit of it; a climacteric being every seven and nine years of one's life, and reckoned critical.
- CLINKER, HUMPHRY, the hero of Smollett's novel, a poor walf, reduced to want, who attracts the notice of Mr. Bramble, marries Mrs. Bramble's maid, and proves to be a natural son of Mr. Bramble.
- CLINTON, GEORGE, American general and statesman; was governor of New York; became Vice-President in 1804 (1789-1812).
- CLINTON, SIR HENRY, an English general; commanded in the American war; censured for failure in the war; wrote an exculpation, which was accepted (1788-1795).
- CLINTON, HENRY FYNES, a distinguished chronologist, author of "Fasti Hellenici" and "Fasti Romani" (1781-1852).
- CLIO, the muse of history and epic poetry, represented as seated with a half-opened scroll in her hand.
- CLISSON, OLIVIER DE, constable of France under Charles VI.; companion in arms of Du Guesclin, and victor at Roosebeke (1326-1407).
- CLISTHENES, an Athenian, uncle of Pericles, procured the expulsion of Hippas the tyrant, 510 B.C., and the establishment of Ostracism (q.v.).
- CLIVE, MRS., nee KITTY RAFFOR, a famous comedy actress of the time of Garrick and Johnson; distinguished by her uprightness of character as by her histrionic gifts (1711-1785).
- CLIVE, ROBERT, LORD OLIVE AND BARON FLASSBY, the founder of the dominion of Britain in India, born in Shropshire; at 19 went out a clerk in the East India Company's service, but quitted his employment in that capacity for the army; distinguishing himself against the rajah of Tanjore, was appointed commissary; advised an attack on Arcot, in the Carnatic, in 1751; took it from and held it against the French, after which, and other brilliant successes, he returned to England, and was made Lieutenant-colonel in the king's service; went out again, and marched against the nabob Surajah Dowlah, and overthrew him at the battle of Plassey, 1757; established the British power in Calcutta, and was raised to the peerage; finally returned to England possessed of great wealth, which exposed him to the accusation of having abused his power; the accusation failed; in his grief he took to opium, and committed suicide (1725-1774).
- CLODIUS, a profligate Roman patrician; notorious as the enemy of Cicero, whose banishment he procured; was killed by the tribune Milo, 52 B.C.
- CLODOMIR, the second son of Clovis, king of Orleans from 511 to 524; fell fighting with his rivals; his children, all but one, were put to death by their uncle, Clotaire and Childeric.
- CLOOTZ, ANACHARSIS, Baron Jean Baptiste de Cloots, a French Revolutionary, born at Clèves; "world-citizen"; his faith that "a world federation is possible, under all manner of customs, provided they hold men"; his pronomen Anacharsis suggested by his resemblance to an ancient Scythian prince who had, like him, a cosmopolitan spirit; was one of the founders of the worship of Reason, and styled himself the "orator of the human race"; became a member of the Convention and was among those who voted for the King's death; was guillotined under protest in the name of the human race (1755-1794).
- CLORENDA, a female Saracen knight of romantic origin sent against the Crusaders, whom Tancred fell in love with, but slew on an encounter at night; before expiring she received Christian baptism at his hands; her story is told in Tasso's "Jerusalem Delivered."
- CLOTAIRE I., son and successor of Clovis, king of the Franks from 568; cruel and sanguinary; along with Childeric murdered the sons of his brother Clodomir.
- C. II., son of Childeric and Fredigonde, king of the Franks from 613 to 628; caused Brunhilda to be torn in pieces.
- C. III., son of Clovis II., King of Neustria and Burgundy from 656 to 670.
- C. IV., king of ditto from 717 to 720.
- CLOTIO, that one of the three Fates which spins the thread of human destiny.
- CLOTILDA, ST., the wife of Clovis I.; persuaded her husband to profess Christianity; retired into a monastery at Tours when he died (475-545). Festival, June 8.
- CLOUD, ST. the patron saint of smiths.
- CLOUD, ST. or CLODOALD, third son of Clodomir, who escaped the fate of his brothers, and retired from the world to a spot on the left bank of the Seine, 6 m. SW. of Paris, named St. Cloud after him.
- CLOUDS, THE, the play in which Aristophanes exposes Socrates to ridicule.
- CLOUGH, ANNE, a pioneer in the higher education of women, appointed the first principal of Newnham College, Cambridge (1820-1892).
- CLOUGH, ARTHUR HUGH, British poet. Educated under Arnold at Rugby, he dealt with Victorian religious and social problems, and is best known for his "Say not the struggle naught availeth" (1819-1861).
- CLOVIS I., king of the Franks, son of Childeric I.; conquered the Romans at Soissons 486, which he made his centre; married Clotilda (q.v.) 493; beat the Germans near Cologne 496, by assistance, as he believed, of the God of Clotilda, after which he was baptized by St. Remi at Rheims; and overthrew the Visigoths under Alaric II. near Poitiers in 507, after which victories he made Paris his capital.
- C. II., son of Dagobert; was king of Neustria and Burgundy from 638 to 656.
- C. III., son of Thierry III., and king of ditto from 691 to 695, and had Pepin d'Héristal for mayor of the palace.
- CLUNY, a town in the dep. of Saône-et-Loire, on an affluent of the Saône; renowned in the Middle Ages for its Benedictine abbey, founded in 910 and the most celebrated in Europe, having been the mother establishment of 2000 others of the like elsewhere; in ecclesiastical importance it stood second to Rome, and its abbey church second to none prior to the erection of St. Peter's; a great normal school was established here in 1855.
- CLUSIUM, an ancient city of Etruria, now Chiusi.
- CLUTHA, the largest river in New Zealand, in Otago, very deep and rapid, and 200 m. long.
- CLUTTERBUCK, CAPTAIN, the imaginary author of the "Fortunes of Nigel," and the patron to whom Scott's "Abbot" is dedicated.
- CLYDE, a river in the W. of Scotland which falls into a large inlet or firth, as it is called, the commerce on which extends over the world, and on the banks of which are shipbuilding yards second to none in any other country; it is deepened as far as Glasgow for ships of a heavy tonnage.
- CLYDE, LORD. See CAMPBELL, COLIN.
- CLYNES, RT. HON. JOHN ROBERT, British politician. As a boy he worked in a cotton factory, took up trade unionism and entered Parliament in 1906 as a Labour M.P. In 1917 he took office under the Coalition, became Food Controller in 1918 and resigned at the end of the Great War. In the Labour Government of 1924 he was Lord Privy Seal, and in that of 1925 Home Secretary (1869-).
- CLYTEMNESTRA, the wife of Agamemnon, and the mother of Iphigenia, Electra, and Orestes; killed her husband, and was killed by her son Orestes seven years after.
- CLYTIE, a nymph in love with Apollo, god of the sun, who did not respond to her; but, with all the passion he durst show to her, turned her into a sunflower.
- COAL GAS, is obtained by heating bituminous coal to a high temperature; it consists of about 50 per cent. of hydrogen and 80 per cent. of marsh gas, as well as some carbon monoxide and small quantities of other gases. Gas was first used for street lighting in Manchester in 1805, and two years later in London.

COAL TAR PRODUCTS, these substances obtained by the separation of the tar formed as a by-product in gas works and coke ovens. As well as cresote oil, anthracene, and pitch, they include the large number of substances used as dyes and in medicines that are obtained from the benzene, toluene, phenol, and aniline in the tar. About 200 different substances have been isolated in coal tar, and well over 2000 have been derived from them, including dyes, drugs, and synthetic perfumes and essences.

COALITION GOVERNMENT, a union of Conservatives and Liberals formed in the Great War. The first with Asquith as Prime Minister was formed in May, 1915, and fell in December, when Lloyd George took control of the 2nd Coalition. Re-elected in 1918 the Coalition Government lasted till 1922, when Conservative support was withdrawn.

COANZA, a W. African river, which rises in the Mossamba Mountains, falling into the sea after a course of 600 m.; owing to falls is navigable for only 120 m. from its mouth.

COAST RANGE, a range in the U.S., W. of the Sierra Nevada, parallel to it, with the Sacramento Valley between.

COASTGUARDS were organised to prevent smuggling in the old days and were largely abolished in 1925.

COATES, JOHN, British singer. He first appeared as a tenor at the Savoy in 1894, and subsequently sang throughout the world in opera (1895-).

COATES, RT. HON. JOSEPH GORDON, New Zealand statesman. Son of a doctor, he was born and educated in New Zealand, and entered the House of Representatives in 1911. During the Great War he served with the New Zealand forces in France, winning the M.C. After holding various posts he became Prime Minister in 1925 (1878-).

COBALT, a grey metallic element that enters into the composition of certain alloys; it is also used for colouring glass, etc.

COBBETT, WILLIAM, a political and miscellaneous writer, born at Farnham, Surrey; commenced life as a farm labourer and then as copying clerk; enlisted, and saw seven years' service in Nova Scotia; being discharged, travelled in France and America; on his return started the Weekly Register, at first Tory, then Radical; published a libel against the Government, for which he was imprisoned; on his release issued his Register at a low price, to the immense increase of its circulation; vain attempts were made to crush him, against which he never ceased to protest; after the passing of the Reform Bill he got into Parliament, but made no mark; his writings were numerous, and include his "Grammar," his "Cottage Economy," his "Rural Rides," and his "Advice to Young Men"; his political opinions were extreme, but his English was admirable (1762-1835).

COBBLER POET, Hans Sachs (q.v.).

COBDEN, RICHARD, a great political economist and the Apostle of Free Trade, born near Midhurst, Sussex; became partner in a cotton-trading firm in Manchester; made a tour on the Continent and America in the interest of political economy; on the formation of the Corn-Law League in 1838, gave himself heart and soul to the abolition of the Corn Laws; became Member of Parliament for Stockport in 1841; on the conversion of Sir Robert Peel to Free Trade principles saw these laws abolished in 1846; for his services in this cause he received the homage of his country as well as of Continental nations, but refused all civic honours, and finished his political career by negotiating a commercial treaty with France (1804-1865).

COBENTZELL, COMTE DE, an Austrian diplomatist, born at Brussels; negotiated the treaties of Campo Formio and Lunéville; founded the Academy of Sciences at Brussels (1753-1808).

COBBHAM, SIR ALAN JOHN, British aviator. Joining the Air Force during the Great War, he took up civil aviation on its completion, flew round Europe in 1921, from London to Rangoon and back in 1924, and from England to Australia and England to Cape Town in 1928 (1894-).

COBLENZ, a fortified city, manufacturing and trading centre, in Prussia, at the junction of the Rhine and the Moselle, so called as at the confluence of the two; opposite it is Ehrenbreitstein. It was the headquarters of the American army of occupation after the Great War.

COBRA, known as the Cobra di Capello, or hooded snake; a highly venomous species found in southern Asia, particularly in India and Malay; when irritated expands the back of the head and neck into a kind of hood bearing a spectacle marking; the African cobra is allied to this species.

COBURG, capital of the duchy of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, on the Itz, the old castle on a height 500 ft. above the town; gave shelter to Luther in 1580, and was besieged by Wallenstein.

COBURG, field-marshal of Austria; vanquished Dumouriez at Neerwinden; was conquered by Moreau and Jourdan (1787-1815).

COCAINE, an alkaloid from the leaf of the coca plant, used as an anæsthetic.

COCCHEUS, or KOCH, JOHANN, a Dutch divine, professor at Leyden; held that the Old Testament was a type or foreshadow of the New, and was the founder of the federal theology, or the doctrine that God entered into a threefold compact with man, first prior to the law, second under the law, and third under grace (1603-1689).

COCCHEI, HENRY, learned German jurist, born at Bremen; an authority on civil law; was professor of law at Frankfurt (1644-1719).

COCCHEI, SAMUEL, son of the preceding; Minister of Justice and Chancellor of Prussia under Frederick the Great; a prince of lawyers, and "a very Hercules in cleaning law stables" as law-reformer (1679-1755).

COCHABAMBA, a high-lying city of Bolivia, capital of a department of the name; has a trade in grain and fruits.

COCHIN, a native state in India N. of Travancore, occupied up between W. Ghats and the Arabian Sea, with a capital of the same name, where Vasco da Gama died; the first Christian church in India was built here, and there is here a colony of black Jews.

COCHIN-CHINA, the region E. of the Mekong, or Annam proper, called E. Cochinchina (capital Hué), and Low Cochinchina; a State E. of Indo-China, and E. of Cambodia and Annam, belonging to France, with an unhealthy climate; rice the chief crop; grows also teak, cotton, &c.; capital Saigon.

COCHINEAL, an insect cultivated for the red dye which is used as colouring matter in the confectionery trade.

COCHLEUS, JOHANN, an able and bitter antagonist of Luther (1479-1552).

COCHRANE, the name of several English naval officers of the Dundonald family; Sir Alexander Forrester Inglis (1758-1832); Sir Thomas John, his son (1798-1872); and Thomas, Lord. See DUNDONALD.

COCK LANE GHOST, a ghost which was reported in a lane of the name in Smithfield, London, in 1762, to the excitement of the public, but found to be due to a girl named Parsons rapping on a board in bed.

COCKAIGNE, an imaginary land of idleness and luxury, from a satirical poem of that name (coquina, a kitchen), where the monks live in an abbey built of pasties, the rivers run with wine, and the geese fly through the air ready roasted. The name has been applied to London and Paris.

COCKATRICE, a monster with the wings of a fowl, the tail of a dragon, and the head of a cock; alleged to have been hatched by a serpent from a cock's egg; its breath and its fatal look are in medieval art the emblem of sin.

COCKBURN, SIR ALEXANDER, Lord Chief Justice of England from 1850; called to the bar in 1820; became Liberal member for Southampton in 1847, and Solicitor-General in 1850; was prosecutor in the Palmer case, judge in the Tichborne trial, and an arbitrator in the Alabama dispute (1802-1880).

COCKBURN, ALISON, author of "Flowers of the Forest," and other songs; in her day the leader of Edinburgh society; was acquainted with Burns, and recognised in his boyhood the genius of Scott (1713-1794).

COCKBURN, SIR GEORGE, an English admiral, born in London; rose by rapid stages to be captain of a frigate; took an active part in the expedition to the Scheldt, in the defence of Cadix and of the coast of Spain; was second in command of the expedition against the United States; returned to England in 1815, and was selected to convey Napoleon to St. Helena (1772-1853).

COCKBURN, HENRY, LORD, an eminent Scottish judge, born in Edinburgh; called to the bar in 1800; one of the first contributors to the Edinburgh Review; was Solicitor-General for Scotland in 1830, and appointed a judge four years after; was a friend and colleague of Lord Jeffrey; wrote Jeffrey's Life, and left "Memorials of His Own Time" and "Journals"; he was a man of refined tastes, shrewd common sense, quiet humour, and a great lover of his native city and its memorials (1779-1854).

COCKNEY, a term for one born and bred in London, and knowing little or nothing beyond it, and betraying his limits by his ideas, manners, and accent.

COCKNEY SCHOOL, a literary school, so called by Lockhart, as inspired with the idea that London is the centre of civilisation, and including Leigh Hunt, Hazlitt, and others.

COCKPIT OF EUROPE, Belgium, as the scene of so many battles between the Powers of Europe.

COCKTON, HENRY, a novelist, born in London, author of "Valentine Vox" and "Sylvester Sound" (1807-1853).

COCLIS, HORATIUS, a Roman who defended a bridge against the army of Porsena till the bridge was cut down behind him, when he leapt into the river and swam across scathless amid the darts of the enemy; immortalised in Macaulay's "Lays of Ancient Rome."

COCOS ISLANDS, a group of 20 small coral islands about 700 m. SW. of Sumatra.

COCYTUS, a river in Epirus, Greece, which was associated by the ancients with Hades and assumed to environ it with bitter and muddy waters.

CODDRINGTON, SIR EDWARD, a British admiral; entered the navy at 13; served under Howe at Breck, in the capacity of captain of the Orion at Trafalgar, in the Walcheren expedition, in North America, and at Navarino in 1827, when the Turkish fleet was destroyed; served also in Parliament from 1832 to 1839, when he was appointed Commander-in-Chief at Portsmouth (1770-1851).

CODDRINGTON, SIR WILLIAM JOHN, a British general, son of the preceding; served in the Crimean war, and was Commander-in-Chief after the death of General Simpson; subsequently Governor of Malta (1804-1844).

CODRUS, the last king of Athens; sacrificed his life to fulfil an oracle, which promised victory to the side whose king fell in an engagement between the Athenians and Dorians in 1132 B.C.

CODY, SAMUEL FRANKLIN, British aviator. American by birth, he became a naturalised Englishman, constructed a man-lifting kite in 1906, was the first man to fly in England, and made the first successful flying machine, keeping it in the air for 27 minutes in 1908. He was killed in an air accident in 1913 (1861-1913).

CODY, WILLIAM FREDERICK (Buffalo Bill), American cowboy and showman. He won his title by killing 5000 buffaloes in 18 months to feed workmen during the construction of the Kansas Pacific Railway; served in the Indian wars as a scout; in his later years conducted a popular Wild West show (1846-1917).

OOEHOO, BARON VAN, a Dutch military engineer; fortified Namur, and defended it against Vauban; was successful in besieging many towns during the war of the Spanish Succession; author of a treatise on fortification (1641-1704).

COGLE-SYRIA (the Howe of Syria), or El Buks'a, a valley between the Lebanon, about 100 m. long by 10 m. broad; it is traversed by the river Orontes.

COGLIAN, one of the seven hills of Rome, S. of the Capitoline.

COELLIO, the name of two Spanish painters in the 16th and 17th centuries, whose works are in the Escorial.

COEUR, JACQUES, a rich merchant of Bourges financier to Charles VII., for whom he provided the sinews of war against the English, but who banished him at the instigation of detractors; he was reinstated under Louis XI. (1400-1456).

COEUR DE LION (Lion-hearted), a surname on account of their courage given to Richard I. of England (1151), Louis VIII. of France (1181), and Boleslas I. of Poland (960).

COFFEE HOUSES, as popular resorts, were opened in London in 1659; they became the meeting-place of coteries of business and literary men, among the most famous being Garraway's in Change Alley, the Jerusalem, Will's, and Lloyd's, from the last-named springing the great institution known by its name.

COGNAC, a French town in the dep. of Charente, birthplace of Francis I.; famous for its vines and the manufacture of brandy.

COGNET, a French painter, author of "Tintoretto painting his Dead Daughter" (1794-1880).

COHERER, an instrument used for detecting signals in the early days of wireless telegraphy; it consisted of loosely packed particles which only conducted an electric current when under the influence of electromagnetic waves.

COILA, a poetic name for Kyle, the central district of Ayrshire, but sometimes applied to all Scotland, as by Burns.

COIMBATORE, a town of strategic importance in the Madras Presidency, 30 m. SW. of Madras, situated in a gorge of the Ghats, 1437 ft. above the sea-level, in a district of the same name.

COIMBRA, a rainy town in Portugal, of historical interest, 110 m. NNE. of Lisbon, with a celebrated university, in which George Buchanan was a professor, where he was accused of heresy and thrown into prison, and where he translated the Psalms into Latin.

COKE, the residue of carbon and earthy matter after the volatile constituents of coal are driven off by heat in closed spaces. Coke is one of the by-products in the manufacture of coal gas and is produced for industrial use in coke ovens. There is a large demand for coke for reducing metals from their ores.

COKE, SIR EDWARD, Lord Chief Justice of England, born at Milham, Norfolk; being a learned lawyer, rose rapidly at the bar and in offices connected therewith; became Lord Chief Justice in 1613; was deposed in 1617 for opposing the king's wishes; sat in the first and third Parliaments of James I., and took a leading part in drawing up the Petition of Rights; spent the last three years of his life in revising his works, his "Institutes," known as "Coke upon Littleton," and his valuable "Reports" (1562-1634).

COLBERT, JEAN BAPTISTE, a French statesman of Scottish descent, born in Rheims, the son of a clothier; introduced to Louis XIV. by Mazarin, then first minister; he was appointed Controller-General of the Finances after the fall of Fouquet, and by degrees made his influence felt in all the departments of State affairs; he favoured by protectionist measures—free trade not yet being heard of—French industry and commerce; was to the French marine what Louvois was to the army, and encouraged both arts and letters; from 1671 his influence began to decline; he was held responsible for increased taxation due to Louis XIV.'s wars, while the jealousy of Louvois weakened his credit at Court; he became so unpopular that on his death his body was buried at night, but a grateful posterity has recognised his services, and done homage to his memory as one of the greatest ministers France ever had (1619-1683).

COLBURN, ZERAH, an American youth with an astonishing power of calculation, born in Vermont, and exhibited as a prodigy, but lost the faculty when he grew up to manhood (1804-1840).

COLCHESTER, the largest town in Essex, 51 m. from London, on the right bank of the Colne, of great antiquity, and with Roman remains; has been long famous for its oyster fishery; has silk manufactures; is the port of outlet of a large corn-growing district.

COLCHESTER, CHARLES ABBOT, LORD, English statesman; sometime Chief Secretary of Ireland and Speaker of the House of Commons; raised to the peerage in response to an address of the House of Commons (1757-1829).

COLCHIS, a district on the E. of the Black Sea, and S. of Caucasus, where the Argonauts, according to Greek tradition, found the Golden Fleece; the natives had a reputation for witchcraft and sorcery. COLDSTREAM GUARDS, one of the three regiments of Foot Guards; was raised by General Monk in Scotland in 1660, and marched under him from Coldstream to place Charles II. on the throne; originally called Monk's regiment.

COLE, HENRY, an English ecclesiastical zealot who held handsome preferences, including the deanery of St. Paul's, under Henry VIII. and Mary, but was stripped of them under Edward VI. and Elizabeth (1500-1580).

COLBROOK, HENRY THOMAS, a celebrated Eastern scholar, born in London; served under the East India Company, and devoted his spare time to Indian literature; studied the Sanskrit language, wrote on the Vedas, translated the "Digest of Hindu Law" compiled by Sir William Jones, produced a Sanskrit Dictionary, and wrote various treatises on the law and philosophy of the Hindus; he was one of the first scholars in Europe to reveal the treasures that lay hid in the literature of the East (1765-1837).

COLENSO, DR., an English clergyman and mathematician; was appointed bishop of Natal in 1845; applied himself to the study of the Zulu language, and translated parts of the Bible and Prayer-book into it; calling in question the accuracy and Moslem authorship of the Pentateuch, was deposed by his metropolitan, which deposition was declared null and void by the Privy Council; besides his theological work, produced text-books on arithmetic and algebra; died at Durban, Natal; he favoured the cause of the Zulus against the Boers, and did his utmost to avert the Zulu war (1814-1883).

COLERIDGE, HARTLEY, an English man of letters, eldest son of Samuel Taylor Coleridge, born at Clevedon, Somerset; lived with his father in the Lake District, and grew up in the society of Wordsworth, De Quincey, and others; gained a Fellowship at Oxford, but forfeited it through intemperance; tried schoolmastering at Bristol, but failed, and took to literature, in which he did some excellent work, both in prose and poetry, though he led all along a very irregular life; had his father's weaknesses and not a little of his ability; his best memorials as a poet are his sonnets, of which two have been especially admired, "The Soul of Man is Larger than the Sky," and "When I Survey the Course I have Run" (1796-1849).

COLERIDGE, HENRY NELSON, nephew of Samuel Taylor Coleridge; editor of many of his works, his "Table Talk" in particular (1800-1843).

COLERIDGE, JOHN DUKE, LORD, an English lawyer, cousin of Hartley Coleridge; after serving in inferior appointments, appointed Lord Chief Justice of England in 1880; when at the bar he was prominent in connection with the Tichborne case (1820-1894).

COLERIDGE, SIE JOHN TAYLOR, an English judge, nephew of Samuel Taylor Coleridge; was editor of the Quarterly, edited "Blackstone," &c.; wrote a "Memoir of the Rev. John Keble" (1790-1876).

COLERIDGE, SAMUEL TAYLOR, poet, philosopher, and critic, born in Devonshire; passionately devoted to classical and metaphysical studies; educated at Christ's Hospital; had Charles Lamb for schoolmate; at Cambridge devoted himself to classics; falling into debt enlisted as a soldier, and was, after four months, bought off by his friends; gave himself up to a literary life; married, and took up house near Wordsworth, in Somersetshire, where he produced the "Ancient Mariner," "Christabel," and "Remorse"; preached occasionally in Unitarian pulpits; visited Germany and other parts of the Continent; lectured in London in 1803; when there took to opium, broke off the habit in 1816, and went to stay with the Gilmans at Highgate as their guest, under whose roof, after four years' confinement to a sick-room, he died; among his works were "The Friend," his "Biographia Literaria," "Aids to Reflection," &c., published in his lifetime, and "Confessions of an Inquiring Spirit," "Literary Remains," and "Table Talk" after his death; he was a man of subtle and large intellect, and exercised a great influence on the thinkers of his time, though in no case was the influence a decisive one, as it had the most opposite effects on different minds; his philosophy was hazy, and his life was without aim, "once more the tragic story of a high endowment with an insufficient will" (1772-1834). See Carlyle's estimate of him in the "Life of Sterling."

COLERIDGE, SARA, poetess, only daughter of preceding; her sole poem, "Phantasmion"; left "Letters" of interest (1802-1852).

COLERIDGE-TAYLOR, SAMUEL, British composer of part-African descent who set to music portions of Hiawatha, and wrote a cantata called "The Atonement" (1876-1912).

COLLES, COWPER PERCIVAL, an English naval captain and architect; entered the navy at 14; distinguished himself at Sebastopol; designer of the turret-ship the Captain, which capsized off Finisterre, himself being drowned with a crew of 500 men (1818-1870).

COLET, JOHN, dean of St. Paul's, a patron of learning, a friend and scholar of Erasmus, a liberal and much persecuted man; as a theologian far in advance of his time; founded and endowed St. Paul's School; wrote a number of works, chiefly theological, and "Letters to Erasmus" (1466-1519).

COLIGNY, GASPARD DE, French admiral, born at Chatillon; a leader of the Huguenots; joined the army and distinguished himself as a soldier; when the Guises came into power he busied himself in procuring toleration for the Huguenots, and succeeded in securing in their behalf what is known as the Pacification of Ambrose, but on St. Bartholomew's Eve, 1572, he fell the first victim to the conspiracy known as the Massacre of St. Bartholomew (1517-1572).

COLIMA, capital of a State of the same name in Mexico.

COLIN CLOUT, the name Spenser assumes in the "Shepherd's Calendar" and other poems.

COLIN TAMPOON, the nickname of a Swiss, as John Bull is of an Englishman.

COLISEUM, a magnificent amphitheatre in Rome, begun under Vespasian and finished under Titus; it rose from the area by 80 tiers of seats, and could contain 80,000 spectators; it was here the gladiators fought with wild beasts, and also the early Christians were thrown to the lions.

COLLATINUS, the nephew of Tarquinus Priscus, the husband of Lucretia, and with Brutus, her avenger, the first consul of Rome; d. 509 B.C.

COLLÈGE DE FRANCE, an institution founded at Paris by Francis I. in 1530, where instruction is given to advanced students in several departments of knowledge.

COLLIER, ARTHUR, an English metaphysician, born in Wilt; studied Descartes and Malebranche; anticipating Berkeley, he published a "Demonstration of the Non-Existence and the Impossibility of an External World" (1680-1732). See BERKELEY.

COLLIER, JEREMY, an English non-juring divine, refused to take oath at the Revolution; was imprisoned for advocating the rights of the Stuarts; had to flee the country at length, and was outlawed; wrote with effect against "The Profaneness and Immorality of the Stage," as well as an "Ecclesiastical History of Great Britain," and a translation of the "Meditations of Marcus Aurelius" (1650-1726).

COLLIER, HON. JOHN, eminent British painter, son of Lord Monkswell; born in London; studied in England, Germany, and France; painted "The Last Voyage of Henry Hudson," now in the Tate Gallery, "The Garden of Armida," and other notable works (1850-).

COLLIER, JOHN PAYNE, a Shakespearean commentator and critic; wrote a great deal on various subjects, but got into trouble by his emendations of Shakespeare which were declared to be forgeries (1789-1833).

COLLINGWOOD, OUTBERT, LORD, a celebrated English admiral, entered the navy at 13; his career was intimately connected all along with that of Nelson; succeeded in command when Nelson fell at Trafalgar, and when he died himself, which happened at sea, his body was brought home and buried beside Nelson's in St. Paul's Cathedral (1750-1810).

COLLINS, ANTHONY, an English dilet, an intimate friend of Locke; his principal works were "Discourse on Freethinking," "Philosophical Inquiry into Liberty and Necessity," and "Grounds and Reasons of the Christian Religion," which gave rise to much controversy; he was a necessitarian, and argued against revelation (1676-1729).

COLLINS, MICHAEL, Irish politician. One of the leaders of the Irish Republican rebel army, he was a signatory of the treaty under which the Irish Free State was set up, an act for which his political associates never forgave him. He was shot in an ambush in 1922 (1890-1922).

COLLINS, MORTIMER, a versatile genius, born at Plymouth; gave up scholastic work to write poems, novels, and essays; was the author of "Who was the Heir?" and "Sweet Anne Page" (1827-1876).

COLLINS, WILKIE, English novelist, son of the succeeding, born in London; tried business, then law, and finally settled to literature; his novel "The Woman in White" was the first to take with the public, this being followed by "The Moonstone," "Poor Miss Finch," and other works; for some years was associated with Dickens on Household Words and All the Year Round; produced two dramas (1824-1880).

COLLINS, WILLIAM, R.A., a distinguished English painter, born in London; he made his reputation by his treatment of coast and cottage scenes, and though he tried his skill in other subjects, it was in those he started with that he achieved his greatest triumphs; among his best-known works are "The Blackberry Gatherers," "As Happy as a King," "The Fisherman's Daughter," and "The Bird-Catchers" (1788-1847).

COLLINS, WILLIAM, a gifted and ill-fated English poet, born at Chichester; settled in London; fell into dissipated habits and straitened circumstances; had £2000 left him by an uncle, but both health and spirits were broken, and he died in mental imbecility; his "Odes" have not been surpassed, among which the most celebrated are the "Odes to the Passions," to "Simplicity," and to "Evening" (1721-1759).

COLLINSON, PETER, an English horticulturist to whom we are indebted for the introduction into the country of many ornamental shrubs (1694-1768).

COLLOIDS, the name given to substances which, when in suspension in a liquid, are in a very fine state of division and only differ from true solutions in their inability to pass through certain membranes. Many organic substances give colloidal solutions; the process of separation of the colloids from the crystalline substances in a solution is known as dialysis.

COLLOT D'HERBOIS, JEAN MARIE, a violent French Revolutionary, originally a tragic actor, once hissed off the Lyons stage, "tearing a passion to rags"; had his revenge by a wholesale butchery there; marched 200 men across the Rhone to be shot; by-and-by was banished beyond seas to Cayenne, and soon died there (1750-1796).

COLLYER, JOSEPH, an eminent stipple engraver, born in London (1768-1827).

COLMAN, GEORGE, an English dramatist, born at Florence; bred for and called to the bar; author of a comedy entitled "The Jealous Wife," also of "The Claudine Marriage"; became manager of Drury Lane theatre, then of the Haymarket (1732-1794).

COLMAN, GEORGE, son of the preceding, and his successor in the Haymarket theatre; author of "The Iron Chest," "John Bull," "The Heir at Law," &c. (1768-1886).

COLMAR, the chief town of Upper Alsace, on the Lauch, on a plain near the Vosges, 42 m. SW. of Straßburg; passed into the hands of the French by treaty of Ryswick in 1697, was ceded to Germany in 1871, and regained by the Treaty of Versailles in 1919.

COLOCEFRONIS, a Greek patriot, born in Messina, distinguished himself in the War of Independence, which he chiefly contributed to carry through to a successful issue (1770-1843).

COLOGNE, in German KÖLN, capital of Rhenish Prussia, and a fortress of first rank, on the left bank of the Rhine, 175 m. SE. of Rotterdam; is a busy commercial city, and is engaged in eau-de-Cologne, sugar, tobacco, and other manufactures. It has some fine old buildings, and a picture gallery; but its glory is its great cathedral, founded in the 9th century, burnt in 1248, since which time the rebuilding was carried on at intervals, and only completed in 1880; it is one of the masterpieces of Gothic architecture. From 1918 to 1925 the city was the headquarters of the British Army of Occupation.

COLOGNE, THE THREE KINGS OF, the three Magi who paid homage to the infant Christ, and whose bones were consigned to the archbishop in 1164; they were called Gaspar, Melchior, and Balthazar.

COLOMBIA, a republic in the NW. corner of S. America, between Venezuela, Ecuador, and Panama, with 1100 m. of coast on the Caribbean Sea and 1040 on the Pacific. The country comprises in the W. three chains of the Andes and the plateaus between them, in the E. plains well watered by tributaries of the Orinoco. The upper valleys of the Magdalena and Cauca are the centres of population, where the climate is delightful and grain grows. The railways lead mostly to the Magdalena; the roads are mostly mule tracks. Every climate is found in Colombia, from the tropical heats of the plains to the Arctic cold of the mountains. Natural productions are as various; the exports include valuable timbers and dyewoods, cinchona bark, coffee, cacao, cotton, and silver. Most of the trade is with Britain and the United States. Manufactures are inconsiderable. The mineral wealth is very great, but little wrought. The people are descendants of Spaniards, Indians, and Negroes; education is meagre, but compulsory; the State Church is Roman Catholic. Colombia was formerly a confederation of states which were formed into one republic in 1886, and from it Panama seceded in 1908. The capital is Bogotá.

COLOMBO, the capital of Ceylon, and the chief port on the W. coast; it is surrounded on three sides by the sea, and on the other by a lake and moat; it is supplied with water and gas, has many fine buildings; has a very mixed population, and has belonged to Britain since 1796; connected with Kandy by railway.

COLON, a town at the Atlantic terminus of the Panama Railway and Canal. See ASPENWALL.

COLONNA, an illustrious Italian family, to which belonged popes, cardinals, and generals.

COLONNA, VITTORIA, a poetess, married to a member of the above family, who consoled herself for his early death by cultivating her poetic gift; one of her most devoted friends was Michael Angelo (1492-1547).

COLONNE, EDOUARD, musical conductor, born at Bordeaux, conductor of what are known as "Colonne Concerts" (1838-1910).

COLONUS, a deme of Attica, a mile NW. of Athens, the birthplace of Sophocles.

COLOPHON, an Ionian city in Asia Minor, N. of Ephesus, is supposed to give name to the device at the end of books, the cavalry of the place being famous for giving the finishing stroke to a battle.

COLORADO, an inland State of the U.S.A., traversed by the Rocky Mountains and watered by the upper reaches of the S. Platte and Arkansas Rivers, is twice as large as England. The mountains are the highest in the States (13,000 to 14,000 ft.), are traversed by lofty passes through which the railways run, have rich spacious valleys or parks among them, and have great deposits of gold, silver, lead, and iron. There are also extensive coal-beds; hence the leading industries are mining and iron-working. The eastern portion is a level, treeless plain, adapted for grazing. Agriculture, carried on with irrigation, suffers from insect plagues like the Colorado potato beetle. The climate is dry and clear, and attracts invalids. Acquired partly from France in 1804, and the rest from Mexico in 1848, the territory was organised in 1861, and admitted to the Union in 1876. The capital is Denver. There is a small Spanish-speaking population in the State.

COLOSSE, a city in the S. of Phrygia, in Asia Minor, and the site of one of the earliest Christian churches.

COLOSSIANS, THE EPISTLE TO THE, by St. Paul, directed mainly against two errors of that early date, that the fleshly nature of man is no adequate vehicle for the reception and revelation of the divine nature, and that for redemption recourse must be had to direct mortification of the flesh.

COLOSSUS, any gigantic statue, especially one of Apollo in bronze, 120 ft. high, astride over the mouth of the harbour at Rhodes, reckoned one of the seven wonders of the world, erected in 280 B.C., destroyed by an earthquake 56 years after, and sold to a Jew centuries later for old metal; besides this are celebrated the statue of Memnon at Thebes, the Colossi of Athens in the Parthenon at Athens, and of Zeus at Olympia and at Tarentum, as well as others of modern date, for instance, Germania, 112 ft. high, in the Niederwald, and Liberty enlightening the World, 160 ft. high, in New York harbour.

COLOIT, the name of a family of French surgeons in the 16th and 17th century, distinguished for their skill in operating in the case of stone.

COLOUR-BLINDNESS, inability to distinguish between colours, and especially between red and green, more common among men than women; a serious disqualification for several occupations, such as those connected with the study of signals.

COLQUHOUN, JOHN, a noted sportsman and writer on sport in Scotland, born in Edinburgh (1805-1885).

COLTON, EDWARD, an English philanthropist, founded and endowed a school in Bristol for the education of 100 boys, as well as almshouses elsewhere (1686-1721).

COLT, SAMUEL, the inventor of the revolver and repeating rifle, born in Hartford, Connecticut, U.S.; having difficulty in raising money to carry out his invention it proved a commercial failure, but being adopted by the Government in the Mexican war the rifle proved a success, since which time it has been everywhere in use (1814-1862).

COLUMBA, ST., the apostle of Christianity to the Scots, born in Donegal; coming to Scotland about 563, in his forty-second year, founded a monastery in Iona, and made it the centre of his evangelistic operations, in which work he was occupied incessantly till 596, when his health began to fail, and he breathed his last kneeling before the altar, June 9, 597.

COLUMBAN, ST., an Irish missionary, who, with twelve companions, settled in Gaul in 585; founded two monasteries, but was banished for the offence of rebuking the king; went to Italy, and founded a monastery at Bobbio, where he died 616.

COLUMBIA, a district of 70 sq. m. in the State of Maryland, U.S., in which Washington, the capital of the Union, stands.

COLUMBIA, BRITISH, the most westerly province in Canada, lies between the Rocky Mountains and the Pacific, the United States and Alaska, and is four times the size of Great Britain. It is a mountainous country, rugged and picturesque, containing the highest peaks on the continent, Mount Hooker, 15,700 ft. and Mount Bowen, 16,000 ft. with a richly indented coast-line, off which lie Queen Charlotte Islands and Vancouver. The chief river is the Fraser, which flows from the Lake region southwards through the centre and then westward to the Gulf of Georgia; the upper waters of the Columbia flow southward through the E. of the State. The climate resembles that of northern England, but is in some parts very rainy. The chief industries are: lumbering—the forests are among the finest in the world; fishing—the rivers abound in salmon and sturgeon; and mining—rich deposits of gold, silver, iron, copper, mercury, antimony, and many other valuable minerals are found. There are great coalfields in Vancouver. In Vancouver and in the river valleys of the mainland are extensive tracts of arable and grazing land. Made a Crown colony in 1858, it joined the Dominion as a province in 1871. The completion of the Canadian Pacific Railway in 1885 joined it to the eastern provinces. The capital is Victoria, in the S. of Vancouver.

COLUMBUS, capital of Ohio, U.S., a manufacturing town with important educational institutions.

COLUMBUS, BARTHOLOMEW, cosmographer, brother of Christopher Columbus; accompanied him to San Domingo, and became governor; d. 1515.

COLUMBUS, CHRISTOPHER, discoverer of America, on Oct. 12, 1492, after two months of great peril and, in the end, mutiny of his men; born in Genoa; went to sea at 14; cherished, if he did not conceive, the idea of reaching India by sailing westward; applied in many quarters for furtherance; after seven years of waiting, was provided with three small vessels and a crew of 180 men; first touched land at the Bahamas, visited Cuba and Hayti, and returned home with spoils of the land; was hailed and honoured as King of the Sea; he made three subsequent visits, and on the third had the satisfaction of landing on the mainland, which Sebastian Cabot and Amerigo Vesputi had reached before him; he became at last the victim of jealousy, and charges were made against him, which so cut him to the heart that he never rallied from the attack, and he died at Valladolid, broken in body and in soul (1435-1506).

COLUMELLA, JUNIUS, a Latin writer of the 1st century, born at Cadix; author of "De Re Rustica," in 12 books, on the same theme as Virgil's "Georgics," viz., agriculture and gardening; he wrote also "De Arboribus," on trees.

COLUTHUS, a Greek epic poet of 6th century, born in Egypt; wrote the "Rape of Helen."

COLVIN, SIR SIDNEY, Fellow of Trinity, Cambridge, Slade Professor of Art at Cambridge, born at Newwood; contributor to the journals on art and literature; wrote Lives of Keats and Landor; friend of Robert Louis Stevenson, and his literary executor (1845-1927).

COMACCHIO, a walled town in Italy, 80 m. S.E. of Ferrara; famous for fish, especially eel-culture in a large lagoon adjoining, 90 m. in circumference.

COMANCHEES, a tribe of North American Indians of warlike character; once frequenting Arkansas and the Rio Grande, they were finally settled in Oklahoma.

COMBE, WILLIAM, born in Bristol; author of the "Three Tours of Dr. Syntax"; inherited a small fortune, which he squandered by an irregular life, wrote some 80 works (1741-1838).

COMBERMER, VISCOUNT, a British field-marshal, born in Denbighshire; served in Flanders at the Cape of Good Hope, and in India; was present at the siege of Seringapatam; was sent to Spain in 1808; distinguished himself in the Peninsula, and particularly at Talavera; received a peerage in 1827; was made commander-in-chief in India, and Constable of the Tower in succession to Wellington in 1832 (1778-1865).

COMENIUS, JOHN AMOS, a Moravian educational reformer, particularly as regards the acquisition of languages in their connection with the things they denote; his two most famous books are his "Janua Linguarum" and his "Orbis Sensualium Pictus"; his principle at bottom was, words must answer to and be associated with things and ideas of things (1592-1670).

COMETS, heavenly bodies consisting of a diffuse nebulous head, a nucleus and a tail which may extend for millions of miles; their orbits are extremely elongated, and although one may be close to the sun in one part of its course, it may be beyond Neptune in another part. Their periods vary from 3 to 80 years in the cases of those comets which have appeared at least twice; some have never appeared a second time, and their periods have been computed at millions of years. The majority of the comets lie within the orbit of Jupiter. Among the best known are Morehouse's, Halley's, Encke's, and Biela's.

COMINES, a French town in the dep. of Nord, France, 15 m. S.W. of Courtrai.

COMINES, PHILIPPE DE, a French chronicler, born at Comines; was of Flemish origin; served under Charles the Bold, then under Louis XI, and Charles VIII.; author of "Memoires," in seven vols., of the reigns of these two monarchs, which give a clear and faithful picture of the time and the chief actors in it, but with the coolest indifference as to the moral elements at work, with him the end justifying the means, and success the measure of morality (1448-1509).

COMITIA, constitutional assemblies of the Roman citizens for electing magistrates, putting some question to the vote of the people, the declaration of war, &c.

COMMELIN, ISAAC, Dutch historian; wrote the "Lives of the Stadtholders William I. and Maurice" (1598-1676).

COMMENTARIES OF JULIUS CESAR, his memoirs of the Gallic and Civil Wars, reckoned the most perfect model of narration that in such circumstances was ever written.

COMMITTEE OF PUBLIC SAFETY, a committee of nine created by the French Convention, April 6, 1793, to concentrate the power of the executive, "the conscience of Marat, who could see salvation in one thing only, in the fall of 280,000 aristocrats' heads"; notable, therefore, for its excesses in that line; was not suppressed till Oct. 19, 1796, on the advent of the Directory to power.

COMMODOUS, LUCIUS AURELIUS, Roman emperor, son and successor of Marcus Aurelius; carefully trained, but on his father's death gave himself over to every form of licentiousness; poison administered by his mistress Marcia being slow in operating, he was strangled to death by a hired athlete in 192.

COMMON LAW is law established by usage and confirmed by judicial decision.

COMMONS, THE HOUSE OF, the main chamber of the British legislature. First meeting in 1295, the House consisted of representatives of the shires, cities, and boroughs, and met in the refectory of Westminster Abbey, election being confined to freeholders. In the reign of Edward VI. the Commons moved to St. Stephen's Chapel in Westminster Palace, and under the Tudors membership rose to over 400. The events of 1640 and 1688 gave increased power to the House, which was largely controlled by the landed gentry through pocket boroughs till their power was curtailed by a series of Reform Acts starting in 1832 and ending in 1929, with the attainment of universal suffrage over the age of 21. Under the Parliament Act of 1911 the House of Commons has the sole right of handling financial matters, and is virtually supreme in governing the country in so far as it can control the Cabinet. In 1884 the House had 670 members, the Act of 1918 raised it to 707, and the establishment of the Irish Free State reduced it to 615. Members are paid £400 a year and given free railway passes to their constituencies.

COMMUNE, THE, a revolutionary power installed in Paris after the "admonitory" insurrection of March 18, 1871, and overthrown in the end of May.

COMMUNISM, a system under which all property is commonly owned and administered by the State. Russia tried out the system in a modified form in 1918 with unsatisfactory results.

COMMUTATOR, a contrivance forming part of a dynamo which reverses the connections at regular intervals, producing a direct continuous current instead of the alternating current generated in the coils.

COMNE'NUS, name of a dynasty of six emperors of Constantinople.

COMO, LAKE OF, one of the chief lakes of Lombardy and the third in size, at the foot of the Pennine Alps, 30 m. long and 2½ at greatest breadth; is traversed by the Adda, and is famed for the beauty and rich variety of its scenery.

COMORIN, CAPE, a low sandy point, the most southerly of India, from which the seaman is warned off by a peak 18 m. inland.

COMORO ISLES, an archipelago of four volcanic islands at the N. of the channel of Mozambique; under the protectorate of France since 1886; the people are Mohammedans, and speak Arabic.

COMPANY, JOHN, the nickname given to the English East India Company.

COMPIÈGNE, a quiet old town in the dep. of Oise, 50 m. N.E. of Paris; has some fine old churches, but the chief edifice is the palace, built by St. Louis and rebuilt by Louis XIV., where the marriage of Napoleon to Maria Louisa was celebrated; here Joan of Arc was made prisoner in 1430, and Louis Napoleon had a bunting ground.

COMPOUNDS, CHEMICAL, substances composed of two or more elements, which are always present in the same proportion; generally speaking, the properties of a compound are quite different from those of its constituent elements.

COMPTON, HENRY, bishop of London, son of the Earl of Northampton; fought bravely for Charles I.; was colonel of dragoons at the Restoration; left the Army for the Church; was made bishop; crowned William and Mary when the archbishop, Sancroft, refused; d. 1713.

COMRIE, a village in Perthshire, on the Earn, 20 m. W. of Perth, in a beautiful district of country; subject to earthquakes from time to time; birth-place of George Gilfillan.

COMTE, AUGUSTE, a French philosopher, born at Montpellier, the founder of Positivism (q.v.); enough to say here it consisted of a new arrangement of the sciences into Abstract and Concrete, and a new law of historical evolution in science from a theological through a metaphysical to a positive stage, which last is the ultimate and crowning and alone legitimate method, that is, observation of phenomena and their sequence; Comte was first a disciple of St. Simon, but he quarrelled with him; commenced a "Cours de Philosophie Positive" of his own, in six vols.; but, finding it defective on the moral side, he instituted a worship of humanity, and gave himself out as the chief priest of a new religion (1798-1857).

CONUL, the Roman deity who presided over festive revelries; the title of a poem by Milton, "the most exquisite of English or any masques."

COMYN, JOHN (the Black Comyn), Lord of Badenoch, a Scottish noble of French descent, his ancestor, born at Comines, having come over with the Conqueror and got lands given him; was one of the competitors for the Scottish crown in 1201, and lost it.

COMYN, JOHN (the Red Comyn), son of the preceding; as one of the three Wardens of Scotland defended it against the English, whom he defeated at Roslin; but in 1304 submitted to Edward I., and, falling under suspicion of Bruce, was stabbed by him in a monastery at Dumfries in 1306.

CONCEPCION, a town in Chile, S. of Valparaiso, with its port, Talcahuano, 7 m. off, one of the safest and most commodious in the country; it ranks next to Valparaiso as a trading centre.

CONCEPTION OF OUR LADY, an order of nuns founded in Portugal in 1484; at first followed the rule of the Cistercians, but afterwards that of St. Clare.

CONCIERGE'RIE, a prison in the Palais de Justice, Paris.

CONCLAVE, properly the room, generally in the Vatican, where the cardinals are confined under lock and key while electing a Pope.

CONCORD, a town in U.S., 23 m. NW. of Boston; was the residence of Emerson, Thoreau, and Hawthorne; here the first engagement took place in the American war in 1775.

CONCORD, capital of New Hampshire, U.S., a thriving trading centre.

CONCORDAT, THE, a convention of July 15, 1801, between Bonaparte and Pius VI., regulative of the relations of France with the Holy See.

CONCORDE, PLACE DE LA, a celebrated public place in Paris, formed by Louis XV. in 1748, adorned by a statue of him; at the Revolution it was called Place de la Revolution; here Louis XVI. and his queen were guillotined.

CONCORDIA, the Roman goddess of peace, to whom Caninius the dictator in 367 B.C. dedicated a temple on the conclusion of the strife between the patricians and plebeians.

CONDÉ, HENRY I., PRINCE OF, fought in the ranks of the Huguenots, but escaped the massacre of St. Bartholomew by an oath of abjuration (1552-1688).

CONDÉ, HOUSE OF, a collateral branch of the house of Bourbon, the members of which played all along a conspicuous rôle in the history of France.

CONDÉ, LOUIS I., PRINCE OF, founder of the house of Condé, a brave, gallant man, though deformed; distinguished himself in the wars between Henry II. and Charles V., particularly in the defence of Metz; affronted at court, and obnoxious to the Guises, he became a Protestant, and joined his brother, the king of Navarre; became the head of the party, and was treacherously killed after the battle of Jarnac; he had been party, however, to the conspiracy of Amboise, which aimed a death-blow at the Guises (1530-1569).

CONDÉ, LOUIS II., PRINCE OF, named "the Great Condé," born at Paris; was carefully educated; acquired a taste for literature, which stood him in good stead at the end of his career; made his reputation by his victory over the Spaniards at Rocroi; distinguished himself at Fribourg, Nordlingen, and Lens; the settlement of the troubles of the Fronde alienated him, so that he entered the service of Spain, and served against his country, but was by-and-by reconciled; led the French army to success in Franche-Comté and Holland, and soon after retired to Chantilly, where he enjoyed the society of such men as Molière, Boileau, and La Bruyère, and when he died Bossuet pronounced a funeral oration over his grave (1621-1686).

CONDÉ, LOUIS JOSEPH, PRINCE DE, born at Chantilly; served in the Seven Years' war; attended in the antechamber in the palace when Louis XV. lay dying; was one of the first to emigrate on the fall of the Bastille; seized every opportunity to save the monarchy; was declared a traitor to the country, and had his estates confiscated for threatening to restore Louis XVI.; organized troops to aid in the Restoration; settled at Malinesbury, in England, during the Empire; returned to France with Louis XVIII. (1730-1818).

CONDENSER, an electrical contrivance placed in a circuit to increase its capacity. Variable condensers are inserted in wireless circuits for tuning purposes; the Leyden jar is a form of condenser.

CONDILLAC, ETIENNE BONNOT, a French philosopher, born at Grenoble, of good birth; commenced as a disciple of Locke, but went further, for whereas Locke was content to deduce empirical knowledge from sensation and reflection, he deduced reflection from sensation, and laid the foundation of a sensationalism which, in the hands of his successors, went further still and swamped the internal in the external, a postulation which is now approaching the stage of self-cancelling zero; he lived as a recluse, and had Rousseau and Diderot for intimate friends (1715-1780).

CONDITIONAL IMMORTALITY, the doctrine that only believers in Christ have any future existence, a dogma founded on certain isolated passages of Scripture.

CONDOR, a large species of vulture native to South America and found chiefly in the Andes; it preys upon animals and is dangerous to man when attacked.

CONDORCET, MARQUIS DE, a French mathematician and philosopher, born near St. Quentin; contributed to the "Encyclopédie"; was of the Encyclopedist school; took sides with the Revolutionary party in the interest of progress; voted with the Girondists usually; suspected by the extreme party; was not safe; even under concealment; "skulked round Paris in thickets and stone-quarries; entered a tavern one bleared May morning, ragged, rough-bearded, hunger-stricken, and asked for breakfast; having a Latin Horace about him, was suspected and haled to prison, breakfast unfinished; fainted by the way with exhaustion; was flung into a damp cell, and found next morning lying dead on the floor"; his works are voluminous, and the best known is his "Esquisse du Progrès de l'Esprit Humain"; he was not an original thinker, but a clear expositor (1743-1794).

CONDOTTIERI, leaders of Italian free-lances who in the 14th and 15th centuries lived by plunder or hired themselves to others for a share in the spoils.

CONY, an animal mentioned four times in the Bible and alleged to be the Hyrax Syriacus, or rock-badger, which resembles the rabbit; the name is also applied to the common rabbit.

CONY ISLAND, a district of New York, at the entrance to the harbour, which, with its extensive beach and numerous side-show attractions, is a popular resort.

CONFEDERATE STATES, 11 Southern States of the American Union which seceded in 1861 on the question of slavery and which occasioned a civil war that lasted till 1865.

CONFEDERATION OF THE RHINE, a confederation of 16 German States which in 1806 dissolved their connection with Germany and leagued with France and which lasted till disaster overtook Napoleon in Russia, and then broke up; the Germanic Confederation, or union of all the States, took its place, till it too was dissolved by the defeat of Austria in 1866, which gave ascendancy to Prussia and ensured the erection of the German Empire on its ruins.

CONFESSIONS OF FAITH are statements of doctrine very similar to Creeds, but usually longer and polemical, as well as didactic; they are in the main, though not exclusively, associated with Protestantism; the 16th century produced many, including the Sixty-seven Articles of the Swiss reformers, drawn up by Zwingli* in 1523; the Augsburg Confession of 1530, the work of Luther and Melancthon, which marked the breach with Rome; the Tetrapolitan Confession of the German Reformed Church, 1530; the Gallican Confession, 1559; and the Belgic Confession of 1561. In Britain the Scots Confession, drawn up by John Knox in 1560; the Thirty-nine Articles of the Church of England in 1562; the Irish Articles in 1615; and the Westminster Confession of Faith in 1647; this last, the work of the Westminster Assembly of Divines, has by its force of language, logical statement, comprehensiveness, and dependence on Scripture commended itself to the Presbyterian Churches of all English-speaking peoples and is the most widely recognised Protestant statement of doctrine; it has as yet been modified only by the United Presbyterian Church of Scotland, which adopted a Declaratory Statement regarding certain of its doctrines in 1879, and by the Free Church of Scotland, which adopted a similar statement in 1890.

CONFESSIONS OF ST. AUGUSTINE, an account which that Father of the Church gives of the errors of his youth and his subsequent conversion.

CONFUCIUS, the Latin form of the name of the great sage of China, K'ung fu-tze (i.e. K'ung, the philosopher), the founder of a religion which is based on the worship and practice of morality as exemplified in the lives and teachings of the wise men who have gone before and who, as he conceived, have made the world what it is, and have left it to posterity to build upon the same basis; while he lived he was held in greater and greater honour by multitudes of disciples; after his death he became an object of worship, and even his descendants came to be regarded as a kind of sacred caste; he flourished between 550 and 479 B.C.

CONGÉ D'ÉLISE, a warrant granted by the Crown to the dean and chapter of a cathedral to elect a particular bishop to a vacant see.

CONGO, the second in length and largest in volume of the African rivers, rises N.E. of the Muchinga Mountains in Rhodesia, flows S.W. through Lake Bangweulu, then N. to the equator; curving in a great semicircle it continues S.W., passes in a series of rapids through the coast range, and enters the S. Atlantic by an estuary 6 m. broad. It brings down more water than the other African rivers put together. The largest affluents are the Kasai on the left, and the Mobangi on the right bank; 110 m. are navigable to ocean steamers, then the cataracts intervene, and 250 m. of railway promote transit; the upper river is 2 to 4 m. broad and navigable for small craft up to Stanley Falls, 1068 m. The name most associated with its exploration is H. M. Stanley; during its course of 3000 m. it bears several names.

CONGO, BELGIAN, embraces most of the basin of the Congo, touching British territory in Uganda and Rhodesia, with a very narrow outlet to the Atlantic at the river mouth. It was under the sovereignty of Leopold II. of Belgium, who, in 1890, made over his rights to Belgium with power to annex the State in 1900. It is nine times the size of Great Britain. Native unrest formerly gave great trouble to its administrators. Its waters are open to all nations, and traders exchange manufactured goods for ivory, palm-oil, coffee, and caoutchouc, beeswax, and fruits. The climate is tropical, on the lower levels malarial. The centre of administration is Boma, 80 m. from the sea.

CONGO, FRENCH, a continuous and connected territory extending westward along the right bank of the Congo from Brazzaville to the mouth of the Mobangi, and as far as 4° N. behind the Cameroons, and along the E. of Shari to Lake Chad.

CONGREGATIONALISM, the ecclesiastical system which regards each congregation of believers in Christ a church complete in itself and free from the control of the other Christian communities, and which extends to each member equal privileges as a member of Christ's body. It took its rise in England about 1571, and the most prominent name connected with its establishment is that of Robert Brown (d. 1710), who seceded from the Church of England and formed a church in Norwich in 1580. The body was called Brownists after him, and Separatists, as well as Independents. The several congregations are now united in what is called "The Congregational Union of England and Wales."

CONGRESS is a diplomatic conference at which the representatives of sovereign States discuss matters of importance to their several countries, the most celebrated of which are those of Munster and Osnabrück, which issued in the treaty of Westphalia in 1648, at the end of the Thirty Years' war; of Rastadt, at the end of the Spanish Succession war, in 1718; of Vienna, at the end of Napoleon's wars, in 1815; of Paris, in 1856, at the end of Russian war; and of Berlin, in 1878, at the end of Russo-Turkish war; but the name has come to be applied in federal republics to the legislative assembly which directs national as distinct from State concerns. In the United States, Congress consists of the Senate, elected by the State legislatures, and the House of Representatives, elected directly by the people. It meets on the first Monday in December and receives the President's message for the year. It imposes taxes, contracts loans, provides for national defence, declares war, looks after the general welfare, establishes postal communication, coins money, fixes weights and measures, &c., &c., but it is prohibited from preferential treatment of the several States, establishing or interfering with religion, curtailing freedom of speech, or pursuing towards any citizen, even under legal forms, a course of conduct which is unjust or even oppressive.

CONGRESSES, the Belgian Constituent Assembly, 1830-1831.

CONGREVE, RICHARD, author of political tracts, was a pupil of Dr. Arnold and a disciple of Comte in philosophy (1818-1899).

CONGREVE, WILLIAM, English comic dramatist, born near Leeds; entered a student of the Middle Temple, but soon abandoned law for literature; the "Old Bachelor" first brought him into repute, and a commission of substantial value; the production of "Love for Love" and the "Mourning Bride," a stilted tragedy, added immensely to his popularity, but his comedy "The Way of the World" being coldly received, he gave up writing plays, and only wrote a few verses afterwards; he was held in great esteem by his contemporaries, among others Dryden, Pope, and Steele (1670-1729).

CONGREVE, SIR WILLIAM, an English artillery officer, inventor of the rocket which bears his name (1772-1828).

CONICS, the name given in geometry to those figures obtained by the section of a cone by a plane surface, viz.: the ellipse, circle, parabola, hyperbola, or a pair of straight lines.

CONINGKEY, a novel by Disraeli.

CONINGTON, JOHN, classical scholar and professor of Latin at Oxford, born at Boston, translator of the "Æneid" of Virgil, "Odes, Satires, and Epistles" of Horace, and 12 books of the "Iliad" into verse, as well as of other classics; his greatest work is his edition of Virgil (1828-1869).

CONISBURGH CASTLE, an old round castle referred to in "Ivanhoe," 5 m. SW. of Doncaster.

CONISTON WATER, a lake 5 m. long and 1 m. broad, at the foot of Coniston Fells, in Lancashire, with Brantwood on the E. side of it, formerly the residence of John Ruskin.

CONKLING, ROSCOE, an American politician, a leading man on the Republican side; was a member of the House of Representatives, and also of the Senate; retired from politics, and practised law at New York (1829-1898).

CONNAUGHT, a western province of the Irish Free State, 105 m. long and 92 m. broad, divided into five counties; is the smallest, and most barren of the provinces, but abounds in picturesque scenery; the people are pure Celts.

CONNAUGHT, DUKE OF, the third son of Queen Victoria, held several military appointments; he was with the 1882 expedition to Egypt, was made a field-marshal in 1902, commanded the Mediterranean forces 1907-1909, and was Governor-General of Canada 1911-1916 (1850-).

CONNECTICUT, southernmost of the New England States, is washed by Long Island Sound, has New York on the W., Rhode Island on the E., and Massachusetts on the N. It is the third smallest State, rocky and uneven in surface, fertile except in the Connecticut River valley. Streams abound, and supply motive power for very extensive manufactures of clocks, hardware, india-rubber goods, smallwares, textiles, and firearms. There are iron-mines in the NW., stone-quarries, lead, copper, and cobalt mines. Climate is healthy, changeable, and in winter severe. Education is excellently provided for. Yale University, at New Haven, is thoroughly equipped; there are several divinity schools, Trinity College at Hartford, and the Wesleyan University at Middletown. The capital is Hartford; New Haven is the largest town and chief port. The original colony was a democratic secession from Massachusetts, 1636. The constitution of 1639 was the first written democratic constitution on record. Its present constitution as a State dates from 1818.

CONNECTICUT, a river in the United States which rises on the confines of Canada, and, after a course of 450 m., falls into the Atlantic at Long Island.

CONNEMARA, a wild district with picturesque scenery in W. of co. Galway, Ireland; noted for its quarries of a green variety of marble.

CONOLLY, JOHN, physician, born in Lincolnshire, studied at Edinburgh, settled in London; distinguished for having introduced and advocated a more rational and humane treatment of the insane (1794-1866).

CONRAD, CADET OF THE HOUSE OF HOHEN-ZOLLERN, served under the illustrious Barbarossa; married the heiress of the Vohburgs; was appointed Burggraf of Nürnberg, 1170, and prince of the empire.

CONRAD, MARQUESS OF TYRE, threw himself into Tyre when beset by Saladin, and held it till Richard Cœur de Lion and Philip Augustus arrived; was assassinated by emissaries of the Old Man of the Mountain in 1192.

CONRAD I., count of Franconia, elected on the extinction of the Carolingian line Emperor of the Germans, which he continued to be from 911 to 915; fell wounded in battle with the Huns, spurred on by a rival.

CONRAD II., the Salic, of the same family as the preceding; elected Emperor of Germany in 1024; reigned 15 years, extending the empire, suppressing disorders, and effecting reforms.

CONRAD III., founder of the Hohenstaufen dynasty; elected Emperor of Germany in 1138; had Henry the Proud, as head of the German Guelphs, for rival; crushed him at Weinsberg; joined Louis VII. of France on a third crusade, and, returning, overthrew the Guelphs again, leaving Barbarossa as his heir; d. 1152.

CONRAD, JOSEPH, novelist. By birth a Pole, he spent most of his time in England and wrote without trace of his foreign birth. "Almayer's Folly," published in 1895, was his first work, and it was succeeded by many other novels. A master mariner by calling, his books are largely tales of the sea, written in vivid fashion (1857-1924).

CONRAD OF THURINGIA, a proud, quick, fiery-tempered magnate, seized the archbishop of Mainz once and threatened to cut him in two; stormed, plundered, and set fire to an imperial free town for an affront offered him; but, admonished by his sins, became penitent and reconciled himself by monastic vow to the Pope and mankind about 1234.

CONRADIN THE BOY, or CONRAD V., the last representative of the Hohenstaufen dynasty of Romish Kaisers, fell into the Pope's clutches, who was at mortal feud with the empire, and was put to death by him on the scaffold at Naples, October 25, 1266, the "bright and brave" lad, only 16, "throwing out his glove (in symbolic protest) amid the dark mute Neapolitan multitudes" that idly looked on. See Carlyle's "Frederick the Great" for the Conrads.

CONSALVI, Italian cardinal and statesman, born at Rome, secretary of Pius VII.; concluded the Concordat with Napoleon in 1801; represented the Pope at the Congress of Vienna; was a liberal patron of literature, science, and arts; continued minister of the Pope till his death (1787-1824).

CONSCIENCE, HENDRIK, a brilliant Flemish novelist, born at Antwerp; rose to popularity among his countrymen by his great national romance the "Lion of Flanders," a popularity which soon extended all over Europe; his writings display great descriptive power and perfect purity of sentiment (1812-1883).

CONSCRIPT FATHERS, the collective name of members of the Roman Senate, and addressed as such, fathers as seniors and conscripts as enrolled.

CONSCRIPTION, compulsory enlistment in the fighting forces, enforced in Great Britain in January, 1916, for men between 18 and 40, the age being raised to 50 in March, 1918.

CONSERVATION OF ENERGY, the principle that energy may be manifested in one of several forms (e.g. kinetic, electrical, potential, heat), but the total quantity of energy in any isolated system remains constant, the apparent loss of one form of energy being accounted for by its conversion into another form. This principle forms the basis of thermodynamics.

CONSERVATIVE PARTY, or UNIONISTS, the party called Tory at one time which adopted the new name about 1840, and added Unionist to denote the importance attached to the preservation of the Union with Ireland.

CONSIDERANT, VICTOR PROSPER, a French Socialist and disciple of Fourier; founded a colony in Texas on Fourier's principles, which proved a failure; wrote much in advocacy of his principles, of which the most important is "La Destinée Sociale" (1808-1893).

CONSOLID, the Consolidated Fund, loans to Government made at different times and at different rates of interest, consolidated for convenience into one common loan.

CONSTABLE, a high officer of State in the Roman Empire, in France, and in England, charged at one time with military, judicial, and regulative functions.

CONSTABLE, ARCHIBALD, Edinburgh publisher, born in Carnbee, Fife; started as a bookseller near the Cross in Edinburgh; published the Scots Magazine, the Edinburgh Review, and the "Encyclopædia Britannica," and from 1802 to 1826 the works of Sir Walter Scott, when the bankruptcy connected with the publication of these so affected him that it ruined his health, though he lived after the crash came to start the "Miscellany" which bears his name (1774-1827).

CONSTABLE, HENRY, English poet, author of sonnets, 28 in number, under the title of "Diana" (1580-1612).

CONSTABLE, JOHN, an eminent landscape-painter, born in Suffolk; his works were more generously appreciated in France than in his own country, as they well might be, where they had not, as in England, to stand comparison with those of Turner; but he is now, despite the depreciation of Ruskin, becoming recognised among us as one of our foremost landscapeists, and enormous prices have been given of late for his best pictures; some of his best works, including "The Cornfield," "The Hay Wain," and "The Valley Farm," adorn the walls of the National Gallery; Ruskin allows that his art is original, honest, free from affectation, and manly (1776-1837).

CONSTABLE DE BOURBON, Charles, Duc de Bourbon, a brilliant military leader, and a powerful enemy of Francis I.; killed when leading the assault on Rome (1489-1527).

CONSTANCE, a city of the Grand-Duchy of Baden, on the S. bank of the Rhine at its exit from the lake; famous for the seat of the council (1414-1418) which condemned John Huss and Jerome of Prague to death; long famous for its linen manufacture.

CONSTANCE, LAKE, or BODENSEE, partly in Germany and partly in Switzerland; is about 44 m. long and 9 m. broad at most; is traversed by the Rhine from W. to E., and is 1306 ft. above sea-level; is surrounded by vineyards, cornfields, and wooded slopes; its waters are hardly ever frozen, and often rise and fall suddenly.

CONSTANT, BENJAMIN, a highly popular French painter of the Realistic school, born at Paris; his first picture was "Hamlet and the King"; afterwards he took chiefly to Oriental subjects, which afforded the best scope for his talent (1845-1908).

CONSTANT DE REBECQUE, HENRY BENJAMIN DE, a French politician of liberal constitutional principles, born at Lausanne, of Huguenot parents; settled in Paris at the commencement of the Revolution, where he distinguished himself by his political writings and speeches; was expelled from France in 1802 along with Mme. de Staël for denouncing the military ascendancy of Napoleon; lived for a time at Weimar in the society of Goethe and Schiller; translated Schiller's "Wallenstein"; returned to France in 1814; declared for the Bourbons, and pleaded in favour of constitutional liberty; he was a supporter of Louis Philippe, and a rationalist in religion, and declared himself opposed to the supernatural element in all religions (1767-1880).

CONSTANTZA, a wine district of Cape Province, under E. bank of Table Mountain.

CONSTANTINE, inland city of Algeria, on a rocky height; leather-working its staple industry.

CONSTANTINE, the name of 18 emperors who reigned at Rome or Byzantium between 306 and 1453.

CONSTANTINE I., called the Great, born in Moesia, son of Constantius Chlorus by Helena; on the death of his father at York, where he accompanied him, was proclaimed Emperor by the troops; this title being challenged by Maximian, his father-in-law, and Maxentius, his brother-in-law, he took up arms against first the one and then the other, and defeated them; when one day he saw a cross in the sky with the words By this Conquer in Greek, under this sign, known as the labarum, which he adopted as his standard, he accordingly marched straight to Rome, where he was acknowledged Emperor by the Senate in 312; and thereafter an edict was issued named of Milan, granting toleration to the Christians; he had still to extend his empire over the East, and having done so by the removal of Lucinius, he transferred the seat of his empire to Byzantium, which hence got the name of Constantinople, i.e. 'Constantine's city'; had himself baptized in 337 as a Christian, after having three years before proclaimed Christianity the State religion (274-337).

CONSTANTINE I., King of Greece. Succeeding to the throne in 1913 he secretly helped Germany in 1914, though his country remained neutral. In 1917 the Allies, working through Venizelos, brought about his abdication in favour of his son Alexander, who died in 1920. Venizelos was defeated in the election of that year, and Constantine was recalled by a plebiscite. In 1922 he was again exiled (1868-1923).

CONSTANTINE NICOLAIEVITCH, second son of the Czar Nicholas I.; was appointed grand-admiral while but a boy; had command of the Baltic fleet during the Crimean war; came under suspicion of sinister intriguing; became insane, and died in seclusion (1827-1892).

CONSTANTINE PAULOVITCH, Grand-duke of Russia, son of Paul I.; distinguished himself at Austerlitz; was commander-in-chief in Poland, where he ruled as despot; waived his right to the throne in favour of his brother Nicholas (1779-1831).

CONSTANTINE XIII., Palseologus, the last of the Greek emperors; had to defend Constantinople against a besieging force of 300,000 under Mohammed II., and, though he defended it bravely, the city was taken by storm, and the Eastern empire ended in 1453.

CONSTANTINOPLE, former capital of the Turkish empire, on the Bosphorus, situated on a peninsula washed by the Sea of Marmora on the S. and by the Golden Horn on the N., on the opposite side of which creek lie the quarters of Galata and Pera, one of the finest commercial sites in the world; it became the capital of the Roman empire under Constantine the Great, who gave name to it; was capital of the Eastern empire from the days of Theodosius; was taken by the crusaders in 1204, and by Mohammed II. in 1453, at which time the Greek and Latin scholars fled the city, carrying the learning of Greece and Rome with them, an event which led to the revival of learning in Europe, and the establishment of a new era—the Modern—in European history.

CONSTANTIUS CHLORUS, or THE PALE, Roman emperor; after a struggle of three years reunited Britain with the empire, which had been torn from it by Allectus; was equally successful against the Alemanni, defeating them with great loss; died at York, on an expedition against the Picts; was succeeded by Constantine, his son (250-305).

CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY, the legislative body which the National Assembly of France resolved itself into in 1789, a name it assumed from the task it imposed on itself, viz. of making a constitution, a task which, from the nature of it, proved impossible, as a constitution is an entity which grows, and is not made.

CONSTITUTION, THE BRITISH, unlike the scientifically drawn up one of America, has gradually evolved through history. The Crown (q.v.) is the corner stone, and there are the Houses of Lords (q.v.) and Commons (q.v.). As money has to be voted by the Commons, which is elected on universal adult suffrage, the democratic control of the executive is assured.

CONSUL, (1) one of the two magistrates of Rome elected annually after the expulsion of the kings, and invested with regal power; (2) a chief magistrate of the French Republic from 1799 to 1804; (3) one commissioned to protect, especially the mercantile rights of, the subjects of a State in foreign country.

CONSULATE, name given to the French Government from the fall of the Directory till the establishment of the Empire. At first there were three provisional consuls, Bonaparte, Siéyès, and Roger Ducos; then three consuls for ten years, Bonaparte, Cambacérès, and Lebrun, which triumvirate was dissolved with the establishment of the Empire on May 20, 1804.

CONTARINI, an illustrious Venetian family, which furnished eight Doges to the Republic, as well as an array of men eminent in the Church, statescraft, generalship, art, and letters.

CONTE, NICOLAS JACQUES, a French painter; distinguished for his mechanical genius, which was of great avail to the French army in Egypt (1755-1805).

CONTI, an illustrious French family, a younger branch of the house of Bourbon-Condé, all more or less distinguished as soldiers; François Louis especially, who was a man of supreme ability both in war and science, and had the merit to be elected king of Poland (1664-1709).

CONTINENTAL SYSTEM, Napoleon's scheme for interdicting all commerce between the Continent and Great Britain, carried out with various issues till the fall of Napoleon. See BERLIN and MILAN DEGREES.

CONTRACT SOCIAL, Rousseau's theory of society that it is based on mere contract, each individual member of it surrendering his will to the will of all, under protection of all concerned, a theory which led to the conclusion that the rule of kings is a usurpation of the rights of the community, and which bore fruit as an explosive in the Revolution at the end of the century.

CONVENTION, NATIONAL, a revolutionary convention in France which on September 20, 1792, succeeded the Legislative Assembly, proclaimed the Republic, condemned the king to death, succeeded in crushing the royalists of La Vendée and the south, in defeating all Europe leagued against France, and in founding institutions of benefit to France to this day; it was dissolved on October 26, 1795, to make way for the Directory.

CONVERSATIONS LEXICON, a popular German encyclopædia of 16 vols., started in 1796, and since 1808 published by Brockhaus in Leipzig.

CONVOCAION, an assemblage of the English clergy.

with little or no legislative power, summoned and prorogued by an archbishop under authority of the Crown; one under the Archbishop of Canterbury, held at Canterbury, and one under the Archbishop of York, held at York, consisting each of two bodies, an Upper of bishops, and an Under of lesser dignitaries and inferior clergy, in separate chambers, though they originally met in one.

CONWAY, a port in Carnarvon, on the river Conway, with a massive castle, one of those built by Edward I. to keep Wales in check; is a favourite summer resort, and lies amid beautiful scenery.

CONWAY, HUGH, the nom de plume of Frederick Fergus, born in Bristol; bred to the auctioneer business; author of "Called Back," a highly sensational novel, and a success; gave up his business and settled in London, where he devoted himself to literature and the production of similar works of much promise, but caught malarial fever at Monte Carlo and died (1847-1885).

CONWAY, MONCURE, an American writer, born in Virginia; began life as a Unitarian preacher; came to England as a lecturer on war; became leader of the advanced school of thought; was a great admirer of Emerson, and wrote, among other works, "Emerson at Home and Abroad" (1832-1907).

CONWAY, SIR WILLIAM MARTIN, famous mountaineer; Slade professor of art at Cambridge; commenced his travels with ascents of the Himalayas; afterwards scaled many peaks in the Alps and the Andes; explored Spitzbergen (1856-).

CONYBEARE, WILLIAM DANIEL, an English clergyman, devoted to the study of geology and palæontology, and a Hampton lecturer (1787-1857).

CONYBEARE, WILLIAM JOHN, son of the preceding; author, with Dean Howson, of the "Life and Epistles of St. Paul," and of an "Essay on Church Parties" (1815-1857).

COOK, DUTTON, novelist, dramatic author, and critic; born in London, and bred a solicitor; contributed to several periodicals, and the "Dictionary of National Biography" (1829-1883).

COOK, SIR EDWARD TYAS, born at Brighton; educated at Oxford; joined the editorial staff of the Pall Mall Gazette and the Westminster Gazette, became, in 1893, editor of the Daily News; was an enthusiastic disciple of Ruskin; wrote "Studies on Ruskin" (1857-1919).

COOK, ELIZA, a writer of tales, verses, and magazine articles; born in Southwark; daughter of a merchant; conducted, from 1849 to 1854, a journal called by her name, but gave it up from failing health; enjoyed a pension of £100 from the Civil List till her death; was the authoress of "The Old Arm-Chair" and "Home in the Heart," both of which were great favourites with the public, and did something for literature and philanthropy by her Journal (1818-1889).

COOK, FREDERICK ALBERT, American explorer who in 1909 claimed that he had reached the North Pole, but an official investigation proved that he had no real evidence (1865-).

COOK, JAMES, the distinguished English navigator, born at Marton, Yorkshire; was the son of a farm labourer; began seafaring on board a merchantman; entered the navy in 1755, and in four years became a master; spent some nine years in survey of the St. Lawrence and the coasts of Newfoundland; in 1768, in command of the Endeavour, was sent out with an expedition to observe the transit of Venus, and in 1772 as commander of two vessels on a voyage of discovery to the South Seas; on his return, receiving further promotion, he set out on a third voyage of further exploration in the Pacific, making many discoveries as far N. as Behring Strait; lost his life, on his way home, in a dispute with the natives at Owhyhee (Hawaii), in the Sandwich Islands, being savagely murdered, a fate which befell him owing to a certain quickness of temper he had displayed, otherwise he was a man of great kindness of heart (1728-1779).

COOK, MOUNT, the highest point, 12,350 ft., in the Southern Alps, Canterbury Island, New Zealand.

COOK ISLANDS, an archipelago in the South Pacific belonging to New Zealand, with a population of 18,000. Rarotonga, the chief island, has a population of 3,600. The group was formerly known as the Tonga Islands and still as the Hervey Islands.

COOK STRAIT, strait between the North and the South Island, New Zealand.

COOKE, SIR ANTONY, an eminent scholar, tutor to Edward VI.; of his daughters, one was married to Lord Burleigh and another to Sir Nicholas Bacon, who became the mother of Lord Bacon (1506-1576).

COOKE, BENJAMIN, composer, born in London; organist in Westminster Abbey; composer of "How Sleep the Brave," "Hark! the Lark," and other glees, as well as some excellent church music (1739-1793).

COOKE, GEORGE FREDERICK, an actor, famous for his representation of Richard III.; stood in his day next to Kemble in spite of his intemperate habits (1756-1811).

COOKE, T. P., an actor in melodrama; began life at sea; took to the stage; his most popular representations were William in "Black-eyed Susan" and Long Tom Coffin in the "Pilot" (1786-1864).

COOLGARDIE, a mining district and headquarters of rich gold-fields in W. Australia, about 300 m. distant from Perth.

COOLIDGE, CALVIN, American politician. A Republican in politics, he was elected Vice-President at the same time that Harding became President, and on the latter's death Coolidge succeeded him in August, 1923. Re-elected in 1925, he resigned in 1929 (1872-1933).

COOLIDGE TUBE, a vacuum tube of high exhaustion with tungsten electrodes, used for the production of X-rays.

COOLIES, labourers from India and China, who now emigrate in large numbers, especially from China, often to where they are not wanted; in the British Colonies and the United States they are much disliked, as they bring down the wages of native labourers.

COOMASSIE, the capital of the negro kingdom of Ashanti, 130 m. NNW. of Cape Coast Castle; once a large, populous place; was much reduced after its capture by Wolseley in 1874, though it is being rebuilt.

COOPER, ANTHONY ASHLEY. See SHAFTESBURY.

COOPER, SIR ASTLEY, English surgeon, born in Norfolk; an expert in anatomy and a skilful operator; stood high in the medical profession; contributed much by his writings to raise surgery to the rank of a science; was eminent as a lecturer as well as a practitioner (1768-1841).

COOPER, JAMES FENIMORE, an American novelist, born in Burlington, New Jersey; having a passion for the sea, he entered the navy as a midshipman in 1808, but in three years resigned his commission, married, and settled to literature; his novels, of which "The Pilot," "The Pathfinder," "The Deerslayer," and "The Last of the Mohicans" are the best known, achieved instant popularity and made him a favourite with boys; in them he showed himself an expert in the narration of events, the description of scenes, as well as in the delineation of character; he came to loggerheads with the newspaper press, had recourse to actions for libel, conducted his own cases himself, and was always successful (1789-1861).

COOPER, THOMAS, a self-taught man, born in Leicester; bred a shoemaker; became a schoolmaster, a Methodist preacher, and then a journalist; converted to Chartism; was charged with sedition, and committed to prison for two years; wrote there "Purgatory of Suicides"; after liberation went about lecturing on politics and preaching scepticism; returning to his first faith, he lectured on the Christian evidences, and wrote an autobiography (1805-1892).

COOPER, THOMAS SYDNEY, a distinguished animal-painter, born in Canterbury; struggled with adversity in early life; rose to be supreme in his own department of art; wrote an account of his career (1803-1902).

COOPERAGE, a system of barter which had for some time gone on in the North Sea, consisting of exchange of spirits and tobacco for other goods or money, a demoralising traffic, suppressed by the North Sea Fisheries Act of 1885.

COOPER'S HILL, a hill of slight elevation near Ruyn-nede, notable for a Government civil engineering college, originally for the training for the service in India, and for education in other departments of the Government service, forestry especially.

COORG, an inland high-lying province, about the size of Kent, on the eastern slope of the W. Ghats, on the SW. border of Mysore, under the Indian Government; it is covered with forests, infested with animals; the natives, a fine race, are distinguished for their loyalty to the British.

COOTE, SIR EYRE, a general, born in co. Limerick, Ireland; distinguished himself at Plassey; gained victories over the French in India; afterwards routed Hyder Ali at Porto Novo; died at Madras (1726-1793).

COPE, SIR ARTHUR STOCKDALE, R.A., British artist. He studied at the R.A. school, and started exhibiting at the age of 19, chiefly doing portraits, notably those of Royalty (1857-).

COPE, CHARLES WEST, a painter, born at Leeds; his pictures have for subjects historical or dramatic scenes, and were very numerous; executed frescoes that adorn the Peers' corridor at Westminster; was professor of Painting to the Royal Academy (1811-1890).

COPE, SIR JOHN, a British general; was in command at Prestonpans, and defeated by the Pretender there in 1745, in connection with which his name is remembered in Scotland as not having been ready when the Highlanders attacked him, by the song "Hielah! Johnnie Cowp, are ye wauken yet?" (1700).

COPENHAGEN, the capital of Denmark and the only large town in it; lies low, and is built partly on the island of Zealand and partly on the island of Amager, the channel between which forms a commodious harbour; is a thriving place of manufacture and of trade, as its name "Merchants' Haven" implies; has also a university, an arsenal, and numerous public buildings.

COPERNICUS, NICOLAS, founder of modern astronomy, born at Thorn, in Poland, and educated at Cracow and Bologna; became canon of Frauenburg, on the Frisches Haff; studied medicine; was helper to a wealthy uncle with whom he lived, and became his heir when he died; his chief interest lay in the heavenly bodies, and his demonstrations regarding their movements, which he deferred publishing till he was towards his end; it was only when he was unconscious and dying that the first printed copy of the work was put into his hands; it was entitled "De Revolutionibus Orbium," and was written in proof of the first principle of astronomy, that the sun is the centre of the solar system and the earth and planets circle round it; the work was dedicated to Pope Paul III., and was received with favour by the Catholic Church. It was denounced by Luther and Melancthon as contrary to the truth—an opinion held by the Popes from 1616 to 1757 (1473-1543).

COPIAPO, a river, a village, a city, and a district in Chile.

COPLEY, JOHN SINGLETON, portrait and historical painter, born in Boston, U.S.; painted Washington's portrait at the age of eighteen; came to England in 1776, having previously sent over for exhibition sundry of his works; painted portraits of the king and the queen; began the historical works on which his fame chiefly rests, the most widely known of which is the "Death of Chatham," now in the National Gallery (1737-1815).

COPPÉE, FRANÇOIS, a poet, born in Paris; produced several volumes of poetry, dramas in verse, and tales in prose; most of his work deals with humble, even poor, life, touched with sympathy and pathos; of his plays "Pour la Couronne" and "Mme. de Maintenon" are best known (1842-1906).

COPPER, a bright red metal of great tenacity, used for many purposes, including electric wires and cables, for which it is in great demand on account of its high conductivity. With other metals it forms many alloys in general use, e.g. gunmetal, bronze, brass, and German silver. Copper is mined in Spain, U.S.A., and South America. At one time large supplies were obtained from Cornwall, but they are now exhausted.

COPPER CAPTAIN, a Brummagem captain: the name given to Percy in Beaumont and Fletcher's play, "Rule a Wife and Have a Wife."

COPPER NOSE, name given to Oliver Cromwell, from a brownish tinge on his nose.

COPPERHEADS, secret foes in one's own camp, so called from the copperhead, or moccasin, snake of America which is difficult to distinguish in its natural surroundings.

COPPERMINE, a river in NW. Canada which flows into the Arctic Ocean after a broken course of 250 m.

COPPET, a Swiss village in the Canton de Vaud, on the Lake of Geneva: celebrated as the abode of Mme. de Staël, her burial-place and that of Necker, her father.

COPROLITES, an important mineral source of phosphates. They may be either fossilised dung of reptiles or deposited from water which has washed away bones and other animal remains.

COPTS, the Christian descendants of the ancient Egyptians, who are Monophysites in belief, some regarding the Patriarch of Alexandria and some the Pope as their head; they adhere to the ancient ritual, are prelate, sacerdotalian, and exclusive; they speak Arabic, their original Coptic being practically dead, though the grammar is taught in the schools.

COPYRIGHT, the sole right of an author or his heirs or assignee to publish a work for a term of years fixed by statute, the period now being for the duration of the author's life and for 50 years afterwards, this period being shortened to 25 years subject to certain reservations; copyright covers literary, artistic, and musical property, in which are included dramatic and cinematographic rights. By the Act of 1911 an author must present one copy of his work, if published, to the British Museum, and one copy, if demanded, to the Bodleian Library, Oxford; the University Library, Cambridge; the Advocates' Library, Edinburgh; and Trinity College Library, Dublin.

COQUELIN, BENOIT CONSTANT, a noted French actor, born at Boulogne; played in classical pieces and others, composed for himself in the Théâtre Français from 1860 to 1886; after that in London, S. America, and the United States; without a rival in the broader aspects of comedy (1841-1909).

COQUEREL, ATHANASE, a pastor of the French Reformed Church, born in Paris, where he preached eloquently from 1830 till his death; was elected in 1848 deputy for the Seine to the National Assembly, but retired from political life after the coup d'état; wrote a reply to Strauss (1795-1858).

COQUEREL, ATHANASE, a Protestant pastor, son of preceding, born at Amsterdam; celebrated for his liberal and tolerant views, too much so for M. Guizot; edited Voltaire's letters on toleration; his chief work, "Jean Calas et sa Famille" (1820-1875).

COQUIMBO, capital of a mining province of Chile of the name; exports minerals and cattle.

CORALS, a distinguished Hellenist, born in Smyrna, of the mercantile class; settled in Paris, where he devoted himself to awakening an interest in Greek literature and the cause of the Greeks (1748-1838).

CORAL SNAKES, a species of Colubridae, small and highly venomous; are of striking coloration, banded in black and yellow on a red background; natives of South America.

CORALS, together with sea-anemones form the class of invertebrate organisms known as anthozoa. The body is usually cylindrical in shape, with a mouth, surrounded by tentacles, at one end. The skeleton is mainly of calcium carbonate. Corals may be divided into solitary and reef-building; the former live in rather deep water in all latitudes, whilst the latter thrive in less than 30 fathoms, where the temperature is above 65° F. Some limestones are entirely composed of coral remains.

CORAM, THOMAS, English philanthropist, the founder of the Foundling Hospital, born at Lyme Regis; a man of varied ventures by sea and land; settled in London, where he was touched by the sufferings of the poor, and, with warm support from Hogarth, founded the said institution; his charity so impoverished him that he ended his days as an object of charity himself, being dependent on a small annuity raised by subscription (1668-1751).

CORATO, a town in a fertile region in S. Italy, 25 m. W. of Bari.

CORRIE-STEPS, or CROW-STEPS, steps ascending the gable of a house, common in old Scottish gables as well as in the Netherlands and elsewhere.

COR'ULO, GNAEUS DOMITIUS, a distinguished general under Claudius and Nero, who conquered the Parthians; Nero, being jealous of him, invited him to Corinth, where he found a death-warrant awaiting him, upon which he plunged his sword into his breast, in A.D. 72.

CORCY'EA, an Ionian island, now Corfu (q.v.).

CORDAY, CHARLOTTE, a French heroine, born at St. Saturnin, of good birth, granddaughter of Corneille; well read in Voltaire and Plutarch; favoured the Revolution, but was shocked at the atrocities of the Jacobins; started from Caen for Paris as an avenging angel; sought out Marat, with difficulty got access to him, stabbed him to the heart as he sat in his bath; when arrested, she quietly surrendered; when questioned as to her motive, she answered, "I killed one man to save a hundred thousand"; she was guillotined four days later (1793-1793).

CORDELLA, the youngest and favourite daughter of King Lear.

CORDELIERS, (1) the strictest branch of the Franciscan Order of Monks, so called from wearing a girdle of knotted cord; (2) a club during the French Revolution, founded in 1789, its prominent members, Danton, Camille Desmoulins, and Marat; was a secession from the Jacobin Club, which was thought lukewarm, and met in what had been a convent of the Order of Cordeliers; it expired with Danton.

CORDERIUS, a grammarian, born in Normandy; being a Protestant settled in Geneva and taught; author of Latin "Colloques," once very famous (1478-1567).

CORDILLERAS, the name of several chains of mountains in S. America, forming part of the extensive coast range which, towards the east, is known as the Andes.

CORDITE, a smokeless explosive, invented by Sir F. A. Abel, being composed of gun cotton dissolved in acetone, and nitro-glycerine.

CORDON BLEU, formerly the blue ribbon from which the badge of the Order of the Holy Ghost was suspended; now applied to a cook in compliment as a mark of highest excellence.

CORDOUAN, a lighthouse at the mouth of the Gironde, France.

COR'DOVA, a city on the Parana, in the Argentine; also a town in Andalusia, Spain, on the right bank of the Guadalquivir, in a province of the name, 80 m. N.E. of Seville; once a Moorish capital, and famous for its manufacture of goat leather and its silver work; has a cathedral, once a magnificent mosque.

CORELLI, ARCANGELO, an Italian musical composer, celebrated for his skill on the violin; his compositions mark a new musical epoch; he has been called the father of instrumental music (1653-1713).

CORELLI, MARIE, novelist; her first work "The Romance of Two Worlds"; among her others are "Ardath," "The Master Christian," and "The Sorrows of Satan" (1864-1924).

CORFE CASTLE, a village in the Isle of Purbeck, Dorsetshire, round a castle now in ruins and the scene of martyrdoms and murders, including that of Edward the Martyr, in 979.

CORFU, the most northerly of the Ionian Islands and the largest, 40 m. long, from 4 to 18 broad; was under the protection of Britain, 1815-1864; has since belonged to Greece; has a capital of the same name. It was seized in 1923 by Italy after members of an Italian military commission had been murdered on the Greek frontier, but was evacuated on the Italian government receiving satisfaction.

CORIN'NA, a poetess of ancient Greece, born in Boeotia in the 5th century B.C.; friend and rival of Pindar; only a few fragments of her poetry remain.

CORINNE, the heroine and title of a novel of Mme. de Staël, her principal novel, in which she celebrates the praises of the great men and great masterpieces of Italy; her heroine is the type of a woman inspired with poetic ideas and the most generous sentiments.

CORINTH, an ancient city of Greece, and one of the most flourishing, on an isthmus of the name connecting the Peloponnese with the mainland; in olden time a great centre of trade and of material wealth, and as a centre of luxury a centre of vice; the seat of the worship of Aphrodite, a very different goddess from Athena, to whom Athens was dedicated.

CORINTHIANS, EPISTLES TO THE, two epistles of St. Paul to the Church he had established in Corinth, the chief object of which was to cleanse it of certain sublims and impurities that had arisen, and to protest against the disposition of many in it to depart from the simple gospel which they had been taught.

CORIOLANUS, GAIUS MARCIUS, a celebrated Roman general of patrician rank, who rallied his countrymen when in besieging Corioli they were being driven back, so that he took the city, and was in consequence called Coriolanus; having afterwards offended the plebs, he was banished from Rome; took refuge among the people he had formerly defeated; joined causes with them, and attempted to destroy Rome, regardless of every entreaty to spare it, till his mother, his wife, and the matrons of the city overcame him by their tears, upon which he withdrew and led back his army to Corioli, prepared to suffer any penalty his treachery to them might expose him. Shakespeare wrote a play on the theme.

CORIOLI, a town of ancient Latium, capital of the Volsci.

CORK, a fine city, capital of a county of the same name in Munster, Irish Free State; on the Lee, 11 m. from its mouth; with a magnificent harbour, an extensive foreign trade, and manufactures of various kinds.

CORMENIN, COMTE DE, a French statesman and jurist, born at Paris; had great influence under Louis Philippe; his pamphlets, signed Timon, made no small stir; left a work on administrative law in France (1788-1868).

CORMONTAGNE, a celebrated French engineer, born at Strasburg; successor of Vauban (1696-1752).

CORNABO, an illustrious patrician family in Venice from which for centuries several Doges sprang.

CORN-CRACKER, the nickname of a Kentucky man.

CORNILLE, PIERRE, the father of French tragedy, born at Rouen, the son of a government legal official; was bred for the bar, but he neither took to the profession nor prospered in the practice of it, so gave it up for literature; threw himself at once into the drama; began by dramatising an incident in his own life, and became the creator of the dramatic art in France; his first tragedies are "The Cid," which indeed is his masterpiece, "Horace," "Cinna," "Polyeucte," "Rodogune," and "Le Menteur"; in his verses, which are instinct with vigour of conception as well as sublimity of feeling, he paints men as they should be, virtuous in character, brave in spirit, and animated by the most exalted sentiments. Goethe contrasts him with Racine: "Cornille," he says, "delineated great men; Racine, men of eminent rank." "He rarely provokes an interest," says Professor Saintsbury, "in the fortunes of his characters; it is rather in the way that they bear their fortune, and particularly in a kind of haughty disdain for fortune itself. . . . He shows an excellent comic faculty at times, and the strokes of irony in his serious plays have more of true humour in them than appears in almost any other French dramatist" (1606-1685).

CORNILLE, THOMAS, younger brother of the preceding, a dramatist whose merits were little inferior but who was outshone by those of his brother; he wrote some forty plays in all, comprising tragedies and comedies (1625-1709).

CORNELIA, the daughter of Scipio Africanus and the mother of the Gracchi (q.v.), the Roman matron who, when challenged by a rival lady to outshine her in wealth of gems, proudly led forth her sons, saying, "These are my jewels"; true to this sentiment, it was as the mother of the Gracchi she wished to be remembered, and is remembered, in the annals of Rome.

CORNELIUS, PETER VON, a distinguished German painter, born at Düsseldorf; early gave proof of artistic genius, which was carefully fostered by his father; spent much time as a youth in studying and copying Raphael; before he was 20 he decorated a church at Neuss with colossal figures in chiaroscuro; in 1810 executed designs for Goethe's "Faust"; in the year after went to Rome, where, along with others, he revived the old art of fresco painting, in which he excelled his rivals; the subjects of these were drawn from Greek pagan as well as Christian sources, his "Judgment" being the largest fresco in the world; the thought which inspires his cartoons, critics say, surpasses his power of execution; it should be added that he prepared a set of designs to illustrate the "Nibelungen" (1788-1867).

CORNELL UNIVERSITY, a university in Ithaca, New York State, founded in 1866 at a cost of $152,000, named after its founder, Ezra Cornell; it supports a large staff of teachers, and gives instruction in all departments of science, literature, and philosophy; it provides education to sundry specified classes free of all fees, as well as means of earning the benefits of the institution to any who may wish to enjoy them.

CORN-LAWS, laws in force in Great Britain regulating the import and export of corn for the protection of the home-producer at the expense of the home-consumer, and which after a long and bitter struggle between these two classes were abolished in 1846.

CORN-LAW RHYMER, THE, Ebenezer Elliott (q.v.), who, in a volume of poems, denounced the corn-laws and contributed to their abolition.

CORNO, MONTE, the highest peak of the Apennines, 9546 ft.

CORNWALL, a county in the SW. extremity of England, forming a peninsula between the English and the Bristol Channels, with a rugged surface and a rocky coast, indented all round with more or less deep bays enclosed between high headlands, its wealth lies not in the soil, but under it in its mines, and in the pichard, mackerel, and other fisheries along its stormy shores; the county town is Bodmin, the largest Penzance, and the mining centre Truro.

CORNWALL, BARRY, the nom de plume of B. W. Procter (q.v.).

CORNWALLIS, LORD, an English general and statesman; saw service in the Seven Years' and the American Wars; besieged in the latter at York Town, was obliged to capitulate; became Governor-General of India, and forced Tipoo Sahib to submit to humiliating terms; as Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland crushed the rebellion of '98; re-appointed Governor-General of India; died there (1758-1805).

CORNWELL, JOHN TRAVERS, boy hero of the Great War, who at the battle of Jutland, when only 17, stayed alone at his post on the Chester, though mortally wounded. He was awarded a V.O. post-humously (1899-1916).

COROMANDEL COAST, E. coast of Hindustan, extending from the Krishna to Cape Comorin.

CORONA, a vast envelope of extreme tenuity surrounding the sun and only seen during a total eclipse, when it appears as a mass of silvery light resembling feathers. The form and brilliancy appears to depend on the state of the sun with respect to "sunspots" (q.v.), and the appearance therefore varies from eclipse to eclipse.

CORONACH, a dirge sung at funerals by Irish and Scottish peasantry in olden times.

CORONATION CHAIR, a chair enclosing a stone carried off by Edward I. from Beane in 1296, on which the sovereigns of England are crowned.

COROT, JEAN BAPTISTE, a celebrated French landscape-painter, born at Paris; was 26 years of age before he began to apply himself to art, which he did by study in Italy and Rome, returning to Paris in 1827, where he became a member of the Barbizon group and began to exhibit, and continued to exhibit for nearly 60 years; it was long before his places revealed what was in him and the secret of his art; he appeared also as a poet as well as a painter, giving free play to his emotions (1796-1876).

CORPUSCULAR RAYS, the rays given off in vacuum tubes and from radioactive substances which are not like light and X-rays but consist of a stream of charged particles, e.g. Alpha Rays, Beta Rays, and Positive Rays.

CORR, ERIN, an eminent engraver, born in Brussels, of Irish descent; spent 10 years in engraving on copperplate Rubens' "Descent from the Cross" (1793-1832).

CORRECTOR, ALEXANDER THE, Alexander Cruden, author of the "Concordance to the Bible," who believed he had a divine mission to correct the manners of the world, and petitioned Parliament to empower him to obliterate profane and obscene inscriptions.

CORREGGIO, ANTONIO ALLEGRI DA, an illustrious Italian painter, born at Correggio, in Modena; founder of the Lombard school, and distinguished among his contemporaries for the grace of his figures and the harmony of his colouring; he has been ranked next to Raphael, and it has been said of him he perfected his art by adding elegance to truth and grandeur; he was unrivalled in chiaroscuro, and chose his subjects from pagan as well as Christian legend (1494-1534).

CORRIB, LOUGH, an irregularly shaped lake in Galway and Mayo, 25 m. long and from 1 to 6 m. broad, with stone circles near it and numerous islets on its waters.

CORRIENTES, a province of the Argentine Republic, between the Parana and the Uruguay; also its capital, surrounded by orange-groves; so called from the currents that prevail in the river, along which steamers ply between it and Buenos Ayres.

CORROBOREE, the Australian aboriginal name for a nocturnal dance, which may have a religious, warlike, or festive significance; as a rule the natives taking part paint their faces and bodies with white clay and red ochre.

CORRUGATED IRON, sheet-iron coated with zinc.

CORSAIR, THE, a poem by Byron, in which the author paints himself in heroic colours as an adventurer who draws reflection in the intoxication of battle.

CORSICA, an island belonging to France, in the Mediterranean, ceded to her by Genoa in 1768, but by position, race, and language belonging to Italy; has been subject by turns to the powers that in succession dominated that inland sea; is 116 m. long and 52 broad; it abounds in mountains, attaining 9000 ft.; covered with forests and thickets, which often serve as shelter for brigands; it affords good pasture, and yields olive-oil and wine, as well as chestnuts, honey, and wax.

CORSICA PAOLI, a native of Corsica, who vainly struggled to achieve the independence of his country, and took refuge in England, where he enjoyed the society of the Johnson circle and was much esteemed. See PAOLI.

CORSEN, WILLIAM PAUL, a learned German philologist, born at Bremen; made a special study of the Latin languages, and especially the Etruscan, which he laboured to prove was cognate with that of the Romans and of the races that spoke it (1820-1876).

CORT, CORNELIS, an eminent Dutch engraver, went to Venice, lived with Titian; engraved some of his pictures; went to Rome and engraved Raphael's "Transfiguration"; executed over 150 plates, all displaying great accuracy and refinement (1533-1578).

CORTES, the name given in Spain and Portugal to the National Assembly, consisting of nobles and representatives of the nation, who together form the Senate and Chamber of Deputies.

CORTES, a Spanish soldier and conqueror of Mexico, born in Extremadura; went with Velasquez to Cuba; commanded the expedition to conquer Mexico, 1518, and by burning all the ships that conveyed his men, cut off all possibility of retreat; having conquered the tribes that he met on landing, he marched on to the capital, which, after a desperate struggle, he reduced, holding the Aztec emperor, Montezuma, prisoner, and then swept the country, by all which he added to the wealth of Spain, but by his cruelty did dishonour to the chivalry of which Spain was once so proud; after the conquest Cortes, superseded by another Spanish governor, engaged in similar expeditions, discovering California in 1536; he died at Seville and was buried there, but his remains were re-interred subsequently in Mexico (1485-1547).

CORTONA, PIETRO DA, an Italian painter, born at Cortona, in Tuscany, and eminent as an architect also; decorated many of the finest buildings in Rome (1590-1609).

CORUNA, or CORUNNA, a fortified town on NW. of Spain, with a commodious harbour, where Sir John Moore fell in 1809 while defending the embarkation of his army against Soult, and where his tomb is.

CORVÉE, obligation as at one time enforced upon serfs in the countries of Central Europe to render certain services to overlords, such as repairing of roads; in Russia, Denmark, and Rumania this system of compulsory labour lasted well on into the 19th century; in France it was abolished by the Constituent Assembly after the Revolution.

CORYATE, THOMAS, an English traveller and wit, who, in his "Cruities," quaintly describes his travels through France and Italy (1577-1617).

CORYBANTES, priests of Cybele (q.v.), whose religious rites were accompanied with wild dances and the clashing of cymbals.

CORYDON, a shepherd in Virgil, name for a love-sick swain.

CORYLÆUS, originally the leader of the chorus in a Greek drama, a leader in any dramatic company, or indeed in any art.

COS, an island in the Ægean Sea, birthplace of Hippocrates and Apelles.

COSENZA, a town in Calabria, in a deep valley, where Alaric, king of the Visigoths, died.

COSGRAVE, WILLIAM, Irish politician. He became President of the Executive Council of the Irish Free State in 1922 and was re-elected the following year. He did much to smooth the path of Ireland in the troubled days after the Great War (1880-).

COSIN, JOHN, a learned English prelate, Dean of Peterborough, deposed by the Puritans for his ritualistic tendencies; exiled for 10 years in Paris; returned at the Restoration, and was made Bishop of Durham, where he proved himself a devoted supporter of the Church which he adorned by his piety (1594-1672).

COSMÁS, ST., Arabian physician and patron of surgeons, brother of St. Damian; suffered martyrdom in 305. Festival, Sept. 27.

COSMÁS INDIOPLEUSTES (i.e. voyager to India), an Egyptian monk of the 6th century, born in Alexandria, singular for his theory of the system of the world, which, in opposition to the Ptolemaic system, he viewed as in shape like that of the Jewish Tabernacle, with Eden outside, and encircled by the ocean, a theory he advanced as in conformity with Scripture.

COSMO I., Grand-duke of Tuscany, head of the Republic of Florence, of which he made himself absolute master, a post he held in defiance of all opposition, in order to secure the independence of the state he governed, as well as its internal prosperity (1519-1574).

COSMOGONY, MODERN THEORY OF. The theory of the origin of the solar system most generally held to-day is the Tidal Theory. It is supposed that the sun and its planets once formed part of a huge nebular mass which eventually became a spiral nebula, which threw off portions, one of which was our sun. The sun, then a huge mass of hot gas, came in close proximity to a wandering star and as a result of the tidal forces set up part of it was torn off and out of the debris the planets were formed. See NEBULAR HYPOTHESIS.

COSMOLOGY, any theory which attempts to trace the system of things back to its first principle or primordial element or elements.

COSSACKS, a military people of mixed origin, chiefly Tartar and Slav, who fought on horseback, in their own interest as well as that of Russia, defending its interests in particular for centuries past in many a struggle, and forming an important light cavalry division of the Russian army.

COSTA, SIR MICHAEL, composer and musical conductor; born at Naples; settled in England, conducted at Philharmonic concerts and important festivals; wrote ballets and operas, and two oratorios, "Eli" and "Naaman" (1810-1884).

COSTA RICA, a small republic of Central America; it is mostly tableland; contains many volcanoes; is chiefly agricultural, though rich in minerals.

COSTARD, a clown in "Love's Labour's Lost," who spoils the affected court-wits of the time in a misappropriate style.

COSTELLO, LOUISA STUART, an English authoress; her descriptive powers were considerable, and her novels had a historical ground-work (1799-1870).

COSTER, alias LAURENS JANZSOON, born at Haarlem, to whom his countrymen, as against the claims of Gutenberg, ascribe the invention of printing (1370-1440).

COSWAY, RICHARD, a distinguished miniature portrait-painter, born at Tiverton; Correggio his model (1740-1821).

CÔTE D'OR, a range of hills in the NE. of France, connecting the Cevennes with the Vosges, which gives name to a department famed for its wines.

COTENTIN, a peninsula NW. of Normandy, France, jutting into the English Channel, now forms the northern part of the dep. La Manche, the fatherland of many of the Norman conquerors of England.

CÔTES DU NORD, a dep. forming part of Brittany; the chief manufacture is linen, but it produces a fine breed of horses.

COTIN, THE ABBÉ, a French preacher, born in Paris; a butt of the sarcasm of Molière and Boileau (1604-1682).

COTMAN, JOHN SELL, an English painter, born at Norwich; made Turner's acquaintance; produced water-colour landscapes, growing in repute; has been pronounced "the most gifted of the Norwich School" (1782-1842).

COTOPAXI, a volcano of the Andes, in Ecuador, the highest active volcano in the world, 19,613 ft. high, 35 m. SE. of Quito; it rises in a perfect cone, 4400 ft. above the plateau of Quito.

COTSWOLD HILLS, in Gloucestershire, separating the Lower Severn from the sources of the Thames; they are of limestone rock, 50 m. long, and extend N. and S.; famous for a breed of sheep.

COTTA, CAIUS, a distinguished Roman orator, 1st century B.C.; mentioned with honour by Cicero.

COTTA, JOHANN FRIEDRICH, BARON, German publisher, born at Stuttgart; established a publishing house in Tübingen; published the works of Goethe, Schiller, Jean Paul, Herder, and others of note among their contemporaries (1764-1832).

COTTIAN ALPS, the range N. of the Maritime between France and Italy.

COTTIN, SOPHIE, a celebrated French authoress; wrote, among other romances, the well-known and extensively translated "Elizabeth; or, the Exiles of Siberia," a wildly romantic but irreproachably moral tale (1770-1807).

COTTLE, JOSEPH, publisher and author, started business in Bristol; published the works of Coleridge and Southey on generous terms; wrote in his "Early Recollections" an exposure of Coleridge that has been severely criticised and generally condemned (1770-1853).

COTTON, BISHOP, born at Chester; eminent as a master at Rugby under Dr. Arnold, and as headmaster at Marlborough College; was appointed Bishop of Calcutta, an office he fulfilled zealously; was drowned in the Ganges; he figures as "the young master" in "Tom Brown's School-days" (1818-1860).

COTTON, CHARLES, a poet, born in Staffordshire; his poetry was of the burlesque order, and somewhat gross; chiefly famous for his translation of "Montaigne's Essays"; was friend and admirer of Isaac Walton, and wrote a supplement to his "Angler" (1630-1687).

COTTON, SIR ROBERT BRUCE, a distinguished antiquary, and founder of the Cottonian Library, now in the British Museum, born at Denton; was a friend of Camden, and assisted him in his great work; was a great book-collector; was exposed to persecution for his presumed share in the publication of an obnoxious book, of which the original was found in his collection; had his books, in which he prided himself, taken from him, in consequence of which he pined and died (1671-1631).

COUOY, an old noble family of Picardy, who had for device, "Rol ne suls, ne duc, ne comte auzai; je suis le sire de Couoy." Basil, a court-poet of the family in the 12th century, lost his life at the siege of Acre in the third crusade.

COULOMBE, CHARLES, a learned French physicist and engineer, born at Angoulême; the inventor of the torsion balance, to whose labours many discoveries in electricity and magnetism are due (1736-1806).

COULOMB, the unit of charge in electricity, being the quantity of electricity which passes through a conductor when a current of one ampère flows for one second.

COUNCILS, CHURCH, assemblies of bishops to decide questions of doctrine and ecclesiastical discipline. They are oecumenical, national, or provincial, according as the bishops assembled represent the whole Church, a merely national one, or a provincial section of it. Important Church Councils that have been held are: Eastern: Nice, 325 (at which Arius was anathematized), 787; Constantinople, 381 (at which Apollinaris was condemned), 553, 680, 689; Ephesus, 431 (at which Nestorius was condemned); Chalcedon, 451 (at which Eutyches was condemned). Western: Lateran, 1123, 1139, 1179, 1215, 1274; Synod of Vienne, 1311; Constance, 1414; Basel, 1431-1443; Trent, 1545-1563; Vatican, 1869.

COUNTY COUNCILS were set up in 1888. Elected by the ratepayers of the county, they control roads, education, licensing, lunatic asylums, and since 1930 the relief of the poor. Over boroughs within the county their powers are modified.

COUNTY COURTS, courts for the trial of civil cases presided over by a judge, first set up in 1847.

COURAYES, a French Roman Catholic ecclesiastic who pleaded on behalf of Anglican orders; was captured; fled to England, where he was welcomed, and received academic honours (1681-1777).

COURBET, a French vice-admiral, born at Abbeville; distinguished himself by his rapid movements and brilliant successes in the East (1827-1885).

COURET, GUSTAVE, French painter, born at Orlans; took to landscape-painting; was head of the Realistic school; joined the Commune in 1871; his property and pictures were sold to pay the damage done, and especially to restore the Vendôme Column; died an exile in Switzerland (1819-1877).

COURIER, PAUL LOUIS, a French writer, born at Paris; began life as a soldier, but being wounded at Wagram, retired from the army and gave himself to letters; distinguished himself as the author of political pamphlets, written with a scathing irony such as has hardly been surpassed, which brought him into trouble; was assassinated on his estate by his gamekeeper (1772-1825).

COURLAND, a partly wooded, and partly marshy province of Russia, S. of the Gulf of Riga; the population mostly German, and Protestants; agriculture their chief pursuit.

COURT DE GEBELIN, a French writer, born at Nîmes, author of a work entitled "The Primitive World analysed and compared with the Modern World" (1725-1784).

COURTENAY, WILLIAM, archbishop of Canterbury, a son of the Earl of Devon; attacked Wickliffe, but was no match for the latter in debate, though he had his revenge in persecuting his followers; was the first of the aristocratic primates (1241-1306).

COURTESY TITLE, that borne by the eldest son of a peer who possesses titles inferior to the one under which he takes his seat in the House of Lords; thus, an Earl who is also a Viscount may allow his heir to style himself by the latter title. Younger sons of Dukes and Marquesses may take the courtesy title of Lord, daughters similarly becoming Lady; children of Viscounts and Barons are entitled to the prefix of Honourable.

COURTOIS, JACQUES, a French painter of battle-pieces; became a Jesuit, died a monk (1621-1676).

COURTRAI, a Belgian town on the Lys, noted for linen and lace industries.

COUSIN, VICTOR, a French philosopher, born in Paris; founder of an eclectic school which derived its doctrines partly from the Scottish philosophy and partly from the German; he was a lucid expounder, an attractive lecturer, and exerted no small influence on public opinion in France; retired from public life in 1848, and died at Cannes; he left a number of philosophic works behind him, the best known being "Discourses on the True, the Beautiful, and the Good" (1793-1807).

COUSIN, MICHAËL, a disparaging nickname of the German peasant, as slow, heavy, unpolished, and ungainly.

COUSIN-MONTAUBAN, CHARLES GUILLAUME, a French general, commanded the Chinese expedition of 1860, and, after a victory over the Chinese, took possession of Peking (1796-1878).

COUSINS, SAMUEL, a mezzotint engraver, born at Exeter; engraved "Bolton Abbey," "Marie Antoinette in the Temple," and a number of plates after eminent painters; left a fund to aid poor artists (1801-1887).

COUSTON, the name of three eminent French sculptors: Nicolas (1658-1733); Guillaume, father (1678-1740); and Guillaume, son (1716-1777).

COUTON, GEORGES, a violent revolutionary, one of a triumvirate with Robespierre and St. Just, who would expel every one from the Jacobin Club who could not give evidence of having done something to merit hanging should a counter-revolution arrive; was elected on the Committee of Public Safety; became President of the Convention, but fell by the guillotine with his chief associates (1756-1794).

COUTTS, THOMAS, a banker, born in Edinburgh, his father having been Lord Provost of that city; joint-founder and eventually sole manager of the London banking house, Coutts & Co.; left a fortune of $900,000 (1786-1822).

COUVADE, a custom among certain races in the past and practised by some primitive peoples to-day, in which a father before and after childbirth takes upon himself the duties and cares of the mother.

COUZA, PRINCE, born at Galatz, hereditary prince of Moldavia and Wallachia; reigned from 1858 to 1860; died in exile, 1873.

COVENANT, SOLEMN LEAGUE AND, an engagement with representatives from Scotland on the part of the English Parliament to secure to the Scots the terms of their National Covenant, and signed by honourable members in St. Margaret's Church, Westminster, September 25, 1643, on the condition of assistance from the Scots in their great struggle with the king.

COVENANT, THE NATIONAL, a solemn engagement on the part of the Scottish nation subscribed to by all ranks of the community, the first signature being appended to it in the Greyfriars' Churchyard, Edinburgh, on February 28, 1638, to maintain the Presbyterian Church and to resist all attempts on the part of Charles I. to tolst Episcopacy upon it; it was ratified by the Scottish Parliament in 1640, and signed by Charles II. in 1650 and 1651.

COVENANTERS, the name given to the body of strict Presbyterians who held out against the breach of the Solemn League and Covenant, in particular to those who figured in the persecutions of 1662 and later.

COVENT GARDEN, properly Convent Garden, as originally the garden of Westminster Abbey; the great fruit, flower, and vegetable market of London, dating from the 17th century; it is also the site of a famous opera house.

COVENTRY, a town in Warwickshire, 18½ m. S.E. of Birmingham; famous for the manufacture of ribbons and watches, and the chief seat of the manufacture of motor-cars and cycles. In the streets are some quaint old houses; there are some very fine churches and a number of charitable institutions. . . a member of the Long Parliament; when, as a member of Parliament in Charles II.'s reign, he made reflections on the profligate conduct of the king, he was set upon by bullies, who slit his nose to the bone; this deed led to the passing of the Coventry Act, which makes cutting and maiming a capital offence (1640-1682).

COVERDALE, MILES, bishop of Exeter and translator of the English Bible, born in Yorkshire; his translation was the first issued under royal sanction, being dedicated to Henry VIII.; it was done at the instance of Thomas Cromwell, brought out in 1535, and executed with a view to secure the favour of the authorities in Church and State, displaying a timid hesitancy unworthy of a manly faith in the truth; both he and his translation, nevertheless, were subjected to persecution, 2500 copies of the latter printed in Paris, having been seized by the Inquisition and committed to the flames; was deposed by Mary and sought refuge in Geneva, returning to England under Elizabeth (1488-1568).

COVERLEY, SIR ROGER DE, member of the club under whose auspices the Spectator was professedly edited; represents an English squire of Queen Anne's reign.

COWARD, SIR HENRY, British composer. He started life as a cutter, took to teaching, and entered the music profession at the age of 39. He lectured at Sheffield University, composed anthems, cantatas, and songs, and won a name as an opponent of syncopated music (1849-).

COWELL, JOHN, an English lawyer, author of "Institutes of the Laws of England" and of a law dictionary burnt by the common hangman for matter in it derogatory to the royal authority (1554-1611).

COWEN, SIR FREDERICK HYMEN, British composer and conductor. Born in Jamaica, he came to England at the age of four, and in 1820 started conducting the Handel Festival of 1804 being entrusted to him. He has composed a number of songs, cantatas, and oratorios, and was knighted in 1911 (1852-).

COWES, a seaside town in the N. of the Isle of Wight, separated by the Medina estuary into E. and W.; engaged in yacht-building, and the headquarters of the Royal Yacht Squadron.

COWLEY, ABRAHAM, poet and essayist, born in London; a contemporary of Milton, whom he at one time outshone, but has now fallen into neglect; he was an ardent royalist, and catered to the taste of the court, which, however, brought him no pre-ferment at the Restoration; he was a master of prose, and specially excelled in letter-writing; he does not seem to have added much to the literature of England, except as an essayist, and in this capacity has been placed at the head of those who cultivated that clear, easy, and natural style which culminated in Addison (1618-1667).

COWLEY, HENRY WELLESLEY, EARL, an eminent diplomatist, brother of the Duke of Wellington; served as a diplomatist in Vienna, Constantinople, and Switzerland, and was ambassador to France from 1852 to 1867 (1804-1884).

COWPER, WILLIAM, a popular English poet, born at Great Berkhampstead, Hertford, of noble lineage; lost his mother at six, and cherished the memory of her all his days; of a timid, sensitive nature, suffered acutely from harsh usage at school; read extensively in the classics; trained for and called to the bar; was appointed at 32 a clerk to the House of Lords; qualifying for the duties of the appointment proved too much for him, and he became insane; when he recovered he retired from the world to Huntingdon, beside a brother, where he formed an intimacy with a family of the name of Unwin, a clergyman in the place; on Mr. Unwin's death he removed with the family to Olney, in Buckinghamshire, where he lived as a recluse and associated with the Rev. John Newton and Mrs. Unwin; shortly after he fell insane again, and continued so for two years; on his recovery he took to gardening and composing poems, his first the "Olney Hymns," the melancholy being charmed away by the conversation of a Lady Austin, who came to live in the neighbourhood; it was she who suggested his greatest poem, the "Task"; then followed other works, change of scene and associates, the death of Mrs. Unwin, and the gathering of a darker and darker cloud, till he passed away peacefully; it is interesting to note that it is to this period his "Lines to Mary Unwin" and his "Mother's Picture" belong (1731-1800).

COX, DAVID, an eminent landscape painter, rated by some next to Turner, born at Birmingham; began his art as a scene-painter with Macready, the actor; painted as a landscapist first in water-colour, then in oil; many of his best works are scenes in N. Wales; his works have risen in esteem and value; an ambition of his was to get £100 for a picture, and one he got only £20 for eventually brought £3602; among his chief works are the "Vale of Clwyd" and the "Hayfield" (1783-1859).

COX, SIR GEORGE, an English mythologist, especially distinguished for his studies of the several myths of Greece and the world into idealisations of solar phenomena; wrote on other subjects, all of interest, and was engaged with W. T. Brande on a "Dictionary of Science, Literature, and Art" (1827-1902).

COXE, HENRY OCTAVIUS, librarian, became assistant-librarian of the Bodleian Library, Oxford, in 1838, and ultimately head-librarian in 1860; under his direction the catalogue, consisting of 720 folio volumes, was completed; held this post till his death; has edited several works of value; is one of Dean Burdon's "Twelve Good Men" (1811-1881).

COXE, WILLIAM, a historical writer, heavy but painstaking, born in London; "History of the House of Austria," the "Memoirs of Marlborough," and "Sir Robert Walpole and the Pelham Administrations" (1747-1828).

COXIE, MICHAEL, a celebrated Flemish painter, born at Mechlin, known as the Flemish Raphael; painted mostly Biblical subjects; appointed court-painter to Philip II. of Spain.

COXWELL, HENRY TRACEY, a celebrated English aeronaut; started as a dentist; took to ballooning; made 700 ascents; reached with Glashier an elevation of 7 m. (1819-1900).

COYOTE, a wolf found on the prairies of Canada, and known, therefore, as the prairie wolf; of a yellowish-grey colour, it has thick fur and a fox-like tail.

COZENS, JOHN ROBERT, a landscape-painter; pronounced by Constable the greatest genius that ever touched landscape, and from him Turner confessed he had learned more than from any other landscapist; his mind gave way at last, and he died insane (1752-1799).

CRABBE, GEORGE, an English poet, born at Aldborough, in Suffolk; began life as apprentice to an apothecary with a view to the practice of medicine, but having poetic tastes, he gave up medicine for literature, and started for London with a capital of three pounds; his first productions in this line not meeting with acceptance, he was plunged in want; appealing in vain for assistance in his distress, he fell in with Edmund Burke, who liberally helped him and procured him high patronage, under which he took orders and obtained a living, and he was now in circumstances to pursue his bent; subsequently he inherited a fortune, and finally settled in the living of Trowbridge (1814); his principal poems are "The Library," "The Village," "The Parish Register," "The Borough," and the "Tales of the Hall," all, particularly the earlier ones, instinct with interest in the lives of the poor, "the sacrifices, temptations, loves, and crimes of humble life," described with the most "unrelenting" realism; the author in Byron's esteem, "though Nature's sternest painter, yet the best" (1764-1832).

GRACOW, 160 m. SW. of Warsaw, old capital of Poland, and restored to it in 1919, where the old Polish kings were buried, and the cathedral of which contains the graves of the most illustrious of the heroes of the country and Thorwaldsen's statue of Christ; a large proportion of the inhabitants are Jews. It was unsuccessfully attacked by the Russians in 1914, when it was the scene of severe fighting.

CRADDOCK, SIR CHRISTOPHER GEORGE FRANCIS MAURICE, British admiral. He entered the navy at the age of 13, and after seeing service in Egypt and China during the Boxer Rising, he was given command of a squadron of three cruisers in the Pacific in 1914, where he was attacked off Chile by five German warships. He gave fight, and went down with his ship Good Hope (1882-1914).

CRADLE MOUNTAIN, a mountain in the W. of Tasmania.

CRAIG, JOHN, a Scottish Reformer, educated at St. Andrews, and originally a Dominican monk; had been converted to Protestantism by study of Calvin's "Institutes," and doomed to the stake by the Inquisition, but had escaped; was the coadjutor in Edinburgh of Knox, and his successor in his work, and left a confession and catechism (1512-1600).

CRAIK, SIR THOMAS, an eminent Scottish lawyer, author of a treatise on the "Jus Feudale" which has often been reprinted, as well as three others in Latin of less note; wrote in Latin verse a poem on Queen Mary's marriage to Darnley (1588-1608).

CRAIGAVON, RT. HON. VISCOUNT (Sir James Craik), British politician. He served with the Imperial Yeomanry in the Boer War, entered the House of Commons in 1906 as a Unionist for Down, held minor posts in the Coalition during the Great War, serving also with the Ulster division in France. He was made a baronet in 1918, became first Prime Minister of Northern Ireland in 1922, and was raised to the peerage in 1927 (1871-).

CRAIK, GEORGE LILLIE, an English author, born in Fife, educated at St. Andrews; settled early in London as a litterateur; was associated with Charles Knight in his popular literary undertakings; was author of the "Pursuit of Knowledge under Difficulties," and the "History of English Literature and Learning"; edited "Pictorial History of England," contributed to "Penny Cyclopaedia," and became professor of English Literature, Queen's College, Belfast (1798-1866).

CRAIK, MRS. nee MULOOCK, born at Stoke-upon-Trent; authoress of "John Halifax, Gentleman," her chief work, which has had, and maintains, a wide popularity; married in 1865 a nephew and namesake of the preceding, a partner of the publishing house of Macmillan & Co.; wrote for the magazines, besides some 14 more novels (1826-1887).

CRAIL, a little old-fashioned town near the East Neuk of Fife, where James Sharp was minister; a decayed fishing-place, now a summer resort.

CRAMER, JOHANN BAPTIST, a distinguished German composer and pianist (1771-1858).

CRANACH, LUCAS, a celebrated German painter, born at Kronach, in the bishopric of Bamberg; was patronised by Frederick the Wise, Elector of Saxony, whom he accompanied in 1537 to the Holy Land; was engraver as well as painter, skilled in portraiture, as well as in historical scenes; was intimately associated with the German reformers Luther and Melancthon, whose portraits he painted among others; the works of his that remain are chiefly altar-pieces; his chief work is the "Crucifixion" in Weimar, where he died (1472-1558).

CRANE, ICHABOD, a tall, lean, lank, Yankee school-master in Irving's "Legend of Sleepy Hollow."

CRANE, WALTER, poet and painter; published various illustrated books and poems illustrated by himself, and was an authority on decorative art (1845-1915).

CRANKER, THOMAS, archbishop of Canterbury, born in Nottinghamshire; educated at Jesus College, Cambridge; recommended himself to Henry VIII. by favouring his divorce, writing in defence of it, and pleading for it before the Pope, the latter in vain, as it proved; on his return was elevated to the archbishopric, in which capacity he proved a zealous promoter of the Reformation, by having the Bible translated and circulated and by the suppression of monasteries; pronounced sentence of divorce on Catharine, and confirmed the king's marriage with Anne Boleyn; by these and other compliances he kept the favour of Henry, but on the accession of Mary he was committed to the Tower, and persuaded to recant and even signed a recantation, but on being called to recant in public, and refusing to do so, he was dragged to the stake, where he thrust his right hand into the flames, and exclaimed, "Oh, this unworthy hand" (1484-1556).

CRANNOGS, a species of lake-dwelling and stronghold, of which remains are found in Scotland and Ireland; are commonly made of stones bound together by logs.

CRASHAW, RICHARD, a minor poet, born in London; bred for the English Church; went to Paris, where he became a Roman Catholic; fell into pecuniary difficulties, but was befriended by Cowley and recommended to a post; was an imitator of George Herbert, and his poems were of the same class, but more fanciful; his principal poems were "Steps to the Temple" and the "Delights of the Muses"; both Milton and Pope were indebted to him (1616-1650).

CRASSUS, LUCIUS LICINIUS, the greatest Roman orator of his day, became consul 55 B.C.; during his consulship a law was passed requiring all but citizens to leave Rome, an edict which provoked the Social War (140-91 B.C.).

CRASSUS, MARCUS LICINIUS, the triumvir with Pompey and Caesar; was avaricious, and amassed great wealth; appointed to the province of Syria, provoked out of cupidity war with the Parthians, in which he was treacherously slain; Orodes, the king, cut off his head, and poured melted gold into his mouth, saying as he did so, "Now taste thyself with the metal of which thou wert so greedy when alive" (105-53 B.C.).

CRATES, a Greek cynic philosopher, disciple of Diogenes; 4th century B.C.

CRATINUS, a Greek comic poet and rival of Aristophanes, born at Athens; limited the actors in a piece to three, and the first to introduce into the drama attacks on public men; wrote also satires on vice (519-424 B.C.).

CRATIPPUS, a Peripatetic philosopher of Mytilene, contemporary of Pompey and Cicero; soothed the sunken spirit of the former after the defeat at Pharsalia with the consolations of philosophy.

CRATYLUS, a dialogue of Plato on the connection between language and thought.

CRAWFORD, FRANCIS MARION, a novelist, born in Tuscany, of American origin, son of the succeeding; spent a good deal of his early years in India; his works, which are numerous, are chiefly novels, his first "Mr. Isaacs" (1882), original and striking, followed by "Zoroaster," "The Witch of Prague," and "Dr. Claudius" (1854-1919).

CRAWFORD, THOMAS, an American sculptor, studied at Rome under Thorwaldsen; his "Orpheus in Search of Eurydice" brought him into notice, and was followed by an array of works of eminent merit; died in London from a tumour on the brain, after being struck with blindness (1814-1857).

CRAWFORD AND BALCARRES, EARL OF, better known as Lord Lindsay, and as the author of "Letters from the Holy Land," "Progression by Antagonism," and "Sketches of the History of Christian Art"; died at Florence, and was entombed at Dun Echt, whence his body was abstracted and found again in a wood near by after a seven months' search (1812-1880).

CRAYER, CASPAR DE, a celebrated Flemish painter, born at Antwerp; pictures and altar-pieces by him are to be seen in Brussels and Ghent (1584-1669).

CREAKLE, MR., a bullying schoolmaster in Dickens' "David Copperfield."

CREASY, SIR EDWARD, chief-justice of Ceylon, author of "The Fifteen Decisive Battles of the World," "Rise and Progress of the British Constitution," &c. (1812-1878).

CREATIN, a substance found in the muscles of vertebrate animals, but never in invertebrate.

CREBILLON, PROSPER JOYOT DE, a French dramatist, born at Dijon, bred to the law, devoted to literature and the composition of tragedies, of which he produced several, mostly on classical subjects, such as "Atræus and Threastes," "Electra," of unequal merit, though at times of great power; he ranked next to Voltaire among the dramatists of the time (1674-1762).

CRECY, a French village, 12 m. N.E. of Abbeville, where Edward III., with 30,000, defeated the French with 68,000, and destroyed the flower of the chivalry of France, Aug. 26, 1346.

CREDIT FONCIER, a system of credit originating in France on the security of land, whereby the loan is repayable so that principal and interest are extinguished at the same time; a similar system has been adopted by other European countries.

CREECH, WILLIAM, an Edinburgh bookseller, for 40 years the chief publisher in the city; published the first Edinburgh edition of Burns' poems (1745-1815).

CREES, a North American Indian people, of whom the Swampy Cree range between Lake Winnipeg and Hudson Bay, and the Prairie Cree formerly inhabited the country now known as Alberta and Saskatchewan until settled on reservations in Indian Territory; are of Algonquin stock.

CREIGHTON, MANDELL, bishop of London, born at Carlisle; previously bishop of Peterborough; wrote on Simon de Montfort, on Wolsey, and on the Tudors and the Reformation, but his great work is the "History of the Papacy from the Great Schism to the Sack of Rome" (1843-1901).

CREMIEUX, ISAAC MOISE (ADOLPHE), a French advocate and politician, born at Nîmes, of Jewish birth; a member of the Provisional Government of 1848, and of the National Defence in 1870; took a deep interest in the destiny of his race (1796-1880).

CREMONA, old town on the Po, in Lombardy, 46 m. S.E. of Milan; interesting for its churches, with their paintings and frescoes; noted at one time for the manufacture of violins by Amati, Stradivarius, and others.

CREMORNE, gardens in Chelsea; now closed; the site of Lott's Road Power Station which supplies the London underground railways with current.

CREOLES, West-Indian born people, or those native to Southern American States, who are of European origin, principally of Spanish or French blood, the name distinguishing them from half-castes and others with traces of negro blood (mulattoes, quadroons, and octoroons); the State of Louisiana is known as the Creole State.

CREOSOTE, the heavy oil produced in the fractional distillation of coal tar (q.v.), used extensively as a preservative for timber.

CRESCENT CITY, New Orleans, U.S., as originally occurring on the cover board of the Mississippi.

CRESCENTINI, a celebrated Italian soprano (1769-1848).

CRESCENTINUS, a patrician of Rome who, in the 10th century, sought to destroy the imperial power and restore the republic; on this he was defeated by Otto III., to whom he surrendered on promise of safety, but who hanged and beheaded him; Stephano, his widow, avenged his treachery by accepting Otto as her lover, and then poisoning him.

CRESPi, GIUSEPPE, an Italian painter; copied the works of Correggio, Caracci, and other masters (1665-1747).

CRESSWELL, SIR CRESSWELL, judge, born in Newcastle; represented Liverpool in Parliament; was raised to the bench by Peel, and, on the establishment of the Divorce Court, was in 1858 named first judge (1794-1893).

CRESWICK, THOMAS, an English landscape-painter, born in Sheffield; simple, pleasantly suggestive, and faithfully painted scenes from nature were the subjects of his art; was employed a good deal in book illustrations (1811-1869).

CRETACEOUS, the geological strata forming the upper layers of the Mesozoic. In England it consists of chalk, gault, and sands (greensand), and, except where it is hidden by later Tertiary Rocks (on the coast of Norfolk and Suffolk, the London Basin, and a small area round Southampton), it covers all the country south-east of a line drawn from King's Lynn to Portland Bill. The earliest mammals probably appeared at the end of this period.

CRETE, or CANDIA, a mountainous island, in the Mediterranean, 160 m. long and from 7 to 80 m. broad; in nominal subjection to Turkey after 1669, it was in perpetual revolt; the rising of 1895 led to the intervention of the great powers of Europe, and the Turkish troops having been withdrawn in 1896 under pressure from Great Britain, Russia, France, and Italy, Prince George of Greece was appointed High Commissioner, ruling on behalf of these powers. The island was formally annexed by Greece in 1912.

CRETINISM, a disease prevalent in valleys as those of the Alps, characterised by mental imbecility, and associated with abnormal and arrested physical development, due to a deficiency in the secretions of the thyroid glands.

CREUSA, a wife of Aeneas, fell behind her husband, lost her way in escaping from Troy, and perished.

CREUSOT, LE, a town in the dep. Saône-et-Loire, near Autun, which owes its importance to the large ironworks established there; is a district rich in coal and iron.

CREUZER, GEORG FRIEDRICH, a learned German philologist, born at Marburg; became professor of Ancient History and Philology at Heidelberg; his chief work, and one by which he is most widely known, "Symbolism and Mythology of Ancient Peoples, especially the Greeks"; left an autobiography (1771-1858).

CREWE, a town in Cheshire, 43 m. S.E. of Liverpool, a great railway junction, where the London, Midland and Scottish Railway Company have their works.

CREWE, 1ST MARQUIS OF, British politician. From 1892 to 1895 he was Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland; joined the Liberal Cabinet in 1906 as Lord President of the Council, and was subsequently Colonial Secretary and Secretary for India. He retired from office with Asquith in 1916 and became chairman of the L.C.C. From 1922 to 1928 he was British Ambassador in Paris (1858-1931).

CRICHTON, JAMES. See ADMIRABLE CRICHTON.

CRICKET, England's national summer sport. Probably a development of stoolball, which was in vogue in the Middle Ages and survives in parts of Sussex; the game had attained considerable popularity by the 18th century, and a London club was formed at Finsbury in 1700. The Hambledon club started in 1750, and at its ground at Broadhalfpenny Down county cricket originated. Thomas Lord started a ground in Dorset Square in 1787, which was moved to St. John's Wood in 1814, and became the headquarters of the Marylebone Cricket Club, the ruling authority of the game. Gentlemen v. Players, Oxford v. Cambridge, and Eton v. Harrow matches started about this time, and cricket took its present form. An England team went to Australia in 1862, and an Australian team came here in 1878, leading to a succession of international contests. These matches have also been played against South Africa, New Zealand, and the West Indies. Principal interest rests in the County Championship, for which seventeen counties compete. Among the men who have made the game famous are, as batsmen: W. G. Grace, G. H. Jessop, George Hirst, R. Abel, Ranjitsinhji, C. B. Fry, M. A. Noble, A. MacLaren, and J. B. Hobbs; and among bowlers: Lockwood, S. F. Barnes, Richardson, Kortwright, Blyth, Spofforth, and Rhodes.

CRIEFF, a town in Perthshire, at the foot of the Grampians, 18 m. W. of Perth, amid exquisite scenery; has a climate favourable for invalids.

CRILLON, LOUIS BERTON DE, a French military captain, born at Mars, in Provence; distinguished himself through five reigns, those of Henry II., Francis II., Charles IX., Henry III., and Henry IV., of the last of whom he became companion in arms; Henry designated him Le brave des braves, and wrote to him this famous note after the victory of Arques: "Where were you, brave Crillon? we have conquered, and you were not there (1641-1615).

CRIMEA, a peninsula in the S. of Russia, almost surrounded by the Black Sea and the Sea of Azov, being connected with the mainland by the narrow isthmus of Perekop; has a bold and precipitous coast 650 m. in length; is barren in the N., but fertile and fruitful in the S.; population chiefly Russians and Tartars.

CRIMEAN WAR, a war carried on chiefly in the Crimea, on the part of Turkey aided by Britain and France, in which Sardinia eventually joined them, against the encroachments of Russia in the E.; it was proclaimed against Russia, March 24, 1854, and ended by the fall of Sebastopol, September 8, 1855, the treaty of peace following having been signed at Paris, March, 1856.

CRINAN CANAL, a canal for vessels of light burden, 9 m. long, from Loch Fyne, in Argyllshire, constructed to avoid sailing round the Mull of Kintyre, thereby saving a distance of 115 m.

CRINOIDS, or sea lilies, are plant-like invertebrate animals that have existed from Cambrian times to the present day. Some limestones are formed almost entirely of crinoid stems.

CRISPI, FRANCESCO, an Italian statesman, born in Sicily; co-operated with Garibaldi in the Sicilian Revolution, and afterwards active as a member of the Government in the kingdom of Italy (1819-1901).

CRISPIN, the patron saint of shoemakers, of noble birth, who with his brother had to flee from persecution in Rome to Gaul, where they settled at Soissons; preached to the people and supported themselves by shoemaking; finally suffered martyrdom in 287. Festival, Oct. 25.

CRITIAS, a pupil of Socrates, who profited so little by his master's teaching that he became the most conspicuous for his cruelty and rapacity of all the thirty tyrants set up in Athens by the Spartans (450-402 B.C.).

CRITICAL TEMPERATURE, that temperature above which a gas cannot be liquified by pressure.

CRITON, a rich Athenian, friend and disciple of Socrates; supported the latter by his fortune, but could not persuade him to leave his prison though he had procured the means of escape.

CROATIA AND SLAVONIA, part of Jugo-Slavia, lying between the Drave and Save, tributaries of the Danube, and stretching westward to the Adriatic; it is half as large as Ireland, wooded and mountainous, with marshy districts along the river courses. The soil is fertile, growing cereals, fibres, tobacco, and grapes; silkworms and bees are a source of wealth; horses, cattle, and swine are raised in large numbers. The province is poor in minerals, and lacks a harbour. The people are Slavs, of Roman Catholic faith; backward in education, but showing signs of progress.

CROCKETT, SAMUEL RUTHERFORD, novelist, born near New Galloway, Kirkcudbright; bred for the Church, and for some time Free Church minister at Fencuik, Midlothian, a charge he resigned in 1895, having previously published a volume of sketches entitled "The Sickit Minister," which was received as to induce him to devote himself to literature; his later novels include "The Raiders," "The Grey Man," and "Cleg Kelly" (1859-1914).

CROESUS, the last of the kings of Lydia, in the 6th century B.C.; celebrated for his wealth, so that his name became a synonym for a man overwhelmed by the favours of fortune; being visited by Solon, he asked him one day if he knew any one happier than he was, when the sage answered, "No man can be counted happy till after death." Of the truth of this Croesus had ere long experience; being condemned to death by Cyrus, who had defeated him and condemned him to be burnt, and about to be led to the burning pile, he called out thrice over the name of Solon, when Cyrus, having learned the reason, moved with pity, ordered his release, retained him among his counsellors, and commended him when dying to the care of his son.

CROKEE, JOHN WILSON, a politician and man of letters, born in Galway, though of English descent; bred for the bar; wrote in advocacy of Catholic emancipation; represented Downpatrick in Parliament; was in 1890 appointed Secretary to the Admiralty, a post he held for 20 years; was one of the founders of the Quarterly Review, to which, it is said, he contributed 200 articles; edited Boswell's "Life of Johnson," with Notes; was an obstinate Tory, satirised by Disraeli and severely handled by Macaulay; founded the Athenæum Club (1780-1857).

CROKEE, T. CROFTON, Irish folklorist, born in Cork; held a well-paid clerkship in the Admiralty; collected and published stories, legends, and traditions of the S. of Ireland; he wrote with a humour which was heartily Irish, his most original work being "The Adventures of Barney Mahoney"; he was a zealous antiquary and a brilliant conversationalist (1798-1854).

ROLL, JAMES, a geologist, born near Coupar-Angus contributed materially to geology by his study of the connection between alterations of climate and geological changes (1821-1890).

CROLY, GEORGE, a versatile author; designed for the Church; took to literature, and wrote in all branches, poetry, biography, and romance chiefly; his best romance "Salathiel"; died rector of St. Stephen's, Walbrook (1780-1860).

CROMAGNON, name given to the race of men who lived in Europe in the later palaeolithic times, after the Neanderthal race had died out.

CROMARTY, a county in the N. of Scotland consisting of ten fragments scattered up and down Ross-shire; the county town of same name, the birthplace of Hugh Miller, is on the N. side of Cromarty Firth, which opens eastward into the Moray Firth, and forms a large harbour 1 m. long and 7 broad, protected at the mouth by two beesting rocks called Sutors, one on each side, 400 and 468 ft. high.

CROME, JOHN, usually called Old Crome, a landscape-painter, born in Norwich, of poor parents; began as a house-painter and became a drawing-master; one of the founders of the Norwich Society of Artists; took his subjects from his native county, and treated them with fidelity to nature; his pictures have risen in value since his death (1788-1821).

CROMLECH, a circle of upright stones, sometimes enclosing dolmens and barrows, each two or three topped by a large, flat stone; these megaliths are very ancient and are believed to have figured in prehistoric religious rites in connection with sun worship; in Britain prominent cromlechs are those at Kit's Coty House, Kent, and Weyland Smith's Cave, Berks., with several in Cornwall and Wales; they are found elsewhere in Brittany, Germany, and Denmark.

CROMPTON, SAMUEL, inventor of the spinning-mule, born near Bolton; for five years he worked at his project, and, as he was without means to exploit it, a sum was raised by subscription to buy it, and he got some £80 for it; the machine proved equal to producing fine muslin yarn and a great impetus was given to trade; while others became wealthy through the invention, he had to spend, and end, his days in comparative poverty, with a life annuity of £88 which some friends bought him (1758-1827).

CROMWELL, OLIVER, Lord-Protector of the Commonwealth of England, born at Huntingdon, the son of Robert Cromwell, the younger son of Sir Henry Cromwell, and of Elisabeth Steward, descended from the royal family, he believed to have the child and second boy educated at Huntingdon and afterwards at Cambridge; left college at his father's death, and occupied himself in the management of his paternal property; entered Parliament in 1629, and represented Cambridge in 1640, where to oppose the king he, by commission in 1642 from Essex, raised a troop of horse, famous afterwards as his "Ironsides"; with these he distinguished himself, first at Marston Moor in 1644, and next year at Naseby; crushed the Scots at Preston in 1645, who had invaded the country in favour of the king, now in the hands of the Parliament, and took Berwick; sat at trial of the king and signed his death-warrant, 1649; sent that same year to subdue rebellion in Ireland, he sternly yet humanely stamped it out; recalled from Ireland, he set out for Scotland, which had risen up in favour of Charles II., and totally defeated the Scots at Dunbar, Sept. 3, 1650, after which Charles invaded England and the Royalists were finally beaten at Worcester, Sept. 3, 1651, upon which his attention was drawn to affairs of government; taking up his residence at Hampton Court, his first step was to dissolve the Rump, which he did by military authority in 1653; a new Parliament was summoned, which also he was obliged to dismiss, after being declared Lord-Protector; from this time he ruled mainly alone, and wherever his power was exercised, beyond seas even, it was respected; at last his cares and anxieties proved too much for him; worn out, he fell ill with fever, and died, Sept. 3, 1658, the anniversary of his great victories at Dunbar and Worcester; they buried him in Westminster, but his body was dug up at the Restoration, hanged at Tyburn, and buried under the gallows; condemned by some as a regicide and a pitiless fanatic, he is properly placed among the nation's greatest men, ruling wisely and well in a time of extreme difficulty and being actuated throughout by the highest and purest motives (1599-1658). See "Cromwell's Letters and Speeches" edited by Carlyle.

CROMWELL, RICHARD, son of the Protector; appointed to succeed him; was unequal to the task, and compelled to abdicate, April 26, 1659; retired into private life; after the Restoration went for a time abroad; returned under a feigned name, and lived and died at Chestnut (1626-1712).

CROMWELL, THOMAS, minister of Henry VIII., and maileus monachorum, the "mauler of the monks," born at Putney; the son of a blacksmith; led a life of adventure for eight or nine years on the Continent; settled in England about the beginning of Henry's reign; came under notice of Wolsey, whose confidant he became, and subordinate agent in suppressing the smaller monasteries; on his master's fall rose into favour with Henry; by suggesting he should discard the supremacy of the Pope, and assume the supremacy of the Church himself; attained, in consequence, the highest rank and authority in the State, for the proposal was adopted, with the result that the Crown remains the head of ecclesiastical authority in England to this day; the authority he thus acquired he employed in so high-handed a fashion that he lost the favour of both king and people, till on a sudden he was arrested on charges of treason, was sentenced to death, and beheaded on Tower Hill (1485-1540).

CROOKES, SIR WILLIAM, an eminent chemist and physicist, born in London; distinguished in both capacities; discovered the metal thallium in 1861, and invented the radiometer. He made many researches into radioactivity and on the conductivity of electricity through gases; he discovered the kathode rays (q.v.) (1832-1919).

CROOKS, WILL, British politician. One of the earliest Labour leaders, he became mayor of Poplar in 1903, entered Parliament in the same year, and was made a Privy Councillor in 1916 (1852-1921).

CROSS, MRS., George Eliot's married name.

CROSS, SOUTHERN, a bright constellation in the southern hemisphere consisting of four stars.

CROSS, VICTORIA, a naval and military decoration instituted in 1856, and extended in 1911 and 1920; awarded for personal valour in the face of the enemy.

CROSSFELL, one of the Pennine range of mountains in the N. of England, 2892 ft., on the top of which five counties meet.

CROSS FERTILISATION, the fertilisation of a flower by pollen from another plant; insects play a large part in this process, carrying the pollen from plant to plant in the hairs of the body.

CROSSBOW, also known as Arbalest, a medieval weapon; a strongly-made bow affixed to a musket-like stock and propelling a metal-tipped shaft called a quarrel; fell into disuse after the introduction of the longbow.

CROSSE, ANDREW, electrician, born in Somersetshire; made several discoveries in the application of electricity; he was an ardent scientist (1784-1855).

CROSSELAGUEL, an abbey, now in ruins, 2 m. S.W. of Maybole, Ayrshire, where John Knox held dispute with the abbot, and of which in his "History of the Reformation" he gives a humorous account (1562).

CROUCH, WILLIAM, musical composer of precocious gifts, born in Norwich; became, in 1797, professor of Music in Oxford, and in 1822 Principal of the Royal Academy of Music; his anthems are well known (1775-1847).

CROTONA, an ancient, large, and flourishing Greek city, Magna Græcia, in Italy; the residence of the philosopher Pythagoras and the athlete Milo.

CROWE, EYRE EVANS, historian and miscellaneous writer, born in Hants; editor of the Daily News; author of the "History of France" and "Lives of Eminent Foreign Statesmen" (1799-1868).

CROWE, SIR JOSEPH ARBUTHNOT, writer on art and a journalist, born in London, son of the preceding; is associated with Cavalcade in several works on art and famous artists (1825-1896).

CROWN, THE, in the British constitution the oldest and central part of the organism. The King is Supreme head of the State, and without his assent no measure can become law, no Minister can be appointed, and Parliament cannot be called or dissolved. As supreme head of the Church he appoints the bishops. Ever since Magna Charta the absolute exercise of the royal prerogative has been checked, and for two centuries it has not been used at all.

CROWNE, JOHN, playwright, born in Nova Scotia, a contemporary and rival of Dryden; supplied the piece with plays for nearly 30 years (1660-1708).

CROWTHER, SAMUEL ADJAI, bishop of the Niger Territory; an African by birth; was captured to be sold as a slave, but released by an English cruiser; baptised a Christian in 1825 and trained at a Sierra Leone Anglican mission; joined the first Niger Expedition in 1841; sent out as a missionary in 1848; appointed bishop in 1864; translated the Bible into Central African tongues and compiled valuable native grammars and dictionaries (1810-1891).

CROYDON, the largest town in Surrey, on the Wandle, 10 m. SW. of London Bridge, and practically now a suburb of London, of which it is the air port.

CRUDEN, ALEXANDER, author of a "Complete Concordance of the Holy Scriptures," with which alone his name is now associated; born in Aberdeen; intended for the Church, but from unsteadiness of intellect not qualified to enter it; was placed frequently in restraint; appears to have been a good deal employed as a press corrector; gave himself out as "Alexander the Corrector," commissioned to correct moral abuses (1701-1770).

CRUTCHANK, GEORGE, a richly gifted English artist, born in London, of Scottish descent; the first exhibition of his talent was in the illustration of books for children, but it was in the line of humorous satire that he chiefly distinguished himself; he first found scope for his gifts in this direction in the political squibs of William Hone, a faculty he exercised at length over a wide area; the works illustrated by him include, among hundreds of others, "Grimm's Stories," "Peter Schlemihl," Scott's "Demonology," Dickens' "Oliver Twist," and Ainsworth's "Jack Sheppard"; like Hogarth, he was a moralist as well as an artist, and as a total abstainer he consecrated his art at length to dramatise the downward career of the drunkard; his greatest work, done in oil, is in the National Gallery, the "Worship of Baal," which is a vigorous protestation against intemperance (1762-1878).

CRUSADES, THE, military expeditions, organised from the 11th century to the 13th, under the banner of the Cross, for the recovery of the Holy Land from the hands of the Saracens, to the number of eight. The First (1096-1099), preached by Peter the Hermit, and sanctioned by the Council of Clermont (1095), consisted of two divisions: one, broken into two hordes, under Peter the Hermit and Walter the Penniless respectively, arrived decimated in Syria, and was cut to pieces at Nicosa by the sultan; while the other, better equipped and more efficiently organised, laid siege to and captured in succession Nicosa, Antioch, and Jerusalem, where Godfrey of Bouillon was proclaimed king. The Second (1147-1149), preached by St. Bernard, consisting of two armies under Conrad III. of Germany and Louis VII. of France, laid siege in a shattered state to Damascus, and was compelled to raise the siege and return a mere remnant to Europe. The Third (1189-1193), preached by William, archbishop of Tyre, and provoked by Saladin's capture of Jerusalem, of which one division was headed by Barbarossa, who, after taking Iconium, was drowned while bathing in the Orontes, and the other headed by Philippe Augustus and Richard Cœur de Lion, who jointly captured Acre and made peace with Saladin. The Fourth (1202-1204), under sanction of Pope Innocent III., and undertaken by Baldwin, count of Flanders, having got the length of Venice, was preparing to start for Asia, when it was called aside to Constantinople to restore the emperor to his throne, when, upon his death immediately afterwards, the Crusaders elected Baldwin in his place, pillaged the city, and left, having added it to the domain of the Pope. The Fifth (1217-1221), on the part of John of Brienne, king of Jerusalem, and Andrew II., king of Hungary, who made a raid upon Egypt against the Saracens there, but without any result. The Sixth (1228-1229), under conduct of Frederick II. of Germany, as heir through John of Brienne to the throne of Jerusalem, who made a treaty with the sultan of Egypt whereby the holy city, with the exception of the Mosque of Omar, was made over to him as king of Jerusalem. The Seventh (1248-1254), conducted by St. Louis IX. of France, in the fulfilment of a vow, in which Louis was defeated and taken prisoner, and only recovered his liberty by payment of a heavy ransom. The Eighth (1270), also undertaken by St. Louis, who lay dying at Tunis as the towns of Palestine fell one after another into the hands of the Saracens. The Crusades terminated with the fall of Ptolemais in 1291.

CRUSOE, ROBINSON, the hero of Defoe's story of the name, a shipwrecked sailor who spent years on an uninhabited island in the mouth of the Orinoco, and is credited with many original devices in providing for his wants. The story is founded on the adventures of Alexander Selkirk, who spent four solitary years on the island of Juan Fernandez. See SELKIRK and DOVER.

CRUSTACEANS, mainly aquatic animals, abundant as fossils; they include lobsters, cray-fish, crabs, and the snail turricles, which had a wide geographical distribution in Lower Palaeozoic times.

CRUTCHED FRIARS, a monastic order of the 13th century, so called as being the "Cross-bearers," from the sacred emblem borne on their staves and their gowns; suppressed in England in 1566, their name survives in a part of the City of London.

CRYSTAL PALACE, THE, place of entertainment erected at Sydenham in 1852, after it had housed the Great Exhibition of 1851 in Hyde Park. For many years the football Cup Final was played here.

CSOMA DE KÖRÖS, ALEXANDER, a Hungarian traveller and philologist, born in Körös, Transylvania; in the hope of tracing the origin of the Magyar race, set out for the East in 1820, and after much hardship by the way arrived in Tibet, where, under great privations, though aided by the English Government, he devoted himself to the study of the Tibetan language; in 1831 settled in Calcutta, where he compiled his Tibetan Grammar and Dictionary, and catalogued the Tibetan works in the library of the Asiatic Society; died at Darjeeling just as he was setting out for fresh discoveries (1798-1842).

CTESIAS, Greek physician and historian of Persia; was present with Artaxerxes Mnemon at the battle of Cunaxa, 401 B.C., and stayed afterwards at the Persian court, where he got the materials for his history, of which only a few fragments are extant.

CTESIPHON, an Athenian who, having proposed that the city should confer a crown of gold on Demosthenes, was accused by Aeschines of violating the law in so doing, but was acquitted after an eloquent oration by Demosthenes in his defence.

CUBA, the largest of the West Indian Islands, 700 m. long and from 27 m. to 90 m. in breadth; belonged to Spain, but is now under the protection of the United States; is traversed from E. to W. by a range of mountains wooded to the summit; abounds in forests—ebony, cedar, mahogany, &c.; soil very fertile; exports sugar and tobacco; principal town, Havana.

CUBIC EQUATION, an equation in which the unknown quantity occurs in the third degree.

CUBITT, SIR WILLIAM, an eminent English engineer, born in Norfolk; employed in most of the great engineering undertakings of his time (1786-1861).

CUGHALIN, the greatest mythical hero of the Celtic race, celebrated in Irish folklore; known as the Bound of Ulster.

CUDWORTH, RALPH, an eminent English divine and philosopher, born in Somerset; his chief work, a vast and discursive one, and to which he owes his fame, "The True Intellectual System of the Universe," in which he teaches a philosophy of the Platonic type, which ascribes more to the abiding inner than the fugitive outer of things; he defends revealed religion on grounds of reason against both the atheist and the materialist; his candour and liberality exposed him to much misconception, and on that account he was deemed a latitudinarian (1617-1688).

CUENCA, a fine old city in Spain, 83 m. E. of Madrid; also a high-lying city of Ecuador, over 100 m. S. of Quito, with a delightful climate; both in provinces of the same name.

CUJAS, or CUJACIUS, a celebrated French jurist, born at Toulouse; devoted to the study of Roman law in its historical development, and the true founder of the Historical school in that department (1622-1690).

CULDEES, fraternities of uncertain origin and character scattered up and down Ireland, and especially Scotland, hardly at all in England, from the 9th or 10th to the 14th century; instituted, as would appear, to keep alive a religious spirit among themselves and disseminate it among their neighbours, until on the establishment of monastic orders in the country they ceased to have a separate existence and lost their individuality in the new communities, as well as their original character; they appear to have been at first something like those fraternities we find later on at Deventer, in Holland, with which Thomas à Kempis was connected, only whereas the former sought to plant Christianity, the latter sought to purify it. The name disappears after 1832, but traces of them are found at Dunkeld, St. Andrews, Brechin, and elsewhere in Scotland; in Ireland they continued in Armagh to the Reformation, and were resuscitated for a few years in the 17th century.

CULLEN, PAUL, Cardinal, Catholic primate of Ireland, born in Kildare; was an extreme ultramontanist; vigorously opposed all secret societies in the country with revolutionary aims, as well as the system of mixed education then in force (1803-1878).

CULLEN, WILLIAM, physician, born at Hamilton; studied in Glasgow; held successively the chairs of Chemistry and Medicine in Edinburgh University; author of several medical works; did much to advance the science of medicine; the celebrated Dr. Black was one of his pupils in chemistry (1710-1790).

CULLODEN, a moor, 5 m. NE. of Inverness, where the Duke of Cumberland defeated Prince Charles in 1746, and finally wrecked the Stuart cause in the country.

CULPEPER, NICHOLAS, a herbalist, born in London, who practised medicine and associated therewith the art of the astrologer as well as the faith of a Puritan; was a character and a phenomenon of his time (1616-1654).

CULVERWEL, NATHANIEL, an English author, born in Middlesex; educated at Cambridge, and one of the Platonist school there; wrote "Light of Nature," "Spiritual Optics," "Worth of Souls," &c., works which evince vigour of thinking as well as literary power (circa 1635-1681).

CUMÆ, a considerable maritime city of Campania, now in ruins; alleged to be the earliest Greek settlement in Italy; famous as the residence of the Sibyl (q.v.), and a place of luxurious resort for wealthy Romans.

CUMBERLAND, a county in N. of England, of mountain and dale, with good agricultural and pasture land, and a rich coalfield on the coast, as well as other minerals in the interior.

CUMBERLAND, DR. RICHARD, bishop of Peterborough, born in London, educated at Cambridge, wrote several works, the chief "An Inquiry into the Laws of Nature, in reply to Hobbes, in which he elevates the tendency to produce happiness into something like a moral principle; wrought hard, lived to a great age, and is credited with the saying, "Better wear out than rust out" (1681-1718).

CUMBERLAND, RICHARD, dramatist, great-grandson of the preceding; was a prolific writer for the stage; the play "The West Indian" which established his reputation, was his best (1732-1811).

CUMBERLAND, WILLIAM AUGUSTUS, DUKE OF, second son of George II., was defeated at Fontenoy by the French in 1745; defeated the Pretender next year at Culloden; earned the title of "The Butcher" by his cruelties afterwards; was beaten in all his battles except this one (1721-1765).

CUMERIA, a country of the Northern Britons which, in the 8th century, extended from the Clyde to the Dee, in Cheshire.

CUMMING, JOHN, a Scottish clergyman, popular in London, born at Fintray, in Aberdeenshire; of a highly combative turn, and somewhat foolhardy in his interpretations of prophecy (1807-1881).

CUMMING, ROUALSEYN GEORGE GORDON, the African lion-hunter, of Celtic origin; served for a time in the army; wrote an account of his hunting exploits in his "Five Years of a Hunter's Life" (1820-1866).

CUNARD, SIR SAMUEL, founder of Cunard Line of steamships, born in Halifax, Nova Scotia (1787-1865).

CUNAXA, a town in Babylonia, on the Euphrates, 60 m. N. of Babylon.

CUNCTATOR, a name given to Fabius Maximus on account of the tantalising tactics he adopted to wear out his adversary Hannibal.

CUNEIFORM, the name applied to the wedge-shaped characters in which the Assyrian and other ancient monumental inscriptions are written.

CUNNINGHAM, SIR ALEXANDER, a son of the following; authority on Indian archaeology; served in Indian army; wrote important volumes on the country (1814-1898).

CUNNINGHAM, ALLAN, poet and man of letters, born in the parish of Keir, Dumfriesshire; bred to the mason craft, but devoted his leisure hours to study and the composition of Scottish ballads, which, when published, gained him the notice of Sir Walter Scott; in 1810 he went to London, where he wrote for periodicals, and obtained employment as assistant to Chantry the sculptor, in which post he found leisure to cultivate his literary proclivities, collating and editing tales and songs, editing Burns with a Life, and writing the Lives of famous artists (1784-1842).

CUNNINGHAM, PETER, son of the preceding, author of the "Life of Drummond of Hawthornden," "Handbook of London," &c. (1816-1869).

CUNNINGHAM, WILLIAM, a Scottish divine, born in Hamilton, well read in the Reformation and Puritan theology, a vigorous defender of Scottish orthodoxy, and a staunch upholder of the independence of the Church of State control; was a powerful debater, and a host in any controversy in which he embarked (1805-1861).

CUPID, or AMOR, the Roman god of love, viewed as a chubby little boy, armed with bow and arrows, and often with eyes bandaged; represented in fable as the son of Mercury and Venus.

CUPID AND PSYCHE, an allegorical representation of the trials of the soul on its way to the perfection of bliss, being an episode in the "Golden Ass" of Apuleius. See PSYCHE.

CURACAO, one of the Antilles, in the West Indies, belonging to the Dutch, 36 m. long by about 8 broad; yields, along with other West Indian products, an orange from the peel of which a liqueur is made in Holland.

CURARE, or WOORAIL, an extract from certain plants used as a poison for arrow-tips by South American Indians, particularly on the Amazon and Orinoco; is used in medicine in cases of tetanus.

CURE OF MEUDON, Rabelais.

CURETES, priests of Cybele, in Crete, whose rites were celebrated with clashing of cymbals.

CURETON, WILLIAM, Syriac scholar, born in Shropshire, assistant-keeper of MSS. at the British Museum; applied himself to the study and collation of Syriac MSS., and discovered, among other relics, a version of the Epistle of Ignatius; was appointed canon of Westminster (1808-1864).

CURIATI, three Alban brothers who fought with the three Horatii Roman brothers, and were beaten, to the subjection of Alba to Rome.

CURIE, MARIE (née SKLODOVSKA), wife of Pierre Curie, whom she succeeded as professor of Physics at Paris in 1906. With her husband she was the first to isolate radium and polonium, obtaining a small quantity from a large mass of pitchblende, a task demanding great skill and labour (1867-).

CURIE, PIERRE, professor of Physics at Paris. Carried out many researches in electricity and magnetism, and with his wife Marie (q.v.) isolated radium salts. He was killed in a street accident in Paris in 1906 (1859-1906).

CURLING, a Scottish game played between rival clubs, belonging generally to different districts, by means of cheese-shaped stones hurled along smooth ice, the rules of which are pretty much the same as those in bowling.

CURLL, EDMUND, a London bookseller, notorious for the issue of libellous and of obscene publications, and for prosecutions to which he was subjected in consequence (1675-1747).

CURRAGE, THE, a wide stretch of common land in Kildare, Ireland, used as a military camp; originally intended for races.

CURREAN, JOHN PHILIPOT, an Irish orator and wit, born in co. Cork; became member of Parliament in 1784; though a Protestant, employed all his eloquence to oppose the policy of the Government towards Ireland, together with the Union; retired on the death of Pitt; was Master of the Rolls for a time (1750-1817).

CURRIE, JAMES, a Liverpool physician, born in Kirkpatrick-Fleming, Dumfriesshire; was the earliest biographer and editor of Burns, in 4 vols., a work which he undertook for the poet's widow and family, and which realised £1400, involved no small labour, was done con amore, and done well (1756-1805).

CURTIS, GEORGE WILLIAM, an American writer, born in Rhode Island, distinguished as contributor or editor in connection with several American journals and magazines (1824-1892).

CURTIS, a noble youth of Roman legend who leapt on horseback full-armed into a chasm in the Forum, which the soothsayers declared would not close unless at the sacrifice of what Rome held dearest; judging that the wealth of Rome lay in its citizens, he offered himself, and tradition says the chasm thereupon immediately closed.

CURTIS, ERNST, a German archaeologist and philosopher, born at Lübeck; travelled in Greece and Asia Minor; contributed much by his researches to the history of Greece and of its legends and works of art; his jubilee as a professor was celebrated in 1891, when he received the congratulations of the Emperor William II., to whose father he at one time had acted as tutor (1814-1896).

CURTIS, GEORG, German philologist, born at Lübeck, brother of the preceding; held professorial appointments in Prague, Kiel, and Berlin; one of the best Greek scholars in Germany; and contributed largely to the etymology and grammar of the Greek language (1820-1885).

CURTIS, QUINTUS RUFUS, a Roman historian of the 1st or 2nd century; wrote a history of Alexander the Great in ten books, two of which have been lost, the rest surviving in a very fragmentary state.

CURTMAINTLE, a surname of Henry II. from the fact that the robe he wore, the Anjou mantle, was shorter than that of his predecessors.

CURULE CHAIR, a kind of ivory camp-stool, mounted on a chariot, on which a Roman magistrate, if consul, pretor, censor, or chief edile, sat as he was conveyed in state to the senate-house or some public function.

CURWEN, JOHN, an Independent clergyman, born in Yorkshire; the founder of the Tonic Sol-fa system in music; from 1864 gave himself up to the advocacy and advancement of his system (1816-1880).

CURZON, GEORGE NATHANIEL, MARQUESS CURZON OF KEDLESTON, British politician. Educated at Oxford, he entered the House of Commons as a Conservative in 1886, was Under-Secretary for India in 1891 and Viceroy from 1898 to 1905, resigning over a dispute with Kitchener. He was made an Earl in 1911, and served in both Coalition Governments during the Great War. He succeeded Balfour as Foreign Secretary, a post he held again in the Conservative Governments of 1922 and 1924 (1859-1925).

CUSHING, CALEB, an American jurist and diplomatist (1800-1879).

CUSHMAN, CHARLOTTE, an American actress, born in Boston; represented, among other characters, Lady Macbeth, Rosalind, Meg Merrilees, and Romeo (1816-1876).

CUSTER, GEORGE ARMSTRONG, American general; after service in the Civil War fought several campaigns against the Indians, and was killed in Dakota in the engagement known as the "Custer Massacre" (1839-1876). See SITTING BULL.

CUSTINE, COUNT DE, a French general, born at Metz; seized and occupied Mayence, 1792; was forced out of it by the Prussians and obliged to retreat; was called to account and sent to the guillotine; "unsuccessfulness," his crime; had fought in America with no little distinction (1746-1798).

CÜSTRIN, a strong little town, 68 or 70 m. E. of Berlin, where young Frederick the Great was kept in close confinement by his father.

CUTCH, a native State in the Bombay Presidency, in the country called Gujarāt.

CUTCH, RANN OF, a salt-water morass between Gujarāt and Scinde, which becomes a lake during the SW. monsoon.

CUTBERT, a monk of Jarrow, a disciple of Bede; was with him when he died, and wrote in a letter a graphic and touching account of his death.

CUTBERT, ST., born in Northumbria; originally a shepherd; saw a vision in the night-watches of the soul of St. Aidan ascending to heaven, which determined his destiny, and he became a monk; entered the monastery of Melrose, and eventually became prior, but devoted most of his time to mission-work in the surrounding districts; left Melrose to be prior of Lindisfarne, but, longing for an austere life, he retired to, and led the life of a hermit on, one of the Farne Islands; being persuaded to come back, acted as bishop of Lindisfarne, and continued to act as such for two years, but his previous longings for solitude returned, and he went back to a hermit life, to spend a short season, as it happened, in prayer and meditation until he died; what he did, and the memory of what he did, left an imperishable impression for good in the whole N. of England and the Scottish borders; his remains were conveyed to Lindisfarne, and ere long to Durham (635-687).

CUTTACE, capital of a district in S. of Bengal, at the apex of the delta formed by the Mahanuddy; noted for its gold and silver filigree work.

CUVIER, GEORGES, a celebrated naturalist, born at Montebellard, of Burgundian ancestry, the creator of comparative anatomy and palaeontology; was educated at Stuttgart, where he studied natural science; but the observation of marine animals on the coast of Normandy, where he held a tutorship, first led him to the systematic study of anatomy, and brought him into correspondence with Geoffroy St. Hilaire and others, who invited him to Paris, where he prosecuted his investigations, matured his views, and became professor of Comparative Anatomy at the Jardin des Plantes, a member of the French Institute, and Permanent Secretary of the Academy of Sciences, and eventually a peer of France; his labours in the science to which he devoted his life were immense, but he continued to the last a determined opponent of the theory, then being broached, of a common descent; was made a baron by Louis Philippe (1769-1832).

CUXHAVEN, a German watering-place at the mouth of the Elbe, on the southern bank.

CUYP, ALBERT, a celebrated Dutch landscape-painter, son of Jacob Cuypp, commonly called Old Cuypp, also a landscapist, born at Dort; painted scenes from the banks of the Meuse and the Rhine; is now reckoned a rival of Claude, though he was not so in his lifetime, his pictures selling now for a high price; he has been praised for his sunlights, but these, along with Claude's, have been pronounced depreciatively by Ruskin as "colourless" (1620-1691).

CUZCO, a town in Peru, about 11,440 ft. above the sea-level, the ancient capital of the Incas; captured by Pizarro, 1534; still retains traces of its former extent and greatness, the inhabitants reckoned as then numbering 200,000, and the civilisation advanced.

CYBELE, a nature-goddess worshipped in Phrygia and W. Asia, whose worship, like that of the nature divinities generally, was accompanied with noisy, more or less licentious, revelry; identified by the Greeks with Rhea (q.v.), their nature-goddess.

CYCLADES, islands belonging to Greece, on the east or the Ægean Sea, so called as forming a circle round Delos, the most famous of the group.

CYCLIO POETS, poets who after Homer's death caught the contagion of his great poem and wrote continuations, additions, &c.

CYCLOPEAN WALLS, a name given to structures found in Greece, Asia Minor, Italy, and Sicily, built of large masses of unburnt stone and without cement, such as it is presumed a race of gigantic strength like the Cyclops (8) must have reared.

CYCLOPS, a name given to three distinct classes of mythological beings: (1) a set of one-eyed savage giants infesting the coasts of Sicily and preying upon human flesh; (2) a set of Titans, also one-eyed, belonging to the race of the gods, three in number, viz., Cronos, Eteopos, and Ares—three great elemental powers of nature, subjected by and subject to Zeus; and (3) a people of Thrace, famed for their skill in building.

CYMBELINE, a legendary British king (Cunobelinus), and the hero of Shakespeare's play of the name.

CYNÆGIUS, a brother of Æschylus; distinguished himself at Marathon; is famed for his desperate attempt to seize a retreating ship.

CYNEWULF, a Saxon poet, flourished in the second half of the 8th century; seems to have passed through two phases, first as a glad-hearted child of nature, and then as a devout believer in Christ; at the former stage wrote "Riddles" and "Ode to the West Wind," at the latter his themes were the lives of Christ and certain Saints.

CYNICS, a sect of Greek philosophers, disciples of Antisthenes, who was a disciple of Socrates, but carried away with him only part of Socrates' teaching and enforced that as if it were the whole, dropped all regard for humanity and the universal reason, and taught that "virtue lay wholly in the avoidance of evil, and those desires and greeds that bind us to enjoyments," so that his disciples were called the "Capuchins of the Old World." These in time went further than their master, and conceived a contempt for everything that was not self-derived; they took their name from the gymnasium in Athens where their master taught.

CYPRIAN, ST., one of the Fathers of the Church, born at Carthage, about the year 200, converted to Christianity in 245; devoted himself thereafter to the study of the Bible, with the help of Tertullian, his favourite author; became bishop of Carthage in 248; on the outbreak of the Decian persecution had to flee for his life, ministering to his flock the while by substitutes; on his return, after two years, he was involved in the discussion about the reception of the lapsed; under the Valerian persecution was banished; being recalled, he refused to sacrifice to the gods, and suffered martyrdom in 258; he was a zealous bishop of the High Church type, and the father of such, only on broader lines. Festival, Sept. 16.

CYPRUS, a fertile, mountainous island in the Levant, capital Nicosia; geographically connected with Asia, and the third largest in the Mediterranean, being 140 m. long and 60 m. broad; government ceded to Great Britain in 1878 by the Sultan on condition of an annual tribute; is a British colony under a colonial governor or High Commissioner; is of considerable strategic importance to Britain; yields cereals, wines, cotton, &c., and has 400 m. of good roads, and a large transit trade. It was annexed by Great Britain in November, 1914.

CYRENAICS, a sect of Greek philosophers, disciples of Aristippus, who was a disciple of Socrates, but who broke away from his master by divorcing virtue from happiness, and making "pleasure, moderated by reason, the ultimate aim of life, and the supreme good."

CYRENE, a town and Greek colony in Africa, E. of Egypt, extensive ruins of which still exist, and which was the capital of the State, called Cyrenaica after it, and the birthland of several illustrious Greeks.

CYRIL, ST., surnamed the PHILOSOPHER, together with his brother Methodius, the "Apostle of the Slavs," born in Thessalonica; invented the Slavonic alphabet, and, with his brother's help, translated the Bible into the language of the Slavs; d. 868. Festival, March 9.

CYRIL OF ALEXANDRIA, ST., born at Alexandria, and bishop there; an ecclesiastic of a violent, militant order; persecuted the Novatians, expelled the Jews from Alexandria, quarrelled with the governor, excited a fanaticism which led to the seizure and shameful murder of Hypatia; had a lifelong controversy with Nestorius, and got him condemned by the Council of Ephesus, while he himself was condemned by the Council at Antioch (608), both being cast into prison; after release lived at peace (376-444). Festival, Jan. 28.

CYRIL OF JERUSALEM, ST., patriarch of Jerusalem, elected 351, and a Father of the Greek Church; in the Arian controversy then raging was a Semi-Arian, and was persecuted by the strict Arians; joined the Nicene party at the Council of Constantinople in 381; was an instructor in Church doctrine to the common people by his catechisms (315-386). Festival, March 18.

CYROPÆDIA, a work by Xenophon, being an idealistic account of the "education of Cyrus the Great."

CYRUS, surnamed the GREAT, or the ELDER, the founder of the Persian empire; began his conquests by overthrowing his grandfather Astyages, king of the Medes; subdued Croesus, king of Lydia; laid siege to Babylon and took it, and finished by being master of all Western Asia; was a prince of great energy and generosity, and left the nations he subjected and rendered tributary free in the observances of their religions and the maintenance of their institutions. This is the account of the historians, but it has since been considerably modified by study of the ancient monuments (560-529 B.C.).

CYRUS, surnamed the YOUNGER, second son of Darius II.; conspired against his brother Artaxerxes Mnemon, was sentenced to death, pardoned, and restored to his satrapy in Asia Minor; conspired anew, raised a large army, including Greek mercenaries, marched against his brother, and was slain at Cunaxa, of which last enterprise and its fate an account is given in the "Anabasis" of Xenophon; d. 401 B.C.

CYTHERRA, the ancient name of Cerigo; had a magnificent temple to Venus, who was hence called Cythera.

CYTOPLASM, name given to the fluid containing the particles which surrounds the nucleus of the living cell of protoplasm.

CYTOLOGY, name given to that part of biology which deals with the cell-structure of plants and animals.

CZARTORYSKI, ADAM GEORG, a Polish prince, born at Warsaw; passed his early years in England; studied at Edinburgh University; fought under Kosciuszko against the Russians, and was for some time a hostage in Russia; gained favour at the Court there and even a high post in the State; in 1880 threw himself into the revolutionary movement, and devoted all his energies to the service of his country, becoming head of the government; on the suppression of the revolution his estates were confiscated; he escaped to Paris, and spent his old age there, dying at 90 (1770-1861).

CZECHOSLOVAKIA, a central European republic with its capital at Prague, at one time part of Austria-Hungary, and declaring its independence in October, 1918. It is bounded by Austria, Hungary, Germany, Poland, and Rumania, and contains a total area of 54,000 sq. m., including Bohemia, Moravia, and parts of Silesia and Northern Hungary. Government is in the hands of a President, Senate, and Chamber of Deputies elected by universal adult suffrage. The country is rich in coal, iron, lead, graphite, gold, and silver, has many mineral springs, vast quantities of timber, makes Pilsen beer, but is not self-supporting in agricultural products.

CZERNOVITZ, the capital of the Bukovina, on the Pruth.

CZERNY, CHARLES, a musical composer and pianist, born at Vienna; had Liszt and Thalberg for pupils (1791-1857).

CZERNY, GEORGE, leader of the Serbians in their insurrection against the Turks; assisted by Russia, carried all before him; when that help was withdrawn the Turks gained the advantage, and he had to flee; returning after the independence of Serbia was secured, he was murdered at the instigation of Prince Milosch (1766-1817).

D'ABERNON

D'ABERNON, 1ST VISCOUNT, British diplomat. After serving in the army from 1877-1882 he joined the diplomatic service and was British Ambassador in Berlin from 1920 to 1926 (1887-).

DAOGA, a city 160 m. NE. of Calcutta, on a branch of the Brahmaputra, once the capital of Bengal, and a centre of Mohammedanism; famous at one time for its muslins; the remains of its former grandeur are found scattered up and down the environs and half buried in the jungle; it is also the name of a district, well watered, both for cultivation and commerce.

DACIA, a Roman province, N. of the Danube and S. of the Carpathians.

DACIER, ANDRÉ, a French scholar and critic, born at Caestre, in Languedoc; assisted by his wife, executed translations of various classics and produced an edition of them known as the "Delphin Edition" (1651-1722).

DACIER, MADAME, distinguished Hellenist and Latinist, wife of the preceding, born in Saumur (1651-1720).

DACOITS, gangs of semi-savage brigands and robbers in India and Burma, often 40 or 50 in a gang.

DA COSTA, ISAAC, a Dutch poet, born at Amsterdam of Jewish parents; turned Christian, and after the death of Bilderdijk was chief poet of Holland (1798-1860).

DEDALUS, an architect and mechanic in the Greek mythology; inventor and constructor of the Labyrinth of Crete, in which the Minotaur was confined, and in which he was also imprisoned himself by order of Minos, a confinement from which he escaped by means of wings fastened on with wax; was regarded as the inventor of the mechanical arts.

DAGHESTAN, a Russian province W. of the Caspian Sea, traversed by spurs of the Caucasus Mountains; chief town, Derbent.

DAGO, a marshy Russian island, N. of the Gulf of Riga, near the entrance to the Gulf of Finland.

DAGOBERT I., king of the Franks, son of Clovis II., reformed the laws of the Franks; was the last of the Merovingian kings who knew how to rule with a firm hand; the sovereign power as it passed from his hands was seized by the mayor of the palace; d. 688.

DAGON, the national god of the Philistines, represented as half-man or half-woman, and half-fish; appears to have been a symbol to his worshippers of the fertilising power of nature, familiar to them in the fruitfulness of the sea; later research identifies him with agriculture.

DAGUERRETYPE, a process, named after its inventor, Louis Daguerre (1789-1851), a Frenchman, of producing pictures by means of the camera on a surface sensitive to light and shade, and interesting as the first step in photography.

DAHL, JOHANN CHRISTIAN, a Norwegian landscape painter, born at Bergen; died professor of Painting at Dresden (1798-1857).

DAHLGREN, JOHN ADOLPH, a U.S. naval officer and commander; invented a small heavy gun named after him; commanded the blockading squadron at Charleston (1860-1870).

DAHLMANN, FRIEDRICH CHRISTOPH, a German historian and politician, born at Wismar; was in favour of constitutional government; wrote a "History of Denmark," "Histories of the French Revolution and of the English Revolution"; left an unfinished "History of Frederick the Great" (1785-1860).

DAHN, FELIX, a German jurist, historian, novelist, and poet, born in Hamburg; a man of versatile ability and extensive learning; became professor of German jurisprudence at Königsberg (1834-1912).

DAHNA DESERT, the central division of the Arabian Desert.

DAHOMEY, a negro kingdom of undefined limits, and a French protectorate, in W. Africa, N. of the

DALMATIA

Slave Coast; the natives were, and mostly still are, fetish worshippers, their religious rites formerly involving human sacrifice; is an agricultural country, yields palm-oil and gold dust, and was once a great centre of the slave-trade.

DAIL, MURRAN, the official Erse name for the Parliament of the Irish Free State.

DAILMEER, GOTTLIEB, German engineer, inventor of the petrol motor-car; he did much work on the improvement of the internal combustion engine both in Germany, with Dr. Otto, and in Manchester (1834-1900).

DAIRI, the Mikado's palace or his court, and sometimes the Mikado himself.

DAKOTA, NORTH and SOUTH, three times as large as England, forming two States of the U.S.A.; consist of prairie land, and extend N. from Nebraska as far as Canada, traversed by the Missouri; yield cereals, especially wheat, and raise cattle.

DAKOTAHS, a North American Indian people allied to the Sioux; once ranged over a wide area of the U.S.A. and formed a powerful confederacy; are now settled on reservations.

DALAI-LAMA, chief priest of Lamaism, revered as a living incarnation of deity, always present on earth in him. See LAMAISM.

DALAYRAC, celebrated French composer; author of a number of comic operas (1758-1809).

DALBERG, DUC VON, nephew of the preceding; contributed to political changes in France in 1814, and accompanied Talleyrand to the Congress of Vienna (1792-1833).

DALBERG, KARL VON, an eminent member of a noble German family; trained for the Church; was a prince-bishop; a highly cultured man, held in high esteem in the Weimar Court circles, and a friend of Goethe and Schiller (1744-1817).

D'ALBERT, JEANNE, queen of Navarre, and mother of Henry IV. of France; came to Paris to treat about the marriage of her son to Charles IX.'s sister; died suddenly, not without suspicion of foul-play, after signing the treaty; she was a Protestant (1528-1572).

D'ALEMBERT, JEAN LE ROND, a French philosopher, devoted to science, and especially to mathematics; along with Diderot established the celebrated "Encyclopédie," wrote the Preliminary Discourse, and contributed largely to its columns, editing the mathematical portion of it. He enunciated the principle named after him, which helped to solve many problems in rigid dynamics, especially that of the compound pendulum (1717-1783).

DALHOUSIE, JAMES ANDREW BROWN RAMSAY, MARQUIS OF, Governor-General of India, third son of the ninth Earl; as Lord Ramsay served in Parliament as member for Haddingtonshire; on his father's death in 1838 entered the House of Lords; held office under Sir Robert Peel and Lord Russell; went to India as Governor-General in 1848; ruled vigorously, annexed territory, developed the resources of the country, projected and carried out important measures for its welfare; his health, however, gave way at the end of eight years, and he came home to receive the thanks of the Parliament, elevation in the peerage, and other honours, but really to end his days in pain and prostration; dying without male issue, he was succeeded in the earldom by Fox Maule, Lord Panmure (1812-1860).

DALKETH, a grain-market town in Midlothian, 6 m. SE. of Edinburgh, with a palace adjoining, a seat of the Duke of Buccleuch.

DALLAS, GEORGE MIFFLIN, an American diplomatist, born in Philadelphia; represented the United States as ambassador at St. Petersburg and at London, and was from 1844 to 1849 Vice-President (1792-1864).

DALMATIA, part of Jugo-Slavia lying along the NE. coast of the Adriatic; half the land is pasture, only one-ninth of it arable, which yields cereals, wine, oil, honey, and fruit.

DALRI'ADES, a Celtic race who came over from Ireland to Argyllshire, and established a kingdom in the SW. of Scotland, till King Kenneth Macalpin succeeded in 843, who obtained rule both over it and the northern kingdom of the Picts, and became the first king of Scotland.

DALRYMPLE, ALEXANDER, hydrographer to the Admiralty and the East India Company, born at New Hailes, and brother of Lord Hailes; produced many good maps (1737-1808).

DALTON, JOHN, chemist and physicist, born near Cookermouth, of a Quaker family; took early an interest in meteorology, and kept through life a record of meteorological observations; taught mathematics and physics in Manchester; made his first appearance as an author in 1793 in a volume of his observations and essays, and in 1808 published "A New System of Chemical Philosophy," which he finished in 1810; famous for his experiments on the elastic force of steam, for his researches on the proportional weights of elements, and for his discovery of the law of multiple proportions which led him to publish his atomic theory, the starting point of modern chemistry. He also carried out investigations on colour-blindness by experimenting on himself and his brother who, like himself, was colour-blind (1766-1844).

DALTONISM, colour-blindness (q.v.). See DALTON, JOHN.

DALZIEL, THOMAS, general, born in Linlithgowshire; entered the Russian service against the Turks; returning at the request of Charles II., was appointed commander-in-chief in Scotland; suppressed a rising of the Covenanters at Pentland in 1666, and was notorious for his severity in persecuting the Conventicle men (1699-1685).

DAMAN, a Portuguese settlement with a port of the same name in Gujarat, India, 100 m. N. of Bombay.

DAMARALAND, part of the SW. Africa Protectorate, N. of Namaqualand; the chief industry is pastoral; the mountain districts, which are rich in minerals, particularly copper, are inhabited by Damaras, who are nomads and cattle-rearers; it was a German protectorate from 1890 till the Great War.

DAMAS, COLONEL COMTE DE, a devoted adherent of Louis XVI., and one of his convoys on his attempt at flight (1765-1823).

DAMASUS, the capital of Syria, one of the oldest cities in the world; stands 2280 ft. above the sea-level; is a great centre of the caravan trade; is embosomed in the midst of gardens and orchards, hence its appearance as the traveller approaches it is most striking; its history goes as far back as the days of Abraham; it was the scene of two great events in human destiny—the conversion of St. Paul, and, according to Moslem tradition, a great decisive moment in the life of Mohammed, when he resolutely turned his back once for all on the pleasures of the world. It was captured from the Turks by British troops under Allenby in 1918.

DAMASUS, ST., Pope from 366 to 384, a Spaniard; a zealous opponent of the Arians and a friend of St. Jerome, who, under his sanction, executed his translation of the Bible into the Vulgate; there was a Damasus II., Pope in 1048.

DAME AUX CAMELIAS, LA, a romance and a drama by Alexander Dumas fil., one of his best creations.

DAMIEN, FATHER, a French priest, born at Louvain; devoted his life to nurse and instruct the lepers in Molokai, an island of the Hawaiian group, and, though after 12 years infected with the disease himself, continued to minister to them till his death (1841-1889).

DAMIENS, ROBERT FRANÇOIS, the would-be assassin of Louis XV., born near Arras; aimed at the king as he was entering his carriage at Trianon, but failed to wound him mortally; was mercifully tortured to death; was known before as Robert le Diable; his motive for the act was never known (1715-1757).

DAMIETTA, a town, the third largest, in Egypt, on an eastern branch of the Nile, 8 m. from its mouth; has a trade in grain, rice, hides, fish, &c.; was taken by St. Louis in 1249, and restored on payment of his ransom from captivity.

DAMOCLES, a flatterer at the court of the elder Dionysius, tyrant of Syracuse, whom, after one day extravagantly extolling the happiness of kings Dionysius set down to a magnificent banquet; when seated at it, he looked up and saw a sword hanging over his head suspended by a single hair; a lesson, this, which admonished him, and led him to change his views of the happiness of kings.

DAMON AND PYTHIAS, two Pythagoreans of Syracuse of the days of Dionysius I., celebrated for their friendship; upon the latter having been condemned to death, and having got leave to go home to arrange his affairs beforehand, Damon pledged his life for his return, when just as, according to his promise, he presented himself at the place of execution, Pythias turned up and prepared to put his head on the block; this behaviour struck the tyrant with such admiration that he not only extended pardon to the offender but took them both into his friendship.

DAMPIER, WILLIAM, an English navigator and buccaneer; led a roving and adventurous life, and, parting company with his comrades, set off on a cruise in the South Seas; in 1698 reached Australia and explored part of its coastline; came home and published a "Voyage Round the World"; this led to his employment in further adventures, in one of which Alexander Selkirk accompanied him, but was wrecked on Juan Fernandez; in his last adventure, it is said, he served under Captain Woodes Rogers, who rescued Selkirk and brought him home (1682-1715).

DAMPIER-WHETHAM, W. C., Cambridge scientist; has written many books on physical science and on the application of science to human affairs; served on Home Office and Ministry of Agriculture Committees (1867-).

DANA, JAMES DWIGHT, American mineralogist and geologist, born at Utica, New York State; was associated as scientific observer with Commodore Wilkes on his Arctic and Antarctic exploring expeditions, on the results of which he reported; became geological professor in Yale College; author of works on mineralogy and geology, as also on South Sea volcanoes (1813-1895).

DANA, RICHARD HENRY, an American poet and critic; editor of the North American Review, author of the "Dying Raven," the "Buccaneer," and other poems (1757-1879).

DANA, RICHARD HENRY, a son of the preceding, lawyer; author of "Two Years before the Mast" and other nautical works (1815-1882).

DANAE, daughter of Acrisius, king of Argos, confined by her father in an inaccessible tower of brass to prevent the fulfilment of an oracle that she should be the mother of a son who would kill him, but Zeus found access to her in the form of a shower of gold, and she became the mother of Perseus, by whose hand Acrisius met his fate. See PERSEUS.

DANAIDES, daughters of Danaos, who, for murdering their husbands on the night after marriage, were doomed in the nether world to the impossible task of filling with water a vessel pierced with holes. See DANAUS.

DANAUS, son of Belus, and twin-brother of Ægyptus, whom fearing, he fled from with his fifty daughters to Argos, where he was chosen king; by-and-by the fifty sons of Ægyptus, his brother, came to Argos to woo, and were wedded to their cousins, whom their father provided each with a dagger to murder her husband, which they did, all except Hypermetra, whose husband, Lynceus, escaping, succeeded her father as king, to the defeat of the old man's purpose in the crime.

DANBY, FRANCIS, painter, born near Wexford; settled for a time in Bristol, then in Switzerland, and finally at Exmouth; his works are mostly landscape, instinct with feeling, but some of them are historical, the subjects being taken from Scripture, as the "Passage of the Red Sea," or from pagan sources, as "Marius among the Ruins of Carthage" (1793-1861).

DANCE, GEORGE, English architect; was architect to the City of London, and designed the Mansion House, his chief work (1700-1768). George, his son, built Newgate Prison (1740-1825).

DANCE OF DEATH, an allegorical representation in a dramatic or pictorial form of Death, figuring originally as a skeleton, and performing his part as a chief actor all through the drama of life, and often amid the gayest scenes of it; a succession of woodcuts by Holbein in representation of this dance is well known.

DANCOURT, FLORENT CARTON, French dramatist and a prolific author; a favourite of Louis XIV.; wrote comedies, chiefly on the follies of the middle classes of the time (1661-1726).

DANDIN, GEORGE, one of Molière's comedies, illustrative of the folly a man commits when he marries a woman of higher rank than his own, George being his impersonation of a husband who has permitted to endure all the extravagant whims and fancies of his dame of a wife.

DANDIN, PERRIN, a simple citizen in the "Pantagruel" of Rabelais, who seats himself judge-wise on the first stump that offers, and passes offhand a sentence in any matter of litigation; a character who figures similarly in a comedy of Racine, and in a fable of La Fontaine.

DAN DOLO, a Venetian family that furnished four Doges to the Republic, Enrico being the most illustrious; chosen Doge in his eighty-fourth year, assisted the Crusaders of the Fourth Crusade with ships; joined them, when blind and aged 90, in laying siege to Constantinople; led the attack by sea, and was the first to leap ashore; was offered the Imperial crown, but declined it; died instead "despot" of Rumania in 1205, at 97.

DANEGLD, originally a tax imposed on land by Ethelred the Unready, to buy off the Danes from the shores of England, and subsequently for other objects, such as the defence of the coast; abolished by Henry II., though reimposed subsequently under other names.

DANELAGH, a district in the N. and E. of England, dominated at one time more or less by the Danes; of vague extent, owing to several colonisations.

DANGEAU, MARQUIS, author of "Memoirs affecting the court of Louis XIV. and its manners" (1698-1720).

D'ANGOULÊME, DUCHESSE, daughter of Louis XVI. and Marie Antoinette; was released from restraint after the execution of her parents in exchange for prisoners of the Royalists; fled to Vienna, where she was driven forth; married her cousin, to whom she was early betrothed; could find no place of safe refuge, but in England; returned to France on Napoleon's exile to Elba, and headed a body of troops against him on his return; after Waterloo, returned to France and stayed till July, 1830, and lived to see Louis Philippe, in 1848, driven from the throne; Napoleon called her "the only man of her family"; left "Memoirs" (1778-1851).

DANGS, THE, a forest district in the N. of the Presidency of Bombay, occupied by fifteen wild tribes, each under a chief.

DANIEL, a Hebrew of fine physique and rare endowment, who was, while but a youth, carried captive to Babylon, and trained for office in the court of the king; was found, after three years' discipline, to excel "in wisdom and understanding" all the magicians and enchanters of the realm, of which he gave such proof that he rose step by step to the highest official positions, first in the Babylonian and then in the Persian empire. He was a Hebrew prophet of a new type, for whereas the old prophet had, for the most part, more regard to the immediate present and its outlooks, his eye reached forth into the future and foresaw in vision, as his book has foretold in symbol, the fulfilment of the hope for which the fathers of his race had lived and died.

DANIEL, SAMUEL, English poet, born near Taunton; wrote dramas and sonnets; his principal production a "History of the Civil Wars" of York and Lancaster, a poem in seven books, is called the "Well-Englashed Daniel," and is much admired for his style; in prose he wrote a "History of England," and a "Defence of Rhyme," which Swinburne pronounced to be "one of the most perfect examples of sound sense, of pure style, and of just judgment in the literature of criticism"; he is associated with Warner and Drayton as having given birth to "a poetry which has devoted itself to extol the glory of England" (1562-1619).

DANIELL, JOHN FREDERICK, a distinguished chemist, born in London; professor of 'in King's College, London; wrote "Metaphysical Essays," and "Introduction to Chemical Philosophy"; invented a hygrometer and an electric battery (1790-1845).

DANIELL, WILLIAM, an eminent draughtsman; spent his early life in India; author of "Oriental Scenery," in six folio vols. (1769-1837).

DANTES, or Destroying Angels, a band of Mormons organised to prevent the entrance into Mormon territory of other than Mormon immigrants, but whose leader, for a massacre they perpetrated, was in 1827 convicted and shot.

DANNÖCKER, JOHANN HEINRICH VON, a distinguished German sculptor, born near Stuttgart, and educated by the Duke of Württemberg, who had become his patron; became professor of Sculpture in the Academy at Stuttgart; his earlier subjects were from the Greek mythology, and his later Christian, the principal of the latter being a colossal "Christ," which he took eight years to complete; he executed also busts of contemporaries, which are wonderful in expression, such as those of Schiller, Lavater, and Gluck; "Ariadne on the Panther" is regarded as his masterpiece (1758-1841).

D'ANNUNZIO, GABRIELE, Italian poet, playwright, and novelist. Born in Pescara, on the Adriatic coast, he went to Rome in his twenties after publishing a book of poems at the age of 18. He took to political writing about 1900, and urged the expansion of Italy and entered Parliament. During the Great War he served in the Italian Air Force, and dropped thousands of pamphlets of his own composition on Vienna. In 1920 he became internationally famous by capturing Fiume (q.v.), and he then retired into private life (1864-).

DANTE ALIGHIERI, the great poet of Italy, "the voice of ten silent centuries," born in Florence; was of noble birth; showed early a great passion for learning; learned all that the schools and universities of the time could teach him "better than most"; fought as a soldier; did service as a citizen; at thirty-five filled the office of chief magistrate of Florence; had, while but a boy of ten, met a certain Beatrice Portinari, a beautiful girl of his own age and rank, and had grown up in partial sight of her, in some distant intercourse with her, "who became to him the ideal of all that was pure and noble and good; "made a great figure in his poem and a great figure in his life"; she died in 1290; he married another, "Gemma di Donati; in some civic Guelph-Ghibelline strife he was expelled the city, and his property confiscated; tried hard to recover it, but could not, and was doomed, 'whenever caught, to be burned alive'; invited to confess his guilt, and return, he sternly answered: 'If I cannot return without calling myself guilty, I will never return.' From this moment he was without home in this world; and 'the great soul of Dante, homeless on earth, made its home more and more in that awful other world . . . over which this time-world, with its Florences and banishments, flutters as an unreal shadow.' Dante's heart, brooding over it in speechless thought and awe, burst forth at length into "Mystic unfathomable song," and his "Divine Comedy" (q.v.), the most remarkable of all modern books, was the result. He died after finishing it, not yet very old, at the age of 56. He lies buried in his death-city, Ravenna. The Florentines begged back his body in a century after, but the Ravenna people would not give it. Of the poet's other works the "Vita Nuova," a love poem in prose and verse, and "De Monarchia," a political treatise, are the best known (1265-1321). See Carlyle's "Heroes and Hero-Worship," and Dean Plumptre's "Life of Dante."

DANTON, GEORGES JACQUES, "The Titan of the French Revolution," an advocate by profession, born at Arcis-sur-Aube; a devotee by profession, found Paris and his country in revolt, rose to the front of the strife, and threw himself again and again into the breach; founded the Cordeliers' Club in 1790, and with Marat and Robespierre formed the famous triumvirate; Robespierre (q.v.) viewed him with jealousy, held him suspect, had him arrested, brought before the Revolutionary Tribunal, the severity of whose proceedings under him Danton had condemned, and sentenced him to the guillotine; a saying of his in prison has been recorded: "Oh, it were better to be a poor fisherman than to meddle with governing of men." No weakness, Danton, he said to himself on the scaffold, as his heart began to sink within him as he thought of his wife. His last words were to Sanson the headman: "Thou wilt show my head to the people, it is worth showing" (1793-1794). See Carlyle's "French Revolution."

DANTZIC, or DANZIG, a free city under the protectorate of the League of Nations, once a Hanse town, on the Vistula, 4 m. from the mouth; one of the great ports and trading centres of the Baltic and N. of Europe; it is traversed by canals, and many of the houses are built on piles of wood; exports grain brought down the river on timber rafts from the great grain country in the S.; it is the port by which Poland obtains access to the sea.

DANUBE, THE, the great south-eastward-flowing river of Europe, 1760 m. in length, rises in the Black Forest, and is divided into Upper, Middle, and Lower; the Upper extends as far as Pressburg, begins to be navigable at Ulm, flows NE. as far as Ratisbon, and then bends SE. past Vienna; the Middle extends from Pressburg to the Iron Gate, enclosing between its gorges a series of rapids, below Orsova; and the Lower extends from the Iron Gate to the Black Sea. It receives numerous tributary rivers, 60 of them navigable, in its course; forms with them the great water highway of the SE. of Europe, and is of avail for traffic to all the races and nations whose territories it traverses.

DANUBE COMMISSION, an international body maintaining the liberty of navigation on the Danube from Ulm to Braila, set up under the treaty of Versailles and including representatives of Great Britain, France, Austria, Bavaria, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Jugo-Slavia, and Rumania.

DAPHNE (H. a laurel), a nymph chased by Apollo, transformed into a laurel as he attempted to seize her; the tree was thus sacred to the god.

DAPHNIS, a Sicilian shepherd, the mythical inventor of pastoral poetry.

DARFANG, the highest of the Karakorum Mountains.

D'ARBLAY, MADAME (Frances Burney), a distinguished novelist, daughter of Dr. Burney, the historian of music; authoress of "Evelina," and "Cecilia," the first novels of the time, which brought her into connection with all her literary contemporaries, Johnson in chief; left "Diary and Letters" (1752-1840).

DARBOY, GEORGES, archbishop of Paris; was a defender of the Gallican liberties of the Church; had been assiduous in offices of benevolence during the siege of Paris; was arrested as a hostage by the Communists, and shot (1813-1871).

DARBY AND JOAN, a married couple celebrated for their mutual attachment, who figured in a popular ballad entitled "The Happy Old Couple," published in 1736.

DARBYITES, the Plymouth Brethren (q.v.), from the name of one of their founders, a man of scholarly ability and culture, and the chief expounder of their views (1800-1882).

DARDANELLES, a strait extending between the Archipelago and the Sea of Marmora, anciently called the Hellespont, 40 m. long, from 1 to 4 broad. British troops landed here in the spring of 1915 after a naval bombardment, but were forced to evacuate at the end of the year.

DARDANUS, a son of Zeus and Electra, mythical ancestor of the Trojans; originally a king in Greece.

DARFUR, a district in the Egyptian Sudan, in which vegetation is for the most part dormant all the year round, except from June to September, when it is rank and rich; was snatched from Egypt by the Mahdi, but since restored.

D'ARGENS, MARQUIS, born at Aix; disinherited owing to his misconduct; turned author and wrote on philosophy; became a protégé of Frederick the Great, but lost caste with him too, and was deprived of his all once more (1704-1771).

D'ARSENON, GOMME, an eminent French statesman, head of the police in Paris; introduced lettres de cachet, and was a patron of the French philosophes; had the "Encyclopédie" dedicated to him; fell out of favour at Court, and had to leave Paris, but returned to die there (1698-1764).

DARIO, a gold coin or stater, current in ancient Persia, stamped with an archer kneeling, and weighing little over a sovereign; takes its name from Darius I., in whose reign it was coined.

DARIEN, GULF OF, an inlet of the Caribbean Sea, NW. of S. America. For Isthmus of see PANAMA.

DARIEN SCHEME, a project to plant a colony on the Atlantic side of the Isthmus, which was so far carried out that some 1200 left Scotland in 1698 to establish it, but it ended in disaster owing to unhealthy climatic conditions and Spanish opposition; William Paterson, the originator of the scheme, returned to Scotland with many of his followers.

DARIUS I., eldest son of Hytaspas, king of the Persians; subdued subject places that had revolted, reorganised the empire, carried his conquests as far as India, subdued Thrace and Macedonia, declared war against the Athenians; in 492 B.C. sent an expedition against Greece, which was wrecked in a storm off Athos; sent a second, which succeeded in crossing over, but was defeated in a famous battle at Marathon, 490 B.C. (521-485 B.C.).

DARIUS II., called OCHUS or NOTHUS, king of the Persians; subject to his eunuchs and his wife Parysatis; his reign was a succession of insurrections; he supported the Spartans against the Athenians, to the ascendancy of the former in the Peloponnese; d. 405 B.C.

DARIUS III., surnamed CODOMANNUS, king of the Persians, a handsome man and a virtuous; could not cope with Alexander of Macedonia, but was defeated by him in successive engagements at Granicus, Issus, and Arbela; was assassinated on his flight by Bessus (q.v.), one of his satraps, in 330 B.C.; with him the Persian empire came to an end.

DARJEELING, a sanitary station and health resort in the Lower Himalayas, and the administrative headquarters of the district, 7167 ft. above the level of the sea; it has greatly increased of late years; tea is extensively cultivated in the district.

DARLEY, GEORGE, poet and critic, born in Dublin; author of "Sylvia" and "Nepenthe"; wrote some good songs, among them "I've been Roaming," once very popular; much belauded by Coleridge; contributed to the Edinburgh (1795-1848).

DARLING, a tributary of the Murray River, in Australia, with a length of over 1000 m.

DARLING, GRACE, daughter of the lighthouse keeper of one of the Farne Islands, who with her father, amid great peril, saved the lives of nine people from the wreck of the Forfarshire, on Sept. 7, 1838; died of consumption (1816-1842).

DARLING, LORD, British judge. He took silk in 1885, and from 1888 to 1897 he was M.P. for Deptford. As a King's Bench judge he was famous for his wit. He retired in 1924 and was raised to the peerage; is the author of several books (1849-).

DARLINGTON, a town in S. of Durham, on the Tees, with large iron and other works; a considerable number of the inhabitants belong to the Society of Friends. It is an important railway centre.

DARMESTER, JAMES, Orientalist, born in Lorraine, of Jewish descent; a distinguished Zend scholar and authority on Zend literature; in the interpretation of the Zend and other ancient literatures was of the modern critical school (1849-1894).

DARMSTADT, the capital of the grand-duchy of Hesse, on the Darm, an affluent of the Rhine, 15 m. S. of Frankfurt; is divided into an old and a new town; manufactures tobacco, paper, carpets, chemicals, &c.

DARNLEY, HENRY STUART, LORD, eldest son of the Earl of Lennox and grand-nephew of Henry VIII.; husband of Queen Mary; was murdered on Feb. 5, 1567, in Kirk-o'-Field, which stood on the site of the present University of Edinburgh.

D'ARTAGNAN, the romantic hero of Alexandre Dumas's novels, "The Three Musketeers," "Twenty Years After," and "The Vicomte de Bragelonne."

DARTMOOR, moor in Devonshire, a tableland of an average height of 1200 ft. above the sea-level, and of upwards of 120,000 acres in extent; incapable of cultivation, but affording pasturage for sheep, of which it breeds a small hardy race; it has rich veins of minerals; abounds in British remains, and contains a large convict prison at Princetown.

DARU, COMTE, a French administrator and littérateur, born at Montpellier; translated Horace when in prison during the Reign of Terror; served as administrator under Napoleon; on the return of the Bourbons devoted himself to letters, and wrote the "History of the Republic of Venice" (1767-1820).

DARWIN, CHARLES GALTON, mathematical physicist, son of Sir C. R. Darwin (q.v.) and grandson of C. R. Darwin (q.v.). He published many papers on mathematical and physical subjects; appointed Tait professor at Edinburgh University in 1923 (1887-).

DARWIN, CHARLES ROBERT, great English naturalist and biologist, born at Shrewsbury, grandson of Erasmus Darwin on his father's side, and of Josiah Wedgwood on his mother's; studied at Edinburgh and Cambridge; in 1881 accompanied as naturalist without salary the Beagle in her voyage of exploration in the Southern Seas, on the condition that he should have the entire disposal of his collections, which he ultimately distributed among various public institutions; he was absent from England for five years, and on his return published his "Naturalist's Voyage Round the World." In 1859-1848 accounts of the fruits of his researches and observations in the departments of geology and natural history during that voyage. In 1842 his treatise on the "Structure and Distribution of Coral Reefs," and in 1859 his work on the "Origin of Species by Means of Natural Selection," a work which proved epoch-making and went far to revolutionise thought in the scientific study of life; this work was followed by others more or less confirmatory, finishing off with "The Descent of Man" in 1871, in which he traced the human race to an extinct animal related to that which produced the orang-outang, the chimpanzee, and the gorilla. He may be said to have taken evolution out of the region of pure imagination, and, by giving it a basis of fact, to have set it up as a reasonable working hypothesis. Prof. A. R. Wallace claimed for Darwin "that he is the Newton of natural history, and has . . . by his discovery of the law of natural selection and his demonstration of the great principles of the preservation of useful variations in the struggle for life, not only thrown a flood of light on the process of development of the whole organic world, but also established a firm foundation for the future study of nature." He was buried in Westminster Abbey (1809-1882).

DARWIN, ERASMUS, physician and natural philosopher, born in Nottinghamshire; studied at Cambridge and Edinburgh; practised medicine in Lichfield, and finally settled in Derby; occupied his mind with the study of fanciful analogies in the different spheres of nature, and committed his views to verse, often not without genuine poetic sentiment and melody of expression, while in the views themselves there have been recognised occasional glimpses of true insight, and at times a foreshadow of the doctrine developed on strict scientific lines by his illustrious grandson, Charles. His chief works were the "Botanic Garden" and the "Zoonomia; or, The Laws of Organic Life," deemed, in the philosophy of them, not unworthy of criticism by such sane thinkers as Paley and Dugald Stewart (1781-1802).

DARWIN, SIR FRANCIS, botanist, third son of C. R. Darwin (q.v.). Carried out researches and wrote many papers on botanical subjects (1848-1925).

DARWIN, SIR GEORGE HOWARD, mathematical physicist and astronomer; second son of C. R. Darwin (q.v.). He carried out much work upon tides, rotating masses, and the moon; appointed Plumian professor at Cambridge in 1898; president of the British Association at the meeting in South Africa in 1905 (1845-1912).

DARWIN, SIR HORACE, British scientist, fifth son of C. R. Darwin (q.v.); he was intimately connected with the work of the Cambridge Scientific Instrument Company, of which he was chairman (1851-1923).

DARWIN, LEONARD, fourth son of C. R. Darwin; took part in several scientific expeditions; engaged for some time in army intelligence work; M.P. for a short period (1880-).

DARWINIAN THEORY, the theory established by Darwin that the several species of plants and animals now in existence were not created in their present form but have been evolved by natural law of descent, with modifications of structure, from cruder forms. See DARWIN, C. R.

DASENT, SIR GEORGE WHEEL, Icelandic scholar, born at St. Vincent, West Indies; studied at Oxford; from 1845 to 1870 was assistant-editor of the Times; translated "The Frogs, or Kongsur, Edna" and Norse tales and sagas; wrote also novels, and contributed to reviews and magazines (1817-1896).

DASH, COUNTESS, the nom de plume of the Viscountess de Saint-Mars, a French novelist, born at Poitiers; in straits for a living, took desperately to writing; treated of aristocratic life and its hollow artificialities and immoralities (1804-1872).

DASHKOFF, PRINCESS, a Russian lady of note; played a part in the conspiracy which ended in the elevation of Catharine II. to the throne; was a woman of culture; founded the Russian Academy; projected and assisted in the compilation of a Russian dictionary; died at Moscow (1744-1810).

DASYURE, the scientific name for a small Australasian marsupial, known popularly as the Native Cat; derives its name from its thick grey and white coat and bushy tail; of nocturnal habits; found in Australia, Tasmania, New Guinea, and adjacent islands.

DAUBENTON, LOUIS JEAN MARIE, a French naturalist, born at Montbard; associated with Buffon in the preparation of the first 15 vols. of his "Histoire Naturelle," and helped him materially by the accuracy of his knowledge, as well as his literary qualifications; contributed largely to the "Encyclopédie," and was 50 years curator of the Cabinet of Natural History at Paris (1716-1790).

DAUBENY, CHARLES, English chemist and botanist, author of "A Description of Active and Extinct Volcanoes," an "Introduction to the Atomic Theory," and other works related to chemistry; he was president of the British Association in 1866 (1796-1867).

D'AUBIGNÉ, JEAN HENRI MERLE, a popular Church historian, born near Geneva; studied under Neander at Berlin; became pastor at Hamburg, court-preacher at Brussels, and professor of Church History at Geneva; his reputation rests chiefly on his "History of the Reformation in the Sixteenth Century" (1794-1872).

D'AUBIGNÉ, THÉODORE AGRIPPA, a historian, bred to the military profession; held appointments under Henry IV., on whose assassination he returned to Geneva, where he wrote his "Histoire Universelle," which had the honour to be burned by the common hangman in Paris; was a satirical writer; grandfather to Mme. de Maintenon (1550-1680).

DAUBIGNY, CHARLES FRANÇOIS, a French landscape-painter and skilful etcher, born in Paris, attained distinction as an artist late in life (1817-1878).

D'AUBUSSON, PIERRE, grand-master of the order of St. John of Jerusalem, of French origin; served under the Emperor Sigismund against the Turks; went to Rhodes; became a knight of St. John, and was chosen grand-master; defended Rhodes against 100,000 Turks, and thus stayed the career of Mohammed II., who, after establishing himself in Constantinople, was threatening to overrun Europe (1428-1503).

DAUDET, ALPHONSE, a noted French novelist of great versatility, born at Nîmes, of poor parents; early selected literature as his career in life; wrote poems and plays, and contributed to the Figaro and other journals; worked up into his novels characters and situations that had come under his own observation, often in too satirical a vein to become universally popular; has been likened to Dickens in his choice of subjects and style of treatment; among his most popular works are "Tartarin of Tarascon," "Jack," and "Kings in Exile" (1840-1897).

- D'AULNOY, THE COUNTESS, authoress of charmingly written "Contes des Fées" (Fairy Tales), on which her reputation rests (1650-1705).
- DAUMIER, HONORÉ, a French caricaturist of great fertility and playfulness of genius, born at Marseilles; became blind in his old age (1808-1879).
- DAUN, KARL, German theologian, born at Cassel, professor at Heidelberg; sought to ground theology on a philosophic basis, and found what he sought in the philosophy of Hegel (1765-1836).
- DAUN, LEOPOLD, GRAF VON, an able Austrian general, born at Vienna; distinguished himself by his prudence and valour in the Seven Years' War, gained a victory over Frederick the Great at Kolin in 1757, and another at Hochkirch in 1758; could prevail little or not at all against Frederick afterwards as soon as Frederick saw through his tactics (1705-1766).
- DAUPHIN, a name originally given to the Seigneurs of the province of Dauphiné, in allusion to the dolphin which several members of the family wore as a badge, but in 1349 given to the heir-presumptive to the crown of France, when Humbert II., dauphin of Vienno, ceded Dauphiné to Philippe of Valois, on condition that the eldest son of the king of France should assume the name, a title which was abolished after the Revolution of 1830. The word signifies dolphin in French.
- DAUPHINE, a SW. province of France, of which the capital was Grenoble; annexed to the French crown under Philippe II. in 1349.
- DAURAT, JEAN, French scholar, a member of the Piétiste (q.v.), who figures as one of the leading spirits in the fraternité (1607-1688).
- DAVENANT, SIR WILLIAM, an English playwright, born at Oxford, who succeeded Ben Jonson as poet-laureate, and was for a time manager of Drury Lane; was knighted by Charles I. for his zeal in the Royalist cause; his theatrical enterprise had small success during the Commonwealth, but interest in it revived with the Restoration, at which time the drama broke loose from the restrictions imposed upon it by Puritanism to indulge in shameless licence (1606-1668).
- DAVID, FELICIEN, a French composer, born at Vauchuse; author, among other compositions, of the "Desert," a production which achieved an instant and complete triumph; was in his youth an ardent disciple of St. Simon (1810-1876).
- DAVID, GERHARD, a Flemish painter; painted religious subjects, several from the life of Christ (1450-1523).
- DAVID, JACQUES LOUIS, a French historical painter, born in Paris; studied in Rome and settled in Paris; was carried away with the Revolution; joined the Jacobin Club, swore eternal friendship with Robespierre; designed "a statue of Nature with two mamelles spouting out water" for the deputies to drink to, and another of the sovereign people, "high as Salisbury steeple"; was sentenced to the guillotine, but escaped out of regard for his merit as an artist; appointed first painter by Napoleon, but on the Restoration was banished and went to Brussels, where he died; among his paintings are "The Oath of the Horatii," "The Rape of the Sabinæ," "The Death of Socrates," and "The Coronation of Napoleon" (1748-1825).
- DAVID, KING OF ISRAEL, 11th century B.C., born in Bethlehem; tended the flocks of his father; slew Goliath with a stone and a sling; was anointed by Samuel, succeeded Saul as king; conquered the Philistines; set up his throne in Jerusalem, and reigned thirty-three years; suffered much from his sons, and was succeeded by Solomon; the book of Psalms was till recently accepted as wholly his by the Church, but that hypothesis no longer stands the test of criticism.
- DAVID, PIERRE JEAN, known as David of Angers, a French sculptor, born at Angers; came to Paris and was pupil of Jacques Louis David (q.v.); afterwards proceeded to Rome and associated with Canova; executed in Paris a statue of the Great Condé, and thereafter the pediment of the Pantheon, his greatest work, as well as numerous medallions of great men; on a visit to Weimar he modelled a bust of Goethe (1788-1856).
- DAVID I., king of Scotland, youngest son of Malcolm Canmore and Queen Margaret; was brought up at the English court; was prince of Cumbria under the reign of his brother Alexander, on whose decease he succeeded to the throne in 1124; on making a raid in England to avenge an insult offered to his son Henry, was defeated at Northallerton in the Battle of the Standard; addressed himself after this to the unification of the country and civilisation of his subjects; founded and endowed bishoprics and abbays at the expense of the crown; the death of his son Henry was a great grief to him, and shortened his days (1084-1153).
- DAVID II., king of Scotland, son of King Robert the Bruce, born at Dunfermline; succeeded his father when a boy of four; spent from 1334 to 1341 in France; was taken prisoner by the English at the battle of Neville's Cross, and was afterwards, till his death, dependent on England (1324-1371).
- DAVID, ST., or DEWI, the patron saint of Wales, lived about the 5th century; archbishop of Caerleon; transferred his see to St. David's; founded churches, opposed Pelagianism, and influenced many by the odour of his good name. Festival, March 1.
- DAVIDSON, ANDREW BRUCE, Hebrew scholar and professor, born in Aberdeenshire; a most faithful, clear, and effective interpreter of the spirit of Hebrew literature, and influential for good as few men of the time have been in matters of Biblical criticism (1831-1902).
- DAVIDSON, JOHN, poet and journalist, born at Barrhead, Renfrewshire; wrote novels and plays as well as poems (1859-1909).
- DAVIDSON, LORD (Dr. Randall Davidson), Archbishop of Canterbury. As a young man he acted as domestic chaplain to Queen Victoria; married a daughter of Archbishop Tait, and was made Dean of Windsor. Successively Bishop of Rochester and Winchester, he became Archbishop of Canterbury in 1903, resigning in 1928, in which year he was elected to the temporal peerage (1848-1930).
- DAVIDSON, SAMUEL, Biblical scholar and exegete, born near Ballymena; wrote Introductions to the Old and the New Testaments; was pioneer in the higher criticism (1807-1898).
- DAVIES, BEN, a popular tenor vocalist, born near Swansea (1858-).
- DAVIES, SIR H. WALFORD, composer and conductor, organist of St. George's Chapel, Windsor (1869-).
- DAVIES, SIR JOHN, poet and statesman, born in Wiltshire; wrote two philosophic poems, "The Orchestra," a poem in which the world is exhibited as a dance, and "Nosce Teipsum" (Know Thyself), a poem on human learning and the immortality of the soul; became a favourite with James I., and was sent as Attorney-General to Ireland (1569-1628).
- DAVIES, TUDDOR, British singer. Of Welsh birth, he made his debut with the British National Opera Company in Bradford, and sang subsequently at the principal English festivals and in Paris and America.
- DAVIES, WILLIAM HENRY, British poet. Born in Newport (Mon.), he, to quote his own words, "picked up knowledge among tramps in America, on cattle boats and in common lodging-houses of England." He acted as a hawker on coming back from America, sang hymns in the street, and published his first volume of poems in 1904 at the age of 34, publishing several subsequently (1870-).
- DAVILA, ARRIGO, a celebrated historian, born near Padua, brought up in France; served in the French army under Henry IV.; did military and other service in Venice; was assassinated; his great work "The History of the Civil War in France" (1576-1631).
- DAVIS, JEFFERSON, President of the Confederate States, born in Kentucky; entered the army; fought against the Indians; turned cotton-planter; entered Congress as a Democrat; distinguished himself in the Mexican war; defended slaveholding and the interests of slave-holding States; was chosen President of the Confederate States; headed the conflict with the North; fled on defeat, which he was the last to admit; was arrested and imprisoned; released after two years; retired into private life, and wrote a "History of the Rise and Fall of the Confederate Government" (1869-1889).

DAVIS, JOHN, an English navigator, born near Dartmouth; took early to the sea; conducted (1585-1587) three expeditions to the Arctic Seas in quest of a NW. passage to India and China, as far N. as 78°; discovered the strait which bears his name; sailed as pilot in two South Sea expeditions, and was killed by Japanese pirates near Malacca; wrote the "Seaman's Secrets" (1550-1605).

DAVIS, THOMAS, an Irish patriot, born at Mallow; educated at Trinity College, Dublin, and called to the Irish bar; took to journalism in the interest of Irish nationality; founded the Nation newspaper, and by his contributions to it did much to wake up the intelligence of the country to national interests; was the author of "An Essay on Irish Songs" (1814-1845).

DAVIS CUP, a lawn tennis trophy competed for internationally, presented in 1900 by Dwight Davis, a wealthy American player, who represented his country in the first two contests.

DAVIS STRAIT, strait connecting Baffin Bay with the Atlantic, discovered by John Davis (q.v.).

DAVITT, MICHAEL, a noted Irish patriot, born in co. Mayo, son of a peasant, who, being evicted, settled in Lancashire; joined the Fenian movement, and was sentenced to 15 years' penal servitude; released on ticket-of-leave after seven years; founded the Land League; was for over a year imprisoned again for breaking his ticket-of-leave; published in 1885 "Leaves from a Prison Diary"; entered Parliament in 1895 for co. Mayo (1846-1906).

DAVOS-PLATZ, a village 5105 ft. above the sea-level, in a valley of the East Grisons; a place frequented in winter by invalids suffering from chest disease, the dry air and sunshine that prevail being favourable for patients of that class; also a good centre for winter sports.

DAVOUT, LOUIS NICOLAS, Duke of Auerstädt, Prince of Eckmühl, marshal of France, born at Annoux, in Burgundy; was fellow-student with Napoleon at the military school in Brienne; entered the army in 1788, served in the Revolutionary wars under Dumouriez and Desaix, and became general; served under Bonaparte in Italy; distinguished himself at Austerlitz, Auerstädt, Eckmühl, and Wagram; was made governor of Hamburg; accompanied Napoleon to Moscow; returned to Hamburg, and defended it during a siege; was made Minister of War in 1815, and assisted Napoleon in his preparations for the final struggle at Waterloo; commanded the remains of the French army which capitulated under the walls of Paris; adhered to the Bourbon dynasty on its return, and was made a peer; was famous before all the generals of Napoleon for his rigour in discipline (1770-1823).

DAVY, SIR HUMPHRY, a great English chemist, born at Pensance; professor at the Royal Institution, London, 1802-1812; conceived early in life a passion for the science in which he made so many discoveries; made experiments on gases and the respiration of them, particularly nitrous oxide and carbonic acid gas; discovered the function of plants in decomposing the latter in the atmosphere, prepared sodium and potassium by electrolysis of their fused hydroxides, proved chlorine to be an element and showed its affinity with iodine; invented the safety-lamp, his best-known achievement; he held appointments and lectured in connection with all these discoveries and their applications, and received knighthood and numerous other honours for his services; died at Geneva (1778-1829).

DAVY JONES'S LOCKER, the sailors' familiar name for the sea as a place of safe-keeping, though why called of Davy Jones is uncertain.

DAVY-LAMP, a lamp encased in gauze wire which, while it admits oxygen to feed the flame, prevents communication between the flame and any combustible or explosive gas bubble.

DAWES, BRIGADIER-GENERAL CHARLES GATES, American politician and soldier. Working at the bar, he was comparatively unknown till he went to France in 1917 with the American troops. On his return he was made Director of the Budget in 1921, and elected Vice-President of the U.S.A. in 1925, after the Reparations Commission had called on him to preside in 1923 over a committee which re-established German finances after the collapse of the mark. In 1929 he came to London as American Ambassador and took an active part in negotiations for naval disarmament (1865-).

DAWES PLAN, THE, a scheme to stabilise German currency and reparations payments drawn up in 1924 by a committee over which Gen. C. G. Dawes (q.v.) presided.

DAWKINS, SIR WILLIAM BOYD, geologist and paleontologist, born in Montgomeryshire; has written "Cave Hunting," and "Early Man in Britain," and in 1882 was employed by the Channel Tunnel Committee to make a survey of the French and English coasts (1838-1920).

DAWSON, GEOFFREY, journalist. He was private secretary to Lord Milner in South Africa from 1901 to 1905, became editor of the Times in 1912, resigned in 1919, and was reappointed four years later (1874-).

DAWSON, GEORGE, a popular lecturer, born in London; educated in Aberdeen and Glasgow; bred for the ministry by the Baptist body, and pastor of a Baptist church in Birmingham, but resigned the post for ministry in a freer atmosphere; took to lecturing on a purely secular platform, and was for thirty years the most popular lecturer of the day; did much to popularise the views of Carlyle and Emerson (1821-1878-1890).

DAWSON, SIR JOHN WILLIAM, geologist and naturalist, born in Pictou, Nova Scotia; studied in Edinburgh; distinguished himself as a paleontologist; president of the British Association in 1886; published in 1872, "Story of the Earth and Man"; in 1877, "Origin of the World"; and later, "Geology and History"; called in question the Darwinian theory as to the origin of species (1820-1899).

DAY, JOHN, a 17th-century English dramatist, contemporary of Ben Jonson; author of the "Parliament of Bees," a comedy in which all the characters are bees.

DAY, THOMAS, an eccentric philanthropist, born in London; author of "Sandford and Merton"; he was a disciple of Rousseau; was a slave-abolitionist and a parliamentary reformer (1748-1789).

DAYAKS. See DYAKS.

DAYTON, a prosperous town in Ohio, U.S.A., a great railway centre, with a court-house of marble, after the Parthenon in Athens.

DAYTONA, town in Florida, U.S.A., with a long stretch of firm sand used for motor speed trials.

D'AZARA, FELIX, a Spanish naturalist, born in Aragon; spent 20 years in South America; wrote a "Natural History of the Quadrupeds in Paraguay" (1781-1811).

DEADMAN'S HANDLE, a device attached to the control gear of an electric train which ensures that the train is automatically brought to rest if the driver releases his grip through sudden illness.

DEAD SEA, called also the Salt Sea and the Asphalt Lake, a sea, or lake, in Palestine, formed by the waters of the Jordan, 46 m. long, 10 m. broad, and in some parts 1800 ft. deep, while its surface is 1312 ft. below the level of the Mediterranean, just as much as Jerusalem is above it; has no outlet; its waters, owing to the great heat, evaporate rapidly, and are intensely salt; it is enclosed E. and W. by steep mountains, which often rise to a height of 6000 ft.

DEAK, FERENCZ, an eminent Hungarian statesman, born at Kehida, of an ancient noble Magyar family; his aim for Hungary was the same as that of Cavour (q.v.) for Italy, the establishment of constitutional government, and he succeeded; standing all along as he did from Hungarian republicanism on the one hand and Austrian tyranny on the other, he urged on the Emperor of Austria the demand of the Diet, of which he had become leader, at first without effect, but after the humiliation of Austria in 1866, all that he asked for was conceded, and the Austrian Emperor received the Hungarian crown (1803-1876).

DEAL, a town, 18 m. ESE. of Canterbury, on the E. of Kent, opposite the Goodwin Sands, 89 m. from London, with a fine sea-beach; much resorted to for sea-bathing.

DEAN, FOREST OF, a forest of 22,000 acres in the W. of Gloucestershire, between the Severn and the Wye; the property of the Crown for the most part; the inhabitants are chiefly miners, who at one time enjoyed special privileges.

DEAN OF GUILD, a burgh magistrate in Scotland who has the care of buildings, originally the head of the Guild brethren of the town.

DEAUVILLE, seaside resort in Normandy, largely frequented by the wealthy and fashionable.

DEBORAH, a Hebrew prophetess; reckoned one of the judges of Israel by her enthusiasm to free her people from the yoke of the Canaanites; celebrated for her song of exultation over their defeat, instinct at once with pious devotion and with revengeful feeling (see Judges, 4 and 5); Coleridge calls her "this Hebrew Boadicea."

DEBRECEN, a Hungarian town, 180 m. E. of Buda-Pesth; is the headquarters of Protestantism in the country, and has an amply equipped and a largely attended Protestant College; is a seat of manufactures and enjoys a large trade.

DECAMERON, a collection of a hundred tales, conceived of as related in ten days at a country-house during the plague at Florence; are of a licentious character, but told with great humour and literary skill; were written by Boccaccio; published in 1552; the tales have been drawn upon by generations of writers, including Chaucer, Shakespeare, Keats, and Tennyson.

DECAMPE, ALEXANDRE GABRIEL, a distinguished French painter, born in Paris; brought up as a boy among the peasants of Picardy; studied under David and Ingres; represented nature as he in his own way saw it, and visited Switzerland and the East, where he found materials for original and powerful pictures; his paintings since his death have brought great prices (1808-1860).

DE CANDOLLE, AUGUSTIN PYRAME, an eminent botanist, born at Geneva, of Huguenot descent; studied in Paris; attracted the attention of Cuvier and Lamarck, whom he assisted in their researches; published his "Flora Française," in six vols.; became professor at Montpellier, and then at Geneva; is the historical successor of Jussieu; his great contribution to botanical science is connected with the classification of plants (1778-1841).

DECATUR, STEPHEN, an American naval commander; distinguished for his feats of valour displayed in the war with Tripoli and with England (1779-1820).

DECCAN, a triangular plateau of from 8000 to 8000 ft. of elevation in the Indian peninsula, extending S. of the Vindhya Mountains; is densely peopled, and contains some of the richest soil in the globe.

DECEMBER, the twelfth month of the year, so called, i.e. tenth, by the Romans, as their year began with March.

DECEMVIRI, the patricians of Rome, with Consular powers, appointed in 450 B.C. to prepare a code of laws for the Republic, which, after being agreed upon, were committed first to ten, then to twelve tables, and set up in the Forum that all might read and know the law they lived under.

DECIUS, Roman emperor from 249 to 251; was a cruel persecutor of the Christians; perished in a morose fighting with the Goths, who were a constant thorn in his side all through his reign.

DECIUS MUS, the name of three Romans, father, son, and grandson, who on separate critical emergencies (340, 295, 279 B.C.) devoted themselves in sacrifice to the infernal gods in order to secure victory to the Roman arms; the name is mostly employed by.

ON OF RIGHTS, THE, was passed by Parliament in 1689; it declared William and Mary King and Queen in England in succession to James II., and laid down regulations for their successors; in declaring the rights and liberties of the English people it provided for the supremacy of the Parliament in all matters affecting religion and law.

DECLINATION, the name given in astronomy to what corresponds to latitude in geography; it is measured in degrees north or south of the celestial equator.

DECLINATION, MAGNETIC, the angle between the true north and the direction in which the compass needle points. In this country the declination was 12° degrees west in 1890, and is decreasing at the rate of about two-fifths of a degree per year. In the year 2189 a compass needle set up in London will point due north (as it did in 1859), and subsequently will move to the east. The complete cycle of changes takes 960 years. A line drawn on a map joining all places where the declination is the same is called isogonic line.

DECLINE AND FALL OF THE ROMAN EMPIRE, the immortal work of Gibbon, of which the first volume was published in 1776.

DECRETALS, THE, a collection of laws added to the canon law of the Church of Rome, being judicial replies of the Popes to cases submitted to them from time to time for adjudication.

DEE, DOCTOR JOHN, an astrologer and alchemist, he claimed to have the power of transmuting base metal into gold and of invoking spirits; became warden of Manchester College (1527-1608).

DEEMSTER, the title of a judge in the Isle of Man, one such officiating for the northern part and one for the southern.

DEFAUCONPRET, French littérateur; translator of the novels of Sir Walter Scott and Fenimore Cooper (1767-1849).

DEFENDER OF THE FAITH, a title conferred by Pope Leo X. in 1521 upon Henry VIII. for his defence of the Catholic faith in a treatise against Luther, and retained ever since by the sovereigns of England, though revoked by Pope Paul III. in 1535 in consequence of Henry's apostasy.

DEFFAND, MARIE, MARQUISE DU, a woman of society, famed for her wit and gallantry; corresponded with the eminent philosophers of the time, in particular Voltaire, as well as with Horace Walpole; her letters are especially brilliant, and display great shrewdness; she is characterised by Prof. Saintsbury as "the typical French lady of the eighteenth century"; she became blind in 1763, but retained her relish for society, though at length she entered a convent, where she died (1697-1780).

DEFOE, DANIEL, author of "Robinson Crusoe," born in London; trained for the Dissenting ministry; turned to business, but took chiefly to politics; was a zealous supporter of William III.; his ironical treatise, "The Shortest Way with Dissenters" (1703), which, treated seriously, was burned by order of the House of Commons, led to his imprisonment and exposed him for three days to the pillory, amidst the cheers, however, not the jeers, of the mob; in prison wrote a "Hymn to the Pillory," and started his Review; on his release he was employed on political missions, and wrote a "History of the Union," which he contributed to promote. The closing years of his life were occupied mainly with literary work, and it was then, in 1719, he produced his world-famous "Robinson Crusoe"; has been described as "master of the art of forging a story and imposing it on the world for truth." Wrote also "Captain Singleton," "A Journal of the Plague Year," and "A Tour through Great Britain" (1661-1731).

DE FOREST, LEE, American scientist, who devoted his time to the study of wireless, employed by the U.S. navy to design the first high-power station; invented the triode valve, thus making possible the later developments in radio-telegraphy; carried out experiments on phonograms, later known as talkies (1872-).

DEGAS, EDGAR HILAIRE GERMAIN, French painter. Born in Paris, son of a banker, he was educated for law, but took to art, and became friendly with Manet and other impressionists. He abandoned his historical line of work and started depicting modern life, the racetracks, cafés, and theatres providing him with ample material. He lived to see his "Dancers" originally sold for £20, go to America for £17,400, a record price for the work of a living artist (1849-1917).

DEGETRANDE, BARON, a French philanthropist and philosopher, born at Lyons, of Italian descent; wrote "History of Philosophy," long in repute as the best French work on the subject (1772-1842).

DE GREFF, ARTHUR, Belgian pianist. After touring in most of the chief cities of Europe he made his London debut in 1888; he also composed several pieces for piano and orchestra (1862-).

DELANEIRA, the wife of Hercules, whose death she had been the unwitting cause of by giving him the poisoned robe which Nessus (q.v.) had sent her as potent to preserve her husband's love; on hearing the fatal result she killed herself in remorse and DEIPHOBUS, a son of Priam and Hecuba, second in bravery to Hector; married Helen after the death of Paris, and was betrayed by her to the Greeks.

DEIR-AI-KAMAR, a town in Syria, once the capital of the Druses, on a terrace in the heart of the Lebanon Mountains.

DEISM, belief on purely rational grounds in the existence of God, and distinguished from theism as denying His providence.

DEISTS, a set of freethinkers of various shades, who in England, in the 17th and 18th centuries, discarded revelation and the supernatural generally, and sought to found religion on a purely rational basis.

DEJAZET, VIRGINIE, a celebrated French actress, born in Paris; made her debut at five years of age (1798-1875).

DEKKER, THOMAS, a dramatist, born in London; was contemporary of Ben Jonson, Ford, Rowley, Webster, and Middleton, with some of whom he collaborated in play-writing; wrote lyrics as well as tragedies and light comedies, and prose as well as poetry; the most famous among his prose works, "The Gull's Hornbook," a pamphlet, in which he depicts the life of a young gallant; his pamphlets are valuable (1570-1641).

DE LA BECHE, SIR HENRY THOMAS, geologist, born in London; wrote the "Depth and Temperature of the Lake of Geneva," and published a "Manual of Geology" and the "Geological Observer"; was appointed head of the Geological Survey in England (1798-1855).

DELAGROIX, EUGENE, a French painter, born at Charenton, dep. of Seine; one of the greatest French painters of the 19th century; was the head of the French Romantic school, a brilliant colourist and a daring innovator; his very first success, "Dante crossing Acheron in Charon's Boat," forms an epoch in the history of contemporary art; besides his pictures, which were numerous, he executed decorations and produced lithographic illustrations of "Hamlet," "Macbeth," and Goethe's "Faust" (1798-1863).

DELAGOA BAY, an inlet in the SE. of Africa, E. of the Transvaal, subject to Portugal; stretches from 26° 30' to 26° 20' S.; extends 52 m. inland, where the Transvaal frontier begins, and between which and it a railway of 52 m., constructed by an English company, extends.

DELABRE, JEAN JOSEPH, an eminent French astronomer, born at Amiens, a pupil of Lalande; measured with Méchain the arc of the meridian between Dunkirk and Barcelona towards the establishment of the metric system; produced numerous works of great value, among others "Theoretical and Practical Astronomy" and the "History of Astronomy" (1749-1822).

DELANE, JOHN TRADDEW, editor of the *Times, born in London; studied at Oxford; after some experience as a reporter was put on the staff of the Times, and in 1841 became editor, a post he continued to hold for 36 years; was the inspiring and guiding spirit of the paper, but wrote none of the articles (1817-1879).*

DELABOCHÉ, PAUL, a French historical painter and one of the greatest, born in Paris; was the head of the modern Eclectic school, so called as holding a middle place between the Classical and Romantic schools of art; among his early works were "St. Vincent de Paul preaching before Louis XIII." and "Joan of Arc before Cardinal Beaufort"; the subjects of his latest pictures are from history, English and French, such as "The Prince in the Tower" and "Cromwell contemplating the corpse of Charles I.," a great work; but the grandest monument of his art is the group of paintings with which he adorned the wall of the semicircle of the Palais des Beaux Arts in Paris, which he completed in 1841 (1797-1856).

DELAUNAY, LE VICOMTE, the nom de plume of Mme. Delphine, under which she published her "Parisian Letters."

DELAUNAY, LOUIS ARNÉ, a great French actor, born in Paris; made his debut in 1840, retired 1887 (1828-1908).

DELAUVIGNE, CASIMIR, a popular French lyric poet and dramatist, born at Havre; his verse was conventional and without originality (1798-1848).

DELAWARE, one of the Atlantic and original States of the American Union, as well as the smallest of them; the soil is rather poor, but porcelain clay abounds; so named from Lord De la Warr, who settled there in 1610.

DELAWARES, a once powerful North American Indian people in whose confederacy of the Five Nations were included the Mohicans; their power broken by the Iroquois; now settled, like other tribes, in the Indian Territory.

DELCASSE, THEOPHILE, French Minister of Foreign Affairs, born at Pamiers; began life as a journalist; was elected to the Chamber in 1889; became Colonial Minister; advocated colonial expansion; dealt skilfully with the Fashoda affair as Foreign Minister (1852-1923).

DELESTABLE MOUNTAINS, mountains covered with sheep in the "Pilgrim's Progress," from which the pilgrim obtains a view of the Celestial City.

DELESCOUZE, LOUIS CHARLES, a French Communist, born at Dreux; was imprisoned and transported for his extreme opinions; started a journal, the Réveil, in 1868, to advocate the doctrines of the International; was mainly answerable for the atrocities of the Paris Commune; was killed at the barricades (1809-1871).

DELFT, a Dutch town, 8 m. NW. of Rotterdam, once famous for its pottery; is intersected by canals; has an important polytechnic school.

DELGADO, a cape of E. Africa, on the border between Zanzibar and Mozambique.

DELHI, or the Jumna, the capital of India, once the capital of the Mogul empire and the centre of the Mohammedan power in India; it contains the famous palace of Shah Jehan, and the Jama Masjid, which occupies the heart of the city and is the largest and finest mosque in India, and also owes its origin to Shah Jehan; the old city is walled, is 5½ m. in circumference, and divided into Hindu, Mohammedan, and European quarters; it was captured by Lord Lake in 1803, and during the Mutiny by the Sepoys, but after a siege of seven days retaken in 1857. Proclaimed capital of the Indian Empire at the Coronation Durbar in 1911.

DELIBES, LEO, French composer. He studied at the Paris conservatoire at the age of 12, sang in the Madeleine choir, and then became jointly church organist and theatre accompanist. He composed several short comic operas, of which the best known are "Coppélia," "Lakmé," and "Le Roi Pa Dît" (1836-1901).

DELLAH, the Philistine woman who beguiled and betrayed Samson.

DELLILE, JACQUES, a French poet, born at Algues Perse, in Auvergne; during the Revolution found sanctuary in London; translator of the "Georgics" of Virgil into verse, afterwards the "Æneid" and "Paradise Lost," besides producing also certain didactic and descriptive works; was a good versifier, but properly no poet, and much overrated; died blind (1738-1818).

DELTZSCH, FRANZ, a learned Biblical scholar and exegete, born at Leipzig; his commentaries, which are numerous, are of a conservative tendency; he wrote on Jewish antiquities, Biblical psychology, and Christian apologetics; was professor at Erlangen and Leipzig successively, where his influence on the students was distinctly marked (1818-1890).

DELIUS, FREDERICK, British composer. Born in Bradford, he left England at 21 for Florida, where he stayed two years, returning to Europe to study music at Leipzig. He then settled in France at Grer-sur-Loing, where he became blind. His best known works are "A Village Romeo and Juliet" and the incidental music to Flecker's "Hassan" (1868-).

DELIUS, NICOLAUS, a German philologist, born at Bremen; distinguished especially as a student of Shakespeare and for his edition of Shakespeare's works (1818-1888).

DELLA CRUSCANS, a set of English sentimental poetasters, the leaders of them hailing from Florence, that appeared in England towards the close of the 18th century, and that for a time imposed on many by their extravagant panegyrics of one another, the founder of the set being one Robert Merry, who signed himself Della Crusca; he first announced himself by a sonnet to Love, in praise of which Anne Matilda wrote an incomparable piece of nonsense; "the epidemic spread for a term from fool to fool, but was soon exposed and laughed out of existence; James Boswell, Mrs. Piossi, Sheridan, and Colman the younger were members of this school."

DELLYS, a seaport in Algeria, 49 m. E. of Algiers.

DELOLME, JOHN LOUIS, a writer on State polity, born at Geneva, bred to the legal profession; spent some six years in England as a refugee; wrote a book on the "Constitution of England," and in praise of it, which was received for a time with high favour in the country, but is now no longer regarded as an authority; wrote a "History of the Flagellants," and on "The Union of Scotland with England" (1740-1806).

DELOREME, a French architect, born at Lyons; studied in Rome; was patronised by Catherine de' Medici; built the palace of the Tuileries, and contributed to the art of building (1618-1677).

DELOREME, MARION, Frenchwoman celebrated for her wit and fascination, born at Châlons-sur-Marne; came to Paris in the reign of Louis XIII., where her drawing-room became the rendezvous of all the celebrities of the time, many of whom were bewitched by her charms; she gave harbour to the chiefs of the Fronde, and was about to be arrested when she died; the story that her death was a feint, and that she had subsequent adventures, is distrusted; she is the subject of a drama by Victor Hugo (1612-1660).

DELOS, the smallest and central island of the Cyclades, the birthplace of Apollo and Artemis, and where the former had a famous oracle; it was, according to the Greek mythology, a floating island, and was first fixed to the spot by Zeus to provide Leda with a place, denied her elsewhere by Hera, in which to bring forth her twin offspring; it was at one time a centre of Apollo worship, but is now uninhabited, and only frequented at times by shepherds with their flocks.

DELPHI, a town of ancient Greece in Phocis, at the foot of Parnassus, where Apollo had a temple, and whence he was wont to issue his oracles by the mouth of his priestess the Pythia, who when receiving the oracle used to sit on a tripod over an opening in the ground through which an intoxicating vapour exhaled, which was deemed the breath of the god, and which proved the vehicle of her inspiration; the Pythian games were celebrated here.

DELPHIN CLASSICS, an edition of the Greek and Roman classics, edited by Bossuet and Huet, assisted by thirty-nine scholars, for the use of the dauphin of Louis XIV.; of little use now.

DELPHINE, a novel by Mme. de Staël; presumed to be an idealised picture of herself.

DELUGE, name given to the tradition, common to several races, of a flood of such universality as to sweep the land, if not the earth, of all its inhabitants, except the pair by whom the land was re-peopled. Geological and archaeological discoveries this century tend to give support to the tradition in the main.

DELVILLE WOOD, a district in France, officially part of the Union of South Africa, being presented to the latter on account of the severe losses among the South African troops there in the Great War.

DEMADES, an Athenian orator, a bitter enemy of Demosthenes, in the interest of Philip of Macedon; put to death for treason by Antipater, 318 B.C.; was a man of no principle, but a great orator.

DEMARA TUS, king of Sparta from 510 to 491 B.C.; dispossessed of his crown, fled to Persia and accompanied Xerxes into Greece.

DEMAVEND MOUNT, an extinct volcano, the highest peak (18,600 ft.) of the Elburz chain, in Persia.

DEMBEA, a lake, the largest in Abyssinia, being 60 m. long and 6000 ft. above the sea-level; from it the Blue Nile issues.

DEMBENSKI, HENRYK, a Polish general, born near Cracow; served under Napoleon against Russia, under Kossuth against Austria; fled to Turkey on the resignation of Kossuth; died in Paris (1791-1864).

DEMERRARA, a division of British Guiana; takes its name from the river, which is 200 m. long and falls into the Atlantic at Georgetown.

DEMETER (Mt. Earth-mother), the great Greek goddess of the earth, daughter of Kronos and Rhea, and sister of Zeus, and ranks with him as one of the twelve great gods of Olympus; is specially the goddess of agriculture, and the giver of all the earth's fruits; known to the Romans as Ceres.

DEMETRIUS, the name of two kings of Macedonia who ruled over the country, the first from 290 to 289 B.C., and the second from 240 to 229 B.C.

DEMETRIUS, or DIMITRI, the name of several sovereigns of Russia, and of four adventurers called the four false Dimitri.

DEMETRIUS I., Soter (i.e. saviour), king of Syria from 162 to 150 B.C.; was grandson of Antiochus the Great. D. II., Nicator (i.e. conqueror), king of Syria from 143 to 125 B.C. D. III., Euceros (i.e. the happy), king of Syria in 95, died in 84 B.C.

DEMETRIUS PHALEREUS, an eminent Athenian orator, statesman, and historian, born at Phalerus, a seaport of Athens; was held in high honour in Athens for a time as its political head, but fell into dishonour, after which he lived in retirement and gave himself up to literary pursuits; died from the bite of an asp; left a number of works (345-283 B.C.).

DEMIDOFF, a Russian family distinguished for their wealth, descended from a serf of Peter the Great, who amassed a large fortune by manufacturing firearms for the Emperor, and was raised by him to the rank of nobility; his successors were distinguished in the arts, in arms, and literature; Anatol in particular, who travelled over the SE. of Europe, and wrote an account of his travels, a work magnificently illustrated.

DEMIURGUS, a name employed by Plato to denote the world-soul, the medium by which the idea is made real, the spiritual made material, the many made one, and adopted by the Gnostics to denote the world-maker as a being derived from God, but estranged from God, being environed in matter, which they regarded as evil, and so incapable as such of redeeming the soul from matter, from evil, such as the God of the Jews, and the Son of that God, conceived of as manifest in flesh.

DEMOCRACY, defined by Abraham Lincoln to be government of the people by the people and for the people, has found in Great Britain its main home, the British race seeming to have a natural genius for self-government. It was in the words of Woodrow Wilson, "to make the world safe for democracy" that the Great War was fought; but in the years that followed many nations in Europe replaced the system with autocracies.

DEMOCRATS, a political party in the United States that contends for the rights of the several States to self-government as against undue centralisation.

DEMOCRITUS, a Greek philosopher, born in Abdera, Thrace, of wealthy parents; spent his patrimony in travel, gathered knowledge from far and near, and gave the fruits of it in a series of writings to his contemporary compatriots, only fragments of which remain, though they must have come down comparatively entire to Cicero's time, who compares them for splendour and music of eloquence to Plato's; his philosophy was called the Atomic, as he traced the universe to its ultimate roots in combinations of atoms, in quality the same but in quantity different, and referred all life and sensation to movements in them, while he regarded quiescence as the summum bonum; he has been called the Laughing Philosopher from, it is alleged, his habit of laughing at the follies of mankind (460-370 B.C.).

DEMOCRITUS JUNIOR, a pseudonym under which Burton published his "Anatomy of Melancholy."

DEMOGOT, French litterateur, born at Paris; wrote a history of literature, chiefly French (1808-1894).

DEMOGORGON, a terrible deity, the tyrant of the elves and fairies, who must all appear before him once every five years to give an account of their doings; referred to in the poems of Milton and Spenser.

DEMOIVRE, ABRAHAM, a mathematician, born in Champagne; lived most of his life in England to escape, as a Protestant, from persecution in France; became a friend of Newton, and a Fellow of the Royal Society, and was of such eminence as a mathematician that he was asked to arbitrate between the claims of Newton and Leibnitz to the invention of fluxions (1667-1754).

DEMON, or DAIMON, a name which Socrates gave to an inner divine instinct which corresponds to one's destiny, and guides him in the way he should go to fulfil it, and is more or less potent in a man according to his purity of soul.

DEMONOLOGY, that branch of learning which deals with the existence and character of evil spirits; among many primitive races the belief in such takes the form of animism.

DE MORGAN, AUGUSTUS, an eminent mathematician, born in Madura, S. India; was professor of Mathematics in London University from 1828 till his death, though he resigned the appointment for a time in consequence of the rejection of a candidate, James Martineau, for the chair of logic, on account of his religious opinions; wrote treatises on almost every department of mathematics, on arithmetic, algebra, trigonometry, differential and integral calculus, the last pronounced to be "the most complete treatise on the subject ever produced in England"; wrote also "Formal Logic" (1896-1871).

DEMOSTHENES, the great Athenian orator, born in Athens; had many impediments to overcome to succeed in the profession, but by ingenious methods and indomitable perseverance he subdued them all, and became the first orator not of Greece only, but of all antiquity; a stammer in his speech he overcame by practising with pebbles in his mouth, and a natural diffidence by declaiming on the sea-beach amid the noise of the waves; while he acquired a perfect mastery of the Greek language by binding himself down to copy five times over in succession the "History of the Peloponnesian War" by Thucydides; he employed 15 years of his life in denunciation of Philip of Macedon, who was bent on subjugating his country; pronounced against him his immortal "Philippics" and "Olynthics"; took part in the battle of Cheronea, and continued the struggle even after Philip's death; on the death of Alexander he gave his services as an orator to the confederated Greeks, and in the end made away with himself by poison so as not to fall into the hands of Antipater (385-322 B.C.). See CITESIPHON.

DEMPSTER, THOMAS, a learned Scotsman, born in Aberdeenshire; held several professorships on the Continent; was the author of "Historia Ecclesiastica Gentis Sootorum," a work of great learning, but of questionable veracity, which has been reprinted by the Bannatyne Club; his last days were embittered by the infidelity of his wife (1579-1625).

DENARIUS, a silver coin among the Romans, first coined in 269 B.C., and worth 84d.; originally equal to 10 of the copper coins called as.

DENBIGH, the county town of Denbighshire, in the Vale of the Clwyd, 30 m. W. of Chester; manufactures shoes and leather.

DENBIGHSHIRE, a county in North Wales, of rugged hills and fertile vales, 40 m. long and 17 m. on an average broad, with a coalfield in the N.E., and with mines of iron, lead, and slate.

DENDERA, a village in Upper Egypt, on the left bank of the Nile, 28 m. N. of Thebes, on the site of ancient Tentyra, with the ruins of a temple of Hathor in almost perfect preservation; on the ceiling of a portion of the building was found a zodiac, now in the museum of the Louvre in Paris; the temple dates from the period of Cleopatra and the early Roman emperors, and has sculptured portraits of that queen and her son Caesarion.

DENGUE, a fever peculiar to the tropics, occurs in hot weather and attacks one suddenly with high temperature and violent pains, and after a relapse returns in a milder form and leaves the patient very weak.

DENHAM, DIXON, an English traveller, companion of Clapperton; visited Bornu and Lake Chad (1785-1828).

DENHAM, SIR JOHN, an English poet, born at Dublin, the son of an Irish judge; took to gambling and squandered his patrimony; was unhappy in his marriage, and his mind gave way; is best known as the author of "Cooper's Hill," a descriptive poem, interspersed with reflections, and written in smooth flowing verse (1616-1649).

DENINA, CARLO, an Italian historian, born in Piedmont; banished from Italy for a cynical remark injurious to the monks; paid court to Frederick the Great in Berlin, where he lived a good while, and became eventually imperial librarian in Paris under Napoleon (1731-1813).

DENIS, a king of Portugal from 1279 to 1325; the founder of the University of Coimbra and the Order of Christ.

DENIS, ST. the apostle of the Gauls, the first bishop of Paris, and the patron saint of France; suffered martyrdom in 270.

DENIS, ST. a town 6 m. N. of Paris, within the line of the fortifications, with an abbey which contains the remains of St. Denis, and became the mausoleum of the kings of France.

DENISON, EDWARD, philanthropist; distinguished by his self-denying benevolent labours in the East End of London (1840-1870).

DENISON, GEORGE ANTHONY, archdeacon of Taunton, born in Norfolk; was charged with holding views on the eucharist inconsistent with the teaching of the Church of England, first condemned and then acquitted on appeal; a staunch High Churchman, and equally opposed to Broad Church and Low (1805-1896).

DENISON, JOHN EVELYN, Speaker of the House of Commons from 1858 to 1872, brother of the above; created Viscount Ossington on retirement (1800-1873).

DENMAN, LORD, Lord Chief Justice of England from 1832 to 1850, born in London; with Brougham was counsel for Queen Caroline (1779-1854).

DENMARK, the smallest of the three Scandinavian kingdoms, consisting of Jutland, the northern part of Sleswig, and an archipelago of islands in the Baltic Sea; divided into 13 counties, and is less than half the size of Scotland; is a low-lying country, no place in it is more than 500 ft. above the sea-level than 500 ft. and as a consequence has no river to speak of, only meres or lakes; the land is laid out in cornfields and grazing pastures; there are very few minerals but abundance of clay for porcelain; while the exports consist chiefly of horses, cattle, swine, hams, and butter; the government is constitutional, and the established religion Lutheran.

DENNENWITZ, a village in Brandenburg, 40 m. SW. of Berlin, where Marshal Ney with 70,000 was defeated by Marshal Blücher with 50,000 in 1813.

DENNIS, JOHN, a would-be dramatist and critic, born in London, in constant broils with the wits of his time; his productions were worth little, and he is chiefly remembered for his attacks on Addison and Pope, and for the ridicule these attacks brought down at their hands on his own head, from Pope in "Narrative of the Frenzy of John Dennis," and "damnation to everlasting fame" in the "Dunolad"; he became blind, and was sunk in poverty, when Pope wrote a prologue to a play produced for his benefit (1657-1734).

DENS, PETER, a Catholic theologian, born at Boom, near Antwerp; author of a work entitled "Theologia Moralis et Dogmatica," a minute and caustic vindication in catechetical form of the tenets of the Catholic Church, and in use as a text-book in Catholic colleges (1690-1776).

DENTATUS, MANLIUS CURTIUS, a Roman of the old stamp; consul gained two victories over rival States and two triumphs in one year; drove Pyrrhus out of Italy (275 B.C.), and brought to Rome immense booty, of which he would take nothing to himself; in his retirement took to tilling a small farm with his own hand.

DENVER, the capital of Colorado, U.S., on a plain 5196 ft. above the sea-level; originally founded as a mining station in 1858, now a large and flourishing and well-appointed town; is the centre of a large trade, and a great mining district.

DEODAR, a small protected independent State in the N.W. of Gujarat, India.

DEODORAKI, a glacier in the Caucasus Mountains.

DEPARTMENT, a territorial division in France instituted in 1790, under which the old division into provinces was broken up; each department, of which there are now 87, is broken up into arrondissements.

DEPPING, a learned French historian, born at Münster; wrote a "History of Normandy," and on "Trade of Europe with the Levant" (1784-1853).

DEPRESSION, or cyclone, an area of low pressure round which the wind circulates in an anti-clockwise direction in the northern hemisphere; at the centre there is an upward current of air which frequently gives rise to rain fall. As a rule cyclones move across the British Isles in an eastward or south-eastward direction.

DEPTFORD, a suburb of London on the S. bank of the Thames; once with an extensive Government dockyard and arsenal, the site of it purchased by the Corporation of London as a market for foreign cattle.

DE QUINCEY, THOMAS, a great English prose writer, born in Manchester; son of a merchant called Quincey; his father dying, he was placed under a guardian, who put him to school, from which in the end he ran away, wandered about in Wales for a time, and by-and-by found his way to London; in 1808 was sent to Oxford, which in 1807 he left in disgust; it was here as an opium addict he took to opium, and acquired that habit which was the bane of his life; on leaving Oxford he went to Bath beside his mother, where he formed a connection by which he was introduced to Wordsworth and Southey, and led to settle to literary work at Gramere, in the Lake District; here he wrote for the reviews and magazines, particularly Blackwood's, till in 1821 he went up to London and published his "Confessions" under the nom de plume of "The English Opium-Eater"; leaving Gramere in 1828 he settled in Edinburgh, and at Polton, near Lase-wade, where he died; is characterised by Stopford Brooke as "owing to the overlapping and involved melody of his style, one of our best, as he is one of our most various, miscellaneous writers"; he was a writer of very varied ability and acquirement (1785-1859).

DERATING ACT, a measure passed in 1929 under which a large part of local rates on industry were transferred to the State, and which at the same time effected reform of local government, chiefly the abolition of Boards of Guardians.

DERBEND, capital of Russian Daghestan, on the W. of the Caspian Sea, 140 m. NW. of Baku.

DERBY, county town of Derbyshire, on the Derwent, with manufactures of silk, cotton, hosiery, lace, porcelain, &c.; it is the centre of a great railway system.

DERBY, CHARLOTTE, COUNTESS OF, wife of the 7th Earl, who was taken prisoner at Worcester in 1651, and was beheaded at Bolton; famous for her gallant defence of Lathom House against the Parliamentary forces, which she was obliged to surrender; lived to see the Restoration; d. 1663.

DERBY, 14TH EARL OF, British statesman, born at Knowsley Hall, Lancashire; entered Parliament in 1820 in the Whig interest, and was hailed as an accession to their ranks by the Whigs; supported the cause of reform; in 1830 became Chief Secretary for Ireland under Earl Grey's administration; introduced a coercive measure against the Repeal agitation of O'Connell; contributed to the passing of the Reform Bill in 1832; succeeded from the Whigs in 1834, and became Colonial Secretary in 1845 under Peel brought in a bill to repeal the Corn Laws, he retired from the Cabinet, and in 1848 became the head of the Protectionist party as Earl of Derby, to which title he succeeded in 1851; was after that Prime Minister three times over, and it was with his sanction Disraeli carried his Reform Act of 1867; he resigned his Premiership in 1868, and the last speech he made was against the Irish Disestablishment Bill; was distinguished for his scholarship as well as his oratory, and gave proof of this by his scholarly translation of the "Iliad" of Homer (1799-1869).

DERBY, 15TH EARL OF, eldest son of the preceding; entered Parliament as Lord Stanley in 1848; was a member of the three Derby administrations, in the first and third in connection with foreign affairs, and in the second as Secretary for India; at the time when the government of India passed from the Company to the Crown; became Earl in 1869; was Foreign Secretary under Disraeli in 1874, but retired in 1878; in 1885 joined the Liberal party, and held office under Gladstone, but declined to follow him in the matter of Home Rule, and joined the Unionist ranks; was a man of sound and cool judgment, and took a deep interest in economic questions (1826-1895).

DERBY, 17TH EARL OF, British politician. After serving in the Guards he entered the House of Commons in 1892, and was Lord Roberts' private secretary during part of the Boer War. In 1900 he became financial secretary to the War Office, in 1903 Postmaster-General, and succeeded to the earldom in 1908. During the Great War he organised the Derby Scheme (q.v.), and from 1918 to 1920 was British Ambassador in Paris. He is also well known as an owner of racehorses (1865-).

DERBY DAY, usually held on the first Wednesday in June, being the second day of the Summer Meeting at Epsom, on which the Derby Stakes for colts and fillies three years old are competed for, so called as having been started by the 12th Earl of Derby in 1780; the day used to be held as a London holiday, and the race is still remarkable for the enormous crowd of spectators. The stakes range between £5000 and £8000, though in total several millions of pounds are at stake.

DERBY SCHEME, a method of recruiting introduced in 1915, whereby a man could "attest" and wait for his "group" to be called up. "Groups" were divided according to age and whether the recruit was married or single.

DERBYSHIRE, a northern midland county of England, hilly in the N., undulating and pastoral in the S., and with coalfields in the E.; abounds in minerals, and is more a manufacturing and mining county than an agricultural.

DERG, LOUGH, an expansion of the waters of the Shannon, Ireland, 24 m. long, from 2 to 6 broad; also a small lake in the S. of Donegal, with small islands, one of which, Station Island, was, as the reputed entrance to St. Patrick's Purgatory, a place of pilgrimage to thousands at one time.

DE ROBECQ, SIR JOHN MICHAEL, British admiral. He entered the navy at the age of 15, and in 1915 was given command of the naval forces at Gallipoli; he was made an admiral in 1920 and given charge of the Mediterranean Fleet (1862-1928).

DERRICK, a temporary crane used on board ships; so named after a Tyburn hangman of the 17th century.

DE RUYTER. See RUYTER.

DERVISHES, a name given to members of certain mendicant orders connected with the Mohammedan faith in the East. Of these there are various classes, under different regulations, and wearing distinctive costumes, with their special observances of devotion, and all presumed to lead an austere life; some live in monasteries, and others go wandering about, while some of them show their religious fervour in excited whirling dances, and others in howlings; all are religious fanatics in their way, held sacred by the Moslems.

DERWENTWATER, one of the most beautiful of the Cumberland lakes, in the S. of the county, formed by the river Derwent; extends 8. from Keswick; is over 3 m. long, and over 1 m. broad; is dotted with wooded islands, and is overlooked by Scafell; it abounds with perch.

DERWENTWATER, EARL OF, a Jacobite leader; was 3rd Earl and the last; several warrants were issued for his apprehension in 1714; he joined the Jacobite rising in 1715; was taken prisoner at Preston, and beheaded on Tower Hill, London, next year, after trial in Westminster Hall, confession of guilt, and pleadings on his behalf with the king (1689-1716).

DERZHAVEN, GABRIEL, a Russian lyric poet, born at Kasan; rose from the ranks as a common soldier to the highest offices in the State under the Empress Catherine II. and her successors; retired into private life, and gave himself up to poetry; the ode by which he is best known is his "Address to the Deity" (1743-1816).

DESAIX, LOUIS CHARLES ANTOINE, a distinguished French general, born at the Château d'Avat, Auvergne, of a noble family; entered the army at 16; commanded a division of the Army of the Rhine in 1796, and after the retreat of Moreau defended Kehl against the Austrians for two months; accompanied Bonaparte to the East, and in 1799 conquered Upper Egypt; contributed effectively to the success at Marengo, and fell dead at the moment of victory, shot by a musket-ball; he was an upright and a chivalrous man, known in Egypt as "the Just Sultan," and in Germany as "the good general" (1768-1800).

DESAUGIERS, MARC, a celebrated French composer of songs and vaudevilles; "stands second to Béranger as a light song-writer," and is by some preferred to him (1772-1827).

DESAULT, PIERRE JOSEPH, a French surgeon, born in dep. of Haute-Saône; his works contributed largely to the progress of surgery (1744-1795).

DESBARRES, JOSEPH FREDERICK, military engineer and hydrographer, aide-de-camp of General Wolfe at Quebec; fortified Quebec; surveyed the St. Lawrence; revised the maps of the American coast at the outbreak of the American war; died at Halifax, Nova Scotia, aged 102 (1722-1824).

DESGAMPS, a French painter, born at Dunkirk; painted village scenes (1714-1791).

DESCARTES, RENE, the father of modern philosophy, born at La Haye, in Touraine; was educated at the Jesuit College of La Flèche, where he made rapid progress in all that his masters could teach him, but soon grew sceptical as to their methods of inquiry; "resolved, on the completion of his studies, to bid adieu to all school and book learning, and henceforth to gain knowledge only from himself, and from the great book of the world, from nature and the observation of man"; in 1610 he entered the army of the Prince of Orange, and after a service of five years quitted it to visit various centres of interest on the Continent; made a considerable stay in Paris; finally abandoned his native land in 1629, and betook himself to seclusion in Holland in order to live there, unknown and undisturbed, wholly for philosophy and the prosecution of his scientific projects; here, though not without vexatious opposition from the theologians, he lived twenty years, till in 1649, at the invitation of Christina of Sweden, he left for Stockholm, where, the severe climate proving too much for him, he was carried off by pneumonia next year; Descartes' philosophy starts with Doubt, and by one single step it arrives at Certainty; "If I doubt, it is plain I exist," and from this certainty, that is, the existence of the thinking subject, he deduces his whole system; it all comes from the formula Cogito, ergo sum, "I think, therefore I exist," that is, the thinking ego exists; in which thinking philosophy ere long sums the universe up, regarding it as a void, without thought; Descartes' philosophy is all comprehended in two works, his "Discourse on Method," and his "Meditations." His mathematical contributions included the introduction of co-ordinates and the method of undetermined coefficients (1596-1650).

DESCHAMPS, EMILE, a French poet, born at Bourges, one of the chiefs of the Romantic school (1795-1871).

DESCHAMPS, EUSTACHE, a French poet, born at Vertus, in Champagne; studied in Orleans University; travelled over Europe; had his estate pillaged by the English, whom, in consequence, he was never weary of abusing; his poems are numerous, and, except one, all short, consisting of ballads, as many as 1175 of them, a form of composition which he is said to have invented; his works deal extensively in satire (1828-1815).

DESDERMONA, the wife of Othello the Moor, who, in Shakespeare's play of that name, kills her on a groundless insinuation of infidelity, to his bitter remorse.

DESEZE, a French advocate, had the courage, along with advocate Tronchet, to defend Louis XVI. when dragged to judgment by the Convention; he was imprisoned for a time, but escaped the scaffold; on the return of the Bourbons he was made a peer (1750-1828).

DES MONNES, the largest city in Iowa, U.S., and the capital, founded in 1846.

DESMOULINS, CAMILLE, one of the most striking figures in the French Revolution, born at Gules, in Picardy; studied for the bar in the same college with Robespierre, but never practised, owing to a stutter in his speech; was early seized with the revolutionary fever, and was the first to excite the same fever in the Parisian mob; was one of the ablest advocates of the levelling principles of the Revolution; associated himself first with Mirabeau and then with Danton in carrying them out, and even supported Robespierre in the extreme course he took; but his heart was moved to relent when he thought of the misery the guillotine was working among the innocent families of its victims; with Danton he would fain have brought the Reign of Terror to a close; for this he was treated as a renegade, put under arrest at the instance of Robespierre, subjected to trial, sentenced to death, and led off to the place of execution; his young wife, for interfering in his behalf, was arraigned and condemned, and sent to the guillotine a fortnight after him (1760-1794).

DE SOTO, FERNANDO, a Spanish adventurer; served under Pizarro in Peru; was sent by the Emperor Charles V. of Spain to conquer Florida, penetrated as far as the Mississippi; worn out with fatigue in quest of gold, died of fever, and was buried in the river (1496-1542).

DES PERIERS, BONAVENTURE, a French humanist and story-teller, born in Burgundy; valet-de-chambre of Margaret of Valois; wrote "Cymbalum Mundi," a satirical production, in which, as a disciple of Lucian, he holds up to ridicule the religious beliefs of his day; also "Novelles Recréations et Joyeux Devs," a collection of some 129 short stories admirably told; was one of the first prose-writers of the century, and is presumed to be the author of the "Heptameron," ascribed to him (1540-1594).

DESPEREAUX. See BOILLER.

DESSALINES, JEAN JACQUES, emperor of Hayti, born in Guinea, W. Africa, a negro imported into Hayti as a slave; on the emancipation of the slaves there he acquired great influence among the insurgents, and by his cruelties compelled the French to quit the island, upon which he was raised to the governorship, and by-and-by was able to declare himself emperor, but his tyranny provoked a revolt, in which he perished (1700-1806).

DESSAU, a North German town, the capital of Anhalt, on the Mulde, affluent of the Elbe, some 70 m. SW. of Berlin; it is at once manufacturing and trading.

DESTOUCHES, PHILIPPE, a French dramatist, born at Tours; his plays were comedies, and he wrote 17, all excellent (1680-1754); also a French painter (1790-1834).

DETAILLE, JEAN BAPTISTE EDOUARD, an eminent French painter of military subjects; born in Paris; studied under Meissonier; painted "The Conquerors," "The Passing Regiment," and "Saluting the Wounded" (1848-1912).

DETMOLD, capital of Lippe, 47 m. SW. of Hanover, with a bronze colossal statue of Arminius near by.

DETROIT, the largest city in Michigan, U.S., a great manufacturing and commercial centre, situated on a river of the same name, which connects Lake St. Clair with Lake Erie; is one of the oldest places in the States, and dates from 1670, at which time it came into the possession of the French; is a well-built city, with varied manufactures and a large trade, particularly in grain and other natural products.

DETTINGEN, a village in Bavaria, where an army of English, Hanoverians, and Austrians under George II., in 1748, defeated the French under Duc de Noailles.

DEUCALION, in Greek mythology the son of Prometheus, who, with his wife Pyrrha, by means of an ark which he built, was saved from a flood which for nine days overwhelmed the land of Hellas. On the subsidence of the flood they consulted the oracle at Delphi as to re-peopling the land with inhabitants, when they were told by Themis, the Pythia at the time, to throw the bones of their mother over their heads behind them. For a time the meaning of the oracle was a puzzle, but the reader wit of the wife found it out; upon which they took stones and threw them over their heads, when the stones he threw were changed into men and those she threw were changed into women.

DEUTERONOMY (i.e. the Second Law), the fifth book of the Pentateuch, and so called as the re-statement and re-enforcement, as it were, by Moses of the Divine law proclaimed in the wilderness. The Mosaic authorship of this book has been called in question, though it is allowed to be instinct with the spirit of the religion instituted by Moses, and it is considered to have been conceived at a time when that religion with its ritual was established in Jerusalem, in order to confirm faith in the Divine origin and sanction of the observances there.

DEUTSCH, EMANUEL, a distinguished Hebrew scholar, born at Neisse, in Silesia, of Jewish descent; was trained from his boyhood to familiarity with the Hebrew and Chaldean languages; studied under Boeckh at the university of Berlin; came to England, and in 1855 obtained a post in the library of the British Museum; had made a special study of the "Talmud," on which he wrote a brilliant article for the Quarterly Review, to the great interest of many; his ambition was to write an exhaustive treatise on the subject, but he did not live to accomplish it; died at Alexandria, whither he had gone in the hope of prolonging his days (1829-1873).

DEUTZ, a Prussian town on the Rhine, opposite Cologne, now incorporated with the latter.

DEUX FONTS, French name for Zweibrücken (q.v.).

DEVA, the original Hindu name for the deity, meaning the shining one.

DE VALERA, EAMON, Irish politician. Born in New York of an Irish mother and Spanish father, he went to Ireland as a boy, took a degree there, and in 1917 became President of the Gaelic League. Arrested for revolutionary propaganda, he was released in 1918, returned to the House of Commons, though never taking his seat, and as leader of Sinn Féin (q.v.) proclaimed himself President of the Irish Republic. Several times arrested, he escaped to New York to raise funds, and returned to carry on guerrilla warfare against England, outrages being committed in London as well as in Ireland. He refused to acknowledge the Irish Treaty (q.v.) and carried on a campaign against the Irish Free State without success (1880-).

DEVANAG'ARI, the characters in which Sanskrit words are printed.

DEVENTER, a town in Holland, in the province of Overijssel, 55 m. S.E. of Amsterdam; has carpet manufactures; is celebrated for its ginger-bread; was the locality of the Brotherhood of Common Life, with which the life and work of Thomas à Kempis are associated.

DE VERE, SIR AUBREY, poet, born in co. Limerick, Ireland; author of "Julian the Apostate" and other dramatic and historical poetical dramas; a master of the sonnet (1788-1846).

DE VERE, THOMAS AUBREY, poet and prose writer, born in co. Limerick, son of the preceding; educated at Trinity College, Dublin; wrote poetical dramas of "Alexander the Great," and "St. Thomas of Canterbury"; his first poem "The Waldenses"; also published critical essays (1814-1902).

DEVIL, THE, a being regarded in Scripture as having a personal existence, and, so far as this world is concerned, a universal spiritual presence, as everywhere thwarting the purposes of God and marred the destiny of man; only since the introduction of Christianity, which derives all evil as well as good from within, he has come to be regarded less as an external than an internal reality, and is identified with the ascendancy in the human heart of passions native to it, which when subject ennobles it, but when supreme debases it. He is properly the spirit that deceives man, and decoys him to his eternal ruin from truth and righteousness.

DEVIL'S ISLAND, a famous penal settlement in French Guiana.

DEVIL-WORSHIP, a homage paid by primitive tribes to the devil or spirit of evil in the simple-hearted belief that he can be bribed from doing them evil.

DEVONIAN, the name given to the geological strata overlying the Silurian and below the Carboniferous; it includes the rocks of marine origin found in Devon and the Old Red Sandstone, which was laid down in lakes or inland seas. The earliest known fishes are found as fossils in rocks of this age.

DEVONPORT, a town in Devonshire, adjoining Plymouth to the W., and the seat of the military and naval government of the three towns, originally called Plymouth Dock, and established as a naval arsenal by William III.

DEVONSHIRE, a county in the S. of England, with Exmoor in the N. and Dartmoor in the S.; is fertile in the low country, and enjoys a climate favourable to vegetation; it has rich pasture-grounds, and abounds in orchards.

DEVONSHIRE, DUKE OF. See CAVENTISH.

DEVRIENT, LUDWIG, a popular German actor, born in Berlin, of exceptional dramatic ability, the ablest of a family with similar gifts (1784-1832).

DEWAR, SIR JAMES, physicist, professor at Cambridge and at the Royal Institution; he invented the vacuum flask and was the first to liquefy hydrogen; he carried out much research on low temperature work; president of the British Association at Belfast in 1902 (1842-1923).

DEWES, SIR EDMOND, antiquary, born in Dorsetshire; bred for the bar; was a member of the Long Parliament; left notes on its transactions; took the Puritan side in the Civil War; his "Journal of all the Parliaments of Elizabeth" is of value; left an "Autobiography and Correspondence" (1602-1650).

DE WET, CHRISTIAN RUDOLF, Boer soldier. He won some battles in Natal in 1899, was made commander-in-chief of the Orange Free State army and showed brilliant ability in guerrilla warfare. From 1907 to 1914 he was a member of the Orange Free State government. In 1914 he was a leader of the rebellion fermented by Germany (1854-1922).

DE WETTE, WILHELM MARTIN LEBERSCHT, a German theologian, born near Weimar; studied at Jena, professor of Theology ultimately at Basel; was held in high repute as a Biblical critic and exegete; contributed largely to theological literature; counted a rationalist by the orthodox, and a mystic by the rationalists; his chief works "A Critical Introduction to the Bible" and a "Manual to the New Testament" (1780-1849).

DE WITT, JAN, a Dutch statesman, born at Dort; elected grand pensionary in 1652; like his father, Jacob de Witt, before him, was a declared enemy of the House of Orange, and opposed the Stadtholdership, and for a time carried the country along with him, but during a war with England his influence declined, the Orange party prevailing and electing the young Prince of Orange, our William III., Stadtholder. He and his brother Cornelius were murdered at last by the populace (1625-1672).

DEWSBURY, a town in the West Riding of Yorkshire, 8 m. S.W. of Leeds; engaged in the manufacture of woollens, blankets, carpets, and yarns, and with dye works and iron foundries.

DEKTEIN, a soluble matter into which the interior substance of starch globules is converted by acids or diastase, so called because when viewed by polarised light it has the property of turning the plane of polarisation to the right. It is used as a gum.

DEKTRÖSE, a name given to glucose or grape sugar, on account of the fact that the plane of polarisation of polarised light is turned to the right on passing through it.

DEYSTER, LOUIS DE, a Flemish painter, born at Bruges; was of a deeply religious temper, and his character was reflected in his choice of subjects, such as "The Death of the Virgin," "The Resurrection of Christ," &c.; he was a recluse (1656-1711).

DEZOBBY, CHARLES, a French writer, born at St. Denis; author of "Rome in the Time of Augustus" (1798-1871).

DHAGORA, a mound with a dome-shaped top, found to contain Buddhist relics.

DHARMA, the name given to the law of Buddha, as distinct from the Sangha, which is the Church.

DEARWAR, a town in the S. of the Bombay Presidency, a place of considerable trade in a district noted for its cotton-growing.

DHWALAGIRI (white mountain), one of the peaks of the Himalayas, in Nepal, the third highest, with an altitude of 26,826 ft.

DIABETES, a disease characterised by an excessive discharge of urine, and accompanied with great thirst; there are two forms of this disease.

DIABLERETS, a mountain of the Bernese Alps, between the Cantons de Vaud and de Valais, 10,850 ft. high.

DIAPYRUS, THOMAS, the name of two pedantic doctors, father and son, who figure in Molière's "Malade Imaginaire."

DIAGORAS, a Greek philosopher, born in Melos, one of the Cyclades, 5th century B.C., surnamed the Atheist, on account of the scorn with which he treated the gods of the popular faith, from the rage of whose devotees he was obliged to seek safety by flight; died in Corinth.

DIALOGUES OF PLATO, philosophical dialogues, in which Socrates figures as the principal interlocutor, although the doctrine expounded is rather Plato's than his master's; they discuss theology, psychology, ethics, aesthetics, politics, physics, and related subjects.

DIALYSIS, the process of separation of colloids (q.v.) from crystalline substances in a solution, by means of a membrane which allows free passage to the latter but not to the former.

DIAMANTE, a Spanish dramatic poet, who plagiarised Corneille's "Cid" and passed it off as original. Little is known of his life. He was born in 1626.

DIAMANTINA, a district in Brazil, in the province of Minas Geraes, rich in diamonds.

DIAMOND, one of the allotropic forms of carbon, of extreme hardness, which has been crystallised in the earth by great heat. Most of the world's supply comes from South Africa and Brazil. Famous diamonds are: the Hope blue, Koh-i-noor, Orloff, Star of the South, and Cullinan.

DIAMOND, the name of Newton's favourite dog that, by upsetting a lamp, set fire to MSS. containing notes of experiments made over a course of years, an irreparable loss.

DIAMOND NECKLACE AFFAIR. A necklace consisting of 500 diamonds, and worth £80,000, which one Madame de la Motte induced the jeweller who "made" it to part with for Marie Antoinette, on security of Cardinal de Rohan, and which madame made away with, taking it to pieces and disposing of the jewels in London; the swindle was first discovered when the jeweller presented his bill to the queen, who denied all knowledge of the matter; this led to a trial which extended over nine months, gave rise to great scandal, and ended in the punishment of the swindler and her husband, the exile of De Rohan, and the disgrace of the unhappy, and it is believed innocent, queen. See Carlyle's "Miscellanies."

DIAMOND NET, a name given in the Hegelian philosophy to "the connective tissue, so to speak, that not only supports, but even in a measure constitutes, the various organs" of the universe. See HEGELIANISM.

DIAMOND STATE, Delaware, U.S., from its small size and great wealth.

DIANA, originally a Roman deity, dispenser of light, identified at length with the Greek goddess Artemis, and from the first with the moon; she was a virgin goddess, and spent her time in the chase, attended by her maidens; her temple at Ephesus was one of the seven wonders of the world. See ARTEMIS.

DIANA DE PONTIERS, the mistress of Henry II. of France, for whom he built the magnificent Château d'Anet, in Eure-et-Loir; she had a great influence over him, and the cruel persecutions of the Huguenots in his reign were due to her instigation (1499-1566).

DIANA OF FRANCE, the Duchess of Angoulême, the natural daughter of Henry II. and the Duchesse de Castro (1538-1619).

DIARBEKIR, the largest town in the Kurdistan Highlands, on the Tigris, 194 m. N.E. of Aleppo, and on the highway between Bagdad and Constantinople, with a large and busy bazaar.

DIARMID, the name of three kings in Ireland who flourished between the 6th and 11th centuries and are conspicuous in Irish legend.

DIASTASE, a nitrogenous substance developed during the germination of grain, and having the property of converting starch into dextrine and maltose or malt sugar, which undergoes further changes into alcohol; this is the essential process in the manufacture of beer.

DIATOMS, microscopic plants having skeletons of silica covering a jelly-like mass; they live and die on the bottom of the seas in such numbers that thick strata of their remains are formed, as in the Miocene beds of the western states of America.

DIABOLO, FRA (Hi, Brother Devil), Michele Pozza, a Calabrian, originally a monk, who left his monastery and joined a set of bandits, who lent themselves to and conducted insurrectionary movements in Italy; taken prisoner by the French, was hanged at Naples; Auber's opera, "Fra Diavolo," has no connection with him except the name (1760-1806).

DIAZ, BARTHELEMY, a Portuguese navigator, sent on a voyage of discovery by John II., in the command of two ships; sailed down the W. coast of Africa and doubled the Cape of Good Hope, which, from the storm that drove him past it, he called the Cape of Storms; returning to Lisbon he was superseded by Vasco da Gama, or rather subordinated to him; subsequently accompanied Cabral on his voyage to Brazil, and was lost in a storm in 1500.

DIAZ, MIGUEL, governor of Porto Rico, born in Aragon; friend and companion of Columbus; suffered from the usual jealousies in enterprises of the kind, but prevailed in the end; d. 1514.

DIAZ, PORFIRIO, Mexican politician. He was as a young man one of the leaders of the 1857 revolt against the French, and after the 1875 revolt against Juarez he became President, remaining in office till 1911 (1830-1915).

DIAZ DE LA PEÑA, NARCISSE, a French painter, born at Bordeaux, of Spanish descent; a landscapist of the Romantic school, eminent as a colourist (1809-1876).

DIAZ DEL CASTILLO, BERNAL, historian; accompanied Cortes to Mexico; took part in the conquest, and left a graphic, trustworthy account of it; died in Mexico, 1539.

DIAZO COMPOUNDS, organic compounds formed by the action of sodium nitrite on aniline and similar substances; discovered by Griess, a German chemist, in 1860, and are the starting point in the manufacture of the azo-dyes.

DIBDIN, CHARLES, musician, dramatist, and song-writer, born in Southampton; began life as an actor; invented a dramatic entertainment consisting of music, songs, and recitations, in which he was the sole performer, and of which he was for most part the author; wrote some 30 dramatic pieces, and it is said 1400 songs; his celebrity is wholly due to his sea-songs, which proved of the most inspiring quality, and did much to man the navy during the war with France; was the author of "Tom Bowling"; left an account of his "Professional Life" (1745-1814).

DIBDIN, THOMAS, dramatic author and song-writer, son of the preceding; was a versatile actor as well as an author; wrote a variety of plays, as well as numerous songs (1771-1841).

DIBDIN, THOMAS FROGNALL, bibliographer, nephew of Charles Dibdin, born in Calcutta; took orders in the Church of England; held several preferments; wrote several works, all more or less of a bibliographical character, which give proof of extensive research, but are lacking often in accuracy and critical judgment; was one of the founders of the Roxburghe Club (1778-1847).

DIGEARCHUS, an ancient geographer, born at Messina, 3rd century B.C.; a disciple of Aristotle.

DICK, JAMES, a West Indian and London merchant, born in Forres; bequeathed £113,787 to encourage learning and efficient teaching among the parish schoolmasters of Elgin, Banff, and Aberdeen shires; it is known as the Dick Bequest, and the property is vested in a governing body of thirteen duly elected (1743-1828).

DICKENS, CHARLES, celebrated English novelist, born at Landport, Portsmouth; son of a navy clerk, latterly in great straits: was brought up amid hardships: was sent to a solicitor's office as a clerk, learned shorthand, and became a reporter, a poet in which he learned much of what afterwards served him as an author: wrote sketches for the Monthly Magazine under the name of "Boz" in 1834, and the "Pickwick Papers" in 1836-1837, which established his popularity: these were succeeded by "Oliver Twist" in 1838, "Nicholas Nickleby" in 1839, "David Copperfield," partly autobiographical, in 1849, and others which it is needless to enumerate, as they are all known wherever the English language is spoken: they were all written with an aim, and as Ruskin witnesses, "he was entirely right in his main drift and purpose in every book he has written," though he thinks we are apt "to lose sight of his wit and insight, because he chooses to speak in a circle of stage fire. . . . Allowing for his manner of telling them, the things he tells us are always true": in 1850 he established the magazine Household Words, followed 9 years later by All the Year Round; being a born actor, he latterly gave public readings from his works, which were immensely popular, visiting the United States in this capacity; but the strain proved too much for him: he was seized with a fit at his residence, Gad's Hill, near Rochester, on June 9, 1870, and died the following morning (1812-1870).

DICKENS, SIR HENRY FIELDING, lawyer and son of the novelist. From 1892 to 1918 he was Recorder of Maldstone, and in 1918 became Common Serjeant for the City of London (1849-).

DICTATOR, a magistrate invested with absolute authority in ancient republican Rome in times of exigence and danger: the constitution obliged him to resign his authority at the end of six months, till which time he was free without challenge afterwards to do whatever the interest of the commonwealth seemed to him to require: the most famous dictators were Cincinnatus, Camillus, and Sulla, with Caesar, who was the last to be invested with this power: the office ceased with the fall of the republic, or rather, was merged in the perpetual dictatorship of the emperor.

DICTATOR OF LETTERS, Voltaire.

DICTYS CRETENSIS (i.e. of Crete), the reputed author of a narrative of the Trojan war from the birth of Paris to the death of Ulysses, extant only in a Latin translation: the importance attached to this narrative and others ascribed to the same author is that they are the source of many of the Greek legends we find inwoven from time to time in the mediæval literature that has come down to us.

DIDEROT, DENIS, a French philosopher, born at Langres, the son of a cutter there; a zealous propagator of the philosophic ideas of the 18th century, and the protector of the famous "Encyclopédie," which he edited with D'Alembert, and which made a great noise in its day, but did not enrich its founder, who was in the end driven to offer his library for sale to get out of the pecuniary difficulties it involved him in: he would have been ruined had not Catherine of Russia bought it, left it with him, and paid him a salary as librarian. Diderot fought hard to obtain a hearing for his philosophical opinions: his first book was burnt by order of the Parlement de Paris, while for his second he was clapped in jail; and all along he had to front the most formidable opposition, so formidable that all his fellow-workers were ready to yield, and were only held to their task by his indomitable resolution and unquenchable ardour (1713-1784).

DIDIUS, JULIANUS, a Roman emperor who in 193 purchased the imperial purple from the pretorian guards, and was after two months murdered by the soldiers when Severus was approaching the city.

DIDO, the daughter of Beus, king of Tyre, and the sister of Pygmalion, who, having succeeded to the throne on the death of his father, put Sichæus, her husband, to death for the sake of his wealth, whereupon she secretly took ship, sailed away from the city with the treasure, accompanied by a body of disaffected citizens, and founded Carthage, having picked up by the way 80 virgins from Cyprus to make wives for her male attendants: a neighbouring chief made suit for her hand, encouraged by her subjects, upon which, being bound by an oath of eternal fidelity to Sichæus, she erected a funeral pile and stabbed herself in presence of her subjects: Virgil makes her ascend the funeral pile out of grief for the departure of Aineas, with whom she was passionately in love.

DIDOT, the name of a French family of paper-makers, printers, and publishers, of which the most celebrated is Ambroise Firmin, born in Paris, a learned Hellenist (1790-1876).

DIDYMUS (twin), a surname of St. Thomas; also the name of a grammarian of Alexandria, a contemporary of Cleero, who wrote commentaries on Homer.

DIEBITZSCH, COUNT VON, a Russian general, born in Silesia; commander-in-chief in 1829 of the Russian army against Turkey, over the forces of which he gained a victory in the Balkans: commissioned to suppress a Polish insurrection, he was baffled in his efforts, and fell a victim to cholera (1785-1831).

DIEFFENBACH, LORENZ, a distinguished philologist and ethnologist, born at Ostheim, in the grand-duchy of Hesse: was for 11 years a pastor; in the end, until his death, librarian at Frankfurt-on-the-Main: his literary works were numerous and varied, chiefly on philological and ethnological subjects, and are monuments of learning (1806-1893).

DIEGO SUAREZ, BAY OF, is situated on the NE. of Madagascar, and has been ceded to France.

DIELECTRIC, electrical term for the insulating material separating the plates of a condenser.

DIEMEN, ANTONY VAN, governor of the Dutch possessions in India, born in Holland: was a zealous coloniser; at his instance Abel Tasman was sent to explore the South Seas, when he discovered the island which he named after him Van Diemen's Land, now Tasmania after the discoverer (1593-1645).

DIEPENBECK, ABRAHAM VAN, a Flemish painter and engraver (1599-1675).

DIEPPE, a French seaport on the English Channel, at the mouth of the river Arques, 93 m. NW. of Paris: a watering and bathing place, with fisheries and a good foreign trade.

DIES IRAE (the Day of Wrath), a Latin hymn on the Last Judgment, so called from its first words, based on Zeph. i. 14-18; it is ascribed to a monk of the name of Thomas de Celano, who died in 1255, and there are several translations of it in English, besides a paraphrastic rendering in the "Lay of the Last Minstrel," by Scott, and it is also the subject of a number of musical compositions.

DIESEL, RUDOLF, engineer, professor at Munich; inventor of the Diesel engine (1858-1913).

DIESEL ENGINE, an internal combustion engine using heavy oil as a fuel: the heat necessary to ignite oil is supplied by the compression of air in the cylinder.

DIEET, a convention of the princes, dignitaries, and delegates of the German empire, for legislative or administrative purposes, of which the most important historically are those diets which were held at Augsburg in 1518, at Worms in 1521, at Nuremberg in 1523, 1524, at Spire in 1526, 1529, at Augsburg in 1530, at Cologne in 1530, at Worms in 1536, at Frankfurt in 1539, at Ratisbon in 1541, at Spire in 1544, at Augsburg in 1547, 1548, 1550, and at Ratisbon in 1622.

DIETRICH, mayor of Strasburg, at whose request Couret de Lisle composed the "Marseillaise"; was guillotined (1748-1793).

DIETRICH OF REEN, a favourite hero of German legend, who in the "Nibelungen" avenges the death of Siegfried, and in the "Heldenbuch" figures as a knight-errant of invulnerable prowess, from whose challenge even Siegfried shrinks, hiding himself behind Chriemhilda's veil; has been identified with Theodorich the Great, king of the Ostrogoths.

DIEU ET MON DROIT (God and my Right), the British royal motto, first used by Henry VI. Its origin was a parole used at the battle of Glouen in 1198.

DIEZ, FRIEDRICH CHRISTIAN, a German philologist born at Glæsen; after service as a volunteer against Napoleon, and a tutorship at Utrecht, went to Bonn, where, advised by Goethe, he commenced the study of the Romance languages, and in 1830 became

- professor of them, the philology of which he is the founder; he left two great works bearing on the grammar and etymology of these languages (1794-1876).
- DIEZ, JUAN MARTIN, a Spanish brigadier-general of cavalry, born at Valladolid, the son of a peasant; had, as head of guerilla bands, done good service to his country during the Peninsular war and been promoted; offending the ruling powers, was charged with conspiracy, tried, and executed (1775-1825).
- DIFRACTION, the name given to the effect produced by the slight bending of a ray of light round an obstacle; in the early days of the wave theory of light it was urged against it that if light were a wave motion, it should pass round obstacles as sound does and not leave a shadow; experiment showed that light did bend round an obstacle to an extent consistent with its small wave-length.
- DIGBY, a seaport on the Bay of Fundy, Nova Scotia; noted for the curing of pilchards, called from it digbies.
- DIGBY, SIR EVERARD, member of a Roman Catholic family; concerned in the Gunpowder Plot, and executed (1581-1606).
- DIGBY, SIR KENNELM, a son of the preceding; was knighted by James I.; served under Charles I.; as a privateer defeated a squadron of Spaniards and fought against the Algerines; was imprisoned for a time as a Royalist; paid court afterwards to the Protector; was well received at the Restoration; was one of the first members of the Royal Society, and a man of some learning; wrote treatises on the Nature of Bodies and Man's Soul (1603-1665).
- DIHONG, the name given to the Brahmaputra as it traverses Assam; in the rainy season it overflows its channel and floods the whole lowlands of the country.
- DIJON, the ancient capital of Burgundy, and the principal town in the dep. of Côte d'Or, 195 m. S.E. of Paris, on the canal of Bourgogne; one of the finest towns in France, famous for its buildings, particularly its churches, and its situation; is a centre of manufacture and trade, and a seat of learning; the birthplace of many illustrious men, including Charles the Bold, Duke of Burgundy, Bossuet, and St. Bernard of Clairvaux.
- DIKE (i.e. Justice), a Greek goddess, the daughter of Zeus and Themis; the guardian of justice and judgment, the foe of deceit and violence, and the accuser before Zeus of the unjust judge.
- DIKTYS, the fisherman of Seriphos; saved Perseus and his mother from the perils of the deep.
- DILETTANTI SOCIETY, THE, a society of noblemen and gentlemen founded in England in 1734, which contributed to correct and purify the public taste of the country; their labours were devoted chiefly to the study of the relics of ancient Greek art, and resulted in the production of works in illustration.
- DILKE, CHARLES WENTWORTH, English critic and journalist; served for 20 years in the Navy Pay Office; contributed to the Westminster and other reviews; was proprietor and editor of the Athenaeum; started the Daily News; left literary Papers, edited by his grandson (1789-1864).
- DILKE, SIR CHARLES WENTWORTH, English publicist and politician, grandson of the preceding, born at Chelsea; called to the bar; travelled in America and the English colonies, and wrote a record of his travels in his "Greater Britain"; entered Parliament as an extreme Liberal; held office under Gladstone; from exposures in a divorce case had to retire from public life, but returned after a time (1843-1911).
- DILLMANN, CHRISTIAN, a great German Orientalist, born at Illingen, a village of Württemberg; studied under Ewald at Tübingen; became professor at Kiel, at Göttingen, and finally at Berlin; as professor of Old Testament exegesis made a special study of the Ethiopic languages, and is the great authority upon them; wrote a grammar and a lexicon of these, as well as works on theology (1823-1894).
- DILLON, a general in the service of France, born in Dublin; was butchered by his troops near Lille (1745-1792).
- DILLON, JOHN, an Irish patriot, born in New York; entered Parliament in 1880 as a Parnellite; was once suspended and four times imprisoned for his over-zeal; sat at first for Tipperary, and later for East Mayo; in 1891 threw in his lot with the M'Carthyites, and in 1915 succeeded John Redmond as leader of the Irish Parliamentary Party (1851-1927).
- DIMANCHE, M. (Mr. Sunday), a character in Molière's "Don Juan," the type of an honest merchant, whom, on presenting his bill, his creditor appeases by his politeness.
- DIME, a U.S. silver coin, worth the tenth part of a dollar, or about fivepence.
- DINAN, an old town in the dep. of Côtes du Nord, France, 14 m. S. of St. Malo; most picturesque situated on the top of a steep hill, amid romantic scenery, of great archaeological interest; the birthplace of Ducloux.
- DINANT, an old town on the Meuse, 14 m. S. of Namur, Belgium; noted for its gingerbread, and formerly for its copper wares, called Dinanderie. The town was almost completely destroyed by the Germans during the 1914 invasion, but was later rebuilt. The Germans entered on August 23, and declaring that the civil population had fired on them, they burnt the town and shot 665 of the inhabitants, including 70 women and 40 babies.
- DINAPUR, a town and military station on the right bank of the Ganges, 12 m. N.W. of Patna.
- DINARCIUS, the name of the orator of the Phocion party in Athens, born at Corinth.
- DINARIO ALPS, a range of the Eastern Alps between Dalmatia and Bosnia; runs S.E. and parallel with the Adriatic, connecting the Julian Alps with the Balkans.
- DINDORF, CARL WILHELM, a German philologist, born at Leipzig; devoted his life to the study of the ancient Greek classics, particularly the dramatists, and edited the chief of them, as well as the "Iliad" and "Odyssey" of Homer, with notes; was joint-editor with his brothers Ludwig and Hase of the "Thesaurus Graeco Linguae" of Stephanus (1802-1853).
- DINGELSDT, FRANZ FERDINAND VON, a German poet, novelist, and essayist, born near Marburg; was the Duke of Württemberg's librarian at Stuttgart, and theatre superintendent at Munich, Weimar, and Vienna successively; his poems show delicacy of sentiment and graphic power (1814-1881).
- DINGO, the Australian wild dog, usually of a yellow colour; fox-like in appearance, but more powerfully built; has been tamed by the aborigines for hunting purposes.
- DINGWALL, the county town of Ross-shire, at the head of the Cromarty Firth.
- DINKAS, an African pastoral people occupying a flat country traversed by the White Nile; of good stature, clean habits, and semi-civilised manners, but ferocious in war.
- DINOCRATES, a Macedonian architect, who, in the time of Alexander the Great, rebuilt the Temple of Ephesus destroyed by the torch of Erostratus; was employed by Alexander in the building of Alexandria.
- DINOSAURS, reptiles which dominated the land in the Mesozoic Period; most of them were bipeds, but some, like the Brontosaurus and Diplodocus, were quadrupeds; this group includes the largest land animals that ever lived.
- DIODOTIAN, Roman emperor from 284 to 305, born at Salona, in Dalmatia, of obscure parentage; having entered the Roman army, served with distinction, rose rapidly to the highest rank, and was at Chalcedon, after the death of Numerianus, invested by the troops with the imperial purple; in 286 he associated Maximianus with himself as joint emperor, with the title of Augustus, and in 292 resigned the Empire of the West to Constantius Chlorus and Galerius, so that the Roman world was divided between two emperors in the E. and two in the W.; in 303, at the instance of Galerius, he commenced and carried on a fierce persecution of the Christians, the tenth and fiercest; but in 305, weary of ruling, he abdicated and retired to Salona, where he spent his remaining eight years in rustic simplicity of life, cultivating his garden; bating his persecution of the Christians, he ruled the Roman world wisely and well (245-313).
- DIODATI, JEAN, a Calvinistic theologian, born at Lucca; was taken while a child with his family to Geneva; distinguished himself there in the course of the Reformation as a pastor, a preacher, professor of Hebrew, and a professor of theology; translated the Bible into Italian and into French; a nephew of his (Charles) was a schoolfellow and friend of Milton, who wrote an elegy on his untimely death (1678-1649).

DIODORUS SICULUS, historian, born in Sicily, of the age of Augustus; conceived the idea of writing a universal history; spent 80 years at the work; produced what he called "The Historical Library," which embraced the period from the earliest ages to the end of Caesar's Gallic war, and was divided into 40 books, of which only a few survive entire, and some fragments of the rest.

DIOGENES LAERTIUS, a Greek historian, born at Laerte, in Cilicia; flourished in the 2nd century A.D.; author of "Lives of the Philosophers," a work written in 10 books; is full of interesting information regarding the men, but is destitute of critical insight into their systems.

DIOGENES OF APOLLONIA, a Greek philosopher of the Ionic school, and an adherent of Anaximenes (q.v.), if of any one, being more of an eclectic than anything else; took more to physics than philosophy; contributed nothing to the philosophic movement of the time.

DIOGENES THE CYNIC, born in Sinope, in Pontus, came to Athens, was attracted to Antisthenes (q.v.), and became a disciple; dressed himself in the coarsest garb, lived on the plainest diet, slept in the porches of the temples, and finally took up his dwelling, it is related, in a tub; would not have anything to do with what did not contribute to the enhancement of life; despised every one who sought satisfaction in anything else; is said to have gone through the highways and byways of the city at noon with a lantern in quest of an honest man; a man himself not to be laughed at or despised; visiting Corinth, he was accosted by Alexander the Great: "I am Alexander," said the king, and "I am Diogenes" was the prompt reply: "Can I do any thing to serve you?" continued the king: "Yes, stand out of the sunlight," rejoined the cynic; upon which Alexander turned away saying, "If I were not Alexander, I would be Diogenes"; while on a voyage to Aegina he fell into the hands of pirates and, being sold as a slave, was taken to Corinth; died at the latter place (412-323 B.C.).

DIOGENES THE STOIC, born in Seleucia; a successor of Zeno, and head of the school at Athens, 2nd century B.C.

DIOMEDES, king of Argos, called Tydides, from his father; was, next to Achilles, the bravest of the Greeks at the Trojan war; fought under the protection of Athens against both Hector and Aeneas, and even wounded both Aphrodite and Ares; dared along with Ulysses to carry off the palladium from Troy; was first in the chariot race in honour of Patroclus, and overcame Ajax with the spear.

DIOMEDES, king of Thrace; fed his horses with human flesh, and was killed by Hercules for his inhumanity.

DION CASSIUS, a Greek historian, born at Nicæa, in Bithynia, about A.D. 155; went to Rome, and served under a succession of emperors; wrote a "History of Rome" from Aeneas to Alexander Severus in 80 books, of which only 18 survive entire; it is of great value, and often referred to.

DION CHRYSOSTOMUS (Dion with the golden, or eloquent, mouth), a celebrated Greek rhetorician, born at Prusa, in Bithynia, about the middle of the 1st century; inclined to the Platonic and Stoic philosophies; came to Rome, and was received with honour by the Emperors Nerva and Trajan; is famous as an orator and as a writer of pure Attic Greek.

DION OF SYRACUSE, a pupil of Plato, and an austere man; was from his austerity obnoxious to his pleasure-loving nephew, Dionysius the Younger; subjected to banishment; went to Athens; learned his estates had been confiscated, and his wife given to another; took up arms, drove his nephew from the throne, usurped his place, and was assassinated in 353 B.C., the citizens finding that in getting rid of one tyrant they had but saddled themselves with another, and greater.

DIONE, a Greek goddess of the earlier mythology; figures as the wife of the Dodonian Zeus and mother of Aphrodite; drops into subordinate place after the god's nuptials with Hera.

DIONYSIUS THE ELDER, tyrant of Syracuse from 430 to 367 B.C.; at first a private citizen; early took interest in public affairs, and played a part in them; entered the army, and rose to be head of the State; subdued the other cities of Sicily, and declared war against Carthage; was attacked by the Carthaginians, and defeated them three times over; concluded a treaty of peace with them, and spent the rest of his reign, some 20 years, in maintaining and extending his territory; was distinguished, it is said, both as a poet and a philosopher; tradition represents him as in perpetual terror of his life, and taking every precaution to guard it from attack.

DIONYSIUS THE YOUNGER, tyrant of Syracuse, son of the preceding, succeeded him in 367 B.C. at the age of thirty; had never taken part in public affairs; was given over to vicious indulgences, and proved incapable of amendment, though Dion (q.v.) tried hard to reform him; was unpopular with the citizens, who with the help of Dion, whom he had banished, drove him from the throne; returning after 10 years, was once more expelled by Timoleon of Sicily; betook himself to Corinth, where he associated himself with low people, and supported himself by keeping a school.

DIONYSIUS OF ALEXANDRIA, patriarch from 348, a disciple of Origen, and his most illustrious pupil; a firm but judicious defender of the faith against the heretics of the time, in particular the Sabellians and the Chilistae; d. 264.

DIONYSIUS, ST., THE AREOPAGITE (i.e. judge of the Areopagus, according to Acts xvii. 34, a convert of St. Paul's; became bishop of Athens, and died a martyr; in 95; was long regarded as the father of mysticism in the Christian Church; on the false assumption that he was the author of writings of a much later date imbued with a pantheistic idea of God and the universe.

DIONYSIUS OF HALICARNASSUS, a Greek historian and rhetorician of the age of Augustus; came to Italy in 29 B.C., and spent 27 years in Rome, where he died; devoted himself to the study of the Roman republic, its history and its people, and recorded the result in his "Archæologia," written in Greek, which brings down the narrative to 264 B.C.; it consisted of 20 books, of which only 9 have come down to us entire; he is the author of works in criticism of the orators, poets, and historians of Greece.

DIONYSIUS PERIEGETES, a Greek geographer who lived about the 4th century, and wrote a description of the whole earth in hexameters and in a terse and elegant style.

DIONYSUS, the god of the vine or wine; the son of Zeus and Semele (q.v.), the "twice born," as plucked first from the womb of his dead mother and afterwards brought forth from the thigh of Zeus, which served to him as his "incubator." See BACCHUS.

DIOPHANTUS, a Greek mathematician, born in Alexandria; lived presumably about the 4th century; left works in which algebraic methods are employed, and is therefore credited with being the inventor of algebra.

DIOPTRE, the unit used for measuring the power of a lens; it is the reciprocal of its focal length expressed in metres.

DIOSCORIDES, a Greek physician, born in Cilicia, lived in the 1st century; left a treatise in 5 books on materia medica, a work of great research, and long the standard authority on the subject.

DIOSCURI, twin sons of Zeus, Castor and Pollux, a stalwart pair of youths, of the Doric stock, the former great as a horse-breaker and the latter as a boxer; were worshipped at Sparta as guardians of the State, and pre-eminently as patrons of gymnastics; protected the hearth, led the army in war, and were the convoy of the traveller by land and the voyager by sea, which, as the constellation Gemini, they are still held to be.

DIP, the angle which a magnetic needle makes with the horizontal, when it is suspended so that it can swing freely in a vertical plane at right angles to the magnetic meridian; at the magnetic poles the dip is ninety degrees and on the magnetic equator zero.

DIPHILUS, a Greek comic poet, born at Sinope; contemporary of Menander; was the forerunner of Terence and Plautus, the Roman poets.

DIPHTHERIA, a contagious disease characterised by the formation of a false membrane on the back of the throat. The disease has been much less deadly since antitoxin treatment was introduced. See ANTITOXIN.

DIPLODOCUS, a large reptile of the Dinosaur family, about 50 or 60 feet in length, remains of which have been found in America in strata of Jurassic age; it was an herbivorous quadruped.

DIPPEL, JOHANN KONRAD, a celebrated German alchemist; professed to have discovered the philosopher's stone; did discover Prussian blue, and an animal oil that bears his name (1672-1734).

DIPPEL'S OIL, an oil obtained from the distillation of horn bones.

DIOCE, the wife of Lycus, king of Thebes, who for her cruelty to Antiope, her divorced predecessor, was, by Antiope's two sons, Zethos and Amphion, tied to a wild bull and dragged to death, after which her carcass was flung by them into a well; the subject is represented in a famous antique group by Apollonius and Tauriscus.

DIRECTORY, THE, the name given to the government of France, consisting of a legislative body of two chambers, the Council of the Ancients and the Council of Five Hundred, which succeeded the fall of the Convention, and ruled France from October 27, 1795, till its overthrow by Bonaparte on the 18th Brumaire (November 9, 1799). The Directors proper were five in number, and were elected by the later council from a list presented by the former, and the chief members of it were Barras and Carnot.

DIRSCHAU, a thriving town on the Vistula, 21 m. SE. of Danzig, with ironworks and a timber trade.

DIRT TRACK RACING, the sport of riding motorcycles round tracks made of loose earth; first introduced from Australia in 1927, it soon attracted large crowds of spectators.

DIS, a name given to Pluto and the nether world over which he rules.

DISCIPLINE, THE TWO BOOKS OF, books of dates 1581 and 1581, regulative of ecclesiastical order in the Presbyterian churches of Scotland, of which the ground-plan was drawn up by Knox on the Geneva model.

DISCOBOLUS, THE, an antique statue representing the thrower of the discus, in the Louvre, and executed by the sculptor Myron.

DISCORD, THE GODDESS OF, a mischief-making divinity, daughter of Night and sister of Mars, who on the occasion of the wedding of Thetis with Peleus, threw into the hall where all the gods and goddesses were assembled a golden apple inscribed "To the most Beautiful," which act gave rise to dissensions that both disturbed the peace of Olympus and the impartial administration of justice on earth. See PARIS.

DISESTABLISHMENT, the withdrawal of State aid from the Church. The question was a political one in England at the end of the 19th century, and talk of it was revived when the House of Commons twice rejected the revised Prayer Book of 1927. The Church of Ireland was disestablished in 1869 and the Church of Wales in 1920.

DISMAS, ST., the good thief to whom Christ promised Paradise as he hung on the cross beside Him.

DISPERSION. When white light is refracted at the surface between two media, the red rays are deviated less than the blue, and the resultant image has a coloured border. This is corrected in optical instruments by using two lenses of different glass, one compensating for the dispersion of the other.

ISRAELI, BENJAMIN. See BEACONSFIELD.

D'ISRAELI, ISAAC, a man of letters, born at Enfield, Middlesex; only son of a Spanish Jew settled in England, who left him a fortune, which enabled him to cultivate his taste for literature; was the author of several works, but is best known by his "Curiosities of Literature," a work published in six vols., full of anecdotes on the quarrels and calamities of authors; was never a strict Jew; finally cut the connection, and had his children baptised as Christians (1766-1848).

DITHYRAMB, a hymn in a lofty and vehement style, originally in honour of Bacchus, in celebration of his sorrows and joys, and accompanied with flute music.

DITMARSH, a low-lying fertile district in West Holstein, between the estuaries of the Elbe and the Eider; defended by dykes; it had a legal code of its own known as the "Ditmarsches Landbuch."

DITTON, HUMPHREY, author of a book on fluxions (1675-1715).

DIU, a small Portuguese island, with a port of the same name, in the Gulf of Cambay, S. of the peninsula of Gujarat, India; was a flourishing place once, and contained a famous Hindu temple; inhabited now chiefly by fishermen.

DIVAN, THE, a collection of poems by Hafiz, containing nearly 600 odes; also a collection of lyrics in imitation of Goethe, entitled "Westöstlicher Divan."

DIVES, the name given, originally in the Vulgate, to the rich man in the parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus.

DIVIDING RANGE, a range of mountains running E. from Melbourne, and then N., dividing the basin of the Murray from the plain extending to the coast.

DIVINE COMEDY, THE, the great poem of Dante Alighieri, consisting of three compartments, "Inferno," "Purgatorio," and "Paradiso"; "three kingdoms . . . Dante's World of Souls . . . all three making up the true Unseen World, as it figured in the Christianity of the Middle Ages"; the poem describes how, in a vision, Dante passes through hell, purgatory, and heaven, led by Virgil, Beatrice, and St. Bernard. See DANTE, and Carlyle's "Heroes and Hero-Worship."

DIVINE DOCTOR, Jean de Ruysbroek, the mystic (1294-1381).

DIVINE PAGAN, Hypatia (q.v.).

DIVINE RIGHT, a claim on the part of kings, now all but extinct, though matter of keen debate at one time, that they derive their authority to rule direct from the Almighty, and are responsible to no inferior power, a right claimed especially on the part of and in behalf of the Bourbons in France and the Stuart dynasty in England, and the denial of which was regarded by them and their partisans as an outrage against the ordinance of very Heaven.

DIXIE LAND, nigger land in U.S.

DIXMUDE, town in the province of W. Flanders, Belgium, on the river Yser 12 m. N. of Ypres. It was the scene of much fighting in the autumn of 1914, and was finally recaptured by the Belgians in Sept., 1918.

DIXON, WILLIAM HEPPWORTH, an English writer and journalist, born in Manchester; called to the bar, but devoted himself to literary work; wrote Lives of Howard, Penn. Robert Blake, and Lord Bacon. "New America," "Spiritual Wives," &c.; was editor of the Athenaeum from 1853 to 1869; died suddenly (1821-1879).

DIZIER, ST., a flourishing French town, 30 m. from Chalons-sur-Marne.

DJEZZAR (i.e. Butcher), the surname of Achmed Pasha, of Acre; was born in Bosnia; was sold as a slave, and raised himself by his servility to his master to the length of executing his cruellest wishes; in 1799 withstood a long siege of Acre by Bonaparte, and obliged him to retire (1785-1804).

DNIEPER, a river of Russia, anciently called the Borysthenes, the third largest for volume of water in Europe, surpassed only by the Danube and the Volga; rises in the province of Smolensk, and flowing in a generally southerly direction, falls into the Black Sea below Kherson after a course of 1330 m.; it traverses some of the finest provinces of the country, and is navigable nearly its entire length.

DNIESTER, a river which takes its rise in Austria, in the Carpathians, enters Russia, flows generally in a SE. direction past Bender, and after a rapid course of 650 m. falls into the Black Sea at Akermans.

DOAB, THE, a richly fertile, densely peopled territory in the Punjab, between the Jumna and Ganges, and extending 500 m. N., that is, as far as the Himalayas; it is the granary of Upper India.

- DOBELL, SIDNEY, poet, born at Cranbrook, in Kent; wrote, under the pseudonym of Sidney Yendys, the "Roman," a drama, "Balder," and, along with Alexander Smith, sonnets on the war (the Crimean); suffered much from weak health (1824-1874).
- DÖBEREINER'S LAME, a light caused by a jet of hydrogen passing over spongy platinum; named after Johann Döbereiner, a German chemist (1780-1849).
- DOBROVSKÍ, JOSEPH, a philologist, born in Gyarmet, in Hungary; devoted his life to the study of the Bohemian language and literature; wrote a history of them, the fruit of immense labour, under which his brain gave way more than once; was trained among the Jesuits (1768-1829).
- DÖBENTZ, HUNGARIAN archaeologist; devoted 80 years of his life to the study of the Magyar language; author of "Ancient Monuments of the Magyar Language" (1786-1851).
- DOBRUDJA, the part of Rumania between the Danube and the Black Sea, a barren, unwholesome district; rears herds of cattle.
- DOBBON, AUSTIN, poet and prose writer, born at Plymouth, held appointment in a department of the Civil Service; wrote "Vignettes in Rhyme," "Proverbs in Prose," "Old World Idylls," in verse, and in prose Lives of Fielding, Hogarth, Steele, and Goldsmith; contributed extensively to the magazines (1840-1921).
- DOBSON, WILLIAM, portrait-painter, born in London; succeeded Vandryk as king's serjeant-painter to Charles I.; painted the king and members of his family and court; supreme in his art prior to Sir Joshua Reynolds; died in poverty (1610-1646).
- DOCTE, a sect of heretics in the early Church who held that the humanity of Christ was only seeming, not real, on the Gnostic or Manichean theory of the essential impurity and defiling nature of matter or the flesh.
- DOCTOR SYNTAX. See COMBE, WILLIAM.
- DOCTORS' COMMONS, a college of doctors of the civil law in London, where they used to eat in common, and where eventually a number of the courts of law were held.
- DOCTRINAIRES, mere theorists, particularly on social and political questions; applied originally to a political party that arose in France in 1815, headed by Royer-Collard and represented by Guizot, which stood up for a constitutional government that should steer clear of acknowledging the divine right of kingship on the one hand and the divine right of democracy on the other.
- DODABETTA, the highest peak, 8700 ft., in the Nilgherries.
- DODD, FRANCIS, British artist. He was one of the official artists of the Great War, and connected with the New English Art Club (1874-).
- DODD, DR. WILLIAM, an English divine, born at Bourne, Lincolnshire; was one of the royal chaplains; attracted fashionable audiences as a preacher in London, but lived extravagantly, and fell hopelessly into debt, and into disgrace for the nefarious device he adopted to get out of it; forged a bond for £4500 on the Earl of Chesterfield, who had been a pupil of his; was arrested, tried, convicted, and sentenced to death, a sentence which was carried out notwithstanding the great exertions made to procure a pardon; wrote a "Commentary on the Bible," and compiled "The Beauties of Shakespeare" (1729-1777).
- DODDRIDGE, PHILIP, a Nonconformist divine, born in London; was minister at Keworth, Market Harborough, and Northampton successively, and much esteemed both as a man and a teacher; suffered from pulmonary complaint; went to Lisbon for a change, and died there; was the author of "The Family Expositor," but is best known by his "Rise and Progress of Babel in the Soul," and perhaps also by his "Life of Colonel Gardiner" (1702-1751).
- DÖDERLEIN, LUDWIG, a German philologist, born at Jena; became professor of Philology at Erlangen; edited Tacitus, Horace, and other classic authors, but his principal works were on the etymology of the Latin language (1791-1863).
- DODGER, THE ARTFUL, a young expert in theft and other villainies in Dickens' "Oliver Twist."
- DODGSON, CHARLES LUTWIDGE, English writer and man of genius, with the nom de plume of Lewis Carroll; distinguished himself at Oxford in mathematics; author of "Alice's Adventures in Wonderland," with its sequel, "Through the Looking Glass," besides other works, mathematical, poetic, and humorous; mingled humour and science together (1833-1898).
- DODINGTON, GEORGE BUBE, an English politician, notorious for his sickleness, siding now with this party, now with that; worked for and won a peerage as Lord Melcombe before he died; with all his pretensions, and they were many, a mere dunkey at bottom (1691-1762).
- DODO, an ungainly bird larger than a turkey, with short scaly legs, a big head and bill, short wings and tail, and greyish down plumage, now extinct, though it is known to have existed in the Mauritius some 200 years ago.
- DODONA, an ancient oracle of Zeus, in Epirus, close by a grove of oak trees, from the agitation of the branches of which the mind of the god was construed, the interpreters being at length three old women; it was more or less a local oracle, and was ere long superseded by the more widely known oracle of Delphi (q.v.).
- DODS, MEG, an old landlady of consistently inconsistent qualities in "St. Roman's Well"; also the pseudonym of the authoress of a book on cookery.
- DODSLEY, ROBERT, an English poet, dramatist, and publisher; wrote a drama called "The Toyshop," which, through Pope's influence, was acted in Drury Lane with such success as to enable the author to commence business as a bookseller in Pall Mall; projected and published the Miscellany, and continued to write plays, the most popular "Cleone"; is best known in connection with his "Collection of Old Plays"; he was a patron of Johnson, and much esteemed by him (1708-1764).
- DOEG, a herdman of Saul (1 Sam. xxi. 7); a name applied by Dryden to Elkanah Settle in "Absalom and Achitophel."
- DOGBERRY, a self-satisfied night constable in "Much Ado about Nothing."
- DOG-DAYS, 20 days before and 20 days after the rising of the dog-star Sirius, at present from July 3 to August 11.
- DOGE, the name of the chief magistrate of Venice and Genoa, elected at first annually and then for life in Venice, with, in course of time, powers more and more limited, at a length becoming little more than a figure-head; the office ceased with the fall of the republic in 1797, as it did in Genoa in 1804.
- DOGGER BANK, a sandbank in the North Sea; a great fishing-field extending between Jutland in Denmark and Yorkshire in England, though distant from both shores, 170 m. long, over 60 m. broad, and from 8 to 10 fathoms deep. It was the scene of a British naval victory over the Germans in January, 1915.
- DOGGETT'S COAT AND BADGE, a prize competed for annually by the watermen of the Thames, inaugurated in 1715 by Thomas Doggett, a Drury Lane actor of George I.'s reign.
- DOGS, ISLE OF, a low-lying projection of a square mile in extent from the left bank of the Thames, opposite Greenwich, and 5½ m. E. of St. Paul's.
- DOLABELLA, PUBLIUS, son-in-law of Cicero, a profligate man, joined Caesar, and was raised by him to the consulship; joined Caesar's murderers after his death; was declared from his profligacy a public enemy; driven to bay by a force sent against him, ordered one of his soldiers to kill him.
- DOLCI, CARLO, a Florentine painter, came of a race of artists; produced many fine works, the subjects of them chiefly madonnas, saints, &c. (1616-1686).
- DOLOMO, a heresiarch and martyr of the 14th century, of the Apostolic Brethren, a sect which rose in Piedmont who made themselves obnoxious to the Church; was driven to bay by his persecutors, and at last caught and tortured and burnt to death; a similar fate overtook others of the sect, to its extermination.
- DOLDRUMS, a zone of the tropics where calms lasting for some weeks prevail, broken at times by squalls and baffling winds.

DOLE, a town in the dep. of Jura, on the Doubs, and the Rhône and Rhine Canal, 28 m. SE. of Dijon, with ironworks, and a trade in wine, grain, &c.

DOLE, a charitable grant of money or food. The word came to be applied loosely both to outdoor relief paid by the guardians and the weekly benefit paid under the Unemployment Insurance Act.

DOLÉ, STIENNE, a learned French humanist, born in Orleans, became, by the study of the classics, one of the lights of the Renaissance, and one of its most zealous propagandists; suffered persecution after persecution at the hands of the Church, and was burned in the Place Maubert, Paris, a martyr to his philocephic zeal and opinions (1509-1546).

DOLGELLY, county town of Merioneth, Wales, with woollen manufactures; Cader Idris, 2920 ft., is in the vicinity.

DOLGOROUKI, the name of a noble and illustrious Russian family.

DOLLART ZEE, a gulf in Holland into which the Ems flows, 8 m. long by 7 broad, and formed by inundation of the North Sea.

DOLLINGER, JOHANN JOSEPH IGNAZ VON, a Catholic theologian, born in Bamberg, Bavaria, professor of Church History in the University of Munich; head of the Old Catholic party in Germany; was at first a zealous Ultramontanist, but changed his opinions and became quite as zealous in opposing first, the temporal sovereignty, and then the infallibility of the Pope, to his excommunication from the Church; he was a polemic, and as such wrote extensively on theological and ecclesiastical topics; lived to a great age, and was much honoured to the last (1790-1890).

DOLLOND, JOHN, a mathematical instrument-maker, born in Spitalfields, London, of Dutch descent; began life as a silk-weaver; made good use of his leisure hours in studies bearing mainly on physics; went into partnership with his son, who was an optician; made a study of the telescope, suggested improvements which commended themselves to the Royal Society, and in particular how, by means of a combination of lenses, to get rid of the coloured fringe in the image (1708-1761).

DOLMEN, a rude structure of prehistoric date in France, equivalent to the cromlech (q.v.), consisting of upright unburnt stones supporting one or more heavy slabs; long regarded as altars of sacrifice, but now believed to be sepulchral monuments; found in great numbers in Brittany especially.

DOLOMITTE, a double carbonate of lime and magnesia, common in some limestones such as the magnesian limestone of Permian age of Yorkshire and Durham, and the rocks of the Dolomites of the Eastern Alps.

DOLOMITTE ALPS, a limestone mountain range forming the S. of the Eastern Alps, in the Tyrol, Italy, famous for the remarkable and fantastic shapes they assume; named after Dolomieu, a French mineralogist, who studied the geology of them.

DOLAT, JEAN, a learned French jurist and friend of Pascal, regarded laws and customs as the reflex of political history (1625-1696).

DOMBAULE, an eminent French agriculturist, born at Nancy (1771-1818).

DOM-BOKÉ (i.e. Doom-book), a code of laws compiled by King Alfred from two prior Saxon codes, to which he prefixed the Ten Commandments of Moses, and rules of life from the Christian code of ethics.

DOMBROWSKI, JAN HENRYK, a Polish general, served in the Polish campaigns against Russia and Prussia in 1792-1794; organised a Polish legion which did good service in the wars of Napoleon; covered the retreat of the French at the Beresina in 1812 (1765-1818).

DOMDAMEN, a hall under the ocean, near Tunis, where the evil spirits and magicians hold council under their chief and pay him homage, according to the Continuation of the "Arabian Nights."

DOMENICHI NO, DOMENICO ZAMPIERI, a celebrated Italian painter, born at Bologna; studied under Calvaert and Carracci; was of the Bolognese school, and reckoned one of the first of them; his principal works are his "Communion of St. Jerome," now in the Vatican, and the "Martyrdom of St. Agnes," at Bologna, the former being regarded as his masterpiece; he was the victim of persecution at the hands of rivals; died at Naples, not without suspicion of having been poisoned (1581-1641).

DOMESDAY BOOK, the record (since printed in 2 vols.) of the survey of all the lands of England made between 1084 and 1086 at the instance of William the Conqueror for purposes of taxation; the survey included the whole of England, except the four northern counties and part of Lancashire, and was made by commissioners appointed by the king and sent to the different districts of the country, where they held courts and registered everything on evidence.

DOMETT, ALFRED, New Zealand politician and poet; born in Surrey, went to New Zealand and ultimately became a member of the Government; published "Ranolf and Amohia" and other verse; was the original of "Waring" in Browning's poem (1811-1887).

DOMINANCE, term used in biology to express the fact that when an offspring receives the genes (g.p.) of two contrasting characters from its two parents in many cases, one of the characters (the dominant) will develop to the exclusion of the other, instead of combining; the repressed character (the recessive) may reappear in the next generation; for example, a cross between pure-bred, horned and hornless cattle produces offspring which are all hornless, but if these were mated some horned animals might be found among their descendants.

DOMINIO DE GUZMAN, ST., saint of the Catholic Church, born in Old Castile; distinguished for his zeal in the conversion of the heretic; essayed the task by simple preaching of the Word; sanctioned persecution when persuasion was of no avail; countenanced the crusade of Simon de Montfort against the Albigenses for their obstinate unbelief, and thus established a precedent which was all too relentlessly followed by the agents of the Spanish Inquisition, the chiefs of which were of the Dominican order, so that he is ignominiously remembered as the "burner and slayer of heretics" (1170-1221). Festival, Aug. 4.

DOMINICA or DOMINIQUE, the largest and most southerly of the Leeward Islands, belonging to Britain; one-half of the island is forest, and parts of it have never been explored; was discovered by Columbus on Sunday, November 3, 1493, whence its name.

DOMINICAL or SUNDAY LETTER, is used for calendar purposes; each year is given one of the letters A to G corresponding to the date of the first Sunday in the year; if Jan. 1 falls on a Sunday, A; on a Saturday, B; on a Friday, C, etc. A leap year will have two letters, one for the first two months and a second for the remainder of the year.

DOMINICAN REPUBLIC, or SAN DOMINGO, a republic forming the E. part of the island of Hayti, and consisting of two-thirds of it; it belonged alternately to France and Spain till 1865, when, on revolt, the Spaniards were expelled, and a republic established; the capital is San Domingo, and the chief port Puerto Plata.

DOMINICANS, a religious order of preaching friars, founded at Toulouse in 1215 by St. Dominic, to aid in the conversion of the heretic Albigenses to the faith, and finally established as the order whose especial charge it was to guard the orthodoxy of the Church. The order was known by the name of Black Friars in England, from their dress; and Jacobins in France, from the street of Paris in which they had their headquarters.

DOMINIONS OFFICE, TER, the government department dealing with the self-governing Dominions, instituted in 1925, till when its work had been done since 1854 by the Colonial Office.

DOMINUS MARCO ANTONIO DE, a vacillating ecclesiastic, born in Dalmatia; was educated by the Jesuits; taught mathematics in Padua; wrote a treatise in which an explanation was for the first time given of the phenomenon of the rainbow; became archbishop of Spalatro; falling under suspicion he passed over to England, professed Protestantism, and was made dean of Windsor; reconciled to the Papacy, returned to the Church of Rome, and left the country; his sincerity being distrusted, was cast into prison, where he died, his body being afterwards disinterred and burned (1506-1624).

DOMITIAN, Roman emperor, son of Vespasian, brother of Titus, whom he succeeded in 81, the last of the twelve Cæsars; exceeded the expectations of every one in the beginning of his reign, as he had given proof of a licentious and sanguinary character beforehand, but soon his conduct changed, and fulfilled the worst fears of his subjects; his vanity was wounded by the non-success of his arms, and his vengeful spirit showed itself in a wholesale murder of the citizens; many conspiracies were formed against his life, and he at length murdered by an assassin, who had been hired by his courtiers and abetted by his wife Domitia, in 96.

DOMREMY, a small village on the Meuse, in the dep. of Voeges; the birthplace of Joan of Arc.

DON, a Russian river, the ancient Tanais; flows southward from its source in the province of Tula, and after a course of 1163 m. falls into the Sea of Azov; also the name of a river in Aberdeenshire, and another in Yorkshire.

DON JUAN, the member of a distinguished family of Seville, who seduces the daughter of a noble, and when confronted by her father stabs him to death in a duel; he afterwards prepares a feast and invites the stone statue of his victim to partake of it; the stone statue turns up at the feast, compels Don Juan to follow him, and delivers him over to the abyss of hell, for the depths of which he had qualified himself by his depravity. The story has provided plays by Molière and Cornelle, and an opera by Mozart.

DON QUIXOTE, the title of a world-famous book written by Miguel Cervantes, in satire of the romances of chivalry with which his countrymen were so fascinated; the chief character of the story gives title to it, a worthy gentleman of La Mancha, whose head is so turned by reading tales of knight-errantry, that he fancies he is a knight-errant himself, sallies forth in quest of adventures, and encounters them in the most commonplace incidents, among his most ridiculous extravaganzas being his tilting with the wind-mills, and his over-weening regard he has for his Dulcinea del Toboso.

DONALDSON, JOHN WILLIAM, a philologist, born in London; Fellow of Cambridge and tutor of Trinity College; author of "New Cratylus; or Contributions towards a more Accurate Knowledge of the Greek Language," a work of great erudition and of value to scholars; contributed also to the philological study of Latin, and wrote a grammar of both languages; he failed when he intruded into the field of Biblical criticism (1811-1861).

DONATELLO, a great Italian sculptor, born at Florence, where he was apprenticed to a goldsmith; tried his hand at carving in leisure hours; went to Rome and studied the monuments of ancient art; returned to Florence and executed an "Annunciation," still preserved in a chapel in Santa Croce, which was followed by marble statues of St. Peter, St. Mark, and St. George, before one of which, that of St. Mark, Michael Angelo exclaimed, "Why do you not speak to me?" he executed tombs and figures, or groups in bronze as well as marble; his schoolmasters were the sculptors of Greece, and the real was his ultimate model (1386-1460).

DONATI, GIOVANNI BATTISTA, an Italian astronomer, born at Pisa; discoverer of the comet of 1858, called Donati's comet (1826-1873).

DONATISTS, a sect in N. Africa, founded by Donatus, bishop of Carthage, in the 4th century, that separated from the rest of the Church and formed itself into an exclusive community, with bishops and congregations of its own, on the ground that no one was entitled to be a member of Christ's body, or an overseer of Christ's flock, who was not of divine election, this stand being taken in the face of an attempt, backed by the Emperor Constantine, to thrust a bishop on the Church at Carthage, consecrated by an authority that had betrayed and sold the Church to the world; Donatus, a rival bishop, gave his name to the party; the members of it were subject to cruel persecutions in which they gloried, and were annihilated by the Saracens in the 7th century.

DONATUS, ZELIUS, a Latin grammarian and rheto-

rician of the 4th century, the teacher of St. Jerome; the author of treatises in grammar known as Donats, which, with the sacred Scriptures, were the earliest examples of printing by means of letters cut on wooden blocks; they were so appreciated as elementary works that they gave name to treatises of the kind on any subject; he wrote also scholia to the plays of Terence.

DONAU, the German name for the Danube.

DONCASTER, a manufacturing town and important coal centre in the West Riding of Yorkshire, well built, in a pleasant country, on the Don, 33 m. S. of York; famous for its races, the St. Leger in particular, called after Colonel St. Leger, who instituted them in 1776.

DONDRA HEAD, the southern extremity of Ceylon, once the site of the capital.

DONEGAL, a county in the NW. of Ireland, in the Irish Free State, the most mountainous in the country; is mossy and boggy, and is indented along the coast with bays, and fringed with islands.

DONETZ, a tributary of the Russian Don, the basin of which forms one large coalfield, reckoned to be as large as all Yorkshire, and one of the largest of any in the world.

DONGOLA, NEW, a town in Nubia, on the left bank of the Nile, above the third cataract, 20th N. and over 700 m. from Cairo; was founded by the Mamelukes.

DONIZETTI, GAETANO, a celebrated Italian composer, born at Bergamo, Lombardy, and studied at Bologna; devoted himself to dramatic music; produced over 60 operas, among the number "Lucia di Lammermoor," the "Daughter of the Regiment," "Lucrezia Borgia," and "La Favorita," all well known, and all possessing a melodious quality of the first order (1797-1848).

DONNE, JOHN, English poet and divine, born in London; a man of good degree; brought up in the Catholic faith; after weighing the claims of the Romish and Anglican communions, joined the latter; married a young lady of sixteen without consent of her father, which involved him in trouble for a time; was induced to take holy orders by King James; was made his chaplain, and finally became Dean of St. Paul's; wrote sermons, some 200 letters and essays, as well as poems, the latter, amid many defects, revealing a soul instinct with true poetic fire (1573-1631).

DONNYBROOK, a village now included in Dublin, long celebrated for its fairs and the fights of which it was the scene on such occasions.

DONON, the highest peak of the Vosges Mountains.

DOO, GEORGE THOMAS, a celebrated English line-engraver, and one of the best in his day (1800-1896).

DOON, a river rendered classic by the muse of Burns, which after a course of 30 m. joins the Clyde 2 m. S. of Ayr.

DOORN CASTLE, a Dutch mansion, the residence of ex-Kaiser William II. of Germany after his exile.

DOPLER EFFECT, the apparent change in frequency when there is a relative movement between the source of a wave motion, such as light or sound, and the observer; for example, the whistle of an approaching express train appears to be of higher pitch than when it is stationary, and of lower when it is moving away; a star which is moving away from the earth has the lines in its spectrum displaced towards the red end, one which is approaching towards the violet end; this effect is utilised for measuring the velocity of a star in the line of sight.

D.O.R.A., Defence of the Realm Act, a measure passed in 1916 curtailing the liberty of the subject in many ways in order to assist in the prosecution of the Great War. Increased powers were given to the executive, and hours of shop closing were fixed.

DORA D'ISTRIA, the pseudonym of Helena Ghika, born in Wallachia, of noble birth; distinguished for her beauty and accomplishments; was eminent as a linguist; translated the "Iliad" into German; wrote works, the fruits of travels (1829-1888).

DORAN, JOHN, an English man of letters, born in London, of Irish descent; wrote on miscellaneous subjects; became editor of the Athenæum and Notes and Queries (1807-1878).

DORAT, JEAN, a French poet, born at Limoges; a Greek scholar; contributed much to the revival of classical literature in France, and was one of the French Pleiade (q.v.); d. 1598.

DORCAS SOCIETY, a society for making clothing for the poor. See Acts ix. 36.

DORCHESTER, the county town of Dorset, on the Frome; was a Roman town, and contains the ruins of a Roman amphitheatre. It was the home of Thomas Hardy.

DORDOGNE, a river in the S. of France, which, after a course of 300 m., falls into the estuary of Garonne; also a dep. through which it flows.

DORÉ, GUSTAVE, a French painter and designer, born in Strasbourg; grained great power and fertility of invention, having, it is alleged, produced more than 50,000 designs; had a wonderful faculty for seizing likenesses, and would draw from memory groups of faces he had seen only once; among the books he illustrated are the "Contes Drolatiques" of Balzac, the works of Rabelais and Montaigne, Dante's "Inferno," also his "Purgatorio" and "Paradiso," "Don Quixote," Tennyson's "Idylls," Milton's works, and Coleridge's "Ancient Mariner"; among his paintings were "Christ Leaving the Pætorium" and "Christ's Entry into Jerusalem"; he left behind him works of sculpture as well as drawings and pictures; his art has been severely handled by the critics, and most of all by Ruskin (1833-1883).

DORIA, ANDREA, a naval commander, born in Genoa, of noble descent, though his parents were poor; a man of patriotic instincts; adopted the profession of arms at the age of 19; became commander of the fleet in 1513; attacked with signal success the Turkish corsairs that infested the Mediterranean; served under Francis I. to free his country from a faction that threatened its independence, and, by his help, succeeded in expelling it; next, in fear of the French supremacy, served under Charles V., and entering Genoa was hailed as its liberator, and received the title of "Father and Defender of his country"; the rest of his long life was one incessant wrestle with his great rival Barbarossa, the chief of the corsairs, which ended in his defeat (1466-1560).

DORIANS, one of the four divisions of the Hellenic race, the other three being the Achæans, the Æolians, and the Ionians; at an early period they overran the whole Peloponnese; they were a hardy people, of staid habits and earnest character.

DORIC, the oldest, strongest, and simplest of the four Grecian orders of architecture; characterised by massive fluted columns without ornament.

DORIS, a small mountainous country of ancient Greece, S. of Thessaly, and embracing the valley of the Pindus.

DORIS, the wife of Nereus, and mother of the Nereids.

DORISLAUS, ISAAC, a lawyer, born at Alkmaar, in Holland; came to England, and was appointed Judge-Advocate; acted as such at King Charles's trial, and was for that latter offence assassinated at the Hague one evening by Royalist cut-throats; his portrait represents him as a man of heavy, deep-winkled, elephantine countenance, pressed down by the labours of life and law (1596-1649).

DORKING, a market-town picturesquely situated in the heart of Surrey, 24 m. S.W. of London; gives name to a breed of fowls; contains a number of fashionable villas.

DORN, JOHANN ALBRECHT, a distinguished German orientalist; wrote a History of the Afghans, and works on their language (1805-1881).

DORNER, ISAAK AUGUST, a German theologian, born at Württemberg; studied at Tübingen; became professor of Theology in Berlin, after having held a similar post in several other German universities; his principal works were the "History of the Development of the Doctrine of the Person of Christ," and the "History of Protestant Theology" (1809-1884).

DORNOCH, the county town of Sutherland, a small place, but a royal burgh; has a good golf-course.

DOROS, a son of Helen and grandson of Deucali; the father of the Dorians, as his brother Æolis of the Æolians.

DOBOTHEA, ST., a virgin of Alexandria, martyrdom by being beheaded in 311. Feb. 6.

DORPAT, a town on the Embach, in Livonia, Russia, 150 m. N.E. of Riga, with a celebrated university founded by Gustavus Adolphus in 1632, which has a well-equipped staff, and is well attended; the majority of the population is German.

D'ORSAY, COUNT, a man of fashion, born in Paris; entered the French army; forsook it for the society of Lord and Lady Blessington; married Lady B.'s daughter by a former marriage; came to England with her ladyship on her husband's death; started a joint establishment in London, which became a rendezvous for all the literary people and artists about town; was "Phœbus Apollo of Dandyism"; having shown kindness to Louis Napoleon when in London, the Prince did not forget him; having some pretensions to art as a painter and sculptor, he was appointed Director of Fine Arts in Paris by the Prince after the coup d'État, but he did not live to fill the position (1801-1852).

DORSET, maritime county in the S. of England, with a deeply indented coast; it consists of a plain between two eastward- and westward-reaching belts of downs; is mainly a pastoral county; rears sheep and cattle, and produces butter and cheese.

DORT, or DORDRECHT, a town on an island in the Maas, in the province of South Holland, 12 m. S.E. of Rotterdam; admirably situated for trade, connected as it is with the Rhine as well, on which rafts of wood are sent floating down to it; is famous for a Synod held here in 1618-1619, at which the tenets of Arminius were condemned, and the doctrines of Calvin approved and endorsed as those of the Reformed Church.

DORTMUND, a town in Westphalia; a great mineral and railway centre, with large iron and steel forges, and a number of breweries.

DOSTOEVSKI, FEDOR MIKHAILOVITCH, Russian novelist and author of "Crime and Punishment," one of the greatest realistic novels ever written. Always poor, he was an epileptic, and served four years in a Siberian prison for attending Socialist gatherings, later escaping abroad (1821-1881).

DOTHEBOYS HALL, a scholastic establishment in "Nicholas Nickleby" conducted by the grasping, mean, avaricious Squeers.

DOUAY, a town on the Scarpe, in the dep. of Nord, France, 20 m. S. of Lille, and one of the chief military towns of the country; has a college founded in 1568 for the education of Catholic priests intended for England, and is the place where a version of the Bible in English for the use of Catholics was issued.

DOUBS, a tributary of the Saône, which it falls into below Dole; gives name to the dep., which it traverses.

DOUBTING CASTLE, a castle belonging to Giant Despair in the "Pilgrim's Progress," which only one key could open, the key Promise.

DOUCE, FRANCIS, a learned antiquary, born in London; for a time keeper of MSS. in the British Museum; author of "Illustrations of Shakespeare," and an illustrated volume, "The Dance of Death," left to the Bodleian Library a chest of books and MSS. (1757-1834).

DOUGLAS, the largest town and capital as well as chief port, of the Isle of Man, 74 m. from Liverpool; much frequented as a bathing-place; contains an old residence of the Dukes of Atholl, entitled Castle Mona, now a hotel. See MAN, ISLE OF.

DOUGLAS, the name of an old Scottish family, believed to be of Celtic origin, that played a conspicuous part at one time in the internal and external struggles of the country; they figure in Scottish history in two branches, the elder called the Black and the later the Red Douglasses or the Angus branch, now represented by the houses of Hamilton and Hume. The eldest of the Douglasses, William, was a kinsman of the house of Murray, and appears to have lived about the end of the 12th century. One of the most illustrious of the family was the a castlet to bury it in Palestine, but died fighting in Spain, 1830.

DOUGLAS, GAWIN or GAVIN, a Scottish poet and bishop of Dunkeld, third son of Archibald, Earl of Angus, surnamed "Bell-the-Cat"; political troubles obliged him to leave the country and take refuge at the Court of Henry VII., where he was held in high regard; died here of the plague, and was buried by his own wish in the Savoy; besides Ovid's "Art of Love," now lost, he translated (1512-1513) the "Æneid" of Virgil into English verse, to each book of which he prefixed a prologue, in certain of which there are descriptions that evince a poet's love of nature combined with his love as a Scotsman for the scenery of his native land; besides this translation, which is his chief work, he indited two allegorical poems, entitled the "Palace of Honour," addressed to James IV., and "King Hart" (1474-1522).

DOUGLAS, SIR HOWARD, an English general and writer on military subjects, born at Gosport; saw service in the Peninsula; was Governor of New Brunswick and Lord High Commissioner of the Ionian Islands (1776-1861).

DOUGLAS, JOHN, bishop of Salisbury, born at Pittenweem, Fife; wrote "The Criterion of, or a Discourse on, Miracles" against Hume; was a friend of Samuel Johnson (1721-1807).

DOUGLAS, STEPHEN ARNOLD, an American statesman, born in Brandon, Vermont; a lawyer by profession, and a Judge; a member of Congress and the Senate; was a Democrat; stood for the Presidency, when Lincoln was elected; was a leader in the Western States; a splendid monument is erected to his memory in Chicago (1813-1861).

DOUGLASS, FREDERICK, American orator, born a slave in Maryland; wrought as a slave in a Baltimore shipbuilder's yard; escaped at the age of 21 to New York; attended an anti-slavery meeting, where he spoke so eloquently that he was appointed by the Anti-Slavery Society to lecture on its behalf, which he did with success and much appreciation in England as well as America; appointed U.S.A. minister to Hayti, 1889; published an Autobiography, which gives a thrilling account of his life (1817-1895).

DOULTON, SIR HENRY, the reviver of art pottery, born in Lambeth; knighted in the Jubilee year for his eminence in that department (1820-1897).

DOUMERGUE, GASTON, President of the French Republic, who assumed office in 1924 (1863-).

DOURO, a river, and the largest, of the Spanish Peninsula, which rises in the Cantabrian Mountains; forms for 40 m. the northern boundary of Portugal, and after a course of 500 m. falls into the Atlantic at Oporto; is navigable only where it traverses Portugal.

DOUSTER-SWIVEL, a German swindling schemer in the "Antiquary."

DOVE, in Christian art the symbol of the Holy Ghost, or of a pure, or a purified soul, and with an olive branch, the symbol of peace and the gospel of peace.

DOVER, THOMAS, a physician of George II.'s reign, who after an adventurous career as a buccaner settled in London and established a fashionable practice; accompanied Captain Woodes Rogers and Dampier on the voyage when Alex. Selkirk was rescued from Juan Fernandez; introduced the well-known Dover's Powder, used as a sudorific and sedative (c. 1680-1742).

DOVER, a seaport on the E. coast of Kent, and the nearest in England to the coast of France, 60 m. S.E. of London, and with a mail service to Calais and Ostend; is strongly fortified, and the chief station in the S.E. military district of England; was the chief of the Cinque Ports.

DOVER PATROL, THE, an arm of the fleet set up during the Great War to maintain communication in the Channel; its monitors made frequent attacks on the Belgian coast.

DOVER, STRAIT OF, divides France from England and connects the English Channel with the North Sea; at the narrowest is 20 m. across; forms a busy sea highway; is called by the French Pas de Calais.

DOVERFELD, a range of mountains in Norway, stretching N.E. and extending between 62° and 63° N. lat., average height 3000 ft.

DOW, or DOUW, GERARD, a distinguished Dutch genre-painter, born at Leyden; a pupil of Rembrandt; his works, which are very numerous, are the fruit of a devoted study of nature, and are remarkable for their delicacy and perfection of finish; examples of his works are found in all the great galleries of Europe (1613-1675).

DOWDEN, EDWARD, literary critic, professor of English Literature in Dublin University, born in Cork; distinguished specially as a Shakespearean; author of "Shakespeare: a Study of his Mind and Art," "Introduction to Shakespeare," and "Shakespearean Sonnets, with Notes"; wrote "Studies in Literature," and a "Life of Shelley"; also a critical appreciation of Goethe (1843-1913).

DOWNS, a maritime county in the S.E. of Ulster, Ireland, with a mostly level and fairly fertile soil, and manufactures of linen.

DOWNS, THE, a safe place of anchorage, 8 m. long by 6 m. broad, for ships between Goodwin Sands and the coast of Kent; the scene of several sea-fights between the Dutch and British.

DOWNS, THE NORTH AND SOUTH, two divergent ranges of broad hills and plateaux of cretaceous age with a valley between, called the Weald, that extend eastward from Hampshire to the sea-coast, the North terminating in Dover cliffs, Kent, and the South in Beachy Head, Sussex; the South famous for the breed of sheep that pastures on them.

DOYLE, SIR ARTHUR CONAN, novelist, nephew of Richard Doyle (q.v.), born in Edinburgh; studied and practised medicine, but gave it up after a time for literature, in which he had already achieved no small success; several of his productions soon attracted universal attention, especially his "White Company," "The Refugees," and the Sherlock Holmes series; wrote a short play "A Story of Waterloo," produced with success by Sir Henry Irving; later gave increasing attention to spiritualism (1859-1930).

DOYLE, SIR FRANCIS HASTINGS, an English poet, born near Tadcaster; bred to the bar, but devoted to poetry and horse-racing; became professor of Poetry at Oxford; author of "Miscellaneous Verses," "Two Destinies," "Retreat of the Guards," "The Thread of Honour," and "The Private of the Buffs" (1810-1858).

DOYLE, JOHN, an eminent caricaturist, of Irish origin, under the initials H. B. (1797-1868).

DOYLE, RICHARD, eminent caricaturist, born in London, son of the preceding; contributed to Punch, of which he designed the cover, but left the staff in 1850 owing to the criticisms in the journal adverse to the Catholic Church; devoted himself after that chiefly to book illustration and water-colour painting (1824-1883).

DOZY, REINHART, an Orientalist and linguist, born at Leyden, where he became professor of History; devoted himself to the study of the history of the Arabs or Moors in North-Western Africa and Spain, his chief work being "The History of the Mussulmans of Spain"; wrote also a "Detailed Dictionary of the Names of the Dress of the Arabs" (1820-1884).

DRACHENFELS (Dragon's Rock), one of the Siebenbrügg, 8 m. S.E. of Bonn, 1056 ft. above the Rhine, and crowned by a castle with a commanding view; the legendary abode of the dragon killed by Siegfried in the "Lay of the Nibelungen."

DRAO, a celebrated Athenian lawgiver, who first gave stability to the State by committing the laws to writing, and establishing the Epheta, or court of appeal, 621 B.C.; he punished every transgressor of his laws with death, so that his code became unbearable, and was superseded ere long by a milder, instituted by Solon, who affixed the penalty of death to murder alone; he is said to have justified the severity of his code by maintaining that the smallest crime deserved death, and he knew no severer punishment for greater; is said to have been smothered to death in the theatre by the hats and cloaks showered on him as a popular mark of honour; he was archon of Athens.

DRAGON, a fabulous monster, being a hideous impersonation of some form of deadly evil, which only preternatural heroic strength and courage can subdue, and on the subdual and slaying of which depends the achievement of some conquest of vital moment to the human race or some members of it; is represented in mediæval art as a large, lizard-like animal, with the claws of a lion, the wings of an eagle, and the tail of a serpent, with open jaws ready and eager to devour, which some knight high-mounted thrusts at to pierce to death with a spear; in the Greek mythology it is represented with eyes ever on the watch, in symbol of the evil that waylays us to kill, as in guarding the "Apples of the Hesperides" and the "Golden Fleece," because these are prizes that fall only to those who are as watchful of him as he is of them; and it is consecrated to Minerva to signify that true wisdom, as sensible of the ever-watchful dragon, never goes to sleep, but is equally ever on the watch.

DRAGONNADES, the name given to the persecution at the instance of Louis XIV. to force the Huguenots of France back into the bosom of the Catholic Church by employment of dragons.

DRAGON'S TEETH, the teeth of the dragon that Cadmus slew, and wholen when sown by him sprang up as a host of armed men, who killed each other excepting the five who became the ancestors of the Thebans, hence the phrase to "sow dragon's teeth," to breed and foster strife.

DRAKE, SIR FRANCIS, a great English seaman of the reign of Queen Elizabeth, born near Tavistock, in Devon; served in the Royal Navy under his relative, Sir John Hawkins, and distinguished himself with signal success by his valour and daring against the pride of Spain, towards which, as the great Catholic persecuting power, he had been taught to cherish an invincible hatred; swooped down on its ports across seas, and despoiled them; in 1577 sailed for America with five ships, passed through the Strait of Magellan, the first Englishman to do so; plundered the W. coast as far as Peru; lost all his ships save one; crossed the Pacific, and came home by way of the Cape—the first to sail round the world—with spoil to the value of £300,000, his successes contributing much to embolden his countrymen against the arrogance of the Catholic king; he was vice-admiral in the fleet that drove back the Armada from our shores (1540-1598).

DRAKE, FRIEDRICH, a German sculptor, born at Fyrnont; studied under Rauch; executed numerous statues and busts, among others busts of Oken and Ranke, Bismarck and Moltke; his chief works are the "Eight provinces of Prussia," represented by large allegorical figures, and the "Warrior crowned by Victory" (1805-1882).

DRAKENBERG MOUNTAINS, a range of mountains in S. Africa, 6500 ft. high, between Natal and the Orange Free State.

DRAMATIC UNITIES, three rules of dramatic construction prescribed by Aristotle, observed by the French dramatists, but ignored by Shakespeare, that (1) a play should represent what takes place within eight hours, (2) there must be no change of locality, and (3) there must be no minor plot.

DRAMMEN, a Norwegian seaport on a river which falls into Christiania Bay, 30 m. SW. of Christiania; trade chiefly in timber.

DRAPEL, JOHN WILLIAM, a chemist, scientist, and man of letters, born at St. Helena, Lancs.; settled in the United States; wrote on chemistry, physiology, and physics generally, as well as works of a historical character, such as the "History of the Intellectual Development of Europe" and the "History of the Conflict between Science and Religion," an able book. He carried out important work in connection with photography (1811-1882).

DRAPIER, a pseudonym adopted by Swift in his letters to the people of Ireland against Wood's pence, a protest which led to the cancelling of the patent.

DRAVE, a river from the Eastern Alps which flows eastward, and after a course of 380 m. falls into the Danube 10 m. below Essek.

DAVIDIANS, races of people who occupied India before the arrival of the Aryans, and being driven S. by them came to settle chiefly in the S. of the Dekkan; they are divided into numerous tribes, each with a language of its own, but of a common type or group, some of them literary and some of them not, the chief being the Tamil; the tribes together number over 20 millions.

DRAWCANSIE, a blustering, bullying boaster in Buckingham's play the "Rehearsal"; he kills every one of the combatants, "sparing neither friend nor foe."

DRAYTON, MICHAEL, an English poet, born in Warwickshire, like Shakespeare; was one of the three chief patriotic poets, Warner and Daniel being the other two, who arose in England after her humiliation of the pride of Spain, although he was no less distinguished as a love poet; his great work is his "Polyolbion," in glorification of England, consisting of 30 books and 100,000 lines; it gives in Alexandrines "the tracts, mountains, forests, and other parts of this renowned isle of Britain, with intermixture of the most remarkable stories, antiquities, wonders, pleasures, and commodities of the same digested in a poem"; this was preceded by other works, and succeeded by a poem entitled "The Ballad of Agincourt," pronounced one of the most spirited martial lyrics in the language (1583-1631).

DREISER, THEODORE, American realistic novelist; wrote "Sister Carrie," a tale of a fallen woman, in 1900, and followed it with numerous works of which the best known are "The Financier," "The Titan," and "An American Tragedy" (1871-).

DREINICOURT, a French Protestant divine, born at Sedan; author of "Consolations against the Fear of Death" (1595-1669).

DRENTHE, a province of Holland lying between Hanover and the Zuider Zee; the soil is poor, low, and marshy, and the population sparse.

DRESDEN, the capital of Saxony, on the Elbe, 116 m. SE. of Berlin; a fine city, with a museum rich in all kinds of works of art, and called in consequence the "Florence of Germany"; here the Allies were defeated by Napoleon in 1813, when he entered the city, leaving behind him 30,000 men, who were besieged by the Russians and compelled to surrender as prisoners of war the same year.

DREYFUS, L'AFFAIRE. On December 23, 1894, Alfred Dreyfus, an Alsatian Jew, captain of French Artillery, was by court-martial found guilty of revealing to a foreign power secrets of national defence, and sentenced to degradation and perpetual imprisonment; he constantly maintained his innocence, and, in time, the belief that he had been unjustly condemned became prevalent, and a revision of the trial being at length ordered, principally through the exertions of Colonel Picquart and Zola, the well-known author, Dreyfus was brought back from Cayenne, where he had been kept a close prisoner and cruelly treated, and a fresh trial at Rennes began on August 6, 1899, and lasted till September 9; the proceedings—marked by scandalous "scenes," and by an attempt to assassinate one of prisoner's counsel—disclosed an alarmingly corrupt condition of affairs in some lines of French public life under the Republic of the time, and terminated in a majority verdict of "guilty"; Dreyfus, however, was set at liberty on September 20, the sentence of ten years' imprisonment being remitted; in 1906 he was entirely exonerated and restored to rank as a general in the army (1860-).

DREYSE, NICHOLAS W.N., inventor of the needle-gun, born at Sommerda, near Erfurt, the son of a locksmith, and bred to his father's craft; established a large factory at Sommerda for a manufactory of firearms; was ennobled 1864 (1787-1867).

DRINKWATER, JOHN, British poet and playwright. Educated at Oxford and Birmingham he spent twelve years as an insurance clerk and founded what became the Birmingham Repertory Theatre. His first volume of verse was published in 1908, and in 1918 came his first play "Abraham Lincoln," followed by "Mary Stuart," "Oliver Cromwell," and "Robert E. Lee." In 1924 he married Daisy Kennedy the violinist (1882-).

DROGHEDA, a seaport in co. Louth, near the mouth of the Boyne, 32 m. N. of Dublin, with manufactures and a considerable export trade; was stormed by Cromwell in 1649 "after a stout resistance," and the garrison put to the sword; surrendered to William III. after the battle of the Boyne in 1690.

DROMORE, a cathedral town in co. Down, Ireland, 17 m. SW. of Belfast, of which Jeremy Taylor was bishop.

DROOGS, steep rocks which dot the surface of Mysore, in India, and resemble hay-ricks, some of these 1500 ft. high, many with springs on the top, and scalable only by steps cut in them.

DROSTE-HULSHOFF, FRAULEIN VON, a German poetess, born near Münster; was of delicate constitution; wrote tales as well as lyrics in record of deep and tender experiences (1797-1848).

DROUET, JEAN BAPTISTE, notable king-taker, a violent Jacobin and member of the Council of the Five Hundred; had been a dragoon soldier; was postmaster at St. Menchould when Louis XVI., attempting flight, passed through the place, and by whisper of surmises had the progress of Louis and his party arrested at Varennes, June 21, 1791, for which service he received honourable mention and due reward in money; was taken captive by the Austrians at last; perched on a rock 100 ft. high, descended one night by means of a paper kite he had constructed, but was found at the foot helpless with a leg broken (1763-1824).

DROUET, JEAN BAPTISTE, COMTE D'ERLON, marshal of France, born at Rhelms; distinguished in the wars of the Republic and the Empire; on Napoleon's return from Elba seized on the citadel of Lille, and held it for the emperor; commanded the first corps d'armée at Waterloo; left France at the Restoration; returned after the July Revolution; became governor of Algiers, and was created marshal (1765-1844).

DROUOT, a French general, son of a baker at Nancy; Napoleon, whom, as commander of artillery, he accompanied over all his battlefields in Europe and to Elba, used to call him the Sage de la Grande Armée (1774-1847).

DROUYN DE LHUYS, EDOUARD, French statesman and diplomatist, born in Paris; was ambassador at the Hague and Madrid; distinguished himself by his opposition to Gutzot; served as Minister of Foreign Affairs under Louis Napoleon; withdrew into private life after the collapse at Sedan (1805-1881).

DROYSEN, JOHANN GUSTAV, a German historian, born in Pomerania; professor in Berlin; author of the "History of Prussian Policy," "History of Alexander the Great," and "History of Hellenism" (1808-1884).

DROZ, the name of a Swiss family of mechanicians, one of them, Jean Pierre, an engraver of medals (1746-1833); also of a French moralist and historian, author of "History of Louis XVI." (1773-1850).

DROZ, GUSTAV, a highly popular and brilliant novelist, born in Paris; author of "Monsieur, Madame, et Bébé," "Entre Nous," and "Le Cahier bleu de Mlle. Cibot" (1832-1895).

DRUIDS, a sacred order of learned men under a chief called the Archdruid, among the ancient Celtic nations, particularly of Gaul and Britain, who, from their knowledge of the arts and sciences of the day, were the ministers of religion and justice, as well as the teachers of youth to the whole community, and exercised an absolute control over the unlearned people whom they governed; they worshipped in oak groves, and the oak tree and the mistletoe were sacred to them; the heavenly bodies appear to have been also objects of their worship, and they presumably believed in the immortality and transmigration of the soul; but they committed nothing to writing, and for our knowledge of them we have to depend on legend and the reports of outsiders.

DRUMCLOGG MOSS, a flat wilderness of broken bog and quagmire in Lanarkshire, where the Covenanters defeated Claverhouse's dragoons in 1679.

DRUMMOND, HENRY, popular scientist and Christian teacher, born in Strirling; was educated at Edinburgh and Tübingen; studied for the Free Church; lectured on natural science in Glasgow and appointed professor at the Free Church College; became famous by the publication of "Natural Law in the Spiritual World," a book which took with the Christian public at once, and had an enormous sale, being succeeded by "Tropical Africa," a charmingly written book of travel, and by a series of booklets, commencing with "The Greatest Thing in the World," intended to expound and commend the first principles of the Christian faith; his last work except one, published posthumously, entitled the "Ideal Life," was the "Ascent of Man," in which he posits an altruistic element in the process of evolution, and makes the goal of it a higher and higher life (1851-1897).

DRUMMOND, CAPTAIN THOMAS, civil engineer, born in Edinburgh; inventor of the Drummond Light; was employed in the trigonometrical survey of Great Britain and Ireland; became Under-Secretary for Ireland, and was held in high favour by the Irish (1797-1840).

DRUMMOND, WILLIAM, of Hawthornden, a Scottish poet, named the "Petrarch of Scotland," born in Hawthornden; studied civil law at Bourges, but poetry had more attractions for him than law, and on the death of his father he returned to his paternal estate, and devoted himself to the study of it and the indulgence of his poetic tastes. "His work was done," as Stopford Brooke remarks, "in the reign of James I., but is the result of the Elizabethan influence extending to Scotland. Drummond's sonnets and madrigals have some of the grace of Sidney, and he rose at intervals into grave and noble verse, as in his sonnet on John the Baptist." He was a devoted Royalist; his first poem was "Tears" on the death of James I.'s eldest son Henry, and the fate of Charles I. is said to have cut short his days; the visit of Ben Jonson to him at Hawthornden is well known (1585-1649).

DRUMMOND LIGHT, an intensely brilliant and pure white light produced by the play of an oxyhydrogen flame upon a ball of lime, so called from the inventor, Captain Thomas Drummond.

DRURY LANE, a celebrated London theatre founded in 1683, in what was then a fashionable quarter of the city; has since that time been thrice burnt down; was the scene of Garrick's triumphs, and of those of many of his illustrious successors, as Kemble, Kean, and Macready, though it is now given up chiefly to spectacular musical plays.

DRUSES, a peculiar people, numbering some 80,000, inhabiting the S. of Lebanon and Antilebanon, with the Maronites on the N. whose origin is very uncertain, only it is evident, though they speak the Arab language, they belong to the Aryan race; their religion, a mixture of Christian, Jewish, and Mohammedan beliefs, is grounded on faith in the unity and the incarnation of God; their form of government is half hierarchical and half feudalistic; in early times they were under emirs of their own, but in consequence of the sanguinary, deadly, and mutually exterminating strife between them and the Christian Maronites in 1860, they were put under a Christian governor appointed by the Porte.

DRUSUS, MARCUS LIVIUS, a tribune of the people at Rome in 122 B.C., but a supporter of the aristocracy; after passing a veto on a popular measure proposed by Gracchus his democratic colleague, proposed the same measure himself in order to show and prove to the people that the patricians were their best friends; the success of this policy gained him the name of "patron of the senate."

DRUSUS, MARCUS LIVIUS, Roman tribune, 91 B.C., son of the preceding, and an aristocrat; pursued the same course as his father, but was baffled in the execution of his purpose, which was to broaden the constitution, in consequence of which he formed a conspiracy, and was assassinated, an event which led to the Social War (q.v.).

DRUSUS, NERO CLAUDIUS, surnamed "Germanicus," younger brother of Tiberius and son-in-law of Mark Antony; distinguished himself in four successive campaigns against the tribes of Germany, but stopped short at the Elbe, scared by the apparition of a woman of colossal stature who defied him to cross, so that he had to "content himself with erecting some triumphal pillars on his own safe side of the river and say that the tribes across were conquered"; when he fell ill of a mortal malady, his brother the emperor hastened across the Alps to close his eyes, and brought home his body, which was burned, the ashes being buried in the tomb of Augustus.

DRYADS, nymphs of forest trees, which were conceived of as born with the tree they were attached to and dying with it; they had their abode in wooded mountains away from men; held their revels among themselves, but broke them off at the approach of a human footstep.

DRYAS, the father of Lycurgus, a Thracian king, and slain by him, who, in a fit of frenzy against the Bacchus worshippers, mistook him for a vine and cut him down. See LYCURGUS.

DRYASDUST, a name of Sir Walter Scott's invention, and employed by him to denote an imaginary character who supplied him with dry preliminary historical details, and since used to denote a writer who treats a historical subject with all due diligence and research, but without any appreciation of the human interest in it, still less the soul of it.

DRYBURGH, an abbey, now a ruin, founded by David I., on the Tweed, in Berwickshire, 3 m. S.E. of Melrose; the burial-place of Sir Walter Scott.

DRYDEN, JOHN, a celebrated English poet, "glorious John," born in Northamptonshire, of a good family of Puritan principles; educated at Westminster School and Cambridge; his first poetic production of any merit was a set of "heroic stanzas" on the death of Cromwell; at the Restoration he changed sides and wrote a poem which he called "Astræa Redux" in praise of the event, which was ere long followed by his "Annus Mirabilis," in commemoration of the year 1666, which revealed at once the poet and the royalist, and gained him the appointment of poet-laureate; prior to this and afterwards he produced a succession of plays for the stage, which won him great popularity, after which he turned his mind to political affairs and assumed the rôle of political satirist by production of his "Absalom and Achitophel," intended to expose the schemes of Shaftesbury, represented as Achitophel, and Monmouth, as Absalom, to oust the Duke of York from the succession to the throne; on the accession of James II. he became a Roman Catholic, and wrote "The Hind and the Panther," in defence of the Church of Rome; at the Revolution he was deprived of his posts, but it was after that event he executed his translation of Virgil, and produced his celebrated odes and "Fables" (1681-1700).

DUALISM, or MANICHEISM, the doctrine that there are two opposite and independently existing principles which go to constitute every concrete thing throughout the universe, such as principle of good and a principle of evil, light and darkness, life and death, spirit and matter, ideal and real, yea and nay, God and Devil, Christ and Antichrist, Ormuzd and Ahriman.

DU BARRY, COUNTESS, mistress of Louis XV., born at Vaucouleurs, daughter of a dressmaker; came to Paris, professing millinery; had fascinating attractions, and was introduced to the king; governed France to its ruin and the dismissal of all Louis' able and honourable advisers; after Louis' death lived in retirement until the Revolution, when she fled to England, but on returning thence was arrested, brought before the tribunal, condemned for wasting the finances of the State, and guillotined (1741-1793).

DU BELLAY, a French general, born at Montmirail; served under Francis I. (1541-1590).

DUBLIN, the capital of the Irish Free State, at the mouth of the Liffey, which divides it in two, and is crossed by 12 bridges; the principal and finest street is Sackville Street, which is about 700 yards long and 40 wide; it has a famous university and two cathedrals, besides a castle, the residence of the Lord-Lieutenant; and a park, the Phoenix, one of the finest in Europe; manufactures porter, whisky, and poplin.

DUBOIS, GUILLAUME, cardinal and prime minister of France; notorious for his ambition and his debauchery; appointed tutor to the Duke of Orleans; encouraged him in vice, and secured his attachment and patronage in promotion, so that in the end he rose to the highest honours, and even influence, in both Church and state; notwithstanding his debauchery he was an able man and an able minister (1656-1723).

DU BOIS-REYMOND, EMIL, a German physiologist, born in Berlin, of French descent; professor of Physiology at Berlin; distinguished for his researches in animal electricity (1818-1896).

DUBOIS DE CRANCE, a violent French revolutionary, born at Charleville; besieged and captured Lyons, giving no quarter; was Minister of War under the Directory; secured the adoption of the principle of conscription in recruiting the army (1747-1814).

DUBOURG, a French magistrate, member of the Parlement de Paris; burnt as a heretic for recommending clemency in the treatment of the Huguenots (1521-1559).

DUBUFE, a distinguished French portrait-painter (1820-1883).

DUBUQUE, a town in Iowa, U.S., on the Mississippi, with lead-mines and a trade in grain, timber, &c.

DUCAMP, MAXIME, a French littérateur, born in Paris; wrote "Travels in the East"; was the author of "Paris," its civic life, as also an account of its "Convulsions" (1822-1894).

DU GANGE, CHARLES, one of the most erudite of French scholars, born at Arles, and educated among the Jesuits; wrote on language, law, archaeology, and history; devoted himself much to the study of the Middle Ages; contributed to the rediscovery of old French literature, and wrote a history of the Latin empire; his greatest works are his Glossaries of the Latin and Greek of the Middle Ages (1810-1868).

DUCAT, a coin, generally in gold, that circulated in Venice, and was current in Germany after 1559. It was worth ten shillings.

DU CHAILLU, PAUL BELLONI, an African traveller, born in Louisiana; his principal explorations confined to the equatorial region of West Africa, and the result an extension of our knowledge of its geography, ethnology, and zoology, and particularly of the character and habits of the ape tribes, and above all the gorilla; he acted as chief of General Gordon's staff (1837-1903).

DUCHESNE, ANDRÉ, French historian and geographer, born in Touraine; styled the "Father of French History"; famous for his researches in it and in French antiquities, and for histories of England, Scotland, and Ireland respectively; his industry was unwearied; he left more than 100 folios in MS. (1584-1640).

DUCHOBOTZ, A., a religious community in Russia of Quaker principles, and of a creed that denied the doctrine of the Trinity and the divinity of Christ; they became a cause of trouble to the empire by their fanaticism, and were removed to a high plateau in Transcaucasia, where they live by cattle-rearing; known as Doukhobors, there are communities of this sect in Western Canada, where their peculiar views frequently bring them into conflict with the authorities.

DUOIS, JEAN, a French dramatist, born at Versailles; took Shakespeare for his model; declined Napoleon's patronage, thinking it better, as he said, to wear rags than wear chains (1733-1816).

DUCK-BILLED PLATYPUS. See ORNITHORHYNCHUS.

DUCKING STOOL, a stool or chair in which a scolding woman was confined and set before her own door to be pelted at, or borne in a tumble through the town to be jeered at, or placed at the end of a see-saw and ducked in a pool.

DUCLOS, CHARLES, a witty and satirical French writer, born at Dinan; author of "Observations," and "A History of the Manners of the Eighteenth Century," and "Mémoires of the Reigns of Louis XIV. and Louis XV."; he mingled much in French society of the period, and took studious note of its passing whims (1704-1772).

DUCORNET, a French historical-painter, born at Lille; being born without arms, painted with his foot (1805-1856).

DUOOS, ROGER, French politician, born at Bordeaux, member of the National Convention and of the Directory (1764-1816).

DUGROT, a French general, born at Nivers; served in Algeria, in the Italian campaign of 1859, and as head of a division in the German war, was imprisoned for refusing to sign the capitulation treaty of Sedan, but escaped and took part in the defence of Paris when besieged by the Germans (1817-1882).

DUITLESS GLANDS, those glands which secrete hormones which pass into the blood stream and circulate over the body. See HORMONES.

DUDLEY, the largest town in Worcestershire, 8½ m. N.W. of Birmingham, in the heart of the "Black Country," with coal-mines, ironworks, and hardware manufactures.

- DUDLEY, EDMUND, an English lawyer and privy-councillor; was associated with Empson as an agent in carrying on the obnoxious policy of Henry VII. and beheaded along with him at the instance of Henry VIII. on a charge of high treason in 1510.
- DUDLEY, JOHN, grand-marshal of England, son of the preceding, father-in-law of Lady Jane Grey; beheaded in 1558 for his part in an insurrection in her favour.
- DUFF, ALEXANDER, an eminent Indian missionary, born at Moulin, near Pitlochry, Perthshire; a man of Celtic blood, apostolic zeal, and fervid eloquence; was the first missionary sent out to India by the Church of Scotland; sailed in 1830, returned in 1840, in 1849, and finally in 1863, stirring up each time the missionary spirit in the Church; he was the originator of a new method of missionary operations in the East by the introduction of English as the vehicle of instruction in the Christian faith, which met at first with much opposition, but was finally crowned with conspicuous success; died in Edinburgh (1806-1878).
- DUFF, JAMES GRAFT, Indian soldier and statesman, born at Banff; conspicuous as a soldier for his services in subduing the Mahratta chiefs, and as a statesman for establishing friendly relations between the Mahrattas and the East India Company (1789-1858).
- DUFFERIN, MARQUIS OF, and EARL OF AVA, statesman and diplomatist; held office under Lord John Russell and Mr. Gladstone; was in succession Governor-General of Canada, ambassador first at St. Petersburg, then at Constantinople, and Governor-General of India; later he was ambassador at Rome and Paris (1826-1902).
- DUFFY, SIR CHARLES CAVAN, an Irish patriot, born in co. Monaghan; bred for the bar; took to journalism in the interest of his country's emancipation; was one of the founders of the Nation newspaper; was twice over tried for sedition, but acquitted; emigrated at length to Australia, where he soon plunged into Colonial politics, and in his political capacity rendered distinguished services to the Australian colonies, especially in obtaining important concessions from the mother-country; wrote "The Ballad Poetry of Ireland" and an interesting record of his early experiences in "Young Ireland" (1816-1903).
- DUFLORE, a Swiss general, born at Constance; commanded the army directed against the Sonderbund (q.v.), and brought the war there to a close (1787-1875).
- DUFRENY, French painter and poet, born at Paris (1765-1826).
- DUFRENY, CHARLES RIVIERE, French dramatist, a universal genius, devoted to both literature and the arts; held in high esteem by Louis XIV.; wrote a number of comedies, revealing a man of the world, instinct with wit, and careless of style (1648-1724).
- DUGDALE, SIR WILLIAM, antiquary, born in Warwickshire; was made Chester herald, accompanied Charles I. throughout the Civil War; his chief work was the "Monasticon Anglicanum," which he executed conjointly with Roger Duckworth; wrote also on the antiquities of Warwickshire and heraldry; left 27 folio MSS. now in the Bodleian Library (1605-1686).
- DUGOMMIER, French general, pupil of Washington, born at Guadeloupe; distinguished himself in Italy; commanded at the siege of Toulon, which he took; fell at the battle of Sierra-Negra, in Spain, which he had invaded (1736-1794).
- DUGUAY-TROUIN, RENE, a celebrated French sea-captain, born at St. Malo; distinguished at first in privateer warfare during the reign of Louis XIV., and afterwards as a frigate captain in the royal navy, to which the royal favour promoted him; was much beloved by the sailors and subordinate officers; died poor (1673-1736).
- DU GUESCLIN, BERTRAND, constable of France, born in Cotes du Nord; one of the most illustrious of French war-captains, and distinguished as one of the chief instruments in expelling the English from Normandy, Guienne, and Poitou; was taken prisoner at the battle of Auray in 1364, but ransomed for 100,000 francs, and again by the Black Prince, but soon liberated; he was esteemed for his valour by foe and friend alike, and was buried at St. Denis in the tomb of the Kings of France (1314-1380).
- DULACRE, GEORGE, French novelist. By profession a doctor, he made his mark in literature with "Vie des Martyrs," published in 1816, and "Civilisation" in 1817, calm dispassionate revelations of modern war.
- DUESSENE, a French general; covered with wounds at Waterloo, he was cruelly massacred by the Brunswick hussars in the house to which he had fled for refuge (1760-1815).
- DULIUS, GAULUS, a Roman consul; distinguished for having on the coast of Sicily gained the first naval victory recorded in the annals of Rome, 280 B.C.
- DUKERIES, THE, a district near Workop where are situated Clumber Park and Welbeck Abbey, residences of the Dukes of Newcastle and Portland, as well as Workop Manor and Thoresby Hall.
- DULCE DOMUM (i.e. Sweet Home), a song sung by the pupils at Winchester College on the approach of and at the break-up of the school for the summer holidays.
- DULCINO DEL TOBOSO, the name Don Quixote gave to his beloved Aldonza Lorenzo, a coarse peasant-girl of Toboso, conceived by him as a model of all feminine perfection, and as such adored by him.
- DULIA, an inferior kind of worship paid to angels and saints, in contradistinction to Latria (q.v.).
- DULONG, PIERRE, a French chemist, born at Rouen; discoverer, by accidental explosion, of the chloride of nitrogen (1785-1838).
- DULUTH, a port on Lake Superior, with a fine harbour, and a great centre of commerce.
- DULWICH, a southern Surrey suburb of London, with a flourishing college founded in 1619, and a picture gallery attached, rich especially in Dutch paintings. See ALLEYN, EDWARD.
- DUMACHEUS, the impatient thief, figures in Longfellow's "Golden Legend" as one of a band of robbers who attacked St. Joseph on his flight into Egypt.
- DUMAS, ALEXANDRE, THE ELDER, a celebrated French author, born at Villers-Cotterets, son of General Dumas, a Creole; lost his father at four, and led for a time a miscellaneous life, till, driven by poverty, he came to Paris to seek his fortune; here he soon made his mark, and became the most popular dramatist and romancer of his time; his romances are numerous, and he reached the climax of his fame by the production of "Monte Cristo" in 1844, and the "Three Musketeers" the year after; he was unhappy in his marriage and squandered his fortune in reckless extravagance; before the end it was all spent, and he died at Dieppe, broken in health and impaired in intellect, ministered to by his son and daughter (1802-1870).
- DUMAS, ALEXANDRE, THE YOUNGER, or fils, dramatist and novelist, born in Paris, son of the preceding; he made his debut as a novelist with "La Dame aux Camélias" in 1848, which was succeeded by a number of other novels; he eventually gave himself up to the production of dramas, in which he was more successful than in romance (1824-1896).
- DUMAS, JEAN BAPTISTE ANDRE, a distinguished French chemist, born at Alais; was admitted to the Académie Française at the age of 25; at the Revolution of 1848 he became a member of the National Assembly; was created a senator under the Empire, but retired into private life after Sedan; he was distinguished for his studies in chemistry, both theoretical and practical, and ranks among the foremost in the science. He invented a method of obtaining vapour densities at high temperature and applied it to mercury, iodine, phosphorus, and sulphur; he also discovered chloracetic acid (1800-1884).
- DU MAURIER, GEORGE LOUIS, born in Paris; started in London as a designer of wood engravings; did illustrations for Once a Week, the Cornhill Magazine, &c., and finally joined the staff of Punch, to which he contributed numerous clever sketches; he published a novel, "Peter Ibbotson" in 1891, which was succeeded in 1895 by "Tilbury," which had such a phenomenal success in both England and America (1834-1896).

DUMB OX, Thomas Aquinas (q.v.), so called by his fellow students at Cologne University from his taciturnity before he opened his mouth and began, as predicted, to fill the world with his loving.

DUMBARON, the county town of Dumbartonshire, and a royal burgh, at the mouth of the Leven, on the Clyde, 15 m. from Glasgow; shipbuilding the chief industry; it was the capital of the kingdom of Strathclyde, adjoining is a castle of historic interest, 250 ft. high, kept up as a military fortress; the country, which is fertile, and was originally part of Lennox, is traversed by the Leven, with its bleach-fields and factories.

DUM-DUM, a town in Bengal, 6 m. N.E. of Calcutta; a military post with small arms factory whence came the dum-dum bullet; it was here in 1867 that the sepoy first mutinied.

DUMESNIL, MARIE FRANÇOISE, a celebrated French tragedienne, born near Alençon; like Mrs. Siddons, surpassed all others at the time in the representation of dignity, pathos, and strong emotion; made her first appearance in 1737, retired in 1775 (1711-1803).

DUMFRIES, an agricultural market-town, county town of Dumfriesshire and a seaport, stands on the left bank of the Nith, with Maxwelltown as suburb on the right, 90 m. S.W. of Edinburgh; manufactures tweeds and hosiery, and trades in cattle; here Robert Burns spent the last five years of his life, and his remains lie buried.

DUMFRIESSHIRE, a south-western Border county of Scotland; an agricultural district, which slopes from a northern pastoral region to the Solway, and is traversed by the fertile valleys of Nithsdale and Annandale.

DUMNORIX, a chief of the Ædian nation in Gaul, who gave some trouble to Cæsar in his conquest of that country.

DUMONT, AUGUSTIN-ALEXANDRE, a sculptor, born in Paris (1801-1884).

DUMONT, JEAN, an eminent French publicist, who settled in Austria and served the emperor; wrote on international law (1860-1728).

DUMONT, LOUIS, a French publicist, born at Geneva, a friend of Mirabeau, memoirs of whom he wrote, and who, coming to England, formed a close intimacy with Jeremy Bentham, and became his disciple and expounder (1759-1829).

DUMONT D'URVILLE, JULES, a celebrated French navigator, born at Condé-sur-Noireau; made a three years' voyage round the world, and visited the Antarctic regions, of which he made a survey; he was distinguished as a scientist no less than as a sea-captain; lost his life in a railway accident at Versailles (1790-1842).

DUMOULIN, a celebrated French jurist, born at Paris; did for French law what Cujas (q.v.) did for Roman (1500-1560).

DUMOURIEZ, CHARLES FRANÇOIS, a French general, born at Cambrai; after service abroad joined the Revolution and fought on its behalf; gained the battles of Valmy and Jemappes; conquered Belgium, but on the death of Louis withdrew from the Revolutionary wars; died an exile in England (1730-1823). See Carlyle's "French Revolution."

DUNA, a river of Russia, which rises near the source of the Volga, and after a W. and NW. course of 650 m. falls into the Gulf of Riga; it is connected with the Dnieper by the Beresina Canal.

DUNBAR, an ancient seaport and town of Haddingtonshire, on the coast of the Forth, 29 m. E. of Edinburgh; is a fishing station, and manufactures agricultural implements and paper; was, with its castle, which has stood many a siege, a place of importance in early Scottish history; near it Cromwell beat the Scots under Leslie on September 3, 1650.

DUNBAR, WILLIAM, a Scottish poet, entered the Franciscan order and became an itinerant preaching friar, in which capacity he wandered over the length and breadth of the land, enjoying good cheer by the way; was some time in the service of James IV., and wrote a poem, his most famous piece, entitled "The Thistle and the Rose," on the occasion of the King's marriage with the Princess Margaret Tudor, daughter of Henry VII. His poems were of three classes—allegorical, moral, and comic, the most remarkable being "The Dance," in which he describes the procession of the seven deadly sins in the infernal regions. Scott says he "was a poet unrivalled by any that Scotland has produced" (1480-1520).

DUNBLANE, a town in Perthshire, 5 m. N. of Stirling, with a beautiful cathedral, which dates back as far as 1240; of the diocese the saintly Leighton was bishop.

DUNCAN, ADAM, VISCOUNT, a British admiral, born at Dundee; entered the navy in 1746; steadily rose in rank till, in 1795, he became admiral of the Blue and commander of the North Sea fleet; kept watch over the movements of the Dutch squadron for two years, till, at the end of that term, it put to sea, and came up with it off Camperdown, and totally defeated it, June 11, 1797 (1751-1804).

DUNCAN, THOMAS, a Scottish artist, born at Kinclaven, Perthshire; painted fancy and historical subjects, and a number of excellent portraits; his career, which was full of promise, was cut short by an early death (1807-1845).

DUNCIAL, THE, a satire by Pope in four books, the "fiercest" as well as the best of his satires, in which, with merciless severity, he applies the lash to his critics, and in which Colley Cibber figures as the King of Dunce.

DUNCER, MAX, a historical writer, born in Berlin; held a professorship at Halle and Tübingen, and became a minister of State; wrote among other works, in seven vols., the "History of Antiquity" (1811-1860).

DUNCOMBE, THOMAS SLINGSBY, an English politician, M.P. for Finsbury, one of the extreme Liberal party of the time, presented to the House of Commons the Chartist petition in 1842; denounced Sir James Graham, the Home Secretary of the day, for opening Mazzini's letter, and advocated Jewish emancipation (1794-1861).

DUNDALK, capital of co. Louth, Ireland, 20 m. N. of Dublin; a place of considerable trade and manufactures; is an ancient city; Edward Bruce, the last king of all Ireland, was crowned and resided here; it was besieged and taken more than once, by Cromwell for one.

DUNDAS (of Armliston), the name of a Scottish family, many of the members of which have distinguished themselves at the bar and on the bench.

DUNDAS, HENRY, VISCOUNT MELVILLE, a junior member of the above family; trained for the bar; rose to be Lord Advocate for Scotland and M.P. for the county of Edinburgh; opposed at first to Pitt, he became at last his ablest coadjutor in Parliament, and did important services in connection with the military and naval defences of the country; his power was sovereign in Scotland; his statue, mounted on a lofty column, adorns one of the principal squares of the New Town of Edinburgh (1742-1811).

DUNDEE, the third largest city in Scotland, stands on the Firth of Tay, 10 m. from the mouth; has a large seaport; is a place of considerable commercial enterprise; among its numerous manufactures the chief is the jute; it has a number of valuable institutions, and sends two members to Parliament.

DUNDONALD, THOMAS COCHRANE, EARL OF, entered the navy at the age of 17; became captain of the Speedy, a sloop-of-war of 14 guns and 64 men; captured in ten months 33 vessels; was captured by a French squadron, but had his sword returned to him; signalled himself afterwards in a succession of daring feats; selected to burn the French fleet lying at anchor in the Basque Roads, he was successful by means of fireships in destroying several vessels, but complained he was not supported by Lord Gambler, the admiral, a complaint which was fatal to his promotion in the service; disgraced otherwise, he went abroad and served in foreign navies, and materially contributed to the establishment of the republic of Chile and the empire of Brazil; in 1880 he was restored by his party, the Whigs, to his naval rank, as a man who had been the victim of the opposite party, and made a vice-admiral of the Blue in 1841; he afterwards vindi-

- cated himself in his "Autobiography of a Seaman" (1775-1860).
- DUNEDIN, the capital of Otago, in New Zealand, situated well south on the E. side of the South Isle, at the head of a spacious bay, and the largest commercial city in the colony; founded by Scottish emigrants in 1848, one of the leaders a nephew of Robert Burns.
- DUNES, low hills of sand extending along the coast of the Netherlands and the N. of France.
- DUNFERMLINE, an ancient burgh in the W. of Fife; a place of interest as a residence of the early kings of Scotland, and as the birthplace of David II., James I., and Charles I., and for its abbey; it stands in the middle of a coalfield, and is the seat of extensive linen manufactures.
- DUNKELD, a town in Perthshire, 15 m. NW. of Perth, with a fine 14th-century cathedral.
- DUNKERS, a sect of Quakerist Baptists in the United States, who settled there from Germany in 1719.
- DUNKIRK, the most northern seaport and fortified town of France, on the Strait of Dover; has manufactures and considerable trade.
- DUNNET HEAD, a rocky peninsula, the most northerly point in Scotland, the rocks from 100 to 600 ft. high.
- DUNNOTAR CASTLE, an old castle of the Keiths now in ruins, on the flat summit of a precipitous rock, 1½ m. S. of Stonehaven, Kincardineshire, Scotland, and connected with the mainland by a neck of land called the "Fiddle Head"; famous in Scottish history as a State prison, and as the place of safe-keeping at a troubled period of the Scottish regalia, now in Edinburgh Castle.
- DUNOIS, JEAN, a French patriot, called the Bastard of Orleans, born in Paris, natural son of Louis of Orleans, brother of Charles VI.; one of the national heroes of France; along with Joan of Arc, compelled the English to raise the siege of Orleans, and contributed powerfully, by his sword, to all but expel the English from France after the death of that heroine (1402-1490).
- DUNRAVEN, EARL OF, Irish politician and soldier. He acted as war correspondent at the siege of Paris in 1870, and fought in the Boer War. On the establishment of the Irish Free State he became a senator. As a yachtsman he twice attempted to win the America Cup (1841-1926).
- DUNS SCOTUS, JOHANNES, one of the most celebrated of the scholastics of the 14th century, whether he was native of England, Scotland, or Ireland is uncertain; entered the Franciscan order, and from his acuteness got the name of "Doctor Subtilis"; lectured at Oxford to crowds of auditors, and also at Paris; was the contemporary of Thomas Aquinas, and the head of an opposing school of Scotists, as against Thomists, as they were called; whereas Aquinas "proclaimed the Understanding as principle, he proclaimed the Will, from whose spontaneous exercise he derived all morality; with this separation of theory from practice and thought from thing (which accompanied it) philosophy became divided from theology, reason from faith; reason took a position above faith, above authority (in modern philosophy), and the religious consciousness broke with the traditional dogma (at the Reformation)" (1265-1308).
- DUNSTAN, ST., an English ecclesiastic, born at Glastonbury; a man of high birth and connection as well as varied accomplishments; began a religious life as a monk living in a cell by himself, and prevailed in single combat on one occasion with the devil; became abbot of Glastonbury, in which capacity he adopted the rôle of statesman, and rose to great authority during the reign of Edgar, becoming archbishop of Canterbury, ruling the nation with vigour and success, but with the death of Edgar his power declined, and he retired to Canterbury, where he died of grief and vexation; he is the patron saint of goldsmiths (924-988).
- DUPANLOUP, FELIX ANTOINE, a French prelate, bishop of Orleans, born at St. Felix in Savoy; a singularly able and eloquent man; devoted himself to educational emancipation and reform; protested vigorously against papal infallibility; yielded at length, and stood up in defence of the Church (1802-1878).
- DUPERRE, a French admiral, born at La Rochelle; contributed with Marshal Bournat to the taking of Algiers (1775-1846).
- DUPERON, cardinal, a Swiss by birth and a Calvinist by religious profession; went to Paris, turned papist, and rose to ecclesiastical eminence in France under Henry IV. (1556-1618).
- DUPIN, ANDRÉ, French jurist and statesman; distinguished at the time of the revolution of the three days as a supporter of Louis Philippe, and of the house of Orleans after him (1783-1865).
- DUPLEX, JOSEPH, a French merchant, head of a factory at Chandernagore, who rose to be governor of the French settlements in India (1742), in the management of which he displayed conspicuous ability, defending them against the English and receiving the dignity of marquis; jealousy at home and Clive's victories, however, led to his recall, and he was left to end his days in neglect and poverty, though he pleaded hard with the cabinet at Versailles to have respect to the sacrifices he made for his country (1697-1783).
- DUPLESSIS MORNAY, a soldier, diplomatist, and man of letters; a leader of the Huguenots, who, after the massacre of St. Bartholomew, visited England, where he was received with favour by Elizabeth in 1575; entered the service of the King of Navarre, afterwards Henry IV. of France, but on Henry's reconciliation with the Church of Rome, retired into private life and devoted himself to literary pursuits; he was called the "Pope of the Huguenots"; 1628.
- DUPONT, PIERRE, French song-writer; his songs, "Le Chant des Ouvriers" and "Les Bœufs," the delight of the young generation of 1848 (1821-1870).
- DUPONT DE L'ÈURE, a French politician, born at Neubourg; filled several important offices in the successive periods of revolution in France; was distinguished for his integrity and patriotism, and made President of the Provisional Government in 1848 (1767-1855).
- DUPONT DE NEMOURS, French political economist; took part in the Revolution; was opposed to the excesses of the Jacobin party, but escaped with his life; wrote a book entitled "Philosophie de l'Univers" (1739-1817).
- DUPUIS, CHARLES FRANÇOIS, a French savant; was a member of the Convention of the Council of the Five Hundred, and President of the Legislative Body during the Revolution period; devoted himself to the study of astronomy in connection with mythology, the result of which was published in his work in 12 vols., entitled "Origine de tous les Cultes, ou la Religion Universelle"; he advocated the unity of the astronomical and religious myths of all nations (1742-1809).
- DUFUYTREN, BARON, a celebrated French surgeon, born at Pierre-Buffière; he was a man of firm nerve, signally sure and skilful as an operator, and contributed greatly, both by his inventions and discoveries, to the progress of surgery; a museum of pathological anatomy, in which he made important discoveries, bears his name (1777-1835).
- DUQUESNE, ABRAHAM, MARQUIS, an illustrious naval officer of France, born at Dieppe; distinguished himself in many a sea engagement, and did much to enhance the naval glory of the country; among other achievements plucked the laurels from the brow of his great rival, De Ruyter, by, in 1676, defeating the combined fleets of Spain and Holland under his command; Louis XIV. offered him a marshal's baton if he would abjure Calvinism, but he declined; he was the only one of the Huguenots excepted from proscription in the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes, but his last days were saddened by the banishment of his children (1610-1688).
- DURA DEN, a glen near Cupar-Pfife, famous for the number of ganoid fossil fishes entombed in its sandstone.
- DURANCE, a tributary of the Rhône, which, after a rapid course of 190 m., falls into that river by its left bank 3 m. below Avignon.
- DURAND, an Indian officer; served in the Afghan and Sikh wars, and became Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab (1828-1871).
- DURANDAL, the miraculous sword of Orlando, with which he could cleave mountains at a blow.

DURBAN, the port of Natal, largest town in the province, with a landlocked harbour.

DURBAR, a ceremonious State reception in India.

DÜRER, ALBERT, the great early German painter and engraver, born at Nürnberg, son of a goldsmith, a good man, who brought him up to his own profession, but he preferred painting, for which he early exhibited a special aptitude, and his father bound him apprentice for three years to the chief artist in the place, at the expiry of which he travelled in Germany and other parts; in 1506 he visited Venice, where he met Bellini, and painted several pictures; proceeded thence to Bologna, and was introduced to Raphael; his fame spread widely, and on his return he was appointed court-painter by the Emperor Maximilian, an office he held under Charles V., he was of the Reformed faith, and a friend of Melancthon as well as an admirer of Luther, on whose incarceration in Warburg he uttered a long lament; he was a prince of painters, his drawing and colouring perfect, and the inventor of etching, in which he was matchless; he carved in wood, ivory, stone, and metal; was an author as well as an artist, and wrote, among other works, an epoch-making treatise on proportion in the human figure; "It could not be better done" was his quiet, confident reply as a sure workman to a carper on one occasion (1471-1528).

D'URFEY, TOM, a facetious poet; author of comedies and songs; a great favourite of Charles II. and his court; of comedies he wrote some 30, which are all now discarded for their licentiousness, and a curious book of sonnets, entitled "Pills to Purge Melancholy"; came to poverty in the end of his days; Addison pleaded on his behalf, and hoped that "as he had made the world merry, the world would make him easy" (1628-1723).

DURGA, in the Hindu mythology the consort of Siva. DURHAM, an ancient city on the Wear, with a noble cathedral and a castle, once the residence of the bishop, now a university seat, in the heart of a county of the same name, rich in coalfields, and with numerous manufacturing towns.

DURHAM, ADMIRAL, entered the navy in 1777; was officer on the watch when the Royal George went down off Spithead, and the only one with Captain Waghorn who escaped; served as acting-lieutenant of a ship under Lord Howe at the relief of Gibraltar, and commanded the Defence, a ship of 74 guns, at the battle of Trafalgar (1763-1815).

DURHAM, JOHN GEORGE LAMETON, EARL OF, statesman, born in Durham Co.; a zealous Liberal and reformer, and a member of the Reform Government under Earl Grey, which he contributed much to inaugurate; was ambassador in St. Petersburg, and was sent governor-general to Canada in 1839, but owing to some misunderstanding took the extraordinary step of voluntarily returning within the year (1792-1840).

DURWARD, QUENTIN, a Scottish archer in the service of Louis XI., the hero of a novel by Scott of the name.

DÜSSELDORF, a well-built town of Rhenish Prussia, on the right bank of the Rhine; it is a place of manufactures, and has a fine picture-gallery with a famous school of art associated.

DUTENS, LOUIS, a French savant, born at Tours; after being chaplain to the British minister at Turin, settled in England, and became historiographer-royal; was a man of varied learning, and well read in historical subjects and antiquities (1730-1812).

DUTROCHET, RENÉ JOACHIM HENRI, a French physiologist and physicist, known for his researches on the passage of fluids through membranous tissues (1776-1847).

DUUMVIRS, the name of two Roman magistrates who exercised the same public functions.

DUVAL, CLAUDE, a French numismatist, and writer on numismatics; keeper of the imperial cabinet of Vienna; was originally a shepherd boy (1695-1776).

DUYEN, SIR JOSEPH JOEL, Anglo-Dutch art dealer and patron. He gave several works to national collections and built the Turner wing of the Tate Gallery (1843-1908).

DVOŘÁK, ANTONÍN, Bohemian composer. It was his "Stabat Mater," composed in 1880 that won him international fame. His work shows great originality (1841-1904).

DWARF STARS are those of comparatively small volume and brightness and of high density, like our sun. See STELLAR EVOLUTION.

DWIGHT, TIMOTHY, an American theologian, grandson of Jonathan Edwards, and much esteemed in his day both as a preacher and a writer; his "Theology Explained and Defended," in 5 vols., was very popular at one time, and was frequently reprinted (1762-1817).

DWINA, a Russian river, distinguished from the Dna (q.v.) also called Duna, which flows N. to the White Sea.

DYAKS, the native name of tribes of Malays of a superior class aboriginal to Borneo.

DYCE, ALEXANDER, an English literary editor and historian, born in Edinburgh; edited several of the old English poets and authors, some of them little known before; also the poems of Shakespeare, Pope, &c.; was one of the founders of the Percy Society, for the publication of old English works (1798-1869).

DYCE, WILLIAM, a distinguished Scottish artist, born in Aberdeen, studied in Rome; settled for a time in Edinburgh, and finally removed to London; painted portraits at first, but soon took to higher subjects of art; his work was such as to commend itself to both German and French artists; he gave himself to fresco-painting, and as a fresco-painter was selected to adorn the walls of the Palace of Westminster and the House of Lords; his "Baptism of Ethelbert," in the latter, is considered his best work (1806-1864).

DYCK, VAN. See VANDYCK.

DYER, JOHN, English poet; was a great lover and student of landscape scenery, and his poems, "Grongar Hill" and the "Fleece," abound in descriptions of these, the sea in 8. Wales (1700-1758).

DYKES, veins of igneous rock traversing sedimentary strata in a vertical direction, which originated through molten lava, being forced out through the cracks in the overlying rocks and solidifying. These dykes are often harder than the surrounding rock, and, consequently, they stand out above the surface when the latter has been removed by denudation.

DYNAMICS, the branch of mechanics which deals with the relations between forces and the motions caused by those forces.

DYNAMITE, a powerful explosive substance, intensely local in its action; formed by impregnating a porous siliceous earth or other substance with some 70 per cent. of nitro-glycerine.

DYNAMO, a machine by which mechanical work is transformed into electricity by the inductive action of magnets on coils of copper wire in motion.

DYNASTS, THE, an epic poem by Thomas Hardy, produced in three parts in 1903, 1906, and 1908.

DYNE, the unit of force on the metric system; that force which gives a mass of one gram an acceleration of one centimetre per second per second.

DYSON, SIR FRANK WATSON, astronomer, appointed astronomer-royal at Greenwich in 1910 (1868-).

EADMER

EADMER, a celebrated monk of Canterbury; flourished in the 12th century; friend and biographer of St. Anselm, author of a "History of his Own Times," as also of many of the Lives of the Saints; elected to the bishopric of St. Andrews in 1120; resigned on account of Alexander I. of Scotland refusing to admit the right of the English Archbishop of Canterbury to perform the ceremony of consecration.

EADRIC, a Saxon, notorious for his treachery, fighting now with his countrymen against the Danes and now with the Danes against them, till put to death by order of Canute in 1017.

EADS, JAMES BUCHANAN, an American engineer, born in Laurensburg, Indiana; designed ingenious boats for floating submerged ships; built with remarkable speed warships for the Federalists in 1861; constructed a steel bridge spanning the Mississippi at St. Louis, noteworthy for its central span of 620 ft. (1820-1887).

EAGLE, the king of birds, and bird of Jove; was adopted by various nations as the emblem of dominant power, as well as of nobility and generosity; in Christian art it is the symbol of meditation, and the attribute of St. John; is represented now as fighting with a serpent, and now as drinking out of a chalice or a communion cup, to strengthen it for the fight.

EAGLE, ORDER OF THE BLACK, an order of knighthood founded by the Elector of Brandenburg in 1701; with this order was ultimately incorporated the Order of the Red Eagle, founded in 1734 by the great of Bayreuth.

OF BRITANNY, Du Guesclin (q.v.).

OF MEAUX, Besset (q.v.).

E, a name given in England to a tidal wave rushing up a river or estuary on the top of another, called also a Bore (q.v.).

EARL, a title of nobility, ranking third in the British peerage; originally election to the dignity of earl carried with it a grant of land held in feudal tenure, the discharge of judicial and administrative duties connected therewith, and was the occasion of a solemn service of investiture. In course of time the title lost its official character, and since the reign of Queen Anne all ceremony of investiture has been dispensed with, the title being conferred by letters patent. The word is derived from the Anglo-Saxon eorl which signified the "gentle folk," as distinguished from the ceorls, the "churls" or "simple folk."

EARL MARSHAL, a high officer of State, an office of very ancient institution, now the head of the college of arms, and hereditary in the family of the Dukes of Norfolk; formerly one of the chief officers in the court of chivalry, a court which had to do with all matters of high ceremonial, such as coronations.

EARLOM, RICHARD, a mezzotint engraver, born in London; celebrated for his series of 200 prints after the original designs of Claude de Lorraine (1743-1822).

EARLSTON, or EROLDOUNE, a village in Berwickshire, with manufactures of gingham and other textiles. In its vicinity stand the ruins of the "Rhymer's Tower," alleged to have been the residence of Thomas the Rhymer.

EARLY ENGLISH, a term in architecture used to designate that particular form of Gothic architecture in vogue in England in the 13th century, whose chief characteristic was the pointed arch.

EARTH, name given to that wire of a wireless set or other electrical apparatus, which connects a certain part with the earth and therefore keeps it at zero potential.

EARTH HOUSES, known also as Yird Houses, Weems and Piots' Houses, underground dwellings in use in Scotland, extant even after the Roman evacuation of Britain. Entrance was effected by a passage not much wider than a fox burrow, which sloped downwards 10 or 12 ft. to the floor of the house; the inside was oval in shape, and was walled with overlapping rough stone slabs; the roof frequently reached to within a foot of the earth's surface; they probably served as storehouses, winterquarters, and as places of refuge in times of war. Similar dwellings, styled Caves, are found in Ireland.

EASTWICK

EARTHLY PARADISE, poem by William Morris, published in 1868; his greatest effort, considered his masterpiece; consists of 24 tales by 24 Norwegian travellers in quest of an earthly paradise.

EARTHQUAKES, disturbances of the earth's surface such as are recorded from early times. Of modern times the most disastrous has been that of 1755 at Lisbon when 50,000 lives were lost; Jamaica suffered in 1907, South Mexico in 1911, Tokyo and Yokohama in 1923 and 1924, and the Azores in 1927.

EAST INDIA COMPANY, founded in 1600; erected its first factories on the mainland in 1612 at Surat, but its most profitable trade in these early years was with the Spice Islands, Java, Sumatra, &c.; driven from these islands by the Dutch in 1822, the Company established itself altogether on the mainland; although originally created under royal charter for purely commercial purposes, it in 1689 entered upon a career of territorial acquisition, which culminated in the establishment of British power in India; gradually, as from time to time fresh renewals of its charter were granted, it was stripped of its privileges and monopolies, till in 1858, after the Mutiny, all its powers were vested in the British Crown. See CLIVE.

EAST RIVER, the strait which separates Brooklyn and New York cities, lying between Long Island Sound and New York Bay, about 10 m. long; is spanned by a bridge.

EASTBOURNE, a watering-place and health resort on the Sussex coast, between Brighton and Hastings and 66 m. S. of London; has Roman remains, and is described in Domesday Book; the famous cliff, Beachy Head, is included in the borough.

EASTER, an important festival of the Church commemorating the resurrection of Christ; held on the first Sunday after the first full moon of the calendar which happens on or next after March 21, and constituting the beginning of the ecclesiastical year; the date of it determines the dates of other movable festivals; derives its name from Eostre, a Saxon goddess, whose festival was celebrated about the same time, and to which many of the Easter customs owe their origin.

EASTER ISLAND, a volcanic island in the SE. Pacific, so named by the Dutch when discovered in 1722; remarkable for remains of ancient stone statues of great size, the origin of which has given rise to much conjecture; the island, visited by Captain Cook in 1774, belongs to Chile.

EASTERN STATES, the six New England States in N. America—Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, and Connecticut.

EASTLAKE, SIR CHARLES LOCK, artist and author, born at Plymouth; studied painting in London and in Paris; produced the last portrait of Napoleon, which he executed from a series of sketches of the emperor on board the Bellevue in Plymouth harbour; he travelled in Greece, and from 1816 to 1830 made his home at Rome; "Christ Weeping over Jerusalem," his greatest work, appeared in 1841; was President of the Royal Academy; wrote several works on subjects relating to his art, and translated Goethe's "Farbenlehre" (1793-1865).

EASTMAN, GEORGE, American scientist, inventor of the roll-film for photography and designer of the Kodak cameras; founder of the Kodak company (1854-).

EASTWICK, EDWARD BACKHOUSE, Orientalist and diplomatist, born at Warfield, in Berkshire; went to India as a cadet, acquired an extensive knowledge of Indian dialects and Eastern languages, and passed an Interpretship examination, gaining the high proficiency reward of 1000 rupees; carried through peace negotiations with China in 1842; inviolable home, he became professor of Hindustani at Haileybury College; afterwards studied law and was called to the bar; entered Parliament, and held various political appointments, including a three years' embassy in Persia; was a fellow of many antiquarian and philological societies; amongst his numerous literary productions his "Gulistān" and "Life of Zoroaster" from the Persian are noted (1814-1893).

EAU-DE-COLOGNE, a perfume originally manufactured at Cologne by distillation from certain essential oils with rectified spirit.

ERAI, MOUNT, a mountain with a level summit, which rises to the height of 3077 ft. on the N. side of the narrow Vale of Shechem, in Palestine, and from the slopes of which the people of Israel responded to the curses which were pronounced by the Levites in the valley.

ESSEBARD, JOHANN AUGUST, German philosophical writer, born at Halberstadt; professor at Halle; rationalistic in his theology, and opposed to the Kantian metaphysics; was a disciple of Leibnitz; wrote a "New Apology of Socrates," in defence of rationalism in theology, as well as a "Universal History of Philosophy," and a work on German synonyms (1789-1809).

ESSER, GEORGE MORITZ, German Egyptologist, born at Berlin; discovered an important papyrus; was professor successively at Jena and Leipzig; laid aside by ill-health, betook himself to novel-writing as a pastime; was the author of "Uarda, a Romance of Ancient Egypt," translated by Clara Bell (1837-1898).

ESBERT, FRIEDRICH, German statesman. Educated at an elementary school he became a saddler in Heidelberg; at 22 he edited a Socialist newspaper, but was practically an unknown man when on the revolution of 1918 he was made Chancellor in succession to Prince Max of Baden. In 1919 he became first President of the German Republic (1870-1925).

ESBERT, KALL EGON, a Bohemian poet, born at Prague; his poems, dramatic and lyric, are collected in 7 vols., and enjoy a wide popularity in his country (1801-1882).

EBIONITES, a sect that in the 2nd century sought to combine Judaism and the hopes of Judaism with Christianity, and rejected the authority of St. Paul and of the Pauline writings; they denied the divinity of Christ, and maintained that only the poor as such were the objects of salvation.

EBLIS, in Mohammedan tradition the chief of the fallen angels, who was consigned to perdition for refusing to worship Adam at the command of his Creator, and who gratified his revenge by seducing Adam and Eve from innocence.

EBRO, a river of Spain, rises in the Cantabrian Mountains, flows SE. into the Mediterranean 80 m. SW. of Barcelona, after a course of 422 m.

ECBATANA, the ancient capital of Media, situated near Mount Orontes (now Elvend); was surrounded by seven walls of different colours that increased in elevation towards the central citadel; was a summer residence of the Persian and Parthian kings. The modern town of Hamadan now occupies the site of it.

ECE HOMO (i.e. Behold the Man), a representation of Christ as He appeared before Pilate crowned with thorns and bound with ropes, as in the painting of Correggio, a subject which has been treated by many of the other masters, such as Titian and Vandreyk.

ECHYMOISIS, a discoloration of the skin produced by extravasated blood under or in the texture of the skin, the result of a blow or of disease.

ECCLESTREHAN, a market-town of Dunfriesshire, consisting for the most part of the High Street, 5 m. S. of Lockerbie, on the main road to Carlisle, 18 m. to the S.; noted as the birth and burial place of Thomas Carlyle.

ECCLESIASTES (i.e. the Preacher), a book of the Old Testament, questionably ascribed to Solomon, and now deemed of more recent date as belonging to a period when the reflective spirit prevailed; it is written apparently in depreciation of mere reflection as a stepping-stone to wisdom. The standpoint of the author is a religious one; the data on which he rests is given in experience, and his object is to expose the vanity of every source of satisfaction which is not founded on the fear, and has not supreme regard for the commandments, of God, a doctrine which is the very ground-principle of the Jewish faith; but if vanity is written over the whole field of human experience, he argues, this is not the fault of the system of things, but due, according to the author, to the folly of man (chap. vii. 29).

ECCLESIASTICAL COMMISSIONERS, the body which looks after Church property and estates; first appointed by Queen Elizabeth, they were subsequently abolished and revived and finally put on their present basis in 1835.

ECCLESIASTICAL POLITY, THE LAW OF, a vindication of the Anglican Church against the Puritans, written by Richard Hooker; the most splendid and stately piece of literary prose that exists in the language.

ECCLESIASTICAL STATES, territories in Italy once subject to the Pope as a temporal prince as well as ecclesiastically. They were taken by Italy in 1870 and a small part around the Vatican was restored in 1929 by the Lateran Treaty (q.v.).

ECCLESIASTICUS, one of the books of the Apocrypha, ascribed to Jesus, the son of Sirach, admitted to the sacred canon by the Council of Trent, though excluded by the Jews. It contains a body of wise maxims, in imitation, as regards matter as well as form, of the Proverbs of Solomon, and an appendix on the men who were the disciples of wisdom. Its general aim, as has been said, is "to represent wisdom as the source of all virtue and blessedness, and by warnings, admonitions, and promises to encourage in the pursuit of it." It was originally written in Hebrew, but was extant only in a Greek translation executed in Egypt, professedly by the author's grandson, until in 1896 portions of the original Hebrew MSS. were discovered.

ECCHEBERT, archbishop of York; was a pupil of Bede, and the heir to his learning; founded a famous school at York, which developed into a university; flourished in 766.

ECHEGARAY, JOSE, Spanish dramatist and politician; born in Madrid; prominent as a leader of the reform party in Spain (1833-1916).

ECHIDNA, a fabulous monster that figures in the Greek mythology, half-woman, half-serpent, the mother of Cerberus, the Lernean Hydra, the Chimæra, the Sphinx, the Gorgons, the Nemean Lion, and the vulture that gnawed the liver of Prometheus.

ECHINODERMS, a group of marine invertebrates including star fishes, sea-urchins (echinoids), sea-lilies (crinoids), and extinct fossil forms like blastoids and cystideans.

ECHINOIDS, or sea-urchins, invertebrate animals of the echinoderm group.

ECHO, a wood-nymph in love with Narcissus, who did not return her love, in consequence of which she pined away till all that remained of her was only her voice.

ECK, JOHN, properly MAIER, a German theologian, of Swabian birth, professor at Ingolstadt; a violent, blistering antagonist of Luther and Luther's doctrines; in his zeal went to Rome, and procured a papal bull against both; undertook at the Augsburg Diet to controvert Luther's doctrine from the Fathers, but not from the Scriptures; was present at the conferences of Worms and Regensburg (1496-1543).

ECKERMANN, JOHANN PETER, a German writer, born at Wismen, in Hanover; friend of Goethe, and editor of his works; the author of "Conversations with Goethe in the Last Years of his Life, 1823-1832," a record of wise reflections and of Goethe's opinions on all subjects, of the utmost interest to all students of the German sage (1792-1854).

ECKHART, MEINSTER, a German philosopher and divine, profoundly speculative and mystical; entered the Dominican Order, and rapidly attained to a high position in the Church; arraigned for heresy in 1295, and was acquitted, but two years after his death his writings were condemned as heretical by a papal bull (1260-1329).

ECKMÜHL, a village in Bavaria where Napoleon defeated the Austrians in 1809, and which gave the title of Duke to Davout (q.v.), one of Napoleon's generals.

ELECTICIS, so-called philosophers who attach themselves to no system, but select what, in their judgment, is true out of others. In antiquity the Eclectic philosophy is that which sought to unite into a coherent whole the doctrines of Pythagoras, Plato, and Aristotle, such as that of Plotinus and Proclus was. There is an eclecticism in art as well as philosophy, and the term is applied to an Italian school which aimed at uniting the excellencies of individual great masters.

ECLIPSES, phenomena caused by the sun, earth and moon being in one straight line; a solar eclipse occurs when the moon passes between the sun and the earth, when it may obscure the whole of the sun's disc (total eclipse), a portion of the disc (partial eclipse), or the whole of the central part leaving a bright rim (annular eclipse). The last total eclipse visible in England was in June, 1927, and the next will occur in 1999. A lunar eclipse takes place when the moon passes into the earth's shadow; it may be either total or partial; in every year there are at least two and at most seven eclipses, either solar or lunar.

ECLIPTIC, the name given to the circular path in the heavens round which the sun appears to move in the course of the year, an illusion caused by the earth's annual circuit round the sun, in a plane inclined at an angle of $23\frac{1}{2}$ degrees to the equator; is the central line of the Zodiac (q.v.), so called because it was observed that eclipses occurred only when the moon was on or close upon this path.

ELOGUE, poetry of a pastoral nature written in a refined style; applied to some of the work of Virgil and Horace, and in later times to poems by Spenser, Dryden, Fletcher, and others.

EKOLOGY, the branch of biology which studies the relations between animals and plants and their environment.

ECORCHEURS (lit. flayers properly of dead bodies), armed bands who desolated France in the reign of Charles VII., stripping their victims of everything, often to their very clothes.

ECSTATIC DOCTOR, Jean Ruysbroek, a schoolman given to mysticism (1294-1381).

ECUADOR, a republic of S. America, of Spanish origin, created in 1822; derives its name from its position on the equator; lies between Colombia and Peru; is traversed by the Andes, several of the peaks of which are actively volcanic; the population consists of Peruvian Indians, negroes, Spanish Creoles; exports cacao, coffee, hides, oil, and medicinal plants; the administration is vested in a president, a vice-president, two ministers, a senate of 18, and a house of deputies of 30, elected by universal suffrage.

ECUMENICAL COUNCIL, an eclesiastical council representative, or accepted as representative, of the Church universal or Catholic. See COUNCILS.

ECZEMA, a common skin disease, which may be either chronic or acute; develops in a red rash of tiny vesicles, which usually burst and produce a characteristic scab; is not contagious, and leaves no scar.

EDDA (lit. grandmother), the name given to two collections of legends illustrative of the Scandinavian mythology; the Elder, or Poetic, Edda, collected in the 11th century by Sæmund Sigfusson, an early Christian priest, with perhaps a lingering fondness for paganism, and the Younger, or Prose, Edda, collected in the next century by Snorri Sturluson, an Icelandic gentleman (1178-1241); the former consists of over 30 poems, mostly in alliterative verse, the latter contains legends as related by Odin with treatises on poetry and prosody.

EDDINGTON, SIR ARTHUR STANLEY, astronomer, director of the Cambridge Observatory; devoted himself to the study of astrophysics, in which sphere he has produced important results; wrote many books on astronomical subjects and on the application of the relativity theory of Einstein to astronomy; he was knighted in 1930 (1882-).

EDDY, MRS. MARY BAKER, the American woman founder of Christian Science and the Church of Christ, Scientist; in 1875 she produced the sect's standard work "Science and Health in Key to the Scriptures" (1882-1910).

EDDYSTONE LIGHTHOUSE, situated on a low reef of rocks submerged at high tide, 14 m. SW. of Plymouth; first built of wood by Winstanley, 1696; destroyed by a storm in 1703; rebuilt of wood on a stone base by Rudyard; burnt in 1758, and reconstructed by Smeaton of solid stone, this structure lasting for over 100 years before being dismantled; the present edifice, on a different site, was completed by Sir James Douglas in 1882, is 133 ft. in height, and has a light visible 17½ m. off.

EDELINCK, GERARD, a Flemish copperplate engraver, born at Antwerp; invited to France by Colbert, and patronised by Louis XIV.; executed in a masterly manner many works from historical subjects (1640-1707).

EDEN (i.e. place of delight), Paradise, the original spot referred to uncertain, though believed to have been in the East around the rivers Tigris and Euphrates; identified in Moslem tradition with the moon.

EDERLE, GERTRUDE, the first woman to swim the English Channel, which she did from France to England in 14 hrs. 35 mins., then a record, in 1926. She was the daughter of a New York butcher (1906-).

EDESSA, an ancient city in Mesopotamia; figures in early Church history, and is reputed to have contained at one time 300 monasteries; it fell into the hands of the Turks in 1515; is regarded as the sacred city of Abraham by Orientals.

EDFU, a town in Upper Egypt, on the left bank of the Nile; has unique ruins of two temples, the larger founded by Ptolemy IV. Philopater before 200 B.C.

EDGAR, a king of Saxon England from 959 to 975, surnamed the Peaceful; promoted the union and consolidation of the Danish and Saxon elements within his realm; cleared Wales of wolves by exacting of its inhabitants a levy of 300 wolves' heads yearly; eight kings are said to have done him homage by rowing him on the Dee; St. Dunstan, the archbishop of Canterbury, was the most prominent figure of the reign.

EDGAR THE ATHELING, a Saxon prince, the grandson of Edmund Ironside; was hurriedly proclaimed king of England after the death of Harold in the battle of Hastings, but was amongst the first to offer submission on the approach of the Conqueror; spent his life in a series of feeble attempts at rebellion, and lived into the reign of Henry I.

EDGEHILL, in the E. of Warwickshire, the scene of the first battle in the Civil War, in 1642, between the royal forces under Charles I. and the Parliamentary under Essex; though the Royalists had the worst of it, no real advantage was gained by either side.

EDGEWORTH, HENRY ESSEX, known as the "Abbé" Edgeworth, born in Ireland, son of a Protestant clergyman; educated at the Sorbonne, in Paris; entered the priesthood, and became the confessor of Louis XVI., whom he attended on the scaffold; exclaimed as the guillotine came down, "Son of St. Louis, ascend to heaven!" left France soon after; was subsequently chaplain to Louis XVIII. (1745-1807).

EDGEWORTH, MARIA, novelist, born at Black-bourton, Berks; from her fifteenth year her home was in Ireland; she declined the suit of a Swedish count, and remained till the close of her life unmarried; amongst the best known of her works are "Moral Tales," "Tales from Fashionable Life," "Castle Rackrent," "The Absentee," and "Ormond"; her novels are noted for their animated pictures of Irish life, and were acknowledged by Scott to have given him the first suggestion of the Waverley series; the Russian novelist, Turgenev, acknowledged a similar indebtedness; "In her Irish stories she gave," says Stopford Brooke, "the first impulse to the novel of national character, and in her other tales to the novel with a moral purpose" (1766-1849).

EDGEWORTH, RICHARD LOVELL, an Irish landlord, father of Maria Edgeworth, with a genius for mechanics, in which he displayed a remarkable talent for invention; was member of the last Irish Parliament; educated his son in accordance with the notions of Rousseau; wrote some works on mechanical subjects in collaboration with his daughter (1744-1817).

EDICT OF NANTES, an edict issued in 1598 by Henry IV. of France, granting toleration to the Protestants; revoked by Louis XIV. in 1685.

EDINBURGH, the capital of Scotland, on the Firth of Forth, picturesquely situated amid surrounding hills; derives its name from Edwin, king of Northumbria in the 7th century; was created a burgh in 1329 by Robert the Bruce, and recognised as the capital in the 15th century, under the Stuarts; it has absorbed in its growth adjoining municipalities; is noted as an educational centre; is the seat of the Supreme Courts; has a university, castle, and royal palace, and the old Scottish Parliament House, now utilised by the Law Courts; brewing and printing are the chief industries, but the upper classes of the citizens are for the most part either professional people or living in retirement.

EDINBURGH REVIEW, a celebrated quarterly review started in October, 1802, in Edinburgh to further the "Whig" interest; amongst its founders and contributors were Horner, Brougham, Jeffrey, and Sidney Smith, the latter being editor of the first three numbers; Jeffrey assumed the editorship in 1803, and in his hands it became famous for its incisive literary critiques, Carlyle and Macaulay contributing some of their finest essays to it.

EDINBURGH UNIVERSITY, founded in 1583; was the last of the Scottish Universities to receive its charter; was raised to an equal status with the others in 1821; its site was the famous Kirk o' Field, the scene of the Darnley tragedy; now consists of two separate buildings, one entirely devoted to medicine, and the other to arts and training in other departments.

EDISON, THOMAS ALVA, a celebrated American inventor, born at Milan, Ohio; started life as a newsboy; early displayed his genius and enterprise by producing the first newspaper printed in a railway train; turning his attention to telegraphy, he revolutionised the whole system by a series of inventions, to which he has since added others, to the number of 500, the most notable being the megaphone, phonograph, kinoscope, which was the forerunner of the cinema, a carbon telegraph transmitter, and improvements in electric lighting (1847-).

EDITH, the alleged name of Lot's wife.

EDITH, ST., an English princess, the natural daughter of Edgar, king of England (961-984). Festival, Sept. 16.

EDMUND, ST., king or "landlord" of East Anglia from 855 to 870; refused to renounce Christianity and accept heathenism at the hands of a set of invading Danes, and suffered martyrdom; rather; was made a saint and had a monastery called "Bury St. Edmunds," in Suffolk, raised to his memory over his grave (841-870).

EDMUND, ST., Edmund Rich, archbishop of Canterbury, born at Abingdon; while still at school made a vow of celibacy and wedded the Virgin Mary; sided as archbishop with the popular party against the tyranny of both Pope and king; coming into disfavour with the papal court retired to France, where, on his arrival, the mother of St. Louis with her sons met him to receive his blessing, and where he spent his last days in a monastery; died in 1240, and was canonised six years after by Innocent IV., somewhat reluctantly it is said (1170-1240).

EDMUND IRONSIDE, succeeded to the throne of England on the death of his father Ethelred the Unready in 1016, but reigned only seven months; he struggled bravely, and at first successfully, against Canute the Dane, but, being defeated, the kingdom ultimately was divided between them (981-1016).

EDOM, or IDUMEA, a mountainous but not unfertile country, comprising the S. of Judaea and part of the N. of Arabia Petraea, 100 m. long by 20 m. broad, peopled originally by the descendants of Esau, who were ruled by "dukes," and were bitterly hostile to the Jews.

EDRED, king of the Anglo-Saxons, son of Edward the Elder; subdued Northumbria; had in the end of his reign St. Dunstan for chief adviser; d. 955.

EDRISI, MOHAMMED, an Arabian geographer, born at Ceuta, in Spain; by request of Roger II. of Sicily wrote an elaborate description of the earth, which held a foremost place amongst medieval geographers (1099-1170).

EDUCATION ACTS were passed in 1870 making education compulsory, and in 1891 making it free in elementary schools.

EDUL, an ancient Gallic tribe, whose capital was Bibrace (Autun).

EDWARD, THOMAS, naturalist, born at Gosport; bred a shoemaker; settled in Bangor where he devoted his leisure to the study of animal nature, and collected numerous specimens of animals, which he stuffed and exhibited, but with pecuniary loss; the Queen's attention being called to his case, she settled on him an annual pension of £50, while the citizens of Aberdeen presented him in March, 1877, with a gift of 130 sovereigns (1814-1886).

EDWARD I., Longshanks, king of England (1272-1307), born in Westminster, son of Henry III., married Eleanor (q.v.) of Castile; came first into prominence in the Barons' War; defeated the nobles at Evesham, and liberated his father; joined the last Crusade in 1270, and distinguished himself at Acre; returned to England in 1274 to assume the crown, having been two years previously proclaimed king; during his reign the ascendancy of the Church and the nobles received a check, the growing aspiration of the people for a larger share in the affairs of the nation was met by an extended franchise, while the right of Parliament to regulate taxation was recognised; under his reign Wales was finally subdued and annexed to England, and a temporary conquest of Scotland was achieved (1239-1307).

EDWARD II., king of England (1307-1327), son of the preceding; was first Prince of Wales, being born in Carnarvon; being a weakling was governed by favourites, Gaveston and the Spencers, whose influence, as foreigners and unpatriotic, offended the barons, who rose against him; in 1314 Scotland rose in arms under Bruce, and an ill-fated expedition under him ended in the crushing defeat at Bannockburn; in 1327 he was deposed, and was brutally murdered in Berkeley Castle (1284-1327).

EDWARD III., king of England (1327-1377), son of the preceding, married Philippa of Hainault; during his boyhood the government was carried on by a council of regency; in 1328 the independence of Scotland was recognised, and nine years later began the Hundred Years' War with France, memorable in this reign for the heroic achievements of Edward the Black Prince (q.v.), the king's eldest son; associated with this reign are the glorious victories of Crécy and Poitiers, and the great naval battle at Sluys, one of the earliest victories of English arms at sea; these successes were not maintained in the later stages of the war, and the treaty of Bretigny involved the withdrawal of Edward's claim to the French crown; in 1376 the Black Prince died (1312-1377).

EDWARD IV., king of England (1461-1483), son of Richard, Duke of York, and successor to the Lancastrian Henry VI., whom he defeated at Towton; throughout his reign the country was torn by the Wars of the Roses, in which victory rested with the Yorkists at Hedgeley Moor, Hexham, Barnet, and Tewkesbury; in this reign little social progress was made, but a great step towards it was made by the introduction of printing by Caxton (1442-1483).

EDWARD V., king of England for three months in 1483, son of the preceding; deposed by his uncle, Richard, Duke of Gloucester; was ultimately murdered in the Tower, along with his young brother (1470-1483).

EDWARD VI., king of England (1547-1553), son of Henry VIII. and Jane Seymour; his reign, which was a brief one, was marked by a victory over the Scots at Pinkie (1547), Catholic and agrarian risings, and certain ecclesiastical reforms (1537-1553).

EDWARD VII., king of Great Britain and Ireland, and Emperor of India, succeeded his mother, Queen Victoria, Jan. 22, 1901. On March 10, 1863, he married Princess Alexandra, eldest daughter of Christian IX. of Denmark. He left four surviving children: George, who succeeded him, b. 1845; Louise, Duchess of Fife, b. 1847; Victoria, b. 1848; and Maud, b. 1860, who married Prince Charles of Denmark. The king's eldest son, Albert Victor, b. 1844, died January 14, 1892. He was known as the Peacemaker, as his reign saw the birth of the Entente Cordiale (1841-1910).

EDWARD, PRINCE OF WALES. Born in Richmond; the eldest son of the then Duke and Duchess of York, afterwards King George and Queen Mary, he went to Osborne at the age of 18, and on to Dartmouth. In 1910 he was created Prince of Wales at Carnarvon, and went to Oxford in 1913. During the Great War he served in France, Egypt, and Italy, and after 1918 undertook a series of tours throughout the Empire (1894-).

EDWARD THE CONFESSOR, king of England, married Edith, daughter of the great Earl Godwin (q.v.); was a feeble monarch of ascetic proclivities; his appeal to the Duke of Normandy precipitated the Norman invasion, and in him perished the royal Saxon line; was canonised for his piety (1004-1066).

EDWARD THE ELDER, king of the Anglo-Saxons from 901 to 925; was the son and successor of Alfred the Great; extended the Anglo-Saxon dominions.

EDWARDES, SIR HERBERT BENJAMIN, soldier and administrator in India, born in Frodesley, Shropshire; was actively engaged in the first Sikh war and in the Mutiny; served under Sir Henry Lawrence, whose life he partly wrote (1819-1868).

EDWARDS, BRYAN, historian, born in Westbury; traded in Jamaica; wrote a "History of British Colonies in the West Indies" (1749-1800).

EDWARDS, JOHN PASMORE, philanthropist; born in Cornwall; as newspaper proprietor owned the Echo; founded libraries, hospitals, and other institutions in poor quarters of London, and established many clubs for working men and women (1823-1911).

EDWARDS, JONATHAN, a celebrated divine, born in F. Windsor, Connecticut; graduated at Yale; minister at Northampton, Mass.; missionary to Housatonic Indians; was elected to the Presidency of Princeton College; wrote an acute and original work, "The Freedom of the Will," a masterpiece of cogent reasoning; has been called the "Spinoza of Calvinism" (1703-1758).

EDWIN, king of Northumbria in the 6th century; through the influence of his wife Ethelburga Christianity was introduced into England by St. Augustine; founded Edinburgh; was defeated and slain by the Mercian King Penda in 634.

EDWY, king of the Anglo-Saxons from 955 to 957; offended the clerical party headed by Dunstan and Odo, who put his wife Elgiva to death, after which he soon died himself at the early age of 19 (938-957).

ECKHOUT, a Dutch portrait and historical painter, born in Antwerp; the most eminent disciple of Rembrandt, whose style he successfully imitated (1621-1674).

EFFEN, VAN, a Dutch author, who wrote chiefly in French; imitated the Spectator of Addison, and translated into French Swift's "Tale of a Tub" and Defoe's "Robinson Crusoe" (1694-1735).

EFFENDI, a title of honour among the Turks, applied to State and civil officials, frequently associated with the name of the office, as well as applied to men of learning or high position.

EFFICIENCY, a term used by engineers to denote the ratio of the output to input of energy of an engine, motor, dynamo, etc.

EFFLORESCENT SUBSTANCES, those crystalline substances which lose their water of crystallisation when exposed to the air and become amorphous, e.g. washing soda.

EGALITÉ, PHILIPPE, Duke of Orleans, born April 18, 1787, father of Louis Philippe; so called because he sided with the Republican party in the French Revolution, whose motto was "Liberté, Fraternité, et Égalité." See ORLEANS, DUKE OF.

EGAN, PIERCE, author of several books on the Bohemian life of London; notably "Boxiana" and "Life in London" (1772-1849).

EGATES, three islands on the W. coast of Sicily.

EGBERT, king of Wessex, a descendant of Cedric the founder; after an exile of 18 years at the court of Charlemagne ascended the throne in 800; reigned till 859, governing his people in tranquillity, when, by successful wars with the other Saxon tribes, he in two years became virtual king of all England, and received the revived title of Bretwalda; d. 887.

EGEDE, HANS, a Norwegian priest, founder of the Danish mission in Greenland, whither he embarked with his family and a small colony of traders in 1721; leaving his son to carry on the mission, and returning to Denmark, he became head of a training school for young missionaries to Greenland (1686-1758).

EGEDE, PAUL, son of Hans; assisted his father in the Greenland mission, and published a history of the same; translated part of the Bible into the language of the country, and composed a grammar and a dictionary of it (1708-1789).

EGER, a town in Bohemia, on the river Eger, 91 m. W. of Prague, a centre of railway traffic; Wallenstein was murdered here in 1634; the river flows into the Elbe after a N.E. course of 190 m.

EGERIA, a nymph who inhabited a grotto in a grove in Latium, dedicated to the Camene, some 16 m. from Rome, and whom, according to tradition, King Numa was in the habit of consulting when engaged in framing forms of religious worship for the Roman community; she figures as his spiritual adviser, and has become the symbol of such.

EGERTON, FRANCIS. See BRIDGEWATER, EARL OF.

EGGER, EMILE, a French Hellenist and philologist (1818-1885).

EGHAM, a small town in Surrey, on the Thames, 20 m. W. of London; has in its vicinity Runnymede, where King John signed Magna Charta in 1215.

EGINHARD, or EINHARD, a Frankish historian, born in Mainray, in East Franconia; a collection of his letters and his Annals of the Franks, as well as his famous "Life of Charlemagne," are extant; was a favourite of the latter, who appointed him superintendent of public buildings, and took him with him on all his expeditions; after the death of Charlemagne he continued at the Court as tutor to the Emperor Louis's son; died in retirement (770-840).

EGlantine, MADAME, the prioress in the "Canterbury Tales" of Chaucer.

EGMONT, LAMORAL, COUNT OF, born in Hainault; became attached to the Court of Charles V., by whom, for distinguished military and diplomatic services, he was appointed governor of Flanders; fell into disfavour for espousing the cause of the Protestants of the Netherlands, and was beheaded in Brussels by the Duke of Alva; his career and fate form the theme of Goethe's tragedy "Egmont," a play poor as a drama, but charming as a picture of the two chief characters in the piece, Egmont and Clarench (1525-1568).

EGMONT, MOUNT, the loftiest peak in the North Island, New Zealand, is 8270 ft. in height, and of volcanic origin.

EGO and NON-EGO (i.e. I and Not-I, or Self and Not-Self), are terms used in philosophy to denote respectively the subjective and the objective in cognition, what is from self and what is from the external to self, what is merely individual and what is universal.

EGOISM, the philosophy of those who, uncertain of everything but the existence of the Ego or I, resolve all existence as known into forms or modifications of its self-consciousness.

EGYPT, a country occupying the N.E. corner of Africa, lies along the W. shore of the Red Sea, has a northern coast-line on the Mediterranean, and stretches S. as far as Wady Halfa; the area is nearly 400,000 sq. m.; its chief natural features are uninhabitable desert on the E. and W., and the populous and fertile valley of the Nile. Cereals, sugar, cotton, and tobacco are important products. Mohammedan Arabs constitute the bulk of the people, but there is also a remnant of the ancient Coptic race. The country became a British Protectorate on November 18, 1914, when Hussein Kamil was made the first Sultan, the last Khadive being Abbas II. This removed Egypt from the suzerainty of Turkey. Hussein Kamil died in October, 1917, and was succeeded by Fuad. In March, 1922, Egypt was made an independent kingdom. The noble monuments and relics of her ancient civilisation, chief amongst which are the Pyramids, as well as the philosophies and religions she inherited, together with the arts she practised, and her close connection with Jewish history, give her a peculiar claim on the interested regard of mankind. Nothing, perhaps, has excited more wonder in connection with Egypt than the advanced state of her civilisation when she first comes to play a part in the history of the world. There is evidence that 4000 years before the Christian era the arts of building, pottery, sculpture, literature, even music and painting, were highly developed, her social institutions well organised, and that considerable advance had been made in astronomy, chemistry, medicine, and anatomy. Already the Egyptians had divided the year into 365 days and 12 months, and had invented an elaborate system of weights and measures, based on the decimal notation.

EGYPTIAN NIGHT, such as in Egypt when, by judgment of God, a thick darkness of three days settled down on the land. See Exodus x. 22.

EGYPTOLOGY, the science, in the interest of ancient history, of Egyptian antiquities, such as the monuments and their inscriptions, and one in which of late years great interest has been taken and much progress made.

EGYPTUS, the brother of Danaus, whose 50 sons, all but one, were murdered by the daughters of the latter. See DANAUS.

EKKILI, a dialect of S. Arabia, interesting to philologists as one of the oldest of Semitic tongues.

EHRENBERG, CHRISTIAN GOTTFRIED, a German naturalist, born in Deltzsch; intended for the Church; devoted himself to medical studies, and graduated in medicine in 1818; acquired great skill in the use of the microscope, and by means of it made important discoveries, particularly in the department of Infusoria; contributed largely to the literature of science (1785-1876).

EHRENBREITSTEIN (i.e. broad stone of honour), a strongly fortified town in Prussia, on the Rhine, opposite Coblenz, with which it has communication by a bridge of boats and a railway viaduct; the fortress occupies the summit of the rock, which is precipitous; is about 600 ft. high, and has large garrison accommodation.

EICHHORN, JOHANN GOTTFRIED, a German theologian and Orientalist, born in Dörrenzimmern, Franconia; a man of extensive scholarship; held the chair of Oriental languages in Jena, and afterwards at Göttingen; was the first to apply a bold rationalism to the critical treatment of the Scriptures; he was of the old school of rationalists, now superseded by the historico-critical; his chief works are a Universal Library of Biblical Literature, in 10 vols., Introductions to the Old and to the New Testament, each in 5 vols., and an Introduction to the Apocrypha (1762-1827).

EICHTHAL, GUSTAVE D', a French publicist, born in Nancy; an adherent of St. Simonianism; wrote "Les Evangiles" (1804-1886).

EICHWALD, CHARLES EDWARD, an eminent Russian naturalist, born in Mitau, Russia; studied science at Berlin and Vienna; held the chairs of Zoology and Midwifery at Kasan and Wilna, and of Paleontology at St. Petersburg; his explorations, which led him through most of Europe, Persia, and Algeria, and included a survey of the Baltic shores, as well as expeditions into the Caucasus, are described in his various works, and their valuable results noted (1795-1876).

EIFFEL, GUSTAVE, an eminent French engineer, born in Dijon; early obtained a reputation for bridge construction; designed the great Garabit Viaduct, and also the enormous locks for the Panama Canal; his most noted work is the gigantic iron tower in Paris which bears his name; in 1893 became involved in the Panama scandals, and was fined and sentenced to two years' imprisonment (1823-1923).

EIFFEL TOWER, a structure erected on the banks of the Seine in Paris, the loftiest in the world, being 985 ft. in height, and visible from all parts of the city; it consists of three platforms, of which the first is as high as the towers of Notre Dame; the second as high as Strasburg Cathedral spire, and the third 363 ft.; it was designed by Gustave Eiffel, and erected in 1887-1889; there are cafes and restaurants on the first landing, and the ascent is by powerful lifts.

EIGG, or EGG, a rocky islet among the Hebrides, 5 m. SW. of Skye; St. Donnan and 50 monks from Iona were massacred here in 617 by the queen, notwithstanding a remonstrance on the part of the islanders that it would be an irreligious act; here also the Macleods of the 10th century suffocated in a cave 300 of the Macdonalds, including women and children.

EIGHTS WEEK, the annual inter-collegiate boat races at Oxford University held at the end of the summer term, when the college balls also take place.

EIKON BASILIKE (i.e. the Royal Likeness), a book containing an account of Charles I. during his imprisonment, and ascribed to him as author, but really written by Bishop Gauden, though the MS. may have been perused and corrected by the king; it gives a true picture of his character and possible state of mind.

EILDONS, THE, a "triple-crested eminence" near Melrose, 1385 ft., and overlooking Teviotdale to the S., associated with Sir Walter Scott and Thomas the Rhymer; they are of volcanic origin, and are said to have been cleft in three by the wizard Michael Scott, when he was out of employment.

ELMOE, one of the French Society Islands; is hilly and woody, but well cultivated in the valleys; missionary enterprise in Polynesia first found a footing here.

EMMEDELN, a town in the canton of Schwyz, Switzerland; has a Benedictine abbey, containing a famous black image of the Virgin, credited with miraculous powers, which attracts, it is said, 200,000 pilgrims annually.

EINSTEIN, ALBERT, German scientist, famous for his researches in mathematical physics in connection with the quantum theory (q.v.), and more especially with relativity; his "General Theory of Relativity," published in 1916, caused a revolutionary change in the scientific views of gravitation (1879-). See RELATIVITY.

EISENACH, a flourishing manufacturing town in Saxony, close to the Thuringian Forest and 48 m. W. of Weimar; is the birthplace of Sebastian Bach; in the vicinity stands the castle of Wartburg, the hiding-place for 10 months of Luther after the Diet of Worms.

EISELEBN, a mining town in Prussian Saxony, 24 m. NW. of Halle; the birthplace and burial-place of Luther.

EISTEDDFOOD, a gathering of Welsh bards and others, now annual, to which, out of a patriotic motive, prizes are awarded for the encouragement of Welsh literature and music and the preservation of the Welsh language and ancient national customs.

EKATERINEBURG, a Russian town on the Isset, on the E. side of the Ural Mountains, of the mining industry in which it is the chief centre; has various manufactures, and a trade in the cutting and sorting of precious stones.

EKKRON, a town in N. Palestine, 80 m. N. from Gaza and 9 m. from the sea.

ELAINE, a lady of the court of King Arthur in love with Lancelot, whose story is related by Malory in his "History" and by Tennyson in his "Idylls of the King."

ELASTICITY, the property of changing in size or shape under the influence of a stress and of regaining the original size or shape when the stress is removed.

ELBA, a small and rocky island in the Mediterranean between Corsica and Tuscany, with a bold precipitous coast; belongs to Italy; has trade in fish, fruits, and iron ore; famous as Napoleon's place of exile from May, 1814, to February, 1815.

ELBE, the most important river in N. Germany; rises in the Riesengebirge, in Austria, flows NW. through Germany, and enters the North Sea at Cuxhaven, 725 m. long, navigable 520 m.; abounds in fish.

ELBERFELD, an important manufacturing commercial centre, 18 m. NE. of Düsseldorf; noted for its textiles and dyeworks.

ELBEUF, a town on the Seine, 75 m. NW. of Paris; has flourishing manufactures in cloths, woollens, etc.

ELBURZ, a lofty mountain range in N. Persia, S. of the Caspian; also the name of the highest peak in the Caucasus (18,571 ft.).

ELDER, a name given to certain office-bearers in the Presbyterian Church, associated with the minister in certain spiritual functions short of teaching and administering sacraments; their duties embrace the general oversight of the congregation, and are of a wider nature than those of the deacons, whose functions are confined strictly to the secular interests of the church; they are generally elected by the church members, and ordained in the presence of the congregation; their term of office is in some cases for a stated number of years, but more generally for life.

ELDON, JOHN SCOTT, LORD, a celebrated English lawyer, born in Newcastle, of humble parentage; educated at Oxford for the Church, but got into difficulties through a runaway marriage; he betook himself to law, rose rapidly in his profession, and, entering Parliament, held important legal offices under Pitt; was made a Baron and Lord Chancellor, 1801, an office which he held for 26 years; retired from public life in 1835, and left a large fortune at his death; was noted for the shrewd equity of his judgments and his delay in delivering them (1751-1838).

EL DORADO (lit. the Golden One), a country which Orellana, the lieutenant of Pizarro, pretended to have discovered in S. America, between the Amazon and Orinoco, and which he represented as abounding in gold and precious gems; the actual "city of gold" which was the conquistadors' quest was Manoa, in Guiana, and El Dorado, whose name was applied to the country and is now a synonym for fabulous wealth, was the cacique, or chief, of it.

ELEANOR, queen of Edward I. of England and sister of Alfonso X. (q.v.) of Castile, surnamed the Wise, accompanied her husband to the Crusade in 1269, and is said to have saved him by sucking the poison from a wound inflicted by a poisoned arrow; was buried at Westminster (1244-1290).

ELEATIC, a school of philosophy in Greece, founded by Xenophanes of Elea, of which Parmenides and Zeno, both of Elea, were the two leading adherents and advocates, the former developing the system and the latter completing it, the ground-principle of which was twofold—the affirmation of the unity, and the negative of the diversity, of being—in other words, the affirmation of pure being as alone real, to the exclusion of everything finite and merely phenomenal.

ELECTION, THE DOCTRINE OF, the doctrine that the salvation of a man depends on the election of God for that end, of which there are two chief phases—the one is election to Christ's, or unconditional election, and the other that it is election in Christ, or conditional election.

ELECTORS, THE, or KURFÜRSTES, OF GERMANY, German princes who enjoyed the privilege of disposing of the imperial crown, ranked next the emperor, and were originally six in number, but grew to eight and finally nine; three were ecclesiastical—the Archbishops of Mayence, Cologne, and Treves, and three secular—the Electors of Saxony, the Palatinate, and Bohemia, to which were added at successive periods the Electors of Brandenburg, of Bavaria, and Hanover. The Holy Roman Empire, which was a grand object once, but had gone about in a superannuated state for some centuries, was at last put to an end by Napoleon, August 6, 1806.

ELECTRA (i.e. the Bright One), an ocean nymph, the mother of Ials (q.v.).

ELECTRA, the daughter of Agamemnon and Clytemnestra, who, with her brother Orestes, avenged the death of her father on his murderers.

ELECTRICITY manifests itself as static electricity which is produced when certain materials, e.g. glass or amber, are rubbed; the substance when electrified in this way has the property of attracting small objects, such as scraps of paper; experiment shows that a body may acquire a charge of two different kinds, positive and negative, and that two bodies similarly charged repel one another, whilst two with unlike charges attract one another; electricity appears as a flowing current or voltic electricity when two plates in certain liquids are connected by a wire (see BATTERY); when a coil of wire is rotated in the neighbourhood of a magnet, as in a dynamo; and when the junction of two different metals is heated; for practical purposes currents are produced by the first two methods; the most important effects of the current flowing in a conductor are (1) the heating of the conductor, utilised in lamps, electric fires, &c.; (2) the induction of a current in a neighbouring circuit, as in a transformer and the coil of a wireless set; (3) its influence upon a magnetic needle, made use of in the construction of instruments for measuring currents, e.g. galvanometer; (4) the motion given to a coil through which a current is flowing when placed between the poles of a powerful magnet; this is the fundamental principle of all electric motors; (5) electrolysis (q.v.); and (6) production of electromagnetic waves. The second and sixth effects only appear when the current is alternating, and in the case of the last named it must be of high frequency. Electricity was originally looked upon as an invisible fluid contained in all bodies, a positive or negative charge being due to an excess or deficiency of the fluid; this was followed by the theory which postulated two fluids, negative and positive. Modern investigation has shown that a negative charge is due to electrons, which may be considered as the disembodied "atoms" of negative electricity and a current is due to the movement of these along the conductor.

ELECTRICITY, UNIT OF. The unit of electrical supply is the kilowatt-hour or Board of Trade Unit, and is equivalent to 1000 watts for one hour; 746 watts are equivalent to one horse-power.

ELECTRODE, name given to the plate or wire where an electric current enters or leaves a liquid, which is being electrolysed; the positive electrode is known as the anode, the negative as the cathode; the name is also applied to the plates of a vacuum tube, X-ray bulb, or wireless valve.

ELECTROLYSIS, the analysis of compounds in solution into their component parts by means of an electric current; this effect is utilised in the processes of electroplating and electrotyping; an electrolytic process is used for refining copper and for many industrial purposes.

ELECTROMAGNETIC THEORY, the theory put forward by James Clerk Maxwell (q.v.) that light can be explained as electromagnetic waves in the ether; his mathematical analysis showed that such waves would have properties similar to those observed in the case of light. Though the real nature of these waves is uncertain, it is now generally held that light is an electromagnetic phenomenon, and that the waves given out by electric oscillators (as in wireless telegraphy) are of the same nature as light waves, differing from them only in their wave-length. The original theory has been modified somewhat by the new ideas introduced by the quantum theory.

ELECTRON, the unit, fundamental charge of negative electricity; electrons emitted from an X-ray tube are known as cathode particles or rays, and those from radioactive substances as Beta particles (q.v.).

ELEGY, a song expressive of sustained earnest yearning, or mild sorrow after loss.

ELEMENT, name given to the simple substances of which all chemical compounds are formed; all elements are composed of atoms, identical with one another in the case of the same elements; the old definition that they cannot be split up into anything simpler has had to be modified, as the study of radioactivity (q.v.) has shown that the atom of an element can throw off an alpha particle, which may be considered as an atom of helium, leaving the atom of a new element with entirely different properties, e.g. uranium changes by a number of stages to radium, and finally to lead; the artificial disintegration of some atoms has been achieved on a small scale, but there is no evidence that synthesis of more complicated elements ever takes place; for ordinary non-radioactive substances the idea of an element being a fundamental unchanging entity is satisfactory for most purposes, but must not be taken as a rigid definition.

ELEMENTAL SPIRITS, a general name given in the Middle Ages to salamanders, undines, sylphs, and gnomes, spirits superstitiously believed to have dominion respectively over, as well as to have had their dwelling in, the four elements—fire, water, air, and earth.

ELEMENTS, originally the four forms of matter so deemed—fire, air, earth, and water, and afterwards the name for those substances that cannot be resolved by chemical analysis, and which are now found to amount to 92.

ELEPHANT, a genus of mammals, of which there are two species, the Indian and the African; the latter attains a greater size, and is hunted for the sake of its tusks, which may weigh as much as 70 lbs.: the former is more intelligent, and easily capable of being domesticated; the white elephant is a variety of this species; of Indian elephants only the males have tusks.

ELEPHANT, ORDER OF THE WHITE, a Danish order of knighthood, restricted to 30 knights, the decoration of which is an elephant supporting a tower; it was instituted by Canute IV., king of Denmark, at the end of the 12th century.

ELEPHANTA, an island 6 m. in circuit in Bombay harbour, so called from its colossal figure of an elephant which stood near the landing-place; it contains three temples cut out of solid rock and covered with sculptures, which, along with the figure at the landing, are rapidly decaying.

ELEPHANTIASIS, a peculiar skin disease, accompanied with abnormal swelling; so called because the skin becomes hard and stiff like an elephant's hide; attacks the lower limbs and scrotum; is chiefly confined to India and other tropical countries.

ELEPHANTINE, a small island below the first cataract of the Nile; contains interesting monuments and ruins of the ancient Roman and Egyptian civilisations.

ELEUSINIAN MYSTERIES, rites, initiation into which, as religiously conducive to the making of good men and good citizens, was compulsory on every free-born Athenian, celebrated annually at Eleusis in honour of Demeter and Persephone, and lasting nine days.

ELEUSIS, a town in ancient Attica, NW. of Athens, with a temple for the worship of Demeter, the largest in Greece; designed by the architect of the Parthenon (q.v.).

ELEUTHERIA, the goddess of liberty, as worshipped in ancient Greece.

ELEVATOR, the rudder-like movable plane at the tail of an aeroplane used for raising or lowering the nose of the machine.

ELF-ARROWS, arrow-heads of flint used in hunting and war by the aborigines of the British Isles and of Europe generally, as they still are among savages elsewhere; derived their name from the superstitious belief that they were used by the fairies to kill cattle and sometimes human beings in their mischief; they were sometimes worn as talismans, occasionally set in silver, as a charm against witchcraft.

ELGAR, SIR EDWARD, British composer, well-known for his song, "Land of Hope and Glory." He started as a music teacher at Malvern and composed his first cantata in 1892; it was not till "Caractacus" was produced in 1898 that he became famous. "The Dream of Gerontius" is perhaps his most popular work. He was knighted in 1904, and made Master of the King's Musick in 1924 (1859-).

ELGIN, now MORAY, a northern Scottish county, fronting the Moray Firth and lying between Banff and Nairn, mountainous in the S. but flat to the N., watered by the Spey, Lossie, and Findhorn; agriculture, stone-quarrying, distilling, and fishing are the staple industries; has some imposing ruins and interesting antiquities.

ELGIN, the county town of above, on the Lossie; created a royal burgh by David I.; has ruins of a fine Gothic cathedral and royal castle.

ELGIN, a city in Illinois, on the Fox, 35 m. NW. of Chicago; watchmaking the chief industry.

ELGIN, JAMES BRUCE, 5TH EARL OF, statesman and diplomatist, born in London; governor of Jamaica and Canada; negotiated important treaties with China and Japan; rendered opportune assistance at the Indian Mutiny by diverting to the succour of Lord Canning an expedition that was proceeding to China under his command; after holding office as Postmaster-General he became Viceroy of India (1861), where he died; his Journal and Letters are published (1811-1868).

ELGIN MARBLES, a collection of ancient sculptured marbles brought from Athens by the 7th Earl of Elgin in 1812, and now deposited in the British Museum, after purchase of them by the Government for £35,000; these sculptures adorned certain public buildings in the Acropolis, and consist of portions of statues, of which that of Theseus is the chief, of alto-reliefs representing the struggle of the Centaurs and Lapithæ, and of a large section of a frieze.

ELIA, the nom de plume adopted by Charles Lamb in connection with his Essays.

ELIAS, MOUNT, a mountain in NW. coast of N. America; conspicuous far off at sea, being about 18,000 ft. above it.

ELIJAH, a Jewish prophet, born in Tishbe, in Gilead, near the desert; prophesied in the reign of Ahab, king of Israel, in the 10th century B.C.; revealed himself as the deadly enemy of the worship of Baal, 400 of whose priests he is said to have slain with his own hand; his zeal provoked persecution at the hands of the king and his consort Jezebel, but the Lord protected him, and he was translated from the earth in a chariot of fire, "went up by a whirlwind into heaven." See PROPHETS, THE.

ELIOT, GEORGE, the nom de plume of Mary Ann Evans, distinguished English novelist, born in Arbury, in Warwickshire; was bred on evangelical lines, but by-and-by lost faith in supernatural Christianity; began her literary career by a translation of Strauss's "Life of Jesus"; became in 1851 a contributor to the Westminster Review, and formed acquaintance with George Henry Lewes, with whom she lived, and who it would seem discovered her latent faculty for fiction; her first work in that line was "Scenes from Clerical Life," contributed to Blackwood in 1855; the stories proved a signal success, and they were followed by a series of seven novels, beginning in 1858 with "Adam Bede," and ending with the "Impressions of Theophrastus Such" in 1879; these, with two volumes of poems, make up her works; Lewes died in 1878, and two years after she married an old friend, John Cross, and after a few months of wedded life died of inflammation of the heart (1819-1880).

ELIOT, JOHN, the apostle to the Indians, born in Hertfordshire; entered the Church of England, but seceded and emigrated to New England; became celebrated for his successful evangelistic expeditions amongst the Indians during his life-long occupancy of the pastorate at Roxbury, Massachusetts; translated the Bible into the Indian tongue (1604-1690).

ELIS, a district of Greece, on the W. coast of the Peloponnese, sacred to old Hellas as the seat of the greatest of the Greek festivals in connection with the Olympian Games, a circumstance which imparted a prestige to the inhabitants.

ELISA, or ELISSA, Dido, queen of Carthage, in love with Aneas.

ELISHA, a Jewish prophet, the successor of Elijah, who found him at the plough, and consecrated him to his office by throwing his mantle over him, which he again let fall on him as he ascended to heaven; exercised his office for 55 years, but showed none of the zeal of his predecessor against the worship of Baal; was, however, accredited as a prophet of the Lord by the miracles he wrought in the Lord's name.

ELIZABETH, sister of Louis XVI.; was guillotined (1764-1794).

ELIZABETH FARNSESE, queen of Spain, a daughter of Odoardo II. of Parma; in 1714 she married Philip V. of Spain, when her bold and energetic nature soon made itself felt in the councils of Europe, where she carried on schemes for territorial and political aggrandisement; was an accomplished linguist; is called by Carlyle "the Termagant of Spain"; her Memoirs are published in four volumes (1692-1766).

ELIZABETH, EMPRESS OF RUSSIA, daughter of Peter the Great and Catherine I.; assisted Maria

Theresa in the war of the Austrian Succession; opposed Frederick the Great in the Seven Years' War; indolent and licentious, she left the affairs of the State mainly in the hands of favourites (1709-1762).

ELIZABETH, QUEEN OF BOHEMIA, daughter of James VI. of Scotland and I. of England; married Frederick V., Elector Palatine, who for a brief time held the throne of Bohemia; her daughter Sophia, by marrying the Elector of Hanover, formed a tie which ultimately brought the crown of England to the House of Brunswick (1596-1682).

ELIZABETH, QUEEN OF ENGLAND (1558-1603), daughter of Henry VIII. and Anne Boleyn, born in Greenwich Palace; was an indefatigable student in her youth; acquired Greek and Latin, and a conversational knowledge of German and French; the Pope's opposition to her succession on the ground of being judged illegitimate by the Church strengthened her attachment to the Protestant faith, which was her mother's, and contributed to its firm establishment through her reign; during it the power of Spain was crushed by the defeat of the Armada; maritime enterprise flourished under Drake, Raleigh, and Frolicher; commerce was extended, and literature carried to a pitch of perfection never before or since reached; masterful and adroit, Elizabeth yet displayed the weakness of vanity and vindictiveness; the execution of Mary, Queen of Scots, is a blot upon her fame, and her intrigues with Seymour, Leicester, and Essex detract from her dignity; her wisdom was manifested in her wise choice of counsellors and leaders, and her patriotism won her a secure place in the hearts of her people (1558-1603).

ELIZABETHAN ARCHITECTURE, a term applied to the style of architecture which flourished in the reigns of Elizabeth and James I., and was characterized by a revival of classic designs wrought into the decadent Gothic style. Lord Salisbury's house at Hatfield is a good specimen of this mixed style.

ELKARGH, a town in the great oasis in the Libyan Desert; has ancient remains, and is an important resting place in crossing the desert.

ELLENBOROUGH, EDWARD LAW, EARL OF, an English Conservative statesman, son of Baron Ellenborough, Lord Chief Justice of England; entered Parliament in 1813; held office under the Duke of Wellington and Sir Robert Peel; appointed Governor-General of India (1841); recalled in 1844; subsequently First Lord of the Admiralty and Indian Minister under Lord Derby (1790-1871).

ELLENRIEDER, MARIE, a painter of great excellence, born in Constance; studied in Rome; devoted herself to religious subjects, such as "Christ Blessing Little Children," "Mary and the Infant Jesus," &c. (1771-1868).

ELLENBERG, FRANCIS EGERTON, EARL OF, statesman and author, born in London, second son of the Duke of Sutherland; was Secretary for Ireland and War Secretary; author of some books of travel, and a translation of "Faust" (1800-1857).

ELLIOTT, GEORGE AUGUSTUS. See HEATHFIELD.
ELLIOTSON, JOHN, an English physician, born in London; lost his professorship in London University on account of employing mesmerism for medical purposes; promoted clinical instruction and the use of the stethoscope; founded the Phenological Society (1791-1868).

ELLIOTT, EBENEZER, poet, known popularly as the "Corn-Law Rhymers," born in Rotherham parish, Yorkshire; an active worker in iron; devoted his leisure to poetic composition; proved a man who could handle both pen and hammer like a man; wrote the "Corn-Law Rhymes" and other pieces (1781-1846).

ELLIS, ALEXANDER JOHN, an eminent philologist, born in Horton; published many papers on phonetics and early English pronunciation; was president of the Philological Society; his name, originally Sharpe, changed by royal licence (1814-1890).

ELLIS, GEORGE, literary critic, born in London; did much to promote the study of early English literature; contributed to the Anti-Jacobin, and was joint-author of the "Rollad," a satire on Pitt, and of "Specimens of Early English Metrical Romances"; Scott declared him to be the best conversationalist he had ever met (1753-1816).

ELLIS, SIR HENRY, chief librarian of the British Museum from 1827 to 1856, born in London; edited various works on antiquities; wrote an "Introduction to Domesday Book"; knighted in 1883 (1777-1869).

ELLIS, WILLIAM, a missionary and author, born in London; laboured in the South Sea Islands, and afterwards in Madagascar; wrote various works descriptive of these islands; he married Sarah Stickney, who was the authoress of a number of popular works, including "The Women of England," "The Daughters of England," &c. (1794-1872).

ELLIS ISLAND, in New York harbour, the place where immigrants are examined before being allowed to land.

ELLISTON, ROBERT WILLIAM, a celebrated actor and theatrical manager, born in London; ran away from home and joined the stage, rose to the front rank both as comedian and tragedian (1774-1831).

ELLORA, an Indian village in Hyderabad, 12 m. N.W. of Aurangabad, famed for its Buddhist and Hindu cave and monolithic temples, the most magnificent of which is hewn out of a solid hill of red stone, the most beautiful being the Hindu temple of Kalika.

ELLWOOD, THOMAS, a celebrated Quaker, born in Crowell, Oxfordshire; the intimate friend of Milton, to whom he suggested the idea of "Paradise Regained" by remarking to him, "Thou hast said much of Paradise Lost, but what hast thou to say of Paradise Found?" did much to extend Quakerism in England; his Autobiography is still read (1689-1713).

ELMO'S FIRE, ST., a popular name for the display of electric fire which sometimes plays about the masts of ships, steeples, &c., accompanied at times with a hissing noise; commoner in southern climates and known by other names, e.g. Fire of St. Clara, of St. Elias.

ELONG, a discourse in panegyric of some illustrious person deceased, in which composition Fontenelle took the lead, and in which he was followed by D'Alembert, Condorcet, Flourens, and others.

ELOHIM, a Hebrew word in the plural number, signifying God or one as God, but with a verb in the singular, signifying generally the one true God; according to the Talmud it denotes God as just in judgment to all in contradistinction to Jehovah, which denotes God as merciful to His people.

ELOHIST, a name given by the critics to the presumed author of the earlier part of the Pentateuch, whose work in it they allege is distinguished by the use of the word Elohim for God; he is to be distinguished from the Jehovist, the presumed author of the later portions, from his use, on the other hand, of the word Jehovah for God.

ELPHINSTONE, GEORGE KEITH, ADMIRAL. See KEITH.

ELPHINSTONE, MOUNTSTUART, a noted Indian civil servant and historian; co-operated with Wellesley in firmly establishing British rule in India; was governor of Bombay, where he accomplished many useful reforms, and issued the Elphinstone Code of Laws; wrote a "History of India," which earned for him the title of the "Tacitus of India" (1770-1859).

ELPHINSTONE, WILLIAM, an erudite and patriotic Scottish ecclesiastic and statesman, born in Glasgow; took holy orders; went to Paris to study law, and became a professor in Law there, and afterwards at Orleans; returned to Scotland; held several high State appointments under James III. and James IV.; continued a zealous servant of the Church, holding the bishoprics of Ross and of Aberdeen, where he founded the university (1481-1514).

ELNSHORE, a seaport on the island of Zealand, in Denmark, 80 m. N. of Copenhagen; has a good harbour; the scene of Shakespeare's "Hamlet."

ELSWICK, a town in the vicinity of Newcastle, noted for the great engineering and ordnance works of the Armstrong company.

ELTON, a salt lake of SE. Russia, in the government of Astrakhan; has an area of about 85 sq. m., but is very shallow; yields annually some 90,000 or 95,000 tons of salt, which is shipped off via the Volga.

ELTON, CHARLES ISAAC, jurist and ethnologist, born in Somerset; held a Fellowship in Queen's College, Oxford; called to the bar in 1866, and in 1884 was returned to Parliament as a Conservative; his first works were juridical treatises on the tenure of land, but in 1882 he produced a learned book on origins of English history (1889-1900).

ELVAS, a strongly fortified town in Portugal, in the province of Alentejo, 12 m. W. of Badajoz; is a bishop's see; has a Moorish aqueduct 3½ m. long and 250 ft. high.

ELY, a cathedral city, in the fenland of Cambridgeshire, on the Ouse, 80 m. SE. of Peterborough; noted as the scene of Hereward's heroic stand against William the Conqueror in 1071; the cathedral, founded in 1083, is unique as containing specimens of the various Gothic styles incorporated during the course of 400 years.

ELY, ISLE OF, a name given to the N. portion of Cambridgeshire on account of its having been at one time insulated by marshes; being included in the region of the Fens, has been drained, and is now fertile land.

ELYOT, SIR THOMAS, author and ambassador, born in Wiltshire; ambassador to the court of Charles V.; celebrated as the author of "The Governour," the first English work on moral philosophy, and also of the first Latin-English dictionary (1490-1546).

ELYSIUM, the abode of the shades of the virtuous dead in the nether world as conceived of by the poets of Greece and Rome, where the inhabitants live a life of passive blessedness, but to such a man as Achilles a place of woe rather and unrest, where he would fain exchange places with the meanest hind that breathes in the upper world.

ELZE, FREDERICK CARL, a German Shakespearean scholar, born in Dessau; early devoted himself to the study of English literature; lived some time in England and Scotland; in 1876 became professor of English Literature at Halle; his various publications on Shakespeare and the Elizabethan dramatists are full of excellent criticisms; also wrote Lives of Scott and Byron (1821-1889).

ELZEYER, the name of an eminent family of printers residing in Amsterdam and Leyden; Louis, the first of them, started in Leyden; their publications, mostly of classics, date from 1594 to 1880.

EMANATION, name given to the gaseous product of the disintegration of radioactive substances; the emanation from radium is known as niton or radon.

EMANATION, THE DOCTRINE OF, a doctrine of Eastern origin, which derives everything that exists from the divine nature by necessary process of emanation, as light from the sun, and ascribes all evil and the degrees of it to a greater and greater distance from the pure ether of this parent source, or to the extent in consequence to which the being gets immersed in and clogged with matter.

EMANUEL I., king of Portugal from 1495 to 1521; his reign inaugurated the golden period of Portuguese history, during which Portugal became the first maritime and commercial power in Europe; was the patron of Vasco da Gama and Albuquerque; issued an edict for the expulsion of the Jews from his kingdom, and wrote to the Elector of Saxony begging him to get rid of Luther (1499-1521).

EMBALMING, the art of preserving dead bodies from decay by means of antiseptic agents applied both externally and internally; although known to other people, e.g. the Peruvians, the art was chiefly practised among the Egyptians, and the practice of it dates back to 4000 B.C.; the thoroughness of the process depended on the money expended, but it usually involved the removal of the viscera, save the heart and kidneys, the extraction of the brain, the introduction of drugs to the cavities, and the pickling of the body in native carbonate of soda, and the wrapping of it in linen; experiments in embalming, more or less successful, have been made in recent times.

EMBER DAYS, four annually recurring periods of three days each, appointed by the Roman and English Churches to be devoted to fasting and praying; they are the Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday after the first Sunday in Lent, after Pentecost, after September 14, and after December 13.

EMBRYO, the scientific term for the young of an animal while yet in the initial stage of development in the womb; also applied to the plant in its rudimentary stage within the seed.

EMBRYOLOGY, the section of biology which treats of the development of the embryo.

EMDEN, the chief part of the province of Hanover, in Prussia, situated at the outlet of the river Ems; is intersected by canals; shipbuilding and brewing are the chief industries.

EMERALD, a precious stone of great value, allied in composition to the beryl; is of a beautiful transparent green colour; the finest specimens are found in Colombia and Venezuela.

EMERALD ISLE, Ireland, from the fresh verdure of its herbage; the name was first given to it by Dr. W. Drennan in a poem entitled "Erin," written in the 18th century.

EMERSON, RALPH WALDO, an American philosophical thinker and poet, of English Puritan descent, born in Boston, where he started in life as a Unitarian preacher and pastor, an office he resigned in 1832 for literature, in which he found he would have freer and fuller scope to carry out his purpose as a spiritual teacher; in 1833 he paid a visit to England; on his return the year after, he married, and, settling down in Concord, began his career as a lecturer and man of letters; by his "Essays," of which he published two series, one in 1841 and a second in 1844, he commended himself to the regard of all thinking men in both hemispheres; these embraced subjects one and all of spiritual interest, and revealed transcendent intellectual power; they were followed in 1850 by "Representative Men," lectures delivered in Manchester on a second visit to England, and thereafter, at successive periods, by "Society and Solitude," "English Traits," "The Conduct of Life," "Letters and Social Aims," besides a long array of poems; speculatively, Carlyle and he were of the same school (1803-1882).

EMERSON TENNENT, SIR JAMES, bred for the bar; was from 1845 to 1852 colonial secretary and lieutenant-governor of Ceylon, and became on his return joint-secretary to the Board of Trade; wrote "Christianity in Ceylon" and "Ceylon: an Account of the Island" (1804-1869).

EMERY, a dull, blue-black mineral of impure alumina, allied in composition to the sapphire, but containing a varying quantity of iron oxide; is found in large masses; is exceedingly hard, and largely used in polishing metals, plate-glass, and precious stones.

EMIGRANTS, THE (Les Émigrés), the members of the French aristocracy and of the partisans of the ancient régime who at the time of the Revolution, after the fall of the Bastille, fled for safety to foreign lands, concentrating particularly in Coblenz, where they plotted for its overthrow, to the extent of league with the foreigner against their country, with the issue of confiscation of their lands and properties by the republic that was set up.

EMIGRATION, movement from one country to another, narrowed down to mean the migration which started on a large scale in the 19th century from the Old World to America, Australia, and S. Africa. The U.S.A. alarmed at the influx of Europeans has restricted every nation to an annual quota, while Canada, Australia, and S. Africa make it difficult for the non-British and almost impossible for coloured people to gain entry. Attempts are made with moderate success to stimulate emigration by State assistance from overcrowded Britain to the undeveloped tracts of the Empire. Financial loans and reduced passages are arranged under these schemes.

EMILE, the hero of a philosophic romance by Rousseau of the same name, in which the author expounds his views on education, and presents his reasons, with his ideal of good education.

EMIN PASHA. See SCHNITZER, EDUARD.

EMIR, a title bestowed on the descendants of Mohammed's daughter Fatima, the word denoting a "prince" or "ruler"; has lost this its primary meaning; the emirs, of whom there are large numbers in Turkey, enjoy no privileges save the sole right to wear a green turban, the supposed favourite colour of Mohammed, though they hold a high social position; the title is also given to chiefs in N. Africa.

EMMET, ROBERT, a patriotic Irishman, born in Dublin; bred for the bar; took part in the Irish rebellion; was hanged for his share in attempting to seize Dublin Castle (1778-1803).

EMPEDOCLE, a philosopher of Agriguntum, in Sicily "extolled in antiquity as a statesman and orator, as physicist, physician, and poet, and even as prophet and worker of miracles," who flourished about the year 440 B.C.; he conceived the universe as made up of "four eternal, self-subsistent, mutually undervative, but divisible, primal material bodies, mingled and ruled by two moving forces, the uniting one of friendship and the disuniting one of strife"; of him it is fabled that, to persuade his fellow-citizens, with whom he had been in high favour as their deliverer from the tyranny of the aristocracy, of his bodily translation from earth to heaven, he threw himself unseen into the crater of Etna, but that at the next eruption of the mountain his slippers were cast up and revealed the fraud.

EMPIRES: the Roman, capital Rome, dates from the reign of Augustus, 25 B.C., to that of Theodosius, A.D. 395; of the East, or Low Empire, capital Constantinople, being part of the Roman empire, dates from 296 to 1453; of the West, capital Rome, dates from 296 to 476; the Holy, or Second Empire of the West, founded by Charlemagne, dates from 800 to 911; the Latin, capital Constantinople, founded by the Crusaders, dates from 1204 to 1261; the German, founded by Otto the Great in 962, ended by abdication of Francis II. of Austria in 1806, restored under William I. in 1870 and ended in 1918; the French, founded by Napoleon I., dates from 1804 to 1815, and as established by Napoleon III. dates from 1852 to 1870; of the Indies, founded in 1876 under the crown of England.

EMPIRIC, the name given to anyone who practises an art from the mere experience of results, apart from all reference to or knowledge of the scientific explanation.

EMPIRICISM, a philosophical term applied to the theory that all knowledge is derived from the senses and experience alone, to the rejection of the theory of innate ideas; Locke and Hume, in modern times, are the great representatives of the school that advocates this doctrine supported by Aristotle.

EMPSON, SIR RICHARD, a lawyer in the reign of Henry VII.; was Speaker of the House of Commons; incurred the hatred of the populace by acting as the King's agent in forcing payment of taxes and penalties; was convicted of tyranny and treason, and beheaded in 1510.

EMPHYEMA, a medical term signifying a diseased condition of the chest, in which pus accumulates in the pleura, cures of which are sometimes effected by drawing off the pus by means of tubes.

EMPHYREAN, the highest heaven, or region of pure elemental fire, whence everything of the nature of fire has been conceived to emanate, whether in the phenomena of nature or the life of man.

EMSE, (1) a river of NW. Germany, rises in Westphalia, and after a course of 205 m. discharges into Dollart Bay, an inlet of the North Sea; is navigable, and is joined to the Lippe by means of a canal, and similarly to Dortmund. (2) A celebrated German watering-place, on the Lahn, near Coblenz; its mineral springs, known to the Romans, vary in warmth from 80° to 135° F.

ENAMEL, a vitreous compound, easily fusible, and coloured in various tints by the admixture of different metallic oxides; is fused to the surface of metals for utility and ornament; was known to the European and Asiatic ancients, and has maintained its popularity to the present day. Various schools for the revival of the art of enamelling have been formed, of which the Byzantine, Rhenish, and Limoges are the most noted.

ENCALADA, MANUEL BLANCO, a distinguished Chilean statesman and soldier, born in Buenos Ayres; trained for the navy in Spain, but joined the Chilean revolutionaries; served with distinction under Lord Cochrane, and rose to high rank both in the army and navy; was commander of the Chilean forces in 1825, and for two months in the following year President of the Republic; was subsequently Governor of Valparaiso, and minister to France (1790-1876).

ENCAUSTIC PAINTING, an ancient style of decorative art somewhat similar to enamelling, which consisted in overlaying the surface (e.g. of walls) with wax, then inlaying a coloured design, the whole being subsequently polished.

ENCELADUS, in mythology one of the chief giants that revolted against Zeus, and who, as he fled and took refuge in Sicily, was transfixed by a thunderbolt and buried under Etna. The fiery eruptions of the mountain are his breath, and the shaking of it ascribed to his shifting from one side to another. In the latter regard he serves in literature as the symbol of a blind, often impotent, struggle to throw off some oppressive incubus.

ENCHIRIDIUM OF EPICTETUS. See EPICTETUS.

ENCINA, or ENZINA, JUAN DE LA, a Spanish dramatist, whose works mark the rise of the Spanish drama, born in Salamanca; was at one time secretary to the Duke of Alba, and afterwards conductor of music in the chapel of Leo X. at Rome (1489-1534).

ENCKE, JOHANN FRANZ, a celebrated German astronomer, born in Hamburg; determined the sun's distance, and the orbit of the comet of 1680; calculated the time of the revolution of the comet which now bears his name, and which appeared in 1818; determined also the distance of the sun by the two transits of Venus in 1761 and 1769 (1791-1865).

ENCRATITES, a Christian sect of the 2nd century, gnostic in tendency; its members were bound to chastity and temperance.

ENCYCLICAL LETTER, a letter addressed by the Pope to the bishops of the Church, commendatory of prevailing errors or counselling them how to act in connection with public questions of the day.

ENCYCLOPEDIA, a name of Greek derivation, given to works which embrace within their pages a more or less complete account, in alphabetical order, of the whole round of human knowledge, or of some particular section of it. Attempts in this direction were made as far back as Aristotle's day, and various others have since been made from time to time, according as the circle of knowledge widened, but the earliest use of the word was in a German publication of 1541. Amongst famous encyclopedias which have appeared, mention may be made of the French "Encyclopédie" (q.v.); the "Encyclopædia Britannica," Edinburgh (1768-1771); the German "Encyclopædie," begun in 1818 by Ersch and Gruber; while the latest of all is the Chinese encyclopædia, in 5020 vols., printed in Peking in 1725.

ENCYCLOPÉDIE, a French encyclopædia consisting of 28 vols., to which a supplement of 5 vols. was added; edited by D'Alembert and Diderot; contributed to by a number of the eminent savants of France, and issued in 1751-1777, it helped to feed, but did nothing to allay, or even moderate, the fire of the Revolution.

ENDEMIC, a term applied to diseases which affect the inhabitants of certain countries and localities, and which arise from strictly local causes, e.g. neighbouring swamps, bad sanitation, impure water, climate, &c.

ENDOR, a place on the S. of Mount Tabor, in Palestine, where the sorceress lived who was consulted by Saul before the battle of Gilboa, and who professed communication with the ghost of Samuel (1 Sam. xxviii. 7).

ENDYMION, a beautiful shepherd, son of Zeus, whom Selene (q.v.) carried off to Mount Lemnos, in Caria, where, as she kissed him, he sank into eternal sleep. This is one version of the story.

ENEID, an epic poem by Virgil, the hero of which is Æneas of Troy.

ENERGY. A body is said to possess energy when it is capable of doing work in virtue of its state or position, e.g. a moving mass has kinetic energy; a wound-up spring potential energy; and an explosive substance like T.N.T. chemical energy, which is liberated when the explosion takes place. The units of energy are the erg (q.v.) and foot-pound.

ENFANTIN, BARTHELEMY PROSPER, a Socialist and journalist, born in Paris, adopted the views of Saint-Simon (q.v.); held subversive views on the marriage laws, which involved him in some trouble; wrote a useful and sensible book on Algerian colonisation, and several works, mainly interpretative of the theories of Saint-Simon (1796-1864).

ENFIELD, a town in Middlesex, 10 m. N.E. of London, has a celebrated Government rifle factory; was for six years the dwelling-place of Charles Lamb.

ENGADINE, a noted Swiss valley in the canton of the Grisons, stretches about 65 m. between the Lepontine or Ehelian Alps; is divided into the Lower Engadine, wild and desolate, and the Upper Engadine, fertile and populous, and a favourite health resort; the river Inn flows through it, its waters collected here and there into lakes.

ENGEDI, an oasis, a spot of rare beauty, once a place of palm-trees, 23 m. W. of the N. end of the Dead Sea.

ENGHIEN, LOUIS DE BOURBON, DUC D', an ill-fated French Royalist, born in Chantilly; joined the Royalists under his grandfather, Prince of Condé, and took part in the Rhine campaign against the Republicans; was suspected of being concerned in a Bourbon plot to assassinate the Emperor Napoleon; was seized in the neutral territory of Baden, brought to Vincennes, and after an inconclusive and illegal trial, shot by Napoleon's orders, a proceeding which gave rise to Fruché's remark: "It is worse than a crime—it is a blunder" (1772-1804).

ENGLAND, the "predominant partner" of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, comprises along with Wales the southern, and by far the greater, portion of Great Britain, the largest of the European islands; it is separated from the Continent on the E. and S. by the North Sea and English Channel, and from Ireland on the W. by St. George's Channel, while Scotland forms its N. boundary; its greatest length N. and S. is 430 m., and greatest breadth (including Wales) 370. It is of an irregular triangular shape; has a long and highly-developed coast-line (1800 m.); is divided into 40 counties (with Wales 52); has numerous rivers with navigable estuaries, while transit is facilitated by a network of railways and canals; save the highlands in the N., and the Pennine Range running into Derby, England is composed (if we except the mountainland of Wales) of undulating plains, 80 per cent. of which is arable; while coal and iron are found in abundance, and copper, lead, zinc, and tin in lesser quantities, it is in the extent and variety of its textile factories, and in the production of machinery and other hardware goods, that England is without an equal; the climate is mild and moist; but for the equatorial drift current, popularly known as the Gulf Stream (q.v.) whose waters wash its western shores, it would probably resemble that of Labrador. Under a limited monarchy and a widely embracing franchise, the people of England enjoy an unrivalled political freedom. Since Henry VIII.'s time, the national religion has been an established Protestantism, but all forms are tolerated. In 1896 education was made free. The name England is derived from Engle-land, or land of the Angles, a Teutonic people who, with kindred Saxons and Jutes, came over from the mainland in the 5th century, and took possession of the island, driving Britons and Celts before them. Admixtures to the stock took place during the 11th century through the Danish and Norman conquests. E. annexed Wales in 1284, and was united with Scotland under one crown in 1603, and under one Parliament in 1707.

ENGLES, FRIEDRICH, a Socialist, the friend of Karl Marx; an active propagandist of socialistic theories; author of several works on Socialism (1820-1895).

ENID, the daughter of Yniol and the wife of Geraint; one of the ladies of the court of King Arthur; celebrated for her steadfast conjugal affection, the story regarding whom is given in Tennyson's "Idylls of the King."

ENNISKILLEN, the county town of Fermanagh, Ireland, on an isle in the river which joins Lower and Upper Loughs Erne; the scene of the defeat of James II.'s troops by those of William of Orange; gave its name to a dragoon regiment.

ENNIUS, QUINTUS, an early Roman poet, the father of Roman epic poetry, born in Rudiae, Calabria; promoted the study of Greek literature in Rome; of his poems, dramatic and epic, only a few fragments are extant (239-169 B.C.).

ENOCH, a godly man, who lived in antediluvian times among a race gone godless, and whom the Lord in judgment removed from the earth to return Himself by-and-by with a flood in order to clear the world of the ungodly; there are two apocalyptic books in Hebrew and Greek dealing with the revelations made to him.

ENOCH, THE BOOK OF, an apocryphal book, quoted from by Jude, discovered over a century ago, composed presumably about the 2nd century, though subsequently enlarged and ascribed to Enoch; it professes to be a series of revelations made to the patriarch bearing upon the secrets of the material and spiritual universe and the course of Providence, and written down by him for the benefit of posterity.

ENOCH ARDEN, a poem by Tennyson, and one of his happiest efforts to translate an incident of common life into the domain of poetry; the story is: A sailor, presumed to be lost, whose wife marries another, returns, finds her happily wedded, and bears the sorrow rather than disturb her felicity by revealing himself.

ENTABLATURE, a term in classic architecture applied to the ornamented portion of a building which rests in horizontal position upon supporting columns; is subdivided into three parts, the lower portion being called the architrave, the middle portion the frieze, and the uppermost the cornice; the depth assigned to these parts varies in the different schools, but the whole entablature generally measures twice the diameter of the column.

ENTAIL, a term in law which came to be used in connection with the practice of limiting the inheritance of estates to a certain restricted line of heirs. Attempts of the kind, which arise naturally out of the deeply-seated desire which men have to preserve property—especially landed estates—in their own families—are of ancient date; but the system as understood now, involving the principle of primogeniture, owes its origin to the feudal system. Sometimes the succession was limited to the male issue, but this was by no means an invariable practice; in modern times the system has been, by a succession of Acts of Parliaments (notably the Cairns Act of 1882), greatly modified, and greater powers given to the actual owner of alienating the estates to which he has succeeded, a process which is called "breaking the entail."

ENTOMOLOGY, the branch of zoology which deals with the study of insect life.

ENVIRONMENT, a term of extensive use in biological science, especially employed to denote the external conditions which go to determine modifications in the development of organic life to the extent often of producing new species.

ENZYMES, substances, very small quantities of which can bring about chemical change, e.g. invertase, found in yeast, which converts cane-sugar into glucose; diastase, which changes starch into glucose, and pepsin (q.v.).

EOANTHROPUS DAWSONI. See FILTDOWN MAN.

Eocene, the geological strata laid down at the beginning of the Tertiary Period; this age is represented in England by the London clay and thin beds of sand and gravel; the fossils found indicate that this country then enjoyed a tropical climate; in Eocene times mammals multiplied and began to gain ascendancy, and great earth movements began.

EON DE BEAUMONT, CHARLES D', the "Chevalier d'Eon," a noted French diplomatist, born in Tonnerre, Burgundy; notorious as having, while on secret missions, adopted a woman's dress for purposes of disguise; was ambassador at the English Court, but degraded and recalled by Louis XVI., and condemned to wear feminine garb till the close of his life; died in destitution, when the popular doubt as to his real sex was set at rest (1728-1810).

EOS, the goddess of the dawn, the daughter of Hyperion, and the sister of Helios and Selene. See AURORA.

EÖTVÖS, BARON JOZSEF, Hungarian statesman and author, born in Buda; adopted law first, but devoted himself to literature, and eventually politics; Minister of Public Instruction, and then of Worship and Education; published some powerful dramas and novels, notably "The Village Notary," a work pronounced equal in many respects to the best of Scott's novels; also vigorous political essays (1818-1871).

EPACT, formerly used for finding Easter, is the age of the moon on January 1 of any particular year.

EPAMINONDAS, a famous Theban statesman and soldier, defeated Sparta in the great victory of Leuctra, and during his lifetime raised Thebes to a position of dominant power; was slain in the battle of Mantinea, when again successfully engaging the Spartans; blameless in his private life as he was heroic in the field, he figures as the great hero of Theban history; born about the close of the 5th century B.C.

EPPE, CHARLES MICHEL, ABBÉ DE L', a noted philanthropist, born in Versailles; took holy orders, but was divested of them on account of Jansenist views; devoted his life to the instruction of deaf-mutes, for whom he founded an institute and invented a language of signs (1712-1789).

EPHEIUS, the contriver of the wooden horse, by means of which the Greeks entered and took possession of Troy; he was assisted by Athena in the building of it.

EPERNAY, a French town on the Marne, 20 m. NW. of Châlons; the chief emporium of the champagne district.

EPHESIANS, THE EPISTLE TO THE, a presumably circular letter of St. Paul to the Church at Ephesus, among other Churches in the East, written to show that the Gentile had a standing in Christ as well as the Jew, and that it was agreeable to the eternal purpose of God that the two should form one body in Him; it contains Paul's doctrine of the Church, and appears to have been written during his first imprisonment in Rome (61-63); it appears from the spirit that breathes in it and the similar thoughts and exhortations contained to have been written at the same time as the Epistle to the Colossians.

EPHESUS, a city of Asia Minor, originally an ancient Greek colony; under Roman domination it was a free city and included many Jews; was famous for its temple of Artemis (or Diana), one of the wonders of the world; was visited by Paul twice; a centre of learning and the arts, and associated in legend with the Seven Sleepers (q.v.).

EPHIALTES, one of the giants who revolted against Zeus and threatened to storm heaven; he appears to have been maimed by Apollo and Hercules.

EPHIALTES, a Mallian Greek who led the Persians across a pass in the mountains, whereby they were able to surround and overcome Leonidas and his Spartans at Thermopylae.

EPHOD, a richly and emblematically embroidered vestment worn by the high-priest of the Jews, and consisting of two parts, one covering the breast and supporting the breastplate, and the other covering the back, these being clasped to the shoulders by two onyx stones, with names inscribed on them, six on each, of the 12 tribes, and the whole bound round the waist with a girdle of gold, blue, purple, scarlet, and fine-twined linen. The word is also applied by some to an image covered with gold, the same being an object of worship (see Judges viii. 27).

EPH'ORI (i.e. overseers), the name of five magistrates annually elected in ancient Sparta from among the people as a countercheck to the authority of the kings and the senate; they had originally to see to the execution of justice and the education of youth; their authority, which resembled that of the tribunes in Rome, was at last destroyed in 225 B.C.

EPHRAIM SYRUS, the most famous of the Church Fathers in Syria, and called "prophet of the Syrians," also "Pillar of the Church" and "Help of the Holy Ghost," born in Nisibis, Mesopotamia; lived a hermit's life in a cave near Edessa; left exegetical writings, homilies, and poems, and so great was his piety and self-denial that he was looked upon as a saint, and is still so revered in several Churches (320-370).

EPHRAIM, one of the 12 tribes of Israel, the one to which Joshua belonged, located in the centre of the land; powerful in the days of the Judges, the chief of the tribes that revolted under Jeroboam after the death of Solomon, and is found often to give name to the whole body of them.

EPIC, a poem that treats of the events in the life of a nation or a race or the founder of one, agreeably to the passion inspiring it and in such form as to kindle and keep alive the heroism thereof in the generations thereafter; or a poem in celebration of the thoughts, feelings, and feats of a whole nation or race; its proper function is to divinize the soul of the related facts and give a noble rendering of them; of compositions of this kind the "Iliad" of Homer, the "Æneid" of Virgil, and the "Divine Comedy" of Dante take the lead.

EPIC MELODY, melody in accord with the feeling of the whole race or the subject as a whole.

EPICHRIS, a Roman lady who conspired against Nero and strangled herself rather than reveal her accomplices after undergoing the cruellest tortures.

EPICHRMUS, a Greek philosopher and poet in the Island of Cos; studied philosophy under Pythagoras; conceived a taste for comedy; gave himself up to that branch of the drama, and received the name of the "Father of Comedy"; lived eventually at the court of Hiero of Syracuse (540-450 B.C.).

EPICUREUS, a celebrated Stoic philosopher of the 1st century, originally a slave; lived and taught at Rome, but after the expulsion of the philosophers retired to Nicopolis, in Epirus; was lame, and lived in poverty; his conversations were collected by Arrian, and his philosophy in a short manual under the Greek name of "Enchiridion of Epictetus," written, as is alleged, in utter obliviousness to the fact that "the end of man is an action, not a thought"; exhibiting a high moral tone, his teachings are imbued with those of Christ.

EPICUREANS, a sect of philosophers who derived their name from Epicurus, and who divided the empire of philosophy with the Stoics (q.v.), at the birth of Christ; they held that the chief end of man was happiness, that the business of philosophy was to guide him in the pursuit of it, and that it was only by experience that one could learn what would lead to it and what would not; they scouted the idea of reason as regulative of thought, and conscience as regulative of conduct, and maintained that our senses were our only guides in both; in a word, they denied that God had implanted in man an absolute rational and moral principle, and maintained that he had no other clue to the goal of his being but his experience in life, while the distinction of right and wrong was only a distinction of what was found conducive to happiness and what was not; they had no faith in or fear of a divine Being above man any more than of a divine principle within man, and they scorned the idea of another world with its awards, and concerned themselves only with this, which, however, in their hands was no longer a cosmos but a chaos, out of which the quickening and ordinative spirit had fled.

EPICURUS, a Greek philosopher, born in Samos, of Athenian origin; settled at Athens in his thirty-sixth year, and founded a philosophical school there, where he taught a philosophy in opposition to that of the Stoics; philosophy he defined as "an activity which realises a happy life through ideas and arguments," summing itself up "in ethics, which are to teach us how to attain a life of felicity"; his system comprised "the three branches included in philosophy, viz., logic, physics, and ethics," but he arranges them in reverse order, logic and physics being regarded only as the handmaids of ethics; for he "limited logic to the investigation of the criterion of truth," and physics he valued as disillusioning the mind of "the superstitious fear that went to disturb happiness"; he was a man of a most temperate and blameless life, and it is a calumny on him to charge him with summing up happiness as mere self-indulgence, though it is true he regarded "virtue as having no value in itself, but only in so far as it offered us something—an agreeable life."

EPICYCLE, an expression used in the Ptolemaic (q.v.) system of astronomy; the old belief that the celestial bodies moved in perfect circles round the earth was found to be inadequate to explain the varying position of the planets, a difficulty which led Ptolemy to invent his theory of epicycles, which was to the effect that each planet revolved round a centre of its own, greater or less, but that all these centres themselves moved in procession round the earth, a theory which fell to pieces before the investigations of Kepler and Newton.

EPIDAURUS, a town of ancient Greece, in Argolis, on the eastern shore of the Peloponnese; was at one time an independent State and an active centre of trade, but was chiefly noted for its famous temple of Æsculapius, to which people flocked to be cured of their diseases, and which bore the inscription "Open only to pure souls"; ruins of a magnificent theatre are still extant here.

EPIDEMIC, a name given to infectious diseases which, arising suddenly in a community, rapidly spread through its members, often travelling from district to district, until often a whole country is affected; the theory of the transmission of disease by microbes has largely explained the spread of such scourges, but the part which atmospheric and other physical, and perhaps psychic, causes play in these disorders is still matter of debate, especially as regards epidemic mental diseases. See ENDEMIC.

EPIGONI (the Descendants), the name given to the sons of the Seven who perished before Thebes; they avenged the death of their fathers by razing Thebes to the ground; the war first and last has been made the subject of epic and tragic poems; Æschylus has a tragedy on the subject.

EPIGRAM, in modern usage, is a neat, witty, and pointed utterance briefly couched in verse form, usually satiric, and reserving its sting to the last line. The Latin epigrammatists, especially Marial and Catullus, were the first to give a satirical turn to the epigram, their predecessors the Greeks having employed it merely for purposes of epitaph and monumental inscriptions of a laudatory nature.

EPILEPSY, a violent nervous affection, manifesting itself usually in sudden convulsive seizures and unconsciousness, followed by temporary stoppage of the breath and rigidity of the body; popularly known as "falling sickness"; attributed by the ancients to demonic possession.

EPIMENIDES, a philosopher of Crete of the 7th century B.C., of whom it is fabled that he fell asleep in a cave when a boy, and that he did not awake for 57 years, but it was to find himself endowed with all knowledge and wisdom. He was invited to Athens during a plague to purify the city, on which occasion he performed certain mysterious rites with the effect that the plague ceased. The story afforded Goethe a subject for a drama entitled "Das Epimenides Erwachen," "in which he symbolises his own aloofness from the great cause of the Fatherland, the result of want of faith in the miraculous power that resides in an enthusiastic outbreak of patriotic feeling."

EPIMETHEUS (i.e. Afterthought), the brother of Prometheus (Forethought), who in spite of the warnings of the latter opened Pandora's box, and let loose a flood of evils on the earth, which oppress it to this day.

EPINAL, the capital of the dep. of Vosges, in France, charmingly situated at the foot of the Vosges Mountains, on the Moelle; is elegantly built, and has ruins of an old castle, surrounded by fine gardens, a 10th-century church and a fine library, &c.; a suspension bridge spans the Moelle; there are industries in cotton, paper, brewing and printing.

EPINAY, MADAME D', a French writer, unhappily married in her youth; became notorious for her illicit intimacy with Rousseau and Grimm; her "Mémoires et Correspondence" give a lively picture of her times (1725-1788).

EPIPHANIUS, ST., one of the Fathers of the Greek Church; of Jewish descent, flourished in the 4th century; led a monastic life, and founded a monastery in Eleutheropolis; was bishop of Constantia in 367; bigoted and tyrannical, he became notorious for his ecclesiastical zeal, and for his indictments of Origen and St. Chrysostom; left writings that show great but indiscriminate learning (330-402).

EPITAPHY, as observed in the Christian Church, is a festival held on the 12th day after Christmas, in commemoration of the manifestation of Christ to the Magi of the East; but up to the close of the 4th century the festival also commemorated the incarnation of Christ as well as the divine manifestation at His baptism.

EPITRUS, was the NW. portion of ancient Hellas, Dodona its capital, and Acheron one of its rivers; in 1466 became part of the Ottoman empire, but now ceded to Greece.

EPISCOPACY, the name given to the form of Church government in which there are superior and inferior orders among the clergy, as between that of bishop and that of a presbyter; called also Prelacy.

EPISCOPIUS, SIMON, a Dutch theologian, born in Amsterdam; the head of the Arminian party after the death of Arminius; was unjustly misrepresented, and tyrannically, even cruelly, treated by the opposite party; he was a man of great ability, enlightened views, and admirable temper, and set more store by integrity and purity of character than orthodoxy of belief (1583-1643).

EPISTOLE OBSCURORUM VIRORUM (i.e. letters of obscure men), a celebrated collection of Latin letters which appeared in the 16th century in Germany, attacking with merciless severity and ridicule the doctrines and modes of living of the scholastics and monks; they are credited with hastening the Reformation.

EPITAPH, an inscription placed on a tombstone in commemoration of the dead interred below. The natural feeling which prompts such inscriptions has manifested itself among all civilised peoples and not a little of a nation's character may be read in them. The Greeks reserved epitaphs for their heroes, but amongst the Romans grew up the modern custom of marking the tombs of relatives with some simple inscription, many of their sepulchres being placed on the side of the public roads, a circumstance which explains the phrase, State, viator—"Stay, traveller"—found in old graveyards.

EPITHALAMIUM, a nuptial song, sung before the bridal chamber in honour of the newly-wedded couple, particularly among the Greeks and Romans, of whom Theocritus and Catullus have left notable examples; but the epithalamium of Edmund Spenser is probably the finest specimen extant of this poetic form.

EPONYM, the term applied to a person to whom is mythically ascribed the origin of a country or people, or even of a place; thus Portus was given as the eponymous founder of Portsmouth.

EPPING FOREST, as it now exists in the SE. of Essex, is a remnant—5600 acres—of the famous Essex or Waltham Forest, which once extended over all Essex, and which then served as a royal hunting-ground; is now a favourite pleasure-ground and valuable field for explorations of botanical and entomological collectors.

EPSOM, a market-town in Surrey, skirting Banstead Downs, 15 m. SW. of London; formerly noted for its mineral springs, now associated with the famous Derby and other races.

EPSTEIN, JACOB, British sculptor. Born of Russian-Polish parents in New York, he studied in Paris. He made busts of well-known people in highly original style, and aroused a storm of controversy with his unconventional "Rims" in Hyde Park (1880-).

EQUINOCTIAL POINTS are the two points at which the celestial equator intersects the Ecliptic (q.v.), so called because the days and nights are of equal duration when the sun is at these points.

EQUINOXES, the times at which the sun is at the Equinoctial Points (q.v.), viz., March 21 and September 22, called respectively the vernal and the autumnal equinoxes in the northern hemisphere, but vice versa in the southern; at these times the sun is directly over the equator, and day and night are then of equal length over the globe.

EQUITES, THE, a celebrated equestrian order in ancient Rome, supposed to have been instituted by Romulus and restricted to the better class of citizens; at first purely military, it was at length invested with the judicial functions of the Senate, and the power of farming out the public revenues; gradually lost these privileges and became defunct.

ERASMUS, DESIDERIUS, a famous scholar and man of letters, born in Rotterdam; illegitimate son of one Gerhard; conceived a disgust for monkish life during six years' residence in a monastery at Steyn; wandered through Europe and amassed stores of learning at various universities; visited Oxford in 1489, and formed a lifelong friendship with Sir Thomas More; was for some years professor of Divinity and Greek at Cambridge; edited the first Greek Testament; settled finally at Basel, whence he exercised a remarkable influence over European thought by the wit and tone of his writings, notably the "Praise of Folly," the "Colloquia" and "Adagia"; he has been regarded as the precursor of the Reformation; is said to have laid the egg which Luther hatched; added the Reformation by his scholarship, though he kept aloof as a scholar from the popular movement of Luther (1466-1536).

ERASTIANISM, the right of the State to override and overrule the decisions of the Church that happen to involve civil penalties. See ERASTUS.

ERASTUS, THOMAS, an eminent physician, born in Baden, in Switzerland, whose fame rests mainly on the attitude he assumed in the theological and ecclesiastical questions of the day; he defended Zwingle's view of the Eucharist as a merely syncretical ordinance, and denied the right of the Church to inflict civil penalties, or to exercise discipline—the power of the keys—that belonging, he maintained, to the province of the civil magistrate and not to the Church (1524-1583).

ERATO (i.e. the Lovely), the muse of erotic poetry and elegy, represented with a lyre in her left hand.

ERATOSTHENES, surnamed the Philologist, a philosopher of Alexandria, born in Cyrene, 276 B.C.; becoming blind and tired of life, he starved himself to death at the age of 80; he ranks high among ancient astronomers; measured the obliquity of the ecliptic, and estimated the size of the earth (276-194 B.C.).

EROLLA Y ZUNIGA, ALONSO DE, a Spanish poet, born in Madrid; took part in the wars of the Spaniards with the Araucans in Chile, which he celebrated in an epic of no small merit called "La Araucana"; he ended his days in poverty (1533-1595).

ERCKMANN-CHATRIAN, the combined name under which Emile Erckmann (1822-1899) and Louis Chatrian (1826-1890), both of Lorraine, published a number of successful novels mostly dealing with the republican and Napoleonic campaigns; "Doctor Mathews," "The History of a Conscript of 1813," and "Waterloo" are the best known.

ERDGEIST, the Spirit of the Earth, represented in Goethe's "Faust" as sedulously weaving, at the Time-Loom, night and day, in death as well as life, the earthly vesture of the Eternal, and thereby revealing the Invisible to mortal eyes.

ERDMANN, JOHANN EDUARD, a German philosopher, born in Wolmar, professor at Halle; was of the school of Hegel, an authority on the history of philosophy (1805-1892).

EREBUS, a region of utter darkness in the depths of Hades, into which no mortal ever penetrated, the proper abode of Pluto and his Queen with their train of attendants, such as the Erinyes, through which the spirits of the dead must pass on their way to Hades; equivalent to the valley of the shadow of death.

ERECTHEUS, or ERICHTHONIUS, the mythical first king of Athens; favoured and protected from infancy by Athena, to whom accordingly he dedicated the city; he was buried in the temple of Athena, and worshipped afterwards as a god; it is fabled of him that when an infant he was committed by Athena in a chest to the care of Agraulos and Herse, under a strict charge not to pry into it; they could not restrain their curiosity, opened the chest, saw the child entwined with serpents, were seized with madness, and threw themselves down from the height of the Acropolis to perish at the foot.

ERFURT, a town in Saxony, on the Gera, 14 m. W. of Weimar, formerly capital of Thuringia, with many interesting buildings, amongst the number the 14th-century Gothic cathedral with its great bell, weighing 13½ tons, and cast in 1497; the monastery of St. Augustine (changed into an orphanage in 1819), in which Luther was a monk; the Academy of Sciences, and the library with 60,000 vols. and 1000 MSS.; various textile factories flourish.

ERG, the unit of work and energy in the metric system; the work done in moving 1 centimetre against a force of 1 dyne.

ERGOSTEROL, extracted from yeast, is used in cases of rickets, caused by a deficiency in vitamin D, which sunlight manufactures from it.

ERGOT, a diseased state of grasses, &c., but a disease chiefly attacking rye, produced by a fungus developing on the seeds; the drug "ergot of rye" is obtained from a species of this fungus.

ERIC, the name of several of the kings of Denmark, and Sweden, and Norway, the most notorious being the son of the noble Swedish king Gustavus Vasa (q.v.), who aspired to the hand of Elizabeth of England and challenged his rival Leicester to a duel; afterwards sought Mary of Scotland, but eventually married a peasant girl who had nursed him out of madness brought on by disipation; was deposed after a State trial instigated by his own brothers, and ultimately poisoned himself in prison eight years later (1533-1577).

ERIC THE RED, a Norwegian chief who discovered Greenland in the 10th century, and sent out expeditions to the coast of North America.

ERICSSON, JOHN, a distinguished Swedish engineer, born in Långbanshyttan; went to England in 1826 and to the United States of America in 1839, where he died; invented the screw propeller of steamships, built warships for the American navy, and amongst them the famous Monitor; his numerous inventions mark a new era in naval and steamship construction (1803-1889).

ERIE CANAL, from Buffalo to Albany, New York State, links Lake Erie (q.v.) with the Hudson River, thus providing communication between the Canadian lakes and the Atlantic Ocean; is 365 m. in length.

ERIE, LAKE, the fourth in size among the giant lakes of North America, lies between Lakes Huron and Ontario, on the Canadian border, is 240 m. long and varies from 30 to 60 m. in breadth; is very shallow, and difficult to navigate; icebound from December till about April.

ERIGENA, JOHANNES SCOTUS, a rationalistic mystic, the most distinguished scholar and thinker of the 9th century, of Irish birth; taught at the court of Charles the Bald in France, and was summoned by Alfred to Oxford in 877; died abbot of Malmesbury; held that "damnation was simply the consciousness of having failed to fulfil the divine purpose"; he derived all authority from reason, and not reason from authority, maintaining that authority unfounded on reason was of no value; d. 882.

ERIN, the ancient Celtic name of Ireland, used still in poetry.

ERINNA, a Greek poetess of Lesbos, the friend of Sappho, died at 19; wrote epic poetry, all but a few lines of which has perished; born about 612 B.C.

ERINNYES, THE (i.e. the roused-to-anger, otherwise in Greek the Eumenides, and in Latin, the Furies), the Greek goddesses of vengeance, were the daughters of Gaia, begotten of the blood of the wounded Uranus, and at length reckoned three in number, Alecto, Tisiphone, and Megera; they were conceived of as haunting the wicked on earth and scourging them in hell; they were of the court of Pluto, and the executioners of his wrath.

ERIS, the Greek goddess of strife or discord, sowing the seeds thereof among the gods to begin with, which she has since continued to do among men.

ERTREIA, a colony belonging to Italy, extending from Cape Kasar 670 m. along the western shore of the Red Sea to a point in the Strait of Bab-el-Mandeb; Massowah is the capital.

ERIVAN, a fortified town in Transcaucasia, situated 30 m. N.E. of Mount Ararat on an elevated plateau; was ceded to Russia in 1823 by Persia.

ERLANGEN, a Bavarian town on the Regnitz, has a celebrated Protestant university, founded by Wilhelmina, sister of Frederick the Great, who was the Electress; was a place of refuge for the Huguenots in 1685; manufactures in gloves, mirrors, and tobacco are carried on, and brewing.

ERLAU, an ecclesiastical city of Hungary, on the Erlau, 80 m. N.E. of Pesth; is the seat of an archbishop; has a fine cruciform cathedral, built since 1837, several monasteries, a lyceum with a large library and an observatory; is noted for its red wine.

ERL-KING, a Norse impersonation of the spirit of superstitious fear which haunts and kills us even in the guardian embrace of paternal affection; is the subject of a ballad by Goethe.

ERMONIA, a Syrian, the heroine of Tasso's "Jerusalem Delivered," in love with the Christian prince Tancred.

ERNESTI, JOHANN AUGUST, a celebrated German classicist and theologian, called the "German Cicero," born in Tennstädt, Thuringia; professor of Philology in Leipzig, and afterwards of Theology; edited various classical works, his edition of Cicero specially noted; was the first to apply impartial textual criticism to the Bible, and to him, in consequence, we owe the application of a more correct exegesis to the Biblical writings (1707-1781).

ERNST, ELECTOR OF SAXONY, founder of the Ernestine line of Saxon princes, ancestor of Prince Consort, born in Altenburg; was kidnapped together with his brother Albert in 1455, an episode famous in German history as the "Prinzenraub" (i.e. the stealing of the prince); succeeded his father in 1464; annexed Thuringia in 1482, and three years later shared his territory with his brother Albert (1441-1486).

ERNST I., Duke of Saxe-Gotha and Altenburg; served in the Thirty Years' War under Gustavus Adolphus, and shared in the victory of Lützen; was an able and wise ruler, and gained for himself the surname of "the Pious" (1601-1675).

EROS (in Latin, Cupido), the Greek god of love, the son of Aphrodite, and the youngest of the gods, though he figures in the cosmogony as one of the oldest of the gods, and as the uniting power in the life of the gods and the life of the universe, was represented at last as a wanton boy from whose wiles neither gods nor men were safe.

EROS, one of the asteroids or minor planets discovered at Berlin by Dr. Witt in 1898; approaches at times within 13 million miles of the earth; careful measurements of its orbit enable the distance of the earth from the sun to be determined with exactitude.

EROSTRATUS, an obscure Ephesian, who, to immortalise his name, set fire to the temple of Ephesus on the night, as it happened, when Alexander the Great was born; the Ephesians thought to defeat his purpose by making it death to any one who mentioned his name, but in vain, the decree itself giving wider and wider publicity to the act.

ERFENIUS (Thomas van Erpeni), Arabic scholar, born in Gorkum, in Holland; after completing his studies at Leyden and Paris, became professor of Oriental Languages there; famed for his Arabic grammar and rudiments, which served as text-books for upwards of 200 years (1585-1624).

ERROMANGA, an island in the New Hebrides group, where the missionary, John Williams, was murdered by the natives in 1839.

ERSCH, JOHANN SAMUEL, a bibliographer, born in Grossglogau; after a college career at Halle devoted himself to journalism, and in 1800 became librarian of the University of Jena; subsequently filled the chair of Geography and Statistics at Halle; his "Handbook of German Literature" marks the beginning of German bibliography; began in 1818, with Gruber, the publication of an encyclopedia (1766-1828).

ERSKINE, EBENEZER, founder of the Secession Church of Scotland, born in Chirnside, Berwickshire; minister at Portmuck for 28 years; took part in the patronage dispute, and was deposed (1733), when he formed a church at Gairney Bridge, near Kinross, the nucleus of the Secession Church (1680-1754).

ERSKINE, HENRY, a famous Scottish lawyer, second son of the Earl of Buchan, born in Edinburgh; called to the bar and became Lord Advocate; a Whig in politics; brought about useful legal reforms; noted as a brilliant wit and orator (1746-1817).

ERSKINE, JOHN, a Scottish jurist; called to the bar in 1719; became professor of Scots Law in Edinburgh University in 1837, resigned 1763; author of two important works on Scots Law, "The Institutes" and "Principles" (1695-1768).

ERSKINE, JOHN, D.D., son of the preceding; a celebrated Scottish preacher and author of various essays and pamphlets; a prominent leader on the Evangelical side in the General Assemblies; was minister of the Old Greyfriars, Edinburgh, and the colleague of Principal Robertson; is remembered for a rebuff in the pulpit and for another in the General Assembly; the former was to a remark of his colleague, Principal Robertson, "If perfect virtue were to appear on earth we would adore it," . . . "Perfect virtue did appear on earth and we crucified it," he replied; while the other in the General Assembly was "Rax (reach) me that Bible," as certain Moderates in the court began derisively to scoff at the proposal to send missions to the heathen (1721-1803).

ERSKINE, JOHN, OF DUN, a Scottish Reformer, supported Knox and Wishart; was several times Moderator of the General Assembly, and assisted in the formation of "The Second Book of Discipline" (1509-1581).

ERSKINE, RALPH, a Scottish divine, brother of Ebenezer, (q.v.), with whom he co-operated in founding the Secession Church; his sermons and religious poems, called "Gospel Sonnets," were widely read; one of the first of the Scottish seceders (1685-1752).

ERSKINE, THOMAS, LORD, a famous lawyer, youngest son of the Earl of Buchan, born in Edinburgh; spent his early years in the navy, and afterwards joined the army; resigned in 1775 to enter upon the study of law; called to the bar in 1778; a king's counsel in 1783; created a baron and Lord Chancellor in 1806; was engaged in all the famous trials of his time; an unrivalled orator in the law courts; his speeches rank as masterpieces of forensic eloquence (1760-1829).

ERWIN, a German architect, born in Steinbach, Baden; the builder of the western façade of the cathedral of Strasburg (1240-1318).

ERYMANTHUS, a mountain in Arcadia that was the haunt of the boar killed by Hercules.

ERYSIPELAS, known popularly as St. Anthony's Fire and Rose, a febrile disease, manifesting itself in acute inflammation of the skin, which becomes vividly scarlet and ultimately peels; confined chiefly to the head; is contagious, and recurrent.

ERYTHEMA, a medical term used loosely to designate a diseased condition of the skin; characterised by a scarlet or dark-red rash or eruption, distinct from erysipelas.

ERZERUM, a famous city in Armenia, capital of the province of the same name, 125 m. S.E. of Trebizond; situated on a fertile plain 6300 ft. above sea-level; is an important entrepôt for commerce between Europe and Asia; is irregularly built, but contains imposing ruins; has a fortress, and in the suburbs a number of mosques and bazaars; is famed for its iron and copper ware; fell into the hands of the Turks in 1517; figured as a military centre in many Turkish wars; was reduced by the Russians in 1878; was a scene of Armenian massacres by the Turks in 1895.

ERZGEBIRGE, a range of mountains lying between Saxony and Bohemia; the highest peak is the Kellberg, 4052 ft.; is rich in various metallic ores, especially silver and lead.

ERYX, an ancient town in the N.W. of Sicily, at the foot of a mountain of the same name, with a temple to Venus, who was hence called Erycina.

ESAU, the elder son of Isaac, who sold his birthright to Jacob for a mess of lentils; led a predatory life, and was the forefather of the Edomites.

ESCHATOLOGY, the department of theology which treats of the so-called last things, such as death, the intermediate state, the millennium, the return of Christ, the resurrection, the Judgment, and the end of the world.

ESCHENBACH, WOLFRAM VON, a famous minnesinger, born in Eschenbach, in Bavaria, at about the close of the 12th century; was of good birth, and lived some time at the Thuringian Court; enjoyed a wide reputation in his time as a poet; of his poems the epic "Parzival" which records the history of the "Grail," is the most celebrated.

ESCOBAR Y MENDOZA, ANTONIO, a Spanish Jesuit and casuist, born in Valladolid, a preacher and voluminous writer (1589-1669).

ESCORIAL (i.e. place of ashes), a huge granite pile, built in the form of a gridiron, 80 m. NW. from Madrid, and deemed at one time the eighth wonder of the world; was built in 1563-1584; was originally dedicated as a monastery to St. Lorenzo in recognition of the services which the Saint had rendered to Philip II. at the battle of St. Quentin, and used at length as a palace and burial-place of kings. It is a mere shadow of what it was, and is preserved from ruin by occasional grants of money to keep it in repair.

ESDRAEON, a flat and fertile valley in Galilee, called also the valley of Jezreel, which, with a maximum breadth of 8 m. extends in a NW. direction from the Jordan at Eschepaar to the Bay of Acre. Allenby gained a great victory over the Turks here in Sept., 1918.

ESDRAS, the name of two books of the Apocrypha, the first, written 2nd century B.C., containing the history of the rebuilding of the Temple and the restoration of its cultus, with a discussion on the strangest of all things, ending in assigning the palm to truth; and the second, written between 97 and 81 B.C., a forecast of the deliverance of the Jews from oppression and the establishment of the Messianic kingdom.

Esk, the name of several Scottish streams: (1) in Dumfriesshire, the Esk of young Lochinvar, has a course of 31 m. after its formation by the junction of the North and South Eaks, and flows into the Solway; (2) in Edinburgh, formed by the junction of the North and South Eaks, joins the Firth of Forth at Musselburgh; (3) in Forfarshire, the South Esk discharges into the North Sea at Montrose, and the North Esk also flows into the North Sea 4 m. N. of Montrose.

Eskimo, or ESQUIMAUX, an aboriginal people of the Mongolian or American Indian stock, in all not amounting to 40,000, thinly scattered along the northern seaboard of America and Asia and in many of the Arctic islands; their physique, mode of living, religion, and language are of peculiar ethnological interest; they are divided into tribes, each having its own territory, and these tribes in turn are subdivided into small communities, over each of which a chief presides; the social organization is a simple tribal communism; Christianity has been introduced amongst the Eskimo of South Alaska and in the greater part of Labrador; in other parts the old religion still obtains, called Shamanism, a kind of fetish worship; much of their folk-lore has been gathered and printed; fishing and seal-hunting are their chief employments; they are of good physique, but of primitive habits, most of their implements and weapons resembling those of neolithic man; their name is supposed to be an Indian derivative signifying "eaters of raw meat."

Eskimo Dog, a dog found among the Eskimo, about the size of a pointer, wolf-like in appearance, with thick hair of a dark grey or black and white; half tamed, but strong and sagacious; invaluable for sledding.

ESMERALDA, the gipsy girl who figures in Victor Hugo's romance, "Nôtre Dame de Paris."

ESMOND, HENRY, the title of one of Thackeray's novels, deemed by the most competent critics his best, and the name of its hero, a chivalrous cavalier of the time of Queen Anne.

ESNE, a town in Upper Egypt, on the left bank of the Nile, and 25 m. S. of Thebes; famous for the ruins of a temple.

ESOTERICO (i.e. those within), a term coined by Pythagoras and used to denote teaching intended only for the initiated, and intelligible only to them.

ESPARTERO, BALDOMERO, a celebrated Spanish general and statesman, born in Granatula; supported, against the Carlist faction, the claims of Isabella to the throne of Spain; was for his services made Duke of Vittoria, and in 1841 elected regent; compelled to abdicate, he fled to England, but afterwards returned for a time to the head of affairs; an able man, but wanting in the requisite astuteness and tact for such a post (1793-1870).

ESPERANTO, a universal language invented by Dr. Louis Zamenhof of Warsaw in 1887; with roots selected from European languages, a simple grammar and syntax, and phonetic pronunciation, its knowledge is easily acquired.

ESPINASSE, CLARE FRANÇOISE, a wit and beauty, born in Lyons, illegitimate child of the Comtesse d'Albon; went to Paris as companion to Madame du Deffand, with whom she quarrelled; set up a salon of her own, and became celebrated for her many attractions; D'Alembert was devoted to her; many of her letters to her lovers, the Marquis de Mora and M. de Guilbert in particular, have been published, and display a charming personality (1732-1770).

ESPINEL, VINCENT DE, a Spanish poet and musician, born in Ronda, Granada; first a soldier and then a priest, the friend of Lope de Vega, and author of a work which Le Sage made free use of in writing "Gil Blas"; was an expert musician; played on the guitar, and added a fifth string (1551-1634).

ESPIRITU SANTO, (1) a small and swampy maritime province of Brazil, lying on the N. border of Rio de Janeiro; does some trade in timber, cotton, coffee, and sugar; Victoria is the capital; (2) a town in central Cuba; (3) the largest of the New Hebrides (i.e. the climate is unhealthy, but the soil fertile).

ESPRIT DES LOIS (i.e. the Spirit of Laws), the title of Montesquieu's great work, at once speculative and historical, published in 1748, characterised in "Sartor" as the work, like many others, of "a clever infant spelling letters from a hieroglyphic book the lexicon of which lies in Eternity, in Heaven."

ESPY, JAMES POLLARD, a meteorologist, born in Pennsylvania; did notable work in investigating the causes of storms, and in 1841 published "The Philosophy of Storms"; was appointed to the Washington observatory, where he carried on experiments in the cooling of gases and atmospheric expansion (1785-1860).

ESQUIMAULT, a seaport in British Columbia, on Vancouver Island, and an important naval station, with naval yard and dry dock.

ESQUIRE, originally meant a shield-bearer, and was bestowed upon the two attendants of a knight, who were distinguished by silver spurs, and whose special duty it was to look after their master's arms, now used widely as a courtesy title.

ESQUIROS, HENRY ALPHONSE, poet and physician, born in Paris; his early writings, poems and romances, are socialistic in bias; member of the Legislative Assembly in 1848; retired to England after the coup d'état; returned to France and rose to be a member of the Senate (1875); wrote three works descriptive of the social and religious life of England (1812-1876).

ESSEN, a town in the Rhine province of Prussia, 20 m. N.E. of Düsseldorf, the seat of the famous Krupp's steel-works.

ESSENES, a religious communistic fraternity, never very numerous, that grew up on the soil of Judea about the time of the Maccabees, and had establishments in Judea when Christ was on earth, as well as afterwards in the time of Josephus; they led an ascetic life, practised extreme ceremonial cleanliness, were rigorous in their observance of the Jewish law, and differed from the Pharisees in that they gave to the Pharisaic spirit a monastic expression; they represented Judaism in its purest essence, and in the spirit of their teaching came nearer Christianity than any other sect of the time; "Essenism," says Schürer, is first and mainly of Jewish formation, and in its non-Jewish features it had most affinity with the Pythagorean tendency of the Greeks.

ESSENTIAL OILS, name given to those aromatic vegetable oils which are used as essences and perfumes; many of them can be produced synthetically from coal tar products.

ESSEQUIBO, an important river in British Guiana, 620 m. long, rises in the Sierra Acaray, navigable for 50 m. to small craft, flows northward into the Atlantic.

— a county in the SE. of England, between Suffolk on the N. and Kent in the S., faces the North Sea on the E.; is well watered with streams; has an undulating surface; is chiefly agricultural; brewing is an important industry, and the oyster fisheries of the Colne are noted; Chelmsford is the county town.

ESSEX, ROBERT DEVEREUX, EARL OF, a favourite of Queen Elizabeth, born in Netherwood, Hereford; served in the Netherlands under Leicester, his stepfather; won the capricious fancy of Elizabeth; lost favour by marrying clandestinely the widow of Sir Philip Sidney; it was restored, and led a life of varying fortune, filling various important offices, till his final quarrel with the Queen and execution (1567-1601).

ESSEX, ROBERT DEVEREUX, EARL OF, son of preceding; commander of the Parliamentary forces against Charles I.; the title died with him, but was conferred again upon the present family in 1661, (1591-1646).

ESSLING, a village near Vienna, where the French gained a bloody victory over the Austrians in 1809, and which gave the title of prince to Massena.

ESSLINGEN, an old historic and important manufacturing town in Württemberg on the Neckar, 6 m. SE. of Stuttgart; has a citadel and the Luth-frauen Church, which is a fine Gothic structure with a spire 246 ft.; is a noted hardware centre, and celebrated for its machinery; a good trade is done in textiles, fruit, and sparkling champagne.

ESTAING, CHARLES, COMTE D', a French admiral, "one of the bravest of men," fought against the English in the Indies and in America; wonced as a Royalist at the outbreak of the French Revolution; his loyalty to royalty outweighed, it was thought, his loyalty to his country, and he was guillotined (1720-1794).

ESTE, an ancient and illustrious Italian family from which, by an offshoot founded by Welf IV., who became Duke of Bavaria in the 11th century, the Guelph Houses of Brunswick and Hanover, also called the Este-Guelphs, trace their descent. Of the Italian branch the most noted descendant was Alphonso I., a distinguished soldier and statesman and patron of art, whose second wife was the infamous Lucrezia Borgia. His son, Alphonso II., is remembered for his cruel treatment of Tasso, placing him in prison for seven years as a madman who dared to make love to one of the princesses.

ESTÉ, an Italian town, 18 m. SW. of Padua, on the S. side of the Euganean Hills; has a castle and church with a leaning campanile; is the seat of the ancient Este family.

ESTERHAZY, the town of a noble Austrian family of ancient date, that gave birth to a number of illustrious men.

ESTERHAZY DE GALANTHA, the name of a powerful and famous Hungarian family holding the rank of Princes of the Empire for 300 years from the 17th century. Their estates included upwards of 4000 villages, 60 market-towns, many castles and lordships.

ESTHER, THE BOOK OF, a book of the Old Testament, which takes its name from the chief figure in the story related, an orphan Jewess and ward of her cousin Mordecai, who, from her beauty, was chosen into the royal harem and raised to be consort to the king. It is read through in the Jewish synagogues at the feast of Purim (q.v.). It is observed that the name of God does not occur once in the book, but the story implies the presence of an overruling Providence, responding to the cry of His oppressed ones for help.

ESTONIA, an independent State on the S. shore of the Gulf of Finland, and on the W. it abuts on the Baltic; what of the country that is free from forest and marsh is chiefly agricultural, but fishing is also an important industry; the people are a composite of Finns and immigrant Germans, with Russians.

1. Reval is the capital.

— name of a family of French painters.

— COUNT D', a French diplomatist (1579-1680).

ESTREMADURA, a coast province of Portugal, between Beira and Alemtejo, watered by the Tagus; richly fertile in many parts, but sparsely cultivated; silk is an important industry, and an increasing; Lisbon is the chief city, and with Setúbal monopolises the trade; salt, fruits, wine, and oil are exported. Also name of a district in Spain between Portugal and New Castile, now divided into the provinces of Badajoz and Cádiz.

ETAPLES, town in the department Côte-du-Nord, France, used as a military base during the Great War.

ETEOCLES, a son of Œdipus, king of Thebes, agreed on the banishment of his father to govern the state alternately with his brother Polyneus, but, failing to keep his engagement, the latter appealed to his guardsmen, out of which there arose the War of the Seven against Thebes, which ended in the slaughter of the whole seven, upon which the brothers thought to end the strife in single combat, when each fell by the sword of the other.

ETERNAL CITY, ancient Rome in the esteem of its inhabitants. In accordance with the promise, as Virgil feigns, of Jupiter to Venus, the goddess-mother of the race.

ETHANE, a colourless, odourless gas, a hydrocarbon of the paraffin series.

ETHELBERT, a king of Kent, in whose reign Christianity was introduced by St. Augustine and a band of missionaries in 597; drew up the first Saxon law code (562-616).

ETHELDREDA, ST., a Saxon princess, whose name, shortened into St. Audrey, was given to a certain kind of lace, whence "tawdry"; she took refuge from the married state in the monastery of St. Abb's Head, and afterwards founded a monastery in the Isle of Ely; was canonized for her piety (830-879).

ETHELRED I., king of Saxon England (866-871), predecessor and brother of Alfred; his reign was a long and unsuccessful struggle with the Danes.

ETHELRED II., the Unready, a worthless king of Saxon England (979-1016), married Emma, daughter of Richard, Duke of Normandy, a step which led in the end to the claim which issued in the Norman Conquest (988-1016).

ETHER, a volatile liquid prepared from the distillation of alcohol and sulphuric acid at high temperature; is colourless, and emits a sweet, penetrating odour; is highly combustible; a useful solvent, and an important anæsthetic.

ETHER, THE, a subtle element presumed to pervade all interstellar space, vibrations in which are assumed to account for the transmission of light and all radiant energy. The hypothesis of the ether is discarded in the modern theories of Einstein (q.v.).

ETHEREDGE, SIR GEORGE, the originator of the kind of comedy "containing a vein of lively humour and witty dialogue which was afterwards displayed by Congreve and Farquhar"; has been called the "founder of the comedy of intrigue"; he was the author of three clever plays, entitled "Love in a Tub," "She Would If She Could," and "The Man of Mode" (1636-1694).

ETHICS, the science which treats of the distinction between right and wrong and of the moral sense by which they are discriminated.

ETHIOPIA, a term loosely used in ancient times to indicate the territory inhabited by black or dark-coloured people; latterly applied to an undefined tract of land stretching S. of Egypt to the Gulf of Aden, which constituted the kingdom of the Ethiopians, a people of Semitic origin and speaking a Semitic language called Ge'ez, who were successively conquered by the Egyptians, Persians, and Romans; are known in the Bible; their first king is supposed to have been Menilehek, son of Solomon and the Queen of Sheba; their literature consists mostly of translations and collections of saws and riddles; the original language is no longer spoken.

ETHNOLOGY, the science which treats of the human race as grouped in tribes or nations, but limits itself to tracing the origin and distribution of races, and investigating the physical and mental peculiarities and differences exhibited by men over all parts of the globe; the chief problem of the science is to decide between the monogenous and polygenous theories of the origin of the race, and investigation inclines to favour the former view. The polygenous argument, based on the diversity of languages, has been discarded, as, if valid, necessitating about a thousand different origins, while the monogenous position is strengthened by the ascertained facts that the different racial groups are fruitful amongst themselves, and present points of mental and physical similarity which accord well with this theory. Ethnologists now divide the human race into four main groups: the Ethiopian or negro, the Mongolic or yellow, the American, and the Caucasic or white.

ETHYLENE, a colourless gas which forms an explosive mixture with air, the simplest member of the olefine series of unsaturated hydrocarbons.

ETIENNE, ST., an important French town, capital of the dep. of the Loire, on the Furens, 35 m. SW. of Lyons; chief seat of the ironworks of France; also has noted ribbon factories.

ETIVE, a sea-loch in Argyllshire, Scotland, is an inland extension of the Firth of Lorne, about 20 m. in length, and varying in breadth from 2 to 4 m.; the mountain scenery along the shores grandly picturesque; the river which bears the same name rises in Rannoch Moor, and joins the loch after a SW. course of 16 m.; both loch and river afford salmon-fishing.

ETNA, a volcanic mountain on the E. coast of Sicily, 10,840 ft. high; a striking feature is the immense ravine, the Val del Bove, splitting the eastern side of the mountain, and about 5 m. in diameter; on the flanks are many smaller cones. Etna is celebrated for its many and destructive eruptions; was active in 1892; its observatory, built in 1880, at an elevation of 9075 ft. above sea-level, is the highest inhabited dwelling in Europe. See ENOE-LADUS.

ETON, a town in Buckinghamshire, on the Thames, 22 m. SW. of London; celebrated for its public school, Eton College, founded in 1440 by Henry VI., which has now upwards of 1000 scholars.

ETRURIA, the ancient Roman name of a region in Italy, W. of the Apennines from the Tiber to the Macra in the N.; inhabited by the Etruscans, a primitive people of Italy; at one time united in a confederation of twelve States but gradually absorbed by the growing Roman power; its people were famous for their artistic work in iron and bronze. Many of the Etruscan cities contain interesting remains of their early civilised state; but their entire literature, supposed to have been extensive, has perished, and their language is only known through monumental inscriptions. Their religion was polytheistic, but embraced a belief in a future life. There is abundant evidence that they had attained to a high degree of civilisation; the status of women was high, the wife ranking with the husband; their buildings still extant attest their skill as engineers and builders; vases, mirrors, and coins of fine workmanship have been found in their tombs, and jewellery which is scarcely rivalled; while the tombs themselves are remarkable for their furnishings of chairs, ornaments, decorations, &c., showing that they regarded these sanctuaries more as dwellings of departed spirits than as sepulchres of the dead.

ETTMÜLLER, ERNST MORITZ LUDWIG, a German philologist, born in Gerdsdorf, Saxony, professor of German literature in Zurich in 1863; did notable work in connection with Anglo-Saxon and Middle German dialects (1802-1877).

ETTRICK, a Scottish river that rises in Selkirkshire and joins the Tweed, 3 m. below Selkirk; the Yarrow is its chief tributary; a forest of the same name once spread over all Selkirkshire and into the adjoining counties; the district is associated with some of the finest ballad and pastoral poetry of Scotland.

ETTRICK SHEPHERD, James Hogg (q.v.).

ETTY, WILLIAM, a celebrated painter, born in York; rose from being a printer's apprentice to the position of a Royal Academician; considered by Ruskin to have wasted his great powers as a colourist on inadequate and hackneyed subjects (1787-1849).

ETYMOLOGY, the science which treats of the origins and meanings of words and word-forms, tracing their history and growth through various languages ancient and modern. By Popular Etymology is meant an unscientific and speculative investigation of word origins—particularly in the case of place-names—usually based on incidents and legends. EUBCEA, the largest of the Grecian Isles, skirts the mainland on the SE., to which it is connected by a bridge spanning the Talanta Channel, 40 yards broad; it is about 100 m. in length; has fine quarries of marble, and mines of iron and copper are found in the mountains; Chalcis is the chief town.

EUCLED OF ALEXANDRIA, a famous geometriean, whose book of "Elements" held its place as an English school-book until recent years; the books which superseded it are based to a greater or less extent upon Euclid's work; he founded a school of mathematics in Alexandria, and flourished about 300 B.C.

EUCLED OF MEGARA, a Greek philosopher, a disciple of Socrates, was influenced by the Eleatics (q.v.); founded the Megarian school of Philosophy, whose chief tenet is that the "good," or that which is one with itself, alone is the only real existence.

EUDÆMONISM, the doctrine that the production of happiness is the aim and measure of virtue.

EUDOCIA, the ill-fated daughter of an Athenian Sophist, wife of Theodosius II., embraced Christianity, her name Athenais previously; was banished by her husband on an ill-founded charge of infidelity, and spent the closing years of her life in Jerusalem, where she became a convert to the views of Eutyches (q.v.) (394-460).

EUDOXUS OF CNIDUS, a Grecian astronomer, was a pupil of Plato, and afterwards studied in Egypt; said to have introduced a 365½ day year into Greece; flourished in the 4th century B.C.

EUGÈNE, FRANÇOIS, PRINCE OF SAVOY, a renowned general, born in Paris, and related by his mother to Cardinal Mazarin; he renounced his native land, and entered the service of the Austrian Emperor Leopold; first gained distinction against the Turks, whose power in Hungary he crushed in the great victory of Peterwardein (1697); co-operated with Marlborough in the war of the Spanish Succession, and shared the glories of his great victories, and again opposed the French in the cause of Poland (1663-1736).

EUGÉNIE, EX-EMPRESS OF THE FRENCH, born in Granada, second daughter of Count Manuel Fernandez de Montigos and Marie Manuela Kirkpatrick of Closeburn, Dumfriesshire; married to Napoleon III. in 1853; had to leave France in 1870, and lived as his widow at Chislehurst, Kent (1826-1920).

EUGENIUS, the name of four Popes. E. ST. I., Pope from 654 to 658 (festival, August 27); E. II., Pope from 824 to 827; E. III., Pope from 1145 to 1153; E. IV., Pope from 1481 to 1447.

EUGENIUS IV., Pope born in Venice; his pontificate was marked by a schism created by proceedings in the Council of Basel towards the reform of the Church and the limitation of the papal authority, the issue of which was that he excommunicated the Council and the Council deposed him; he had an unhappy time of it, and in his old age regretted he had ever left his monastery to assume the papal crown.

EUGUBINE TABLES, seven bronze tablets discovered in 1444 near Eugubium, in Italy, containing inscriptions which supply a key to the original tongues of Italy prior to Latin, the language used being ancient Umbrian.

EUKHEMERISM, the theory that the gods of antiquity are merely deified men, so called from Euhemerus, the Greek who first propounded the theory, and who lived 316 B.C.

EULENSPIEGEL (i.e. Owl-glass), the hero of a popular German tale, which relates no end of pranks, fortunes, and misfortunes of a wandering mechanic born in a village in Brunswick; he was buried in 1850 at Möln, in Lauenburg, where they still show his tombstone sculptured with an owl and a glass.

EULER, LEONHARD, a celebrated mathematician, born in Basel; professor in St. Petersburg successively of Physics and Mathematics; came to reside in Berlin in 1741 at the express invitation of Frederick the Great; returned to St. Petersburg in 1746, where he died; besides many works issued in his lifetime, he left 200 MSS., which were published after his death (1707-1783).

EUMENIDES (i.e. the Well-meaning), a name given to the Erinyes (q.v.) or Furies, from a dread of calling them by their true name.

EUMOLPUS, the founder of the Eleusinian Mysteries, alleged to have been a priest of Demeter or Ceres.

EUNOMIANS, an ultra-Arian sect of the 4th century, which soon dwindled away after breaking from the orthodox Church; called after Eunomius (q.v.).

EUNOMIUS, an Arian divine, born in Cappadocia; head of a sect who maintained that the Father alone was God, that the Son was generated from Him, and the Spirit from the Son; was bishop of Cyzicum, a post he resigned; d. 394.

EUPATORIA, a Russian town on the Crimean coast, in the government of Taurida, 40 m. NW. of Simferopol; has a fine Tartar mosque, and does a large export trade in hides and cereals; during the Crimean War was an important military centre of the Allies.

EUPHEMISM, is in speech or writing the avoiding of an unpleasant or indelicate word or expression by the use of one which is less direct, and which calls up a less disagreeable image in the mind. Thus for "he died" is substituted "he fell asleep," or "he is gathered to his fathers"; thus the Greeks called the "Furies" the "Eumenides," the benign goddesses, just as country people used to call elves and fairies "the good folk neighbours."

EUPHRATES, a river in West Asia, formed by the junction of two Armenian streams; flows SE. to Kurnah, where it is joined by the Tigris. The combined waters—named the Shat-el-Arab—flow into the Persian Gulf; is 1700 m. long, and navigable for 1100 m. It was the scene of much fighting between Britain and Turkey during the Great War.

EUPHROSYNE, the cheerful one, or life in the exuberance of joy, one of the three Graces. See GRACES.

EUPHUISM, an affected bombastic style of language, so called from "Euphuus," a work by John Lyly written in that style.

EURE, a dep. of France, in Normandy, so called from the river Eure which traverses it.

EURE-ET-LOIRE, a dep. of France lying directly S. of the preceding; chief rivers the Eure in the N. and the Loir in the S.

EUREKA (i.e. I have found it), the exclamation of Archimedes on discovering how to test the purity of the gold in the crown of Hiero (q.v.); he discovered it, tradition says, when taking a bath.

EURIPIDES, a famous Greek tragic dramatist, born in Salamis, of wealthy parents; first trained as an athlete, and then devoted himself to painting, and eventually to poetry; he brought out his first play at the age of 25, and is reported to have written 80 plays, of which only 18 are extant, besides fragments of others; of these plays the "Alcestes," "Medea," "Iphigenia in Aulis," "Electra," and "Bacchæ," may be mentioned; he won the tragic prize five times; tinged with pessimism, he is nevertheless less severe than his great predecessors Sophocles and Æschylus, surpassing them in tenderness and artistic expression, but falling short of them in strength and loftiness of dramatic conception; for Sophocles, it is said, represented men as they ought to be, and Euripides as they are; he has been called the Sophist of tragic poets (480-406 B.C.).

EUROPA, a maiden, daughter of Agenor, king of Phœnicia, whom Zeus, disguised as a white bull, carried off to Crete, where she became by him the mother of Minos, Rhadamanthus, and Sarpedon (q.v.).

EUROPE, the most important, although the second smallest, of the five great land divisions of the globe; is, from a geographical point of view, a peninsula of Asia; the Caspian Sea, Ural River and mountains, form its Asiatic boundary, while on the other three sides it is washed by the Mediterranean on the S., Atlantic on the W. and Arctic Ocean on the N.; its coast-line is so highly developed that to every 199 sq. m. of surface there is 1 m. of coast; this advantage, combined with the varied adaptability of its land, rivers, and inland seas, and its central position, has made it the centre of civilisation and the theatre of the main events of the world's history. Its greatest length is 3370 m. from Cape St. Vincent to the Ural, and its greatest breadth 2400 m. from Cape Matapan to Nordkyn, while its area is about 3,800,000 sq. m.; it is singularly free from wild animals, has a fruitful soil richly cultivated, and possesses in supreme abundance the more useful metals. Its peoples belong to the two great ethnological divisions, the Caucasian and Mongolian groups; to the former belong the Germanic, Romanic, Slavonic, and Celtic races, and to the latter the Finns, Magyars, and Turks. Christianity is professed throughout, except amongst the Jews, of whom there are about six millions; of Catholics there are about 155 millions, of Protestants 85, and of the Greek Church 80.

EUROTAS, the classic name of the Iri, a river of Greece, which flows past Sparta and discharges into the Gulf of Laconia, 30 m. long.

EURUS, the god of the withering east wind.

EURYDICE. See ORPHEUS.

EURYSTHEUS, the king of Mycenæ, at whose command, as subject to him by fate, Hercules was required to perform his 12 labours, on the achievement of which depended his admission to the rank of an immortal.

EUSEBIUS PAMPHILI, a distinguished early Christian writer, born in Palestine, bishop of Casarea in 313; headed the moderate Arians at the Council of Nice, who shrank from disputing about a subject so sacred as the nature of the Trinity; wrote a history of the world to A.D. 325; his "Ecclesiastical History" is the first record of the Christian Church up to 324; also wrote a Life of Constantine, who held him in high favour; many extracts of ancient writers no longer extant are found in the works of Eusebius (about 264-340).

EUSTACHIO, BARTOLOMMEO, an Italian physician of the 16th century; settled at Rome, made several anatomical discoveries, among others those of the tube from the middle ear to the mouth, and a valve on the wall of the right auricle of the heart, both called Eustachian after him; d. 1574.

EUSTATHIUS, archbishop of Thessalonica, a Greek commentator of Homer, born in Constantinople; a man of wide classical learning, whose work on Homer is of value for the extracts of writings that no longer exist; d. 1198.

EUTERPE, the Muse of lyric poetry, represented in ancient works of art with a flute in her hand.

EUTROPIUS, FLAVIUS, a Roman historian, secretary to the Emperor Constantine; wrote an epitome of Roman history, which from its simplicity and accuracy still retains its position as a school-book; d. about 370.

EUTYCHES, a Byzantine heresiarch, who, in combating Nestorianism (q.v.), fell into the opposite extreme, and maintained that in the incarnation the human nature of Christ was absorbed in the divine, a doctrine which was condemned by the Council of Chalcedon, in 448 (378-454).

EUTYCHIANISM. See supra.

EUXINE, a Greek name for the Black Sea (q.v.).

EVANDER, an Arcadian, who is said to have come from Greece with a colony to Latium and settled in it 60 years before the Trojan war, and with whom Æneas formed an alliance when he landed in Italy; he is credited with having introduced the civilising arts of Greece.

EVANGELICAL, a term applied to all those forms of Christianity which regard the atonement of Christ, or His sacrifice on the Cross for sin, as the ground and central principle of the Christian faith.

EVANGELICAL ALLIANCE, an alliance of Christians of all countries and denominations holding evangelical principles, founded in 1845.

EVANGELINE, the heroine of a poem by Longfellow of the same name, founded on an incident connected with the expulsion of the natives of Acadia from their homes by order of George II.

EVANGELIST, a name given in the early Church to one whose office it was to persuade the ignorant and unbelieving into the fold of the Church.

EVANS, SIR ARTHUR JOHN, a distinguished archaeologist, born in Hertfordshire; conducted archaeological and ethnographical research in the Balkans and in Crete, in the latter country discovering the pre-Phœnician script; excavated the prehistoric palace of Knossos; was keeper of the Ashmolean Museum at Oxford (1864-1908), and is a member of numerous foreign antiquarian and learned societies (1851-).

EVANS, SIR DE LAOY, an English general, born in Moog, Ireland; served in the Peninsular war; was present at Quatre-Bras and Waterloo; commanded the British Legion sent to assist Queen Isabella in Spain, and the second division of the army in the Crimea and the East; was for many years a member of Parliament (1787-1870).

EVANS, MARY ANN, the real name of George Elliot (q.v.).

EVERLYN, JOHN, an English writer, born in Wotton, Surrey; travelled in France and Italy during the Civil War, where he devoted much time to gardening and the study of trees; was author of a celebrated work, entitled "Eylva; or, A Discourse of Forest Trees," &c.; did much to improve horticulture and introduce exotics into this country; his "Memoirs," written as a diary, are full of interest, and "are justly famous for the fulness, variety, and fidelity of their records" (1620-1706).

EVEREST, MOUNT, the highest mountain in the world; is one of the Himalayan peaks in Nepal, India; is 29,002 ft. above sea-level, named after Sir George Everest (1790-1866), a famous military engineer.

EVERETT, ALEXANDER HILL, an American diplomatist and author, born in Boston; was U.S. ambassador at the Hague and Madrid, and commissioner to China; wrote on a variety of subjects, including both politics and belles-lettres, and a collection of critical and miscellaneous essays (1792-1847).

EVERETT, EDWARD, American scholar, statesman, and orator, brother of the preceding; was a Unitarian preacher of great eloquence; distinguished as a Greek scholar and professor; for a time editor of the North American Review; was a member of Congress, and unsuccessful candidate for the Vice-Presidency of the Republic; his reputation rests on his "orations," which are on all subjects and show great vigour and versatility of genius (1794-1865).

EVERGLADES, THE, an extensive district in the south of Florida, U.S.A., 140 m. long, largely mangrove marshes intersected by waterways; includes Lake Okechobee.

EVERSLEY, a village in Hampshire, 13 m. N.E. of Basingstoke; the burial-place of Charles Kingsley, who for 35 years was rector of the parish.

EVERSLEY, CHARLES SHAW LEFEVRE, VISCOUNT, politician; graduated at Cambridge; called to the bar; entered Parliament, and in 1839 became Speaker of the House of Commons, a post he held for 18 years; retired, and was created a peer (1794-1888).

EVERHAM, a town in Worcester, the scene of the battle in the Barons' War (1265) between Prince Edward (afterwards Edward I.) and Simon de Montfort; has remains of an 8th-century Benedictine abbey.

EVIL EYE, a superstitious belief that certain people have the power of exercising a baneful influence on others, and even animals, by the glance of the eyes. The superstition is of ancient date, and is met with among almost all races, as it is among illiterate people and savages still. It was customary to wear amulets to ward off the evil.

EVOLUTION, the theory that the several species of plants and animals on the globe were not created in their present form, but have all been evolved by modifications of structure from cruder forms under or coincident with change of environment, an idea which has been applied to everything organic in the spiritual as well as the natural world. See DARWIN.

EVORA, a city of Portugal, beautifully situated in a fertile plain 80 m. E. of Lisbon, once a strong place, and the seat of an archbishop; it abounds in Roman antiquities.

EVERMOND, SAINT, a lively and witty Frenchman; after war service in the Netherlands and elsewhere fell into ill favour in France from the unbridled indulgence of his wit, and fled to England, where he became a great favourite at the court of Charles II., and enjoyed himself to the top of his bent; as a critic and writer displayed considerable acumen combined with elegance of style (1610-1703).

EVREUX, capital of the dep. of Eure, on the Iton, 67 m. N.W. of Paris; is an elegant town; has a fine 11th-century cathedral, an episcopal palace with an old clock tower; interesting ruins have been excavated in the old town; is the seat of a bishop; paper, cotton, and linen are manufactured, and a trade is carried on in cereals, timber, and liquors.

EWALD, GEORG HEINRICH AUGUST VON, a distinguished Orientalist and Biblical scholar, born in Göttingen, and professor both there and at Tübingen; his works were numerous, the principal being "The Poetic Books of the Old Testament," "The Prophets," and "The History of the People of Israel"; he was a student and interpreter of the concrete, and belonged to no party (1808-1876).

EWALD, JOHANNES, a Danish dramatist and lyricist, born in Copenhagen; served as a soldier in the German and Austrian armies; studied theology at Copenhagen; disappointed in love, he devoted himself to poetical composition; ranks as the founder of Danish tragedy, and is the author of some of the finest lyrics in the language (1748-1781).

EWIGE JUDE, the Everlasting Jew, the German name for the Wandering Jew.

EWING, SIR JAMES ALFRED, British scientist, professor of engineering at Tokyo, Dundee, and Cambridge, and vice-chancellor of Edinburgh University; his researches were mainly in connection with physics, especially magnetism; his results are of great practical importance in the construction of dynamo electric motors. See (1856-).

EXCALIBUR, the magic sword of King Arthur, which only he could unsheathe and wield. When he was about to die he requested his knight, Sir Bedivere, to throw it into a lake close by, who with some reluctance threw it, when a hand reached out to seize it, flourished it round three times, and then drew it under the water for good.

EXCOMMUNICATION, an ecclesiastical punishment inflicted upon heretics and offenders against the Church laws and violators of the moral code; was formulated in the Christian Church in the 2nd and 3rd centuries. It varied in severity according to the degree of transgression, but in its severest application involved exclusion from the Eucharist, Christian burial, and the rights and privileges of the Church; formerly it had the support of the civil authority, but is now a purely spiritual penalty.

EXE, a river rising in Exmoor and flowing through Somerset and Devon, entering the English Channel at Exmouth; is navigable for small vessels for about 6 m. from its mouth.

EXCELMANS, REMY JOSEPH ISODORE, COMTE, a distinguished French marshal, born in Bar-le-Duc; entered the army at 16; won distinction in the Naples campaign, and for his services at Eylau in 1807 was made a Brigadier-General; was taken prisoner in Spain while serving under Murat, and sent to England, where he was kept prisoner three years; liberated, took part in Napoleon's Russian campaign, for his conduct in which he was appointed a General of Division; after Napoleon's fall lived in exile till 1830; received honours from Louis Philippe, and was created a Marshal of France by Louis Napoleon in 1851 (1775-1852).

EXETER, the capital of Devonshire, on the Exe, 75 m. S.W. of Bristol, a quaint old town; contains a celebrated cathedral founded in 1112, and remains of an old Norman castle.

EXETER HALL, a hall in the Strand, London, erected in 1831 for holding religious and philanthropic meetings; now cleared away.

EXMOOR, an elevated stretch of vale and moorland in the S.W. of Somerset, N.E. of Devonshire; has an area of over 100 sq. m., 25 of which are covered with forest; Dunkery Beacon its chief height; red deer are to be found there and a special breed of ponies.

EXMOUTH, a noted seaside resort on the Devonshire coast, at the mouth of the Exe, 11 m. S.E. of Exeter; has a fine beach and promenade.

EXODUS (i.e. the Going out), the book of the Old Testament which records the deliverance of the children of Israel from Egyptian bondage, and the institution of the moral and ceremonial laws for the nation; consists partly of history and partly of legislation.

EXORCISM, conjuration by God or Christ or some holy name, of some evil spirit to come out of a person; it was performed on a heathen as an idolater, and eventually on a child as born in sin prior to baptism.

EXOTERIC, a term applied to teaching which the uninitiated may be expected to comprehend, and which is openly professed, as in a public confession of faith.

EXPLOSIVES, unstable compounds which decompose suddenly and violently under the action of heat or a sudden blow; for military purposes explosives are classed as "high explosives," used as the charge in shells, &c., and "propellants" used to drive the shell from the gun. The most important propellant is cordite (q.v.), and of high explosives lyddite (q.v.), melinite and trinitrotoluene (T.N.T.) are best known. Amatol, used as a high explosive during the Great War, is a mixture of T.N.T. and ammonium nitrate; dynamite is used for blasting purposes and fulminate of mercury as a detonator for charges of gun-cotton, &c.

EXTRADITION, the right of a nation to fetch back from another a criminal wanted for trial. Treaties to effect this were signed between Great Britain and America in 1842 and with France in 1843, since when similar treaties have been signed with most countries.

EXTREME UNCTION, one of the seven sacraments of the Catholic Church; an anointing of consecrated or holy oil administered by a priest in the form of a cross to a sick person upon the eyes, ears, nose, mouth, hands, and feet at the point of death, which is presumed to impart grace and strength against the last struggle.

EYCK, JAN VAN, a famous Flemish painter, born in Mass-Eyck; was instructed by his elder brother Hubert (1370-1426), with whom he laboured at Bruges and Ghent; reputed to have been the first to employ oil colours, but the two were particularly noted for their skill in mixing colours; their masterpieces are to be seen at Ghent, Bruges, Berlin, Paris, and Antwerp, and in the National Gallery, London (1389-1440).

EYLAU, a small town, 23 m. S. of Königsberg, the scene of a great battle between Napoleon and the Russian and Prussian allies in February 8, 1807; the fight was interrupted by darkness, under cover of which the allies retreated, having had the worst of the day.

EYRE, EDWARD JOHN, explorer and colonial governor, born in Yorkshire; emigrated to Australia in 1832; successfully explored the interior of S.W. Australia in 1841; governor of New Zealand in 1846, of St. Vincent in 1852, and of Jamaica in 1862; recalled in 1865, and prosecuted for harsh treatment of natives, but was acquitted; his defence was championed by Carlyle, Ruskin, and Kingsley, while J. S. Mill supported the prosecution (1815-1901).

EYRE, JANE, the heroine of a novel by Charlotte Brontë so called, a governess who, in her struggles with adverse fortune, wins the admiration and melts the heart of a man who had lived wholly for the world.

EZEKIEL, a Hebrew prophet, born in Jerusalem; a man of priestly descent, who was carried captive to Babylon 599 B.C., and was banished to Tel-abib, on the banks of the Chebar, 201 m. from the city, where, with his family about him, he became the prophet of the captivity and the rallying centre of the Dispersion. Here he foretold the destruction of Jerusalem as a judgment on the nation, and comforted them with the promise of a new Jerusalem and a new Temple on their repentance and their return to the Lord. His prophecies arrange themselves in three groups—those denouncing judgment on Jerusalem, those denouncing judgment on the heathen, and those announcing the future glory of the nation.

EZRA, a Jewish scribe of priestly rank, and full of zeal for the law of the Lord and the restoration of Israel, who was a captive in Babylon before leading his fellow-exiles back to Jerusalem; author of a book of the Old Testament, which records two successive returns of the people from captivity, and embraces a period ranging from 576 to 457 B.C., being a continuation of the book of Chronicles, its purpose being to relate the progress of the restored theocracy in Judah and Jerusalem, particularly as regards the restoration of the Temple and the re-institution of the priesthood.

F

FABER

FABER, FREDERICK WILLIAM, a Catholic divine and hymn-writer, born in Calverley, Yorkshire; at Oxford he won the Newdgate Prize in 1836; for three years was rector of Elton, but under the influence of Newman joined the Church of Rome (1845), and after founding a brotherhood of converts at Birmingham in 1849, took under his charge a London branch of the Oratory of St. Philip Neri; wrote several meritorious theological works, but his fame chiefly rests on his fine hymns, the "Pilgrims of the Night" one of the most famous (1814-1863).

FABER, GEORGE STANLEY, an Anglican divine, born in Holland; a voluminous writer on theological subjects and prophecy (1773-1854).

FABIAN, ST., Pope from 236 to 251; martyred with St. Sebastian during the persecution of Decius.

FABIAN SOCIETY, a Socialist organisation, founded in 1883, which "aims at the reorganisation of society by the emancipation of land and industrial capital from individual and class ownership, and vesting of them in the community for the general benefit"; has lectureships, and issues "Essays" and "Tracts"; Bernard Shaw and H. G. Wells have been among its members; the name of the Society is derived from Quintus Fabius (1) (q.v.), whose principle in war was wariness rather than violence.

FABII, a family of ancient Rome of 307 members, all of whom perished in combat with the Veii, 477 B.C., all save one boy left behind in Rome, from whom descended subsequent generations of the name.

FABIUS PICTOR, the oldest annalist of Rome; his annals of great value; 216 B.C.

FABIUS, QUINTUS (Maximus Verrucosus), a renowned Roman general, three times consul, twice censor and dictator in 231 B.C.; famous for his cautious generalship against Hannibal in the Second Punic War, harassing to the enemy, which won him the surname of "Cunctator" or delayer; d. 203 B.C.

FABIUS, QUINTUS (Rullianus), a noted Roman general, five times consul and twice dictator; waged successful war against the Samnites in 323 B.C.

FABIUS, THE AMERICAN, General Washington, so called from his Fabian tactics. See FABIUS, QUINTUS (1).

FABLE OF THE BEES, a work by Mandeville, a fable showing how vice makes some people happy and virtue miserable, and how opposition and variance in opinion produce the best results.

FAELIAUX, a species of metrical tales of a light and satirical nature in vogue widely in France during the 12th and 13th centuries; many of the stories were of Oriental origin, but were infused with the French spirit of the times; La Fontaine, Boccaccio, and Chaucer drew freely on them; they are marked by all the vivacity and perspicuity, if also lubricity, of their modern successors in the French novel and comic drama.

FABRE, JEAN, a French Protestant, celebrated for his filial piety; he took the place of his father in the galleys, who had been condemned to toil in them on account of his religious opinions (1727-1797).

FABRE, JEAN HENRI, French naturalist, devoted himself to the observation and description of insect life, writing many books on this subject (1823-1915).

FABRE D'ÉGLANTINE, a French dramatic poet, born in Carcassonne; wrote comedies; was a member of the Convention and of the Committee of Public Safety, of the extreme party of the Revolution; falling under suspicion, was guillotined along with Danton (1752-1794).

FABRICIUS, GAIUS, a Roman of the old school, distinguished for the simplicity of his manners and his incorruptible integrity; his name has become the synonym for a poor man who in public life deals honourably and does not enrich himself; was consul 232 B.C.

FABRICIUS, or FABRIZIO, GIROLAMO, a famous Italian anatomist, born in Aquapendente; became professor at Padua in 1565, where he gained a world-wide reputation as a teacher; Harvey declares that he got his first idea of the circulation of the blood from attending his lectures (1537-1619).

FABRICIUS

FABRONI, ANGELO, a learned Italian, born in Tuscany; wrote the Lives of the illustrious literati of Italy in the 17th and 18th centuries, and earned for himself the name of the "Plutarch" of his country (1732-1803).

FACCIOIATI, JACOPO, lexicographer, born in Torreglia; became a professor of Theology and Logic at Padua; chiefly interested in classical literature; he, in collaboration with an old pupil, Egidio Forcellini (1688-1768), began the compilation of a new Latin dictionary, which was completed and published after his death; this work has been the basis of all subsequent lexicons of the Latin language (1682-1769).

FACIAL ANGLE, an angle formed by drawing two lines, one horizontally from the nostrils to the ear, and the other perpendicularly from the advancing part of the upper jawbone to the most prominent part of the forehead, an angle by which the degree of intelligence and sagacity in the several members of the animal kingdom is by some measured.

FACTORY ACTS were passed early in the 19th century limiting hours of labour and conditions of work. The first was in 1802, and that of 1847 restricted the working day to 10 hours. Further Acts were passed in 1878, 1883, 1891, and 1895, and were consolidated in the 1901 Act, which empowered the Home Secretary to employ inspectors and to see that regulations were complied with.

FAED, JOHN, a Scottish artist, son of a millwright, born in Barley Mill, Kilmarnock; was elected an A.R.S.A. in 1847, and R.S.A. in 1851; his paintings are chiefly of humble Scottish life, the "Cottar's Saturday Night" among others (1819-1902).

FAED, THOMAS, brother of the preceding, born in Barley Mill; distinguished himself in his art studies at Edinburgh; went to London, where his pictures of Scottish life won him a foremost place among those of his contemporaries; was elected R.A. in 1864 and honorary member of the Vienna Royal Academy (1826-1900).

FAENZA, an old Italian cathedral town, 31 m. S.E. of Bologna; noted for its manufacture of majolica ware, known from the name of the town as "faience".

FAERIE QUEENE, the name of an allegorical poem by Edmund Spenser, in which twelve knights were, in twelve books, to represent as many virtues, described as issuing forth from the castle of Gloriana, queen of England, against certain impersonations of the vices and errors of the world. Such was the plan of the poem, but only six of the books were finished, and these contain the adventures of only six of the knights, representing severally Holiness, Temperance, Chastity, Friendship, Justice, and Courtesy.

FAGEL, GASPARE, a Dutch statesman, distinguished for his integrity and the firmness with which he repelled the attempts of Louis XIV. against his country, and for his zeal in supporting the claims of the Prince of Orange to the English throne (1639-1688).

FAGIN, the name of an old Jew in Dickens' "Oliver Twist," who trains boys to thieve.

FAHRENHEIT, GABRIEL, DANIEL, a celebrated physicist, born in Danzig; spent much of his life in England, but finally settled in Holland; devoted himself to physical research; is famed for his improvement of the thermometer by substituting quicksilver for spirits of wine and inventing a new scale, the freezing-point being 32° above zero and the boiling 212° (1686-1736).

FAINEANT, LE NOIR, the name borne by Richard Cour-de-Lion in "Ivanhoe."

FAINEANTS (i.e. the Do-nothings), the name given to the kings of France of the Merovingian line from 670 to 752, from Thierry III. to Childeric III., who were subject to their ministers, the mayors of the palace, who discharged all their functions.

FAIR MAID OF KENT, the Countess of Salisbury, eventually wife of the Black Prince, so called from her beauty.

FAIR MAID OF NORWAY, daughter of Eric II. of Norway, and granddaughter of Alexander III. of Scotland; died on her way from Norway to succeed her grandfather on the throne of Scotland, an event which gave rise to the famous struggle for the crown by rival competitors.

FAIR MAID OF PERTH, a beauty of the name of Kate Glover, the heroine of Scott's novel of the name.

FAIR BOSAMOND, the mistress of Henry II.; kept in a secret bower at Woodstock, in the heart of a labyrinth which only he could thread.

FAIRBAIRN, ANDREW M., theologian, born in Edinburgh; received the charge of the Evangelical Church at Bathgate, and subsequently studied in Berlin. In 1878 became Principal of the Alfredale Congregational College at Bradford; was Muir Lecturer on Comparative Religions in Edinburgh University in 1881-1883, and five years later was elected Principal of Mansfield College at Oxford; author of "The Place of Christ in Modern Theology," and several other scholarly works (1838-1912).

FAIRBAIRN, SIR WILLIAM, an eminent engineer, born in Kelso, served an apprenticeship in N. Shields, and in 1817 started business in Manchester, where he came to the front as a builder of iron ships; improved upon Robert Stephenson's idea of a tubular bridge, and built upwards of 1000 of these; introduced iron shafts into cotton mills, and was employed by Government to test the suitability of iron for purposes of defence; he was president of the British Association at Manchester in 1861, and was created a baronet in 1869 (1789-1874).

FAIRBANKS, DOUGLAS, American cinema actor. He started as a stage actor and took to the screen in 1916, soon making a name for himself for daring acrobatic feats in film work. He married Mary Pickford, another cinema star, in 1920 (1883-).

FAIRFAX, EDWARD, translator of Tasso, born in Denton, Yorkshire, where he spent a quiet and studious life; his stately translation of Tasso's "Gerusalemme Liberata" was published in 1600, and holds rank as one of the best poetical translations in the language; he wrote also a "Discourse" on witchcraft (c. 1572-1635).

FAIRFAX, THOMAS, LORD, a distinguished Parliamentary general, nephew of the preceding, born in Denton, Yorkshire; served in Holland, but in 1642 joined the Parliamentarians, of whose forces he became general (1645); after distinguishing himself at Marston Moor and Naseby, was superseded by Cromwell (1650), and retired into private life until Cromwell's death, when he supported the restoration of Charles II. to the English throne (1612-1671).

FAIRIES, imaginary supernatural beings conceived of as of diminutive size but in human shape, who play a conspicuous part in the traditions of Europe during the Middle Ages, and are animated more or less by a spirit of mischief out of a certain loving regard for, or humorous interest in, the affairs of mankind, whether in the way of thwarting or helping.

FAISAL I., king of Iraq. A son of ex-king Hussein of the Hedjaz he was elected king in 1921 with the help of Great Britain, after Mesopotamia had been freed from Turkish rule (1887-).

FAITH, ST., a virgin martyr who, in the 4th century, was tortured on an iron bed and afterwards beheaded.

FAITH HEALING, the practice of some religious sects who believe that prayer and faith tend to the cure for illness rather than medical science. Supposed cases of miraculous healing are a frequent feature of "revival" campaigns.

FAKIR (H. poor), a member of an order of monkish mendicants in India and adjoining countries who, from presumed religious motives, practise or affect lives of severe self-mortification, but who in many cases cultivate filthiness of person to a disgusting degree.

FALAIRE, a French town in the dep. of Calvados, 22 m. SW. of Caen; the birthplace of William the Conqueror.

FALCONER, HUGH, botanist and palaeontologist, born in Forres, Elginshire; studied at Aberdeen and Edinburgh; joined the East India Company's medical service; made large collections of fossils and plants; became professor of Botany in Calcutta; introduced the tea-plant into India, and discovered the assafoetida plant; died in London (1808-1866).

FALCONER, ION KEITH, missionary, and Arabic scholar, a third son of the Earl of Kintore; after passing through Harrow and Cambridge, his ardent temperament carried him into successful evangelistic work in London; was appointed Arabic professor at Cambridge, but his promising career was cut short near Aden while engaged in missionary work; translated the Fables of Biddulph; a noted athlete, and champion cyclist of the world in 1878 (1856-1887).

FALCONER, WILLIAM, poet, born in Edinburgh; a barber's son; spent most of his life at sea; perished in the wreck of the frigate Aurora, of which he was purser; author of the well-known poem "The Shipwreck" (1732-1769).

FALCONER, the art and practice of employing trained hawks in the pursuit and capture on the wing of other birds, a sport largely indulged in by the upper classes in early times in Europe.

FALIERO, MARINO, a Venetian doge elevated to that position from the army; owing to an affront he joined a conspiracy against the patricians but was betrayed and condemned to death; is the subject of a drama by Byron.

FALK, ADALBERT, Prussian statesman, born in Metelchuk, Silesia; as Minister of Public Worship and Education he was instrumental in passing laws designed to diminish the influence of the clergy in State affairs; retired in 1879 (1827-1900).

FALKIRK, a town in Northglshire, 26 m. NW. of Edinburgh, noted for its cattle-markets and the ironworks in its neighbourhood; Wallace was defeated here in 1298 by Edward I.

FALKLAND, a royal burgh in Fife-shire, 10 m. SW. of Cupar; has ruins of a famous palace, a royal residence of the Stuart sovereigns, which was restored by the Marquis of Bute in 1888.

FALKLAND, LUCIUS CARY, VISCOUNT, soldier, scholar, and statesman, son of Sir Henry Cary, Viscount Falkland; was lord-deputy of Ireland under James I.; entered the service of the new Dutch Republic, but soon returned to England and settled at Great Tew, Oxfordshire, where he indulged his studious tastes, and entertained his scholarly friends Clarendon, Chillingworth, and others; after joining Essex's expedition into Scotland he sat in Parliament, and in 1642 became Secretary of State; suspicious of Charles's weakness and duplicity, he as such distrusted the Parliamentary movement, and fell at Newbury fighting for the king (1610-1648).

FALKLAND ISLANDS, a group of islands in the E. Atlantic, 240 m. E. of Tierra del Fuego; discovered in 1592 by Davis; purchased from the French in 1762 by Spain, but afterwards ceded to Britain, by whom they were occupied in 1833 and used as a convict settlement until 1852; besides E. and W. Falkland there are upwards of 100 small islands, mostly barren; wheat and flax are raised, but sheep-farming is the main industry. Near here in December, 1914, British vessels under Sturdee defeated a German squadron under Von Spee.

FALL, THE, the first transgression of divine law on the part of man, conceived of as involving the whole human race in the guilt of it, and represented as consisting in the wilful partaking of the fruit of the forbidden tree of the knowledge of both good and evil. The story of the Fall in Genesis has in later times been generally regarded as a spiritual allegory, and surely the Hebrew attempt, one amongst many, to explain the origin of evil. It is worthy of note that a narrative, similar even to detail, exists in the ancient religious writings of the Hindus and Persians.

FALLOPIUS, GABRIELLO, anatomist, born in Modena; professor of Anatomy at Pisa and at Padua; the Fallopiian tubes which connect the ovaries with the uterus, first accurately described by him, are called after his name, as also the duct which transmits the facial nerve after it leaves the auditory nerve (1523-1562).

FALLOUX, FRÉDÉRIC ALFRED PIERRE, VICOMTE DE, author and statesman, born in Angers; member of the House of Deputies; favoured the revolutionaries of 1848, and under the Presidency of Louis Napoleon became Minister of Public Instruction; retired in 1849, and became a member of the French Academy (1887); author of a "History of Louis XVI." and a "History of Pius V.," both characterized by a strong Legitimist bias (1811-1886).

FALMOUTH, a seaport on the Cornish coast, on the estuary of the Trel. 18 m. N.E. of the Lizard; its harbour, one of the finest in England, is defended E. and W. by St. Mawes Castle and Pendennis Castle; pilchard fishing is actively engaged in, and there are exports of tin and copper.

FALSTAFF, SIR JOHN, a character in Shakespeare's "Henry IV." and the "Merry Wives of Windsor"; a boon companion of Henry, Prince of Wales; a cowardly braggart, of sensual habits and great corpulence. See FASTOLF.

FAMILIAR SPIRITS, certain supernatural beings presumed agreeably to a very old belief (Lev. xix. 31), to attend magicians or sorcerers, and to be at

Love, a fanatical
1556, and affected

to love all men as brothers.

FAMILY COMPACT, a compact concluded in 1761 between the Bourbons of France, Spain, and Italy to resist the naval power of England.

FAN, a light hand implement used to cause a draught of cool air to play upon the face; there are two kinds, the folding and non-folding; the latter, sometimes large and fixed on a pole, were known to the ancients, the former were invented by the Japanese in the 7th century, and became popular in Italy and Spain in the 16th century; but Paris soon took a lead in their manufacture, carrying them to their highest pitch of artistic perfection in the reign of Louis XIV.

FANARIOTS, the descendants of the Greeks of noble birth who remained in Constantinople after its capture by Mohammed II. in 1453, so called from Fanar, the quarter of the city which they inhabited; they rose at one time to great influence in Turkish affairs, though they have none now.

FANDANGO, a popular Spanish dance, especially in favour among the Andalusians; is in 3 time, and is danced to the accompaniment of guitars and castanets.

FANNING, JOHN THOMAS, American hydraulo engineer, an authority on waterworks construction and water power (1837-1911).

FANS, an aboriginal tribe dwelling between the Gaboon and Ogoway Rivers, in western equatorial Africa; are brave and intelligent, and of good physique, but are addicted to cannibalism and fetish-worship.

FANSHAW, SIR RICHARD, diplomatist and poet, born in Ware Park, Hertford; studied at the Inner Temple, and after a Continental tour became attached to the English embassy at Madrid; sided with the Royalists at the outbreak of the Civil War; was captured at the battle of Worcester, but escaped and shared the exile of Charles II.; on the Restoration negotiated Charles's marriage with Catharine, and became ambassador at the court of Philip IV. of Spain; translated Camoens' "Lusiad" and various classical pieces (1608-1666).

FANTINE, one of the most heart-affecting characters in "Les Misérables" by Victor Hugo.

FANTIS, an African tribe on the Gold Coast, enemies of their conquerors the Ashantis; fought on the side of the British in the Asanti War (1873-1874), but, although of strong physique, proved cowardly allies.

FARAD, the unit of electrical capacity named after Faraday; a condenser has a capacity of one farad when a charge of one coulomb gives the plates a difference of potential of one volt; the microfarad is the millionth part of a farad.

FARADAY, MICHAEL, a highly distinguished chemist and natural philosopher, born in Newington Butts, near London, of poor parents; received a meagre education, and at 18 was apprenticed to a bookseller, but devoted his evenings to chemical and electrical studies, and became a student under Sir H. Davy, who, quick to detect his ability, installed him as his assistant; in 1827 he succeeded Davy as lecturer at the Royal Institution, and became professor of Chemistry in 1833; was pensioned in 1835, and in 1858 was allotted a residence in Hampton Court; in chemistry he made many notable discoveries, e.g. the liquefaction of chlorine, while in electricity and magnetism his achievements cover the entire field of these sciences, and are of the first importance (1791-1867).

FARAZZI, a Mohammedan sect formed in 1827, and met with chiefly in Eastern Bengal; they discard tradition and accept the Koran as their sole guide in religious and spiritual concerns, in this respect differing from the Sunnites, with whom they have much else in common; although of a purer morality than the main body of Mohammedans, they are narrow and intolerant.

FAREL, WILLIAM, a Swiss reformer, born in Dauphiné; introduced, in 1534, after two futile attempts, the reformed faith into Geneva, where he was succeeded in the management of affairs by John Calvin; he has been called the "pioneer of the Reformation in Switzerland and France" (1489-1565).

FARIA Y SOUSA, MANUEL DE, a Portuguese poet and historian; entered the diplomatic service, and was for many years secretary to the Spanish embassy at Rome; was a voluminous writer of history and poetry, and did much to develop the literature of his country (1590-1649).

FARINATA, a Florentine nobleman of the Ghibelline faction, whom for his infidelity and sensuality Dante has placed till the day of Judgment in a red-hot coffin in hell.

FARINELLI, CARLO, a celebrated singer, born in Naples; his singing created great enthusiasm in London, which he visited in 1734 (1705-1782).

FARINI, LUIGI CARLO, an Italian statesman and author, born in Russi; practised as a doctor in his native town; in 1841 was forced, on account of his liberal sympathies, to withdraw from the Papal States, but returned in 1846 on the proclamation of the Papal amnesty, and afterwards held various offices of State; was Premier for a few months in 1863; author of "Il Stato Romano," of which there is an English translation by W. E. Gladstone (1812-1866).

FARMAN, HENRY, French air-engineer. Starting life as a painter, he took to cycling and then motoring. In 1907 he took up flying, and won several prizes, and started manufacturing planes for the French and British armies (1875-).

FARMER, RICHARD, an eminent scholar, born in Leicester; distinguished himself at Cambridge, where he became classical tutor of his college, and in the end master (1775); three years later he was appointed chief librarian to the university, and afterwards was successively canon of Lichfield, Canterbury, and St. Paul's; wrote an erudite essay on "The Learning of Shakespeare" (1735-1797).

FARMER GEORGE, George III., a name given to him from his plain, homely, thrifty manners and tastes.

FARMERS-GENERAL, a name given in France prior to the Revolution to a privileged syndicate which farmed certain branches of the public revenue, that is, obtained the right of collecting certain taxes on payment of an annual sum into the public treasury; the system gave rise to corruption and illegal extortion, and was at last an unproductive method of raising the national revenue; it was swept away at the Revolution.

FARNE or FERNÉ ISLES, THE, also called the Staples, a group of 17 isles 2 m. off the N.E. coast of Northumberland, many of which are mere rocks visible only at low-water; are marked by two lighthouses, and are associated with a heroic rescue by Grace Darling (q.v.) in 1838; on House Isle are the ruins of a Benedictine priory; about 50 people have their homes upon the larger isles.

FARNESE, the surname of a noble Italian family dating its rise from the 13th century.

FARNESE, ALESSANDRO, attained the papal chair as Paul III. in 1543; the excommunication of Henry VIII. of England, the founding of the Order of the Jesuits (1540), the convocation of the Council of Trent (1542), mark his term of office (1468-1549).

FARNESE, ALESSANDRO, grandson of the following, and 8rd duke of Parma, a famous general; distinguished himself at the battle of Lepanto; was governor of the Spanish Netherlands, and fought successfully against France, defeating Henry IV. before the walls of Paris, and again two years later at Rouen, where he was mortally wounded (1546-1592).

FARNESE, PIETRO LUIGI, a natural son of Pope Paul III., who figures in Benvenuto Cellini's Life; received in fee from the Papal See various estates, including the dukedom of Parma; he ill requited his father's trust and affection by a life of debauchery, and finally suffered assassination in 1549.

FAROE ISLANDS (i.e. sheep islands), a group of 22 islands of basaltic formation, about 200 m. NW. of the Shetlands; originally Norwegian, they now belong to Denmark; agriculture is limited, and fishing and sheep-farming chiefly engage the natives; there is an export trade in wool, fish, and wild-fowl feathers. The people, who still speak their old Norse dialect, although Danish is the language of the schools and law courts, are Lutherans, and enjoy a measure of self-government, sending representatives to the Danish Riksdag.

FARQUHAR, GEORGE, comic dramatist, born in Londonderry; early famous for his wit, of which he soon gave abundant proof in his dramas, "Love and a Bottle" being his first, and "The Beaux' Stratagem" his last, written on his deathbed; died young; he commenced life on the stage, but threw up the profession in consequence of having accidentally wounded a brother actor while fencing (1678-1707).

FARR, WILLIAM, statistician, born in Kenley, Shropshire; studied medicine, and practised in London; obtained a post in the Registrar-General's office, and rose to be head of the statistical department; issued various statistical compilations of great value for purposes of insurance (1807-1893).

FARRAGUT, DAVID GLEESON, a famous American admiral, of Spanish extraction, born in Knoxville, Tennessee; entered the navy as a boy; rose to be captain in 1855, and at the outbreak of the Civil War attached himself to the Union; distinguished himself by his daring capture of New Orleans; in 1862 was created rear-admiral, and two years later gained a signal victory over the Confederate fleet at Mobile Bay; was raised to the rank of admiral in 1866, being the first man to hold this position in the American navy (1801-1870).

FARRAR, FREDERICK WILLIAM, a celebrated divine and educationalist, born in Bombay; graduated with distinction at King's College, London, and at Cambridge; was ordained in 1854, and became headmaster of Marlborough College; was for some years a select preacher to Cambridge University, and held successively the offices of honorary chaplain and chaplain-in-ordinary to the Queen; became canon of Westminster, rector of St. Margaret's, archdeacon, chaplain to the House of Commons, and dean of Canterbury; his many works include the school-plays, "Eric" and "St. Winifred's," philological essays, and Lives of Christ and St. Paul, besides the "Early Days of Christianity," "Eternal Hope," and several volumes of sermons (1831-1903).

FARRIN, NELLIE, actress, daughter of Henry Farrin, the comedian; famous in burlesque, particularly in connection with productions at the Gaiety Theatre, London (1848-1904).

FASCES, a bundle of rods bound round the helve of an axe, and borne by the lictors before the Roman magistrates in symbol of their authority at once to scourge and decapitate.

FASCISM, "the doctrine by which the State is centred in one person who is the complete master." This definition was once used by Benito Mussolini (q.v.), founder of the movement in Italy in the post-war years when the Socialist government showed signs of weakness. After suppressing riots at Bologna in 1920 the Fascists marched on Rome in 1922, and, with Mussolini as dictator, seized the reins of government. Fascism stands essentially for discipline, with little or no regard for the liberty of the subject.

FAHODA, town on the Upper Nile occupied in July,

1898, by a French force under Major Marchand. The British demanded their evacuation, and the incident nearly resulted in war before diplomatic exchanges led to the retirement of the French in December.

FASTI, the name given to days among the Romans on which it was lawful to transact business before the pretor; also the name of books among the Romans containing calendars of times, seasons, and events.

FASTOLF, SIR JOHN, a distinguished soldier of Henry V.'s reign, who with Sir John Oldcastle shares the doubtful honour of being the prototype of Shakespeare's Falstaff, but unlike the dramatist's creation was a courageous soldier, and won distinction at Agincourt and at the "Battle of the Herrings"; after engaging with less success in the struggle against Joan of Arc, he returned to England and spent his closing years in honoured retirement at Norfolk, his birthplace; he figures in the "Paston Letters" (1378-1450).

FATA MORGANA, a mirage occasionally observed in the Strait of Messina, in which, from refraction in the atmosphere, images of objects, such as men, houses, trees, &c., are seen from the coast under or over the surface of the water; literally, in Italian, the words mean Fairy Morgana, the reference being to a lady of Arthurian legend who was the pupil of the wizard Merlin.

FATES, THE, in the Greek mythology the three goddesses who presided over the destinies of individuals—Clotho, Lachesis, and Atropos (q.v.). See PARCE.

FATHER OF COMEDY, Aristophanes (q.v.).

FATHER OF ECCLESIASTICAL HISTORY, Eusebius (q.v.).

FATHER OF FRENCH HISTORY, Duchesne (q.v.).

FATHER OF GERMAN LITERATURE, Lessing (q.v.).

FATHER OF HISTORY, Herodotus (q.v.).

FATHER OF TRAGEDY, Aeschylus (q.v.).

FATHER PAUL, Paul Sarpi (q.v.).

FATHERS OF THE CHURCH, the early teachers of Christianity and founders of the Christian Church, consisting of five Apostolic Fathers—Clement of Rome, Barnabas, Hermas, Ignatius, and Polycarp, and of nine in addition called Primitive Fathers—Justin, Theophilus of Antioch, Irenaeus, Clements of Alexandria, Cyprian of Carthage, Origen, Gregory Thaumaturgus, Dionysius of Alexandria, and Tertullian. The distinctive title of Apostolic Fathers was bestowed upon the immediate friends and disciples of the Apostles, while the patriistic period proper may be said to commence with the 2nd century, but no definite date can be assigned as marking its termination, some closing it with the deaths of Gregory the Great (604) and John of Damascus (756), while Catholic writers bring it down as far as the Council of Trent (1542); discarded among Protestants, the Fathers are regarded by Catholics as decisive in authority on points of faith, but only when they exhibit a unanimity of opinion.

FATHOM, a measure of 6 ft. used in taking marine soundings, originally an Anglo-Saxon term for the distance stretched by a man's extended arms; is sometimes used in mining operations.

FATHOM, COUNT FERDINAND, a villain in the novel of Smollett so named.

FATIMA, (1) the favourite daughter of Mohammed, one of the four perfect women of Islamic tradition; (2) the last of Bluebeard's wives, and the only one who escaped being murdered by him.

FATIMIDES, a Mohammedan dynasty which assumed the title of caliphs and ruled N. Africa and Egypt, and later Syria and Palestine, between the 10th and 12th centuries inclusive; they derived their name from the claim (now discredited) of their founder, Obaidallah Almahdi, to be descended from Fatima, daughter of Mohammed and wife of Ali; they were finally expelled by Saladin in 1169.

FAUCHER, LEON, a political economist, brought into notice by the Revolution of 1830; edited Le Temps; opposed Louis Philippe's minister, M. Guizot; held office under the Presidency of Louis Napoleon, but threw up office on the coup d'état of 1851 (1803-1854).

FAUCHET, ABEL, a French Revolutionary, a Girondin; blessed the National tricolor flag; "a man of Te Deums and public consecrations": was a member of the first parliament; stripped of his insignia, lamented the death of the king, perished on the scaffold (1744-1793).

FAUCIT, HELEN, a famous English actress; made her debut in London (1836), and soon won a foremost place amongst English actresses by her powerful and refined representations of Shakespeare's heroines under the management of Macready; she retired from the stage in 1851 after her marriage with Theodore Martin (q.v.); in 1885 she published a volume of studies "On Some of Shakespeare's Female Characters" (1817-1898).

FAUNS, divinities of the woods and fields among the Romans, and guardians of flocks against the wolf.

FAUNTILEROT, HENRY, banker and forger; in his twenty-third year became a partner in the bank of Marsh, Sibbald & Co., London; was put on trial for a series of elaborate forgeries, found guilty, and hanged; the trial created a great sensation at the time, and efforts were made to obtain a commutation of the sentence (1785-1824).

FAUNUS, a god, grandson of Saturn, who figures in the early history of Latium, first as the god of fields and shepherds, and secondly, as an oracular divinity and founder of the native religion, afterwards identified with the Greek Pan.

FAURE, FRANÇOIS FELIX, President of the French Republic, born in Paris; carried on business in Touraine as a tanner, but afterwards settled in Havre and became a wealthy shipowner; he served with distinction as a volunteer in the Franco-German War; entered the Assembly in 1881; where he held office as Colonial and Commercial Minister in various Cabinets; was elected President in 1895 (1841-1899).

FAUST, JOHANNES. See FUST.

FAUST, or DOCTOR FAUSTUS, a reputed professor of the black art, a native of Germany, who flourished in the end of the 15th century and the beginning of the 16th century, and who is alleged to have made a compact with the devil to give up to him body and soul in the end, provided he endowed him for a term of years with power to miraculously fulfil all his wishes. Under this compact the devil provided him with a familiar spirit, called Mephistopheles, attended by whom he traversed the world, enjoying life and working wonders, till the term of the compact having expired, the devil appeared and carried him off amid display of horrors to the abode of penal fire. This myth, which has been subjected to manifold literary treatment, has received its most significant rendering at the hands of Goethe, such as to supersede and eclipse every other attempt to unfold its meaning. It is presented by him in the form of a drama, in two parts of five acts each, published in 1790. Marlowe treated the theme in "Dr. Faustus" and Gounod did a celebrated operatic version.

FAUSTA, the wife of Constantine the Great.

FAUSTINA, ANNIA GALERIA, called Faustina Senior, wife of Antoninus Pius, died three years after her husband became emperor (105-141).

FAUSTINA, ANNIA, Junior, wife of the Emperor Marcus Aurelius, daughter of the preceding. Both she and her mother were represented by historians as profligate and unfaithful, and quite unworthy the affection lavishly bestowed upon them by their husbands.

FAUSTULUS, the shepherd who, with his wife Laurentia, was the foster-parent of Romulus and Remus, both of whom, as infants, had been exposed on the Palatine Hill.

FAVART, CHARLES SIMON, French dramatist, born in Paris, where he became director of the Opéra Comique; was celebrated as a vivacious playwright and composer of operas; during a temporary absence from Paris he established his Comedy Company in the camp of Marshal Saxe during the Flanders campaign; his memoirs and correspondence give a bright picture of theatrical life in Paris during the 18th century (1710-1792).

FAVONIUS, in Roman mythology the god of the favouring west wind.

AVRE, JULES CLAUDE GABRIEL, a French Republican statesman, born in Lyons; called to the Paris bar in 1830; a strong Republican, he joined the Revolutions of 1830 and 1848; held office as Minister of the Interior in the New Republic, and, disapproving of the coup d'état, resumed practice at the bar; defended the Italian conspirator Orsini (q.v.), and in 1870, on the dissolution of the Empire, became Minister of Foreign Affairs; mistakes in his negotiations with Bismarck led to his resignation and resumption of his legal practice (1809-1880).

FAWCETT, HENRY, statesman and political economist, born in Salisbury; though blind, it was his early ambition to enter the arena of politics, and he devoted himself to the study of political economy, of which he became professor at Cambridge; entering Parliament, he became Postmaster-General under Gladstone in 1880; he wrote and published works on his favourite study (1833-1884).

FAWKES, GUY, a notorious English conspirator, born of a respected Yorkshire family; having spent a slender patrimony, he joined the Spanish army in Flanders; was converted to the Catholic faith; and on his return to England allied himself with the conspirators of the Gunpowder Plot (q.v.), and was arrested in the cellars of the House of Commons when on the point of firing the explosive; was tried and executed (1670-1606).

FAY, ANDREAS, Hungarian dramatist and novelist, born in Kohany; studied law, but the success of a volume of fables confirmed him in his choice of literature in preference; wrote various novels and plays; was instrumental in founding the Hungarian National Theatre; was a member of the Hungarian Diet (1786-1864).

FAYAL, a fruit-bearing island among the Azores (q.v.), exports wine and fruits; Horta, with an excellent bay, is its chief town.

FAYE, HERVÉ AUGUSTE, French astronomer, professor at Paris; studied solar prominences and discovered Faye's comet (1814-1902).

FAYRER, SIR JOSEPH, eminent physician; medical officer in Burmese War and Indian Mutiny; conducted investigations into anti-toxins for snake-bite in India; wrote largely on Indian endemic diseases (1824-1907).

FAYYUM, a fertile province of Central Egypt, lies W. of the Nile, 65 m. from Cairo, is in reality a southern oasis in the Libyan desert, irrigated by means of a canal running through a narrow gorge to the Nile valley; its area is about 840 sq. m., a portion of which is occupied by a sheet of water, the Birket-el-Kern (35 m. long), known to the ancients as Lake Moeris, by the shores of which stood one of the wonders of the world, the famous "Labyrinth."

FEAST, JEWISH, OF DEDICATION, a feast in commemoration of the purification of the Temple and the rebuilding of the altar by Judas Maccabeus in 164 B.C., after profanation of them by the Syrians; of the Passover, a festival in April on the anniversary of the exodus from Egypt, which lasted eight days, the first and the last days of solemn religious assembly; of Pentecost, a feast celebrated on the fiftieth day after the second of the Passover, in commemoration of the giving of the law on Mount Sinai; both this feast and the Passover were celebrated in connection with harvest, what was presented in one in the form of a sheaf being in the other presented as a loaf of bread; of Purim, a feast in commemoration of the preservation of the Jews from the wholesale threatened massacre of the race in Persia at the instigation of Haman; of Tabernacles, a festival of eight days in memory of the wandering tent-life of the people in the wilderness, observed by the people dwelling in bowers made of branches erected on the streets or the roofs of the houses; it was the Feast of Ingathering as well.

FEBRUARY, the second month of the year, was added along with January by Numa to the end of the original Roman year of 10 months; derived its name from a festival offered annually on the 15th day to Februus, an ancient Italian god of the nether world; was assigned its present position in the calendar by Julius Caesar, who also introduced the intercalary day for leap-year.

FÉCAMP, a seaport in the dep. of Seine-Inférieure, 25 m. N.E. of Havre; has a fine Gothic Benedictine church, a harbour and lighthouse, hardware and textile factories; fishing and sugar refineries also flourish; exports the celebrated Benedictine liqueurs.

FECHNER, GUSTAV THEODOR, physicist and psychophysicist, born in Gross-Särchen, in Lower Lusatia; became professor of Physics in Leipzig, but afterwards devoted himself to psychology; laid the foundations of the science of psychophysics in his "Elements of Psychophysics"; wrote besides on the theory of colour and galvanism, as well as poems and essays (1801-1887).

FECHTER, CHARLES ALBERT, a famous actor, born in London, his father of German extraction and his mother English; made his debut in Paris at the age of 17; after a tour through the European capitals established himself in London as the lessee of the Lyceum Theatre in 1869; became celebrated for his original impersonations of Hamlet and Othello; removed to America in 1870, where he died (1824-1879).

FECELES, a college of functionaries in ancient Rome whose duty it was to make proclamation of peace and war and confirm treaties.

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT, in modern parlance is the political system which a number of independent and sovereign States adopt when they join together for purposes of domestic and especially international policy; local government is freely left with the individual States, and only in the matter of chiefly foreign relations is the central government paramount, but the degree of freedom which each State enjoys is a matter of arrangement when the contract is formed, and the powers vested in the central authority may only be permitted to work through the local government, or may bear directly upon the citizens throughout the federation, as in the U.S. of America, and since 1847 in Switzerland.

FEDERALIST, a name in the United States for a supporter of the Union and its integrity as such; a party which was formed in 1788, but dissolved in 1820; has been since applied to a supporter of the integrity of the Union against the South in the late Civil War.

FEDERATION, LES CHAMPS-DE-MARS, a grand fête celebrated in the Champs-de-Mars, Paris, on July 14, 1790, the anniversary of the taking of the Bastille, at which deputies from the newly constituted departments assisted to the number of 80,000, as well as deputies from other nations. Louis XVI. was present at the ceremony, and took solemn oath to the constitution just established in the interest of mankind. See Carlyle's "French Revolution."

FEHMGERICHT. See VEHMGERICHT.

FEITH, RIJNVIS, a Dutch poet, born in Zwolle, where, after studying at Leyden, he settled and died; his writings include didactic poems, songs, and dramas; had a refining influence on the literary taste of his countrymen (1753-1824).

FELICITE, ST., a Roman matron, who with her seven sons suffered martyrdom in 164. Festival, July 10.

FELIX, the name of five Popes: F. I., St., Pope from 269 to 274, said to have been a victim of the persecution of Aurelius; F. II., Pope from 356 to 367, the first anti-pope having been elected in place of the deposed Liberius who had declined to sign in the persecution of Athanasius (q.v.); was banished on the restoration of Liberius; F. III., Pope from 483 to 492, during his term of office the first schism between the Eastern and Western Churches took place; F. IV., Pope from 526 to 530, was appointed by Theodoric in face of the determined opposition of both people and clergy; F. V., Pope from 1459 to 1449. See AMADEUS VIII.

FELIX, ANTONIUS, a Roman procurator of Judaea in the time of Claudius and Nero; is referred to in Acts xxiii. and xxiv. as having examined the Apostle Paul and listened to his doctrines; was vicious in his habits, and formed an adulterous union with Drusilla, said by Tacitus to have been the granddaughter of Antony and Cleopatra; was recalled in A.D. 62.

FELIX HOLT, the title of a novel by George Eliot, written in 1866.

FELL, JOHN, a celebrated English divine; Royalist in sympathy, he continued throughout the Puritan ascendancy loyal to the English Church, and on the Restoration became Dean of Christ Church, Oxford, and a royal chaplain; was a good man and a charitable, and a patron of learning; in 1676 was raised to the bishopric of Oxford; was the object of the well-known epigram, "I do not like thee, Dr. Fell, The reason why I cannot tell" (1625-1686).

FELLAH, the name applied contemptuously by the Turks to the agricultural labourer of Egypt; the Fellahin (pl. of Fellah) comprises about three-fourths of the population; they are of good physique, and capable of much toil, but are, despite their intelligence and sobriety, lazy and immoral; girls marry at the age of 12, and the children grow up amidst the squalor of their mud-built villages; their food is of the poorest, and scarcely ever includes meat; tobacco is their only luxury; their condition improved under British rule.

FELLOWS, SIR CHARLES, archaeologist, born in Nottingham; early developed a passion for travel; explored the Xanthus Valley in Asia Minor, and discovered the ruins of the cities Teos and Xanthus, the ancient capital of Lycia (1838); returned to the exploration of Lycia in 1839 and again in 1841, discovering the ruins of 13 other ancient cities; accounts of these explorations and discoveries are fully given in his various published journals and essays; was knighted in 1845 (1799-1861).

FELLOWSHIP, a collegiate term for a status in many universities which entitles the holder (a Fellow) to a share in their revenues, and in some cases to certain privileges as regards apartments and meals in the college, as also to a certain share in the government; formerly Fellowships were usually life appointments, but are now generally for a prescribed number of years, or are held during a term of special research; the old restrictions of celibacy and religious conformity have been relaxed.

FELO-DE-SE, in English law the crime which a man at the age of discretion and of a sound mind commits when he takes away his life.

FELONY, a crime which involves a total forfeiture of lands or goods or both, to which capital or other punishment may be superadded, according to the degree of guilt.

FELSPARS, a group of minerals abundant in most igneous rocks; the most common varieties are orthoclase (a silicate of potash and alumina) and microcline (a silicate of alumina and soda or lime).

FELTON, CORNELIUS CONWAY, American scholar, born in West Newbury, Massachusetts; graduated at Harvard in 1827, and became professor of Greek there, rising to the Presidency of the same college in 1860; edited Greek classics, and made translations from the German; most important work is "Greece, Ancient and Modern," in 2 vols. (1807-1862).

FELTON, JOHN, an ex-actor officer, the assassin of the Duke of Buckingham in 1628.

FEMMES SAVANTES, a comedy in five acts by Molière, and one of his best, appeared in 1672.

FENELLA, a fairy-like attendant of the Countess of Derby, assumed to be deaf and dumb, in Scott's "Peveril of the Peak," a character suggested by Goethe's Mignon in "Wilhelm Meister."

FÉNÉLON, FRANÇOIS DE SALIGNAC DE LA MOTHE, a famous French prelate and writer, born in the Château de Fénélon, in the prov. of Périgord; at the age of 15 came to Paris, and, having already displayed a remarkable gift for preaching, entered the Plessis College, and four years later joined the Seminary of St. Sulpice, where he took holy orders in 1675; his directorship of a seminary for female converts to Catholicism brought him into prominence, and gave occasion to his well-known treatise "De l'Education des Filles"; in 1686, after the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, he conducted a mission for the conversion of the Huguenots of Saintonge and Poitou, and four years later Louis XIV. appointed him tutor to his grandson, the Duke of Burgundy, an appointment which led to his writing his "Fables," "Dialogues of the Dead," and "History of the Ancient Philosophers"; in 1694 he became abbot of St. Valéry, and in the following year archbishop of Cambrai; soon after this ensued his celebrated controversy with Bossuet (q.v.) regarding the doctrines of Quietism (q.v.), a dispute which brought him into disfavour with the king and provoked the Pope's condemnation of his "Explication des Maximes des Saints sur la Vie intérieure" the surreptitious publication of his most famous work "Télemache," the MS. of which was stolen by his servant, accentuated the king's disfavour, who regarded it as a veiled attack on his court, and led to an order confining the author to his own diocese; the rest of his life was spent in the service of his people, to whom he endeared himself by his benevolence and the sweet piety of his nature; his works are extensive, and deal with subjects historical and literary, as well as philosophical and theological (1651-1715).

FENG, YU-HIANG, China's "Christian" general. Impressed by the Christian missionaries' devotion in the Boxer Rising, he was converted to Christianity in 1908 while a private in the army. After the Great War he became prominent as one of the warring generals, the virtual ruler of Mukden and for a time of Peking as well (1880-).

FENIANS, an Irish political organisation of the 19th century having for its object the overthrow of English rule in Ireland and the establishment of a republic there. The movement was initiated in the United States soon after the great famine in Ireland of 1846-1847, which, together with the harsh exactions of the landlords, compelled many Irishmen to emigrate from their island with a deeply-rooted sense of injustice and hatred of the English. The Fenians organised themselves so far on the model of a republic, having a senate at the head, with a virtual president called the "head-centre," and various "circles" established in many parts of the U.S. They collected funds and engaged in military drill, and sent agents to Ireland and England. An invasion of Canada in 1866 and a rising at home in 1867 proved abortive, as also the attack on Clerkenwell Prison in the same year. Another attempt on Canada in 1871 and the formation of the "Skirmishing Fund" for the use of the "Dynamitards" and the institution of the "Clan-na-Gael" leading to the "Invincibles," and the Phoenix Park murders (1882) were later manifestations of this movement. The Home Rule Land League, and Sinn Féin movements superseded the Fenian. The name was taken from an ancient military organisation called the Fionna Eirinn, said to have been instituted in Ireland in 300 B.C.

FENS, THE, the district extending north and east from Cambridge to Lincoln, large areas of which are below the level of the Wash; the country has been well drained, and tracts of it are under cultivation; is famous for its wild-fowl and fishing; among its famous cathedrals and churches are those of Peterborough, Crowland, and Ely.

FENTON, HENRY JOHN HORSTMAN, British chemist, university lecturer and demonstrator at Cambridge; obtained many important results in physical and general chemistry; his book of tables for qualitative analysis is a standard work (1854-1929).

FERDINAND THE CATHOLIC, V. of Castile, II. of Aragon and Sicily, and III. of Naples, born in Soe, in Aragon, married Isabella of Castile in 1469, a step by which these ancient kingdoms were united under one sovereign power; their joint reign is one of the most glorious in the annals of Spanish history, and in their hands Spain quickly took rank amongst the chief European powers; in 1492 Columbus discovered America, and the same year saw the Jews expelled from Spain and the Moorish power crushed by the fall of Granada. In 1500-1501 Ferdinand joined the French in his conquest of Naples, and three years later managed to secure the kingdom to himself, while by the conquest of Navarre in 1512 the entire Spanish peninsula came under his sway. He was a shrewd and adroit ruler, whose undoubted abilities, both as administrator and general, were, however, somewhat marred by an unscrupulous cunning, which found a characteristic expression in the institution of the notorious Inquisition, which in 1480 was started by him, and became a powerful engine for political as well as religious persecution for long years after (1452-1516).

FERDINAND I., German emperor (1556-1564), born in Alcalá, in Spain, son of Philip I., married Anna, a Bohemian princess, in 1521; was elected king of the Romans (1531), added Bohemia and Hungary to his domains (1553-1564).

FERDINAND II., German emperor (1619-1637), grandson of the preceding and son of Charles, younger brother of Maximilian II., born in Grätz; his detestation of the Protestants, early instilled into him by his mother and the Jesuits, under whom he was educated, was the ruling passion of his life, and involved the empire in constant warfare during his reign; an attempt on the part of Bohemia, restless under religious and political grievances, to break away from his rule, brought about the Thirty Years' War; by ruthless persecutions he re-established Catholicism in Bohemia, and reduced the country to subjection; but the war spread into Hungary and Germany, where Ferdinand found himself opposed by a confederacy of the Protestant States of Lower Saxony and Denmark, the Protestant cause being in the end successfully sustained by the Swedish hero, Gustavus Adolphus (q.v.), who had opposed to him the imperial generals Tilly and Wallenstein (q.v.); his reign is regarded as one of disaster, bloodshed, and desolation to his empire, and his connivance at the assassination of Wallenstein will be for ever remembered to his discredit (1618-1637).

FERDINAND III., German emperor (1637-1657), son of the preceding, born in Grätz; more tolerant in his views, would gladly have brought the war to a close, but found himself compelled to face the Swedes reinforced by the French; in 1648 the desolating struggle was terminated by the Peace of Westphalia; the rest of his reign passed in tranquillity (1608-1657).

FERDINAND I., king of the Two Sicilies, third son of Charles III. of Spain, succeeded his father on the Neapolitan throne (1759), married Maria Caroline, daughter of Maria-Theresa; joined the Allies in the struggle against Napoleon, and in 1806 was driven from his throne by the French, but was reinstated at the Congress of Vienna; in 1816 he constituted his two States (Sicily and Naples) into the kingdom of the Two Sicilies, and in the last four years of his reign ruled, with the aid of Austria, as a despot, but, having broken a pledge to his people, was compelled ere his return to grant a popular constitution (1751-1825).

FERDINAND II., king of the Two Sicilies, grandson of the preceding and son of Francis I.; after the death of his first wife, a daughter of Victor Emmanuel I., he married the Austrian princess Maria-Theresa, and fell under the influence of Austria during the rest of his reign; in 1848 he was compelled to grant constitutional rights to his people, but was distrusted, and an insurrection broke out in Sicily; with merciless severity he crushed the revolt, and by his savage bombardment of the cities won the epithet "Bomba"; a reign of terror ensued, and in 1851 Europe was startled by the revelations of cruel injustice contained in Gladstone's famous Neapolitan letters (1810-1859).

FERDINAND III., Grand-duke of Tuscany and Arch-duke of Austria, born in Florence; succeeded to the government of Tuscany in 1790; introduced many wise measures of reform, which brought peace and prosperity to his State; reluctantly joined the coalition against Napoleon in 1793, but two years later entered into friendly relations with France, and in 1797, in order to save his States being merged in the Cisalpine Republic, undertook to make payment of an annual subsidy; later he formed an alliance with Austria, and was by Napoleon driven from his possessions, which were, however, restored to him in 1814 by the Peace of Paris (1769-1824).

FERDINAND VII. OF SPAIN, son of Charles IV. of Spain; too weak to steer his way through the intrigues of the court, he appealed to Napoleon in 1807 to support the king, his father, and himself; but his letter was discovered, and his accomplices exiled; the following year the French entered Spain, and Charles abdicated in favour of his son Ferdinand; but soon after, under Napoleon's influence, the crown was surrendered to the French, and Joseph Bonaparte became king; in 1813 Ferdinand was reinstated, but found himself immediately met by a demand of his people for a more liberal representative government; the remaining years of his reign were spent in an interminable struggle against these claims, which he had French support under Louis XVIII. (1784-1833).

FERDINAND, king of Bulgaria. He took a prominent part in the formation of the Balkan Alliance against Turkey in 1912, and was largely responsible for the second Balkan war of 1913. Soon after the opening of hostilities he brought his country into the Great War on the side of the Central Powers, and in 1918 he abdicated in favour of his son Boris (q.v.) (1861-).

FERDINAND, king of Rumania. He succeeded to the throne in 1914, and it was largely due to his influence that Rumania threw in her lot with the Allies in 1916. He refused to sign a treaty forced on his country after the collapse of the army, and was exiled. He returned in 1918 and reformed Rumania on democratic lines. He married Marie, a granddaughter of Queen Victoria in 1892 (1865-1927).

FERDUSI. See FIEDAUSI.

FERETRUM, the shrine containing the sacred effigies and relics of a saint.

FERGUS, the name of three Scottish kings: F. I., d. 856; F. II., king from 411 to 427; and F. III., king from 784 to 787.

FERGUSON, ADAM, a Scottish philosopher and historian, born in Logierair, Perthshire; after passing through the universities of St. Andrews and Edinburgh, he in 1745 was appointed Gaelic chaplain to the Black Watch Highland Regiment, and was present at the battle of Fontenoy; in 1757 he became keeper of the Advocates' Library in Edinburgh; two years later professor of Natural Philosophy, and subsequently of Moral Philosophy in the university there; during his professorship he, as secretary, was attached to the commission sent out by Lord North to bring about a friendly settlement of the dispute pending between England and the North American colonies; resigning his chair in 1785 he retired to Neidpath Castle, to engage in farming at Hallyards, an estate in the same neighbourhood; died at St. Andrews; his best-known works are "Institutes of Moral Philosophy," "History of the Roman Republic," and "Principles of Moral and Political Science" (1723-1818).

FERGUSON, JAMES, a popular writer on astronomy and mechanics, born in Rothiemay, Banff, son of a labourer; his interest in astronomy was first aroused by his observation of the stars while acting as a "herd laddie," and much of his time among the hills was spent in the construction of mechanical contrivances; compelled by circumstances to betake himself to various occupations, pattern-drawing, clock-mending, copying prints, and portrait sketching, he still in his leisure hours pursued those early studies, and coming to London in 1743 (after a residence of some years in Edinburgh) began lecturing on his favourite subjects; a pension of £50 was granted him out of the privy purse, and in 1768 he was elected an F.R.S.; besides publishing lectures on mechanics, hydrostatics, optics, &c., he wrote several works on astronomy, chiefly popular expositions of the methods and principles of Sir Isaac Newton (1710-1776).

FERGUSON, ROBERT, a notorious plotter, who took part in Monmouth's invasion in 1685 and was prominent in the various plots against Charles II. and James II., but after the Revolution turned Jacobite; published a history of the Revolution in 1709; died in poverty (about 1687-1714).

FERGUSON, JAMES, a writer on the history and art of architecture, born in Ayr; went to India as an indigo-planter, but afterwards gave himself up to the study of the rock-temples; published various works and in his later years interested himself in the fortifications of the United Kingdom; his "History of Architecture," in 4 vols., is a standard work (1808-1846).

FERGUSON, ROBERT, a Scottish poet, born in Edinburgh; after a university course at St. Andrews he obtained a post in the office of the commissary-clerk of Edinburgh; his first poems appeared in Buddhist's Weekly Magazine, and brought him a popularity which proved his ruin; some years of unrestrained dissipation ended in religious melancholia, which finally settled down into an incurable insanity; his poems, collected in 1773, have abundant energy, wit, and fluency, but lack the passion and tenderness of those of Burns; he was, however, held in high honour by ——— who regarded him as "his elder brother in the Muse" (1760-1774).

FERGUSON, SIR WILLIAM, surgeon, born in Prestonsburg; graduated at Edinburgh; was elected to the chair of Surgery in King's College, London, and in 1886 was made a baronet; was surgeon-general to the Queen, and president of the Royal College of Surgeons; Fergusson was a bold and skilful surgeon; is the author, amongst other treatises, of "A System of Practical Surgery," besides being the inventor of many surgical instruments (1808-1877).

FERISHTAH, a Persian historian, born in Astrabad, on the Black Sea; went at an early age, accompanied by his father, to India, where his life was spent in the service, first of Murtaza Nizam Shah, in Ahmednagar, and afterwards at the court of the prince of Bijapur; his famous history of the Mohammedan power in India, finished in 1609, the writing of which occupied him for 20 years, is still a standard work, and has been translated into English (about 1570-1611).

FERNAGH, an Irish county in the SW. corner of Ulster, of a hilly surface, especially in the W.; is well wooded, and produces indifferent crops of oats, flax, and potatoes; some coal and iron, and quantities of limestone, are found in it; the Upper and Lower Loughs Erie form a waterway through its centre; chief town, Fintona.

FERMAT, PIERRE DE, a French mathematician, born near Montauban; made important discoveries in the properties of numbers, and with his friend Pascal invented a calculus of probabilities; was held in high esteem by Hallam, who ranks him next to Descartes (1601-1665).

FERMENTATION, the process of obtaining alcohol from carbohydrates; the enzymes present in yeast convert sugar first into glucose and then into alcohol and carbon dioxide; beer is produced by the action of the diastase in the grain which hydrolyses the starch to maltose (malt sugar), which is then fermented with the added glucose; in the case of wines the sugars of the fruit are fermented by the bloom.

FERNANDEZ, JUAN, a Spanish navigator discovered the island off the coast of Chile that bears his name; d. in 1602.

FERNANDO PO, a mountainous island, with an abrupt and rocky coast, in the Bight of Biafra, W. Africa, the volcano, Mount Clarence (9300 ft.), rises in the N.; is covered with luxuriant vegetation, and yields maize and yams, some coffee, and palm-oil and wine; is inhabited by the Bubi, a Bantu tribe, and is the chief of the Spanish Guinea Isles.

FEROZPORE, the chief town of the district of the same name in the Punjab, India, a few miles S. of the Sutlej; is strongly fortified, and contains a large arsenal; the present town was laid out by Lord Lawrence. F. District, lies along the S. bank of the Sutlej, came into the possession of the British in 1835; cereals, cotton, sugar, and tobacco are cultivated.

FERRAR, NICHOLAS, a religious enthusiast in the reign of Charles I.; was elected a Fellow of Clare Hall, Cambridge, in 1610; afterwards devoted himself to medicine and travelled on the Continent; subsequently joined his father in business in London, and entered Parliament in 1624; but a year later retired to the country, and at Little Gidding, Huntingdonshire, founded, with some of his new relations, a religious community, known as the "Arminian Nunnery," some account of which is given in Shorthouse's "John Inglesant"; it was broken up by the Puritans in 1647; he was the intimate friend of George Herbert; this community consisted of some "fourscore persons, devoted to a kind of Protestant monasticism; they followed celibacy and merely religious duties, employed themselves in binding prayer-books, &c., in singing and what charitable work was possible to them in their desert retreat, kept up, night and day, a continual repetition of the English liturgy, never allowing at any hour the sacred fire to go out" (1602-1637).

FERRAR, ROBERT, an English prelate, born in Halifax, was prior of the monastery of St. Oswald's, embraced the Reformation, and was made Bishop of St. David's by Edward VI.; suffered martyrdom under Mary in 1555.

FERRARA, a broadsword bearing the name of Andrea Ferrara, one of the Italian family famous in the 16th and 17th centuries for the quality of their swords.

FERRARA, a fortified and walled Italian city, capital of the province of the name, situated on a low and marshy plain between the dividing branches of the Po, 80 m. from the Adriatic; it has many fine ecclesiastical buildings and a university founded in 1264, with a library of some 100,000 vols., but only a handful of students; a fine old Gothic castle, the residence of the Estes (q.v.), still stands; it was the birthplace of Savonarola, and the sometime dwelling-place of Tasso and Ariosto; once populous and prosperous, it has now fallen into decay.

FERRARI, GAUDENZIO, Italian painter and sculptor, born in Valduggia, in Piedmont; studied at Rome under Raphael; many of his paintings and frescoes are to be found in the Lombard galleries, and principally in Milan; his work is characterised by bold and accurate drawing, inventiveness, and strong colouring, but it somewhat lacks the softer qualities of his art (1484-1546).

FERRARI, PAOLO, Italian dramatist, born in Modena; produced his first play at the age of 25; his numerous works, chiefly comedies, and all marked by a fresh and piquant style, are the finest product of the modern Italian drama; in 1880 he was appointed professor of History at Modena and afterwards at Milan; his dramatic works have been published in 14 vols. (1822-1889).

FERRER, FRANCISCO, rationalist and advanced thinker, and founder with Haeckel of the International League; executed as leader of the Barcelona revolt of 1909 (1859-1909).

FERRIER, JAMES FREDERICK, a metaphysician of singular ability and originality, born in Edinburgh after graduating at Oxford was called to the Scottish bar in 1832; but under the influence of Sir W. Hamilton, metaphysics became his dominant interest, and he found an outlet for his views in the pages of Blackwood by a paper on "Consciousness," which attracted the attention of Emerson; in 1842 was appointed professor of History in Edinburgh University, and three years later of Moral Philosophy in St. Andrews; published the "Institutes of Metaphysics," a lucid exposition of the Hekelian philosophy, and "Lectures on Greek Philosophy," and edited the works of his uncle and father-in-law, Christopher North (1808-1884).

FERRIER, SUSAN EDMONSTON, a Scottish novelist, aunt of the preceding, born in Edinburgh, where her life was chiefly spent, her father being Clerk in the Court of Session, and a colleague of Sir Walter Scott; her novels, "Marriage," "The Inheritance," and "Destiny," &c., are rich in humour and faithful in their pictures of Scottish life and character; Scott held her in high esteem, and kept up a warm friendship with her till his death (1782-1854).

FERROL, a strongly fortified seaport in Galicia, Spain, 10 m. N.E. of Coruña, on a narrow inlet of the sea which forms a splendid harbourage, narrow at the entrance and capacious within, and defended by two forts; it possesses one of the largest Spanish naval arsenals; manufactures linen and cotton, and exports corn, brandy, and sardines.

FERRY, JULES FRANÇOIS CAMILLE, a distinguished French statesman, born in Saint Die, in the Vosges; called to the Paris bar in 1854, he speedily plunged into the politics of the time, and offered uncompromising opposition to the policy of Louis Napoleon; as a member of the Corps Législatif he opposed the war with Prussia, but as central mayor of Paris rendered signal service during the siege by the Germans; during his tenure of office as Minister of Public Instruction in 1870 was instrumental in bringing about the expulsion of the Jesuits; as Prime Minister in 1880 and again in 1883-1885 he inaugurated a spirited colonial policy, which involved France in war in Madagascar, and brought about his own downfall (1832-1893).

FESCEININE VERSE, an early form of Italian poetry, usually in the nature of a lampoon; the name is derived from the town of Fescennia, in Tuscany, the people of which were notorious for extempore and scurrilous verse and jests at festival time.

FESCHI, JOSEPH, an eminent French ecclesiastic, born in Ajaccio, the half-brother of Napoleon's mother; was educated for the Church, but, on the outbreak of the Revolution, joined the revolutionaries as a storekeeper; co-operated with his illustrious nephew in restoring Catholicism in France, and became in 1802 archbishop of Lyons, and a cardinal in 1803; as ambassador at Rome in 1804 he won the Pope's favour, and brought about a more friendly understanding between him and Napoleon; later he lost favour with the emperor, and retired to Lyons, whence in 1814 he fled to Rome, there to end his life; was a lover of art, and left a magnificent collection of pictures (1763-1839).

FESTUS, the name of a poem by Philip James Bailey (q.v.), first published in 1839, but extended to three times its length later, a poem that on its first production produced no small sensation.

FESTUS, SEKTUS POMPEIUS, a Latin grammarian of probably the 3rd century; noted for an epitome of a great work by Verrius Flaccus on the meanings and a derivation of Latin words, which, although only a portion of it exists, is regarded as an invaluable document, and is preserved at Naples.

FETICHISM, the worship of a fetic, or fetich, an object superstitiously invested with divine or demoniac power, and as such regarded with awe and worshipped; the word is from the Portuguese fetiche, magic.

FEUCHTWANGER, LION, German author. Born in Munich and educated there and in Berlin, he first came before public notice with his "Jew Süss," a book which told graphically of 18th-century Germany, and had a phenomenal sale in 1927 all over the world; later he wrote "The Ugly Duchess" (1884).

FEDALISM, or the feudal system, that system which prevailed in Europe during the Middle Ages and in England from the Norman Conquest, by which vassals held their lands from the lord-superior on condition of military service when required.

FEUERBACH, LUDWIG ANDREAS, German philosopher, son of the succeeding, born in Landshut; studied theology at Hiedelberg, but coming under the influence of Hegel went to Berlin and devoted himself to philosophy; after failing in an attempt to support himself by lecturing in Erlangen, he was fortunate in his marriage, and upon his wife's means lived a retired and studious life at Bruckberg; in his philosophy, which is a degeneracy and finally total departure from Hesel, he declines to find a higher sanction for morality than man's own conception of right and wrong as based on a doctrine of Hedonism (q.v.); his chief work, on the nature of Christianity, which was translated into English by George Elliot, is extravagant in its departure from orthodox lines of thought; his influence has been trifling outside his own country (1804-1872).

FEUERBACH, PAUL JOHANN ANSELM VON, a highly distinguished criminal jurist, born in Jena, where he studied philosophy and law; at 23 came into prominence by a vigorous criticism of Hobbes's theory on civil power; and soon afterwards, in lectures on criminal jurisprudence, he set forth his famous theory, that in administering justice judges should be strictly limited in their decisions by the penal code; this new doctrine gave rise to a party called "Rigorists," who supported his theory; he held professorships in Jena and in Kiel, and in 1804 was appointed to an official post in Munich; in 1814 he became president of the Court of Appeal at Anspach; his chief work was the framing of a penal code for Bavaria, which became a model for several other countries (1775-1833).

FEUILLANS, a reformed brotherhood of Cistercian monks, founded in 1577 by Jean de la Barrière, abbot of the Cistercian monastery at Feuillans, in Languedoc. The movement thus organised was a protest against the laxity which had crept into the Church, and probably received some stimulus from the Reformation, which was then in progress. The Feuillans settled in a convent in the Rue St. Honoré,

Paris, which in after years became the meeting-place of a revolutionary club, which took the name of Feuillans; founded in 1790 by Lafayette, La Rochefoucauld, &c. the club was composed of members of the respectable property classes, whose views were more moderate than those of the Jacobins. They could not hold out against the flood of revolutionary violence, and on March 28, 1791, a mob burst into their place of meeting and dispersed them.

FEUILLET, OCTAVE, a celebrated French novelist, born in Saint-Lô, in La Manche; started his literary career as one of Dumas' assistants, but made his first independent success in the Revue des Deux Mondes by a series of tales, romances, &c., begun in 1848; in 1862 he was elected a member of the Academy, and later became librarian to Louis Napoleon; his novels, of which "Le Roman d'un Jeune Homme Pauvre" and "Sibylle" are the most noted, are graceful in style, and reveal considerable dramatic force, but often lapse into sentimentality (1821-1890).

FEZ, the largest city in Morocco, of which it is the second capital; is surrounded by walls and prettily situated in the valley of the Sebou, which flows through its centre and falls into the Atlantic 100 m. to the E. It has been for many centuries one of the most important of the sacred cities of the Moslem; has many fine mosques, the Sultan's palace, and an important university; is yet a busy commercial centre, although signs of decay appear all over the city, and carries on an active caravan trade with Central Africa.

FEZZAN, an Italian province lying to the S. of Libya, to which it is politically united; in character partakes of the desert region to which it belongs, being almost wholly composed of barren sandy plateaux, with here and there an oasis in the low valleys, where some attempt at cultivation is made. The people, who belong to the Berber stock, are Mohammedans, honest, but lazy and immoral. Murzuk is the chief town.

FIARS, an expression in Scottish law given to the prices of grain which are determined by the respective sheriffs in the various counties assisted by juries. The Court for "striking the fiars" is held towards the end of February in accordance with Acts of Sederunt of the Court of Session. The prices fixed are used in the settling of contracts where no prices have been determined upon, e.g. in fixing stipends of ministers of the Church of Scotland, and are found useful in other ways.

FICHTE, JOHANN GOTTLIEB, a celebrated German philosopher, born in Upper Lusatia; a man of an intensely thoughtful and noble nature; studied theology at Jena, and afterwards philosophy; became a disciple of Kant, and paid homage to him personally at Königsberg; was appointed professor of Philosophy at Jena, where he enthusiastically preached a system which broke away from Kant, which goes under the name of "Transcendental Idealism" and which he published in his "Wissenschaftslehre" and his "System der Sittenlehre"; obliged to resign his chair at Jena on a charge of atheism, he removed to Berlin, where he rose into favour by his famous "Address to the Germans" against the tyranny of Napoleon, and after a professorate in Erlangen he became head of the New University, and had for colleagues such men as Wolff, Humboldt, Schellermacher, and Neander; he fell a victim to the War of Independence which followed, dying of fever caught through his wife and her nursing of patients in the hospitals, which were crowded with the wounded; besides his more esoteric-philosophical works, he was the author of four of a popular cast, which are worthy of all regard, on "The Destiny of Man," "The Nature of the Scholar," "The Characteristics of the Present Age," and "The Way to the Blessed Life" (1762-1814).

FICHELBERG, a mountain chain in North-East Bavaria, so called from its having once been covered with pines, Fichtel meaning a pine. In its valleys rise the Elbe, Rhine, and Danube; considerable quantities of iron, copper, and lead are found, which give rise to a smelting industry, while mother-of-pearl is obtained from the streams. The climate is cold and damp, but the district has of late become a favourite resort of tourists.

FICINO, MARSIUS, an eminent Italian Platonist, born in Florence; in 1433 became president of a Platonic school, founded by Cosmo de' Medici, where he spent many years spreading and instilling the doctrines of Plato, and, indeed, ancient philosophy generally; entered the Church in 1473, and under the patronage of Lorenzo de' Medici was appointed to the canonry of Florence Cathedral; his religious beliefs were a strange blend of Platonism and Christianity, but were the foundation of a pure life, while his interest in classical studies helped considerably to further the Renaissance (1433-1499).

FIDELIO, a celebrated opera by Beethoven, and his only one.

FIDES, the Roman goddess of fidelity, or steadfast adherence to promises and engagements. Numa built a shrine for her worship and instituted a festival in her honour; in later times a temple containing a statue of her dressed in white adorned the temple of Jupiter, on the Capitol at Rome.

FIELD, CYRUS WEST, brother of the following, born in Stockbridge, Massachusetts; was first a successful paper manufacturer, but turning his attention to submarine telegraphy was instrumental in establishing cable communication between England and America, and founded the Atlantic Telegraph Company in 1856; on the successful laying of the 1866 cable, since which time communication between the Old and New Worlds has never been interrupted, he was awarded a gold medal and the thanks of the nation; afterwards interested himself in developing the overhead railway in New York (1810-1892).

FIELD, DAVID DUDLEY, an eminent American jurist, born in Haddam, Connecticut, for 57 years a prominent member of the New York bar, during which time he brought about judicial reforms, and drew up, under Government direction, political, civil, and penal codes; interested himself in international law, and laboured to bring about an international agreement whereby disputes might be settled by arbitration and war done away with; was President of the London Peace Congress in 1890 (1805-1894).

FIELD OF THE CLOTH OF GOLD, a plain near Guines, where Henry VIII. had an interview with Francis I.; was so called from the magnificence displayed on the occasion on the part of both sovereigns and their retinue.

FIELDING COLEY, an eminent English water-colour painter; became secretary and treasurer, and finally president of the Society of Water-Colour Painters (1787-1855).

FIELDING, HENRY, a famous novelist, who has been styled by Scott "the father of the English novel," born at Sharpsham Park, Glastonbury, son of General Edmund Fielding and a cousin of Lady Mary Wortley Montagu (q.v.); was educated at Eton and at Leyden, where he graduated in 1728; led for some years a dissipated life in London, and achieved some celebrity by the production of a series of comedies and farces, now sunk into oblivion; in 1736 he married Miss Charlotte Cradock, and after a brief experiment as a theatre lessee studied law at the Middle Temple, and was called to the bar; literature was, however, his main pursuit, and in 1742 he came to the front with "Joseph Andrews," a burlesque on Richardson's "Pamela," in which his powers as a novelist first showed themselves; in 1743 followed three volumes of "Miscellanies," including "Jonathan Wild"; after his wife's death he turned again to law, but in 1745 we find him once more engaged in literature as editor of the True Patriot and afterwards of the Jacobite Journal; "Tom Jones," his masterpiece, appeared in 1749, and three years later "Amelia"; journalism and his duties as a justice of the peace occupied him till 1754, when ill-health forced him abroad to Lisbon, where he died and was buried. Fielding is a master of a fluent, virile, and attractive style; his stories move with an easy and natural vigour, and are brimful of humour and kindly satire, while his characters in their lifelike humanness, with all their foibles and frailties, are a marked contrast to the buckram and conventional figures of his contemporary Richardson; something of the laxity of his times, however, finds its way into his pages, and renders them not always palatable reading to present-day readers (1707-1754).

FIERY CROSS, THE, a war symbol in the shape of a stick dipped in animal blood, formerly sent from village to village among the Highland clans as a call to arms.

FIESCHI, COUNT, a Genoese of illustrious family who conspired against Andrea Doria, but whose plot was frustrated on the eve of its fulfilment by his falling into the sea and being drowned as he stepped full-armed from one of his ships into another (1523-1547).

FIESCHI, JOSEPH MARCO, a Corsican conspirator; served under Murat and in Russia in 1812; obtained a government post in 1830, and in consequence of his discharge from this five years later he, by means of an infernal machine, made an unsuccessful attempt to assassinate Louis Philippe, for which, along with his accomplices, he was tried and executed (1790-1836).

FIESSOLE, a small town, 3 m. from Florence, where the wealthy Florentines have villas, and near which Fra Angelico lived as a monk.

FIFE, a maritime county in the E. of Scotland, which juts out into the North Sea and is washed by the Firths of Tay and Forth on its N. and S. shores respectively, thus forming a small peninsula; has for the most part a broken and hilly surface, extensively cultivated, however, while the "How of Fife," watered by the Eden, is a fertile valley, richly wooded; valuable coal deposits are worked in the S. and W.; its long coastline is studded with picturesque towns, many of them of ancient date, a circumstance which led James VI. to describe the county as "a beggar's mantle fringed with gold"; it is associated with much that is memorable in Scottish history.

FIFTH-MONARCHY MEN, a set of fanatics of extreme levelling tendencies, who, towards the close of the Protectorate, maintained that Jesus Christ was about to reappear on the earth to establish a fifth monarchy that would swallow up and forcibly suppress all that was left of the four preceding—the Assyrian, the Persian, the Macedonian, and the Roman; their standard exhibited the Lion of the tribe of Judah couchant, with the motto, "Who will rouse him up?" Some of them conspired to murder the Protector, but were detected and imprisoned till after his death.

FIGARO, a name given by the French dramatist Beaumarchais to a cunning and intriguing barber who figures in his "Barbier de Séville" and his "Mariage de Figaro," and who has since become the type of all such characters. Several operas have been written on these comedies, notably by Mozart and Rossini. The name has been adopted by various fictions in England and in France.

FIGUERE, LOUIS, a popular writer on scientific subjects, born in Montpellier, where he became professor of Pharmacy in 1846, later removing to Paris; his voluminous writings, including "The Ocean World" and "Reptiles and Birds," have done much to popularize science; they comprise a volume on alchemy and one in defence of immortality; many of these have been received with favour in England (1819-1894).

FII, a group of islands in the S. Pacific Ocean, known also as the Viti Islands; they lie between 15°-22° S. lat. and 176° E.-178° W. long., and are a dependency of Britain; sighted by Tasman in 1643, though first discovered, properly speaking, by Cook in 1773, came first into prominence in 1858, when the sovereignty was offered to England and declined, but in 1874 were taken over and made a crown colony; they number over two hundred islands, of which some eighty are inhabited, Viti Levu and Vanua Levu being by far the largest; Suva is the capital; sugar, cotton, vanilla, tea, and coffee are cultivated, besides fruit.

FILDES, SIR LUKE, artist, born in Lancashire; made his mark first as a designer of woodcuts; contributed to various magazines and illustrated books, notably Dickens' "Edwin Drood"; his most noted pictures are "Applicants for a Casual Ward," "The Widower," and "The Doctor"; he was made an R.A. in 1887 (1844-1927).

FILIBUSTER, a name given to buccaneers who infested the Spanish-American coasts or those of the West Indies, but more especially used to designate the followers of Lopez in his Cuban expedition in 1851, and those of Walker in Nicaragua in 1855; a name now given to any lawless adventurers who attempt to take forcible possession of a foreign country.

FILIGREE, a name given to a species of goldsmith's ornamental work fashioned out of fine metallic (usually gold or silver) wire into lace-like patterns; the art is of ancient date, and was skilfully practised both by the Etruscans and Egyptians, as well as in Central Asia and India.

FILIOQUE CONTROVERSY, a controversy which ended in the disruption of the Western from the Eastern Church on the question whether the Spirit proceeded from the Father and the Son or from the Father only, the Western maintaining the former and the Eastern the latter.

FILLAN, ST., a name borne by two Scottish saints: (1) the son of a Munster prince, lived in the 8th century, was first abbot of the monastery on the Holy Loch in Argyll, and afterwards laboured at Strathmillan, Perthshire; some of his relics are to be seen in the Edinburgh Antiquarian Museum; (2) or Paolan, known as "the leper," had his church at the end of Loch Earn, Perthshire; a healing well and chair are associated with his name.

FILLMORE, MILLARD, President of the United States from 1850 to 1853, succeeding Zachary Taylor; became unpopular over the Fugitive Slave Law.

FILM ACT, a measure passed in 1927 making it compulsory for British cinemas to show a certain quota of home-produced films.

FINALITY JOHN, Lord John Russell, from his complacently pronouncing the Reform Bill of 1832 a final measure.

FINCH, HENRIAGE, FIRST EARL OF NOTTINGHAM, Lord Chancellor of England, born in Kent, studied at Oxford, and was called to the bar in 1645; at the Restoration he was appointed Solicitor-General, and took an active part in prosecuting the regicides; in 1670 he became Attorney-General, and in 1675 Lord Chancellor; he presided as Lord High Steward at the trial of Stafford in 1680, and pronounced judgment in a speech of great eloquence (1621-1682).

FINDLATER, ANDREW, encyclopædist, born near Aberdour, in Aberdeenshire, of humble parentage; graduated at Aberdeen, and became a schoolmaster at Tillydrick, and afterwards held the post of headmaster of Gordon's Hospital in Aberdeen; in 1853 joined the staff of Messrs. W. & R. Chambers, Edinburgh, and became eventually editor of the first edition of their encyclopedia (1861-1868); amongst other work done for the Messrs. Chambers were various manuals on astronomy, geography, &c.; was a man of wide and accurate scholarship (1810-1885).

FINGAL, or FIONN, the great hero of Gaelic mythology represented by Ossian (q.v.) to have ruled over the kingdom of Morven, which may be said to have been then co-extensive with Argyllshire and the West Highlands; in ballad literature he is represented as belonging also to Ireland.

FINGAL'S CAVE, a remarkable cave of basaltic formation on the coast of the Isle of Staffa (q.v.); entrance to the cave is effected in boats through a natural archway 42 ft. wide and 66 ft. high, and the water fills the floor of this great hall to a distance of 227 ft.

FINISTERRE, or FINISTÈRE (French for "land's end"), the most westerly department of France, washed on the N. by the English Channel, and on the S. and W. by the Atlantic; has a rugged and broken coastline, but inland presents a picturesque appearance with tree-clad hills and fertile valleys; the climate is damp, and there is a good deal of marshy land; mines of silver, lead, &c., are wrought, and quarries of marble and granite; fishing is largely engaged in; and the manufacture of linen, canvas and pottery, are important industries, while large quantities of grain are raised.

FINISTERRE, or FINISTÈRE CAPE, in north-west Spain, the scene of several naval engagements between the French and British.

FINLAND, a republic on the gulfs of Finland and Bothnia, ceded by the Swedes to Russia in 1809, and now independent. The coastline is deeply indented, and fringed with small islands; the interior, chiefly elevated plateau, consists largely of forest land, and is well furnished with lakes, many of which are united by canals, one 36 m. connecting Lake Saima with the Gulf of Finland. Various cereals (barley, oats, &c.) are grown, and there is a varied and valuable fauna; fishing is an extensive industry, and no less than 80 kinds of fish are found in the rivers, lakes, and coast waters. The country was formerly divided into eight counties, and governed by a Senate and Diet, the reigning Russian emperor ruling as grand-duke. Education is highly advanced; Swedish and Finnish are the two languages of the country, Russian being practically unknown. There is an excellent Saga literature, and the beginnings of a modern literature. The Finns came under the dominion of the Swedes in the 12th and 15th centuries, and were by them Christianised.

FINLAY, GEORGE, a distinguished historian, born in Faversham, Kent, but of Scottish parents; received a university training at Glasgow and Göttingen, and in 1822 went to Greece, where he met Byron and fought in the War of Independence; henceforth Greece became his home, and there, after an unavailing effort to promote agriculture, he betook himself to a studious life and to writing the history of his adopted country; his valuable history, published in various parts, traces the national life of Greece from 146 B.C. to A.D. 1864 (1799-1875).

FINMARK, a province of Norway, lying in the extreme N., with a rocky and indented coast and a barren and mountainous interior; fishing is the main industry of the inhabitants, who are chiefly Lapps.

FINNS, the native inhabitants of Finland, and originally of the districts in Sweden and Norway as well, are of the Mongolian type, and were settled in Europe before the arrival of the Slavic and Teutonic races.

FINEEN, NIELS RYBERG, physician, born in Farøe Isles; studied anatomy at Copenhagen, and was one of the first to experiment with light rays in certain diseases, such as smallpox and lupus; was awarded the Nobel Prize for medicine in 1903 (1860-1904).

FIORDS, deep indentations forming inlets of the sea, especially on the coast of Norway, overlooked by high mountains and precipitous cliffs.

FIR-BOLG, one of the earliest people to colonise Ireland, traditionally believed to have come from Greece; became in time the serf population; for their history, see OSSIAN.

FIRDAUSI, or FIRDUSI, the pseudonym of Abū'l Kasim Mansur, the great poet of Persia, born near Tās, in Khorassan; flourished in the 10th century B.C.; spent 30 years in writing the "Shah Nama" (Book of Kings), a national epic, but having been cheated out of the reward promised by Sultan Mahmud, he gave vent to bitter satire against his royal master and fled the court; for some time he led a wandering life, till at length he returned to his birthplace, where he died; a complete translation of his great poem exists in French.

FIRE OF LONDON, THE, lasted for four days in Sept., 1666, and is vividly described in Pepys's diary. Some 13,000 houses and 90 churches, including St. Paul's Cathedral, were burnt, and practically the whole of the City from the Tower to the Temple was raised to the ground.

FIRE-WORSHIP, worship of fire, especially as embodied in the sun, viewed as the most express and emphatic exhibition of beneficent divine power.

FIRMAMENT, a name given to the vault of the sky conceived as a solid substance studded with stars, so applied in the Vulgate.

FIRMAN, a Persian word denoting a mandate or decree; among the Turks the term is applied to such decrees as issue from the Ottoman Porte, and also to passports, the right of signing which lay with the Sultan or a Pasha; the word is also used in India to denote a permit to trade.

FIRMIN, ST., bishop of Amiens, who suffered martyrdom in 287. Festival, Sept. 25.

FIRST GENTLEMAN OF EUROPE, George IV., so named for his fine style and manners.

FIRTH, MARK, Sheffield steel manufacturer and well-known philanthropist (1819-1886).

FISCHART, JOHANN, a German satirist; an imitator of Rabelais and a genuine humorist, at the same time a loyal adherent of Luther and enemy of the Jesuits (1545-1589).

FISCHER, EMIL, German chemist, professor at Berlin; he carried out much research on dyes, proteins, and sugars, and discovered phenyl hydrazine; his extensive work in organic chemistry must rank as classical for all time (1852-).

FISCHER, ERNST KUNO REETHOLD, a German historian of philosophy, born in Sandewalde, Silesia; as a student of Erdmann at Halle he was smitten with the love of philosophy, and gave his life to the study of it; after graduating he went to Heidelberg and there established himself as a private lecturer, in which capacity he was eminently successful, but in 1853 was deprived of his status by Government, probably on account of the alleged Pantheistic trend of his teaching; in 1856, however, he was elected to the chair of Philosophy in Jena, and 16 years later was called back to Heidelberg as Zeller's successor; his chief work is a "History of Modern Philosophy" (1824-1907).

FISHER, ANDREW, Australian politician. Of Scottish birth, he emigrated in 1832 after working in the mines, became a Labour M.P. for his State and later for the Commonwealth. In 1904 he was Minister of Trade, and later became leader of the Labour Party. In 1908, from 1910 to 1913, and in 1914 he was Prime Minister. He left Australian politics in 1915 to become High Commissioner in London (1862-1928).

FISHER, HERBERT ALBERT LAURENS, British politician. After a brilliant career as historian and educationist he was made Minister of Education in 1916 and was responsible for the Education Act of 1918 (1865-).

FISHER, JOHN, bishop of Rochester, born in Beverley; was distinguished at Cambridge, and became chaplain and confessor to the Countess of Richmond, Henry VII.'s mother, who had him appointed professor of Divinity at his alma mater; in 1504 he was elected Chancellor of the University and made bishop of Rochester, but incurred the royal displeasure by opposing Henry VIII.'s divorce of Catherine of Aragon, and by upholding the Pope's supremacy; became involved in the deceptions of Elizabeth Barton, maid of Kent, and was sent to the Tower in 1534 for refusing to take the oath of succession; was created a cardinal, but was beheaded by order of the king ere his hat arrived; was beatified in 1880 (1459-1535).

FISHER, JOHN, 1ST BARON OF KILVERSTONE, admiral. He entered the navy at the age of 13, "peevish, friendless, and forlorn," and saw service in the Crimean war, in China, and at Alexandria. He represented the navy at the Hague conference of 1899, was commander of the Mediterranean Fleet, and in 1902 became Second Lord of the Admiralty. For six years from 1904 he was First Lord, and in that office overhauled the navy and introduced Dreadnoughts, battle-cruisers, and submarines. Resigning in 1910, he was reappointed at the outbreak of the Great War, but finally resigned in 1915 owing to differences of opinion with Winston Churchill and Asquith, principally on the Dardanelles campaign (1841-1920).

FISKE, JOHN, American writer, born in Hartford, Conn., U.S.; studied at Harvard; in 1869 lectured at his old university as a Positivist, and was under-librarian from 1872 to 1879; he is the author of a number of works on Darwinism, American history, philosophy, &c. (1842-1901).

FITCH, JOHN, an American inventor, born in Connecticut; led a life of adventure, at one time acting as gunsmith to the American revolutionaries and at another falling into the hands of Indians whilst trading in the West; in 1785 he brought out a model steam-boat with side wheels, and in 1788 and in 1790 constructed larger vessels, one of the latter being for some time employed as a passenger boat; some of his plans are said to have fallen into Robert Fulton's hands and given him the idea of his steamship; disheartened by the ill-success of a trip to France, he committed suicide at Bardstown, Kentucky (1743-1798).

FITZ-BOODLE, GEORGE, Thackeray's pseudonym in Fraser's Magazine.

FITZGERALD, EDWARD, English scholar, born in Suffolk; at Cambridge, where he graduated in 1830, he formed close friendships with James Spedding and Thackeray, and afterwards was on intimate terms with Carlyle and Tennyson; his life was quietly spent in his country residence in Suffolk, varied by yachting expeditions and visits to London, where he made the round of his friends; his first book, "Ruphranon," a dialogue on youth, appeared when he was 42, "Polonius" followed and some Spanish translations, but his fame rests on his translations of Persian poetry, and especially on his rendering of the 11th-century poet, Omar Khayyam (1809-1883).

FITZGERALD, LADY, a daughter of Égalité and Mme. Genlis, called Pamela; distinguished for her beauty and enthusiasm for liberty, she became the wife of Lord Fitzgerald, the Irish patriot (q.v.); d. 1831.

FITZGERALD, LORD EDWARD, the younger son of the Duke of Leinster, born at Carlton Castle, near Dublin; spent his early years in France; joined the English army and served with distinction in the American War; in 1784 he was elected to the Irish Parliament, and opposed the English Government; was attracted to France by the Revolution, but returned to Ireland and joined the United Irishmen in 1796, and began plotting the rising of 1798; his scheme was betrayed, and he was arrested in Dublin after a determined resistance, during which he received wounds of which he died in prison (1783-1798).

FITZ HERBERT, MRS., a Roman Catholic lady, maiden name Maria Anne Smythe, with whom, after her second widowhood, George IV., while Prince of Wales, contracted a secret marriage in 1785, which, however, under the Royal Marriage Act, was declared invalid (1756-1837).

FITZROY, EDWARD ALGERNON, British politician. Entering the House of Commons in 1900 as a Conservative, he was made Speaker in 1928 (1869-).

FITZROY, ROBERT, admiral, navigator, and meteorologist, born at Ampton Hall, near Bury St. Edmunds; entered the navy at 14, and in 1828-1830 conducted a survey of the coasts of Patagonia and Tierra del Fuego, a work he continued while commanding the Beagle (1831-1836), in which Darwin accompanied him; in 1843-1845 was governor of New Zealand; in his later years devoted himself to meteorology, and, on the retired list, rose to be vice-admiral; published accounts of his voyages, &c.; under pressure of work his mind gave way, and he committed suicide (1805-1865).

FITZWILLIAM, WILLIAM, EARL, a politician of George the Third's time; the excesses of the French Revolution caused him to come over from the Whigs and support Pitt; favoured Catholic emancipation during his Lord-Lieutenancy of Ireland, but was recalled; held office under Grenville in 1806, and took some part in the Reform Bill agitation of the day (1748-1833).

Fiume, a port of importance, on the Adriatic, at the rocky entrance of the Fiumara, 40 m. S.E. of Trieste; a new town of spacious and colonnaded streets and many fine buildings has grown up on the ground sloping down from the old town; has an excellent harbour, and flourishing industries in paper, torpedoes, tobacco, &c., besides being the entrepôt of an important and increasing commerce. For some years after the Great War its ownership was a matter of dispute between Italy and Jugoslavia; it was seized in 1918 by irregular Italian troops under D'Annunzio (q.v.), the airman-poet, who held it for nearly two years before the treaty of Rapallo made the place a Free State in 1920. After Fiume had again been occupied by Italian troops the Free State came to an end in 1924, and the port was made the capital of the Italian province of Carnaro.

FIVE MILE ACT, passed in 1865, prohibited dissenters from preaching within five miles of a town. It was repealed in 1869.

FLACIUS, or VLAUGH, MATTHIAS, surnamed

Illyricus, a German theologian, born in Albana, in Illyria; was the pupil of Luther and Melancthon; became professor of the Old Testament Scriptures at Wittenberg, but four years later lost his position on account of certain attacks he made on Melancthon; subsequently he was elected professor at Jena, but was again deposed for heterodox notions on original sin; died in poverty; was author of an ecclesiastical history and other works (1520-1575).

FLAG. The earliest symbols by which primitive peoples distinguished themselves were undoubtedly totems (q.v.), from these and the later images or badges of wood or metal carried by the ancient Egyptians, Assyrians, and Greeks developed the Roman military standard; according to Livy, the vevillum, or cavalry flag, was a piece of cloth attached to a cross-bar at the end of a spear. In England the first national banners had a religious significance, the present Union Flag being composed of the allied crosses of St. George, St. Andrew, and St. Patrick. The subject of national standards, their history and associations is dealt with fully in W. J. Gordon's "Flags of the World."

FLAGELLANTS, a set of medieval fanatics, who first arose in Italy in 1200, and subsequently appeared in other quarters of Europe, and who thought by self-flagellation to atone for sin and avert divine judgment, hoping by a limited number of stripes to compensate for a century of scourgings; the practice arose at a time when it was reckoned that the final judgment of the world was at hand.

FLAHAULT DE LA BILLARDERIE, AUGUSTE CHARLES JOSEPH, COMTE DE, a French soldier and diplomatist, born in Paris; was aide-de-camp to Napoleon, and for distinguished services in the Peninsular war and at Leipzig was made a general and count; fought at Waterloo, and two years later married Margaret Elphinstone, who by inheritance became Baroness Keith; he was ambassador at the Courts of Venice (1841-1848) and at London (1860) (1785-1870).

FLAMBARD, RANULPH, a Norman who came over with the Conqueror to England and became chaplain to William Rufus, whom he abetted and pandered to in his vices, in return for which, and a heavy sum he paid, he was in 1099 made bishop of Durham; founder of Christchurch College, Oxford; d. 1128.

FLAMBOYANT, the name given, from the flame-like windings of its tracery, to a florid style of architecture in vogue in France during the 15th and 16th centuries.

FLAMENS, priests elected in Rome by the people and, consecrated by the chief pontiff to the service of a particular god, such as Jupiter, Mars, &c.

FLAMINIUS, CAIUS, a Roman tribune and consul, who constructed the Flaminian Way; perished at Lake Trasimene, where he was defeated by Hannibal in the Second Punic War, 217 B.C.

FLAMINIUS, TITUS QUINTUS, a Roman consul, who defeated Philip of Macedon and proclaimed the freedom of Greece; it was his close neighbourhood to Hannibal that induced the latter to take poison rather than fall into his hands (230-174 B.C.).

FLAMSTEED, JOHN, the first astronomer-royal of England, born near Derby; his devotion to astronomy gained him the favour of Sir Jonas Moore, who was the means of getting him the appointment of astronomer-royal in 1675; from the Observatory of Greenwich, specially built for his use, he catalogued the fixed stars and supplied Newton with useful information bearing on his lunar theory; in 1675 he took holy orders, and was presented to the living of Burrow in Surrey, which he held till his death (1646-1719).

FLANDERS, the land of the Flemings, borders upon the North Sea; formerly extended from the Scheldt to the Somme, and included, besides the present Belgian provinces of East and West Flanders, part of Zealand, and also of Artois, in France; the ancient county dates from 862, in which year Charles the Bold of France, as suzerain, raised it to the status of a sovereign county, and bestowed it upon his son Baldwin I.; it has successively belonged to Spain and Austria, and in Louis XIV.'s reign a portion of it was ceded to France, now known as French Flanders, while Zealand passed into the hands of the Dutch; the remainder was in 1714 made the Austrian Netherlands, and in 1831 was incorporated with the new kingdom of Belgium (q.v.). From 1914 to 1918 it was the scene of the most severe fighting and the heaviest British losses of the Great War.

FLANDRIN, HIPPOLYTE, a French painter, born in Lyons; was a pupil of Ingres; represented the religious movement in art in the 19th century (1805-1864).

FLASH POINT, term applied to petrol, &c., to denote the lowest temperature at which the vapour will ignite.

FLAUBERT, GUSTAVE, a realistic romancer, born in Rouen; author of "Madame Bovary," a study of provincial life, which became the subject of a prosecution, and "Salammbô," wonderful for its vigour and skill in description; he indulged in repulsive subjects (1821-1880).

FLAVEL, JOHN, an English Nonconformist divine of spiritualising tendencies, whose sermons were much read by pious people of his class (1630-1691).

FLAVIA GENS, a famous Roman clan which produced the Emperors Vespasian, Titus, and Domitian.

FLAXMAN, JOHN, an eminent sculptor, born in York; was brought up in London, where his father carried on business as a moulder of plaster figures; his love of drawing and modelling soon marked him out as an artist, and helped by friends he devoted himself to art; exhibited at the age of 12, and won the silver medal of the Royal Academy at 14; for some years he supplied the Wedgwoods with designs for their famous pottery, and in 1787 he went to Rome, which for seven years became his home; in 1810 became professor of Sculpture to the Royal Academy; besides many fine statues of eminent men and much exquisite work in bas-reliefs, he executed a series of noble designs illustrating Homer, Dante, and Æschylus; he was a Swedenborgian by religious creed (1755-1826).

FLECHER, a famous French pulpit orator, bishop of Nîmes; his funeral orations compare with Bossuet's (1632-1710).

FLECKER, JAMES ELROY, British poet. A member of the Consular service, he used eastern life as a background for poems and a poetic play "Hassan," for which Delius composed incidental music (1884-1915).

FLEET MARRIAGES, clandestine marriages, suppressed in 1754, performed without licence by the chaplains of Fleet Prison, London.)

FLEET PRISON, a celebrated London jail in Farlington Street; was a debtor's prison as far back as the 12th century. It was demolished in 1842, and on its site there now stands the Congregational Memorial Hall.

FLEETWOOD, CHARLES, a Cromwellian officer; fought as lieutenant-general against the king at Worcester, and acted as lord-deputy in Ireland; on the death of Cromwell advised the abdication of Richard; d. 1692.

FLEGEL, EDUARD ROBERT, African explorer, born in Wilna, of German descent; made three journeys from Europe to explore the Niger territory, in which he made important discoveries; was suddenly stricken down in the last expedition (1855-1886).

FLEISCHER, HEINRICH LEBERRECHT, Orientalist, born in Schandau, Saxony; after a university training at Leipzig he undertook a catalogue of the Oriental MSS. in the royal library at Dresden, and in 1836 became professor of Oriental Languages at Leipzig; did important work as a critical editor of Oriental books and MSS. (1801-1888).

FLEMING, ARCHIBALD, Scottish divine. Became Minister of St. Columba's (Church of Scotland), London, in 1902. He achieved considerable reputation as a preacher (1863-).

FLEMING, JOHN AMBROSE, physicist, professor at London University, famous for his researches in electrical engineering, particularly in connection with wireless telegraphy and telephony; inventor of the thermionic valve (1849-).

FLEMING, PAUL, a celebrated German poet, born in Hartenstein, Vogtland; received a medical training at Leipzig, and was engaged in embassies in Russia and Persia; settled in Hamburg in 1639, but died the following year; as a lyricist he stood in the front rank of German poets (1600-1640).

FLEMISH SCHOOL, a school of painting established in the 15th century, to which Reubens, Vandyck, and Teniers belonged.

FLESHLY SCHOOL, a name given by Robert Buchanan to a realistic school of poets, to which Rossetti, William Morris, and Swinburne belong.

FLESSELLES, the last provost of the merchants of the Hôtel de Ville, Paris; "shot by an unknown hand at the turn of a street" after the fall of the Bastille (1721-1789).

FLETCHER, ANDREW, of Saltoun, a Scottish patriot and politician; after travelling on the Continent for four years he entered the Scottish Parliament, but got into trouble through his opposition to James, Duke of York, the Royal Commissioner in Scotland, and fled to Holland; his estates were confiscated, and for the next seven years he was a political refugee; he took part in the Rye House Plot and in Monmouth's invasion; his estates were restored in 1688, and he again sat in the Scottish Parliament; he was an active promoter of the abortive Darien Scheme, and a strong opponent of the Union of 1707 (1653-1710).

FLETCHER, GILES, an English poet, born in London; was the unappreciated rector of Alderton, in Suffolk, and author of a fervid and imaginative poem, "Christ's Victory and Triumph," which won the admiration of Milton (1584-1623).

FLETCHER, JOHN, English dramatist, the son of a bishop of London; was left an orphan and in poverty; collaborated with Beaumont (q.v.) in the production of the plays published under their joint names, and also with Massinger and Jonson (q.v.); died of the plague (1579-1625).

FLETCHER, PHINEAS, poet, brother of Giles Fletcher (q.v.); was rector of Hilgay, Norfolk; celebrated for his poem the "Purple Island, or the Isle of Man," an ingenious allegory descriptive of the human body—(i.e. the Purple Island—and its vices and virtues (1622-1650).

FLEURANT, MONSIEUR, an apothecary, a character in Molière's "Malcade Imaginaire."

FLEUR-DE-LIS (i.e. lily-flower), a badge of ultimately three golden fleurs-de-lis on a blue field, borne from the days of Clovis on their arms by the kings of France.

FLEURY, ANDRÉ HERCULE DE, CARDINAL, French statesman, born in Lodève, in Languedoc; studied philosophy in Paris; became a doctor of the Sorbonne and almoner to the Queen and King Louis XIV., who subsequently made him bishop of Fréjus and tutor to his son Louis; in 1726 he was chosen Prime Minister by Louis XV., and created a cardinal; he carried through a successful war with Germany, which resulted in the acquisition of Lorraine by France, but, although honest and cautious, he cannot be styled a great statesman (1653-1743).

FLEURY, CLAUDE, ABBÉ, an ecclesiastical historian, born in Paris; was at the outset of his career a successful advocate, but afterwards entered the Church; as tutor he educated various princes, including an illegitimate son of Louis XIV., who in reward appointed him to the priory of Argenteuil; was chosen confessor to the young Louis XV., and in 1696 was elected to the Academy; his chief work is his great "Ecclesiastical History" in 20 vols., on which he laboured for 30 years, and the learning, ability, and impartiality of which procured for him the esteem of all parties (1640-1723).

FLINDERS, MATTHEW, a naval officer, born in Lincolnshire; explored the coast of Australia with George Bass, and charted the Gulf of Carpentaria; experienced shipwreck and imprisonment by the French in Mauritius; wrote a graphic account of his voyage to Australia (1774-1814).

FLINT, (1) a maritime county of North Wales, between Lancashire and Denbigh, of which a detached portion lies to the N. of Shropshire; low stretches of sand form its foreshore, but inland it is hilly, with here and there a picturesque and fertile valley in which dairy-farming is extensively carried on; (2) a seaport on the estuary of the Dee, 13 m. NW. of Chester; has ruins of a castle of Edward I.'s time, with interesting historical associations; in the neighbourhood are copper-works and lead and coal mines.

FLINT, ROBERT, a theologian, born in Dumfriesshire; professor of Divinity in Edinburgh University (1876-1908); an eminent scholar, a vigorous thinker, and a man of broad sympathies, who took a deep interest in all the vital questions of the time, and contributed to the solution of them; wrote on Theism, the Philosophy of History, and Socialism (1898-1910).

FLINT IMPLEMENTS. See PALEOLITHIC and NEOLITHIC MAN.

FLOATING ISLANDS, are sometimes formed of masses of driftwood on which debris, vegetation, &c., gradually form a soil, but are more commonly portions of river banks detached by the force of the current when swollen and drifted out, sometimes as much as 100 m., to sea, carrying with them plants, reptiles, and larger animals, and thus contributing to the distribution to distant shores of animal and vegetable life; they are to be met with off the mouths of the larger American, Asian, and African rivers, and sometimes in inland seas and lakes; Derwent Lake, in England, has a notable one, which sinks and rises periodically; they are also made artificially in districts subject to floods as asylums of refuge.

FLODDEN, BATTLE OF, fought on Flodden Hill, a low spur of the Cheviots, 6 m. S. of Coldstream, between James IV. of Scotland and the English under the Earl of Surrey on September 9, 1513; it resulted in the crushing defeat of the Scots, who lost their king and the flower of their nobility, an event celebrated in Jean Elliot's "Flowers of the Forest"; a spirited account of the battle is given in the sixth canto of Scott's "Marmion".

FLOOD, HENRY, an Irish Nationalist, trained at Dublin and Oxford Universities; entering the Irish Parliament, he, by his fervid oratory, soon won a place in the front rank of Irish politicians; in 1769 he was put on trial for killing an opponent in a duel, but was acquitted; from 1775 to 1781 he was Vice-Treasurer of Ireland; to Grattan's Irish Bill of Rights he offered bitter opposition, holding it to be an altogether inadequate measure; in 1783 he was returned to the English House of Commons, but failed to make his mark (1732-1791).

FLORA, goddess of flowers and gardens and the spring, an early Roman divinity; had in the time of Numa a flamen (q.v.) to herself.

FLORENCE, a famous Italian city, situated 50 m. from the sea; it lies in the valley of the Arno, and is built on both sides of the river, but chiefly on the N.; the outlying suburbs are singularly beautiful, and are surrounded by finely wooded hills, bright with gay villas and charming gardens; the old city itself is characterised by a sombre grandeur, and is full of fine buildings of historic and artistic interest; chief amongst these is the cathedral, or Duomo, begun in 1298, with its grand dome and campanile (293 ft.), by Giotto. It is the city of Dante, Petrarch, Michael Angelo, Leonardo da Vinci, Boccaccio, Machiavelli, Galileo, and many more of Italy's great men, and has a history of exceptional interest; it has many fine art galleries; is an educational centre, and carries on a trade in straw-plaiting and silk.

FLORIAN, JEAN PIERRE DE, a French novelist and writer of fables; was the friend of Voltaire, from whom he received his first literary impulse; was the author of several romances, plays, &c., but his finest work is found in his Fables, in which department of literature he ranks next La Fontaine (1755-1794).

FLORIDA, "Land of Flowers," the most southern of the American States, forms a bold peninsula on the E. side of the Gulf of Mexico, and has on its eastern shore the Atlantic; has a coastline of 1150 m.; the chief physical feature is the amount of water surface, made up of 19 navigable rivers, and lakes and ponds to the number of 1200, besides swamps and marshes; the climate is, however, equable, and for the most part healthy; fruit-growing is largely engaged in; the timber trade flourishes, also the phosphate industry, and cotton and the sugar-cane are extensively cultivated; a successful business in cigar-making has also of recent years sprung up, and there are valuable fisheries along the coast; Florida was admitted into the Union in 1845; the capital is Tallahassee.

FLORIDA KEYS, a chain of small islands and reefs off the southern extremity of Florida, extending for a distance of about 230 m. The islets, of which Key West (a summer resort) and Key Largo are the chief, were once much used by the buccaners.

FLORIO, JOHN, the translator of Montaigne, born in London, of Italian parents; was a tutor of foreign languages for some years at Oxford, and in 1581 became a member of Magdalen College and teacher of French and Italian; published two works of a miscellaneous character, called "First Fruits" and "Second Fruits," and an English-Italian dictionary called a "World of Words," but his fame rests on his translation of Montaigne, which Shakespeare used so freely (1553-1625).

FLORUS, a Latin historian, contemporary of Trajan. FLOWER, SIR WILLIAM HENRY, British naturalist, director of the Natural History Museum, South Kensington (1831-1899).

FLOWERS KINGDOM, THE, China; strictly speaking, the Chinese name whence this appellation is derived means "the flower of kingdoms."

FLUDD, ROBERT, physician and theosophist, born in Milgate, Kent; studied at Oxford, and travelled on the Continent, where he came under the influence of Paracelsus's writings; settled in London as a doctor, and published a work embodying a vague theosophy (1574-1637).

FLUOR SPAR, a mineral composed of fluoride of lime, used as a flux and for the production of hydro-fluoric acid, which is used for etching glass.

FLUORESCENCE, the property of certain substances of emitting radiation when illuminated: the emitted light is as a rule of different wave-length (i.e. colour) and emission only takes place whilst the substance is illuminated.

FLUORINE, a gaseous element of the halogen family, resembling chlorine; its action is more violent than the latter, and it is more difficult to isolate.

FLUSHING, a Dutch seaport, strongly fortified, on the island of Walcheren, at the mouth of the western Scheldt; has an active shipping trade, docks, arsenals, &c.

FLUXIONS, a method, invented by Sir Isaac Newton, of determining the rate of increase or decrease of a quantity or magnitude whose value depends on that of another which itself varies in value at a uniform and given rate. The method of fluxions led to the invention of the calculus. See CALCULUS DIFFERENTIAL AND INTEGRAL.

FLYING BOAT, a type of aircraft designed for landing on water, in which the body itself serves as a boat and is not supported by floats, as in the case of a seaplane.

FLYING DUTCHMAN, a Dutch captain, fated for his sins to scour the sea and never reach port, who appeared from time to time to sea-captains as on a black spectral ship, and from the very terror he inspired made them change their course; there are many versions of this fable in the German mythology. In Wagner's opera of the name the captain is given as Vanderdecken.

FO, the name in China for Buddha.

FOCH, FERDINAND, French general. His first active service was in 1914, after he had made an international name as a strategist. At first he served under Joffre, being in command of the armies of the North, and in 1916, when Nivelle was given Joffre's command, Foch was sent on various missions. In March, 1918, when the final German offensive threatened to break through the allied lines he became supreme general of both the French and British troops, stemmed the attack, and brought the war to a successful end before the close of the year (1851-1929).

FO-HI, or FUH-HI, the mythical founder of the Chinese dynasty, is said to have introduced cattle-rearing, instituted marriage, and invented letters.

FOHN, a warm, dry wind which sweeps down the Alpine valleys from the mountains; causes are on record where it has melted two feet of snow in twelve hours.

FOIX, GASTON DE, illustrious French captain, nephew of Louis XII., was from his daring exploits called the Thunderbolt of Italy; he beat the Swiss, routed the Papal troops, captured Brescia from the Venetians, and gained the battle of Ravenna against the Spaniards, but was slain when pursuing the fugitives (1489-1512).

FOIX, GASTON III. DE, French captain, surnamed Phœbus on account of his beauty and handsome presence; distinguished in the wars against the English and in the Jacquerie revolt, in which he rescued the dauphin at Meaux (1391-1391).

FOKKIER, A. E. G., Dutch air-engineer. He went to Germany at the age of 20 and was a pioneer of aviation there, the German government taking an interest in his work and buying the machine named after him (1890-).

FOLEY, JOHN HENRY, an eminent sculptor, born in Dublin; his first success was achieved in a series of classical figures, including some Shakespearean subjects; statues of Hampden, Burke, J. S. Mill, Goldsmith, &c., brought him further fame, and he was commissioned by Queen Victoria to execute the figure of Prince Albert in the Albert Memorial; his vigour and genius were further revealed in the noble equestrian statues of Hardinge and Outram in India (1818-1874).

FOLKESTONE, a seaport and watering-place on the coast of Kent, 7 m. SW. of Dover; has a fine harbour and esplanade; is much engaged in the herring and mackerel fisheries, and is steam-packet station for Boulogne; a fine railway viaduct spans the valley in which the old town lies.

FOLKMOOT, the name for the popular assembly of the Anglo-Saxon people for political, judicial, and other administrative functions; it was attended by the freemen from each shire, and ranked below the Witenagemote (q.v.).

FONTAINEBLEAU, a town on the left bank of the Seine, 36 m. SE. of Paris, and famous for a château or palace of the kings of France, and the forest that surrounds it. This château, founded towards the end of the 10th century, was enlarged and embellished by successive kings, beginning with Francis I., and was the place where Napoleon signed his abdication in 1814.

FONTANES, LOUIS, MARQUE DE, poet and man of letters, born in Niort, Poitou; came to Paris and achieved some celebrity by his poems and translations from Pope and Gray; changing from the Royalist side, he, during the Revolution, edited two journals in the Republican interest, and held the post of professor of Literature at the College of the Four Nations; was for some time a refugee in England, but afterwards returned and became a zealous supporter of Napoleon, on the downfall of whom he embraced the Bourbon cause and was raised to the peerage (1757-1821).

FONTENELLE, BERNARD LE BOVIER DE, a miscellaneous French writer, born in Rouen, a nephew of Cornéille, whose life he wrote; was destined for the bar, but under his uncle's patronage embarked on a literary career in Paris; he vehemently upheld the moderns in the famous literary quarrel of Moderns versus Ancients, and brought upon himself the satirical attacks of Boileau and Racine; became Secretary and then President of the Académie des Sciences; died in his hundredth year; his vigorous and versatile nature found vent in a wide variety of writings—literary, scientific, and historical; author of "Dialogues of the Dead," in imitation of Lucian, and "Conversations on the Plurality of Worlds"; is credited with the saying, "A man may have his hand full of truth, and yet only care to open his little finger," and this other, "No man was ever written down but by himself" (1657-1757).

FONTENOY, a village in Belgium, 5 m. SW. of Tournay, where Marshal Saxe beat the English, Dutch, and Austrians under the Duke of Cumberland in 1745.

FOOCHOW, a Chinese city, the capital of the province of Fu-chien, situated on the river Min, 125 m. NE. of Amoy. Massive walls 30 ft. high enclose the original town, but the extensive suburbs reach down to the river, which is bridged, and is a convenient waterway for trading with the interior; it was made a free port in 1942, and is the centre of a busy trade in tea, timber, and textiles.

FOOD CONTROL, started in Great Britain in 1917 as a war measure, with the establishment of a Food Ministry. Rationing cards for meat, sugar, butter, and tea were issued to the public, and maximum prices were fixed by law to check profiteering.

FOOLS, FEAST OF, a festival of wild mirth in the Middle Ages, held on January 1, in which the Ass of Scripture celebrity played a chief part, and in which many of the rites and ceremonies of the Church were travestied.

FOOT AND MOUTH DISEASE, a disease to which sheep and cattle are liable, and which is so infectious that stringent orders are made prohibiting the movement of animals in areas where it has broken out, and ordering the destruction of the infected.

FOOTBALL ASSOCIATION, the leading winter game of England, in which the feet only and not the hands are allowed to be used, first took modern shape in the schools towards the end of the 18th century, but was not played according to definite rules until 1863, in which year the Football Association came into being. In 1871 the F.A. Cup competition was started, and largely was confined to old public school clubs. The following year international matches were inaugurated. Payment of professionals was not fully sanctioned till 1886, and the question still agitated the football world and led in 1907 to the formation of the Amateur F.A., now again affiliated to the parent body. The Football League was formed, in 1888, and ever since the game has grown steadily in popularity, crowds of over 100,000 having watched the Cup Final. On the Continent the game has lately been taken up with great enthusiasm.

FOOTBALL, RUGBY, the handling code of the game, which started at Rugby School in 1823, when a boy named William Webb Ellis took the ball in his hands and ran with it down the field, an innovation that was recognised in 1841. Clubs playing under the new rules were started at the universities and among old public school boys, and the Rugby Union was formed, international matches beginning in the 'seventies. No professionalism is allowed by the Rugby Union, a rule that led early this century to the formation of the Northern Union, rechristened the Rugby League.

FOOT-POUND, the name given in mechanics to the work required to raise 1 lb. through 1 foot, the unit of work.

FOOTE, SAMUEL, a celebrated English actor and playwright, born in Truro, Cornwall, of a good family; was educated at Oxford, and studied law, but ruined himself by gaming, and took to the stage; he became the successful lessee of Haymarket Theatre in 1747, where, by his inimitable powers of mimicry and clever comedies, he firmly established himself in popular favour (1720-1777).

FORAMINIFERA, one of the most primitive forms of animal life, consisting of cells of protoplasm surrounded by a skeleton of limy material; they live in the ocean and their remains settle on the bottom as an ooze, e.g. globigerina ooze; some limestones are built up of their remains.

FORBES, ARCHIBALD, a noted war-correspondent, born in Morayshire; was educated at Aberdeen University; served in a cavalry regiment, acted as war-correspondent for the Daily News during the Franco-German war, and later went through the Serbian War, North-West India Frontier campaigns, and Zulu War (1839-1900).

FORBES, DUNCAN, of Culloden, a distinguished lawyer and patriotic politician, born in Buncrevy; was trained at Edinburgh and Leyden, and called to the Scottish bar in 1769; took an active part in putting down the rebellion of 1715, and in 1722 entered Parliament. Three years later he was appointed Lord Advocate and Lord President of the Court of Session; succeeded his brother in the estates of Culloden and Buncrevy; during the 1745 rebellion he was active in the Hanoverian interest, and did much to quell the uprising; Forbes was a devoted Scot, and unweariedly strove to allay the Jacobite discontent and to establish the country in peace, and used his great influence and wealth to further these ends, services which, in the end, impoverished him, and he received little or no recognition at the hands of the British Government (1685-1747).

FORBES, EDWARD, a noted naturalist, born in Douglas, in the Isle of Man; studied medicine at Edinburgh; in 1841 he accompanied the Beacon as naturalist, and returning in 1843 was elected to the chair of Botany in King's College, London; various geological appointments followed, and in 1852 he became President of the Geological Society, and two years later received the chair of Natural History in Edinburgh; Forbes was a prolific author, and his writings cover the whole field of natural science, to every section of which he made contributions of great value, especially in zoology, botany, and geology (1815-1856).

FORBES, JAMES DAVID, physicist, born in Edinburgh, the grandson of Sir William Forbes (q.v.); was called to the bar in 1830; physical science, however, was his ruling passion, and in 1833 he became professor of Natural Philosophy in Edinburgh University, from which he was called in 1859 to the Principalship of the United College, St. Andrews, in which he succeeded Sir David Brewster, whom he had defeated in obtaining the Edinburgh chair; he made some valuable contributions to natural science, including discoveries in the polarisation of heat and in regard to the motion of glaciers, to investigate which he travelled in Norway and in the Alps (1809-1868).

FORBES, SIR JOHN, physician, born in Cattlebrac, Banffshire; joined the navy as assistant-surgeon in 1807, and became M.D. of Edinburgh ten years later; practised at Penzance and Chichester, but finally settled at London in 1840, where he became physician to Queen Victoria; was for twelve years editor of the British and Foreign Medical Review, which he founded in 1836, and was joint-author of the "Cyclopaedia of Practical Medicine"; first to use the stethoscope in England (1787-1861).

FORBES, SIR WILLIAM, an eminent banker, son of a Scottish advocate and baronet, born in Edinburgh; became partner in the banking firm of Messrs. John Coutts & Co.; two years later a new company was formed, of which he rose to be manager, and which in 1830 became the Union Bank of Scotland; he was author of a Life of his friend Beattie, the Scottish poet, and of "Memoirs of a Banking-House" (1739-1806).

FORBES-ROBERTSON, SIR JOHNSTON, British actor. Trained as a lawyer, he turned his attention to the stage, joined the Bancroft company, and proving a success started managing on his own account. He appeared in several Shakespearean rôles and retired in 1913 (1853-).

FORD, EDWARD ONSLOW, sculptor; born in London; executed numerous statues and busts, of which examples are to be seen in the Tate Gallery, London (1852-1901).

FORD, HENRY, American motor manufacturer. He produced his first car in 1892, and in 1903 organised a company of his own at Detroit to exploit a cheap car, attaining a production of a million cars a year by 1920. By that time he was a millionaire, and a philanthropist. An ardent pacifist, he chartered a liner in 1915 to sail to Europe in an effort to stop the Great War (1863-).

FORD, JOHN, dramatist, born in Islington, North Devon; studied at Oxford, and entered the Middle Temple in 1602, but was never called to the bar; in 1606 appeared his first poetic work, "Fame's Memorial," an elegy on the death of the Earl of Devonshire, and for the next 33 years he was a prolific writer of plays, chiefly tragedies, collaborating in some cases with Dekker and Webster; "The Broken Heart" was greatly admired by Charles Lamb, and "Perkin Warbeck" is considered by Stopford Brooke the best historical drama after Shakespeare; there is little of the lighter graces about his work, and he is prone to go beyond the bounds of nature in his treatment of the tragic, but his grip on the greater human passions, and his power of moving presentment, are undoubted (1586-1639).

FORDUN, JOHN OF, a Scottish chronicler; lived in the 14th century; was a canon of Aberdeen Cathedral, and wrote a chronicle of Scottish history, bringing the story up to 1158; materials for further volumes, which he left, were utilised by Walter Bower, an abbot of Inchcolm, in the Forth, who extended the account to 1437, but often tampered with Fordun's narrative; the work is the chief authority in Scottish history up to the time of which it treats.

FORELAND, NORTH AND SOUTH, two rocky promontories on the E. coast of Kent, which lie 16 m. apart; have the Downs and Goodwin Sands between them; they are well marked with light-houses.

FORENSIC MEDICINE, or MEDICAL JURISPRUDENCE, a branch of legal science in which the principles of medicine are applied to the purposes of the law, and originating out of the frequency with which medical points arise in the administration of justice, e.g. in murder trials and in cases where insanity is involved.

FOREST LAWS, laws enacted in ancient times for the purpose of guarding the royal forest lands as hunting preserves, which were up to the time of Henry III. of excessive harshness, death being a not infrequent penalty for any infringement. The privileges of forest (at one time the sole prerogative of the sovereign, but by him capable of being vested in another), which might include the right to the wild animals in the forests lying in the domains of a private estate, have now fallen into abeyance, as also the special Forest Courts, while many of the royal forests, which in Henry VIII.'s time numbered 69, have been disafforested.

FORFAR, the county town of Forfarshire, 14 m. N.E. of Dundee; manufactures linen; was once an important royal residence, and was made a royal burgh by David I.

FORFARSHIRE or ANGUS, a maritime county on the E. side of Scotland, lying N. of the Firth of Tay; Strathmore and the Carse of Gowrie are fertile valleys, where agriculture and cattle-rearing flourish, and which, with the Braes of Angus in the N. and the Sidlaw Hills to the S., make up a finely diversified county; jute and linen are the most important articles of manufacture, of which Dundee and Arbroath are centres; Forfarshire is a county particularly rich in antiquities—Roman remains, castles, priories, &c.

FORMALIN, a strong solution of formaldehyde in water containing methyl alcohol, used as an antiseptic and disinfectant.

FORMIC ACID, a colourless liquid with a pungent odour, first obtained by the distillation of red ants; it has a stinging effect upon the skin; formic acid is the simplest of the series of organic fatty acids.

FORMOSA, a large island off the coast of China, from which it is separated by the Fukien Channel, 90 m. broad. Formosa was ceded to Japan by the Chinese in 1895; it is an island of much natural beauty, and is traversed N. and S. by a fine range of hills; is famed for its bamboos, and exports coal, rice, tea, &c. Name also of a large territory in the Argentine bordering on Paraguay, very sparsely settled.

FORNARINA, a Roman lady of great beauty, a friend of Raphael, who frequently posed as a model to him.

FORRES, a royal burgh in Morayshire, on the Firth, 2 m. from the sea and 10 m. SW. of Elgin by railway; has ruins of a castle—once a royal residence—and a famous "Stan'in Stane," Sueno's Stone, 25 ft. high, placed in the year 900.

FORREST, EDWIN, American actor, born in Philadelphia; went on the stage at 14, and from the provinces made his way to New York, where his rendering of Othello at the age of 20 raised him to the front rank among actors; he made three tours in England, but during his last in 1846 he entirely lost the popular favour through his conduct in an embittered quarrel with Macready; after his final appearance on the stage in 1871 he continued for a short while to give Shakespearean readings; he was a tragedian of the highest order, and in his profession amassed a large fortune (1806-1872).

FORREST, JOHN, LORD, Australian statesman and explorer; born at Bunbury, W.A.; led Leichhardt relief expedition and made other trips into the interior; became premier of West Australia, 1890; minister for Home Affairs in Commonwealth Government, 1903-1904; raised to the peerage. 1918 (1847-1918)

FORS CLAVIGERA, the name given by Ruskin to a series of letters to workmen, written during the seventies of the last century, and employed by him to designate three great powers which go to fashion human destiny, viz., Force, wearing, as it were, (clava) the club of Hercules; Fortitude, wearing, as it were, (clavis) the key of Ulysses; and Fortune, wearing, as it were, (clavus) the nail of Lycurgus; that is to say, Faculty waiting on the right moment, and then striking in. See Shakespeare's "Time and tide in the affairs of men," &c., the "flood" in which is the "Third Form." The letters are represented as written at the dictation of the Third Fors, or, as it seems to the author, the right moment, or the occurrence of it.

FÖRSTER, ERNST, an art critic, brother of succeeding, author of a number of elaborate and important works bearing on the history of art in Germany and Italy; was the son-in-law of Jean Paul, whose works he edited, and to whose biography he made contributions of great value (1800-1886).

FÖRSTER, FRIEDRICH CHRISTOPH, German poet and historian; his poetic gifts were first called into exercise during the war of liberation, in which he served as a volunteer, and the series of spirited war-songs he then wrote procured him a widespread fame; afterwards he lived in Berlin, teaching in the school of artillery and subsequently becoming custodian of the Royal Art Museum; besides poems he wrote several historical and biographical works (1791-1868).

FÖRSTER, JOHANN GEORGE ADAM, naturalist, son of the succeeding; accompanied his father in the voyage with Cook, and contributed to the literature antecedent the expedition; subsequently became professor of Natural History at Cassel and at Wilna, and eventually librarian to the Elector of Mayence in 1788; his works are published in 9 vols. (1764-1794).

FÖRSTER, JOHANN REINHOLD, a German naturalist and traveller, born in Prussia; accompanied Captain Cook as a naturalist on his second expedition to the South Seas, in connection with which he wrote a volume of observations; died professor of Natural History and Mineralogy at Halle (1720-1798).

FÖRSTER, JOHN, a noted English writer, born in Newcastle; was educated for the bar, but took to journalism, and soon made his mark as a political writer in the Examiner; he subsequently edited the Foreign Quarterly Review, the Daily News (succeeding Dickens), and the Examiner (1847-1856); he was the author of several historical sketches, but his best-known works are the admirable biographies of Goldsmith, Landor, and Dickens (1812-1876).

FÖRSTER, WILLIAM EDWARD, statesman, born in Bradpole, Dorset, son of a Quaker; entered upon a commercial career in a worsted manufactory at Bradford, but from the first politics engaged his paramount attention, and in 1861 he became member of Parliament for Bradford; became in succession Under-Secretary for the Colonies, Vice-President of the Council of Education, and a Privy Councillor; his chief legislative measure was the Elementary Education Bill of 1870, which, as a member of Gladstone's Cabinet, he carried through Parliament, two years after which the Ballot Act was introduced by him; as Irish Secretary in 1880 he made an earnest effort to grapple with the Irish problem, but, losing the support of his colleagues over the imprisonment of Parnell and other Land League leaders, he resigned; he was married to Jane, eldest daughter of Dr. Arnold of Rugby (1818-1886).

FORT AUGUSTUS, a small village on the Caledonian Canal, 33 m. SW. of Inverness; the fort, built in 1716 and enlarged in 1730, was utilised as a barrack during the disturbances in the Highlands, but after being dismantled and again garrisoned down to 1857, it finally, in 1876, passed into the hands of the Benedictines (q.v.), who have converted it into an abbey and college.

FORT GARRY, the old Hudson Bay trading post which was the site of the city of Winnipeg.

FORT GEORGE, a fortress on the Moray Firth, 12 m. NE. of Inverness; was built in 1748, and is now the headquarters of the Seaforth Highlanders.

FORT SUMTER, an island fort in Charleston Harbour, S. Carolina, at which the first shot was fired in the American Civil War, in April, 1861.

FORT WILLIAM, a small police-burgh in Inverness-shire, 65 m. SW. of Inverness, near the southern end of the Caledonian Canal; the railway station stands on the site of the old fort, which in 1655 was built by Monk; a meteorological observatory was erected here in 1880.

FORTESCUE, SIR JOHN, an eminent English lawyer, born in Somersetshire; flourished in the 16th century; was called to the bar at Lincoln's Inn, and in 1442 became Lord Chief Justice of the Court of King's Bench; he was a staunch Lancastrian during the Wars of the Roses, and shared the exile of Queen Margaret and her son Edward, for whom he wrote in dialogue form his famous "De Laudibus Legum," a treatise still read; the fate of the Lancastrian cause was sealed on the field of Tewkesbury, and he himself was taken prisoner; he died at the advanced age of 90 (circa 1385-1475).

FORTH, a river of Scotland, formed by the junction of Duchray Water and the Avonduh, streams which rise one on Ben Lomond and the other on Ben Venue, and which, after 14 and 9 m., unite at Abertoyle; the river thence flows with many windings, called Links, through some of the fairest country of the eastern lowlands to Alloa (514 m.), where begins the Firth, which stretches 51 m. to the German Ocean, and which at Queensferry is spanned by a massive railway bridge known as the Forth Bridge (1882-1890).

FORTUNA, a Roman divinity, the goddess of luck, and especially good luck, to whom Servius Tullius, in acknowledgment of her favour to him, erected several temples in Rome; is represented in art as standing poised on a globe or a wheel, to express her inconstancy.

FORTUNATUS, a character in a popular German legend, who possessed a purse, out of which he was able to provide himself with money as often as he needed it, and a cap, by wearing which, and wishing to be anywhere, he was straightway taken there; these, by his own free election and choice, he conceded to him by the Upper Powers, and they proved a curse to him rather than a blessing, his finding out when too late that "the god Wish is not the true God."

FORTY THIEVES, a fraternity in the "Arabian Nights" who inhabited a secret den in a forest, the gate of which would open only to the magic word "Sesame."

FORUM, a public place in Rome and Roman cities where the courts of justice were held and popular assemblies met for civic business.

FOSCARI, FRANCESCO, a Doge of Venice from 1423 to his death; his reign was distinguished by the glories of conquest, but his life was embittered by the misfortunes of his sons, and the judicial tortures inflicted on one of them which he was compelled to witness; he died at the age of 87, broken-hearted; his story is the theme of one of Byron's tragedies (1370-1457).

FOSCOLO, UGO, an Italian patriot and author, born in Zante; his literary career began in Venice with the successful performance of his tragedy "Trieste," but on the Austrian occupation of the town he joined the French army; disappointed in the hope that France would unite with and free Italy, he returned to literary work in Milan, and in 1809 was called to the chair of Eloquence in Pavia; but the conquering Austrians again forced him to become a refugee, first in Switzerland and finally in England, where he died; he was the author of various essays, poems, &c., and of a translation of Sterne's "Sentimental Journey" (1778-1827).

FOSBWAY, THE, one of the great Roman military roads in Britain; its course has been traced from Rochester, in Somerset, through Lincoln to Northumberland.

FOSTER, MYLES BIRKET, a celebrated water-colour artist, born in North Shields; his earliest work was done in wood-engraving under the direction of Landells, and many of his sketches appeared in the Illustrated London News; following this he executed, in collaboration with John Gilbert, a series of illustrations for the works of Goldsmith, Cowper,

Scott, and other poets, in which he exhibited a rare skill in rural scenes; in 1861 he was elected a member of the Water-Colour Society (1825-1899).

FOSTER, JOHN, an English essayist, born in Halifax, Yorkshire; was trained for the Baptist ministry, and for 25 years officiated in various congregations, but met with little success; from 1817 he devoted himself solely to literature, and became a contributor to the Eclectic Review, for which he wrote no fewer than 184 articles; his best-known work is an "Essay on the Evils of Popular Ignorance," in which he advocates a system of national education (1770-1843).

FOTHERINGAY, a village in Northamptonshire, on the Nen, 9 m. SW. of Peterborough; the ruined castle there was the scene of the execution of Mary, Queen of Scots, in 1587.

FOUCAULT, JOHN BERNARD, a French physicist, born in Paris; distinguished for his studies in optics and problems connected with light; demonstrated the rate of the rotation of the globe by the oscillation of a pendulum (1819-1868).

FOUCHE, JOSEPH, Duke of Otranto, born in Nantes, a member of the National Convention, who voted for the death of Louis XVI.; became Minister of Police under Napoleon; falling into disfavour, was sent into exile, but recalled to Paris in 1814; advised Napoleon to abdicate at that time and again after Waterloo; served under Louis XVIII. for a period, but was obliged at length to quit France for good; died at Trieste (1754-1820).

FOULA, a high and rocky islet among the Shetlands, 32 in. W. of Lerwick; its sandstone cliffs on the NW. are 1220 ft. in height, and rise sheer from the water; it is sparsely peopled; fishing is the almost sole pursuit.

FOULD, ACHILLE, French statesman, born in Paris; entered political life in 1842; became an authority in finance, served in that capacity under Louis Napoleon (1800-1867).

FOULS, ROBERT AND ANDREW, celebrated printers; were brought up in Glasgow, where Robert, the elder, after practising as a barber, took to printing, and in 1743 became printer to the university; his press was far-famed for the beauty and accuracy of editions of the classics; Andrew was trained for the ministry, but subsequently joined his brother; an academy, started by the brothers in 1753 for engraving, moulding, &c., although a complete success artistically, involved them in expense, and eventually financial ruin; they have been called the "Scottish Elzevirs" (Robert, 1707-1778; Andrew, 1712-1775).

FOULON, a French financier, nicknamed the Ame damnée, familiar demon, of the Parlement de Paris prior to the Revolution; "once, when it was objected to some financial scheme of his, 'What will the people do?' made answer, 'The people may eat grass,'" words which the people never forgot; when attacked by them "he defended himself like a mad lion, but was borne down, trampled, hanged, and mangled;" his head thereafter paraded through the city on a pike and the mouth stuffed with grass (1715-1789).

FOUNDLING HOSPITALS are institutions for the rearing of children who have been deserted by their parents, and exist with varying regulations in most civilised countries; the first foundling hospital was established at Milan in 787, and others arose in Germany, Italy, and France before the 14th century; the Paris foundling hospital is a noted institution of the kind, and offers every encouragement for children to be brought in, and admits legitimate orphans and children pronounced incorrigible criminals by the court; the London foundling hospital founded by Captain Thomas Coram, which supports about 600 children, was moved from Guilford Street, London, to Redhill in 1823.

FOUNTAIN OF YOUTH, the magic fountain of which Sir John Mandeville wrote, as possessing the power to restore the aged to youth, which was believed to be on an island in the Bahamas group; Ponce de Leon, a Spanish adventurer, sailed to Florida in quest of it in the 16th century.

VILLE, ANTOINE QUENTIN, a merchant, born near Artois; member of the Jacobin Club, Attorney-General of the Revolutionary Tribunal, purveyor of the guillotine; was guillotined himself after the fall of Robespierre (1747-1795).

FOURTH ESTATE, the daily press, so called by Edmund Burke, pointing, in the House of Commons, to the reporters' gallery.

FOURTH OF JULY, the anniversary of the declaration of American Independence in 1776.

FWLER, SIR JOHN, civil engineer, born in Sheffield; was actively engaged in the construction of numerous railways (notably the London and Brighton and Metropolitan), and in dock and bridge building; carried through important works in Egypt in 1885, and, with Sir B. Baker, he designed the Forth Bridge, on the completion of which he received a baronetcy (1817-1898).

FOX, CHARLES JAMES, an eminent Whig statesman, third son of Henry Fox, first Lord Holland, born in London; was educated at Eton and Oxford, and at the age of 19 sat in Parliament for Midhurst; under Lord North he held office, but quarrelled with the premier and went over to the Whigs, then led by Rockingham; here he came under the influence of Burke, and with him offered uncompromising opposition to the American War; in the Rockingham ministry which followed he was Foreign Secretary, and subsequently joined North in the short-lived coalition ministry of 1783; during the next 14 years he was the great opponent of Pitt's Government, and his brilliant powers of debate were never more effectively displayed than in his speeches against Warren Hastings and in the debates arising out of the French Revolution, in which he advocated a policy of non-intervention; his sympathy with the French revolutionaries cost him the friendship of Burke during a retirement of five years he wrote his "History of James II."; on Pitt's death in 1806 he again came into office as Foreign Secretary, but died shortly afterwards when about to plead in the House of Commons the cause of slave abolition; Fox stands in the front rank of our parliamentary debaters, and was a man of quick and generous sympathies, but the reckless dissipation of his private life diminished his popular influence, and probably accounts for the fact that he never reached the highest office of State (1749-1806).

FOX, GEORGE, the first of the Quakers, born in Fenny Drayton, Leicestershire; son of a poor weaver, and till his twentieth year plied the trade of a shoemaker; conceived, as he drudged at this task, that he had a call from above to withdraw from the world and give himself up to a higher ministry; stitched for himself one day a suit of leather, and so ensued wandered through the country, rapt in his thoughts and bearing witness to the truth that God had revealed to him; about 1646 began his crusade against the religion of mere formality, and called upon men to trust to the "inner light" alone; his quaint garb won him the title of "the man with the leather breeches," and his mode of speech with his "thous" and "thees" subjected him to general ridicule; but despite these eccentricities he by his earnestness gathered disciples about him who believed what he said and adopted his principles, and in the prosecution of his mission he visited Wales, Scotland, America, and various parts of Germany, not without results; he had no kindly feeling towards Cromwell, with whom he had three interviews; many years of his life were spent in prison, but his teaching drew him a large number of adherents; and Quaker centres were formed in Holland and Germany as well as in this country (1624-1691).

FOX, WILLIAM JOHNSON, religious and political orator, born near Southwold, Suffolk; was trained for the Independent ministry, but seceded to the Unitarians, and subsequently established himself as a preacher of pronounced rationalism at Finsbury; as a supporter of the Anti-Corn Law movement he won celebrity as an impassioned orator, and from 1847 to 1863 represented Oldham in Parliament; he was editor of the Monthly Repository, and a frequent contributor to the Westminster Review, and published various works on political and religious topics (1786-1864).

FOX, JOHN, martyrologist, born in Boston, Lincolnshire; in 1545 he resigned his Fellowship in Magdalen College, Oxford, on account of his espousing the doctrines of the Reformation, and for some years after he acted as a private tutor in noble families; during Queen Mary's reign he sought refuge on the Continent, where he formed acquaintance with Knox and other leading Reformers; he returned to England on the accession of Elizabeth, and was appointed a prebend in Salisbury cathedral, but his Nonconformist leanings precluded his further preferment; his most famous work is his "Book of Martyrs," first published in Latin on the Continent, the English version appearing in 1563 (1516-1587).

FOXTROT, a popular dance of American origin, introduced into England at the beginning of the century; it soon grew so much in favour that it temporarily ousted the waltz.

FOYERS, FALL OF, a fine cascade, having a fall of 165 ft., on the lower portion of the Foyers, a river of Inverness-shire, which enters Loch Ness on the E. side, 10 m. N.E. of Fort Augustus.

FRA DIAVOLO, properly Michele Pezza, or Pozza, chief of a band of Italian brigands, born in Calabria; leader in sundry Italian insurrections; was hanged at Naples for treachery, in spite of remonstrances from England; gave name to an opera by Auber, but only the name (1760-1806).

FRACAS TORO, GIROLAMO, a learned physician and poet, born in Verona; became professor of Dialectics at Padua in his twentieth year; subsequently practised as a physician, but eventually gave himself up to literature (1483-1553).

FRAGONARD, JEAN HONORE, a French artist, born in Grasse; gained the "prix de Rome" in 1752, and afterwards studied in Rome; was a member of the French Academy, and during the Revolution became keeper of the Musée; many of his paintings are in the Louvre, and are characterised by their free and luscious colouring (1732-1806).

FRANC, a silver coin ¹⁸⁷⁰ fine, the monetary unit of France since 1799, weighs 5 grammes and nominally equals about 91.2 in English currency (£1 = 25.2 francs); has been adopted by Belgium and Switzerland, while under other names a similar coin is in use in Spain (peseta), Italy (lira), and Greece (drachma). The economic upheaval following the Great War led to rapid currency inflation, reducing the nominal value of the coinage of most countries, though the old denominations were retained.

FRANCE, the land of the French, a nation standing in the front rank among the powers of Europe. It occupies a geographical position of peculiar advantage in the western portion of it, having a southern foreshore on the Mediterranean and a western and northern seaboard washed by the Atlantic and the English Channel, possessing altogether a coastline, rather undeveloped, however, of upwards of 2000 m., while to the E. it abuts upon Belgium, Germany, Switzerland, and Italy. It is divided into 87 departments, including Corsica. It is mainly composed of lowland and plateau, but has the Cevennes in the S., while the Pyrenées and Alps (with the Voges and Ardennes farther N.) lie on its southern and eastern boundaries. Rivers abound and form, with the splendid railway, canal, and telegraph systems, an unrivalled means of internal communication; but there are singularly few lakes. It enjoys on the whole a fine climate, which favours the vineyards in the centre (the finest in the world), the olive groves in the S., and the wheat and beetroot region in the N. There are also considerable iron deposits. Its manufactures, of which include silk, wine, and woollen goods, are of the best, and in fine artistic work it is without an equal. The colonies are together larger in area than the mother-country, and include Algeria, Madagascar, French India, and French Indo-China. The French are a people of keen intelligence, of bright, impulsive, and vivacious nature; urbane, cultured, and pleasure-loving in the cities, thrifty and industrious in the country; few races have given so rich a bequest to the literature and art of the world. Roman Catholicism is the dominant form of religion, but Protestantism and the Jewish religion are also State supported, as also Mohammedanism in Algeria. Free compulsory education is in vogue. The Government is a Republic, and there are two chambers—a Senate and a Chamber of Deputies. Originally occupied by Celts, the country, then called Gallia, was conquered by the Romans between 58 and 51 B.C., who occupied it till the 4th century, when it was overrun by the Teutons, including the Franks, who became dominant; and about 870 the country, under Charles the Bold, became known as France. The unsettling effects of the great cataclysm of 1789 have been apparent in the series of political changes which swept across the country during the last century; within that time it was thrice a monarchy, thrice an empire, and thrice a republic. Between 1914 and 1918 it was attacked by the Central Allied Powers and was the scene of many battles in the Great War.

FRANCE, ANATOLE, pen name of Jacques Anatole Thibault, French novelist. Son of a Parisian bookseller, he published his first work in 1868, and soon made a name as a writer of satire. A master of language, he holds high place in modern French literature, particularly for short story writing (1844-1920).

FRANCESCA, PIETRO DELLA, an Italian painter, sometimes called Piero Borghese after his native place; did fresco-work in Florence and at Loretto; painted pictures for the Duke of Rimini, notably "The Flagellation"; was a friend of Raphael's father; some of his pictures are in the London National Gallery (1420-1492).

FRANCESCA DA RIMINI, a beautiful Italian lady of the 13th century, whose pathetic love story finds a place in Dante's "Inferno"; she was betrothed by her father, the Lord of Ravenna, to Giovanni di Rimini, but her affections were engaged by Paolo, his brother; the lovers were found together by Giovanni and murdered by him.

FRANCESCO DI PAOLA, or ST. FRANCIS OF PAOLA, founder of the order of the Minims, born in Paola, in Calabria; was trained in a Franciscan convent, but at the age of 19 took up his abode in a cave, where the severe purity and piety of his life attracted to him many disciples; subsequently he founded an ascetic brotherhood, first called the Hermits of St. Francis of Assisi, but afterwards changed to Minim-Hermits of St. Francis of Paola; he eventually lived in France, where convents were built for him and his brotherhood under royal patronage (1416-1507).

FRANCHE-COMTÉ, an ancient province in the E. of France, added to the crown of France in the reign of Louis XIV. at the peace of Nimeguen in 1671.

FRANCHISE, the right to elect members to Parliament. Originally confined to freeholders of land and the clergy, the right was extended under the Reform Bill of 1832. In 1885 votes were given to all males over 21 who were resident ratepayers, lodgers in unfurnished rooms rented at more than £10 a year, and certain classes of servant. Women, peers, and imbeciles were excluded. The Representation of the People Act of 1918 extended the vote to women over 30 and abolished all property qualifications, and in 1928 the franchise was further extended to women over 21.

FRANCIA, DR. JOSÉ GASPAR RODRIGUEZ DA, dictator of Paraguay, born near Asuncion, in Paraguay; graduated as a doctor of theology, but subsequently took to law, in the practice of which profession he was engaged for 30 years, and won a high reputation for ability and undeviating honesty; in the revolutionary uprising which spread throughout Spanish South America, Paraguay played a conspicuous part, and when in 1811 she declared her independence Francia was elected secretary of the first national junta, and two years later one of two consuls; eventually, in 1814, he became dictator, a position he held till his death; he ruled the country with a strong hand and with scrupulous, if somewhat rough, justice, making it part of his policy to allow no intercourse, political or commercial, with other countries; the country flourished under his rule, but fell into disorder after his death; he is the subject of a well-known essay by Carlyle, who finds him a man very much after his own heart (1757-1840).

FRANCIS, ST., OF ASSISI, founder of the Franciscan order, born in Assisi, in Umbria; began life as a soldier, but during a serious illness his thoughts were turned from earth to heaven, and he devoted himself to a life of poverty and self-denial, with the result that his enthusiasm provoked emulation, and some of his neighbours associated with him and formed a brotherhood, which gave rise to the order; St. Dominic and he were contemporaries, "the former teaching Christian men how to behave, and the latter what they should think"; each sent a little company of disciples to teach and preach in Florence, where their influence soon made itself felt (1182-1226).

FRANCIS, ST., OF SALES, bishop of Geneva, born in the château de Sales, near Amiens, founder of the Order of the Visitation; was sent to persuade the Calvinists of Geneva back to the Church of Rome, and applied himself zealously to the reform of his diocese and the monasteries (1567-1622).

FRANCIS FERDINAND, archduke of Austria and heir to the throne. His assassination at Sarajevo on June 28, 1914, led to the Great War (1863-1914).

FRANCIS JOSEPH, emperor of Austria and king of Hungary; succeeded to the throne in 1848 on the abdication of his uncle, Ferdinand I.; the Hungarian difficulty was the chief problem of the early part of his reign, with which he at first dealt in a spirit of harsh oppression, but after 1866 a milder policy was adopted, and the desire for national autonomy was met by the creation of a dual monarchy in 1867, Francis being crowned king of Hungary; he was on the throne when Austria declared war on Serbia in 1914 as a result of the murder of his nephew, the Archduke Francis, an act that led to the Great War; other important events were the cession of Lombardy to Sardinia in 1859 and of Venetia in 1866, after an unsuccessful war with Prussia; he grew steadily more unpopular as his reign wore on (1830-1916).

FRANCISCANS, or MINORITES, an order of monks founded by St. Francis of Assisi in 1208; according to Ruskin, they were the order that preached with St. James the gospel of Works as distinct from the Dominicans, who preached with St. Paul the gospel of Faith, and their gospel required three things: "to work without money and be poor, to work without pleasure and be chaste, and to work according to orders and be obedient"; these were the rules they were sworn to obey at first, but they gradually forsook the austerity they enjoined, acquired great wealth, instituted a highly sensuous ceremonial, and became invested with privileges which excited the jealousy of the regular clergy; with the order were associated a number of men eminent in the Church, and many no less so in philosophy, literature, and art.

FRANCK, SEBASTIAN, early German writer, born in Donsauwürth; from a Catholic priest became a Protestant, but fell into disfavour for promulgating the doctrine that regeneration of life is of more importance than reform of dogma, and in 1631 was banished from Strasburg; subsequently he became a soap-boiler and eventually a printer; his most noted work is his "Chronica," a rough attempt—the first in Germany—at a general history (1499-1542).

FRANCKE, AUGUST HERMANN, a German religious philanthropist, born in Lübeck; was professor of Oriental Languages and subsequently of Theology at Halle; he founded various educational institutions and a large orphanage, all of which still exist and afford education for some 8000 children annually; he was active in promoting Pietism, q.v. (1693-1727).

FRANCONIA, the name formerly applied to a loosely defined district in Central Germany (a portion of the kingdom known as Austria), which, as the home of the Franks, was regarded as the heart of the Holy Roman Empire; the emperors long continued to be crowned within its boundaries; subsequently it was divided into two duchies, East Franconia and Rhenish Franconia; the latter was abolished in 1501 and the former much diminished; from 1806 to 1837 the name had no official existence, but in 1837 the names Upper, Middle, and Lower Franconia were given to the three northern divisions of Bavaria.

FRANCO-PRUSSIAN WAR, started in July, 1870, by Napoleon III. Victory went to Prussia from the start, and the battle of Sedan sealed France's doom. Napoleon was made a prisoner, Paris was sieged, and France became a republic. In May, 1871, when the war ended, Alsace and Lorraine were ceded to Germany.

FRANC-TIREURS (i.e. free-shooters), French volunteers, chiefly peasants, who carried on a guerilla warfare against the Germans in the Franco-German War; were at first denied the status of regular soldiers by the Germans and mercilessly shot when captured, but subsequently, having joined in the movements of the regular army, they were when captured treated as prisoners of war.

FRANKENSTEIN, a student in the romance by Mrs. Shelley, who created a soulless monster, yet a being not without craving for human sympathy; this creature, purely animal and powerful for evil, eventually kills his creator. Popularly, though erroneously, the name is often applied to the monster itself who, in the story, is unnamed.

FRANKFORT-ON-THE-MAIN, one of the old free cities of Germany, a centre of importance under the Kaisers and the seat of the Diet of the Germanic Confederation, and one of the great banking cities of the world; it is the birthplace of the poet Goethe, and is associated with his early history.

FRANKFORT-ON-THE-ODER, a town of Prussia, in the province of Brandenburg, 51 m. S.E. of Berlin; is a well-built town; has a university incorporated with Breslau in 1811, and is actively engaged in the manufacture of machinery, chemicals, paper, &c.

FRANKLAND, SIR EDWARD, an eminent chemist, born in Churchtown, Lancashire; held successively the chairs of Chemistry in Owens College, in Bartholomew's Hospital, in the Royal Institution, in the Royal College of Chemistry, and in the Normal School of Science, South Kensington, the last of which he resigned in 1885; established with Kolbe the constitution of acetic acid, published various works, and was engaged with Lockyer in researches on the atmosphere of the sun (1825-1899).

FRANKLIN, under the feudal system a freeholder of land owing fealty to the sovereign alone; subsequently the term was applied to what may be regarded as a yeoman farmer.

FRANKLIN, BENJAMIN, born in Boston, was the youngest son of a tallow-chandler and one of a family of 17; received a meagre education, and at the age of 12 became apprenticed to his brother, a printer and proprietor of a small newspaper, to whose columns he began to contribute; but subsequently quarrelling with him made his way almost penniless to Philadelphia, where he worked as a printer; in 1724 he came to England under promises of assistance, which were not fulfilled, and for 18 months laboured at his printing trade in London, when he returned to Philadelphia, and there, by steady industry, won a secure position as a printer and proprietor of the Pennsylvania Gazette; in 1732 began to appear his Poor Richard's Almanac, which, with its famous maxims of prudent philosophy, had a phenomenal success; four years later he entered upon a public career, rising through various offices to the position of Deputy Postmaster-General for the Colonies, and sitting in the Assembly; carried through important political missions to England in 1757 and 1764, and was prominent in the deliberations which ended in the declaration of American independence in 1776; he visited France and helped to bring about the French alliance, and made an unavailing effort to bring in Canada, and, as American minister, signed the Treaty of Independence in 1783; was subsequently minister to France, and was twice unanimously elected President of Pennsylvania; his name is also associated with discoveries in natural science, notably the discovery of the identity of electricity and lightning, which he achieved by means of a kite; received degrees from Oxford and Edinburgh Universities, and was elected an F.R.S.; in 1730 he married Deborah Reid, by whom he had two children (1706-1790).

FRANKLIN, SIR JOHN, a famous Arctic explorer, born in Spilsby, Lincolnshire; entered the navy in 1800; was a midshipman; was present at the battle of Copenhagen; shortly afterwards accompanied an expedition, under Captain Flinders, to explore and survey the coasts of Australia; was wrecked, and returned home on board the Camden as a signal-midshipman; he subsequently distinguished himself at the battle of Trafalgar, and took part in the attack on New Orleans; in 1818 he was second in command of an expedition sent out under Captain Buchan to discover a North-West Passage, which, although unsuccessful, contributed to reveal Franklin's admirable qualities as a leader, and in 1819 he was chosen to head another Arctic expedition, which, after exploring the Beakatchewan and Coppermine Rivers and adjacent territory, returned in 1822; Franklin was created a post-captain, and for services in a further expedition in search of a North-West Passage was, in 1829, knighted; after further services he was in 1845 put in command of an expedition, consisting of the Erebus and Terror, for the discovery of the North-West Passage; the expedition never returned, and for many years a painful interest was manifested in the various expeditions (17 in all) which were sent out to search for the lost party; many relics of this unfortunate explorer were found, demonstrating the discovery of the North-West Passage, but the story of his fate has never been precisely ascertained (1786-1845).

FRANKS, the name given in the 3rd century to a confederation of Germanic tribes, who subsequently grouped themselves into two main bodies called the Salians and the Ripuarians, the former dwelling on the Upper Rhine, and the latter on the Middle Rhine. Under their king, Clovis, the Salians overran Central Gaul, subjugating the Ripuarians, and extending their territory from the Scheldt to the Loire, whence in course of time they generally developed the kingdom of France. The Franks were of a tall and martial bearing, and thoroughly democratic in their political instincts.

FRANZ, ROBERT, musical composer, born in Halle; his first songs appeared in 1843, and were cordially appreciated by Mendelssohn and other masters. In 1868 ill-health forced him to resign his musical appointments in Halle, but by the efforts of Liatz, Joachim, and others, funds were raised by means of concerts to ensure him a competence for life; he published upwards of 250 songs (1815-1892).

FRANZENSBAD, or FRANZENSDORF, a watering-place in Czechoslovakia, 3 m. NW. of Eger; is 1460 ft. above sea-level, amidst a mountainous country; is much frequented by invalids for its mineral springs.

FRANZ-JOSEF LAND, an archipelago in the Arctic Ocean, N. of Nova Zembla; was discovered and partly explored in 1873-1874 by Payer and Weyprecht, and named in honour of the Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria; consists of two main divisions, Wilczek Land to the E. and Zichy Land to the W., between which runs Austria Sound. Arctic animals are found in good numbers. It is considered an excellent base for expeditions in quest of the North Pole.

FRASER, ALEXANDER CAMPBELL, philosopher, born in Ardchattan, Argyllshire; after a university training at Edinburgh and Glasgow he entered the Free Church; was for a brief term Free Church minister of Crumond, from which he was transferred to a chair in the Free Church College, but in 1856 succeeded Sir William Hamilton as professor of Logic and Metaphysics at Edinburgh, a position he held till 1891, when he resigned; his writings include the standard edition of Berkeley, with notes and a life, monographs on Locke and Berkeley in the series of "Philosophical Classics," and two vols. on the "Philosophy of Theism," being the Gifford Lectures delivered 1895-1896 (1819-1914).

FRASER, JAMES, bishop of Manchester, born near Cheltenham, became a Fellow of Oriel after graduating with highest honours, and in 1847 was appointed to a college living; he issued in 1862-1864 valuable reports on education in Canada and the United States after visiting these countries; and in 1870 was appointed bishop by Gladstone; his strong sense and wide sympathy and interest in the labour questions won him universal respect (1818-1885).

FRASER RIVER, the chief river of British Columbia (named after Simon Fraser, the explorer, in 1808), is formed by the junction near Fort George of two streams, one rising in the Rockies, the other flowing out of the Lakes Stuart and Fraser; it discharges into the Georgian Gulf, 800 m. below Fort George. Rich deposits of gold are found in the lower basin, and an active industry in salmon-catching and canning is carried on.

FRATICELLI (i.e. Little Brethren), a religious sect which arose in Italy in the 18th century, and continued to exist until the close of the 18th. They were an offshoot from the Franciscans (q.v.), who sought in their lives to enforce more rigidly the laws of St. Francis, and declined to accept the pontifical explanations of monastic rules; ultimately they broke away from the authority of the Church, and despite the efforts of various popes to reconcile them, and the bitter persecutions of others, maintained a separate organisation, going the length of appointing their own cardinals and pope, having declared the Church in a state of apostasy. Their régime of life was of the severest nature; they begged from door to door their daily food, and went clothed in rags.

FRAUENHOFER, JOSEPH VON, German optician, born in Straubing, Bavaria; after serving an apprenticeship as a glass-cutter in Munich, he rose to be manager of an optical institute there, and eventually attained to the position of professor in the Academy of Sciences; his name is associated with many discoveries in optical science as well as inventions and improvements in the optician's art; but he is chiefly remembered for his observation of the dark lines in the solar spectrum, since called after him the Fraunhofer lines (1787-1826).

FRAUENHOFER LINES, the fine black lines crossing the solar spectrum, first observed by Wollaston in 1802, and later studied by Fraunhofer (above); the lines correspond to the wave-lengths of light absorbed in the reversing layer of the sun.

FRASER, SIR JAMES GEORGE, British anthropologist and writer. Born in Glasgow he made a study of mythology and folklore, and published in 1890 "The Golden Bough," a monumental study of comparative religion. He was knighted in 1914 (1854-).

FREDEGONDA, wife of Chilperic I. of Neustria; a woman of low birth, but of great beauty and insatiable ambition, who scrupled at no crime to attain her end; made away with Galswintha, Chilperic's second wife, and superseded her on the throne; slew Silebert, who had been sent to avenge Galswintha's death, and imprisoned Brunhilda, her sister, of Austrasia, and finally assassinated her husband and governed Neustria in the name of her son, Clotaire II (543-597).

FREDERICK I., surnamed Barbarossa (Red-beard), of the house of Swabia, emperor of the Holy Roman Empire (q.v.) from 1152 till 1190; "a magnificent, magnificent man, the greatest of all the Kaisers"; his reign is the most brilliant in the annals of the empire, and he himself among the most honoured of German heroes; his vast empire he ruled with iron rigour, quelling its rival factions and extending his sovereign rights to Poland, Hungary, Denmark, and Burgundy; the great struggle of his reign, however, was with Pope Alexander III. and the Lombard cities, whose right to independence he acknowledged by the treaty of Constance (1183); he "died some unknown sudden death" at 70 in the crusade against Saladin and the Moslem power; his lifelong ambition was to secure the independence of the empire, and to subdue the States of Italy to the imperial sway (1128-1190).

FREDERICK II., called the Wonder of the World, grandson of the preceding; he was crowned emperor in 1216, at Aix-la-Chapelle, having driven Otto IV. from the throne; he gave much attention to the consolidating of his Italian possessions, encouraged learning and art, founded the university of Naples, and had the laws carefully codified; in these attempts at harmonising the various elements of his empire he was opposed by the Papal power and the Lombards; in 1228 he gained possession of Jerusalem, of which he crowned himself king; his later years were spent in struggles with the Papal and Lombard powers, and darkened by the treachery of his son Henry and of an intimate friend; he was a man of outstanding intellectual force and learning, but lacked the moral greatness of his grandfather (1194-1250).

FREDERICK III. German emperor, born in Potsdam; bred for the army; rose to high command; did signal service at Königsgratz in 1860, and again in 1870 in the Franco-German War; married the Princess Royal of England; succeeded his father, but fell a victim to a serious throat malady after a reign of only 101 days (1881-1888).

FREDERICK V. Electoral Prince Palatine; succeeded to the Palatinate in 1610, and three years later married Elizabeth, daughter of James I. of England; an attempt to head the Protestant union of Germany and his usurpation of the crown of Bohemia brought about his ruin and expulsion from the Palatinate in 1620 by the Spaniards and Bavarians; he took refuge in Holland, but two years later his principality was given to Bavaria by the emperor (1606-1682).

FREDERICK III. of Denmark, succeeded to the throne in 1648; during his reign the arrogance and oppression of the nobles drove the commons, headed by the clergy, to seek redress of the king by proclaiming the constitution a hereditary and absolute monarchy (1609-1670).

FREDERICK V. of Denmark, ascended the throne in 1746; during his reign Denmark made great progress, manufactures were established, commerce extended, while science and the fine arts were liberally patronised (1723-1766).

FREDERICK VI. of Denmark, became regent in 1784 during the insanity of his father, who died in 1808; his reign is noted for the abolition of feudal serfdom and the prohibition of the slave-trade in Danish colonies, and the granting of a liberal constitution in 1811; while his participation in the maritime confederation between Russia, Sweden, and Prussia led to the destruction of the Danish fleet off Copenhagen in 1800 by the British, and his sympathy and alliance with Napoleon brought about the bombardment of Copenhagen in 1807, and the cession of Norway to Sweden in 1814 (1768-1839).

FREDERICK I. first king of Prussia, third elector of Brandenburg, and son of the Great Elector Frederick-William, whom as elector he succeeded in 1688; he extended his territory by purchase; supported William of Orange in his English expedition, and lent assistance to the Grand Alliance against France, for which he received the title of king of Prussia, being crowned such in Königsberg in 1701; he was "an expensive Herr, and much given to magnificent ceremonies, etiquettes, and solemnities" (1657-1713).

FREDERICK II. king of Prussia from 1740 to 1786, surnamed "The Great," grandson of the preceding, and nephew of George I. of England, born in Berlin; the irksome restraints of his early military education induced him to make an attempt, which failed, to escape to England, an episode which incensed his father, and nearly brought him to the scaffold; after his marriage in 1733 he resided at Rheinsburg, indulging his taste for music and French literature, and corresponding with Voltaire; he came to the throne with the ambition of extending and consolidating his power; from Austria, after two wars (1740-1744), he wrested Silesia, and again fought the empire in the Seven Years' War (1756-1763), while in 1776 by force of arms he acquired the duchy of Franconia; as administrator he was eminently efficient, the country flourished under his rule; his many wars imposed no debt on the nation; national industries were fostered, and religious toleration encouraged (1713-1786).

FREDERICK CHARLES, PRINCE, nephew of William I. of Germany; bred for the army; distinguished himself in the wars against Denmark and Austria, and in the Franco-German War (1828-1886).

FREDERICK-WILLIAM I. king of Prussia, born in Berlin, ascended the throne in 1713; in 1720, at the peace of Stockholm, he received part of Pomerania with Stettin for espousing the cause of Denmark in her war with Russia and Poland against Sweden; the rest of his reign was passed in improving the internal conditions of his country and her military resources (1688-1740).

FREDERICK-WILLIAM II. king of Prussia, nephew of Frederick the Great (q.v.); succeeded to the throne in 1786, but soon lost favour by indolence and favouritism; in 1788 the freedom of the press was withdrawn, and religious freedom curtailed; he involved himself in a weak and vacillating foreign policy, wasting the funds accumulated by his uncle in a useless war with Holland; at the partition of Poland in 1793 and 1795 various districts were added to the kingdom (1744-1797).

FREDERICK-WILLIAM III. king of Prussia from 1797 till 1840; incited by the queen and the commons he abandoned his position of neutrality towards Napoleon and declared war in 1806; defeat followed at Jena and in other battles, and by the treaty of Tilsit (1807) Prussia was deprived of half her possessions; under the able administration of Stein the country began to recover itself, and a war for freedom succeeded in breaking the power of France at the victory of Leipzig (1813), and at the treaty of Vienna (1815) her lost territory was restored; his remaining years were spent in consolidating and developing his dominions, but his policy was sometimes reactionary in its effects (1770-1840).

FREDERICK-WILLIAM IV. king of Prussia from 1840 till 1861; his reign is marked by the persistent demands of the people for a constitutional form of government, which was finally granted in 1850; a year previous he had declined the imperial crown offered by the Frankfort Diet; in 1857 he became insane, and his brother was appointed regent (1795-1861).

FREDERICTON, the capital of New Brunswick, Canada, situated on the river St. John; is the seat of a bishopric and an important university; has an extensive lumber trade.

FREDERIKSHALD, a fortified seaport of Norway, 65 m. S.E. of Christiania; was burnt in 1826, but handsomely restored in modern style; timber is the main trade; in the immediate neighbourhood is the impregnable fortress of Frederiksteen, associated with the death of Charles XII. of Sweden, who fell fighting in the trenches before its walls in 1718.

FREE CHURCH OF SCOTLAND, an ecclesiastical body formed by those who left the Established Church in 1843 on the ground that they were not free in their connection with the State to enforce certain obligations which they considered lay on them as a Church of Christ, to whom, and not to the State, they held themselves as a Church subject.

FREE CITIES OF GERMANY, were cities which enjoyed sovereign rights within their own walls, independent representation in the Diet, and owed allegiance solely to the emperor. Their internal government was sometimes democratic, sometimes the opposite. Their peculiar privileges were obtained either by force of arms, by purchase, or by gift of the emperors, who found in them a convenient means of checking the power of their feudal lords. Most of them lost their privileges in 1803, but Frankfort-on-Main continued to be independent until 1866, and Hamburg, Lübeck, and Bremen until 1871.

FREE PORT, name given to a port at which ships of all nations may discharge or load cargo without payment of customs or other duties, save harbour dues. They were created in various Continental countries during the Middle Ages for the purpose of stimulating trade, but the system of bonded warehousing has superseded them.

FREE SOILERS, a political party which arose in the United States in 1848 to oppose slave-extension. In 1856 their principles were adopted and the party absorbed in the newly-formed Republican party.

FREE TRADE, the name given to the commercial policy of England, which was first elaborately set forth with cogent reasoning by Adam Smith in his "Wealth of Nations," and of which the repeal of the Corn Laws in 1846 was the first step towards its adoption. Strictly used, the term is applicable only to international or foreign trade, and signifies a policy of strict non-intervention in the free competition of foreign goods with home goods in the home markets. Differential duties, artificial encouragements (e.g. bounties, drawbacks), to the home producer, all of which are characteristic of a protective system of trading, are withheld, the belief being entertained by free-traders that the industrial interests of a country are best served by permitting the capital to flow into those channels of trade into which the character and resources of the country naturally dispose it to do, and also by bringing the consumer as near as possible to the cheapest producer. But it is not considered a violation of the Free Trade principles to impose a duty for revenue purposes on such imported articles as have no home competitor, e.g. tea.

FREEMAN, EDWARD AUGUSTUS, historian, born at Mitchley Abbey, Staffordshire; was a Fellow of Trinity College, Oxford; examiner in the School of Law and Modern History; in 1884 he was elected Regius Professor of Modern History at Oxford; most of his life was spent in country retirement at Somerleaze, varied by Continental travel; he was the author of many scholarly works ranging over the whole field of history, his fame, however, mainly resting on his great "History of the Norman Conquest" (1923-1892).

FREEMASONRY, in modern times is the name given to a world-wide institution of the nature of a friendly benevolent society, having for its objects the promotion of social intercourse amongst its members, and, in its own language, "the practice of moral and social virtue," the exercise of charity being particularly commended. By a peculiar grip of the hand and certain passwords members are enabled to recognise each other, and the existence of masonic lodges in all countries enables the freemason to find friendly intercourse and assistance wherever he goes. Its origin is found in the masonic brotherhoods of the Middle Ages, and some of the names, forms, and symbols of these old craft guilds are still preserved. In an age when great cathedrals and monasteries were rapidly springing up masons were in great demand, and had to travel from place to place, hence signs were adopted by which true masons might be known amongst each other and assisted. The idea of utilising this secret method of recognition for general, social, and charitable purposes, without reference to the mason's craft, seems to have originated in the Edinburgh Lodge, where, in 1800, speculative or theoretical masons were admitted. In its present form of organisation it dates back to 1813, when the "United Grand Lodge of Ancient Free and Accepted Masons of England" was formed. The Grand-Master is always a member of the Royal Family.

FRIEPORT, SIR ANDREW, a London merchant; a member of the Imaginary club under whose auspices the Spectator was issued.

FRIEBERG, in the centre of the Saxon mining district, 20 m. SW. of Dresden; is an old town, which arose upon the discovery of its silver mines in 1163. It has a fine old cathedral, and a famous school of mines; the manufactures comprise gold and silver work, wire, chemicals, &c.

FRIEBURG, (1) a Swiss canton between Bern and Vaud, and having three slaves in the latter; the population consists chiefly of French Catholics; is hilly; dairy-farming, watch-making, and straw-plaiting are the chief industries. (2) Capital of the canton, is situated on the Saane, 19 m. SW. of Bern; the river is spanned by a suspension bridge, and there is an old Gothic cathedral with one of the finest-tuned organs in Europe.

FRIEBURG, in Breisgau, an important town in Baden, at the W. side of the Black Forest, and 32 m. N.E. of Basel; has a Gothic cathedral famous for its architectural beauty, and a university; has important manufactures in silk, cotton, thread, paper, &c.; is the seat of a Catholic archbishop, and is associated with many stirring events in German history.

FRIELIGRATH, FERDINAND, a popular German poet, born in Detmold; was engaged in commerce in his early years, but the success of a small collection of poems in 1838 induced him to adopt a literary career; subsequently his democratic principles, expressed in stirring verse, involved him in trouble, and in 1846 he became a refugee in London; he was permitted to return in 1848, and shortly afterwards was the successful defendant in a celebrated trial for the publication of his poem "The Dead to the Living," after which fresh prosecution drove him to London in 1851, where, till his return in 1868, he engaged in poetical work, translating Burns, Shakespeare, and other English poets (1810-1876).

FREISCHÜTZ (i.e. Freshooter), a legendary hunter who made a compact with the devil whereby of seven balls six should infallibly hit the mark, and the seventh be under the direction of the devil, a legend which was rife among German troops in the 18th and 14th centuries, and has given name to one of Weber's operas.

FREEMANTLE, a seaport town in West Australia, on the Swan River, 12 m. from Perth; the first ingoing and outgoing port of call for steamships; has saw-mills and soap and leather factories.

FREMONT, JOHN CHARLES, an American explorer, born in Savannah, Georgia; at first a teacher of mathematics in the navy, subsequently took to civil-engineering and surveying; in 1848 explored the Mouth Pass of the Rockies, and proved the practicability of an overland route; explored the Great Salt Lake, the watershed between the Mississippi and Pacific, and the upper reaches of the Rio Grande; he rendered valuable services in the Mexican War, but was deprived of his candidacy for disobedience; after unsuccessful standing for the Presidency in the anti-slavery interest, he again served in the army as major-general; a scheme for a southern railway to the Pacific brought him into trouble with the French government in 1873, when he was tried and condemned for fraud, unjustly it would seem; from 1878 to 1882 he was governor of Arizona; he was the recipient of distinctions from various geographical societies (1813-1890).

FRENCH, JOHN DENTON FINESTONE, VISCOUNT YPRES, British general. He first entered the navy, but transferred to the army in 1874, seeing service in Egypt. He was given command of the cavalry in the Boer War, was made a major-general and established his reputation at Kimberley and Bloemfontein. When a field-marshal in 1914 he resigned on account of the incident at the Curragh, but he was appointed to lead the British Expeditionary Force in August, and was in command at Mons, the Marne, the Aisne, and the first battle of Ypres. In 1916 he was superseded by Haig, and in 1918 became viceroy of Ireland, a position he held throughout the troubled post-war years (1862-1926).

FRENCH REVOLUTION, the great upheaval in France at the end of the 18th century, which was caused by the evils of the taxation and land-owning system, which oppressed the lower classes, and the influence of Rousseau on the middle classes who demanded a greater share of government. The disorganised state of national finances compelled Louis XVI. to call the States-General in May, 1789, for the first time for many years, and the Third Estate broke away the following month to form the National Assembly. In July the Paris mob stormed the Bastille, and forced the Royal Family to Paris. A new body called the Legislative Assembly was formed in 1791, but the mob began to acquire the upper hand, and overthrew the monarchy in 1792. France being declared a republic. In 1793 a committee of Public Safety was formed and the Reign of Terror started, the king and Robespierre, one of the leaders of the revolution, being among the victims of the guillotine. A Directory was formed in 1795, and in 1799 Napoleon Bonaparte became Consul, and ultimately Emperor.

FRERE, SIR HENRY BARTLE EDWARD, a distinguished diplomatist and colonial governor, born near Aberavenny; entering the East India Company in 1834, he rendered important services as administrator in Malakka and as Resident in Sattara in 1847; as the chief-commissioner in Sind he did much to open up the country by means of canals, roads, &c.; during the Mutiny, which arrested these works of improvement, he distinguished himself by the prompt manner in which he suppressed the rising in his own province; from 1862 to 1867 he was governor of Bombay; in 1867 was knighted, and five years later carried through important diplomatic work in Zanzibar, signing the treaty abolishing the slave-trade; his last appointment was as governor of the Cape and High-Commissioner for the settlement of South African affairs; the Kaffir and Zulu Wars involved him in trouble, and in 1880 he was recalled, having effected little (1815-1884).

FREE, JOHN HOOKHAM, English politician and author, born in London, uncle of the preceding; he was a staunch supporter of Pitt, and in 1799 became Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs; a year later he was envoy to Lisbon, and subsequently minister to Spain; in 1821 he retired to Malta, where he devoted himself to scholarly pursuits, twice declining a peerage; in his early days he was a contributor to the Anti-Jacobin, and shares with his school-fellow Canning the authorship of the "Needy Knife-Grinder"; but he is best known by his fine translations of some of Aristophanes' plays (1769-1846).

FRESCO, the art of painting on walls freshly laid with plaster, or which have been damped so as to permit of the colour sinking into the lime; there were two methods, the fresco secco and the fresco buon; in the first the wall was sprinkled with water, and the colours were then worked into the damp surface; in the second process, in which finer and more permanent effects were obtained, the artist worked upon the fresh plaster of the wall (which was laid for him as he proceeded), pouncing or tracing his designs with a stylus; only colours which are natural earths can be employed, as they require to be mixed with lime ere being applied, and are subject to the destroying effect of that substance; as a method of mural decoration it was known to the ancients, and some of the finest specimens are to be seen in the Italian cathedrals of the 14th and 15th centuries; the art is still in vogue, but can only be practised successfully in a dry climate.

FRESNEL, AUGUSTIN JEAN, French physicist, born in Brugle, Eure; as an engineer he rose to be head of the Department of Public Works at Paris; in 1825 he was elected an R. S. of London; he made discoveries in optical science which helped to confirm the undulatory theory of light, also invented a compound lighthouse lens (1788-1827).

FRESNO, a town in California, on the Southern Pacific Railway, 207 m. SE. of San Francisco; the surrounding district, extensively irrigated, produces abundance of fruit, and raisins and wine are largely exported.

FREUD, SIGISMUND, Austrian psychologist, founder of the study of psycho-analysis; professor at Vienna; he applied his methods successfully to many cases of nervous disorders; he has written several books on dreams and nervous diseases (1856-).

FREUD, WILHELM, German philologist, born at Kempen in Posen; studied education at Berlin and Breslau, and was chiefly occupied in teaching till 1870, when he retired in order to devote himself to his literary pursuits; besides classical school-books and some works on philology, he compiled an elaborate Latin dictionary in 4 vols., which has been the basis of the standard English-Latin dictionaries since (1806-1894).

FREYJA. See FRIGGA.

FREYR, figures in the Scandinavian mythology as the god who rules the rain and sunshine, and whose gifts were peace, wealth, and abundant harvests; the wooing of Gerda, daughter of the giant Gymer, by Freyr is one of the most beautiful stories in the northern mythology; his festival was celebrated at Christmas, and his first temple was built at Upsala by the Swedes, who especially honoured him.

FREYTAG, GUSTAV, abbeismont German novelist and dramatist, born in Kreuzburg, Silesia; from 1889 was teacher of German language and literature at Breslau, and became editor of a journal, a position he held till 1870; was a member of the North German Diet, and accompanied the Crown Prince during the war of 1870-1871; from 1879 resided at Wiesbaden; his many novels and plays and poems, which reveal a powerful and realistic genius, place him in the front rank of modern German literature; several of his novels have been translated into English, amongst them his masterpieces, "Soll und Haben" (Debt and Credit) (1816-1895).

FRIAR (i.e. brother), a name applied generally to members of religious brotherhoods, but in its strict significance indicating an order lower than that of priest, the latter being called "father"; a friar differed from a monk in that he travelled about, whereas the monk remained secluded in his monastery; in the 13th century arose the Grey Friars or Franciscans, the Black Friars or Dominicans, the White Friars or Carmelites, Augustinians or Austin Friars, and later the Crutched Friars or Trinitarians.

FRIAR JOHN, a friar of Seville, in Rabelais' "Pantagruel," notorious for his irreverence in the discharge of his religious duties and for his lewd, lusty ways.

FRIAR TUCK, Robin Hood's chaplain and steward, introduced by Scott into "Ivanhoe" as a kind of clerical Falstaff.

FRIDAY, the young savage, the attendant of Robinson Crusoe in Defoe's story, so called as discovered on a Friday.

FRIDAY, the sixth day of the week, so called as consecrated to Freya or Friga, the wife of Odin; is proverbially a day of ill luck; held sacred among Catholics as the day of the crucifixion, and the Mohammedan Sunday in commemoration as the day on which, as they believe, Adam was created.

FRIEDLAND, VALENTIN, an eminent scholar and educationist, born in Upper Luwatta; friend of Luther and Melancthon; his fame as a teacher attracted to Goldberg, in Silesia, where he taught, pupils from far and near; the secret of his success lay in his inculcating in his pupils respect for their own honour; had a great faith in the intelligence that evinced itself in clear expression (1490-1556).

FRIENDLY ISLANDS, islands of the S. Pacific, some 180 in number, mostly of coral or volcanic origin, of which 30 are inhabited, the natives rank high among the South Sea islanders for intelligence. See TONGA ISLANDS.

FRIENDLY SOCIETIES, associations of individuals for the purpose of mutual benefit in sickness and distress; of old and wide-spread institution and under various names and forms.

FRIENDS, SOCIETY OF, a community of Christians popularly known as Quakers, founded in 1648 by George Fox (q.v.), distinguished for their plainness of speech and manners, and differing from other sects chiefly in the exclusive deference they pay to the "inner light," and their rejection of both clergy and sacrament as media of grace; they refuse to take oath, and are opposed to war and slavery.

FRIENDS OF THE PEOPLE, an association formed as far back as 1792 to secure by constitutional means parliamentary reform.

FRIES, JAKOB FRIEDRICH, a German Kantian philosopher; was professor at Jena; aimed at reconciling the Kantian philosophy with Faith, or the intuitions of the Pure Reason (1773-1843).

FRIESLAND, the most northerly province of Holland, with a rich soil; divided into East and West Friesland; low-lying and pastoral; protected by dykes.

FRIGGA, a Scandinavian goddess, the wife of Odin; worshipped among the Saxons as a goddess mother; was the earth deified, or the Norse Demeter.

FRIISIANS, a Low German people, who occupied originally the shores of the North Sea from the mouths of the Rhine and Ems; distinguished for their free institutions; tribes of them at one time invaded Britain, where traces of their presence may still be noted.

FRITH, WILLIAM POWELL, an English painter, born near Ripon, Yorkshire; his works are numerous, his subjects varied and interesting, and his most popular pictures, such as "Derby Day" and "The Railway Station," have brought large sums (1819-1909).

FRITZ, FATHER, name given to Frederick the Great by his subjects.

FROBISHER, SIR MARTIN, famous English sailor and navigator, born near Doncaster; thrice over enthusiastically essayed the discovery of the North-West Passage under Elizabeth; accompanied Drake to the West Indies; was knighted for his services against the Armada; conducted several expeditions against Spain; was mortally wounded when leading an attack on Brest, and died on his passage home (1556-1594).

FROEBEL, FRIEDRICH, a devoted German educationist on the principles of Pestalozzi, which combined physical, moral, and intellectual training, commencing with the years of childhood; was the founder of the famous Kindergarten system (1782-1852).

FROGMORE, a royal residence and mausoleum in Windsor Park, the burial-place of Prince Albert.

FROISSART, JEAN, a French chronicler and poet, born in Valenciennes; visited England in the reign of Edward III., at whose Court, and particularly with the Queen, he became a great favourite for his tales of chivalry, and whence he was sent to Scotland to collect more materials for his chronicles, where he became the guest of the king and the Earl of Douglas; after this he wandered from place to place, ranging as far as Venice and Rome, to add to his store; he died in Flanders; his chronicles, which extend from 1222 to 1400, are written without order, but with grace and naïveté (1337-1410).

FROMENTIN, EUGENE, an eminent French painter and author, born in Rochelle; was the author of two travel-sketches, and a brilliant novel "Dominiqne" (1820-1876).

FRONDE, a name given to a revolt in France opposed to the Court of Anne of Austria and Mazarin during the minority of Louis XIV. The war which arose, and which was due to the despotism of Mazarin, passed through two phases; it was first a war on the part of the people and the parlement, called the Old Fronde, which lasted from 1648 till 1649, and then a war on the part of the nobles, called the New Fronde, which lasted till 1652, when the revolt was crushed by Turenne to the triumph of the royal power. The name is derived from the mimic fights with slings in which the boys of Paris indulged themselves, and which even went so far as to beat back at times the civic guard sent to suppress them.

FRONTENAC, LOUIS, COMTE DE, governor-general of French Canada, 1672-1682, and 1689-1698 (1620-1698).

FROUDE, HURRELL, elder brother of the succeeding, a leader in the Teutarian movement; author of Tracts IX. and LXIII. (1803-1836).

FROUDE, JAMES ANTHONY, an English historian and man of letters, born in Totnes, Devon; trained originally for the Church, he gave himself to literature, his chief work being the "History of England from the Fall of Wolsey to the Defeat of the Spanish Armada," in 12 vols., of which the first appeared in 1854 and the last in 1870; he also wrote a "Life of Carlyle," "Nemesis of Faith," "Short Studies on Great Subjects," a "Life of Caesar," a "Life of Bunyan," "The English in Ireland in the Eighteenth Century," and "English Seamen in the Sixteenth Century"; he ranks as one of the masters of English prose, and as a man of penetration, insight, and enlarged views, if somewhat careless about minor details (1818-1894).

FRY, MRS. ELIZABETH, philanthropist, born in Norwich, third daughter of John Gurney, the Quaker banker; married Joseph Fry of Plashet, Essex; devoted her life to prison reform and the reform of criminals, as well as other benevolent enterprises; she has been called "the female Howard" (1780-1845).

FRY, ROGER EDWARD, British artist. After leaving Cambridge he helped to edit the Burlington Magazine, and made a name as an expert on Post-Impressionism (q.v.). He wrote extensively on art (1866-).

FRYAT, CAPT. CHARLES, British seaman, who was in charge of the Great Eastern Railway boat Brussels when she was attacked in March, 1915, by a U-boat which he rammed, for which action he was shot in Bruges on his capture by the Germans in June, 1916 (1872-1916).

FUAD, king of Egypt, succeeded his brother as Sultan in 1917, and on the declaration of Egypt's independence in 1922 he became king (1868-).

FUAD-MEHMED PASHA, a Turkish statesman, diplomatist, and man of letters; studied medicine, but soon turned himself to politics; was much esteemed and honoured at foreign courts, at which he represented Turkey, for his skill, sagacity, and finesse; became Minister of Foreign Affairs in 1852; was hostile to the pretensions of Russia, and gave umbrage to the Czar; published a Turkish grammar (1814-1869).

FUDGE FAMILY, THE, a satiric piece by Thomas Moore, published in 1818; it ridicules the English parvenu abroad.

FUENTES, COUNT, a Spanish general and statesman, eminent both in war and diplomacy; commanded the Spanish infantry at the siege of Rocroi when he was eighty-two, borne on a litter in the midst of the fight, and perished by the sword, the Great Condé having attacked the besiegers (1560-1648).

FUJI-YAMA, a volcano and the highest mountain (12,425 ft.) in Japan; is 80 m. west of Tokyo; dormant since the eruption of 1707.

FUGGER, the name of a family of Augsburg who rose from the loom by way of commerce to great wealth and eminence in Germany, particularly under the Emperors Maximilian and Charles V., to whom they lent vast sums of money; were created counts of the empire by Charles.

FULAH, a people of the Upper Soudan whose territory extends between Senegal and Darfur, a race of superior physique and intelligence, and of a certain polish of manners, and with Caucasian type of features.

FULHAM, a borough of London, on the Middlesex bank of the Thames, opposite Putney, with the palace and burying-place of the bishops of London.

FULLER, ANDREW, an eminent Baptist minister, born in Cambridgehire, who settled at Kettering; and a zealous controversialist in defence of the gospel against hyper-Calvinism on the one hand and Socinianism on the other, but he is chiefly distinguished in connection with the foundation of the Baptist Missionary Society, to which he for most part devoted the energies of his life (1754-1815).

FULLER, SARAH MARGARET, an American authoress, born in Cambridgeport, Mass., a woman of speculative ability and high aims, a friend of Emerson, and much esteemed by Carlyle, though he thought her enthusiasm extravagant and beyond the range of accomplishment; she was one of the leaders of the transcendental movement in America; visited Europe, and Italy in particular; engaged there in the struggle for political independence; married the young Marquis of Ossoli; sailed for New York, and was drowned with her husband and child on the sand-bars of Long Island (1810-1850).

FULLER, THOMAS, historian, divine, and wit, born in Northamptonshire, son of the rector of Sarum; entering into holy orders, he held in succession several benefices in the Church of England, and was a prebend in Salisbury Cathedral; taking sides with the king, he lost favour under the Commonwealth; wrote a number of works, in which one finds combined gaiety and piety, good sense and whimsical fancy; composed among other works the "History of the Holy War," a "History of the Crusades," "The Holy and the Profane States," the "Church History of Great Britain," and the "Worthies of England," the last his principal work and published posthumously; he was a man of great shrewdness, broad sympathies, and a kindly nature; was an author much admired by Charles Lamb (1608-1661).

FULMINEATE OF MERCURY, a high explosive used for detonating dynamite and gun cotton.

FULTON, ROBERT, an American engineer, born in Pennsylvania; began life as a miniature portrait and landscape painter, in which he made some progress, but soon turned to engineering; he was one of the first to apply steam to the propulsion of vessels, and devoted much attention to the invention of submarine boats and torpedoes; in 1807 he built a steamboat to navigate the Hudson River, with a very slow rate of progress, however, making only five miles an hour; other inventions included machines for flax-spinning and dredging, and a submarine boat (1765-1815).

FUM, a grotesque animal figure, six cubits high, one of four presumed to preside over the destinies of China; it is presented as being a goose in front and a stag behind, with a snake's neck, a fish's tail, a fowl's forehead, a tortoise's back, a swallow's face, and a cock's beak, and the markings of a dragon.

FUNCHAL, the capital of Madeira, at the head of a bay on the S. coast, and the base of a mountain 4000 ft. high, extends a mile along the shore, and slopes up the sides of the mountain; famous as a health resort.

FUNDY BAY, an arm of the sea between New Brunswick and Nova Scotia: it is of difficult navigation owing to the strong and rapid rush of the tides.

FÜNEN, the second in size of the Danish islands, separated from Zealand on the E. by the Great Belt and from Jutland on the W. by the Little Belt; is flat except on S. and W., fertile, well cultivated, and yields crops of cereals.

FUNGI, a group of plants including mushrooms, toadstools, &c., many of which are parasitic; they differ from other plants in their lack of chlorophyll (q.v.).

FURIES. See ERINNYES.

FURNISS, HARRY, artist and caricaturist, born in Wexford; on staff of Punch from 1880 to 1894; started a humorous paper of his own without success and afterwards engaged in lecture tours (1854-1925).

FURNIVALL, FREDERICK JAMES, English barrister, born in Egham, in Surrey; devoted to the study of Early and Middle English Literature; founder and director of numerous societies for promoting the study of special works, such as the Early English Text, Chaucer, Ballad, and New Shakespeare Societies, and editor of publications in connection with them; was in his early days a great authority on boating and boat-building (1825-1911).

FURSE, CHARLES WELLINGTON, British artist. After studying at the Slade School and in Paris he made a name for open-air portrait painting, sport and country life being his most successful themes. "The Return from the Ride" and "Diana of the Uplands" are in the Tate Gallery. He became an A.R.A. the year he died (1868-1904).

FURST, JULIUS, a distinguished German Orientalist, born in Posen, of Jewish descent; a specialist in Hebrew and Aramaic; author of a Hebrew and Chaldean Manual (1806-1873).

FURST, WALTER, OF URI, a Swiss patriot, who, along with William Tell, contributed to establish the liberty and independence of Switzerland; d. 1317.

FUSEL OIL, name given to the higher members of the alcohol series, especially amyl alcohol; it is used for certain industrial purposes.

FUSELI, HENRY, properly FUSOLI, a famous portrait-painter, born in Zurich; coming to England at the age of 22, he became acquainted with Sir Joshua Reynolds, who advised him to go to Rome; after eight years spent in study of the Italian masters, and Michael Angelo in particular, he returned to England and became an R.A.; he painted a series of pictures, afterwards exhibited as the "Milton Gallery" (1741-1825).

FUST, JOHANN, a rich burgher of Mainz, associated with Gutenberg and Schöffer, to whom, with them, the invention of printing has been ascribed; d. 1466.

FUTURISM, also called Post-Impressionism and Cubism, a modern movement in art aiming at a break with old conventions. The subjective, or what is in the artist's mind, is regarded as of greater importance than what exists objectively.

FYLFOT, the swastika symbol of the Buddhists; a peculiar form of cross found in pre-Christian remains in many parts of the world.

FYNE, LOCH, an Argyllshire arm of the sea, extending N. from Bute to Inveraray, and from 1 m. to 5 m. broad; famed for its herrings.

FYZABAD, the one-time capital of Oudh, in India; 78 m. E. of Lucknow; is now much decayed.

GABELENTZ

GABELENTZ, HANS COMON VON DER, a distinguished German philologist, born in Altenburg; was master, it is said, of 80 languages, contributed treatises on several of them, his most important work being on the Melanesian (1807-1874).

GABELLE, an indirect tax, especially one on salt, the term applied to a State monopoly in France in that article, the exaction in connection with which was a source of much discontent; the people were obliged to purchase it at government warehouses and at extravagant, often very unequal, rates; the import dates from 1286; was abolished in 1789.

GABELSBERGER, FRANZ XAVIER, inventor of the shorthand in use in German countries as well as elsewhere (1780-1849).

GABINUS, a Roman tribune in 66 B.C., afterwards consul; party to the banishment of Cicero, 57 B.C.

GABOON and FRENCH CONGO, a French colony in W. Africa fronting the Atlantic, between the Cameroon country and the Belgian Congo, and stretching inland as far as the head-waters of the Congo River; in the NW. is the great Gaboon estuary, 40 m. long and 10 broad at its mouth, with Libreville on its bank; along the coast the climate is hot and unhealthy, but it improves inland; the natives belong to the Bantu stock; the French settled in it first in 1842, but only after the explorations of De Brazza in 1876-1886 were they able to extend and colonise it.

GABORIAU, EMILE, French novelist, famous for detective stories, in which "The Affair Lerouge," "Monsieur Lecoq" and "Slaves of Paris" are best known; born in Saulon (1835-1873).

GABRIEL, an angel, one of the seven archangels, "the power of God," who is represented in the traditions of both the Jews and the Moslems as discharging the highest functions, and in Christian tradition as announcing to the Virgin Mary her election of God to be the mother of the Messiah; he ranks higher among Moslems than Jews.

GABRIEL, a French architect, born in Paris (1710-1782).

GABRIELLE D'ESTREES, the mistress of Henry IV. of France, who for State reasons was not allowed to marry her (1571-1599).

GAD, one of the Jewish tribes inhabiting the E. of the Jordan, deriving its name from a son of Jacob.

GADAMES, or GHADAMES, an oasis and town in Africa, situated in the SW. corner of Tripoli, on the N. border of the Sahara; the fertility of the oasis is due to hot springs, from which the place takes its name; high walls protect the soil and the fruit of it, which is abundant, from sand-storms; it is an entrepôt for trade with the interior; the inhabitants are Berber Mohammedans.

GADDI, GADDI, a Florentine painter and worker in mosaic, friend of Cimabue and Giotto (1260-1332).

GADDI, TADDEO, son of the preceding, and pupil of Giotto both in architecture and fresco-painting (1300-1360).

GADDI, AGNOLO, son of the preceding, and a painter of frescoes (1330-1396).

GADES, the ancient name of Cadiz (q.v.).

GADSHILL, an eminence in Kent, 3 m. NW. of Rochester, associated with the name of Falstaff, also of Dickens, who resided here from 1856 to his death in 1870.

GAELIC, the ancient language of Scotland and Ireland, of Celtic origin, its introduction dating from about the commencement of the 6th century; was the official and court tongue in Scotland to the 11th century, when English began to supersede it; is still spoken in parts of both countries, and in certain quarters of the Dominions, e.g. Cape Breton, in Canada, where is issued a newspaper printed entirely in Gaelic. Ogham (q.v.) is the earliest script of the language.

GAETA, a fortified seaport of S. Italy, finely situated on a steep promontory 50 m. NW. of Naples; it was a favourite watering-place of the ancient Roman nobility, and the beauty of its bay is celebrated by Virgil and Horace; it is rich in classic remains, and in its day has witnessed many sieges; the inhabitants are chiefly employed in fishing and a light coast trade.

GALATEA

GAGE, THOMAS, English general, son of Viscount Gage; he served in the Seven Years' War, and took part in 1755 in Braddock's disastrous expedition in America; in 1760 he became military governor of Montreal, and three years later commander-in-chief of the British forces in America; as governor of Massachusetts he precipitated the revolution by his ill-timed severity, and after the battle of Bunker's Hill was recalled to England (1721-1787).

GAIA, or GE, in the Greek mythology the primeval goddess of the earth, the alma mater of living things, both in heaven and on earth, called subsequently Demeter, i.e. Gemeter, Earth-mother.

GAILLARD, French historian, born in Amiens; devoted his life to history (1726-1806).

GAINFORD, 1ST BARON (J.A. Pease), British industrialist and politician. Born in Charlton he became M.P. in 1862, held various ministerial posts; in 1811 became Minister of Education, and in 1816 Postmaster-General. He was raised to the peerage in 1816, and on the formation of the British Broadcasting Corporation became its Vice-president (1860-).

GAINSBOROUGH, THOMAS, one of England's greatest artists in portrait and landscape painting, born in Sudbury, Suffolk; he early displayed a talent for drawing, and at 14 was sent to London to study art; when 19 he started as a portrait-painter at Ipswich, having by this time married Margaret Burr, a young lady with £200 a year; patronised by Sir Philip Thicknesse, he removed in 1740 to Bath, where he rose into high favour, and in 1774 he sought a wider field in London; he shared the honours of painting portraits with Reynolds and of landscape with Wilson; his portraits have more of grace, if less of genius, than Reynolds', while his landscapes inaugurated a freer and more genial manner of dealing with nature, while as a colourist Ruskin declares him the greatest since Rubens; among his most famous pictures are portraits of Mrs. Siddons, the Duchess of Devonshire, and the Hon. Mrs. Graham, "Shepherd Boy in the Shower," "The Scashore," and "Blue Boy" (1727-1788).

GAUS, a Roman jurist of the 2nd century, whose "Institutes" served for the basis of Justinian's.

GALAHAD, SIR, son of Lancelot, one of the Knights of the Round Table; distinguished for the immaculate purity of his character and life; was successful in his search for the Holy Grail.

GALAOE, a hero of Spanish romance, brother of Amadis de Gaul, the model of a courtly paladin, and always ready with his sword to avenge the wrongs of the widow and the orphan.

GALAPAGOS, a sparsely populated group of islands (13 in number), barren on the N., but well wooded on the S., situated on the equator, 600 m. W. of Ecuador, which, although they belong to Ecuador, all bear English names, bestowed upon them, it would appear, by the buccanniers of the 17th century; Albemarle Island makes up more than half of their area; they are volcanic in formation, and some of their 2000 craters are not yet inactive; their fauna is of peculiar scientific interest as exhibiting many species unknown elsewhere; besides the islands proper there is a vast number of islets and rocks.

GALATA, a faubourg of Constantinople where the European merchants reside.

GALATEA, a nymph to whom Polyphemus made love, but who preferred Aëtes to him, whom therefore he made away with by crushing the latter under a rock, in consequence of which the nymph threw herself into the sea.

GALATIA, a high-lying Roman province in Asia Minor that had been invaded and taken possession of by a horde of Gauls in the 3rd century B.C., whence the name.

GALATIANS, EPISTLE TO THE, an epistle of St. Paul to the churches in Galatia, which was an especial favourite with Luther, as, with its doctrine of spiritual freedom in Christ, it might well be, for it corroborated the great revelation first made to him by a neighbour monk: "man is not saved by sinful masses, but by the grace of God"; it is a didactic epistle, in assertion, on the one hand, of freedom from the law, and, on the other, of the power of the spirit.

GALATZ, or GALACZ, the great river-port of Rumania, on the Danube, 8 m. above the Sulina mouth of the river and 166 m. N.E. of Bucharest; the new town is well laid out, and contains some fine buildings; its harbour is one of the finest on the Danube; a great export trade is carried on in cereals, while textiles and metals are the chief imports.

GALAXY. See MILKY WAY.

GALBA, SESVIUS SULPICIUS, a Roman emperor from June, 68, to January, 69, elected at the age of 70 by the Gallic legions to succeed Nero, but for his severity and avarice was slain by the Praetorian guard, who proclaimed Otho emperor in his stead.

GALE, THEOPHILUS, a Nonconformist divine; author of the "Court of the Gentiles," in which he attempts to prove that the theology and philosophy of the Gentiles was borrowed from the Scriptures (1628-1678).

GALE, THOMAS, dean of York; edited classics, and wrote an early English history (1636-1702).

GALEN, or CLAUDIUS GALENUS, a famous Greek physician, born in Pergamum, in Illyria, where, after studying in various cities, he settled in 158; subsequently he went to Rome, and eventually became physician to the emperors M. Aurelius, L. Verus, and Severus; of his voluminous writings 83 treatises are still extant, and these treat of a varied array of subjects, philosophical as well as professional; for centuries after his death his works were accepted as authoritative in the matter of medicine (131-201).

GALE, RIUS, VALERIUS MAXIMUS, Roman emperor, born in Dacia, of lowly parentage; rose from a common soldier to be the son-in-law of the Emperor Diocletian, who in 292 raised him to the dignity of a Caesar; in 305, on the death of Diocletian, he became head of the Eastern Empire, which he continued to be till his death in 311; his name is associated with a cruel persecution of the Christians under Diocletian.

GALGAOUS, a Caledonian chief defeated by Agricola at the battle of the Granupian in 85, after a desperate resistance.

GALIA, NIL, FERDINANDO, an Italian political economist, man of letters, and a wit; held with honour several important offices under the Neapolitan Government; was attaché to the embassy at Paris, and the associate of Grinim and Diderot (1728-1787).

GALICIA, (1) an old province of Spain, formerly a kingdom in the NW. corner of it, fronting the Bay of Biscay and the Atlantic; now divided into the four minor provinces, Coruña, Lugo, Orense, Pontevedra; the county is hilly, well watered, fertile, and favoured with a fine climate, but cultivated only very partially; some mining is carried on.

(2) A province of Poland; the land is fertile, consists chiefly of extensive plains, well watered by the Dniester and other large rivers, and yields abundance of cereals, while one-fourth is covered with forest; timber is largely exported, and salt; many of the useful metals are found, and productive petroleum wells; Austria annexed it in 1772, and it was ceded to Poland in 1919.

GALLIENANS, a fanatical sect, followers of one Judas of Galilee, who fiercely resented the taxation of the Romans, and whose violence contributed to induce the latter to vow the extermination of the whole race.

GALLILEE, the northern division of Palestine, divided into Upper and Lower, about 60 m. long and 30 broad.

GALLILEE, SEA OF, an expansion of the Jordan, 12½ m.

long, and at the most 8 m. broad, enclosed by steep mountains, except on NW.

GALLILEO, an illustrious Italian mathematician, physicist, and astronomer, born in Pisa, demonstrated the isochronism of the pendulum, invented the thermometer and the hydrostatic balance, propounded the law of falling bodies, constructed the first astronomical telescope, and by means of it satisfied himself of, and proved, the truth of the Copernican doctrine, that the sun and not the earth is the centre of the planetary system, and that the earth revolves round it like the other planets which reflect its light; his insistence on this truth provoked the hostility of the Church, and an ecclesiastical decree which pronounced the Copernican theory heresy; for the profession of it he was brought to the bar of the Inquisition, where he was compelled to forswear it by oath, concluding his recantation, it is said, with the exclamation, "still, it moves"; before his end he became blind, and died in Florence at 78, the year Newton was born (1564-1642).

GALL, FRANZ JOSEPH, the founder of phrenology, born in Tiefenbrunn, on the borders of Baden and Württemberg; in 1785 he established himself as a physician in Vienna, where for many years he carried on a series of elaborate investigations on the nature of the brain and its relation to the outer cranium, visiting with that view lunatic asylums, &c.; in 1796 he gave publicity to his views in a series of lectures in Vienna, which were, however, condemned as subversive of morality and religion; being joined by Spurzheim, who adopted his theories, he undertook a lecturing tour through a large part of Europe, and eventually settled at Paris, where he published his phrenological work "Fonctions du Cerveau"; it is a curious fact that on his death his skull was found to be twice the usual thickness, and that there was a tumour in the cerebellum (1758-1828).

GALL, ST., an Irish monk who, about 585, accompanied St. Columban to France in his missionary labours, but, being banished thence, went to Switzerland, and founded a monastery on the Lake of Comstance, which bore his name; d. about 646.

GALLAND, ANTOINE, French Orientalist, born in Picardy, professor of Arabic in the College of France; was the first to translate the "Arabian Nights" into any European tongue (1646-1715).

GALLAS, an Ethiopian race occupying the S. and E. of Abyssinia, energetic, intelligent, and war-like; follow mostly pastoral occupations; number over four millions, and are mostly heathens.

GALLE, or POINT DE GALLE, fortified seaport town, prettily situated on a rocky promontory in the SW. of Ceylon; there is a good harbour, but the shipping, which at one time was extensive, has declined since the rise of Colombo.

GALLI-CURCI, AMELITA, Italian soprano singer. Born in Milan she studied at the local conservatoire, won a prize there at 16, and made her opera début at Rome in 1913, subsequently singing in South America, New York, and London.

GALLICAN CHURCH, the Catholic Church in France which, while sincerely devoted to the Catholic faith and the Holy See, resolutely refused to concede certain rights and privileges which belonged to it from the earliest times; it steadfastly contended that infallibility was vested not in the Pope alone, but in the entire episcopal body under him as its head; it maintained the supreme authority of general councils and that of the holy canons in the government of the Church, and insisted that there was a distinction between the temporal and the spiritual power; these contentions were summed up in a declaration of the French clergy in 1682, their opponents being known by the name of "Ultramontanists."

GALLICANISM, the name given to the contention of the Gallican Church (q.v.).

GALLIENUS, PUBLIUS LICINIUS, Roman Emperor from 260 to 268, and for seven years (253-260) associated in the government with his father, the Emperor Valerian; under his lax rule the empire was subjected to hostile invasions on all sides, while in the provinces a succession of usurpers, known as the Thirty Tyrants, sprang up, disowning allegiance and aspiring to the title of Caesar; in his later years he roused himself to vigorous resistance, but in 268 was murdered by his own soldiers whilst pressing the rebel Aureolus at the siege of Milan.

GALLIGANTUA, the wizard giant slain by Jack the Giant-killer.

GALLIO, the Roman proconsul of Achaia in the days of St. Paul, before whom the Jews of Corinth brought an appeal against the Apostle which he treated with careless indifference as no affair of his, in consequence of which his name has become the synonym of an easy-going ruler or prince.

GALLIPOLI, (1) a fortified seaport town in Southern Italy, 50 m. S. of Brindisi; stands on a rocky islet in the Gulf of Taranto, close to the mainland, with which it is connected by a bridge of 12 arches; a fine cathedral and huge tanks hewn out of the solid rock for the storage of olive-oil are objects of interest. (2) A seaport in Europe, under the dominion of the League of Nations, stands on a peninsula of the same name at the western end of the Sea of Marmora, at the mouth of the Dardanelles, 90 m. S. of Adrianople; it was the first city captured by the Turks in Europe (1356), and the peninsula was the site of the Dardanelles campaign in 1915 during the Great War.

GALLOWAY, a district in the S.W. of Scotland, co-extensive with Wigtown and Kirkcudbright, though formerly of considerably greater extent; the lack of mineral wealth has retarded its development, and the industry of the population is limited chiefly to agriculture, the rearing of sheep and cattle, and fishing, while it is still noted for a small but hardy breed of horses called Galloways; the province derives its name from Gall-Gael, or foreign Gaels, as the early inhabitants were called, who up to the time of the Reformation maintained the characteristics, language, &c., of a distinct people; in 1455 Galloway ceased to exist as a separate lordship; in the extreme S. of Wigtown is the bold and rocky promontory, the Mull of Galloway, the extremity of the peninsula called the Kilmory of Galloway; the Mull, which is the most southerly point in Scotland, rises to a height of 210 ft., and is crowned by a powerful lighthouse.

GALSWINTHE, the sister of Brunhilda and the second wife of Chilperic I.; was strangled to death in 568.

GALSWORTHY, JOHN, British novelist. Educated at Harrow and Oxford, he became a barrister, but spent most of his time writing and travelling. "The Island Pharisees," published in 1904, was his first notable work, and was followed by a number of books mostly realistic studies of middle-class life, of which the "Forsyte Saga" is the most important. He has also written "The Silver Box," "Strife" and other successful plays 1867-.

GALL, JOHN, Scottish novelist, born in Irvine; educated at Greenock, where he held a post in the Custom-house for a time; essayed literature, wrote "The Ayrshire Legatees," "The Annals of the Parish," "Sir Andrew Wylie," "The Entail," and "The Provost"; died of paralysis at Greenock (1776-1839).

GALTON, SIR FRANCIS, British scientist, carried out investigations in heredity and psychology; he was the first to make clear the continuity of germ plasma and founded the science of eugenics (1822-1911).

GALVANISED IRON, plate-iron coated with zinc, which renders it less liable to be affected by moisture and subject to corrosion.

GALVANI, LUIGI, an Italian physician, born in Bologna; celebrated for his discoveries in animal magnetism called after him Galvanism, due to an observation he made of the convulsive motion produced in the leg of a recently-killed frog (1787-1798).

GALVANOMETER, an instrument for measuring electric currents by means of their effect upon a suspended magnetic needle.

GALVESTON, the chief seaport of Texas, situated on a low island of the same name at the entrance of Galveston Bay into the Gulf of Mexico; it has a splendid harbour, and is an important centre of the cotton trade, ranking as the third cotton port of the world; the city is well laid out, and is the see of a Roman Catholic bishop; it has a medical college and several foundries.

GALWAY, a maritime county in the W. of Ireland, in the province of Connaught; Lough Corrib (25 m. long) and Lough Mask (12 m. long), stretching N. and S., divide the county into East and West districts; the former is boggy, yet arable; the latter, including the picturesque district known as Connemara, is wild and hilly, and chiefly consists of bleak moorass and bogland; its rocky and indented coast affords excellent harbours in many places; the Suck, Shannon, and Corrib are the chief rivers; the Slieve Boughda Mountains in the S. and in the W. the Twelve Pins (2395 ft.) are the principal mountains; fishing, some agriculture, and cattle-rearing are the chief employments; it contains many interesting cromlechs and ruins.

GALWAY, the capital of Connaught and of the county of that name; is situated on the N. side of Galway Bay, at the mouth of the Corrib River, 50 m. NW. of Limerick; it is divided into the old and new town, and contains several interesting ecclesiastical buildings, e.g. the cruciform church of St. Nicholas (1320), and is the seat of a Queen's College; fishing is an important industry, while wool and black marble are exported.

GAMA, VASCO DA, a famous Portuguese navigator, the discoverer of the route to India round the Cape of Good Hope, born in Sines, in Portugal, of good family; he seems to have won the favour of King Emmanuel at an early age, and, already an experienced mariner, was in 1497 despatched on his celebrated voyage, in which he rounded the Cape; on that occasion he made his way to Calicut, in India, where he had to contend with the enmity of the natives, stirred against him by jealous Arabian merchants; in 1499 he returned to Lisbon, was received with great honour, and had conferred on him an array of high-sounding titles; three years later he was appointed to the command of an expedition to Calicut to avenge the massacre of a small Portuguese settlement founded there a year previous by Cabral; in connection with this expedition he founded the colonies of Mozambique and Sofala, and after inflicting a cruel punishment upon the natives of Calicut, he returned to Lisbon in 1503; the following 20 years of his life were spent in retirement at Evora, but in 1524 he was appointed viceroy of Portuguese India, a position he held only for a short time, but sufficiently long to re-establish Portuguese power in India; he died at Cochín; the incidents of his famous first voyage round the Cape are celebrated in Camoens' memorable poem "The Lusiad" (1469-1524).

GAMALIEL, a Jewish rabbi, the instructor of St. Paul in the knowledge of the law, and distinguished for his tolerant spirit and forbearance in dealing with the Apostles in their seeming departure from the Jewish faith.

GAMBETTA, LEON MICHEL, a French republican leader, born in Cahors, of Italian descent; intended for the Church, to which he evinced no proclivity, he early showed a penchant for politics and adopted the profession of law, in the prosecution of which he delivered a speech which marked him out as the coming man of the French republic, from the spirit of hostility it manifested against the Empire; at the fall of the Empire he stood high in public regard, assumed the direction of affairs, and made desperate attempts to repel the invading Germans; though he failed in this, he never ceased to feel the shame of the loss of Alsace and Lorraine, and strove hard to recover them, but all his efforts proved ineffectual, and he died in Dec. 31, 1882 to the grief of the nation (1838-1882).

GAMBIA, (1) a river of W. Africa, that flows through Senegambia and discharges itself into the Atlantic at Bathurst after a course of more than 1400 m. into a splendid estuary which, in some parts, has a breadth of 27 m. but contracts to 2 m. at the seaward end; light craft can ascend as far as Barracondia, 400 m. from the mouth. (2) A British settlement lying along the banks of the Gambia as far as Georgetown, with a protectorate to Barracondia; it enjoys a separate government under a British administrator, and produces hides, cotton, rice, and ground-nuts; chief town, Bathurst.

GAMBIER, JAMES, LORD, British admiral, born in the Bahamas; at 22 he was created a post-captain; in 1781 distinguished himself in an engagement against the French at Jersey; and again under Lord Howe in 1794 he rendered material service in repulsing the French off Ushant; in the following year he was made rear-admiral, and in 1799 vice-admiral; for his gallant conduct as commander of the English fleet at the bombardment of Copenhagen he was made a baron; a dispute with Lord Cochrane at the battle of Aix Roads against the French led to his being court-martialled, but he was honourably acquitted; on the accession of William IV. he was made admiral of the fleet (1756-1839).

GAMBLING LAWS. Laws making debts due to gambling irrecoverable at law were passed in the reigns of Charles II. and Queen Anne. Subsequent laws were passed in 1845 and 1874, and ready-money football betting was prohibited in 1920.

GAMMA RAYS, name given to the X-rays of very short wave-length emitted during certain radioactive changes.

GAMP, SARAH, a nurse in Dickens' "Martin Chuzzlewit," famous for her bulky umbrella, and for confirming her opinions of things by a constant reference to the authority of an imaginary Mrs. Harris.

GANDHI, MOHANDAS KARAMCHAND, Indian politician and leader of the anti-British party favouring non-co-operation as a means of gaining independence. Born in Porbandar, he was married at the age of 12, went to England at 19 to study law, spent some time in South Africa, and then became a vigorous opponent of British rule in India, exercising almost a religious sway over the natives. He was arrested in 1922 and imprisoned for two years, and in 1930, when he led another campaign against British rule, he was again imprisoned (1876-).

GANDO, a native State traversed by the Niger in Western Sudan, lying upon the NW. border of Sokoto, of which it is a dependency; like Sokoto it has been brought within the sphere of influence of the British Royal Niger Company; the inhabitants belong to the Fulah race, and profess the Mohammedan religion; Gando is also the name of the capital, an active centre of the cotton trade.

GANELOIN, a count of Mayenne, one of Charlemagne's paladins; trusted by him but faithless, and a traitor to his cause; is placed by Dante in the lowest hell.

GANESHA, the Hindu god with an elephant's head and four arms; the inspirer of cunning devices and good counsel, afterwards the patron of letters and learned men.

GANGES, the great sacred river of India, which, though somewhat shorter than the Indus, drains a larger area and traverses a more fertile basin; it has its source in an ice-cave on the southern side of the Himalayas, 8 m. above Gangotri, at an elevation of 18,800 ft. above the sea-level; at this its first stage it is known as the Bhagirathi, and not until 133 m. from its source does it assume the name of Ganges, having already received two tributaries: issuing from the Himalayas at Sukhi, it flows in a more or less southerly course to Allahabad, where it receives the Jumna, and thence makes its way by the plains of Behar and past Benares to Calcutta, where it is joined by the Brahmaputra; the united stream, lessened by innumerable offshoots, pursues a SE. course till joined by the Meghna, and under that name enters the Bay of Bengal; its most noted offshoot is the Hooghly (q.v.), which pursues a course to the S. of the Meghna; between these lies the Great Delta, which begins to take shape 220 m. inland from the Bay of Bengal; the Ganges is 1557 m. in length, and offers for the greater part an excellent waterway; it is held in great reverence as a sacred stream whose waters have power to cleanse from all sin, while burial on its banks is believed to ensure eternal happiness, and to be cast into its waters after death is to gain eternal peace.

GANGES CANAL, constructed mainly for the purpose of irrigating the arid land stretching between the Ganges and the Jumna Rivers, originally extended from Hardwar to Cawnpore and Etawah, but has since been greatly enlarged, and at present (including branches) has a total extent of 3700 m., of which 500 m. are navigable; it has contributed to mitigate suffering caused by famines by affording a means of distributing ready relief.

GANGRENE, the first stage of mortification in any part of a living body.

GANGWAY, a passage in the House of Commons, running across the house, which separates the independent members from the supporters of the Government and the Opposition.

GANYMEDES, a beautiful youth, whom Zeus, attracted by his beauty, carried off, disguised as an eagle, to heaven; having had immortality conferred upon him, he was made cup-bearer of the gods instead of Hebe.

GAO, KARVEH, or KARVAH, a Persian blacksmith, whose sons had been slain to feed the serpents of the reigning tyrant, he raised his leather apron on a spear, and with that for a standard excited a revolt; the revolt proved successful, and the apron became the standard of the new dynasty, which it continued to be till supplanted by the crescent.

GARAY, JÁNOS, Hungarian poet, born in Szeged; his life was spent chiefly in Pesth, where he held a post in the university library; he published a number of dramas which show traces of German influence, and was also the author of a book of lyrics as well as tales (1812-1853).

GARCIA, MANUEL, a noted singer and composer, born in Seville; in 1808 he went to Paris with a reputation already gained at Madrid and Cadiz; till 1824 he was of high repute in London and Paris as an operatic tenor; and in the following year visited the United States; he spent his closing years in Paris as a teacher of singing, his voice being greatly impaired by age as well as fatigue; his eldest daughter was the celebrated Madame Malibran, and his son, Manuel (1805-1906), a celebrated teacher of singing, was the inventor of the laryngoscope (1775-1832).

GARCIA, DON PEDRO, a mythical don mentioned in the preface to "Gil Blas" as buried with a small bag of doubloons, and the epitaph, "Here lies interred the soul of Licentiate Pedro Garcia."

GARCILASO, called the INCA, as descended from the royal family of Peru; lived at Cordova; wrote "History of Peru," as well as a "History of Florida" (1530-1568).

GARCILASO DE LA VEGA, a Spanish poet, born in Toledo, a soldier by profession; accompanied Charles V. on his expeditions; died fighting bravely in battle; his poems consist of sonnets, elegies, &c., and reveal an unexpected tenderness (1503-1536).

GARCIN DE TASSY, JOSEPH HÉLIOPORE, Indian Orientalist, born in Marseilles; founded the Asiatic Society (1794-1878).

GARD, a dep. in the S. of France, between the Cevennes and the Rhône; slopes to the Rhône and the sea, with a marshy coast; produces wine and olives, and is noted for its silk-culture and breed of horses.

GARDA, LAGO DI, the largest of the Italian lakes; stretches amidst beautiful Alpine scenery, between Lombardy and Venetia. It is 35 m. long, but from 2 to 10 broad. Its water is remarkably clear, and has a depth of 967 ft. It is studded with many picturesque islands, and is traversed by steamers.

GARDE NATIONALE, of France, a body of armed citizens organized in Paris in 1789 for the defence of the citizen interest, and soon by extensions throughout the country made a force of great national importance; the colours they adopted were the famous tricolor of red, white, and blue, and their first commandant was Lafayette. In 1795 they helped to repress the Paris mob, and under Napoleon were retained in service. They played a prominent part in the Revolutions of 1830 and 1848, supporting the revolutionists; but in 1852 their powers were curtailed, and in 1871 they were dissolved by the National Assembly.

GARDEN CITIES, modern model villages, of which the pioneer was that at Letchworth, near Hitchin, built in 1899.

GARDES SUISSES, a celebrated corps of the French army, formed in 1616 for defence of royalty, and numbering 2000. During the great Revolution they gallantly defended the Louvre, but were overawed and overpowered almost to annihilation by the infuriated Paris mob. The corps was finally disbanded in 1830.

GARDINER, COLONEL JAMES, a Scottish officer of dragons, noted for his bravery and piety; served under Marlborough; fell at Prestonpans; his life was written by Dr. Doddridge, and is much prized by religious people (1698-1748).

GARDINER, SAMUEL RAWSON, English historian, born in Ropley, Hants; his chief historical works include "History of England" in the reign of James I. and Charles I.; "History of the Civil War," in four vols., and the "History of the Protectorate," a most impartial and accurate historian (1820-1902).

GARDINER, STEPHEN, bishop of Winchester, born in Bury St. Edmunds; was secretary to Wolsey; promoted the divorce of Queen Catherine, and was made bishop; imprisoned in the Tower under Edward VI.; restored to his see, and made Chancellor under Mary (1488-1555).

GARFIELD, JAMES ABRAM, President of the United States, born in Orange, Ohio; reared amid lowly surroundings; at the age of ten began to help his widowed mother by working as a farm-servant; an invincible passion for learning prompted him to devote the long winters to study, till he was able as a student to enter Hiram College, and subsequently William's College, Massachusetts, where, in 1856, he graduated; in the following year he became President of Hiram College, and, devoting his attention to the study of law, in 1859 became a member of the State Senate; he took an active part on the side of the Federalists in the Civil War, and distinguished himself in several engagements, rising to be major-general; in his thirty-third year he entered Congress, and soon came to the front, acting latterly as leader of the Republican party; in 1880 he became a member of the Senate, and in the same year was elected to the Presidency; he signalled his tenure of the presidential office by endeavouring to purify and reform the civil service, but this attempt drew on him the odium of a section of his party, and on July 2, 1881, he was shot down by Charles Guiteau, a disappointed place-hunter; after a prolonged struggle with death he succumbed on September 19 (1881-1891).

GARGANTUA, a gigantic personage, in Rabelais' satire of the name of preternaturally lusty appetite and gauding and gourmandising power; lived several centuries, and begat Pantagruel.

GARIBALDI, GIUSEPPE, Italian patriot, began life as a sailor, associated himself enthusiastically with Massini for the liberation of his country, but being convicted of conspiracy fled to South America, where, both as a privateer and a soldier, he gave his services to the young republics struggling there for life; returned to Europe, and took part in the defence of Rome against France, but being defeated fled to New York, to return to the Isle of Caprea, hiding his time; joined the Piedmontese against Austria, and in 1860 set himself to assist in the overthrow of the kingdom of Naples and the union of Italy under Victor Emmanuel; landing in Calabria and entering Naples, he drove the royal forces before him without striking a blow, after which he returned to his retreat at Caprea, ready still to draw sword, and occasionally offering it again, in the cause of republicanism (1807-1882).

GARNET, a well-known precious stone of a vitreous lustre, and usually of a dark-red colour, resembling a ruby, but also found in various other shades, e.g. black, green, and yellow. The finest specimens are brought from Ceylon, Peru, and Greenland. The crystal known as Pyrope, when cut in a shallow drop, is called a carbuncle.

GARNETT, HENRY, a noted Jesuit, son of a Nottingham schoolmaster, implicated in the Gunpowder Plot; bred in the Protestant faith, he early turned Catholic and went abroad and joined the Jesuit order; in 1688 he returned to England as Superior of the English Jesuits, and engaged in various intrigues; on the discovery of the Gunpowder Plot he was arrested, found guilty of cognisance of the Plot, and executed (1655-1606).

GARNETT, RICHARD, philologist, born in Otley, Yorkshire, Keeper of the Printed Books in the British Museum, and one of the founders of the Philological Society, and contributor to its Proceedings (1789-1850).

GARONNE, an important river of SW.

rises in the Val d'Aran in the Spanish Pyrenees; 26 m. from its source it enters France near Pont du Roi, and after it passes Toulouse flows in a north-westerly direction; joined by the Dordogne, 30 m. below Toulouse, it gradually widens into the Gironde estuary, which opens on the Bay of Biscay; it has a length of 346 m., and is freely navigable as far as Toulouse.

GARRICK, DAVID, a famous English actor and dramatist, born in Hereford; was educated at Lichfield, the home of his mother, and was for some months in his nineteenth year a pupil of Samuel Johnson; in 1787 he accompanied Johnson to London, with the intention of entering the legal profession, but soon abandoned the purpose, and started in the wine business with his brother; in 1741 he commenced his career as an actor, making his first appearance at Ipswich; in the autumn of the same year he returned to London, and as Richard III. achieved instant success; with the exception of a sojourn upon the Continent for two years, his life was spent mainly in the metropolis in the active pursuit of his profession; in 1747 he became patentee, along with James Lacy, of Drury Lane Theatre, which he continued to direct until his retirement from the stage in 1776; three years later he died, and was buried in Westminster Abbey; his wife, Eva Maria Violette, a celebrated dancer of Viennese birth, whom he married in 1749, survived him till 1822, dying at the advanced age of 98 (1717-1790).

GARRISON, WILLIAM LLOYD, American journalist and abolitionist, born in Newburyport, Mass.; in his native town he rose to be editor of the Herald at 19, and five years later became joint-editor of the Genius of Universal Emancipation; his vigorous denunciation of slavery involved him in a charge of libel and brought about his imprisonment, from which he was liberated by a friend paying his fine; at Boston, in 1831, he founded his celebrated Liberator, a paper in which he unflinchingly and in the face of violent threats, advocated his anti-slavery opinions till 1865, when the cause was won; he visited England on several occasions in support of emancipation, and in 1868 his great labours in the cause were recognised by a gift of 30,000 dollars from his friends (1804-1879).

GARTER, THE MOST NOBLE ORDER OF THE, a celebrated order of knighthood instituted in 1349 by King Edward III.; the original number of the knights was 26, of whom the sovereign was head; but this number has been increased by extending the honour to descendants of (George I., II., and III., and also to distinguished foreigners; it is the highest order of knighthood, and its initials are K.G.; the insignia of the order includes surcoat, mantle, star, &c., but the knights are chiefly distinguished by a garter of blue velvet worn on the left leg below the knee, and bearing the inscription in gold letters Honi soit qui mal y pense. "Evil be to him that evil thinks"; ribbon, Garter Blue; election to the order lies with the sovereign.

GARTER, SIR SAMUEL, a distinguished physician, born in co. Durham; had an extensive practice; author of a mock-heroic poem entitled "The Dispensary" (1661-1719).

GAS ENGINES, internal combustion engines using as a fuel coal gas, producer gas, or the waste gases from blast furnaces; the first practical gas engine was built by Lenoir, a Frenchman, in 1860; improvements appeared in the designs of the Otto engine (1876), the Clerk engine (1886), and later in the Still engine.

GASCOIGNE, SIR WILLIAM, English judge, born in Gawthorpe, Yorkshire; during Richard II.'s reign he practised in the law courts, and in 1397 became king's serjeant; three years later he was raised to the Lord Chief-Justiceship; his single-eyed devotion to justice was strikingly exemplified in his refusal to pass sentence of death on Archbishop Scrope; the story of his committing Prince Henry to prison, immortalised by Shakespeare, is unauthenticated (1380-1419).

GASCONY, an ancient province of SW. France, lying between the Atlantic, the Pyrenees, and the Garonne; it included several of the present departments; the province was of Basque origin, but ultimately became united with Aquitaine, and was added to the territory of the French crown in 1453; the Gascons still retain their traditional characteristics; they are of dark complexion and small in stature, vivacious and boastful, but have a high reputation for integrity.

GASKELL, MRS., nee STEVENSON, novelist and biographer, born at Cheyne Row, Chelsea; authoress of "Mary Barton," "Cranford," "Sylvia's Lovers," &c., and the "Life of Charlotte Brontë," her friend (1810-1865).

GASOLENE, a name for petroleum motor spirit or benzine.

GASSENDI, PIERRE, a French mathematician and philosopher, born in Provence; declared against scholastic methods out of deference to the empirical; controverted the metaphysics of Descartes; became the head of a school opposed to him; adopted the philosophy of Epicurus and contributed to the science of astronomy, and was the friend of Kepler, Galileo, and Hobbes; was a great admirer of Bayle, the head of a school of Pyrrhonists, tending to materialism (1592-1655).

GASSNER, JOHANN JOSEPH, a noted "exorcist," born in Bludenz, in the Tyrol; while a Catholic priest at Kloster he gained a wide celebrity by professing to "cast out devils" and to work cures on the sick by means simply of prayer; he was deposed as an impostor, but the bishop of Ratibon, who believed in his honesty, bestowed upon him the curé of Bendorf (1727-1779).

GASTEROPODS, a group of mollusks with a spiral shell, including living forms such as whelks, snails, &c.; gasteropoda are abundant as fossils, especially in the tertiary beds.

GATAKER, THOMAS, an English divine, member of the Westminster Assembly; disapproved of the introduction of the Covenant, declared for Episcopacy, and opposed the trial of Charles I. (1574-1654).

GATE OF TEARS, the strait of Bah-el-Mandeb, so called from the shipwrecks associated with it.

GATES, HORATIO, an American general, born in Maldon, Essex, in England; served as an English officer in America till the peace of 1763, and then retired to Virginia; in the War of Independence he fought on the side of America, and, as commander of the northern army, defeated the English at Saratoga in 1777; so great was his popularity in consequence of this victory that ill-advised efforts were made to place him over Washington, but in 1780 he suffered a crushing defeat at the hands of the British at Camden, and was court-martialed; acquitted in 1782, he again retired to Virginia, and subsequently in 1800 removed to New York, having first emancipated and provided for his slaves (1728-1809).

GATESHEAD, an English town, situated on the Tyne, on N. border of Durham; it is united to Newcastle by three bridges spanning the river; it contains some handsome and interesting buildings, besides extensive ironworks, foundries, soap, glass, and chemical manufactures; it was here Defoe lived when he wrote "Robinson Crusoe."

GATH, Goliath's town, a city of the Philistines, on a cliff 12 m. N.E. of Ashdod.

GATLING, RICHARD JORDAN, the inventor of the Gatling gun, born in Hertford County, N. Carolina, U.S.; he was bred to and graduated in medicine, but in 1849 settled in Indianapolis and engaged in land and railway speculation; his famous machine-gun, capable of firing 1200 shots a minute, was brought out in 1861; another invention of his was a steam-plough (1818-1903).

GATTY, MRS., writer of tales for young people, "Parables from Nature," and editor of Aunt Judy's Magazine; daughter of the chaplain of the Victory, Nelson's ship at Trafalgar, in whose arms Nelson breathed his last (1809-1873).

GAUCHOS, a name bestowed upon the natives of the pampas of S. America; they are of Indo-Spanish descent, and are chiefly engaged in pastoral pursuits, herding cattle, &c.; they are dexterous horsemen, skilled in the use of the lasso, and are courteous and hospitable; the wide-brimmed sombrero and loose poncho are characteristic articles of their dress.

GAUDEN, JOHN, bishop of Worcester; protested against the trial of Charles I., and after his execution published "Elkon Basilike" (q.v.), or the "Portraiture of his Sacred Majesty in his Solitude and Sufferings," which he declared was written by him (1605-1669).

GAUGUIN, PAUL, French painter. He ran away to sea as a boy, returned to enter into business, and took up painting at the age of 30. Of romantic temperament he delighted in highly decorative work, and in search of colour he settled in Tahiti in the Pacific where he died (1848-1903).

GAUL, the name the ancients gave to two distinct regions, the one Cisalpine Gaul, on the Roman side of the Alps, embracing the N. of Italy, as long inhabited by Gallic tribes; and the other Transalpine Gaul, beyond the Alps from Rome, and extending from the Alps to the Pyrenees, from the ocean to the Rhine, inhabited by different races; subdued by Julius Cæsar 58-50 B.C., and divided by Augustus into four provinces.

GAUNT, JOHN OF, Duke of Lancaster, third son of Edward III., born in Ghent, who in 1362 succeeded to the estates of his father-in-law, the Duke of Lancaster; having in 1372 married, as his second wife, the daughter of the king of Castile, he made an unsuccessful attempt to seize the Castilian throne; in the later years of Edward III.'s reign he took an active part in public affairs, and by his opposition to the national party and overbearing conduct towards the Commons made himself obnoxious to the people; for selfish motives he for a time supported Wycliffe, but in 1381 the Peasant Revolt drove him into Scotland; in 1386 he made another ineffectual attempt to gain the crown of Castile; in his later years he was engaged in various embassies in France (1339-1399).

GAUR, or LAKHNAUTI, the ancient capital of Bengal, now in ruins, but with Hindu remains of exceptional interest, is situated 4 m. S. of Malda, between the rivers Ganges and Mahananda; the city is believed to have been founded in the 11th century; it fell into decay after the Mogul conquest in 1575, but pestilence and the deflection of the Ganges into a new channel accelerated its fate.

GAUSS, KARL FRIEDRICH, a celebrated German mathematician and astronomer, born in Brunswick; was director of the observatory at Göttingen for 40 years; was equally expert on theory of numbers and practice of calculation; he made important discoveries in magnetism, and was pronounced by Laplace the greatest mathematician in Europe (1776-1855).

GAUSS, unit used in electricity for the measurement of magnetic intensity, named after K. F. Gauss.

GAUTAMA, the name of the family Buddha belonged to, a Rajput clan which at the time of his birth was settled on the banks of the Rohini, a small affluent of the Gogra, about 137 m. N. of Benares.

GAUTIER, THÉOPHILE, a distinguished French poet, novelist, and critic, born in Tarbes; began life as a painter, but turning to literature soon attracted the attention of Sainte-Beuve by some studies in the old French authors; by-and-by he came under the influence of Victor Hugo, and in 1830 started his career as a poet by the publication of "Albertus," five years after which appeared his famous novel "Mademoiselle de Maupin"; for many years he was engaged in the work of art criticism for the Paris newspapers, and those of his critiques dealing with the drama have been republished and fill six vols.; both as poet and novelist, his works are numerous, while several delightful books of travel in Spain, Turkey, Algeria, &c., came from his pen (1811-1872).

GAVARNI, PAUL, the nom de plume of Sulpice Guillaume Chevallier, caricaturist, born in Paris; began life as an engineer's draughtsman, but soon turned his attention to his proper vocation as a cartoonist; most of his best work appeared in Le Charivari, but some of his bitterest and most earnest pictures, the fruit of a visit to London, appeared in L'Illustration; he also illustrated Balzac's novels, and Sue's "Wandering Jew" (1801-1860).

GAVAZZI, ALESSANDRO, an Italian anti-papal agitator, born in Bologna; admitted into the order of Barnabite monks, he later became professor of Rhetoric at Naples; one of the most energetic supporters of Pius IX. in his liberal policy, he afterwards withdrew his allegiance; joined the Revolution of 1848, and ultimately fled to England on the occupation of Rome by the French; as an anti-papal lecturer he showed considerable oratorical powers; delivered addresses in Italian in England and Scotland against the papacy, which were received with enthusiasm, although in Canada they led to riots (1806-1889).

GAVELKIND, a tenure obtaining in Kent, Northumberland, and Wales principally in the first named, which provided for descent of property to all the sons alike, the oldest to have the horse and arms and the youngest the homestead; a custom said to represent the socage tenure common to the country previous to the Norman Conquest.

GAWAIN, SIR, one of the Knights of the Round Table, King Arthur's nephew; celebrated for his courtesy and physical strength.

GAY, JOHN, an English poet, born in Barnstable the same year as Pope, a friend of his, to whom he dedicated his "Rural Sports"; was the author of a series of "Fables" and the "Beggars' Opera," a piece which was received with great enthusiasm, had a run of 63 nights and has been frequently revived, but which gave offence at Court, though it brought him the patronage of the Duke and Duchess of Queensberry, with whom he went to reside, and under whose roof he died; was buried in Westminster Abbey (1685-1732).

GAYA, chief town of a district of the same name in Bengal, on the Phalgu, 57 m. S. of Patna; it is a great centre of pilgrimage for Hindus, and has associations with Buddha; 100,000 pilgrims visit it annually.

GAY-LUSSAC, LOUIS JOSEPH, French chemist and physicist, born in St. Léonard, Haute-Vienne; at the Polytechnic School, Paris, his abilities attracted the attention of Berthollet (q.v.), who appointed him his assistant in the government chemical works at Arcueil; here he assiduously employed himself in chemical and physical research, in connection with which he made two balloon ascents; in 1809 he became professor of Chemistry at the Paris Polytechnic School; in 1832 was elected to a similar chair at the Jardin des Plantes; seven years later was created a peer of France, while in 1829 he became chief assayer to the Mint; his name is associated with many notable discoveries in chemistry and physics, e.g. the law of volumes, isolation of cyanogen; while he introduced new methods of organic analysis (1778-1850).

GAZA, a Philistine town, the gates of which Samson carried off by night; situated on a mound at the edge of the desert, 5 m. from the sea, it is a considerable place to this day.

GAZETTE, THE LONDON, an official newspaper in which government and legal notices are published, issued on Tuesdays and Fridays; originally a Venetian newspaper, the first of the kind, so called because a "gazetta," a Venetian coin a little less than a farthing in value, was charged each person who attended a public reading of the news-sheet.

GEIER, IBN HAYYAN, Arabic alchemist born in Tus, carried out many experiments in Bagdad and appears to have had a sound practical knowledge of chemistry well in advance of his age (740-813).

GED, WILLIAM, the inventor of stereotyping, born in Edinburgh, where he carried on business as a goldsmith; he endeavoured to push his new process of printing in London by joining in partnership with a capitalist, but, disappointed in his workmen and his partner, he returned despondent to Edinburgh; an edition of Sallust and two prayer-books (for Cambridge) were stereotyped by him (1690-1749).

GEDDES, ALEXANDER, Biblical scholar, born in Arradoul, Banffshire; was trained for the Catholic Church, and after prosecuting his studies at Paris was appointed to the charge of a Catholic congregation at Auchinclair; ten years later he was deposed for heresy, and removing to London took to literary work; his most notable performance is his unfinished translation of the Scriptures, and the notes appended, in which he reveals a very pronounced rationalistic conception of holy writ; this work, which anticipated the views of such men as Eichhorn and Paulus, lost him his status as a priest, although to the end he professed a sincere belief in Christianity; he was the author of volumes of poems, &c. (1737-1802).

GEDDES, RT. HON. SIR AUCKLAND, British politician, entering the House of Commons in 1817 he became successively Minister of National Service and President of the Board of Trade, in which capacity he dealt with the profiteering question. From 1820-1823 he was British Ambassador in America, after which he retired from politics (1879-).

GEDDES, RT. HON. SIR ERIC, British politician, brother of the preceding. Born in India of Scottish parents he went to America early in life to do railway work; returning to England he became deputy-manager of the North-Eastern Railway in 1903, and early in the Great War was in France as Director-General of Military Railways. He then entered Parliament, and became successively Controller of the Navy, 1st Lord of the Admiralty, and Minister of Transport. In the post-war Coalition Government he was entrusted with "the axe" to cut departmental expenditure. He abandoned politics for commerce in 1922 (1876-).

GEDDES, JENNY, an Edinburgh worthy who on July 23, 1837, immortalised herself by throwing her stool at the head of Laud's bishop as he proceeded from the desk of St. Giles's to read the Collect for the day, exclaiming as she did so, "Dell coik the wame o' thee, fause loon, would you say Mass at my lug?" which was followed by great uproar, and a shout, "A Pape, a Pape; stane him."

GEODES, PATRICK, British botanist and biologist, professor at Dundee; apart from his scientific work he took an active part in social and educational activities (1864-).

GEFFS, GUILLAUME, Belgian sculptor, born in Antwerp; executed a colossal work at Brussels, "Victims of the Revolution," and numerous statues and busts as well as imaginative productions; had two brothers distinguished also as sculptors (1806-1893).

GEELONG, a prettily laid out city of Victoria, on Corio Bay, 45 m. SW. of Melbourne. The gold discoveries of 1851 gave a stimulus to the town, which is now a busy centre of the wool trade, and has tanneries and paper works, &c. The harbourage is excellent, and in summer the town is a favourite resort as a watering-place.

GEFLE, a seaport, and the third commercial town in Sweden; capital of the län of Gefleborg; is situated on an inlet of the Gulf of Bothnia, midway between Falun and Upsala; has an interesting old castle, a school of navigation, and, since a destructive fire in 1869, has been largely rebuilt.

GEHENNA, the valley of Hinnom, on the S. of Jerusalem, with Tophet (q.v.) at its eastern end; became the symbol of hell from the fires kept burning in it night and day to consume the poisonous gases of the offal accumulated in it.

GEIBEL, EMANUEL VON, a celebrated German poet, born in Lübeck; was professor of Aesthetics at Munich; the tender, sentimental passion that breathed in his poetry procured for him a widespread popularity, especially among women (1815-1864).

GEIGER, ABRAHAM, an eminent Hebrew scholar and Rabbi, born in Frankfurt-on-the-Main, and editor of the Zeitschrift für Jüdische Theologie; strove hard to break down the barrier of Jewish exclusiveness (1810-1874).

GEIJER, ERIC GUSTAV, great Swedish historian, born in Vermland; held a post in the Record Office, Stockholm; was a poet as well as a historian, his principal work being "History of the Swedish People" (1783-1847).

GEIKIE, SIR ARCHIBALD, geologist, born in Edinburgh; at the age of 20 he joined the Geological Survey of Scotland, and in 1867 became director; in 1870 he became Murchison professor of Geology at Edinburgh, and in 1881 was appointed chief director of the Geological Survey of Great Britain; in 1891 he was knighted, and from 1892 to 1898 was President of the British Association; was the author of various works on geology, written with great lucidity, as well as essays much appreciated (1835-1924).

GENIE, JAMES, geologist, brother of the preceding, born in Edinburgh; in 1882, after serving 21 years in the Geological Survey of Scotland, he succeeded his brother in the chair of Geology at Edinburgh; his principal work as a scientist is "The Great Ice Age"; his literary sympathies appear in his admirable volume of translations of "Songs and Lyrics of Heine" (1889-1915).

GEILER VON KAISERBERG, JOHANN, a famous German pulpit orator, born in Schaffhausen; Strasbourg was the principal scene of his labours; his writings include the "Narrenschiff," or "Ship of Fools" (1446-1510).

GELENIUS I., ST., Pope from 492 to 496; a vigorous man and strong assertor of the supremacy of the chair of St. Peter; G. II. also Pope from 1118 to 1119.

GELATINE, an albuminoid substance obtained from bones; it is used as glue, in the tanning industry and for photographic plates.

GELL, SIR WILLIAM, archaeologist, born in Hopton, Derbyshire; after graduating at Cambridge was elected to a Fellowship at Emmanuel College; his passion for classical antiquities led him latterly to settle in Italy, which bore fruit in various valuable works on the topography and antiquities of Troy, Pompeii, Rome, Attica, &c.; he had for some time previously been chamberlain to Queen Caroline, and appeared as a witness at her trial (1777-1836).

GELLERT, or KILLIKERT, a famous dog, which figures in Welsh tradition of the 13th century, and whose devotion and sad death are celebrated in a fine ballad written by the Hon. William Robert Spencer (1796-1834). The story is as follows: Prince Llewellyn on returning one day from the chase discovered the cradle of his child overturned and blood-stains on the floor. Immediately concluding that Gellert, whom he had left in charge of the child, had been the culprit, he plunged his sword into the breast of the dog and laid it dead. Too late he found his child safe hidden in the blankets, and by its side the dead body of an enormous wolf. Gellert's tomb is still pointed out in the village of Beddgelert on the S. of Snowdon. A story similar even to this is current in the traditional lore of many other lands.

GELLERT, CHRISTIAN, a German poet, fabulist, and moralist, born in Saxony; professor of Philosophy at Leipzig; distinguished for the influence of his character and writings on the literature of the period in Germany, its effects culminating in the works of Schiller and Goethe; Frederick the Great, who had an interview with him, pronounced him the most rational of German professors (1715-1769).

GELLIUS, AULUS, a Latin grammarian, born in Rome; author of "Noctes Attice," a miscellany professing to have been composed in a country house near Athens during winter nights, and ranging confusedly over topics of all kinds, interesting as abounding in extracts from ancient writings no longer extant (c. 120-180).

GELON, tyrant of Syracuse from 484 to 478 B.C.; rose from the ranks, gained a victory in 480 B.C. on the day of the battle of Salamis over a large host of Carthaginians who had invaded Sicily; d. 478 B.C., leaving behind him an honoured memory.

GENIALI, the third sign of the zodiac, which the sun enters about May 21; the constellation of that name contains two conspicuous stars of the first magnitude, Castor and Pollux, and, owing to the procession of the equinoxes, is now situated in the cap.

GENS (i.e. men-of-arms), a military police in France organised since the Revolution, and charged with maintaining the public safety. The gendarmerie is considered a part of the regular army, and is divided into legions and companies, but the pay is better than that of an ordinary soldier. In the 14th and 15th centuries the name was applied to the heavy French cavalry, and later to the royal bodyguard of the Bourbons.

GENERAL STRIKE, THE, the strike of all unions belonging to the Trade Union Congress which started on May 4, 1926, and which was designed to coerce the Government into agreeing to the terms of the miners in the coal stoppage which had begun three days before. After eleven days, singularly free from real disturbance, the strike was unconditionally called off.

GENESIS, the first book in the Bible, so called in the Septuagint as containing an account of the origin of the world, of the human family, and of the Jewish race; a book of the oldest date possessing any human interest.

GENETICS, the science which deals with the study of heredity in animals.

GENEVA, (1) The smallest canton of Switzerland, situated at the western extremity of the lake of the same name; the surface is hilly, but not mountainous, and is watered by the Rhône and Arve; the soil is infertile, but the patient industry of the inhabitants has made it fruitful; the cultivation of the vine, fruit-growing, and the manufacture of watches, &c., are the chief industries; 85 per cent. of the people speak French. (2) Capital of the canton, occupies a splendid geographical position at the south-western end of the lake, at the exit of the Rhône; the town existed in Cæsar's time, and after being subject in turn to Rome and Burgundy, ere long won its independence in conjunction with Bern and Freiburg. In Calvin's time it became a centre of Protestantism, and its history, down to the time of its annexation by Napoleon in 1798, is mainly occupied with the struggles between the oligarchical and democratic factions. On the overthrow of Napoleon it joined the Swiss Confederation. Since 1847 the town has been largely rebuilt and handsomely laid out. Among many fine buildings are the Transition Cathedral of St. Peter (1224), and the Academy founded by Calvin. The Rhône flows through it, and compasses an island which forms part of the city. It has many literary and historical associations, and was the birthplace of Rousseau. In 1919 it became the headquarters of the League of Nations and the International Labour Office.

GENEVA CONVENTIONS, dealing with the treatment of the wounded in time of war, were signed in 1864, 1868, and 1906. The convention set up the Red Cross as an international emblem.

GENEVA, LAKE OF, or LAKE LEMAN, stretches in crescent shape between Switzerland and France, curving round the northern border of the French department of Haute-Savoie; length, 45 m.; greatest breadth, 9 m.; maximum depth, 1022 ft. On the French side precipitous rocks descend to the water's edge, and contrast with the wooded slopes of the north. The water is of a deep-blue colour; many streams pour into it, notably the Rhône, which flows out at Geneva.

GENEVIEVE, the patron saint of Paris, born in Nanterre; by her prayer the city, then called Lutetia (q.v.), was saved from the ravages of Attila (422-512) and his Huns.

GENGHIS KHAN (i.e. Very Mighty Ruler), a celebrated Mongol conqueror, born near Lake Balkal, the son of a Mongol chief; his career as a soldier began at the age of 13, an age at which he boldly assumed the reins of government in succession to his father; by his military skill and daring example he gradually raised his people to a position of supremacy in Asia, and established by means of them a kingdom which, at his death, stretched from the Volga to the Pacific, and from Siberia to the Persian Gulf; he regarded himself as commissioned by Heaven to conquer the world, a destiny which he almost fulfilled (1162-1227).

GENII, in Roman mythology tutelary spirits of which every one was possessed; in Oriental mythology they took the form of fallen angels, or an intermediate race between men and angels, hostile in nature but capable of assuming human shape and of being impressed into service; otherwise known in the East as djinn.

GENLIS, STEPHANIE FÉLICITÉ, COMTESSE DE, celebrated French novelist, born in Champocé, near Autun, Burgundy; at the age of 16 she was married to the Comte de Genlis, who eventually fell a victim to the fury of the Revolution; in 1770 she was a lady-in-waiting to the Duchesse de Chartres, and 12 years later became governess to the children of the Duc d'Orléans, amongst whom was the future king of the French, Louis-Philippe; the Revolution drove her to Switzerland, but on the elevation of Napoleon she returned to Paris, and received from him a pension, which continued to be paid her even under the restored Bourbon dynasty; she was a voluminous writer of moral tales, comedies, &c., and her works amount to about 90 vols., among them the celebrated "Mémoires" of her life and times; she was ill-natured, and in her "Mémoires" inaccurate, as well as prejudiced (1748-1830).

GENOA, a city and chief commercial seaport of Italy, built at the foot of the Apennines as they slope down to the gulf of the name. The encircling hills behind, which are strongly fortified, form a fine background to the picturesquely laid-out city. There is excellent harbourage for the extensive shipping, and an active export and import trade is carried on. In the city are iron-works, cotton and cloth mills, match factories, &c.; the streets are narrow and irregular, but many of the buildings, especially the ducal palaces and the cathedral, are of great historical and architectural interest; there is an excellent university, a public library, and an Academy of Fine Arts; Columbus was born here.

GENRE PAINTING, name given to paintings embracing figures as they appear in ordinary life and in ordinary situations of a domestic or rural character.

GENS, the name among the Romans for what we understand by the word clan as consisting of families.

GENSERIC, king of the Vandals, son of Godigiselus, founder of the feudal kingdom in Spain, and a bastard brother of Gunderic, whom he succeeded in A.D. 429; from Spain he crossed to Africa, and in conjunction with the Moors added to his kingdom the land lying W. of Carthage, ultimately gaining possession of Carthage itself; he next set himself to organise a naval force, with which he systematically from year to year pillaged Spain, Italy, Greece, and the opposite lands of Asia Minor, sacking Rome in 455; until his death in 477 he continued master of the sea, despite strenuous efforts of the Roman emperors to crush his power.

GENTILLY, a southern suburb of Paris, once a village beyond the fortifications.

GEVILEKEN-AT-ARMS, next to the Yeomen of the Guard the oldest corps in the British army, is the bodyguard of the sovereign; was formed by Henry VIII. in 1509; now consists of a captain, lieutenant, standard-bearer, adjutant, and 40 members, whose duties are limited to attendance at State ceremonies.

GEWIZ, FRIEDRICH VON, German politician and author, born in Breslau; while in the Prussian civil service he warmly sympathised with the French Revolution, but his zeal was greatly modified by perusal of Burke's "Reflections," a treatise he subsequently translated, and in 1802 entered the Austrian public service; in the capacity of a political writer he bitterly opposed Napoleon, but for other purposes his pen and support were at the service of the highest bidder; he was secretary at the Congress of Vienna, and held a similar post in many of the subsequent congresses (1764-1832).

GEODESY, the measurement of distances on the earth's surface.

GEOFFREY OF MONMOUTH, a celebrated chronicler and ecclesiastic of the 12th century, born in Monmouth, where he was educated in a Benedictine monastery; in 1153 he was made bishop of St. Asaph; his Latin "Chronicon sive Historia Britanica" contains a circumstantial account of British history compiled from Gildas, Neannius, and other early chroniclers, interwoven with current and placed together with additions from his imagination, the whole professing to be the work of a chronicler found in Brittany; this remarkable history is the source of the stories of King Lear, Cymbeline, Merlin, and of Arthur and his knights as they have since taken shape in English literature; d. about 1154.

GEOFFREY, MARIE THÉRÈSE, a French patroness of letters, born in Paris, the daughter of a valet-de-chambre; in her nineteenth year she married a wealthy merchant, whose immense fortune she inherited; her love of letters—which she cherished, though but poorly educated herself—and her liberality soon made her salon the most celebrated in Paris; the encyclopedists, Diderot, D'Alembert, and Marmontel, received from her a liberal encouragement in their great undertaking; Walpole, Elton, and Gibbon were among her friends; and Stanislas Poniatowsky, who became king of Poland, acknowledged her generosity to him by styling himself her son and welcoming her royalty to his kingdom (1699-1777).

GEOFFROY SAINT-HILAIRE, STRIENNE, zoologist and biologist, born in Etampes; he was educated for the Church, but while studying theology at Paris his love for natural science was awakened, and the study of it henceforth became the ruling passion of his life; was made professor of Zoology in the Museum of Natural History in Paris; accompanied Napoleon to Egypt as a member of the scientific commission, and returned with rich collections, while his labours were rewarded by his election to the Academy of Sciences; a scientific mission to Portugal in 1808 next engaged him, and a year later he was nominated to the chair of Zoology in the Faculty of Sciences at Paris; the main object of his scientific writing was to establish, in opposition to the theories of his friend Cuvier, his conception of a grand unity of plan pervading the whole organic kingdom (1772-1844).

GEOPHYSICS, the study of the physical state of the earth's interior.

GEORGE I., king of Great Britain from 1714 to 1727, and first of the Hanoverian line; son of Ernest Augustus, Elector of Hanover, and of Sophia, granddaughter of James I. of England; born in Hanover; in 1682 he married his cousin, the Princess Sophia Dorothea, of him, and in 1698 became Elector of Hanover; he co-operated actively with Marlborough in opposing the schemes of Louis XIV., and commanded the imperial forces; in accordance with the Act of Settlement, he succeeded to the English throne on the death of Queen Anne; his ignorance of English prevented him taking part in Cabinet councils, circumstances which had important results in the growth of constitutional government, and the management of public affairs during his reign devolved chiefly upon Sir Robert Walpole; the abortive Jacobite rising of 1715, the South Sea Bubble (1720), and the institution of Septennial Parliaments (1710), are among the main events of his reign; in 1694 he divorced his wife on account of an amour with Count Königsmark, and kept her imprisoned abroad till her death in 1724, while he himself during these years lived in open profligacy with his mistress (1680-1727).

GEORGE II., king of Great Britain from 1727 to 1760, and Elector of Hanover, born in Hanover, son of preceding; in 1700 he married Caroline of Anspach, and in 1714 was declared Prince of Wales; he joined his father in the struggle with Louis XIV., and distinguished himself on the side of the Allies at the battle of Oudenarde; the period of his reign is one of considerable importance in English history; Walpole and subsequently Pitt were the ministers of the age; war was waged against Spain and France; the last Jacobite rising was crushed at Culloden (1746); English power was established in Canada by the brilliant victory of Wolfe at Quebec (1759); an empire was won in India by Clive; the victory of Minden (1759) was gained in the Seven Years' War; Methodism sprang up under Wesley and Whitefield; while a great literature of letters and art took place; against these, however, must be set the doubling of the National Debt, mainly due to the Seven Years' War, and a defeat by the French at Fontenoy (1745) (1693-1760).

GEORGE III., king of Great Britain from 1760 to 1820, and king of Hanover (Elector from 1780 to 1815), eldest son of Frederick Lewis, Prince of Wales and grandson of preceding; born in London; in 1761 he married Princess Charlotte Sophia of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, by whom he had fifteen children; more English in sentiment and education than his two predecessors, George's main interest was centred in his English kingdom, and never during his long life did he once set foot in his Hanoverian possessions; the purity of his domestic life, his devotion to England, and the pathos attaching to his frequent fits of insanity, won him the affections of his people, an affection, however, sorely tried by his obstinate blundering; the 60 years of his reign present a succession of domestic episodes, far-reaching in their consequences to England and to the civilised world; the conclusion of the Seven Years' War left England predominant in North America, and with increased colonial possessions in the West Indies, &c., but under the ill-guided and obstinate policy of Lord North she suffered the loss of her American colonies, an event which also involved her in war with France and Spain; in 1787 the famous trial of Warren Hastings (q.v.) began, and two years later came the French Revolution; the great struggle with Napoleon followed, and gave occasion for the brilliant achievements of Nelson and Wellington; during these long years of war the commercial prosperity of England never slackened, but through the inventions of Hargreaves, Arkwright, and Crompton increased by leaps and bounds; freedom of the press was won by Wilkes; and in 1802 the union with Ireland took place; the majestic figure of Pitt stands out amidst a company of brilliant politicians that included Burke and Fox and Sheridan; literature is represented by a line of brilliant writers that stretches from Johnson to Keats, and includes the names of Burns, Cowper, Scott, Coleridge, Shelley, and Byron (1738-1820).

GEORGE IV., king of Great Britain and of Hanover from 1820 to 1830, eldest son of the preceding, born in London; in consequence of his father's insanity he became Regent in 1810; a tendency to profligacy early displayed itself in an intrigue with Mrs. Robinson, an actress; and two years afterwards, in defiance of the Royal Marriages Act, he secretly married Mrs. Fitzherbert (q.v.), a Roman Catholic; in 1795 he publicly espoused Princess Caroline of Brunswick, whom later he endeavoured to divorce; a Burmese War (1823), the victory of Admiral Coddington at Navarino (1827), the Repeal of the Test and Corporation Acts (1828), and the passing of the Catholic Emancipation Bill (1829), were occurrences of some importance in an uneventful reign (1762-1830).

GEORGE V., King of Great Britain. He succeeded King Edward VII. in 1910, and was at once faced with a constitutional crisis over the Parliament Act. Irish troubles next clouded his reign, while from 1914 to 1918 there was the Great War, in which he took an active part, visiting the front line on several occasions. Other important events during his reign have been the granting of votes to women, the establishment of the Irish Free State, the General Strike of 1926 (q.v.), and the formation of the first Labour Government in 1924. He married Princess Mary of Teck in 1893 (1865).

GEORGE, British Prince, fourth son of King George V. and Queen Mary. Born at Sandringham, he was educated at Osborne and Dartmouth, served in the Navy for seven years and then entered the Foreign Office (1902-).

GEORGE II., King of Greece. Born at Corfu, he was a friend of the Allies in the Great War; in 1922 he succeeded his father, King Constantine, on his abdication, but in 1924 he was himself forced to abdicate (1890-).

GEORGE ET. HON. DAVID LLOYD, British politician. Born in Manchester, of Welsh extraction, his early days were spent in Wales. He qualified as a solicitor in 1884, and winning an appeal case against the Church of England he was chosen Liberal candidate for Carnarvon Boroughs in 1890, gaining the seat, which remained faithful to him for the whole of his political career. In the Boer War he took the anti-Imperial line and tried to hold an anti-Chamberlain meeting in Birmingham, having to leave the arena, but disguised as a policeman. He first took office in 1905 as President of the Board of Trade under Campbell-Bannerman, became Chancellor of the Exchequer in 1908 under Asquith, and with his budget of 1909, including taxes on land values and coal royalties, brought on the crisis that led to two elections and the end of the House of Lords as a real power through the Parliament Act of 1911. It was this period which was styled his

"Limehouse days." In 1912 he forced through the National Insurance Act, and in 1914 threw himself wholeheartedly into the prosecution of the Great War. He tackled the munitions question, and in 1916 he went to the War Office, succeeding Asquith as Prime Minister at the end of the year. He continued in office throughout the war and in 1918 he was returned by a large majority to continue a Coalition Government. At the Peace Conference he was one of the most dominating figures, but in 1922 his government fell, owing to the withdrawal of Conservative support. From then on Lloyd George went into opposition, devoting himself to an attempt to revive the Liberal Party and restore it to power, a task in which he failed. He lost prestige through his indulgent attitude towards the General Strike in May, 1926; but it is long since any man has so dominated politics, so impressed his personality on the country, or been so successful as an emotional orator (1863-).

GEORGE, HENRY, an American writer on social and economic questions, born in Philadelphia; he first tried life on the sea, but in 1858 settled in California as a printer, and there married; in course of time he took to journalism, became an editor, and zealously addressed himself to the discussion of public affairs; his secular views on the question of land reform were set forth in "Our Land and Land Policy," published in 1870, and nine years later appeared his more famous and widely popular work "Progress and Poverty," in which he promulgated the theory that to the increase in economic rent and land values is due the lack of increase in wages and interest which the increased productive power of modern times should have ensured; he proposed the levying of a tax on land so as to appropriate the surplus to public uses, and the abolition of all taxes falling upon industry and thrift; he lectured in Great Britain and Ireland, Australia, &c.; in 1887 founded the Standard paper in New York; he died during his candidature for the mayoralty of Greater New York (1839-1896).

GEORGE, ST., the patron saint of chivalry and of England; adopted as such in the reign of Edward III.; believed to have been born in Armenia, and to have suffered martyrdom under Diocletian in A.D. 303; he is represented as mounted on a horse back and slaying a dragon (q.v.), conceived as an incarnation of the evil one.

GEORGETOWN, (1) capital of British Guiana, at the mouth of the Demerara River; is the see of an Anglican bishop; is neatly laid out, and has some handsome buildings, but is considered unhealthy; the staple industries are sugar and coffee. (2) A port of entry in the District of Columbia, on the Potomac, 2 m. NW. of Washington; is a terminus of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal.

GEORGIA, (1) one of the 13 original States of the American Union, lies to the S., fronting the Atlantic between Florida and S. Carolina; is divided into 136 counties, Atlanta being the capital and Savannah the chief port; it is well watered with rivers; is low and swampy for some miles inland, but rises into plateaux in the interior, and the Appalachians and Blue Mountains intersect it in the NW.; excellent crops of wheat and fruit are grown among the hills, rice in the lowlands, while immense quantities of cotton are raised on the islands skirting the coast; the vast forests of pitch-pine supply an increasing lumber trade; the mountain lands are rich in minerals; the State was named after George II. in 1733 by the founder, James Oglethorpe. (2) An independent republic extending along the southern slopes of the Caucasus, which, till 1917, belonged to Russia under the name of Georgia, and formed the central portion of Russian Transcaucasia; the Georgians number at present about a million; they are a people of splendid physique, whose history goes back to the time of Alexander the Great, and who attained their zenith in the 12th century; subsequently they suffered from Persian, Turkish, and Russian invasion.

GERA, a thriving city on the White Elster, 35 m. SW. of Leipzig; has broad streets and fine buildings, with a castle; chief manufactures woollens.

GERAINT, SUB. one of the Knights of the Round Table, the husband of Enid, whose fidelity he for a time distrusted, but who proved herself a true wife by the care with which she nursed him when he was wounded.

GERARD, ETIENNE MAURICE, COMTE, marshal of France, born in Damvilliers, Lorraine; in 1791 he entered the army and fought under Bernadotte in various campaigns; at Austerlitz he won his brigade, and subsequently fought at Jena, Erfurt, and Wagram; he joined Napoleon after his flight from Elba, and was wounded at Wavre; on the downfall of the Emperor he quitted France, but returned in 1817; in 1822 he was elected to the Chamber of Deputies, and in 1831 assisted in driving the Dutch out of Flanders; he was War Minister under Louis Philippe (1778-1852).

GERARD, FRANÇOIS PASCAL SIMON, BARON, painter, born in Rome, of French and Italian parentage; came to Paris when a youth, where he studied painting under David; in 1795 his "Blind Bellarius" brought him to the front, whilst subsequent work as a portrait-painter raised him above all his contemporaries; his masterpiece, "Entry of Henri IV. into Paris," procured him a barony at the hands of Louis XVIII.; his historical paintings, characterised by minute accuracy of detail, include "Napoleon in his Coronation Robes," "Battle of Austerlitz," &c. (1770-1837).

GERHARDT, KARL FRIEDRICH, chemist, born in Straßburg after a training at Karlsruhe and Leipzig, worked in Liebig's laboratory at Gießen; in 1838 he began lecturing in Paris, and made experiments along with Cahours on essential oils, which bore fruit in an important treatise; in 1844 he received the chair of Chemistry at Montpellier, but returned to Paris four years later; there he matured and published his Theory of Types, Homologous Series, &c., which have greatly influenced the science of chemistry; in 1855 he became professor of Chemistry in Straßburg (1816-1860).

GERHARDT, PAUL, a celebrated German hymn-writer of the Lutheran Church, born in Gräfenhainichen, in Saxony; in 1657 he became dean of St. Nicholas in Berlin, an appointment he held till 1666, when he was deposed for his embittered opposition to the union of the Lutheran and Reformed Churches; he was subsequently pastor at Lübben; his hymns, 125 in number, rank amongst the finest of their class (1607-1676).

GERICAULT, JEAN LOUIS ANDRÉ THÉODORE, French painter. Born in Rouen, he introduced a new style of art into France; he painted everything from life and brought to French art relief from the stereotyped classic conception so long in vogue. His most famous pictures, "Le Radeau de la Méduse" and "Officier des Chasseurs à Cheval," are now in the Louvre (1791-1824).

GERIZIM, a mountain of 2848 ft. in height in the S. of the valley of Shechem, opposite Ebal (q.v.), from the slopes of which the blessings were responded to by half the tribes of Israel on their arrival in Canaan (Josh. viii. 30-35); the Samaritans erected a temple on this mountain, the ruins of which still remain.

GERMAN CATHOLICS, a sect formed in 1844 by secession from the Catholic Church of Germany, under the leadership of Johann Ronge, on account of the mummery under papal patronage connected with the exhibition of the Holy Coat of Trèves and the superstitious influence ascribed to it.

GERMAN SILVER, an alloy consisting of two parts copper, one of nickel and one of zinc; used for the manufacture of many objects, such as spoons and forks, &c.

GERMAN VOLTAIRE, name given sometimes to Wieland and sometimes, but less appropriately, to Goethe.

GERMANICUS, CÆSAR, Roman general, son of Nero Claudius Drusus and Antonia, daughter of Mark Antony; he served with distinction under his uncle Tiberius in Dalmatia and Pannonia; was awarded a triumph, and in A.D. 12 was elected consul; his success and popularity as leader of the army on the Rhine provoked the jealousy of Tiberius, who transferred him to the East, where he subsequently died; his son Caligula succeeded Tiberius on the imperial throne (15 B.C.-A.D. 19).

GERMANY, constituted an empire in 1871 and a republic in 1919, occupies a commanding position in Central Europe, and stretches from Switzerland in the S. to the North Sea and Baltic Sea on the N.; Austria lies to the SE., Russia to the NE., while France, Belgium, and the Netherlands flank the W.; is made up of 18 States of widely varying size and importance. After the Great War Germany lost Alsace-Lorraine to France, E. Prussia and Posen to Poland, part of Silesia-Holstein to Denmark, while part of Danzig became a free city. The main physical divisions are (1) the great lowland plain stretching from the centre to the Baltic and North Sea, well watered by the Elbe, Weser, Elbe, Oder, Vistula, and their tributaries, in which, bating large sandy tracts, agriculture employs a large class, and cereals, tobacco, and beetroot are raised; (2) the mountainous district, in the interior of which the Fichtelgebirge is the central knot, in which vast forests abound, and rich deposits of coal, fire-clays, iron, and other metals are worked, giving rise to iron-works and potteries; (3) the basin of the Rhine, on the W., where the vine is largely cultivated, and extensive manufactures of silks, cottons, and hardware are carried on; fine porcelain comes from Saxony and vast quantities of beer from Bavaria; Westphalia is the centre of the steel and iron works; throughout Germany there are 26,000 m. of railway line (chiefly State railways), 57,000 m. of telegraph line, while excellent roads, canals, and navigable rivers facilitate communication; 65 per cent. of the people are Protestants; education is compulsory and more highly developed than in any other European country; the government is carried out by the Reichstag, elected by universal suffrage and ballot for four years, and a Reichsrat representing the States.

GERMS, the small organisms which give rise to disease in the living matter upon which they are parasites; they may be bacteria, protozoa, or worms; germs are carried extensively by insects, rats, and other animals; in the case of certain diseases, the specific germs have been isolated, but many of them are so minute that they escape detection.

GERÔME, JEAN LÉON, a celebrated French painter, born in Vésoul; he studied at Paris under Paul Delarocche, with whom he subsequently travelled in Italy; he visited the East and so familiarised himself with Eastern scenes; in 1863 he was appointed professor of Painting in the Paris School of Fine Arts; among his most famous pictures, all characterised by vivid colouring and strong dramatic effect, are "The Age of Augustus and the Birth of Christ," "Roman Gladiators in the Amphitheatre," "Cleopatra and Cæsar" (1824-1904).

GERRY, ELBRIDGE, American statesman, born in Marblehead, Mass.; in 1773, eight years after graduating at Harvard, he was elected to the Massachusetts Assembly, and in 1789 to the first National Congress; as envoy to France in 1797 he assisted in establishing diplomatic relations with that country, and after his recall in 1810 was chosen governor of his native State; during his tenancy of this office, by an unfair redistribution of the electoral districts in the State, he gave undue advantage to his own political party, a proceeding which led to the coining of the word "gerrymandering"; subsequently he held office as Vice-President of the Republic (1744-1814).

GERSON, JEAN CHARLES DE, an eminent ecclesiastical scholar, born in Gerson, in the diocese of Rheims; in 1395 he became chancellor of his old university at Paris, and earned in that office a high reputation for learning, becoming known as Doctor Christianissimus; he was a prominent member of the councils of Pisa and Constance, advocating, as a remedy for the Western Schism, the resignation of the rival Popes; in consequence of his denunciation of the Duke of Burgundy for the murder of the Duke of Orleans he was forced to become a refugee in Germany for some time, but finally retired into the monastery of Lyons; his various works reveal an intellect of keen intelligence, but somewhat tinged with a cloudy mysticism (1363-1429).

GERSTÄCKER, FRIEDRICH, German author and traveller, born in Hamburg: when 21 he emigrated to New York, and for six years led a wandering life in different parts of America, working the while now at one occupation now at another, a narrative of which he published on his return to Germany; in 1849 he undertook a journey round the world which occupied him three years; in 1860-1861 he crossed S. America; in 1862 he was in Africa with Duke Ernst of Gotha, and in 1863 in Central America; his many writings, descriptive of these countries, exhibit a fresh and graphic style, and have had a wide popularity: he is the author also of several thrilling stories (1816-1872).

GERVASE OF TILBURY, a mediæval historical writer, born in Tilbury, in Essex: said to have been a nephew of King Henry II.; he held a lectureship in Canon Law at Bologna, and through the influence of Emperor Otto IV. was made marshal of the kingdom of Arles; he was the author of "Otia Imperialia," a historical and geographical work; d. about 1236.

